Prosecution Will Seek Speck's Life At Peoria

PEORIA, Ill. (AP)—The prosecution announced Monday it would seek the death penalty for Richard Speck, who is charged with murdering eight young student nurses in Chicago.

William Martin, assistant state's attorney, said at the afternoon session of the trial's opening day, "The state will ask the jury to fix the defendant's punishment as death."

A Peoria woman was impeached as a tentative juror after intense questioning from the prosecution and Speck's attorney, Gerald W. Getty.

Six prospective jurors were excused for cause before the middle-aged housewife was tentatively accepted. Both counsels reserved the right to question impaneled jurors further.

Judge Herbert C. Paschen told newsmen in a preliminary meeting "the eyes of the world are on this case."

He stood firm generally on coverage guidelines that have drawn protests from newspapers and broadcasters, but he said he would make some modifications later.

Wore Blue Suit

Speck, 25, a lanky rover, wore a blue suit, a white shirt and an initialed pocket handkerchief. When he entered the wood-paneled circuit courtroom he stared vacantly at the 21 newsmen occupying most of the first three rows of spectator seats. He listened without visible emotion while the white-haired judge read the indictments each accusing him of murdering a student nurse July 14, 1966, in their living quarters on Chicago's South Side. He propped his chin on his left fist. He toyed with his sideburns with a forefinger.

A total of 57 veniremen were sworn by the bailiff. Twelve were seated in the jury box pending questioning. Speck eyed each of them as they took their seats.

The judge told them they would "decide this case on the evidence heard in open court." He informed them that, once a jury was selected, its members would be sequestered for the duration of the trial.

Brought By Van

Although the Peoria County jail is only

100 yards across Hamilton Boulevard and a tree dotted plaza from the new $4.5-million courthouse, the van that carried Speck to the trial rolled three blocks via one-way streets in delivering the prisoner.

Police stood guard outside. Others were stationed inside the sandstone, steel, and glass building. Two stood at the front door of the courtroom on the second floor, and another at a rear entrance. All persons who entered were searched thoroughly. Fingerprint files were confiscated.

But Peoria, which received the case on a change of venue from Chicago, 150 miles to the northeast, evinced little interest. Only a dozen persons stood in the cold wind on the plaza fringes to watch Speck's arrival. A small number of others looked on from inside the courthouse.

Campus Sexual 'Revolt' Discussed By 2 Profs

By RANDY BLOCK
Staff Writer

Pre-marital sex was one of the topics discussed Monday night by two professors at an intramural discussion, entitled "The Sexual Revolution On Campus."

The panelists, Ira L. Reiss, professor of sociology and anthropology, and David Belgium, associate professor of religion, answered questions by fraternity members at the Beta Theta Pi house.

When asked what he thought of "Playboy Philosophy" advocated by editor-publisher, Hugh Hefner, Belgium said that Hefner's philosophy was a "depersonalization of sex . . . in which the individual doesn't commit himself."

Reiss disagreed however, and said that the Hefner philosophy was not concerned just with the pictures in Playboy magazine but that the copy states that sex with affection is better than sex without affection.

Reiss recently appeared on the ABC-TV program "Sex In The Sixties" and has talked with Hefner about the philosophy. Belgium has been counseling sexual problems for 15 years. He is interested in religious psychiatry.

Belgium said that churches and synagogues were eager to discuss the whole man, which includes his body as well as his moral values.

Reiss said that the same percentage of young people had premarital sex relations today as those in 1920. He thought, however, that today the frequency of premarital sex is greater and that this generation is less confused than the generation of the '20s.

Reiss said that men today relied less on prostitutes than did men of the 1920s.

Belgium said that sex codes of today were a product of the kind of families that exist today.

Reiss said pre-marital sex relations were not generally harmful to marriage prospects and noted that divorce rates have not risen appreciably since the 1920s.

Hanson To Seek NSA Membership

A resolution to join the National Student Association (NSA) will be introduced to the Student Senate by Student Body Pres. Tom Hanson at a meeting scheduled for 7 tonight in the Union Michigan Room.

Hanson said that membership in the NSA would be advantageous for two reasons. It could change the University's status as a "lonely campus" and it could provide "concrete rationales for the theoretical basis of student organizations," said Hanson.

"Iowa is really out in the cold," said Hanson. He said that the NSA could help the Student Senate "capture the real feelings and perceptions of students."

Cost of membership in the NSA would be about $200 a year, said Hanson.

Controversy was recently set off over the NSA because it had been receiving funds from the Central Intelligence Agency.

Hanson speculated that the activities board concept, a parking resolution and the executive section of the senate's constitution would also be discussed at tonight's meeting.

The activities board would involve a change in the senate's constitution. Discussion of parking and the executive section of the senate's constitution had been scheduled for last week's meeting, but were postponed until tonight.

Proposed Ideas For Beautification Of City Discussed

Proposals for beautification of Iowa City were discussed by a sub-committee of the newly-formed Committee of Citizens for a Better Iowa City. Nearly 40 participants attended the Monday evening meeting in the Iowa City Civic Center.

The mass of neon signs on the so-called "Coralville Strip" were criticized at the meeting. Other approaches to the city and University should not be allowed to be turned into "strips," it was noted.

Street lighting, littering and replacing cut trees were also discussed.

Proposals of the sub-committee will be presented at the March 15 meeting of the parent committee. A report incorporating these suggestions will be presented by Charles D. Cutler, professor of art.

Cutler, who served as secretary of a similar committee in the past, will give a resume of that committee's recommendations.

The sub-committee will then split into smaller units which will study, report and make recommendations on specific areas of the city that need improvement or beautification.

Future meetings of the sub-committee were planned with the dates and times to be announced.

Delivery Of Iowan Resumes Today

The Daily Iowan is being delivered to off-campus housing units beginning today, and a new circulation program has been introduced to improve service to off-campus students.

During the next two weeks, each residence will be contacted by its Iowan carrier as part of a new program to improve carrier service. One resident will be given a card to complete with the names of all other student occupants.

This information is needed to insure that one paper is delivered for every four students, the ratio established by Student Publications, Inc.

The card will also include any special instructions from the resident to the carrier. The carrier will leave his name and telephone number at each residence to improve carrier-customer contact.

New subscription lists are compiled every semester by obtaining the names of all full-time students from the Office of the Registrar. These lists are then sorted into route lists.

Currently, the Iowan has more than 55 carriers, ranging from early teens to adults. Outlying parts of the city receive the Iowan by mail. Daily circulation, including subscriptions, is near 12,000.

Guaranteed Loans Gone; Other Funds Available

By AL KORBEL
Staff Writer

Money is no longer available to the Guaranteed Loan Program.

John E. Moore, financial aid director, said the program's monetary allotment was expended last month. Other loans are still available, however.

The Higher Education Facilities Committee (HEFC), which was in charge of last year's apportionment of the money, has asked that emergency funds be provided, Moore said.

The HEFC is expecting an answer by March 1. The governor has included allocations for the program in his budget request, he added.

The State Legislature usually considers the budget at the end of its session. If the HEFC's request is denied, funds for the program will not be available until May or June when the budget is approved.

Under the Guaranteed Loan Program, students may borrow from a bank or other financial institutions. A graduate student is allowed $1,500 a year and an undergraduate, $1,000 a year.

Before the program's money was expended close to 95 per cent of the applications were approved, according to Moore. He said that there was $400,000 allotted to the University and approximately 450 students received loans. He did not estimate how many students were in need of financial aid.

Two programs still have money for qualified students, according to Moore. He said qualified students were those who did not completely exhaust funds under other programs. "Money is still available in the National Defense Student Loan and the University Loan Fund," he said.

The National Defense Student Loan Fund provides $1,000 a year with a ceiling of $5,000 for undergraduates, and $2,500 a year with a ceiling of $10,000 for graduate students. Recipients are selected on academic achievement and financial need.

Short-term loans are available under the University Loan Fund, according to Moore. Twenty-five dollars to $50 may be borrowed, with the money payable within the academic year or before the next school year begins.

Under the terms of the University Loan Fund, if a student can justify his need he will receive the money, Moore said. Most students have no problem justifying their needs he added.

The University has set up a college cost budget which estimates a student's yearly expenditures. For a resident the cost is figured at $1,800. This includes room, board, tuition and books, with about $300 for miscellaneous items. For the non-resident the estimate is the difference in tuition, or a total of about $2,100.

"Even though a student spends more than the college cost budget, he will get money if his reasons are justified," Moore said.

Moore urges campus students to submit applications for any of next year's loan programs. The deadline for applications is May 1.

Case Continued In Guard Dispute

The doorman who refused to admit Sheriff Maynard Schneider to the Field House and was charged with assault and battery Feb. 7 requested a jury trial Monday.

A preliminary hearing set for Monday was cancelled, but Justice of the Peace Carl J. Goetz said that Richard A. Hartman, Cedar Rapids, had filed a plea of not guilty. Goetz said that he planned to set a date for the trial in about a week.

According to Schneider, Hartman attempted to eject him after he had entered through a door normally used as a fire exit. Schneider was not in uniform at the time. The incident occurred at the Iowa-Illinois basketball game.

DR. WALTER JUDD To Speak Wednesday

Judd To Speak On China

By PAUL STEVENS
Staff Writer

Walter F. Judd, former Minnesota congressman and medical missionary, will speak on "What About Red China?" at 8 p.m. in the Union Main Lounge, and likely will leave little doubt about his opinions on the subject.

Judd has raised a persistent voice against admission of Red China to the United Nations.

"If there is any question on which American citizens of both parties can unite with unshakable determination," he has said,

"it is that Red China should not be given a seat in the United Nations — at least not until it has abandoned the aggressive attitudes that so completely disqualify it for membership now."

Judd's initial contact with the Chinese came during the 1920s when he was a medical missionary under the Congregational Foreign Ministry Board.

A map of St. Paul's missionary journeys which hung on the wall in the Judd home at Rising Sun, Neb., influenced him toward missionary work. He had earned B.A. and M.D. degrees from the University of Nebraska, but was undecided about his future.

"Sunday after Sunday, year after year, there it was — the world on that map — staring me in the face," recalled Judd. He then determined that he would work in China, "where the need was the greatest and the workers fewest."

"Medicine was the means whereby I could bear witness," he said.

Malaria attacks forced him to return to the United States in 1931, but he went back to China in 1934 and took over operation of a 125-bed hospital.

Later, during an incident at the Chinese-Mongolian border Judd was captured by the invading Japanese and imprisoned for five months. He returned to the United States in 1939 and began a two-year lecture tour urging Americans to halt all trade with Japan.

"You have a choice between your silks and sons," he said. Pearl Harbor substantiated his warnings.

Smiley Assumes Post As Iowa City Manager

By LARRY STONE
Staff Writer

Frank R. Smiley was sworn in Monday morning as the third city manager in Iowa City's history. He succeeds Carsten D. Leikvold, who resigned last fall.

The ceremony took place at 9:15 a.m. in the Council Chamber of the Civic Center. Mayor William C. Hubbard administered the oath of office.

Smiley met with the city's department heads at 10 a.m. Monday and with the Iowa City Council at its informal meeting at 4 p.m. A public reception will be held for Smiley and his wife, Toni, at 7:30 Wednesday evening in the Civic Center.

For the last seven years, Smiley has been city manager of Springfield, Ore. Springfield, a city of 24,500, is in many ways similar to Iowa City. It is near to Eugene, the home of the University of Oregon. Springfield carried out a $1.5 million urban renewal project under Smiley's leadership.

Smiley cited sewer and highway construction as accomplishments while he was manager at Springfield. He also said that there was an improvement in civic pride which is "more difficult to measure than physical aspects."

Smiley will address the session on retailing and Miss Edith Ennis will address the session on opportunity for women.

Sales and industrial relations will be the topics of the 10:30 a.m. sessions and the guest speakers will be Richard P. Laster of Hoerher Waldorf, Waukegan, Ill., and R. G. Wardrop of Alcoa Aluminum.

Lakamp will again speak at the noon luncheon on consumer protection.

The sessions will resume at 2 p.m. and the topics will be investment and business education. The speakers will be V. Kent Green of the First National Bank of Chicago, and Robert Fitzsimmons of Washington Senior High School in Cedar Rapids, respectively.

The final sessions of the day will be held at 3 p.m. with a graduate school panel including Dean George P. Schultz of the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois and Dr. Irving Kovarsky, UI professor of business administration.

Smiley's general approach as city manager will be to establish rapport with the city employees, the citizens and the council. He said that as merely an administrator he only suggested policies, not made them.

"A major part of my job," continued Smiley, "is to keep the council from getting involved in routine matters."

Positions Open On SPI Board; Elections Slated

Three student positions on the Board of Trustees of Student Publications, Inc. (SPI) will be filled in all-campus elections March 15, it was announced today.

The board consists of five students, elected by the student body, and four faculty members appointed by Pres. Howard R. Bowen. The nine trustees elect The Daily Iowan and Hawkeye editors, make broad policy decisions and control the finances of these publications.

Applications and petitions are now available at The Daily Iowan Office, 201 Communications Center, for the one 1-year term and two 2-year terms to be filled. Applications are due by 5 p.m. Feb. 23.

A candidate must obtain at least 25 signatures from students in his own college, have completed 26 credit hours at the University and have a grade point average equal to that required for graduation in the college in which the credits were earned.

An orientation meeting for prospective SPI Board applicants will be held at 4 p.m. Feb. 23 in 200 Communications Center. Students will be given information about SPI to help them plan their platforms.

Students whose terms expire this year are Dave Hickman, A4, Iowa City; John Van, G, Iowa City; and Barb Johnson, A4, Park Ridge, Ill.

Trustees terms of office begin July 1, 1967.

We should be so lucky

Our Student Senators and those considering running for election to the senate should take note of the recent elections at Iowa State University.

Donald Smith, a bearded radical who proposes to drag ISU into the 20th century, has caused controversy and much handwringing because of his election as student body president.

But even State Senator Reichardt should realize that Smith's election is a strike against apathy. Who can deny that just as his election drew statewide interest, his presence as senate presiding officer will draw ISU senators at least to meetings. We should be so lucky.

The University has for too long a time been mired in the stoic traditions of suit, tie and wingtips and the apathy that wears them. We do not judge the right and wrong of SDS, only point out that an SDS member arose enough interest at ISU that twice as many students voted in this election than ever before. Of about 15,000 students, 7,000, or close to 50 per cent, voted. In All-Campus elections here last spring, only about 20 per cent of the student body voted.

The improved voter percentage at ISU can be attributed to a radical element. We do not think that this is necessarily the best way to stir interest, but, since percentages seem to indicate that it works, perhaps we should try it.

We're not against suits, ties and wingtips. We are against them if they symbolize the average, apathetic student. The University needs spirit. And, if that spirit must be inspired by the bearded unwashed, then we say, welcome to you.

The CIA ventures into the White House

WASHINGTON — More and more facts keep popping up about the CIA since it was revealed that it had financed the National Student Association. The big story that will break soon is how the CIA wormed its way into the White House and with its enormous funds took over the executive branch of government.

It happened several years ago when a high representative of the CIA paid a call on the president of the United States.

BUCHWALD

He said, "Mr. President, we understand you've got a serious deficit, and we'd like to help you out."
"That's very kind of you," the President said. "But we have to keep the executive branch clear of any outside influence. If the American public found out the Administration was receiving funds from the CIA it would compromise our position, and, also, our credibility would be questioned."
"No one would have to know the CIA had anything to do with the White House," the man said. "We could slip you the money through Congress. As far as the American people are concerned, they would think the funds were coming from the House Appropriations Committee. There would be no possible way of tracing your budget to us."

"But what would the Administration have to do in exchange for being supported by the CIA?" the President asked.

"Well, you and your people get around a lot. You personally get to speak to heads of state, Dean Rusk is in touch with foreign diplomats, Bob McNamara has a chance to meet with military experts from other countries. All we ask you to do is keep your eyes and ears open."

"That doesn't sound too hard," the President said.
"It isn't. Let's say you have a state dinner, and a foreign minister tells you something. To you it might sound unimportant and trivial, but to us it might make a lot of sense. What we'd also like to do every time you or Rusk or McNamara meet with somebody is to write us a report on it."

"And just for doing that you're going to give me all the money I want for the Great Society?" the President asked in amazement.

"Well, we'd like to get some of our people into your Administration without anybody knowing about it. Let's say you have got an opening in the Cabinet. You could fill it with one of our men."
"I haven't appointed an attorney general yet," the President said.

"Fine. We'll let you know in a few days who we want you to put in the job. Now, we'd also like to get someone on the Supreme Court. You never can tell what they are up to. As soon as you have a resignation, send it to us in code on this little transmitter which looks like a fountain pen and we'll tell you what to do next."

"I don't want to do anything wrong," the President said.

"How could you do anything wrong if you're helping your country?" the CIA man said. "All we're asking you to do is let us use the Executive branch of government to fight communism."

"Well, as long as you put it that way," the President said. "But I'd like to ask you one question. How come you can get all the money you want to, and I can't?"
"It's simple, Mr. President. We don't have to account for ours."

'The Burmese Harp' jars your sensibilities

By DON PASQUELLA
For The Iowan

"The Burmese Harp," the feature film which starts the annual REFOCUS celebration of film and photography tonight, is the film which catapulted Kon Ichikawa into international prominence as an important young director. It won the San Giorgio Award at the Venice Film Festival in 1956 and more recently was a 1966 New York Film Festival Retrospective Choice.

Adapted by Ichikawa's wife, Noto Wada, from a story by the popular Japanese philosopher and essayist Michio Takeyama, the film is a unique view of the human dilemma.

Following World War II, author Takeyama was particularly distressed by the automation aimlessness which he observed in the Japanese youth, whose philosophy seemed to be "nothing matters, nothing makes sense," as they adopted with a sort of dazed passivity. Japan's defeat and the termination of the legend of invincibility, had caused a massive spiritual upheaval.

In 2,000 years of history Japan had never been invaded and no Japanese army had ever been defeated by foreigners. Suddenly, all that was over. Takeyama wrote this story for the young people of Japan in an effort to build up their self-confidence and to give them courage for the future.

Basically, "The Burmese Harp" is a very evocative film about war guilt and the roads of conscience which drive a Japanese soldier in Burma in 1945 to try to expiate the sins of war.

Director Ichikawa's extremely personal style, based on the duality of his subject matter, shows us man as an antagonist with alternatives and the necessity of choice. He makes effective use of the classical conflict in Japanese literature and theater between giri (duty) and ninpo (human feeling). Ichikawa has said, "this is the first film I really felt like I had to make — something simple and true about the difficulty of living."

There are some things in this film that may jar your sensibilities to the point of distraction. For example, from our point of view it would be unbelievable for a group of soldiers to take time to sing a plaintive ballad about autumn leaves while trying to escape from the advancing enemy. But we must keep in mind that the Japanese have always delighted in nature and that Japanese warriors have a tradition of being devoted to music and poetry.

Finally, we must say that in the majority of Japanese films, this one included, there is a pervading highly literal style which, through its frequent reiteration of a point already made, has a tendency to become distracting for an American audience and prevents us from becoming deeply involved. Naturally, these are difficulties that will have to be worked out individually.

Reader offers epistle for mercy

To The Editor:

Every morning as I scurry dutifully on my way to work, I spy a group of perhaps 12 grade school children huddling near the locked doors of St. Mary's school for warmth. Cold, snow and wind are abominations in the sight of the Lord and I know what they do to little children (especially in the morning). Perhaps one of the good sisters could perform an act of mercy by arising a little earlier to let the poor little mites into the "fountain of learning." Myself, I have always found horrendous difficulties in communicating with the good sisters. Thus: this little epistle.

Zorba is back and for those who have yet to make his acquaintance, I suggest they take advantage of his return to do so.

Who is Zorba? He is a lusty, two-fisted giant of a man who goes through life munching it as though it were a steak two inches thick, and pulling at life's restrictions like a Gulliver defying Lilliputian shackles. Everything Zorba does is big. He is happy big and he is sad big, and he crams more vibrance into one life than most people would into ten.

"Most people" are represented by an inhibited, constricted Englishman who comes to Crete with the idea of reopening a mine of which he has found himself the owner. He is immediately discovered and taken in tow by Zorba.

Like many great stories, Zorba is the tale of an education — in this case it is the expanding of the narrow horizons of the Englishman. When everything goes wrong for Zorba, when all fails and dies and seems beyond the hope of recovery — then Zorba dances. He is a Job with a vengeance, taking what life has to offer and coming back for more, thumbing his nose at God. And it is this dancing, the madness of his ability to resort to it as a consolation and response in defiance of life's raw deals and disappointments, that the Englishman must learn. The lesson is not an easy one. It is filled with pain, grotesqueness and death — but graduation exercises are overpopping.

Anthony Quinn is Zorba. This is not a statement of casting, it is a fact. To refer to his performance as great might be giving him more due than he deserves. The role is so obviously tailored for him and for his quality of he-man gusto that he can clearly enact it with no effort whatsoever. Still, acting or being, it is something to see.

Alan Bates is the retiring, conservative Englishman. He underplays the role in a fashion that is exasperating at times, but in the main, the part profits from his subtlety. Lila Kedrova, a truly great actress, received a well-deserved academy award for her performance as Zorba's pathetic, adoring little mistress, and Irene Pappas (Greece's great dramatic actress) plays a starkly beautiful, doomed widow — another episode in the wandering pupil's introduction to life.

Michael Cacoyannis (who directed a fine film version of "Elektra" with Miss Pappas), has put together all this talent in a fashion scarcely less exuberant than Zorba himself. What he has accomplished is both aesthetically pleasing and meaningful. Clearly he is a man taken with his subject and he woos his performers into giving solid good characterizations.

He has a keen eye for composition, and for the barrenness of things Greek. He tells his story relentlessly but with compassion at one and the same time. He knows that to make the tale of Zorba work, he must put his audience through the same horrors that Zorba's pupil must observe, for we are all Zorba's pupils and there are no short cuts in this Life Appreciation course — lest our final appreciation be lessened.

To be sure there is a certain quality of slickness and patness that pervades the film, a certain smugness where allegory and metaphor are concerned, and perhaps even the dancing motif itself is a little too clever for its own good. But these surely come as afterthoughts and can only be faintly sensed if one is caught up in the movie.

"Zorba" is an answer (not THE answer, but AN answer) to all the "why live?" literature that is flooding the troubled world these days. To those hopeless inquirers and head-shakers of the "Why Live?" school, Zorba replies with an irresistible and resounding: "why not — it's wonderful!"

Council Hears Work Reports By Members

The Iowa City Council heard a report on proposed street lighting and discussed sewer construction and the naming of a city park at an informal meeting Monday in the Civic Center.

Councilman Robert Lind reported progress on a proposal to install new street lights on Riverside Drive and North Dubuque Street to Interstate 80, and in a residential district bounded by Capitol and Gilbert Streets, Iowa Avenue and the northern city limits.

Lind said that he, Frank R. Smiley, city manager, and Kenneth F. Millsap, assistant city manager, would meet with the Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company to discuss installation of the lights.

Councilman Richard W. Burger said that he had offered a sewer contract to Coralville with lower rates than are now in effect. The council said it will make a formal recommendation at its meeting tonight to negotiate the contract.

Councilman Loren Hickerson commented, "Clearly, for sanitary sewer facilities, we will have to operate on a regional basis."

The council also decided to name the new Jefferson Street park after Leroy S. Mercer, former mayor of Iowa City. James Nesmith said Mercer was "one of the greatest public citizens we've ever had in Iowa City."

"It's the only way the council has of honoring a citizen," added Burger.

Peace Committee Adopts Position

The University Vietnam Peace Committee has adopted an official position on the war in Vietnam, and is making plans for activities to be carried out this semester.

Included in the committee's position are: (1) the bombing of North Vietnam must be halted now by the United States (2) the intensity of the ground war in South Vietnam must be reduced by the U.S. with reciprocal action by the Viet Cong and (3) the only way to end the war in Vietnam is through a negotiated settlement, leaving all of Vietnam free of any non-Vietnamese military or political organizations.

In a meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Union Michigan State Room, the committee will discuss a coming seminar entitled "Guerrilla Warfare and Counter-insurgency."

Party Leader Visits Ames

The Hawkeye Student Party (HSP) sent its interim chairman to Iowa State University at Ames Saturday to examine student politics.

Paul Eisner, A2, Highland Park, Ill., represented the HSP in observing the Ames campus. "I wanted to see the difference in the two universities, especially in student politics," he said.

Part of Eisner's afternoon was spent talking to Donald Smith, ISU's newly elected president of the General Student Body (GSB). "I came away with a negative impression of some of Smith's methods and ideas but I was impressed by the student enthusiasm for a change," Eisner stated.

According to Eisner, Smith wants to abolish all the rules governing students outside the class room. "I agreed with Smith that some of the rules had to be changed at both campuses, but certainly not all of them should be abolished," he said.

Eisner said he and Smith disagreed as to the names of affecting change. "He (Smith) advocated sit-ins and demonstrations as part of the normal procedure, whereas I propose exploring all the normal channels first," he said.

A news forum was also observed by Eisner. "The students filled a place about as large as the Union Ballroom. In front of them were the administrative officials who then answered questions as to the functioning of the university. It was impressive and I liked the idea," he said.

According to Eisner one of the HSP objectives is the study of the proposed $5 increase in dorm fees here. "I made a comparison of the dormitories on both campuses and found that for $735 ISU students enjoy about the same facilities. The $735 fee was for non-residents also," he said. The current fee at the University is $880 a year.

"The Public Eye" involves the marriage of a middle-aged man and a young woman that is integrating — though both love each other deeply. A detective provides the third side in the love triangle that develops. The cast includes: Elmer Armstrong as Julian Cristoforo, A. Kent Braverman as Charles Sidley, and Penny Weaver as Belinda Sidley.

Red Split Discussed

By MARYLIN OSWEILER Staff Writer

Dr. O. Edmund Clubb said Monday at Macbride Hall the present Sino-Soviet difficulties were basically a conflict between Marxism-Leninism and Maoism.

Clubb, a member of the U.S. consul to Peking at the time of the Communists' take-over in 1949, was a speaker Saturday at the Midwest China Conference held at the University last Friday and Saturday.

The partial split between the Marxist-Leninists and the Maoists resulted from China's inability to adjust to the Soviet's conception of a modern utopia, Clubb said.

He said China's economic, political, and military weaknesses were major factors limiting her compliance with Soviet aims.

He also said that Russia's previous attempts to mend the gap were met with animosity because "China does not know how to act in an equal relationship. She demands that the greatest share of the goods should go to her."

Peking viewed the Soviet Union as merely an instrument to help China gain control of Southeast Asia, Clubb said.

He said that China first began developing this viewpoint in 1957 when Russia, after sending up Sputnik I and developing ballistic missiles, appeared to be stronger than the United States.

Mao urged the Soviet Union to then direct Communist revolutions in underdeveloped countries, daring the United States to interfere he said.

Mao's theory is that, if he puts his demands high enough, he is bound to get something back from the Soviet Union," Clubb said.

"However, the Soviet Union knows China and all her policies and tendencies and she won't be China's catapul to carry forth their wishes in Asia."

Clubb said that in 1966, after three unsuccessful attempts to reach a settlement with China, Moscow finally voiced its discontent with Mao, and accused him of leading China astray.

About the possibility of a complete break between Moscow and Peking, he said, "I predict that the moderates in China will win and that a measure of reconciliation with the Soviet Union will occur. This need not frighten us because it would be the return of China to the Soviet camp, rather than the Soviets to China's camp."

He said "My predictions may not be correct, but unlike Mao, I admit being fallible."

Clubb is now a member of Columbia University's East Asian Institute and is writing a book called "20th Century China."

General Electric is an easy place to work.
All you need is brains, imagination, drive and a fairly rugged constitution.

Oh, yes. Something else that will help you at G.E. is an understanding of the kind of world we live in, and the kind of world we will live in.

There's a lot happening: The population is continuing to explode. The strain on resources is becoming alarming. At a time when men are being lured by the mysteries of space, we're faced with the task of making life on earth more livable.

There's a lot happening at G.E., too, as our people work in a hundred different areas to help solve the problems of a growing world: Supplying more (and cheaper) electricity with nuclear reactors. Controlling smog in our cities and pollution in our streams. Providing better street lighting and faster transportation.

This is the most important work in the world today: Helping to shape the world of tomorrow. Do you want to help? Come to General Electric, where the young men are important men.

Hawks Need Win Badly

Play At Minnesota Tonight; Spartans Upset, Indiana Wins

By RON BLISS
Asst. Sports Editor

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Iowa's basketball team will try to keep alive what remaining hopes it has for a Big 10 title when it faces a vastly improved Minnesota basketball team here at 8 tonight.

The Hawkeyes lost a heart-breaking 96-95 decision to Wisconsin in three overtimes in the Field House Saturday night and desperately need a victory here tonight to keep pace with conference leader Indiana.

Iowa is now 5-3 in the conference, a game behind Indiana, which won 96-81 over Illinois Monday. Michigan State is second, after being upset 80-64 at Ohio State Monday. Northwestern, which is tied for third place with Iowa, is at Wisconsin tonight.

"This game with Minnesota is an important one for us, and I'm confident we can bounce back," said Iowa Coach Ralph Miller Sunday. "I've never had a team give up and I'm sure that this one will be no exception."

Miller said that the team would have to play well in the game if it expected to win, though, because Minnesota, picked to finish last in the conference, has looked very strong of late.

The Gophers, though they are only 2-7 in conference play and 6-13 overall, lost to Indiana by only a point in overtime two weeks ago, beat Illinois at home 93-81 last week and Saturday threw a scare into Michigan State at East Lansing before losing by one point, 67-66, on a last second shot.

"There just isn't such a thing as an easy game in the Big 10 this year because there is very little difference between the first place and the last place team," Miller said. "Any team in the conference is capable of beating any other team in the conference on any given night. The scare that Michigan State got on its home court from Minnesota Saturday night is a good example of this."

Minnesota is led by high-scoring center Tom Kondla, who is second to Iowa's Sam Williams in the Big 10 scoring race. Kondla raised his average to 25.5 with a 32 point performance at Michigan State Saturday. Williams leads with a 28.2 average.

Kondla and forward Paul Presthus, however, are the only returning starters from a Minnesota team that graduated Lou Hudson and Archie Clark last year. The other starters — LeRoy Gardner, Wayne Barry and Rich Miller — are all non-lettersmen.

"We definitely have our work cut out for us, not only in the game against Minnesota, but in each of our remaining conference games," Miller said. "We are not out of the race yet, although the loss to Wisconsin was definitely a set-back."

Miller said that Indiana's upset of Northwestern was the best thing that could have happened as far as Iowa was concerned, though, because the Hawks don't play Northwestern again, but get a chance to go to Indiana next Saturday and balance the books.

"The way things stand, you'd have to say Michigan State and Indiana are the favorites right now," said Miller. "Indiana is especially in good shape. They have won three games on the road now and four of their six remaining games will be played at home. Michigan State's schedule is also favorable."

Miller said he saw no team winning the title easily, though.

Sam Williams Tells Strategy Of Last Play

"We are down by a point. And we have the ball with only five seconds to advance it to the fore court for a possible shot to win the game."

This is what was going through the minds of Hawkeye players, coaches and fans Saturday in Iowa's 96-95 loss to Wisconsin. After the game, Iowa's Sam Williams reviewed the strategy for that particular situation.

Williams said that the plan was for Phillips to get the ball to him at half court, and he in turn would pass the ball to Huston Breedlove who was waiting around the basket to make the last shot.

Well, the play didn't come off, and a disappointed Iowa team left the court losing a ballgame that went into three overtime periods by one point.

"We weren't patient enough to take the good shots," Williams said. He went on to say that Wisconsin came into the game really keyed up with everything to gain, and nothing to lose. "As long as we don't let this loss get us down, we won't have any trouble in the weeks to come," Williams said.

Coaches Ask Change In Rule On Stalling

BRISTOL, Va. (AP) — The stall is in, but Kentucky basketball Coach Adolph Rupp and several other leading coaches want it out.

The recent outbreak of stalling tactics by many coaches of underdog college basketball teams has brought out the caution flags in such cities as Lexington, Nashville, Los Angeles, and Knoxville.

Rupp says the stalling tactics have become so widespread that he thinks "the NCAA rules committee should look into this thing and see what can be done about it."

Rupp says "everybody from Dartmouth to Los Angeles" is beginning to employ stalling tactics when facing a heavily favored foe.

"The stall has been with us for a long time," says Rupp, "but it has become such a widespread problem during the past few weeks that I think the NCAA rules committee ought to think about adopting a 24-second rule."

Such coaches as Tennessee's Ray Mears, UCLA's John Wooden, Duke's Vic Bubas and Vanderbilt's Roy Skinner are among the coaches who like the idea of the 24-second rule — which calls for a team on offense to shoot within 24 seconds after gaining control of the ball.

Georgia's Ken Rosemond and George Washington's Babe McCarthy are among the vociferous opponents of such a plan.

Proponents of the 24-second rule (some prefer 30-seconds) doubt that their plan would receive a majority vote if all the NCAA collegiate coaches were polled.

"I doubt if such a rules change would be adopted," says Vanderbilt's Skinner. "Too many coaches have the wrong idea that the only way they have a chance to beat a more talented team is to hold the ball. A heavy underdog has just as good a chance of beating a superior foe if the team is up and is properly prepared."

Western Kentucky Climbs To 3rd In AP Rating

Streaking Western Kentucky climbed into third place behind UCLA and Louisville in The Associated Press' major college basketball poll Monday. Kansas, Syracuse and Tennessee also made notable gains.

Western Kentucky, fifth last week, has won 20 in succession after an opening game loss. The Hilltoppers scored victories over Tennessee Tech and Morehead last week.

Varsity, Freshman Wrestlers Win 3 Each At Wisconsin

By JOHN HARMON
Staff Writer
Iowa wrestlers picked up six victories on last weekend's trip to Madison, Wis.

The varsity grapplers did "real well" according to Coach David McCuskey, as they defeated Minnesota 20-9, Ohio State 15-14 and Wisconsin, 19-11.

"The boys were up for all the meets and did a very good job," said McCuskey, whose team is now 6-8 on the season and 4-5 in the conference.

Doug Duss lead the Hawkeye wrestlers with three decisions in the 137-pound class while sophomore heavyweight Dale Stearns, wrestling with a face mask to protect his broken nose, won his only two matches.

The freshmen wrestlers added three victories to the Hawkeye total as they defeated freshmen from Northern Illinois 25-10, Wisconsin, 23-0 and a combination of wrestlers from the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee Center and Marquette, 31-10.

Iowa could climb to the .500 mark with a victory Saturday over Purdue. McCuskey feels the Hawkeyes have a good chance of evening their record even though Purdue has some tough boys eligible this semester.

Jones On Life And Sports: 'You Make It Or You Don't'

By DEBBY DONOVAN
Staff Writer

Gerry Jones made two free throws with a second of play left and Iowa beat Ohio State by one point Feb. 11.

Jones admitted he was nervous at the time. "I almost let the pressure get to me, but I said to myself, 'I know I'm going to make at least one of them.' I concentrated as hard as I could on the first one, knowing that if I made that, some of the pressure would be off."

He remembered reading in a magazine article that NBA star Rick Barry's secret for making free throws was concentration. "I concentrated as hard as I could on the first one. I obliterated everything else out of my mind to make that one," he said.

Noise No Problem
Jones also said that the noise of the Ohio State crowd did not bother him. "It just sounded as if someone was calling me from maybe 10 blocks away."

Jones also discounted the effect of unfriendly crowds on the performance of visiting teams in general. He stressed that concentration to the point of hardly hearing the crowd was essential in any game. However, the 6-4 forward did say that a friendly crowd was a big boost to a team. He said that the home team expected cheers and tended to hear them in the background, in spite of the all-important concentration. In listing possible reasons for the great number of Big 10 losses on the road, Jones said that the break in a team's routine also broke its train of concentration and preparation for the game. He mentioned the fact that a visiting team had no friends behind it and that the players had a hard time feeling comfortable in the strange surroundings. He also said that the subtle differences in floors, backboards, rims and lighting could affect a team's play on an unfamiliar court. Used More Shots

Jones said he believed that he put more of himself into the Michigan State and Illinois games than any of his others. He suggested that he might have looked better in last week's Northwestern game because he used a greater variety of shots. He scored 22 points in the game. Fans have noticed that Jones started wearing glasses on the court after the Michigan State game. He explained that he had had problems with his shooting. He believes that the glasses have been a psychological help in improving his shooting. His average is now 17 points per game, second best on the team. Coach Ralph Miller noted that Jones' offense had improved since about the time of the Michigan State game. The coach said, "His outstanding contributions have been primarily his defensive play and rebounding ability. His biggest improvement in the last few weeks is that he is more consistent in his offensive play." Jones, who is in his third year of varsity ball for the Hawks, has 191 rebounds to lead the team. 'Indiana Best'

Jones believes that the Hawks' good teamwork has been the main thing helping them to overcome their lack of height. He rates Indiana, who shares the Big 10 lead with Michigan State, as the best team Iowa has faced. Jones plans to graduate in physical education next February. He would like to later obtain a degree in physical therapy. Although he appreciates the fact that basketball has helped him get through school, Jones said "the love of the game is the main thing" that keeps him playing. He said that basketball was worth to him only because he had to play whether he felt like it or not. "Because it is not something you can just do anytime you want, this tends to put it on the work side." Jones said that basketball was definitely worth all the time and effort and mentioned that sports prepared one for life after college. "Any sport is rather like life. You're under constant pressure every day — you either make it or you don't."

Where does an engineer intern?

Before you decide on the job that's to start you on your professional career, it's good to ask a few point blank questions ... like:

- Will this job let me rub shoulders with engineers doing things that haven't been done before, in all phases of engineering?
- Will I be working for an engineering oriented management whose only standard is excellence?
- Will I have access to experts in fields other than my own to help me solve problems and stimulate professional growth?
- Will I be working with the widest range of professional competence and technological facilities in the U. S.?
- Are engineering careers with this company stable ... or do they depend upon proposals and market fluctuations?

- There is a small college within a noted university in New York City. It has no "credit system" for measuring knowledge; no large lecture halls for one-way dialogues; no teaching assistants where the professor should be.
- What it does have is a new program of study designed for students who can best realize their intellectual potential by learning how to inquire, by seeking meaningful relationships between disciplines, by recognizing alternative modes of analysis and explanation. It has a faculty that is discussion-oriented, concerned with teaching—and learning—only through active participation of the student. It has a philosophy which views preparation for graduate school as just one of several possible goals of a liberal arts education.
- THE NEW SCHOOL COLLEGE offers a two-year course of study (the third and fourth years of undergraduate work) leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree in the Humanities or the Social Sciences. Wieczorek Tops Mile Mark As Track Team Wins Again

By JOEL FABRIKANT
Staff Writer

Iowa's Larry Wieczorek lowered his Big 10 indoor mile record to 4:05.6 at Champaign, Ill., Saturday to lead the Hawkeyes to their third straight victory. Iowa accumulated 88½ points to 54 for runner-up Illinois. Purdue had 20 points and Northwestern 13½. Wieczorek's time was 1.1 seconds faster than the Big 10 record of 4:06.7 he set two weeks ago in Chicago. Wieczorek came back to easily win the two mile race in 9:06.7. Will Wieczorek break four minutes this year?

WIECZOREK

"Probably," said Hawkeye Coach Francis Cretzmeier, "but most likely outdoors and only if the competition is right." Another Iowa star Saturday was Jon Reimer, who was the only other double winner with victories in the 70 yard high and low hurdles. Mike Mondane took the 440 in :48.1, his best effort this year in that event. Reimer, Mondane, Fred Ferree and Carl Frazier ran the mile relay in 3:14.7, 2.7 seconds faster than their winning time the week before. Ironically, Reimer ran a 47.6 leg in the relay, besting teammate Mondane, the indoor 600 and outdoor 660 Big 10 champion. Coach Cretzmeier was well pleased with the outcome of the meet. "With few exceptions, everyone turned in their best times of the year," he said. Iowa faces powerful Minnesota

Swimmers Beat Wildcats For 2nd Conference Win

By ALAN JAHN
Staff Writer

Iowa's swimming team posted its second Big 10 victory of the season Saturday by defeating Northwestern 64-59 in a meet at Evanston, Ill.

This victory gave the Hawk's a Big 10 record of 2-3 and brought their season record to 3-3. Iowa's Gil Hitchcock won two events, including the important 200-yard butterfly in the last few yards of the race.

Individual events for Iowa were won by Al Schenck, Terry Swanson, John Scheda, Tim Barnes and Ken McBeath.

Coach Bob Allen and the swimmers look ahead to a meet at Wisconsin Friday, and a meet at Purdue on Saturday. Both have fine teams, according to Allen.

RESULTS: 400 medley relay — 1. Northwestern (Chuck Hollins, Foreman Friend, Rick Tegeler, John Harding); 5:48.9. 1000 free style — 1. Gil Hitchcock (I); 2. Maurice LeVois (I); 3. Side Horse Team Excels As Gymnasts Whip MSU

By DEBBY DONOVAN
Staff Writer

Iowa's gymnastics team retained its Big 10 lead by beating Michigan State University Saturday 189-25 - 186.70 in the Field House.

The Hawkeyes gained their highest score of the year before a record crowd of 3,000.

Iowa Coach Sam Baillie gave special praise to the side horse team of Keith McCannless, Marc Slotten, Marc Gordon and Ken Gordon. He said that their 28.35 points was the high for any gymnast event in the country this year.

"They were the team that brought us from behind," Baillie said. "After their victory we gained momentum and knew we could do it." Iowa's Big 10 record is now 6-0. If the gymnasts beat Michigan next weekend, they will be leading the field going into the championship tournament. In this case a third place tournament finish would give the Hawks a tie for the conference title.

The Big 10 tournament will be held here March 3 and 4.

Michigan's conference record is 5-1. Michigan State, who has beaten Michigan, is now 5-2 in the conference.

RESULTS: Long horse — 1. Dave Thor (MS);

Clay's Appeal Refused By Board

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay was staggered again Monday in his attempt to keep from being drafted for military service.

By a 4-0 vote, Clay's petition for reclassification as a Black Muslim minister was rejected, the director of Kentucky's Selective Service announced.

This exhausted the moves open to Clay under the draft system.

Fencers Win 2 Of 3; Coach Cites Need For Improvement

By MIKE BARRY
Staff Writer

Iowa fencing coach Dick Marks is looking toward his team's important meeting here Saturday against Ohio State with guarded optimism — and for good reason too.

The Hawkeyes won two of three meets at Champaign, Ill., over the weekend, but Marks was not particularly pleased with their performances. "We could have fenced a lot better," he said. "Our main problem was consistency. If we ever all get going at once, we'll be pretty good."

Iowa defeated Wayne State 16-11 and the University of Detroit 14-13, but as Marks said, was particularly inconsistent in its 19-8 loss to Illinois. Illinois leads the Big 10 Conference with a 4-0 record.

Iowa and Ohio State are now tied for second place. The two teams have 3-1 conference records.

Won 7 Matches "In epee, we won seven matches and lost two against Illinois," said Marks, "but otherwise we fell flat on our faces. And our epee team has been our strongest asset all year," he mentioned. Aside from its 7-2 performance against Wayne State on Friday, Marks didn't get much help from his foil team either. The Hawks were beaten in foil competition on Saturday 5-4 by Detroit and 4-2 by the Illini. "We will have our work cut out for us this weekend against Ohio State," said Marks. "Yet if we fence like I know we can, I know we can beat Ohio State."

According to Marks, the Buckeyes, like Iowa, are a strong epee team. "But they aren't particularly strong in sabre," he said, "and I think we can beat them there."

Marks cited Co-Capt. Tim Wilson from Davenport and junior George Bergman for their weekend performances, Wilson in epee and Bergman in foil. Coach Disappointed "Except for Tim," said Marks, "I was disappointed with the showing by our epee team. Wilson won six of his matches and lost three at Champaign."

"Tim has a 19-5 record at this point, which is exceptionally good at this time of year. And he has not had any bad days yet," he said.

Judges Pick 30 Photographs In REFOCUS

REFOCUS, a week-long exchange of contemporary photography and cinematography, began Monday with the selection of the top 30 photographs out of the 350 entries.

George Shane, art editor, Des Moines Register & Tribune; Pat Pierce, director, Cedar Rapids Art Center; and Donald Halley, assistant director, Des Moines Art Center, judged the photographs.

The work of the following winners will be on display in the Union Terrace Lounge all this week.

Mei R. Sundby, University of Iowa;

Original Play By Student To Be Given

"A Well-Respected Man," an original play by Barry Kaplan, G. New York, will be presented at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday at the Studio Theatre in Old Armory.

Admission is free for University students who pick up tickets at the box office in the Union South Lobby.

Tickets may be obtained upon presentation of ID cards and registration certificates from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. today through Friday and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. General admission tickets may be bought by the public for $1, and any remaining tickets may be obtained at the door before the performance.

The play is about a middle-aged man plagued by guilt from past mistakes, according to Kaplan.

Mark Sneeoff, visiting professor of film from Los Angeles, will direct the play. Five students are included in the cast: Robert Ernst, A4, Humbolt, as the husband and father who has failed; Rochelle Richelieu, A3, Wheaton, Ill., as the domineering wife and mother; Mary Beth Supinger, A3, Marshalltown, as the weak-willed daughter; Donald Muench, A2, St. Louis, Mo., as the son who defends his father; and David Gross, G1, Orono, Maine, as the old "friend" who returns to haunt the main character.

Knapp Discusses Worker Accidents

"While the accident-prone worker cannot be blamed for faulty equipment which is unsafe, the fact that some people seem to be more susceptible to accidents is true," according to L.W. Knapp Jr., associate professor of preventive medicine and environmental health.

Knapp talked about such unfortunate to a group which attended a recent postgraduate conference on Industrial Health Needs in Iowa.

Accidents, other than those which are a result of faulty equipment or conducive surroundings, are usually the result of poor decision making, said Knapp, who is an agricultural safety engineer for the Accident Prevention Section of the Institute of Agricultural Medicine.

Motivation Unknown
What prompts some people to take more risks is not exactly understood. When something out of the ordinary has upset the work pattern, or the person is under pressure, the opportunity for accidents to occur seems to increase, he said.

"Equipment is designed to handle specific jobs. How well it performs these jobs quite often depends on its maintenance and the way it is operated. The way an operator responds depends on learned experiences from the past, as well as a few reflex responses.

"Individuals vary greatly in exposure to accidents even in the same occupation. Each person's judgments vary and the experience and training of two individuals is not always equal," he said.

The propensity for having accidents can also be influenced by such transient factors as stress, fatigue, emotional problems, lapse of attention, as well as many other distractions, Knapp said.

Agricultural people seem to accept a higher degree of injury discomfort before seeking medical help. People on farms also tend to be found in a wider variety of working environments, each affording specific opportunities for accidents, Knapp said.

Hanson Talk At Wisconsin

Student Body Pres. Tom Hanson visited the University of Wisconsin, Madison, last Friday and Saturday to discuss student government at the Big 10 Student Body Presidents Conference.

A letter concerning the war in Vietnam and a proposal on student regulations were the major outcomes of the meeting.

The letter concerning Vietnam will be sent to President Johnson signed by many student body presidents across the country. It will express student concern over the draft and the Vietnam war.

Hanson said he would sign the letter which he planned to present to the Student Senate at their meeting tonight.

'Student government had better consider the issues salient to the student body,' said Hanson.

These issues are greater than parking regulations and football tickets, he said.

The proposal on student regulations would involve another section to the legislative section of the senate's constitution which is now being revised, said Hanson.

This section would specify that no regulations concerning students could be made without ratification of the senate.

The Big 10 presidents also discussed the problems student governments face in dealing with administration and faculty, according to Hanson.

Thesis Rules Are Changed

Graduates writing theses can throw away their erasers because easy-erase paper will no longer be acceptable in the Graduate College.

This regulation will appear in the newly revised thesis manual, 'Requirements for Graduate Theses.' The new manual will be distributed to graduate students in about three weeks, Alvin E. Scaff, associate dean of the Graduate College, said Monday.

The manual states that the original copy of the thesis must be on white, number four, 20-pound paper or a higher grade of paper.

According to the manual, Xerox copies of the thesis are preferred. If carbon copies are made, the paper 'may be the same as the original, although a 12-to-16-pound weight may be used to obtain clearer carbons. Corrasable should not be used and onion-skin weight is not acceptable.'

Moeller Stays In Chicago For Meeting

Leslie G. Moeller, director of the School of Journalism, after attending mid-winter meetings of the Association for Education in Journalism (AEJ) over the weekend in Chicago, has remained there to participate in functions of the Inland Daily Press Association. Later he will preside over a Chicago Area School of Journalism alumni meeting there.

James W. Markham, professor of international communications, met with members of the AEJ elective committee on Professional Freedom and Responsibility, to consider among other matters, various media evaluation proposals. Markham is chairman of that committee. He is also associate head of the International Communication Division of AEJ and participated in AEJ Advisory Board discussions of new projects and plans for the 1967 AEJ Convention in Boulder, Colo.

Malcolm S. MacLean Jr., holder of the Gallup Chair for Communications Research in the School of Journalism, took part in meetings of the Research & Methodology Division of AEJ. He is a former chairman of that group.

Rust College Fund Drive Planned

By ROBERT BRINK Staff Writer

A fund drive for former residents of a dormitory that burned down at Rust College and the recent proposal for a summer program were discussed at a meeting of the Rust, Iowa, and LeMoyne Expanding Educational Horizons (RILEEH) Committee Thursday in the Board Room of Old Capitol.

The fund drive will be conducted Friday among University students to replace uninsured books and other personal items lost by men of Hilltop Dormitory at Rust College, Holly Springs, Miss., when a fire destroyed the dormitory Jan. 29.

The dormitory was built as temporary housing about 1947, and burned down apparently when a spark from old wiring or from a gas heater ignited the building.

None of the 30 men in the dorm was injured, but many of their personal possessions and books were lost in the fire.

There was insurance on the dormitory. Two men who participated in the University's RILEEH program last summer, Roy Nunnealey and Lawrence Malone, lived in the dormitory.

Contributions are being accepted locally by Philip G. Hubbard, dean of academic affairs, in Old Capitol. More information may be obtained from Mrs. Alice Albrecht at 338-3958.

The federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), has reviewed a recent request for funds to conduct a summer student-exchange program between Rust College, LeMoyne College and the University, but its decision has not been announced, according to Hubbard.

In the program, 25 students from Rust College, a predominantly Negro liberal arts school, would come to the University for eight weeks of study beginning in June.

Also, 10 students from LeMoyne College, Memphis, Tenn., would come here to attend summer school, and 10 University students would go to LeMoyne.

In addition, 10 LeMoyne students would be invited to spend their junior years here in 1967-68, and 10 LeMoyne seniors eligible for application to the Graduate College would be asked to visit for a few days to share ideas with seniors majoring in the same fields.

3 Men Taken Into Custody For $16,000 Bank Robbery

DES MOINES (AP) — "We still have a lot of loose ends to tie up," a spokesman for the FBI said Monday after a third man was taken into custody in the $16,000 robbery of the Kellogg Savings Bank.

The FBI said they were not looking for anyone else in last Tuesday's robbery, in which bank cashier Ray Welle, 58, and his wife were tied up in their home after the cashier was forced to open the bank vault.

None of the loot has been recovered, authorities added.

David Lee Grandstaff, 23-year-old Des Moines carpet layer, was released on a $50,000 bond Monday afternoon a few hours after he surrendered.

The FBI said it had issued a warrant last Saturday for Grandstaff, Gerald G. Weir, 25, and John F. Cline, 18.

One agent's report said the trail began when a resident of Kellogg spotted the license number of a suspicious car and reported it.

Weir, formerly from Des Moines, and Cline, from rural Norwalk, were arrested Saturday night in an apartment in San Jose, Calif. They were ordered held in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Mao's Freedom Described

By AL KORBEL
Staff Writer

The "control of thought" was described as "the most brutal aspect of Chinese Communist life" by the Rev. Harold Rigney Friday afternoon in a lecture before the Midwest China Conference.

Speaking before about 150 persons, Rigney's half hour talk outlined "freedom" under the Maoist regime.

Rigney was in Peking during and after the 1949 Communist take-over. He was imprisoned by the Communists for over four years, from 1951 to 1955.

His description of life there was based on his observations before and during his prison term.

"Being an American, the Communist's attempt to control these people's minds seemed brutal to me," he said.

Rigney went on to say that control of the children was a thorough.

"Even before the child was born, his parents had no say as to his place of birth. The mother was assigned to a hospital. After the child was born he was placed in a commune," he said. "A dossier was opened on every new born child. A record was kept of his friends, where he lived, school attended, where he went and what he did. As the child grew older, a village official would come around to interview him. During the questioning, the official would record such reactions as the wrinkling of the face and the dilating of the pupils — anything that would indicate how the person felt," he said.

Students Controlled

Students were advanced to higher degrees of education for their attitudes and thought — not their ability, according to Rigney. He pointed out that even when the students were promoted, their courses were controlled. The same was true for choice of jobs and even the amount of salary.

"The emphasis was on conformity," he said.

Rigney then explained how the Chinese were taught to conform.

"I saw these people sitting around an instructor for 10 hours a day. There they learned practical knowledge such as how industry was socialized. If anyone fell asleep or forgot his lesson he was subjected to verbal abuse," he said.

Such punitive methods had a noticeable effect on the people, according to Rigney.

"Because of their treatment, they would no longer harbor a critical thought against the Marxist philosophy for fear of showing it on their faces, or accidentally saying something," he said.

He said that they then found it easier to find fault with the other philosophies.

Fear Used

Rigney then described two emotional tactics used in brainwashing prisoners.

"They used hope and fear," he said. "The fear was from listening to the guns being fired as prisoners were executed, and the hope from the announcement of a prisoner being released. However release could only be given to those who confessed."

Rigney related an experience he had trying to travel under the Communist regime. It happened while he was still president of Catholic University in Peking, before his imprisonment.

He told of taking a train trip from Peking to Tientsin, 80 miles southeast of the capital.

"Before the trip I had to fill out in duplicate a questionnaire which contained about a hundred questions," he said. "I had to fill one out at the local police station, then at the train station. When I arrived at Tientsin, I had to follow the same procedure."

The type of questions Rigney had to answer were, where are you going? What will you do? Where will you stay?

Lecturer Questioned Again

"The exact same procedure had to be followed when I was leaving Tientsin. Only then I had to answer such questions as, where did you go? What did you do? Where did you stay?" he said.

In the question and answer period that followed, Rigney pointed out that the days he was describing were when Mao was at his political zenith. The current strikes and anti-Mao slogans show that conditions aren't the same today, Rigney said.

"Mao's strength in the initial take-over was with the young. As they matured, they became disillusioned and then defected," he said. "Mao is once again appealing to the young."

After the question period Rigney explained that Mao probably lost some strength with the failure of the 1958 Great Leap forward.

"No matter who wins in the current Chinese upheaval, the victor will emerge weakened," Rigney said.

British Colleges Called Tougher

By ROBERT ALLEN
Staff Writer

British students who have a B.S. degree are trained as well as U.S. students who have one year of graduate school.

Peter Murdoch, assistant professor of psychology, made this comment in an interview describing his feelings on U.S. education.

Murdoch is a native of England. He has been in the United States five years and at the University for a year and half.

In comparing British and American higher education, Murdoch said the basic difference was in the qualifications of students and the objective of education.

"It is much harder to get into a British university. You must be bright. Only about 5 to 10 per cent of the applicants get in," he said.

He said that historically, British universities have served mainly the elite. In the last 100 years, however, the trend has been to base college eligibility more on the ability of the applicant.

The objective of British education, said Murdoch, is to produce professionals at the bachelor degree level. When the student enters college, he must know what his major is and it is not easy for him to change his major.

After the student is admitted, Murdoch said, he has a tough road ahead. He said that some of the courses taught on the graduate level in the United States were taught to undergraduates in England.

Tutor System Used

He pointed out, however, that the student was given close supervision. The tutor system is used. Therefore, there is a healthy teacher-student relationship.

Murdoch said, "The degree you get in British universities is a professional degree. A bachelor's degree in chemistry means you are a chemist. Whereas, here you can't call yourself a chemist unless you have a Ph.D."

On the minus side, Murdoch said that perhaps British universities were too severe in their methods of selection and education of student. But, on the other hand, he said U.S. universities were too lenient.

He said that American universities were trying to educate a broad segment of society. He called it mass education.

Then he added, "I only appear to be critical of mass education. I am wholeheartedly in favor of it."

Nevertheless, he had some suggestions that he thinks, if applied, would improve American mass education.

"Other institutions of further education, besides major universities such as Iowa, should be set up for people who are not primarily interested in the sciences and humanities," he said.

He suggested that community colleges and teacher training colleges should be set up for students who didn't measure up or for students who were interested in fields that have no place on a major university campus.

P.E. Criticized

He said that some fields of education were not truly in the realm of higher education. As examples, he named physical education and home economics. He said they should be taught at some other school — perhaps in community colleges.

Murdoch said that after purging major universities of these departments, and after directing the non-scholar and the non-research student to lesser schools, entrance requirements should be stiffened.

Murdoch received the B.S. degree from the University of Manchester, Manchester, England. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina.
