U.S. Dependents Leaving Mideast As Danger Grows

BEIRUT (AP) — The United States is pulling wives and children of U.S. officials out of Egypt and Israel because of a dangerous situation that could rapidly develop into an Arab-Israeli war.

The U.S. announcement, affecting more than 500 dependents, came Thursday, a few hours after U.N. Secretary-General U Thant cut short by 24 hours a peace mission to Cairo. He flew back to New York to report to the U.N. Security Council on the Mideast crisis. He made no comment when he arrived.

There were these other developments: • Arabs and Israelis reported border incidents. Cairo radio said a unit of the Palestine Liberation Army in the Gaza Strip clashed with an Israeli patrol Wednesday night and forced it back into Israel. There was no confirmation from Israel.

An Israeli army spokesman in Tel Aviv said two explosive charges were detonated Thursday in central Israel near the Jordanian border but there was no damage. One charge went off under a bridge. The incident was reported to the Jordan-Israel Mixed Armistice Commission, an Israeli spokesman said.

Troops Offered

• Algeria offered to send troops to bolster Egyptian troops facing the Israeli border, and Syria announced it is distributing arms and ammunition to its 250,000-man Popular Army, a civilian home guard force, to back its regular forces in the event of war.

• India voiced support of what it called Egypt's right to block Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba leading to the Israeli port of Elath. This is Israel's only direct route to ports in East Africa, Asia and Iran. Foreign Minister M. C. Chagla told Parliament in New Delhi India regards the gulf as territorial waters of Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

• Foreign Secretary George Brown of Britain continued talks with Soviet officials in Moscow on the crisis. At the same time, Defense Minister Shams Al Din Badran of Egypt arrived there on a mystery visit. He was met by Soviet Defense Minister Andrei A. Grechko. Brown is urging the Soviets to use their influence with Egypt and Syria to head off a war with Israel.

Departure Begins

American dependents were told to leave Egypt and Israel within 48 hours by commercial transport.

Officials in Washington said about 120 American dependents will leave the Israeli cities of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem and that about 400 will begin flying out of Egypt on Saturday.

State Department officials said there was no direct connection between the evacuations and Thant's efforts in his talks with President Gamal Abdel Nasser and other Egyptian leaders in Cairo.

"The decision to remove the dependents should not be taken as evidence of a general deterioration in the general situation," one Washington informant said.

But officials agreed that the action was based on a recognition of a dangerous situation that could get worse rapidly.

Attention remained focused on the Gulf of Aqaba. The Egyptians have reported they have mined its entrance, the Straight of Tiran, and that shore batteries and patrol boats would stop shipping to and from Elath. Israel has said it would fight if Egypt carries out its blockade. But no Israeli shipping has entered the gulf since Nasser announced his blockade intentions on Monday. No Israeli shipping is expected in the gulf in the immediate future, officials said.

337 U.S. Troops Died Last Week; Viet Record Set

SAIGON (AP) — A record 337 U.S. soldiers were killed last week in heavy fighting in Vietnam, pushing the total for the war to 10,253 — almost one-third the number of battle deaths in the Korean War, the U.S. Command reported Thursday.

The command also reported that 2,282 U.S. soldiers were wounded last week and 31 were missing, an over-all casualty record for seven days in Vietnam.

The severe fighting exacted a heavy toll on the enemy. The U.S. Command said 2,464 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed during the week. This was below the record enemy losses of 2,774 killed in the week ended March 25.

The number of wounded U.S. soldiers boosted the total to 61,425 by unofficial count. The number of U.S. soldiers killed in the Korean War was 33,629.

Henry Cabot Lodge, then U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, said in a Saigon interview last January he expected U.S. casualties to decline in 1967 because he saw "sensational results" from U.S. military operations.

Actually, at the current rate, the total U.S. killed, wounded and missing will top 100,000 by the end of the year. If the current weekly rate continues, about 40 per cent more combat dead will be logged in 1967 than during the first six years of the war that began with a small U.S. advisory effort in 1960.

The largest number of the week's casualties came in the bloody fighting in and near the demilitarized zone cutting across the center of Vietnam. But U.S. forces also were hit hard in the central highlands, where the U.S. fears a big Communist drive may be shaping up.

System's Effect On Hiring Policy Unknown Here

University personnel officials are not sure what effect a state civil service system approved by the Iowa legislature Thursday will have on their hiring policies.

The Senate gave 49-2 approval to a compromise version of the civil service bill, which was sent back to the House to be put into the form for transmission to Gov. Harold Hughes.

Hughes said weeks ago he would sign any such bill the legislature passed.

The State Board of Regents is not covered by the bill, but will be required to establish a personnel system which is acceptable to a merit system commission.

Donald R. Volm, assistant director of personnel for the University, said that the three state universities were not yet sure what the law would mean to them, because they did not know to what degree they would be expected to comply with the merit system.

Volm said that the Board of Regents had asked the universities to prepare formalized statements of their hiring policies, but that these statements had not yet been presented to the board.

Beginning Sept. 1, the bill would end the political spoils system of personnel policy involving thousands of state employees. Under rules established by a part-time three-member commission and carried out by a full time director, hiring and firing would be on a merit basis.

Those who began their jobs after Jan. 1, 1965, would have to pass qualifying examinations to keep them. Employees with longer service could stay on the job without an examination.

Democrats originally insisted that tests be required only of persons employed less than one year, while some influential Republicans were saying every employee, regardless of length of service, should be tested.

The provision for tests for those working two years only was a compromise.

The bill includes tight restrictions on political activity by state employees.

House OKs Bill Continuing Draft, Saves Deferment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House late Thursday night passed a bill continuing the draft for four years. It refused to end the deferment of college students.

The bill spells out the deferment policy for college undergraduates and allows continuation, for the present, of deferment of graduate students. In this, it differs from a Senate-passed version giving the President broad authority to revise policy.

The House bill also differs in allowing a congressional veto of any effort to install a lottery system for selection of draftees.

A Senate-House conference will work out the differences.

Passage followed a debate in which critics of some present practices not only called for immediate draft eligibility for college undergraduates, but said the country should try, with higher pay incentives, to form an all-voluntary army.

Cycle policy needs review

Do you know that the Campus Security and Parking Committee has a policy to discourage the use of motorcycles near University buildings? Well, it has. And, it is this policy that has resulted in the movement of two motorcycle parking areas in the past couple years.

For the information of those who haven't been on campus for a long time, the large area just south of the new addition to the Engineering Building which now is used partly for bicycle parking was at one time a lot for motorcycles. An area about two blocks away, just south of the Communications Center, is now the parking area for motorcycles on this part of the campus.

And, the residents of the men's dormitories used to be able to park their cycles in an area between Hillcrest and Quadrangle, where parking meters for cars now are situated. The area for motorcycles on this part of the campus is now in the South Quadrangle lot.

The relocation of the parking area for motorcycles from south of the Engineering Building was done by the committee at the request of officials of the School of Engineering. It was said that the noise from the machines disturbed persons inside the building.

The movement of the lot for the men's dormitories took place after some residents of the dormitories complained about the noise problem.

Do you know that the noise of motorcycles has been and still is a problem. This is especially true near classrooms where lectures are being given. It is less so near dormitories because other noises even more annoying than motorcycles are allowed to persist in these areas.

But, it is legitimate question to ask whether the movement of motorcycle lots or the general discouragement of motorcycles on campus is the way to solve the problem.

For one thing, a good argument could be made that motorcycles are the answer to the traffic problems in the area. Not only do the smaller vehicles take less space on the streets and highways, but they also require substantially less space to park. And, parking space is one of the biggest parts of our traffic problem. It could be that everything should be done to encourage the use of motorcycles instead of the present policy.

For another, motorcycles are not inherently noisy. Most motorcycles, as they are sold by dealers, do not make excessive or intolerable noise. Even the noisiest of "stock" motorcycles can be driven in a way to keep their noise levels low.

In this case, the problem of motorcycle noise should fall into the hands of the police. There are excessive noise ordinances that apply to motorcycles as well as other motor vehicles. Besides, the moving of cycle parking areas doesn't keep the noisemakers away from the buildings.

I hope the Security and Parking Committee will review its entire policy involving the use of motorcycles on campus. The motorcycle is potentially the answer to many aspects of the automobile problem on campus. And, in any event, the discouragement of the use of motorcycles and the moving of parking areas are not the answers to the noise problem.

CNM performers deserve praise

By DAVID HOLLISTER
 For The Iowan

A year of working together has made the musicians of the University's Center for New Music (which gave its eighth and final concert of the season Wednesday night) into one of the best groups of its kind in the country. One has been constantly impressed with the rising curve of excellence in their performances since their October debut. Likewise, music director William Hibbard's finesse on the podium, his ability to demand and get the best the players have to give, has shown an equally steady progression upward. This concert included, in addition to the seven permanent members of the Center, 11 assisting artists from the School of Music, all of whom deserve a nod for their dedication and musicianship.

Doris Allen played two violins in the Read piece, one with its G string tuned down to a major third; the timbre of the slack string was a sensual delight. The shift from one fiddle to the other and some other provocative sonorities provided visual and auditory stimulation in an otherwise random succession of fairly trivial and pretentious ideas.

The Fisher work, which ended the program, was pointillistic, i.e., one could point to a few points of interest but on the whole the piece was pointless. It was also too long. Much of it did display a sensitivity to instrumental color, but several moments of genuine beauty did not prove enough to sustain interest. One could perceive that the composer possessed mastery in all the "parameters": dimensions, variables, what-have-you of music (pitch, interval, rhythm, timbre, density, dynamics, register, articulation, etc.), but alas, too few composers today seem aware that manipulation of parameters no more makes music than placement of buildings, streets, stores, bridges, and parking lots makes a city.

The Oliveros work, performed by Patrick and Joan Purswell, with the assistance of Joseph Dechario, is one of the best of a type of composition of which we have heard several this year. In trying to describe this genre, words like spastic come to mind. One is reminded somewhat of a fireworks display or an electric storm (including the lulls between each outburst). If quicker-than-the-eye performers like the Purswells did not exist, composers like Oliveros would have to work exclusively in the electronic medium where they are not handicapped by performers' limitations. But the Purswells are here; they were invented just to prevent such an emergency from arising.

Janet Steele sang the Webern songs, to the accompaniment of clarinets, violin and cello, in her customary flawless way. This work is not the typical, thin-textured, compressed Webern composition which inspired the post-Webern school. These songs are expressionistic, thickly orchestrated, evidently indebted to earlier Schoenberg. A masterpiece, but occasionally the instrumentation seemed a bit domineering.

Of the remaining three pieces, the Harkins was by far the best. Indeed, this reviewer ventures to suggest that Harkins is one of the few young American composers alive today who is blessed with a fertile imagination, a good ear, a way of getting from this always interesting idea to that, and a firm grasp of the Grundgestalt. This is one of the few pieces I've heard recently which kept me listening — eagerly — from beginning to end. It has a deceptively simple shape (soft to loud, back to soft, suddenly loud, down to soft). His control of color — of sheer sound — was as impressive in his fortissimos as in his pianissimos, yet never once did it seem like color for its own sake. Incidentally, Harkins also contributed some superb trumpet playing in an ensemble of 10, all of whom deserve mention.

At least two-thirds of the works presented have belonged to one basic attitude, that of music as structure. Now let's hear some music as theater, as action, as protest, as consciousness-expanding, or as anti-mind (body or soul); naive music, pretty music, silly music, witty music; sublime, frivolous, ugly, tasteful, vulgar art-music, science-music, non-music, anti-music. Et cetera.

Et cetera.

Rabbi Lerer's letter is unfortunate for such a usually learned and coherent man. To rely on such preposterous statements as, "The Arabs were pro-Hitler" (when, in fact, as a whole the Arabs fought against Germany in World Wars I and II — see "British Military History"); "The Arabs are opening the doors of the Middle East to Communist influence" (when, in fact, the largest Communist party in the Middle East is in Israel); and "The Arabs committed atrocities against the Jews" and he implies that the Jews were innocent of such things when, in fact, Arnold Toynbee in 'A Study of History,' vol. 7, states that it is unbelievable that a people who suffered as much as did the Jews in history and under Hitler would commit as horrendous and sometimes even more cruel atrocities against Palestinian Arabs — Toynbee is referring there to Israeli atrocities of the sort that took place at Deir Yassin in April, 1948, when all the old men, women and children of an entire village were killed and cut to pieces and strewn about the land. The Israelis did this in order to "scare" the Arabs off in order to help secure land for their "homeland" because of their suffering under Hitler!

Rabbi Lerer's letter seems on the surface to be very reasonable and coherent, but it, too, is open to questions of consistency and interpretation. Mr. Greenfield makes it appear as though there was no organized underground among the Zionists — whereas Chaim Weizmann and Ben-Gurion (both very important Zionist leaders) talked openly about "liberation" groups during the 1930s and 1940s and their place in the "liberating" of Palestine for Jews. British Intelligence and U.N. reports both make clear that the Haganah and Irgun did exist and worked not only as "defensive" action.

Rabbi Lerer's interpretation of the declaration is neither new with him nor with Jews or others who hold that a mandate was given by former Prime Minister Balfour to Israel in 1917. Being an Irishman, I could not hold any view other than approval of the establishment of Israel as an independent nation. But for the sake of historical and political accuracy I must direct the attention of Iowan readers to the exact phraseology since the controversy involving Mr. Ryan, Rabbi Lerer and those who support Israel is likely to continue during this period of Nasser's arrogance in the Middle East.

The Balfour Declaration was a statement issued by the British government on November 2, 1917, declaring that they "view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of that object."

The declaration was given Sir Arthur Balfour's name because he was author of the declaration. He was a philosophic and political writer who espoused the movement for colonizing the Jews in their old home, Palestine, often called "The Land of Zion." Sir Arthur Balfour was Britain's Prime Minister from 1902 to 1905.

Professor Publishes Essay On Censorship

By BOB BRINK

An essay by a University professor examining the changes made in a novel to fit obscenity standards before it could be published in the United States has been published.

"The Artist as Censor: J.P. Donleavy and The Gingerman," written by Robert Corrigan, assistant professor of English, appeared this week in the "Mid-Continent American Studies Journal," published at the University of Kansas.

Corrigan said the essay was an "examination of two different versions of the same novel, one published in Europe and the other in the United States," comparing the changes which were made to fit the U.S. obscenity standards.

The first edition of Donleavy's "The Gingerman" was published in 1955 in France. The second edition was published in 1958 in the United States, after about 100 changes, almost all of them dealing with sexual allusions.

Donleavy's Views Of U.S. Sex
"The two versions provide a rather interesting insight into what Donleavy conceives American sex norms to be," said Corrigan. He said Donleavy's evaluation "corresponds rather closely to what Kinsey tells us of sexual attitudes in the United States."

Last spring the original edition appeared in the United States in unabridged form. Another essay by Corrigan,

"Ezra Pound and the Bolling Prize Controversy," which he delivered at a meeting of the Mid-Continent American Studies Association April 1 is soon to be published.

After Corrigan had delivered his essay, his permission was asked by Warren French, professor of English at Kansas State University, to include the essays in a volume of essays which French is preparing. The volume will be entitled, "The Forties," and will deal with that decade in the United States.

Corrigan said his essay questioned "whether you can ignore content when considering form."

Pound received the Bolling Prize, considered the highest recognition given for poetry, while in an insane asylum in Pisa, Italy.

Pound Arrested

Pound, Corrigan said, had been arrested in 1945 in Genoa, Italy, on charges of treason, and was taken to a prison camp for Americans convicted of crimes. Later he was transferred to a mental institution.

The treason charges resulted from radio broadcasts Pound had made during World War II in which he had condemned, among

Airman Convicted Of Aiding Soviets

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (A) — Air Force Staff Sgt. Herbert W. Bockenhaupt, 24, was convicted Thursday of conspiring with a Soviet Embassy official to transmit defense secrets to Russia.

In the asylum, he wrote 11 canons, which were later published in the form of a small volume, "Pisan Cantos," for which Pound won the Bolling Prize in 1949. The cantos express Pound's sentiments regarding the war issues. Corrigan said his essay questioned "whether you can ignore content when considering form."

The tall airman kept his composition when an all-male jury returned its verdict in federal court after 7½ hours of deliberation.

His attorneys said they would appeal. Bockenhaupt faces a possible death sentence.

-6-0 Record Scored-

Iowa Frosh Win Pair

Robert Morris pitchers for 12 hits.

Bob Perkins and Dave Krull got the four-run first inning rolling with singles. Both scored on Bob Cataldo's triple. Cataldo was tripped in himself by Jerry Bruchas, who then scored the final run of the inning on Frank Ferrel's base hit.

Iowa added two more runs in the second on a walk to Perkins, a triple by Krull and a single by Cataldo.

Iowa ran its lead to 9-0 in the third. Catcher Dennis Cortnage walked, advanced to second on a balk, took third on a fielder's choice and scored on Perkins' third hit of the game.

It's inexplicable for us to be making the errors we did this late in the season," he said.

Carlson said that at least seven of the freshmen — Perkins, Breshears, Bruchas, Davis, Krull, Cataldo and Rathje — have great chances of contributing to next year's varsity team.

Senate Hears New Proposal On Tax Law

DES MOINES (AP) — The Senate took up Thursday its Ways and Means Committee's latest proposal to remodel Iowa's personal property tax law — in this case, by granting exemptions in stages until the tax is repealed in 1975.

The proposal was outlined in a Democratic caucus Wednesday, then reported out Thursday by the committee, headed by Majority Leader Andrew Frommelt (D-Dubuque).

Frommelt called up the plan immediately as an amendment to replace the contents of a bill he was hacking a few days earlier, as Republicans complained they had not had time to study the new proposal.

The earlier bill would have repealed personal property taxes over a five year period, 20 percent a year. "We decided it wasn't what we liked," Frommelt said in explaining the switch.

The Dubuque Democrat pointed out repeal of 20 per cent of the taxes every year would give much more relief, in dollars, to large holders of property than to merchants with small inventories. The new approach would relieve the small merchant of taxes much more rapidly.

And who would want to? (Peugeot could be one of the nicest things that ever happened to you.) Fun? Peugeot practically invented it. This car handles effortlessly like the expensive sports jobs. (For example, With or without automatic Peugeot has rack and pinion transmission. And because Peugeots aren't built for obsolescence, the classic design won't be old hat next year. You can't kill a classic, either.)
