Government Urban Renewal Criticized by Businessmen

By BRAD KINSEY

The Downtown Business & Professional Men's Association, DPMA, is in a mood to lose face with the Iowa City Council today. The city council will be asked to vote on a motion to override the mayor's veto of the budget for the Urban Renewal Authority. The DPMA has been expressing concern over the budget plan for the Iowa City Live Pool, a new construction project in the downtown area.

The council's vote on the override motion is expected to be close, with some members of the council expressing concern over the budget's impact on the city's financial health. The DPMA has been advocating for a reduction in the budget, arguing that the project is not necessary and that the funds could be better spent elsewhere.

Prospect Asks To Withdraw From City Race

The candidate running for the position of city councilman, John Smith, has announced that he will withdraw from the race. Smith, who is running as an independent candidate, has been facing criticism from the major parties for his lack of experience and his views on certain issues.

The decision to withdraw was a difficult one for Smith, who has been campaigning for months. However, he has decided that he is not prepared to continue the race and that he will focus on other political goals.

HHH Lauds Tax Increase

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Jimmy Carter announced yesterday that he would sign a bill increasing federal taxes. The bill, which was passed by Congress last week, will raise an estimated $30 billion over the next five years.

Carter said that the tax increase is necessary to fund the government's domestic and international programs, which have been under pressure due to the recent economic downturn. The bill will be signed later today during a ceremony at the White House.

Union Boardonders How to Spend Surplus

The Union Board is facing a difficult decision as they try to allocate the remaining surplus of funds for the current academic year. The board is considering several options, including funding new student groups, improving existing programs, or providing larger grants to individual students.

Last week, the board announced that it would allocate $50,000 to the student newspaper, The Daily Iowan, and $25,000 to the community radio station, WQ UH.
Text of Bowen's address

In the fall of the University went to work on a project that was, and is, the establishment of a basic philosophy of education and to the development of a plan for the improvement of the educational programs. The project was undertaken with the idea that it would be a good thing to have an alternative to the traditional educational system. The project was called the "Bowen Project." It was a comprehensive plan for the improvement of the educational programs at the University.

The Bowen Project was initially viewed with skepticism by some members of the faculty and administration. However, after several years of work, the Bowen Project began to gain momentum and was eventually adopted as the official plan for the University. The Bowen Project was a radical departure from the traditional educational system, and it was seen as a way to improve the educational programs at the University.

The Bowen Project was a comprehensive plan that included the following elements:

1. A new curriculum that emphasized critical thinking and problem-solving skills.
2. A new method of teaching that emphasized active participation by students in the learning process.
3. A new approach to assessment that emphasized the development of critical thinking and problem-solving skills.
4. A new approach to curriculum development that emphasized the integration of different disciplines.
5. A new approach to the use of technology in the educational process.

The Bowen Project was widely praised for its innovative approach to education, and it was seen as a way to improve the educational programs at the University. However, it was also criticized for being too radical and for being too expensive. Despite these criticisms, the Bowen Project was eventually adopted as the official plan for the University, and it has been instrumental in the development of the educational programs at the University.
More Student Power, Union Budget Are Sought By Students At Soundoff

By JILL LAMENHURST

Iowa City, Ia. - A challenge to the University of Iowa administration to give students more power on campus organizations was voiced Saturday during a student forum at the Varsity Center on the University of Iowa campus.

A Forum was held to discuss the need for student budget control.

The forum was sponsored by the Student Senate, and many student leaders attended the meeting.

The forum was held in an effort to gain more student influence on campus organizations.

The forum was also held to discuss the need for student budget control.

Stapleton Says He Won't Apply For Athletic Directorship At ISU

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Chad Schmitt, athletic director at Indiana State University, has decided not to apply for the directorship of the school's athletic program. Schmitt, who has been at ISU for 10 years, said he had not considered the possibility of applying for the position until recently.

Schmitt's decision comes after the school's board of trustees announced last month that it was looking for a new athletic director. Schmitt said he had not changed his mind about his future at ISU, and that he was committed to continuing his work there.

The school's search for a new athletic director has been ongoing since the departure of former athletic director Jeff Yenger in 2019. Schmitt said he had been considering the possibility of staying at ISU, but that the recent changes in the school's administration had made him reevaluate his options.

Schmitt said he was committed to continuing his work at ISU, and that he was looking forward to working with the school's leadership to ensure the continued success of the athletic program.

The school's board of trustees is expected to announce a new athletic director in the coming weeks.
