Air Crash Kills 124 In Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A Swiss-owned Britannia airliner with 130 aboard crashed during a thunderstorm early today. Rescue workers reported finding 124 bodies, many of them women.

The plane, on a flight from Bombay to Cairo, was diverted to Nicosia because of bad weather.

Rescuers reporting from the scene of the crash said the four-engine turboprop Britannia appeared to have plowed into the top of a low hill as it was coming in to land.

The plane broke up on impact, scattered bodies over a wide area.

Scores of policemen and doctors assisted by personnel of the U.N. Peace Force in Cyprus trudged through muddy fields in darkness to help in the rescue operations.

One man on the spot said, "It is the worst scene I have ever seen in my life. There are bodies all over the place, some of them in pieces."

Rescuers were working under floodlights shining from two U.N. helicopters hovering overhead.

Reports said the plane carried 120 passengers and a crew of 10.

The airliner belongs to the Swiss air charter firm, Globear.

Globear agents said they had no idea of the nationality of the passengers, but it was believed many were British.

Surveyor Makes Moon Landing

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The shovel-equipped Surveyor 3 spacecraft settled softly on a lunar plain Wednesday night and began televising pictures of an astronaut landing site. But the first batch was indistinct because of sun glare, scientists said.

Signals appeared to be weaker than expected, too, but experts said this was not a factor in the lack of photo clarity.

The first group of 11 photos, sent to earth starting an hour after the 7:04 p.m. EST landing in the moon's Ocean of Storms, were of the spidery spacecraft itself and of the ground beneath. They showed the tubular skeleton and instruments of the spacecraft which seemed to be in good condition.

Signals Confused
"We are getting confusing and conflicting signals from the spacecraft," said a spokesman at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which controls Surveyor.

"At first there was an indication of a high current drain from the battery, but later signals indicated the drain was quite low. We tried to get a picture of the battery to see whether it might have been damaged in the touchdown but glare from the sun prevented our getting any useful data.

"There is no indication at this time that we have any serious problems. The spacecraft is responding to various commands and things seem to be pretty good."

Sun Glare Temporary

The sun glare was expected to be only a temporary problem as the angle of the rays changed with passage of time. The lunar days lasts two weeks.

Surveyor 3, braking on tongues of fire, planted its three legs on the moon after a 65-hour, 217,000-mile flight from Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The original plan was to take two batches of pictures, then a period of engineering telemetry and then do more picture taking today.

THE WEATHER HAS been more permissive this week and golf classes have been able to practice their golf driving. Wednesday was only the second day this class had been able to practice outside, because of last week's wind and rain. Patricia Gustafson, A3, Rockford, Ill., seems to be getting right into the swing of things.

LBJ Will Attend Adenauer Rites

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced Wednesday that he would attend the funeral of former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany — "I want to be there."

Johnson called Adenauer "a great and beloved man," and said "to us, to Europe, and to the world, he will always be a symbol of the vitality and courage of the German people."

An aide notified the President about 7:45 Wednesday morning that the 91-year-old Adenauer had died at his home in a suburb of Bonn.

Johnson, with unusual promptness, let it be known through Press Secretary George Christian that he would fly to Germany for the services Tuesday afternoon at the renowned Cologne Cathedral.

There was no word whether Johnson might take advantage of the occasion to extend the trip to other European areas. But the general thinking around Washington was that this would be unlikely.

Other world leaders will be gathering in Cologne, and there might be opportunities for at least casual meetings with such dignitaries as British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger, or even President Charles de Gaulle of France.

But the circumstances of a state funeral scarcely would offer an adequate background for any discussion of serious problems. Rather, any contacts probably would be on the casual side, such as those in Washington when Johnson met individually with statesmen from around the world who assembled to attend the funeral of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

The chief executive also paid tribute to Adenauer in a statement declaring that Americans mourn his passing:

"We will never forget his life-long opposition to tyranny in any form," said the statement. "Nor will we forget how, with single-minded determination, he led his nation from the ruins of war to a prosperous and respected position in the family of free nations.

"Konrad Adenauer will be missed everywhere, but his dauntless spirit will live on in the Atlantic partnership he did so much to create. The contribution he made is one from which all free men will profit. There can be no greater monument to the memory of a great and beloved man," the statement continued.

Johnson and Adenauer had known one another for about 15 years. The chancellor was a guest of the Johnsons at the LBJ ranch, met some of the German - Americans in small towns nearby, and addressed the Texas legislature in Austin.

The last time they met was on Aug. 14, 1962, when Adenauer visited the White House and Johnson was vice president.

Local Religious Group Hits Viet Policy At Open Forum

Opposition to the war in Vietnam was voiced at an open forum Wednesday night at Gloria Dei Lutheran Church. About 300 people were in the audience.

The forum, sponsored by the Laity Concerned about Vietnam, was composed of George W. Forell, director of the School of Religion; James F. McCue, assistant professor of religion; Robert Scharlemann, associate professor of religion; and the Rev. Duane Addison, moderator.

Forell said that a discussion of this nature raised a number of questions. Many people wonder why theologians involve themselves in affairs of politics, he said.

"Theologians don't have special insight into the war in Vietnam, but war is too important to be left to military generals or politicians. War is the concern of everyone," said Forell.

He said that discussion of American involvement in the Vietnam war was burdened by false parallelism.

"I don't believe that this situation is in any way similar to the situation in Europe in the 1950's, which is commonly voiced as justification of the war by those in favor of it," said Forell.

We are involved in Vietnam because of an idolatrous viewpoint, he said. We seem to feel we have some sort of an insight which makes us able to know what is right for all people, no matter what they think, said Forell.

McCue feels that Americans are deceiving themselves of what the real situation is. Even if we agree with the basic policy voiced by the government, we must still question the methods used to enforce it in Vietnam, he said.

"Until recently I didn't give Vietnam that much thought," said Scharlemann, "because people are always involved in some foolishness and cruelty."

However, there is more than the usual amount of such involvement now, he said. He said that this criticism of the Vietnam situation should be made over and over because the U.S. Administration seemed unable to give up its own opinions. Scharlemann also said that the present leaders were abnormally intent to suppress information. The moral justification which the political leaders give for the war, he said, is immoral.

NEWS IN BRIEF

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. pilots reported 17 encounters with Communist jets Wednesday as improving weather allowed stepped-up air action over North Vietnam. American spokesmen said one Communist MIG17 was shot down. A North Vietnamese broadcast claimed two U.S. planes were downed southeast of Hanoi and that the pilot of one was captured.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI lashed out Wednesday at both extremes in the Roman Catholic Church — the ultraliberals making unauthorized changes and the rigid conservatives fighting to block modernization. The Pope expressed "bitterness," "sorrow," "apprehension," and "affliction." He used these terms in a speech that he delivered personally in Latin to a meeting of his commission to supervise liturgical changes authorized by the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

Newbrough Selected New Daily Iowan Editor

William B. Newbrough, A4, Des Moines, was named editor of the 1967-68 Daily Iowan Wednesday by Student Publications Inc. He will assume his duties May 15.

Newbrough, former police and fire reporter for the Iowan, is a radio-television major.

He has worked for the University radio station WSUI for nearly two years and has progressed from a reporter to a newsweek editor and broadcaster.

Newbrough has worked at Des Moines station WHO, and is currently reporter from this area for WHO and a Waterloo station KWWL.

When asked about changes he would like to make in the paper Newbrough said, "I would like to establish a personal relationship between the reporting staff and myself. If they have any suggestions I would like to hear them personally."

"While it has been traditional at the Iowan for a managing editor to carry out the decisions of the editor, I would like to eliminate the managing editor's job as such," he said. "I will have the time to both make the decisions and go a long way to carry them out and could therefore handle much of the managing editor's job myself."

He added, "We occasionally hear the complaint that the Iowan is too professionally oriented and not of enough interest to the student readers. I think the professionalism is good, but if we find there is a lack of student interest we may attempt some new innovations."

Ex-Prof Named New Publisher For SPI Board

William J. Zima, a member of the editorial page staff of the Des Moines Register, has been named publisher of Student Publications, Inc. (SPI), the governing body of the Daily Iowan and the Hawkeye Yearbook. He will assume his position next fall.

Zima also will join the faculty of the School of Journalism in September as an assistant professor. He replaces Edward P. Bassett, current SPI publisher and journalism instructor.

Zima did his undergraduate work at Carthage College and later was a reporter for the Chicago City News Bureau. He joined the Register and Tribune staff in 1949 after receiving a master's degree in journalism from Iowa.

At the Register, he was a reporter, picture editor, assistant city editor, and night city editor, before becoming a member of the editorial page staff in 1958.

Zima was an assistant professor in the School of Journalism and a member of the management staff of SPI in 1954-55.

Bassett, who has been publisher for SPI since 1962, is leaving the University to assume a position at the University of Michigan as an assistant professor in the department of journalism.

He has been here since 1960 when he joined the high school program of the Division of Extension and University Services in cooperation with the School of Journalism.

Bassett received his Ph.D. from the University in February.

City May Obtain Funds For Parks

Iowa City still has a chance to obtain approximately $76,000 in federal funds for park and recreation developments.

The Johnson County Regional Planning Commission Wednesday voted to send a letter to federal authorities telling them the city's proposed park plans were consistent with the commission's.

The commission had received a letter from the Department of Housing and Urban Renewal stating the department must receive permission from the commission before further action could be taken.

Iowa City had applied for the money, but had not heard of a federal decision. This was the first word from the government since the original application.

The funds would be made available through the department from the federal Open Space Program.

The money would be used to pay 50 percent of the cost of purchasing the land for the Leroy S. Mercer Park, Fair Meadows Park, Hickory Hill Park and a portion of the right-of-way for the beautification strip on Dubuque Street. The strip is across and extends north from Mayflower Hall.

Jay Honohan, city attorney, estimated that half the cost would be $76,000. He said the remaining half of the land purchase expense would come from funds raised by the 1965 park and recreation bond issue.

Also at the meeting, Roland M. Smith, 330 Golfview Ave., was elected treasurer of the commission.

He will be responsible for collecting the first half of the commission budget of $12,000. The money will come from Iowa City, Coralville, Lone Tree, Tiffin, Solon, University Heights, Johnson County, and the University.

Contraceptives Viewed As Uninfluential

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the last in a three-part series on the results of a sex attitudes survey conducted by The Daily Iowan.)

By ADELE BUTTERFIELD Staff Writer

Availability of contraceptives has little effect on promiscuity in the opinion of 70 students.

To the statement, "Would easier accessibility of contraceptives cause a rise in promiscuity among University students?" 71 per cent replied no. The answer given by one coed was typical. "I suppose a few people would consider engaging in a relationship if they were assured of not becoming pregnant but I think that, on the whole, couples will engage in intercourse whether or not contraceptives are freely distributed."

Students answering the questionnaire placed the responsibility for abstaining from or engaging in premarital intercourse directly on the individual. A student's own mores, and not the availability of contraceptives, will determine his actions.

A graduate student thought "ideas of university students limit promiscuity, not the fear of unwanted pregnancy."

Another graduate said, "I think . . . any person who is participating in premarital intercourse is doing so for reasons that are not based on the availability of contraceptives."

A married graduate said bluntly, "Those who want it, will get it, regardless." The availability of contraceptives, he thought, did not alter the fact that he student still had to decide to use them. "The moral decision to take contraceptives is no easier than the decision to have a relationship in the first place."

A "moral" person, one coed said, won't allow himself to be manipulated by outside influences. "Students can only be and do what they want. If a person has high morals the using contraceptives will have no effect. If a person isn't moral, however, that person isn't going to change just because no birth control is available."

Admission Involved

In one coed's opinion, use of contraceptives would not cause a rise in promiscuity because it involved an admission on the part of the user. "In most cases the conscious decision to have relations comes before the logical decision to use contraception. Therefore, those students who use contraception would seem to be those who are more thoughtful and aware of what they are doing and of accepting what they are doing."

"Those students who don't use contraception because they aren't having sex on a regular basis, but who occasionally get drunk perhaps, and 'give in' because they are under some outside influence, are the students who are promiscuous. They don't use contraception because that would involve an express admission to themselves that they have sexual intercourse. They aren't prepared to accept this, and rather, feel the need for excuses.

"As I see it, it is promiscuous to have children, unwanted and out of wedlock. Availability of contraception wouldn't, in this sense, contribute to promiscuity. However, I feel that those who are aware of this are using contraception, and those who can't face the reality of what they are doing probably wouldn't use contraception even if it were sent in the mail."

According to many of the students, "anyone can get contraceptives if they really want them." A male student added, "I don't see how it could get any easier."

A graduate student agreed that "most contraceptives are available at the nearest drugstore and will be given for several years. Most doctors willingly provide the others."

A coed stated, "From my own personal experience, I know that contraceptives are not really difficult to obtain. Many people would probably not use them even if they were more available, because contraceptives make the sexual act seem more planned and less spontaneous and romantic."

Some students questioned the use of the word "promiscuous." All premarital intercourse was not considered promiscuous activity. "Sexual relations with one partner just prior to marriage cannot, in my opinion, be considered promiscuous," one coed stated.

A male graduate said that easy accessibility "would not cause a rise in promiscuity but it would probably lead to an increase in premarital relations between engaged and pinned couples with which there is nothing wrong."

"There would be a rise in the number of sexual relations, but not necessarily a rise in promiscuity," another student said.

One student thought that availability of contraceptives would not be abused if "there were certain regulations placed on the dispensation of pills. Perhaps such distribution would be accompanied by counseling services to the student."

If contraceptives were freely handed out to all comers, some students thought there would be a temporary rise in promiscuity. "At first," a married coed said, "wasn't there a rise in drinking right after Prohibition? It tapers off quickly enough. In the long run I think you'll find that the people being 'promiscuous' would probably have been so in any situation, contraceptives or no, and that there won't be that many new converts to the cause."

Some students answering the questionnaire agreed that there would be a rise in promiscuity, but thought the advantages of having easy to attain contraceptives would outweigh the disadvantages. Reasons given to support this view were a lowering of illegitimate births, fewer marriages between persons "who would not have considered it otherwise, fewer school dropouts, and fewer abortions."

"Cons" Also Voiced

One graduate student was against use of contraceptives. "By increasing the accessibility of contraceptives we are encouraging their use. A person has a natural tendency to use objects easily obtained. Many students generally not using contraceptives would be tested."

A coed agreed, "If you can have something you enjoy with all the unfavorable consequences removed, it's easy to talk yourself into taking advantage of it."

"Fear, rather than ideals or morals, prevents promiscuity, and access to contraception will negate this," a married graduate said.

A married undergraduate agreed, "Often, I feel, the possibility of becoming pregnant — and all the complications that would arise with family, friends, future plans, etc. — is the only factor which causes one to abstain."

Students also voiced their opinions on types of contraceptives available. A third of them preferred contraceptives for women. Pills and intra-uterine devices were thought to be safer, more effective, and more natural.

A married coed said, "The female body is better adapted to the internal contraceptives that people have been able to dream up so far, as well as being better suited for artificial hormone control with the Pill. Many men, I have heard, have complained about external contraceptive devices for men as interfering substantially with the pleasure derived from the sexual act. The only alternative I know for men is one that most men would reject."

As long as I'm better suited to contraceptive devices physiologically, I'll use them with no second thoughts. I certainly don't feel I'm making any sacrifices."

Another third of those answering the questionnaire thought the question of who should use the contraceptive should be mutually agreed upon. Some thought it made no difference who used it "as long as one of us does."

In several instances among unmarried students, it seemed to be a case of mutual mistrust. Each thought that he or she should use the contraceptive because "I can trust myself with a problem like that easier than I could trust a partner."

Useless debate hampers senate

Spectators of the Student Senate, and some of the senators themselves, should by now be thoroughly disgusted with the useless debate that wastes so much of the senate's time.

The senate has had a reputation for being a useless debate society, and Tuesday night's senate meeting was living proof that the reputation is not far off base. It took more than three hours for the senate to pass three of the 10 bills and resolutions docketed for Tuesday night's meeting.

Had it been that the senators were discussing matters pertinent to the business on hand, there would be no grounds for complaint. It would be unfair to criticize the senate for passing only three bills if three hours of discussion and debate were necessary.

But they weren't. Senators strayed from the point consistently, some were absent for part of the debate and wasted the senate's time when they had to be filled in on what they missed, and when questions were called some didn't know what the question was. Had this meeting been an exception to the rule, it could be excusable.

This was the fourth meeting of the new student senate. By now the senators ought to be able to pay attention, stick to the point of debate and leave the smaller details to the committees.

Legalized lottery and the state of Iowa

New York State now has legalized lottery. But even better than that, the state's taxes on the lotteries will be used for the state's schools.

Let's apply this to Iowa.

Every biennium Iowa's legislature slashes appropriations requests from the Board of Regents for its state higher educational institutions. The most consistent logic for cutting the appropriations is that the taxpayers will raise billyhell when they have to pay out all that money for education.

What's nice about New York's lottery is that the tax money is given voluntarily — more or less. If the taxpayer doesn't want to give taxes for higher education he doesn't have to participate in the lottery.

Perhaps Iowa's legislature could look into the possibility of passing pari-mutuel betting and collecting taxes on that to help pay for the operation of the Regent's institutions.

Perhaps using tax funds derived from pari-mutuel betting for higher education would justify passage.

For a change: good news

By ART BUCHWALD WASHINGTON — Both President Johnson and Vice-President Hubert Humphrey have been bitterly complaining lately over the lack of good news being reported by American newspapermen. They have both contended that the American image is being hurt abroad because all people have been reading lately is the bad news about the United States.

They certainly have a point, and every responsible newspaper is now hiring a "good news" editor who is responsible for getting as much good news in the paper as possible. So far they've had a hard time ferreting out many good news stories, but it isn't for lack of trying. Here are some of the kinds of stories they're looking for. HOUSTON, Tex. — Pvt. Muhammad Ali, otherwise known as Cassius Clay, was awarded the good conduct medal today after being in the U.S. Army for only two weeks. Pvt. Muhammad said, "All I want to be is a good soldier and make Pfc."

Asked if he missed fighting for the world heavyweight championship, Pvt. Muhammad said, "I'd rather fight the Viet Cong any day."

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Gov. Lurleen Wallace cut the 300th ribbon today to open another integrated school in Alabama. The governor said: "I won't rest until every school in Alabama is completely free of discrimination, but I don't think I could have done it without the support of my husband George and the good people of the state of Alabama."

DETROIT, Mich. — Ralph Nader announced today that every new model car coming off the assembly line this year was completely safe and accident-proof. He told the American Society of Automobile Manufacturers that he was proud of the way they had accepted all of his safety suggestions. He particularly cited the good faith of General Motors for their co-operation during the past year. The manufacturers presented Nader with their Man of the Year Award in gratitude for his pointing out their shortcomings to the American consumer.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Rifle Association called for strong legislation this week to prevent guns from getting into the hands of an unsuspecting public. A spokesman for the organization said: "Guns in themselves are dangerous and should only be handled by the few discerning people who are experienced with them. The hackneyed argument for the ownership of guns goes back to the Constitution, but it is a faulty one, and if we can't stop people from buying guns, then the Constitution should be changed."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the Harvard graduating class this morning that the United States had made many mistakes in the handling of the Vietnam War and that he could see why Hanoi didn't want to go to the conference table at this time. He said he thought the antiwar demonstrators as well as speeches by Sen. Fulbright and Sen. Kennedy were very helpful in bringing about a peaceful settlement to the con-flikt and he only wished more people would speak out against the war. The Harvard students threw flowers in front of the secretary's limousine as he left the campus. LANGLEY, Va. — The CIA announced today that it was giving up its role as an espionage organization and would devote its efforts in the future to medical research. In explaining the agency's decision Richard Helms told newspapermen, "Spying is a dirty business and the CIA wants no part of it."

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Johnson called a press conference today and attacked the press for printing only the good news coming out of Washington. He pointed out that because there was no bad news being reported, the public was interpreting his good news as bad news. Merriman Smith said, "Thank you, Mr. President."

Effects of marijuana, trivia are similar

By LOWELL FORTE Staff Columnist

Des Moines is sometimes referred to as the "City of Certainties." But after some of the recent controversies in the Legislature, I begin to wonder. For instance, I wonder about the question of Iowa as a beautiful or bountiful land and whether or not a geode is a rock.

What caught my eye was whether the Iowa law was correct in classifying marijuana as a narcotic.

The marijuana question is extremely interesting since both the University of Iowa and Iowa State University have received publicity saying students at the two institutions have smoked marijuana.

Being of sound body and inquisitive mind, I attempted to try out the solution for this problem. But, unhappily, I soon discovered Encyclopedia Britannica classified marijuana as nothing more than an "intoxicating drug."

However, in reading a bit further I discovered that the effects of this drug are in many ways similar to those associated with another form of addiction — that of trivia.

Trivia addiction is not as rare as drug addiction. Iowa, for instance, has a few of these addicts. Some of them meet every two years in Des Moines.

The effects of marijuana (scientific name, Cannabis sativa) that are similar to trivia addiction (scientific name, Legislators uselus) are as follows:

- 1. Nausea — aggravated by upsetting incidents on the campuses of state universities.
2. Irritability — brought on when someone questions faulty thinking of a trivia user.
3. Depression — usually follows the irritability stage.
4. Abdominal pain — strongly correlated to nausea.
5. Delusions of grandeur or persecution — need I say more.
6. Talkativeness — also known as lack of organization in speech.
7. Inarticulate speech and delirium — increases directly proportional to talkativeness.
8. Prostration — overall result of a trivia "session" party.

The withdrawal effects of marijuana does not cause the extreme physical discomfort seen in opiate withdrawal. Withdrawal of trivia is usually followed by better publicity and possible re-election.

As with marijuana, consistent use of trivia can be disastrous. Marijuana comes from the hemp plant. Hemp is also used in making rope, and if you give a person enough rope . . .

Trivia is usually derived from the grape-vine. Grape-vines can be used as crude ropes.

Coed discusses peace marches

To the Editor:

The peace marches that occurred last weekend reflected a lack of freedom and conveyed a mob obsessed by an unattainable goal and fed by compulsions to display certain sophisticated attitudes.

Freedom cannot exist without choice. When choice is removed from the environment, man truly has no will (intellect) of his own. Man can be the very instrument which removes choice from his own environment. He does this to himself by becoming obsessed with a static, unattainable goal — like peace.

Naturally this obsession (since it is an obsession with a sophisticated, unrealistic goal) would be accompanied by paralysis of the mind, and in this state one would have to be told what to do.

Someone like Donald Barnett could easily step in and tell the mob that communism is the only pathway to peace. He is right. Peace from everything but paralysis of the thinking process and a state of having no free will — the right to choose.

There are, however, many alternatives to this state of blindness that the peace marchers have been sucked into by sophisticated yet static doctrines. If they really care about the real war and its victims, they should go straight to Washington and get permission to work with the agencies that are actively working to get the war stopped, that are actively working to get medical and nutritional relief to the civilian victims and that are actively working to keep the South Vietnamese alive.

If, however, they prefer to march into the oblivion of loss — loss of the right to choose — then I suggest that they leave for the U.S.S.R. on the next ship. There they will fit. They will never have to choose and exercise their free will.

You can allow your mind to be paralyzed by obsession and someone like Donald Barnett will tell you what to do.

'Ain't Nobody Here But Jes' Us Sportsmen'

Quality of 'Blow Up' disappoints reader

To the Editor:

The many enthusiastic comments on the film "Blow Up" finally drove me to see it. Unfortunately, my disappointment was great as the quality of the film did not correspond to my high expectations; it seems to me that "Blow Up" was blown up too high for what it actually is.

One must bear in mind that "the modern," taken as a genre or category, (not to bother with terms as su- or neo-realism) does not intend to tell a story; it is rather of an impressionistic nature, exposing cut ups of life to create a vagueness or intensity of feeling, as reality does. The linking element unifying events or scenes, apparently unrelated, is a symbolism of a high order which accounts for the esthetic unity essential to art in any of its manifestations.

"Blow Up" does not need to confuse us with such "unrelated" events as we often find in Fellini, because of the mere fact that it does not bother to establish a symbolic scale. What then? The result falls back into being a simple story, with the individualizing note that it does not build up to a climax or culmination point to make the film worth seeing. If someone, perhaps judging on a lower standard of quality, should think that the detachment and indifference to objectivity is in itself a climax, I ask myself: as far as esthetic values are concerned, is mere exposing of a social or psychological state worth in itself? Or should there be an emotional or intellectual build up in the spectator to complete the meaning and purpose of the whole, if it is to be a work of art, in this particular case, a good film? Exposition in the artistic world is hardly justifiable if it does not strive for expression.

Judging with a more concrete and to the point criteria, the story by Mr. Antonioni (which is all the film accounts for) is much too short for a two hour movie; the first half of the film could be omitted without any damage to the rest.

On the other hand, persons who found this movie a rewarding experience may qualify it on the basis of good photography. Granted. Undoubtedly, the visual angles in "Blow Up" are highly superior to the general angle of composition and "substance" of the whole.

Reader asks for more news, less sex

To the Editor:

It is interesting to see that The Daily Iowan has joined the sex survey parade. Certainly, there must be more newsworthy items for you to report. Newspapers have been filling space with sex surveys since Kinsey.

I do not dispute your findings. Perhaps the limited response is due to the fact that these surveys are no longer interesting. Sex is now accepted as a natural part of life. Attitudes are dependent upon emotional needs, rather than an artificial "morality."

You speak of a "change in attitudes regarding morality . . ." A change in attitude implies that one views a subject in a different light than he has previously. This generation has never made a commitment to the old moral codes. No transformation has taken place. The older generation continues to abide by its own code. Those of us who have not developed rigid opinions must claim the right to decide for ourselves. The attitudes we form are neither right, nor wrong, nor even different; they are simply our own.

Quartet Postpones Concert To Practice On Instruments

By RACHAEL ROBERTS
Staff Writer

The Iowa String Quartet needs time — time to adjust to some Paganini Stradivarius instruments loaned to them April 8 by the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

The string quartet was scheduled to give a concert last Wednesday, but since the "Strads" entered their lives, the quartet has postponed its concert until May 19.

The instruments loaned to the quartet include two violins, a viola and a cello.

Trustees of the Corcoran Gallery chose the Iowa String Quartet to use the 250-year-old instruments. The instruments have been loaned to the quartet for an initial period of three years. Periods of extension or renewal may be negotiated between the gallery and the quartet.

Violins Bought in 1946

The Paganini Strads, so-called because they were for many years part of the collection of 19th century violinist and composer Nicolo Paganini, were bought in January, 1946, by Mrs. William Andrews Clark of New York City from violin dealer Emil Herrman.

When Mrs. Clark bought the much-sought-after instruments, she paid $155,000 for the three. William Preucil, associate professor of music and the violist of the Iowa String Quartet, estimated their value to be about $250,000 now.

Preucil noted, however, that the instruments were priceless. He compared them to works of art like the Mona Lisa that are not for sale.

Other members of the quartet, all faculty members of the School of Music, are Charles Wendt, assistant professor, cello, and Allen Ohmes and John Ferrell, associate professors, violins.

Superior Craftsmanship

Antonio Stradivari, a stringed instrument craftsman, excelled among the famous northern Italian craftsmen in producing violins and cellos of superior tone quality.

Preucil estimated that Stradivari made more than 1,000 instruments in his lifetime.

Herrman, the instrument dealer who sold the instruments, during the 1950s compiled a register of all the Strads still existing. He accounted for about 540 violins, 11 violas and 50 cellos.

"When a musician plays a Stradivarius," Preucil said, "he has to forget his previous instrument. The subtleties of the old must be erased, and the artist has to adjust to the responses of the new instrument."

Reserved For Visitors

There is only one other quartet group of Stradivarius instruments in the world, Preucil noted. It is in the Library of Congress in Washington D.C. and is reserved for visiting quartets.

This is the first time the Strads that the Iowa Quartet received have been loaned to a performing group, Preucil said.

"Although the instruments are priceless," Preucil said, "they must be kept in constant use, or they will lose their musical quality."

The instruments have been in storage for the last year.

"Since my first music lesson," Preucil said, "I had heard of the Stradivarius. I get a lump in my throat whenever I pick up the instrument."

Clinic To Be Held On Child Care

An Institute on the Care of the Emotionally Disturbed Child will be held today at Psychopathic Hospital.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. Dr. Herbert Nelson, assistant director of Psychopathic Hospital, will give the welcome, and Beverly Benfer, director of nursing, will give the introduction.

Guest speaker will be Marguerite Schonholtz, director of nursing at the Hawthorne Center, Northville, Mich.

Beer At Reservoir Cannot Be Banned

The only difference between law enforcement at state parks and the Coralville Reservoir is beer.

According to Johnson County Sheriff Maynard Schneider, state law prohibits beer in state parks, but this regulation does not apply to federal property such as the reservoir.

"All other state laws and park regulations are enforced at the reservoir," said Schneider. "This is the job of the sheriff's department and the Highway Patrol.

Schneider said that sheriff's deputies made daily and nightly patrols of the area.

"The Highway Patrol occasionally patrols the main roads," he said, "but we try to patrol as many roads as possible."

Schneider said that relatively few offenses occurred in the reservoir area. Loud parties, vandalism and boating violations are the most common offenses.

One of the main reservoir duties for deputies is checking parked cars late at night. Schneider explained that carbon monoxide poisoning was a constant danger during the winter months. Another problem is the wilderness of the reservoir area.

"We don't object to woodsies," he said. "If we find a party, we usually check to see that all is in order. If it is, we won't do anything."

"Over 700,000 people use the reservoir between Labor Day and Memorial Day," Schneider said. "This includes campers, picnickers and boaters. We want people to enjoy themselves out there, but we must be sure their fun isn't infringing on others."

UI Woodwinds To Play At St. Louis Meeting

The University Woodwind Quintet will present a concert at the national meeting of the Music Teachers National Association in St. Louis today.

Quintet members are Betty Bang, flute; Thomas Ayres, clarinet; Paul Anderson, horn; Ronald Tyres, bassoon, and Greg Steinke, oboe.

The musicians will present a concert of American music since 1950, featuring works by composers associated with the University. Included in the program will be "Pantomimes" by faculty members Eldon Obrecht, and three works by former visiting composers at the University.

Idea Becomes Successful Venture

By RON BLISS
Staff Writer

What started as a half-dream and half-joke has blossomed into a successful venture for four University students who last winter started publication of a campus magazine, The Student.

The STUDENT, patterned after the national magazine Playboy, published its first issue in January and in four months has become one of the top-selling magazines on campus, averaging between 2,500 and 3,000 sales per edition. Its profits from sales and advertising have allowed its publishers to invest in their own printing press and buy the necessary equipment to continue publication through next year.

The fact that the magazine is a success is not too surprising. What is surprising is that four students with no journalism experience made it a success.

Those original founders are John Burrell, R. R. 5, Iowa City; John Marshek, Cedar Rapids; John Holmes, B4, Waterloo; and Jack Swan, B4, Waterloo.

Only One Experienced
Burrell comes the closest of any to having any training for such a venture. He has had three years of psychology, a year of pre-law and a year of business. Holmes and Swan are business majors who hope to graduate in June, and Marshek has had three years of engineering. Burrell and Marshek dropped out of school this semester to devote full time to the magazine, but plan to return next fall.

Where did they get the idea of publishing a magazine?
"The whole thing really started as a joke," said Burrell, who is co-publisher with Marshek and Swan. "Jack Swan and I conceived the idea one night last September while just sitting around."

"We talked it over between ourselves and then decided to mention it half-seriously to some of our friends just to get their reaction. They've been calling us 'Hefnie's Boys' ever since." (After Hugh Hefner, Playboy publisher).

Considered Joke
Though their friends considered it a joke, Burrell and Swan didn't. To satisfy their curiosity, they checked into the cost of publishing a campus magazine.

"We were curious as to whether we could actually publish a magazine," Burrell said, "especially without any journalism experience. We saw a real need for a campus magazine and wondered why the University hadn't been successful in doing something like this in the past."

As the idea started to snowball, Marshek and Holmes became interested. The four later incorporated themselves as Quadraron, Inc.

The initial step was to check the cost of printing. They also needed background on magazine production and for this they turned to the library.

Production Researched
"We must have read eight books before deciding what type of printing process we wanted to use," relates Burrell. "It was all so new to us. Before going in there we knew nothing at all about printing. We didn't even know you had to convert a picture to a dot-pattern to reproduce it."

Next they checked with Malcolm S. MacLean, professor of journalism, for help in deciding

THE STUDENT MAGAZINE, first published in January, has been an overwhelming success in the four months that it has been in existence. These four men are responsible for that success. They are (from left): John Marshek, John Swan, B4, Waterloo, John Burrell and William Childress, G, San Francisco. Marshek, Swan and Burrell are publishers of the magazine and three of the four men who founded it. John Holmes, B4, Waterloo, the fourth original member, was unable to continue with the magazine this semester and was replaced by Childress, who is now editor.

what they wanted to put in the magazine. MacLean had just completed a study about what types of literature appealed to students.

"We had a pretty good idea of what we wanted to print before we consulted with him," Burrell said, "and after reading his study, we were sure of it."

From their own ideas and from the results of MacLean's study, the group based its format on sex and humor and patterned it after Playboy magazine.

Patterned After Playboy
"Surveys showed that Playboy was the best-selling magazine for our age group," Burrell said. "It seemed to be the champion of the young man and we knew that that was what we wanted. We wanted it to appeal to the student."

The first issue was already taking form, but the group was still without a printing press and the money to publish the magazine. "It was difficult finding a printer who would take our business, because we lacked strong financial backing," said Burrell. Finally, a Lone Tree printer agreed to do the first issue for them on credit.

Marshek sold the advertising for the first issue. "John was in a somewhat awkward position," said Burrell. "He was faced with the task of selling advertising for a magazine that didn't exist. All he had was a brochure with pictures we had taken of Louie Armstrong during his concert last fall and a few sketches I had done of Greta Grandview (The STUDENT's answer to Playboy's Little Annie Fannie)."

Production Begun
With the formalities out of the way, the actual production of the magazine began.

"We dreamed of a December issue, but barely made January," Burrell recalled.

"That first issue was a nightmare," he said. "We ended up putting it together in my living room in the last five days before we went to press. We went the last three nights without sleep just trying to get the thing out on time."

That first issue far from satisfied its publishers. The students liked it though and bought more than 3,000 copies. "I think they were buying it more because it was a novelty than anything else," Burrell said. The next issue sold fewer copies, but according to Burrell, it was lucky to come out at all.

Crisis Faced
"The day we were to go to press, John Marshek called me with the news that our printer had backed down on our agreement and wasn't going to print the issue for us," said Burrell.

The crisis was a brief one, and ended when Chuck Edwards of Pepco-Litho in Cedar Rapids agreed to print the issue.

"We had our layout all set and all we had to do was transfer it to his presses," Burrell said. "He didn't need our business, but he took it and we're glad he did. I guess you could say he's the reason we're still going."

The group didn't take any more chances. For the next issue it is vested in its own press.

The magazine itself is completely free from all affiliations and hopes to remain that way.

"We try to represent the view of the average student and defend his position," Burrell said. "To do this we have to avoid all ties."

Format Varied

The format usually consists of two or more short stories, a STUDENT adviser column, cartoons, jokes, an interview with a well-known person, a foldout of the girl of the month, a monthly cartoon series about Greta Grandview and the cover story. It averages 40 to 50 pages in length.

A go-go dancer from Rock Island, Ill., posed in the nude for the magazine's first issue. Iowa coeds have been the feature misses since, but have been covered by bathing suits.

Why the bathing suits?
"No one told us to stop using nude girls in the magazine," Burrell said. "Since we're not aligned with the University, it doesn't have any censor power."

"Really there's no reason why the girls were in bathing suits, other than the fact that they wanted to be seen that way. If we could find a girl who was willing to pose in the nude for us, we'd be willing to take the chance if she would."

Many of the stories that appear in the magazine are the result of ideas that come from group "brain-storming sessions," as Burrell calls them.

No Assignments Given
"No stories are assigned to certain reporters," Burrell said. "Our stories mostly result from ideas different individuals think up. We generally talk it over and if we think it's a good idea, we'll go ahead with it."

Justices To Hear Mock Dress Case

A hypothetical case involving University restriction of students' dress on campus and their off-campus activities will be decided at 3 p.m. Friday by Iowa Supreme Court justices at the College of Law's annual Supreme Court Day.

The case, to be decided in Room 210 of the Law Building, is based on a recent event at the University of Florida in which a coed was penalized by the university for posing off-campus in the nude for magazine photographers.

Friday's mock case will include another complaint by the school about the coed's wearing mini-skirts to class.

The case was chosen "to focus attention on student rights, whatever they may be," according to Samuel M. Fahr, professor of law, who is in charge of the trial arrangements.

The Florida case involved a 23-24-34 coed P a m m a Brewer who posed nude for the Charlantan, a magazine circulated among students at the University of Florida.

Miss Brewer was put on disciplinary probation by the president of the university at the recommendation of the Faculty Disciplinary Committee.

After appearing nude in the Charlantan a second time, Miss Brewer's parents withdrew her from school. They had received what Miss Brewer called a warning.

She explained her actions in a recent interview printed in the newspaper of St. John's River

Air Conditioning To Cool Library

Steps are being taken to alleviate excessive temperatures in the west side of the library, William C. Roselle, library administrative assistant, said Wednesday.

A crew from the University Physical Plant worked Wednesday and will continue to work on the problem today, Roselle said. A temporary arrangement for air conditioning the west side is expected to be completed by 5 tonight.

Roselle said that pumps for the library's west side chiller had to be replaced for permanent air conditioning there, and these had not yet been received from the factory.

Wild Strawberries
One of Ingmar Bergman's best known films. It is the story of a successful man, Dr. Borg, who is about to be decorated for his life work by the University of Lund. But dreams, flashbacks and incidents along the road on the way to the ceremony all question the past nobility of his life. Bergman is extremely skillful in handling the phantasmal elements of the time jumps and Victor Sjostrom is masterful as the Doctor.

Mercy Hosts Special Clinic

About 75 persons attended the Patient Unit Management Clinic held from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday at Lourdes Hall at Mercy Hospital. Sister Mary Louise Freeberg, director of the project, said, "The clinic was the second phase of a three-part series inaugurated by the Iowa Hospital Association.

The purpose of the clinic was to educate other hospitals in Iowa of the benefits of the Unit Management Program.

She said that the function of the program was to improve the quality of nursing care by relieving the working nurse of her non-clinical duties.

"Thus, we would utilize the trained nurse for what she has been prepared to do as a professional," she said.

"The Unit Management Program reorganizes the clinical and non-clinical duties that now exist in most hospitals.

"Unit Management is a growing concept in hospital organization. It leads to better patient care, assuming the nurse is better trained to do the job than anyone else."

At present, Mercy Hospital is the only hospital in Iowa that has started such a program.

$40 Stolen In Break-In Of Vet's Solon Office

About $40 was stolen early Wednesday morning from the office of Dr. E. H. Beretta, Solon.

The thief or thieves entered the veterinarian's office by breaking a panel in the back door and reaching inside to release the lock, sheriff's deputies said.

Beretta told deputies that the money was taken from an unlocked safe. Nothing else was taken although medical supplies and office files were disturbed.

Gridders Progressing Well

Iowa's football team has been making fine progress during its first week of practice, head coach Ray Nagel said Wednesday.

Nagel said that the team has basically been working on fundamentals, but that the coaches have also been running the players through several of their plays.

"We had a short scrimmage last Saturday and plan to have another tomorrow," Nagel said. "We plan to do a lot of experimenting with the different positions."

Nagel said that Silas McKinnie was looking very good in his new tailback position and that quarterback Ed Podolak was looking excellent as a passer.

Nagel said the biggest surprise so far has been a walk-on from Lone Tree, Dean Schuessler, who is making a strong bid for the No. 1 offensive center position.

Top freshmen on offense so far, according to Nagel, are offensive guards Larry Ely and Jon Meskimen; tackle Melvin Morris; end Paul Laaveg; fullback Tim Sullivan; wingback

John Diehl and Terry Huff, a pair of lettermen who missed the 1966 season with shoulder injuries, have been looking very good in practice Nagel said. Diehl was moved up to the No. 1 defensive right tackle position Wednesday, while Huff is presently the top man at left linebacker.

"Our lineup is basically the same as it was last fall right now," said Nagel, "but we have some freshmen who have been looking good and may move up."

Top freshmen on offense so far, according to Nagel, are offensive guards Larry Ely and Jon Meskimen; tackle Melvin Morris; end Paul Laaveg; fullback Tim Sullivan; wingback

John Shew; and tailback Pat Dummigan.

Outstanding freshmen on defense have been Greg Allison, who has been playing a guard position; Bob Gruver, who is backing up Huff at linebacker; Don Sibery, who is currently the No. 1 right linebacker; and Jim Pederson, who is playing behind John Evenden at left tackle.

The Hawkeyes, who opened practice last Friday, will practice every day, except Sundays and Mondays from now until practice ends May 13 with the intrasquad game in the Stadium. Practices had been originally scheduled for every day except Fridays and Sundays, but a heavy schedule of Monday classes forced the change.

The following are the top men on the offensive and defensive squads as of Wednesday:

When Iowa's football team travels to South Bend on Oct. 7 to play defending National Champion Notre Dame, the smallest defensive lineman for the Irish may outweigh Iowa's heaviest offensive lineman.

If Notre Dame's early spring practices are any indication of what will be the Irish front-four on defense, Iowa should definitely consider taking out life insurance from Lloyd's of London for the game. The Irish, for instance, have All-America tackle Kevin Harby back. He is 6-6 and 284 and has been moved to defensive end to utilize his speed and agility. As a sophomore two years ago, he was Notre Dame's first triple mono-gram winner in two decades — football, basketball and baseball. This spring he's batting about .300 as a rightfielder on the baseball team.

Tackles Weigh 270, 268
According to Notre Dame offensive backfield coach Tom Pagna, with whom we spoke during spring vacation in South Bend, the other defensive end is 6-7 and 252, while the tackles measure 6-5 and 270, and 6-3 and 268. Their top replacement weighs 240.

By comparison, Iowa's interior line on offense — if composed of veterans — would weigh 218 (Greg McManus) center, 207 (Jeff Newland) and 199 (Phil Major) at guards, and 225 (Bill Smith) and 246 (Mike Lavery) at tackles. This line would average 219 pounds per man. Add in Paul Usinowicz, 210, at tight end, and Al Bream, 185, at split end, and the figures drop to 213. Notre Dame's defensive line averages 268.

The Iowa line may be more respectable in size if some sophomores (now freshmen) start. Jon Meskimen, 240, and Larry Ely, 225, are expected to wage a battle with Newland and Major at guard. Ely is also a possibility at tackle, as is 245-pound Melvin Morris.

10 All-Americans Graduated
Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian no doubt welcomes the news of his team, because the Irish lost five consensus All-Americans and five more players who were mentioned on at least one All-American team.

Despite the losses, Parseghian has quite a nucleus with which to mold another National Champion — Hardy, quarterbacks Terry Hanratty and Coley O'Brien, split end Jim Seymour, linebacker John Pergine and safety Tom Schoen all mentioned on All-American teams. Hanratty, who started the first nine games before suffering a shoulder separation early in the Michigan State "Poll Bowl" game, passed for 1,247 yards and eight touchdowns and placed eighth in the Heisman Trophy voting. O'Brien came off the bench in the Michigan State game and helped lead the Irish to a 10-10 come-from-behind tie, then set a school pass completion record the next week in a 51-0 rout of Rose Bowl-bound Southern California.

A story in a recent issue of Sport Magazine said Notre Dame might use Hanratty and O'Brien in the same backfield. We asked backfield coach Pagna about this, and he said the two sophomores would again battle it out for the top quarterback spot and would play in the same backfield — at least not regularly.

Offensive Line Big, Too
What about Notre Dame's offensive line? The tackles (there are eight to choose from) vary from 225 to 235; the guards (six of them) vary from 218 to 235; the center (five of them) will be somewhere between 200 and 240; and the tight end will either be 6-4 and 225 or 6-5 and 230. At split end is 6-4, 205, Jim Seymour, a sophomore who set several school pass-reception records. His back-up men are Paul Snow, brother of Irish All-America end Jack Snow, and Curt Heneghan, who is supposed to be as good as Seymour, but missed most of last season because of injury. The word is the Heneghan will sometimes play at flanker while Seymour is at split end.

So what else does this team need? A barefoot kicker. And one just happened to walk on this spring. He's Rene Torrado, from Miami, Fla., who doesn't even have a scholarship — yet.

We had heard around South Bend that Hanratty and Seymour were having grade problems. Coach Pagna verified this.

"The simple reason," he said, "is that they were under great pressure during their first season, and after the season they agreed to too many speaking engagements and lost out on time to catch up on studies. They are capable students, if they work at it. I hope they can live with their success. This is hard for anyone."

Football fans can get a look at Notre Dame May 6 when ABC-TV's Wide World of Sports televises the Oldtimers game from South Bend.

76ers To Concentrate On Defense

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "We'll have to make adjustments defensively for Thursday night's game," declared Alex Hannum Philadelphia 76er Coach, whose forces fell to some hot shooting by San Francisco's Warriors.

The 130-124 triumph at the Cow Palace on Tuesday night left San Francisco still trailing the 76ers 2-1 in their best-of-7 playoff final but put the Warriors back in contention for the National Basketball Association title.

Rick Barry fired in 55 points and Jim Barry chipped in with 25 as the Warriors returned to the arena where they haven't lost this season.

Another few years and these once-indispensable housekeeping aids will be "genuine antiques!" Instead of struggling with such devices, today's homemakers count on dependable, low priced gas and electric service — and wonderfully efficient appliances to help them do a better, faster, and cleaner job of housekeeping.

No matter how many new housekeeping aids are invented in the future, the investor-owned gas and electric companies, including Iowa-Illinois, will continue to provide a more than adequate supply of gas and electricity — by planning years in advance — by constantly improving their service — by keeping the cost low.

Editor To Lecture On Polish Poetry

By DIANE YING Staff Writer

The popularity of American literature is one of the contemporary trends in Poland, Leszek Elektrowicz, a Polish writer at the Writers Workshop said recently.

He will give a speech on "Trends in Contemporary Polish Poetry" at 8 tonight in the Senate Chamber, Old Capitol. The speech is cosponsored by the Department of Comparative Literature and Humanities Club.

Elektorowicz, an editor of the "Literary Life," a leading literary magazine published weekly in Cracow, Poland, came to the United States in October, 1966, for a one-year stay. He was invited by Paul Engle, professor of English.

Besides writing literary reports and essays on contemporary Western literature for the magazine, Elektrowicz has published four books of his own. Two of them are collections of poems. One is a collection of his short stories, another, a collection of his essays.

He has also translated poems from Wallace Stevens, e. e. Cummings, W. H. Auden, and W. C. Williams and has published them in various literary magazines.

Since 1955, he said, many American novels have been translated into Polish. Most of them, he said, are works of the contemporary classics by writers such as Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck and William Faulkner.

"But lately the young American writers have gained more and more popularity in Poland," he said, "Truman Capote's 'In Cold Blood' has just been published in Poland."

Although human problems are universal, he said, owing to the different social and political systems, Polish literature and American literature differ in many ways.

"For instance," he said, "We don't have any story about tycoons and big business men, simply because this kind of man doesn't exist in a socialist country like Poland."

The most frequent subject of the Polish writings, he said, is about the World War II and the German occupation.

"It is still a great shock for the old generation writers, which they can't forget," he said.

During the War, he said, six million Polish people were killed by the Germans. The sites of the biggest German concentration camps in Poland, he said, are kept as museums, and constantly remind people of the suffering and terrors of the war.

"Even the young generation who were only children during the war write about the subject," he said, "because no single family in Poland was left untouched by the war."

His father, he said, was killed in the war, his mother was sent to a concentration camp.

Another trend in Polish literature today is experimental writing. After the "thaw" in 1955 and 1956, he said, a new generation of writers appeared.

"Of course, the flourishing of experimental writing did not come all of a sudden," he said, "It could be traced back to the pre-war avant garde movement in Poland."

During his stay here, he said, he has been benefited by being in touch with the American literary atmosphere. The University Library has helped him a lot in his writings, he said. He has written several essays here, and has prepared for another volume of poems to be published next year.

He has been invited by universities in California, North Carolina and Texas to lecture on contemporary Polish literature.

Cat Inherits $50,000

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - A registered Siamese cat named Toots is sole heir to a $50,000 estate as long as her nine lives hold out.

Toots' mistress, Mrs. Hazel Kurrus Matheis, 69, died here April 9 leaving her home and a portfolio of blue chip stocks to the cat.

"She thought more of that cat than any other person or thing," said attorney James W. Pritchard who filed the will for probate.

The cat will be cared for by Mrs. Genevieve Herborn who will receive free rent in the Matheis house as long as Toots lives.

After the cat dies the estate will go to Mrs. Matheis' nieces and nephews in St. Louis to be held in trust for their children.

Pritchard identified the relatives as the children of Mrs. Matheis' brother, William L. Kurrus, Mrs. Elsie Kurrus Wiley and Mrs. Myra Kurrus Gerhardt.

The Humane Society of St. Louis also will receive five shares of American Telephone and Telegraph stock when Toots dies.

Puppets To Give Opera On Friday

"Philemon and Baucis," a puppet opera written by Joseph Haydn in 1773, will be presented Friday at the University. The North Texas State University (NTSU) Collegium Musicum, a class dedicated to the investigation of historical music, will present the opera at 8 p.m. in MacBride Auditorium.

Part of a 16-day tour which will take the troupe to Iowa, Ohio, Missouri, Arkansas and Texas, the performance is sponsored by the University Cultural Affairs Committee as part of the 1966-67 Concert Course series.

Tickets are available to students and faculty at the University Box Office in the Union South Lobby, open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Students can pick up free tickets upon presentation of identification cards, and faculty members may buy tickets for $1. Tickets will go on sale to the public for $1 today. Any remaining tickets will be available at the door on the night of the concert.

Involved in the production will be 10 puppeteers, 12 singers, a 20-piece orchestra, a stage manager, and Cecil Adkins, NTSU faculty member who translated the original German version to English.

The puppets, made over a period of two years by Adkins and his class, are approximately two feet tall and sculptured from styrofoam covered with fibrous plaster. Their costumes are patterned after the concept of classic Greek attire prevalent at the turn of the 17th century.

"Philemon and Baucis" is one of two surviving marionette operas of 10 Haydn is believed to have written. Adkins' translation is probably the first English version of the German opera.

Based on the eighth book of Ovid's "Metamorphoses," the story tells of the antics of the Roman gods Jupiter and Mercury, who visit earth disguised as wanderers. The gods stop at the hut of Philemon and Baucis, an elderly couple, and, impressed by their hospitality, reward their hosts by reincarnating their son and his fiancée.

The opera will be presented in one act containing 17 scenes, with a prologue by Adkins.

"Philemon and Baucis" and the other surviving Haydn opera were rediscovered in 1935 in a French countryhouse. After their publication in 1935, the operas were unheard of until the early 1950's, when they were revived and performed in Europe, in the original German version.

Negro Says Get King Out Of Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) - The Rev. Henry Mitchell, Negro minister of the North Star Missionary Baptist Church in a West Side slum, told reporters today that Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. should "get the hell out of here."

He spoke out at a news conference against a resumption of marches by Dr. King and his associates into white neighborhoods in Chicago to back up demands for better housing.

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell called Dr. King an "outsider, and said Negro problems should be discussed "around the table."

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell is president of the North Star United Missionary Workers of America.

Dr. King said in March that demonstrations will be resumed in Chicago this summer unless more progress is made toward solving Negro problems.

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell contends Negroes have not benefited from marches led by Dr. King and others working with him in a campaign for improvement in jobs, schooling and housing in Chicago.

GI Barracks Provide Housing For Married

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the final part in a four-part series on University student housing.)

By RACHAEL ROBERTS
Staff Writer

The former GI must have felt right at home when he, with his wife and children, moved into the "temporary" barracks provided for him 20 years ago.

The barracks were constructed in 1947 as housing units for veterans who were returning from World War II to go to school here.

Eight locations still have the post-war barracks which serve as inexpensive housing for married students. These are: Finkbine Park, North Park, Quonset Park, Riverside Park, South Park, Stadium Park, Templein Park and Westlawn. There are 656 housing units.

Gerald D. Wright, manager of married student housing, said the barracks were still in relatively good condition, and made good liveable units.

Commenting on their barracks in Riverside Park, Mrs. Philip Bruner, whose husband is a graduate student, said, "It is fine for our situation. Our barracks is very nice, but I cannot speak for other residents."

John Valente, G. Basking Ridge, N.J., who lives at Templein Park with his family, said that he thought the rent on the barracks was too expensive, considering the price the University paid for them 20 years ago.

"The married student housing at Ames is much more inexpensive," Valente stated.

Ardith Johnson, A4, Iowa City, and his family live at Finkbine Park. He said he thought the rent was not high compared to rent charged in the rest of Iowa City.

"Besides," Johnson commented, "it is a good deal that the University pays the utilities."

Earl Hefty, B4, Clear Lake, said that he agreed with Johnson, but he stipulated that considering the buildings, the rent was rather high. He also iterated Valente's position that the rent charged was out of line with what the University originally paid for the barracks. Hefty resides at Riverside Park.

Wright said the rent for the barracks for the 1966-67 school year was $66.50 a month. Beginning July 1, the rent will be raised to $68. If the barracks is furnished there is an additional $6 charge a month.

Furnishings, which the University provides, include double or twin beds with mattresses and mattress covers (double deck beds, as desired for children), chests of drawers, dining table and chairs, overstuffed chairs, and an occasional chair, Wright said.

Each barracks has two bedrooms, living room, kitchen, bath, gas stove, water heater, and an oil space heater. The residents must provide their own refrigerators, telephones, and air conditioners, if they want them.

Residents of the barracks said they could decorate their temporary homes to suit their own tastes.

Mrs. Valente said, "We were perfectly free to make the cottage our home."

"Although the barracks may look depressing from the outside, the inside can be quite charming with a little effort," Johnson said.

Wright said the maintenance and service department in charge of married housing employed four full-time painters in order that each cottage might be painted once every four years. The occupants are given a choice of six colors.

If occupants wish to paint their cottage before it needs it, they are free to do so with their own paint and labor, Wright added.

Service Is Good

Most of the married students were appreciative of the maintenance crew, which Wright said were on call 24 hours a day. The prompt service was stressed by the students.

"I have found the maintenance service very helpful and cooperative," Valente stated. "The workers were good, and of very little inconvenience to the resident while they were repairing household items."

Many residents said they did not like the heating systems provided in the cottages.

"The heating system could be better," Valente offered. "With the present oil-space heater, the living room would be warm while the bedroom was cold."

Cold In Winter

Hefty commented that the barracks tended to be hot in the summer, and chilly in winter.

"In the winter, the wind seems to blow through all the cracks in the buildings," Hefty added.

Besides the barracks, University married housing includes Hawkeye and Parklawn Apartments. Including the barracks, 901 University married housing units exist for the student.

Hawkeye provides 192 housing units. Another 500 similar units are under construction now, Wright said. About 40 per cent are expected to be completed in September.

Rent To Go Up

Rent for Hawkeye Apartments has been $100 a month, but it will be raised to $105 this summer. New Hawkeye Apartments' rent will be $92 for one-bedroom apartments, and $112 for two bedrooms.

The University would not furnish the Hawkeye Apartments, but, as opposed to the barracks, Wright said the apartments had advantages over the barracks because they had two well-equipped playgrounds and school bus transportation for children.

Residents of the Hawkeye Apartments also complained about the rent.

Mrs. Nelson Carlson, whose husband is a graduate student, said she thought if the rent was raised, the occupants should receive more conveniences for their apartments.

"We wish the apartments were carpeted," said Mrs. James King, whose husband is a graduate student from Des Moines.

Mrs. King added that she thought the apartments were a good place to raise children.

Wright estimated that Hawkeye families averaged about one and a half children a family.

Parklawn Apartments has 53 housing units. They were constructed in 1957. Efficiency and one-bedroom apartments are available to married students. Rent is $70 a month for efficiency apartments and $85 for one-bedroom apartments.

Garden Lots Available

Garden lots, 20 x 20 ft., are behind only Parklawn and Hawkeye, but these lots are available to all students in married housing. The only charge is about a dollar to have the lot plowed in the spring, Wright said.

Keenes Huntley, G. St. Ansgar, said he had no complaints about rent charged for the apartments, but he was not happy with the heating supplied.

"The apartments tend to be drafty in the winter," Huntley stressed.

"The refrigerators are half-size, and are an inconvenience," Huntley commented, "besides the freezer compartments do not keep ice cream frozen."

Huntley added that he wished the apartments would supply an elevator.

"It is rather rough to carry a sofa up four flights," Huntley said.

Huntley also said he considered four washers and two driers inadequate for 53 housing units.

Symposium On Cancer Begins Today

Some 50 representatives from Iowa hospitals are expected at a symposium on "Cancer Programs in Iowa" at the University Medical Center today and Friday.

The symposium is being sponsored by the Iowa Central Tumor Registry at the University, which assists participating Iowa hospitals by storing, tabulating, and analyzing by computer methods the information about their cancer patients.

Reports from the Central Registry to tumor registries in the local hospitals help physicians evaluate the effectiveness of treatment and enable them to provide the best and most modern cancer care for patients.

Dr. Joseph A. Buckwalter, professor of surgery, is director of the Central Registry. He also serves as Liaison Fellow from the cancer commission of the American College of Surgeons to the State of Iowa.

Attending the symposium will be representatives from the 15 Iowa hospitals now participating in the Central Registry as well as chairmen of hospital cancer committees, pathologists, hospital administrators, and medical record librarians from other Iowa hospitals.

Symposium speakers will be Buckwalter; Mary J. Nance, supervisor and field director of the Central Registry; Dr. Ronald D. Eckoff, Des Moines, acting chief of the division of chronic illness and aging, the Iowa State Department of Health; Dr. Howard B. Latourette, professor of radiology and director of the tumor registry at University Hospitals; and Mrs. Mary J. Worthington, Des Moines, tumor registry secretary at Mercy Hospital.

Dr. Arthur P. Long, Des Moines, Iowa Commissioner of Health and a clinical professor of preventive medicine and environmental health at the University, will speak at a dinner meeting.

Financial support for the Central Registry comes from the State Department of Health, the Iowa Division of the American Cancer Society, the College of Medicine, and the U.S. Public Health Service.

CHRISTIAN ATHLETES—The Fellowship of Christian Athletes will meet tonight in 205 Athletic Office Building. Anyone may attend.

Computer Divides Iowa Into Districts

By MARY ANN McEVROY
Staff Writer

John M. Liittschwager, associate professor of industrial and management engineering, recently submitted plans for redistricting Iowa by computer to the subdistricting commission.

The bipartisan subdistricting commission, which is composed of 10 members, was established by the Iowa Legislature. Its purpose is to conduct a study of subdistricting and to make recommendations to the legislature.

The commission must submit a subdistricting plan by May 1. The Legislature must have subdivided 18 multi-member districts by June 1 or the matter will go to the Iowa Supreme Court.

The 1967 Iowa Legislature is under an Iowa Supreme Court order to subdivide these districts into single-member districts. The order is a result of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to follow the one man, one vote principle.

The computer routines have provided scores of plans for each multi-member district. Liittschwager and his co-worker, Gerhard Weeg, director of the Computer Center, selected those that best measured up to the court requirements. The main requisite was adherence to the one man, one vote principle which says one man's vote must be worth as much as another's.

Secondary requirements were that plans abide with state law, contiguity, compactness, homogeneity and preservation of existing political and natural boundaries. The goal of the computer program was to get as close as possible to the one to one population ratio called for in the one man, one vote principle. The closer to the one to one ratio the better the plan, Liittschwager said.

Liittschwager said that getting population data for the cities of 10-50,000 population was the commission's biggest problem. For example, Johnson County must be subdivided which requires detailed population data for Iowa City.

However there are only total city population figures available where data on a block-by-block basis is needed to provide population by precincts. Liittschwager estimated the population on a precinct basis using the number of registered voters as the base. The commission must decide whether to use this method if there is no other suitable data.

"With the political conflict between the two parties neither will have its way," Liittschwager said, "so there is natural interest in impartial computer plans. This is the service we're trying to provide."

"Computer subdistricting" will likely first be used in the entirety by the courts," he said. "Computer plans can be a real friend of the court because of their impartiality."
