The agency broadcasted in the February 6th edition of the Peoples Daily: "The war is the only way to decide the destiny of the world."

The review concentrated on the United States and its policies in the war, and was signed by the editor of the Peking Review, Hu Qiaomu.

In the review, Hu Qiaomu said that the United States would lose in the long run.

A few days later, on February 10th, the United States and its allies signed the Paris Peace Accords, ending the Vietnam War.

Hu Qiaomu said that the United States had lost the war.

The review emphasized the importance of international cooperation and the need for a united front against imperialism.

The review was published on February 6th, 1967, in the Peking Review, a leading newspaper of the People's Republic of China.
Soviet Luna 13 Discovers Moon Has A Hard Surface

By ART BHUMFIELD

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- The unmanned Soviet Luna 13 spacecraft stopped work after observing the moon's surface Wednesday, according to Colonel O.P. Grushin of the Third Space Research Institute of the Academy of Sciences.

This unexpected development comes less than a month after Luna 13 began its mission to study the moon's surface, which was considered to be soft and fertile. The spacecraft was originally expected to collect data for three months, but its current status is unclear.

Luna 13's data, however, indicates that the moon's surface is much harder and more resistant to penetration than previously thought. This could have significant implications for future robotic and human missions to the moon.

The spacecraft was launched on a three-month mission to study the moon's surface and collect data on its composition. However, it appears that Luna 13 was unable to complete its mission due to unexpected findings.

The implications of this discovery are vast, and scientists are already re-evaluating their plans for future missions to the moon.

Spokesman for Luna 13, Colonel O.P. Grushin, confirmed in a press release that the spacecraft's mission was cut short due to unexpected findings. However, he did not provide further details on the nature of these findings.

Nursing Prof Brings Variety To Job

By JOYCE DANIELS

Davenport, Iowa (WPDL) -- A Davenport, Iowa, nursing professor is bringing a new perspective to her job.

Laura Cooper is using her experience as a nurse and professor to bring variety to her job at the Davenport Campus of the Iowa Nursing Association.

"I've always been interested in nursing," said Cooper. "I think it's a great field and I want to share that enthusiasm with my students."

Cooper has been teaching nursing for the past 10 years at the Davenport Campus. She said that she enjoys being able to share her knowledge and experience with her students.

Cooper said that she is always looking for new ways to keep her students interested in the field of nursing.

She said that she is currently working on developing a new curriculum that will focus on preparing students for a variety of nursing roles.

"I want to make sure that our students are prepared for any role they may want to take in the future," said Cooper.

She added that she is also working on developing partnerships with local hospitals to provide students with more clinical experience.

Cooper said that she is excited about the new opportunities that her position offers.

"I love teaching and I'm always looking for new ways to make my classes more interesting," said Cooper.

She said that she is looking forward to seeing the new curriculum take shape in the coming months.

She added that she is also looking forward to working with the local hospitals to provide students with more clinical experience.

Cooper said that she is also looking forward to working with the Iowa Nursing Association to develop new initiatives to improve nursing education in the state.

Writer Foresees Bowl Results, Picks So. Cal. Over Purdue

CYPRESS, Calif. - As a football reporter, John Talbott has been to many bowl games, but he has never been to one where the winner was more uncertain.

This year, Talbott predicts that Southern California will defeat Purdue in the Rose Bowl on January 1.

"I think Southern California has the edge in talent, but Purdue has the edge in experience," Talbott said.

Talbott also predicts that Alabama will defeat Army in the Sugar Bowl on January 2.

"Alabama has the home field advantage and they have the edge in talent," Talbott said.
