

—Every Man For Himself—

18 Went, 5 Came Back

ALONG THE CAMBODIAN BORDER — Five enemy bullets wrenched the helmet from the head of slim, sandy-haired Lt. Gary Rasser.

The luck that had helped him and four of his wounded men to fight their way through three encircling North Vietnamese lines seemed to be falling, he recounted Thursday.

His glasses gone, he groped for his machine gun.

A wounded squad leader meanwhile choked one North Vietnamese soldier to death with his bare hands and plunged a bowie knife into the chest of another, who had been shooting from behind a tree. Rasser opened fire on another line of Communist troops 50 yards ahead.

"We Could Do It" "I figured that we could do it yet again, that we could get through them another time," he said. "It was incredible that we had survived that far. I got up and we moved toward them."

Rasser, 22, and the four others were among survivors of a fight Wednesday near the Cambodian border in which a North Vietnamese force estimated at 1,000 men overwhelmed a company from the U.S. 4th Infantry Division, killing 35 Americans and wounding 31. Ten others are missing.

The commander of the battalion, Lt. Corey Wright of Omaha, Neb., said the Americans "did a marvelous job," killing 110 of the enemy by body count.

Rasser's ordeal began when his under-strength 18-man platoon was sent forward to the relief of another platoon surrounded on a small hill by enemy troops. They themselves were soon cut off.

"My three machine-guns were killed in the first half hour by North Vietnamese who had us completely surrounded with 50 yards," Rasser said.

It soon became apparent that the company was completely disorganized. This was caused, Rasser later learned, by the death of the company commander and all but two of the headquarters command group.

It became every man for himself.

5 Men Remain "I gathered together my radio operator, a squad leader and two wounded," Rasser recalled. "Seven of my men were dead. The other six were nowhere around. We decided to fight our way home."

The North Vietnamese forward line stretched around the Americans. The khaki-clad enemy troops fired from behind rocks and trees and also used their packs as shields.

At one point, as Rasser sprawled on the ground, an enemy grenade thumped under his arm. It failed to explode.

The jungles were drenched by rain. Rasser jugged three M16 rifles jammed for him during the break through the first North Vietnamese line, probably because of the wet ammunition he was using. He picked up another of the rapid-firing weapons that somebody had discarded earlier in the battle and used this to lead the breakout through the second line. When it, too, jammed, he grabbed the machine gun.

All Wounded By this time, all his men had been wounded and Rasser himself had taken some light shrapnel scratches on an arm. But all five could move unassisted even though his wounded men were losing blood.

"We just kept moving on and on," Rasser said. "We lost all track of time and were defeated by all the managing to scramble back into the base we had started from five hours earlier."

The young bachelor lieutenant, who is from Red Cloud, Neb., and was brought up on a corn farm there, will be recommended for a high military award for valor. In Vietnam since May 29, he expected to be back in the field with his unit Friday.

THE WOMAN'S TOUCH is meant to soothe, but Rickey Joe Woods, 2, of Del City, Okla., still feels pretty bad despite the efforts of his sister Cindy, 6. The tot was recuperating Thursday at his home from severe foot burns he received when he darted across a sun-heated metal door on a storm cellar. It was his first experience with the summer sun and he didn't like it. — AP Wirephoto

4 Arab Leaders Confer In Cairo

CAIRO — The four most belligerent Arab nations opened a summit conference in Cairo Thursday to discuss means to erase the consequences of last month's fighting with Israel.

Meeting in secret session in the Presidential Palace were President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, President Nouruddin Atassi of Syria, President Abdel Rahman Aref of Iraq and President Houari Boumedienne of Algeria.

They are expected to be joined today by Prime Minister Mohammed Ahmed Manguob of Sudan, who is flying from New York, where he attended the U.N. General Assembly meetings on the Middle East crisis.

The Assembly heard Arab and Communist delegates voice new demands that Israel be compelled to give up the Old City of Jerusalem.

Soviet Posture On Middle East Less Menacing

MOSCOW — Party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin returned Thursday night from an East European summit conference in Budapest on the Middle East that toned down a stand taken a month ago.

The Soviet bloc leaders, at the end of the two-day secret meeting issued a statement demanding that Israel withdraw from Arab territory conquered in the June fighting. But it made no threat of a "resolute rebuff" if Israel refused. The same East European leaders made this threat in a statement after a Moscow meeting June 9.

Wednesday's statement promised a concerted East European effort to provide long-term military and economic aid to the Arab states. But there was no suggestion of a strong role for the Soviet bloc, such as direct intervention on the Arab side.

The controlled Soviet press has been stressing the need for a political rather than a military settlement of the Middle East question.

The Budapest summit was seen here largely as an opportunity for Kosygin to report directly to his East European colleagues on his visit to the United Nations and on his summit talks with President Johnson.

A U.N. spokesman said no observers would be sent to the Israeli-Egyptian Suez front until final agreement is worked out on their final alignment and just where they will be stationed.

General Plans Talks Lt. Gen. Einar Bull, Norwegian commander of the U.N. Palestine truce supervisory organization, conferred with Egyptian officials in Cairo and planned new talks Friday with the Israelis in Jerusalem.

Bull is trying to get agreement on a 25-man observer force, in accord with a consensus reached in the Security Council Monday. Both countries have agreed to accept observers.

In Cairo the Arab leaders were reported to be most determined to carry on the war against Israel until the consequences of the defeat in the June war are eradicated.

Nasser, however, is reported to favor building up the Arab armies to a maximum of preparedness before launching what is often called "the second round" of this fight against Israel.

Resumption Of Fighting Boumedienne and Atassi appeared to be pressing for an immediate resumption of military operations against Israel, and Aref and Manguob may side with them.

King Hussein of Jordan met with Nasser and Boumedienne in Cairo early this week but is not included in the second Arab summit meeting.

Socialist Syria regards monarchist Jordan with suspicion, and before the war with Israel was advocating the overthrow of Hussein. That suspicion was not erased when Hussein signed up with his old enemy, Nasser, in a mutual-defense treaty, then joined in the war against Israel.

As a moderate Socialist, Boumedienne is considered cool toward Hussein. He did not attend the first meeting between Nasser and Hussein this week but entered the joint talks later.

Atassi was the last of the four leaders to arrive in Cairo, landing Thursday morning. Crowds at the airport shouted slogans for the four and cried: "Carry on the struggle against Israel and its Western backers."

LAURA C. DUSTAN Building Plans Delayed

Nursing School Postpones Plans For Expansion

Plans for a new nursing building and expanded nursing enrollment at the University will have to be put off for the future, according to Miss Laura C. Dustan, dean of the College of Nursing.

A federal grant of $1.3 million was awarded to the University in 1966-67 for the proposed building, but the state legislature didn't appropriate the $1 million needed to activate the grant.

"If we had gotten state funds to match the federal grant, we could have completed the new building by 1970 and doubled the number of nursing graduates by 1974-75," Miss Dustan said.

This fall 415 undergraduates and about 35 graduate students are expected to be enrolled in the College. But there are college bound people wanting to enroll in nursing that the University cannot accommodate, said Miss Dustan.

The need for nurses with bachelor's degrees or master's degrees is growing by leaps and bounds, she said, and there are only two institutions in Iowa with programs leading to a BS in nursing, the University and Marycrest College in Davenport.

"Since we are a state university and since we are the biggest institution with such a program, I believe that we have a responsibility to provide this kind of an education to as many people as we can," Miss Dustan said.

Congo Hostages Safe

KINSHASA, the Congo — Twenty-eight Americans and Europeans released by fleeing mercenaries who held them hostage for eight days arrived in Kinshasa Thursday night from Kisangani.

They were aboard two C46 transport planes of a Red Cross rescue mission. Also aboard were 68 soldiers of the Congolese army, many of them wounded.

The military revolt in the eastern Congo was regarded as ended when rebel white mercenaries fled Kisangani, leaving hostages behind.

Among those arriving at the airport was Mrs. Ben Hobgood of Lexington, Ky., who said she thought four Europeans had been killed during the week. Mrs. Hobgood had her three daughters with her. Her husband is rector of the Congo Free University.

21 Wounded Twenty-one of the wounded soldiers were carried from the planes on stretchers and taken to hospitals.

The mercenaries fled from Kisangani after having taken over the airport and a part of the city on July 5.

The Congolese government reported that loyal troops had seized complete control of the northeast city, formerly called Stanleyville, including the airport. The city was reported quiet.

The Red Cross said there was no indication whether the mercenary troops had taken other Europeans as hostages with them when they quit Kisangani in about 30 trucks during the night. The Congo radio said they had.

Europeans Held Hostage According to earlier reports, more than 150 Europeans, including 22 visiting journalists, were held hostage in Kisangani, along with 21 Americans. The Americans were missionaries and professors and students of the Congo Free University.

The hostages had been reported under guard in a downtown hotel. But when the first Red Cross team arrived in Kisangani, it reported there was no trace of any hostages.

The first Red Cross report listed those hostages found safe as 13 European newsmen and 15 Americans and other Europeans.

Two Swiss doctors and a male Swiss nurse spent all day treating the wounded and inquiring after missing Europeans.

A Red Cross plane returned to Kinshasa with 30 wounded soldiers and a group of European women and children.

Police, British Troops Tangle With Terrorists

HONG KONG (Friday) — Police, supported by British troops, smashed their way into a Hong Kong union headquarters before dawn today and the suspected Communist terrorists inside fought back with knives, clubs and vials of acid.

Police opened fire and killed two of the building's occupants and injured several others.

On Thursday, Communists bombed a police station, fought a brief skirmish with police and stoned a brigade of firemen as heavily armed riot squads patrolled the British colony on the border of Red China.

Today's raid was the third police and troop action in two nights against Communist-led union headquarters, who police say are directing the campaign of riots, labor strife and terrorist attacks that have wracked Hong Kong for more than two months.

21 Killed Twenty-one have been killed and scores injured since the first riots ripped through the tiny British colony on May 11.

Scores of Communist suspects were reported trapped and arrested in today's assault against the Kowloon Dockworkers Amalgamated Union headquarters.

Police said they seized a "large quantity of dangerous offensive weapons, including knives and bottles of acid."

The previous night's raid against two union headquarters on Hong Kong island netted 40 suspects and three wicker baskets full of crude weapons.

British garrison troops threw barbed wire barricades around the Kowloon headquarters, then posted guards with carbines, automatic rifles and machine guns while police assaulted the building.

Building occupants poured acid on the heads of police cutting through the iron-shuttered headquarters doors with acetylene torches.

Police Use Tear Gas Police fired tear gas, then opened up with their pistols.

Once inside, 45 minutes later, police battled their way upstairs and through barricaded corridors against Chinese defenders who signaled one another by beating gongs.

State School Guidance To Be Chopped In Half

DES MOINES — The state will have to reduce by half its supervision of local schools under the budget appropriated by the 1967 legislature, the State Board of Public Instruction was told Thursday.

Paul Johnston, state superintendent of public instruction, recommended the number of regional consultants be reduced from 10 to 5. These are the workers who inspect local schools to see that they meet requirements of the school standards law, and offer counseling to officials of schools falling short of requirements.

—Concert Part Of Festival— Dance Kicks Up Problems

By NORMA PARKER

A dance concert has been added to the Fine Arts Festival this summer. And, as it is with any new idea, there have been problems. Much experimenting and river crossing has taken place to make the concert what it will be at its 8 p.m. performance Friday and Saturday in Macbride Auditorium.

"For instance, one problem was getting the dancers to perform this summer. Very few of the 21 performers are in Iowa City for any other reason than the concert, according to Mrs. Marcia Thayer, instructor in physical education for women and concert director.

Therefore, dancers had to find places to stay. One girl, Mary S. Barton, A1, Glenwood, is living in Mrs. Thayer's own apartment.

"The place is usually used as a quiet study place while I'm in town for classes," said Mrs. Thayer Thursday.

"But in order for Suzie to be in the concert, I'm letting her live at my place."

After dancers were recruited and practice began in mid-June, another problem arose — where to have the dance concert. The concert was added to the Fine Arts Festival by the late Earl E. Harper, festival founder and director, just before he died this spring. Therefore, no provisions were made for the concert except that there would be one, Mrs. Thayer said.

"Fortunately, the Opera Workshop people shared the auditorium with us for a week for dress rehearsals and performances," Mrs. Thayer said.

The Workshop usually uses Macbride Auditorium for its own practices and performances, the first of which is scheduled for August 1.

With dancers and a place to dance, it would seem no more problems exist. However, they do.

For instance, the dancers have to provide their own setting and costumes. "For one set, we tromped through the woods cutting down sapling trees — getting lots of mosquito bites along the way," Mrs. Thayer said.

Two dancers right in the middle of concert practice. Linda A. Cox, G, Iowa City, and Linda C. Lee, G, Des Moines, continued to practice every night despite needing to study. Miss Cox dances in four different numbers — the only one in the troupe to do so. Miss Lee choreographed one number.

"Summer weather also wils dancers during practice," Mrs. Thayer said.

Despite the problems, the first dance concert will contain many firsts.

The concert is choreographed by faculty members and students and will present five new works. Each of the numbers will be from 12 to 30 minutes long.

One number, choreographed by Mrs.

Thayer, is dedicated to Dr. Harper. The dance, "Into My Hands," is the first one Mrs. Thayer has ever dedicated to anyone. Since the entire festival is dedicated to Dr. Harper and since he is responsible for the addition of dance, Mrs. Thayer decided to choreograph a special number.

"The dance expresses a great joy for being — just as did Dr. Harper when he was alive," Mrs. Thayer explained.

Also since the dancers have had fewer days to practice for this concert, they are practicing longer each day.

"We have practice every night until 11 p.m. and then there are always other things to do to get ready for the performance. Usually we go until 2 a.m.," said Mrs. Thayer.

Fourth of July night, however, practice was called off. Most dancers used this evening to catch up on personal things they had left undone, Mrs. Thayer explained. For example, she went to the fireworks display at City Park and while there wrote out questions for comprehensive exams.

"Little did I know that on the other side of the park was Linda Lee studying for my exam," Mrs. Thayer laughed.

Why the dancers go on practicing despite all their problems remains a question mark to Mrs. Thayer.

"I guess it's just that we're crazy about dance," she said.

Objectives must be defined

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has returned from South Vietnam and has announced, as expected, that additional U.S. troops would be sent to Vietnam. Defense Department officials have said that the number sent would be the maximum possible without a Reserve call-up or an extension of the one-year Vietnam duty tour.

The commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, already has been authorized a total of 480,000 men but has requested 600,000. However, in conferences the last few days with President Johnson, it was apparently decided that the two men would not raise the quota much above 500,000 men.

This difference of opinion — amounting to nearly 100,000 men — between the military commanders in the field and the civilian commanders at home brings up the continuing and inevitable question of just what's going on in Vietnam anyway? Does the United States have a fairly concrete plan of action or purpose other than that we are there to stop aggression and insure freedom for the South Vietnamese? Do the civilian planners have one approach in mind while the field commanders have another?

It appears as though we don't have a plan because when McNamara was asked to predict a possible date for ending the conflict he said there was no way for anyone to predict when any war might be ended. But there should be. The allied forces in South Vietnam must have some type of timetable as a guide for their military operations. More importantly, they must have a definite goal other than the amorphous idea of freedom for South Vietnam.

Wars should be planned. Guidelines should be set up and objectives should be clearly defined. If not, how are we to judge the progress of the fighting? If we are to judge the progress by comparing the number of casualties on both sides it would appear as though the United States and the allied forces are far out in front. But they aren't.

Before leaving for Vietnam, McNamara said the Communists had suffered very heavy casualties and have nothing to show for it. But couldn't it also be said that the United States has suffered very heavy casualties and has nothing to show for it?

It has been said that the North Vietnamese, with the help of Red China, could continue to send men to die in the war simply because they have so many to spare. But the United States cannot afford to do this. We have a limited supply. If we are to maintain our numerous bases around the world and at home we can go only so far before we must stop the flow of men to Southeast Asia.

Until U.S. policy makers realize that American soldiers are not expendable commodities — which seems to be their thinking in spite of platitudinous statements to the contrary — they will continue to die for a cause that has been told and retold but never clearly and precisely defined in concrete terms.

Down the rapids with Bobby

By ART BUCHWALD

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. — I went down the rapids of the Colorado River in the Grand Canyon with Sen. Robert Kennedy and his family and friends last week. There were 42 people in the party, including Andy Williams, mountain climber Jim Whittaker, pro football player George Plimpton, skier Willy Schaeffler, publisher Otis Chandler and 350 Kennedy children.

I was the only one in condition to make the trip, but in spite of this my father didn't want me to go. "It's all right for Kennedy to go down the rapids because he can walk on the water, but you're going to have to swim."

I assured him that the Kennedys would never do anything dangerous, but it was hard to persuade him. He said, "It's as safe to go down the Colorado River with Bobby Kennedy in a raft as it is to sail up the Nile with Gen. Moshe Dayan."

Despite my father's fears I'm glad I went. You really don't get to know a man until you've taken a rapid with him. The trouble is, Bobby Kennedy took a lot of rapids, and he took them on an air mattress. Ethel, mother of 10, also took the rapids out of the raft, and of course her children took the rapids out of the raft, so there was nothing left for the rest of the party to do but leave the raft as well.

The best way to take a rapid is to float feet first on your life preserver, just in case you hit a rock. But I invented a new way of doing it. If you keep your mouth open you can swallow most of the water you're going over, which makes it half as rough. My wife had to give me mouth-to-mouth resuscitation every night when we camped, but no one noticed it because everyone thought we were just kissing under the stars.

If you're ever going down the rapids with the Kennedys, it's best to choose a river that isn't surrounded by cliffs. Every morning after breakfast Bobby would look up at a mountain and ask Mt. Everest climber Jim Whittaker, "Do you think it's tough to climb?" If Whittaker said no, Bobby would look at another mountain. "What about that one?" If Whittaker said, "It's impossible," Bobby would call the party together and say, "That's the one we're going up," and pretty soon Ethel, mother of 10, the Kennedy children and the rest of the group would be scrambling up the mountain in 110 degree heat.

After the mountain had been conquered, everyone would return to the rafts to take some more rapids. By the third day I was starting to have a great deal of respect for my father, and I wouldn't take off my life preserver even to get into my sleeping bag.

Probably the most dangerous part of the trip was the last day, when we arrived at a place laughingly called Phantom Lodge, seven miles down, at the bottom of the Grand Canyon. The only ways to get out of the Canyon were to walk out in 119 degree heat, ride a burro out along the same trail or pretend you're going to die so they'll send a helicopter for you. I had rehearsed the death scene for three days, and by the time we arrived at Phantom Lodge I was barely breathing.

Bobby opted to climb up the seven miles, as did the Kennedy children, and when Ethel, mother of 10, said she would climb out, too, the rest of the party were too embarrassed to say they'd rather go by helicopter.

Fearful that they would cancel the helicopter, I stopped breathing when Bobby and Jim Whittaker came up to me to see whether they could persuade me to change my mind.

Bobby said, "Why don't you want to climb the mountain?" I just smiled weakly and replied, "Because it's there."

'Uh . . . we in the Administration don't refer to our fiscal proposal in quite that way'

By SHEILA CRAWFORD

The terms "gruesome" and "grotesque" used by most viewers of the photographs by John Schulze, professor of art at the University, now on display at the Union, arrive at too simple an answer to describe the subjects of attention.

"Grotesque" is the immediate reaction to the reality presented in a startling manner by Schulze. But "grotesque" by no means fulfills the classification of these photographs. Rather, the description of the entire show of photographs can be derived from the mount of four pictures called the "Enigmatic Dream."

In the four pictures are human faces covered with superimposed objects such as skulls or round telescopes, like those at sightseeing spots. And enigmatic they are as the viewer first thinks he understands the subject, and then realizes that there may be a host of other interpretations. The pictures cannot be precisely determined, and this characteristic of undefinability is true of the whole show.

There is no undefinability in the sense that one cannot find beauty, atmosphere, or mood in the pictures, but that there is no predetermined meaning or interpretation for every individual viewer. Reality is presented in a new and vital manner, and thus because of its departure from the usual and the standard, it necessitates individual interpretation.

Startling is the "Eternal Triangle" which lends itself to various interpretations. The subject consists of four mummies; one woman dressed in white, standing in a coffin, accompanied by two men on either side dressed in black garb, and a small child sitting almost inconspicuously between one man's feet. The contorted expressions of the hollow faces and macabre subject might give the viewer the feeling of the pain and unhappiness involved in a triangular love affair which humans are drawn into.

Data Systems Inc. of Minneapolis and the Association of Data Processing Service Organizations have brought the suit against the American National Bank and Trust Company of St. Paul.

In the "Specter of Violence" a mummy is used again as a subject. It is a close-up picture of the dark face with its gaping mouth, hollow eyes, and the dry skin stretched over the bones. Again horror is felt when seeing this mummy and contemplating to what fate it might have fallen.

Not all the photographs, however, have the macabre tone as described above. The smooth lines and gracefulness of motion is emphasized in the "Dance of Black Tattoo." An attractive nude woman in a series of four pictures is the object of a swiftness, yet gentleness of the movement of the body. The emphasis upon movement is produced by the use of a light cloth screen painted with black markings reminiscent of tattoos. As one is unable to see the body and face of the woman clearly behind the screen, one concentrates upon the movement of an angular body. The screen produces a distortion but it is not unpleasant as it aids in the designed object of the picture.

Detail is important to the artist as seen particularly in the group of pictures entitled "Children of Paradise" and "The Exquisite Object." In "Object" the planes and textures of the wood, stone, adobe, shells and other ornamentation are of utmost importance. Lighting adds to the study of surfaces, and one can almost feel the various textures presented.

In "Children of Paradise" expressions of people are emphasized. The play with light along with the natural charm of the people caught with their emotions showing is particularly noted in the picture of an old man holding and fondling his dog. On the light side of his face, one can see his pride and happiness. On the darker side, one realizes his age.

One can see loneliness quite vividly in another picture of a painted clown behind a ragged cloth screen. The lighting is weak in the foreground, but bright light in the background emphasizes the loneliness and induces the viewer to feel in sympathy with him.

Sadness is expressed also in the "Sad Peddler," a photograph of an old, old man dressed in shabby clothes, a basket slung about his neck, and his supporting himself by two canes. The man is darkened by the backlighting effect, and yet one can see, on looking closely, the white grizzled beard and the big sad eyes. The face of the man and the whole effect of the picture expresses the sadness and pain the peddler has experienced in his almost ended life.

On a lighter side are the pictures of scenery which Schulze has photographed. In "City Park" there appears to be an infinite number of black trees contrasting with the newly fallen snow. Viewing from a distance, there is a stark quality to the picture, but up close, one feels almost lost among the trees, relieved only by a slight mention of a gray river.

"Black Brush" has the same quality as the "Park," but in the picture there is no break in the detailed pattern of the many black dead trees enmeshed against the white snow and sky. Contrast in both these pictures is the outstanding quality provided by the subject and the lighting.

One of the most spirited pictures of the show is "Ephemeral Image" in which a cheerfully romping figure is superimposed upon a hazy profile of a woman. The head, outlined by a bright background and the cheerful figure gives the impression of hopes, and leaves the viewer with a feeling of enlightenment.

Perhaps one can leave the show with the feeling from the last picture or at least a feeling that there is a need for reflection. However, one cannot say that the whole show is "grotesque." That term is too general and too distorted to describe the show which emphasizes reality through unusual detail and a startling manner.

Reader enjoyed Union column

To the Editor:

I finally enjoyed one of Sue Rickel's "Weekend Wanderings" columns (July 1). Her observations were so true. When is the Union going to be given to its owners to use? Why shouldn't students be allowed to play a piano that they own? Her naming of that character who runs around being obnoxious most of the time as "Pinky" was perfect.

I would like to see Sue do more columns on the Union. A good start would be one about the constantly deteriorating "food service." It seems that every time I go in there the servings of food grow smaller. And almost as frequently, the prices go up. I would like to see a boycott of the food service until things become more reasonable.

Computer banks sued

NEW YORK — Some of the special computer services banks now offer their customers may be in jeopardy as a result of legal action brought by two data processing companies.

According to The Insider's Newsletter, the computer companies' suit charges that banks, in offering such services as computerized payrolls, billing and inventory, have been taking business away from the plaintiffs by entering a field not germane to banking, a violation of the National Banking Act.

Data Systems Inc. of Minneapolis and the Association of Data Processing Service Organizations have brought the suit against the American National Bank and Trust Company of St. Paul.

De Gaulle Renews 'Nationalism' Call

BONN (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle of France appealed to West Germany and other continental European countries Thursday to assert their national identities and escape any domination by the United States.

Britain, he said, could only become truly European by changing its way of life, especially its relations with the United States. Until that comes about, De Gaulle wants Britain kept out of the European Common Market.

He insisted that the United States was an old friend and that nothing he said was meant to be hostile. He explained that he wanted to keep the American alliance as long as there was a threat from the Soviet Union.

But he urged an effort at understanding and cooperation with Communist countries and said this had led France to take positions opposed to the United States on Vietnam and the Middle East.

De Gaulle, looking all of his 76 years, came to Bonn for two days with six of his top Cabinet ministers. It was part of an attempt to revive the 1963 friendship treaty which he signed with the late Konrad Adenauer just a few days after he vetoed Britain's first bid to join the Common Market.

Buildings, Offices Receive Face-Lift

By RON FILINGER

The University Physical Plant, taking advantage of the smaller number of students on campus, is carrying out its present clean-up, paint-up and fix-up campaign.

Frederick W. Moore, assistant director of building maintenance and construction, said that several projects are under way and more will begin once funds become available.

The University is presently remodeling the "O" section of the Engineering Building, an older part of the building so named because most room numbers begin with the numeral 0.

Moore said that the area is being converted to additional office space at an estimated cost of $20,000.

The project is another phase of the total renovation of the Engineering Building. Work was started in 1966 to rehabilitate older sections, remodel existing facilities and add to the building's size.

quarters so the work can begin.

Several departments now located in Schaeffer Hall will move to newly remodeled quarters in University Hall once they are completed.

Moore also said that work was progressing in Room 8 of the Dentistry Building. The University is remodeling and re-equipping an existing laboratory to accommodate what Moore described as a "multi-disciplinary laboratory for a new Dentistry program."

To Cost $25,000

He said the project will cost $25,000 without equipment. Workers are in the process of installing air, gas and water outlets.

A $35,000 remodeling program is in progress at Currier Hall.

Most of the work is being done in a section of the building erected in 1913, according to Moore, who added that new plumbing, fixtures and tile are being installed in the women's dormitory.

He said that the usual painting and repair chores are under way at the men's dormitories, Hillcrest Dormitory and Quadrangle Dormitory will both have rooms painted to greet incoming residents in the fall.

Still another remodeling project is being carried out in the Mathematics - Science Building. Moore said that rooms 323 and 326 were being converted to office space for research assistants. The cost of this project is $15,700.

Office Space Built

Additional office space is also being built for the Liberal Arts Advisory Office in Schaeffer Hall. When the program is completed the Advisory will occupy 109, 115 and 116 Schaeffer Hall.

Moore said the cost of the Schaeffer Hall project is about $17,500.

Routine painting and repair work is also being done by the Physical Plant which is waiting for some of the present occupants of Schaeffer Hall to vacate their

Unit OKs Stamp Price Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Post Office subcommittee voted Thursday to raise postal rates for letters by one cent, air mail by two cents and to put post cards on the same rate schedule as letters.

The action adds more than $45 million to first class postal rate increases recommended by the Johnson administration, bringing the total to $591 million.

It opens the way to possible reductions in administration proposals for higher rates on second class mail, mainly magazines and newspapers, and third class mail, greeting cards, circulars and catalogs.

But sources said there is considerable sentiment within the subcommittee against shaving the

Aid To Reds Irks Quaker Ex-Judge

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Disagreement over whether a Quaker religious group should send medical aid to North Vietnam has led to the resignation of a former federal judge from the Wilmington Society of Friends.

John Biggs Jr., 71, who retired from the U.S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals in 1965, resigned because he said he felt that Quakers who send medical supplies to the North Vietnamese should act as individuals or form special committees, rather than send supplies through the religious society.

Car Strikes Bus, 2 Parked Autos

Mrs. Linda S. Kessler, 25, 1650 Dubuque Rd., was charged by police Thursday morning with failure to yield the right of way after her car bounced off an empty school bus and spun into two parked cars.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Bloomington and Johnson Streets.

Police said Mrs. Kessler's car received $800 damages, and the school bus, driven by Sylvester A. Sharp, 49, Route 1, Iowa City, received $35 front end damages. The bus is owned by the Iowa City Coach Company, 1306 S. Gilbert St.

Damages to the two parked vehicles totaled $110.

THE WIDOW'S KISS comes from Gen. John P. McConnell, Air Force chief of staff, the recipient is Mrs. Edward H. The four-star general kissed Mrs. White as she stepped forward to receive the Distinguished Flying Cross, awarded posthumously to her husband, during ceremonies at the Pentagon Thursday.

Unique Filter For Cigarets Under Study

NEW YORK (AP) — Columbia University said Thursday it would set up a separate corporation to license a unique cigarette filter as two tobacco companies expressed a hesitant interest in it.

"Since people are going to smoke anyway, we feel they should have the safest cigarette possible," Dr. Grayson Kirk, Columbia president, said. "We earnestly hope that this will not of itself tend to increase the incidence of smoking," he added.

"It may well prove to be a revolutionary cigarette filter," Kirk said.

Both the American Tobacco Co. and Philip Morris expressed an interest in the new filter, but both said they wanted to test it first. Philip Morris offered to help in its development.

But the tobacco industry as a whole greeted the announcement with reservations. It called for more research and insisted there was no link between smoking and cancer.

The American Cancer Society said it hoped the filter would not arouse any false hopes.

"The only safe rule today is not to smoke cigarettes," the society said.

The statement dampened rising prices of tobacco stocks. Liggett & Myers dropped $1.50 to $74.25. Other tobacco stocks gained from 25 cents to $1.75 a share.

The filter was developed by a balding, one-pack-a-day chemist, Robert L. Strickman, who said he couldn't get past the doors of major tobacco companies.

Wilkins Asks LBJ To 'Crack Down'

BOSTON (AP) — Civil Rights leader Roy Wilkins Thursday called on President Johnson to do "a little cracking down" on officials who frustrate enforcement of civil rights legislation.

"The administration should summarily act," instead of going through a "continual process of persuasion," the executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said in an interview.

He said the President has "charted a way to go" in proposing civil rights legislation.

"Its (the administration's) heart is in the right place, but as Negroes say down South, 'It do poorly,'" Wilkins said.

Wilkins' views, expressed during a lull in the NAACP's 58th annual convention, echoed concern about "reluctant" state and federal civil rights law enforcement. This reluctance has been a chief topic during the convention's first three days. It ends Saturday.

People who fail to follow clearly defined policy," he said.

"Policing" Needed

Wilkins did not leave the matter entirely up to the government. Effective enforcement, he said, is "largely a matter of policing by the people. They're not self-enforcing. Any chapter of the NAACP that has a law against

Prof Lectures On Theaters At Tea-Talk

Repertory theater is of great value to the actor, because it forces him to do many different parts and widens his training, Cosmo Catalano, associate professor of speech and dramatics, said Thursday at Tea and Talk, the weekly lecture and discussion session in the Union Music Room.

Catalano is also managing director of the University's summer Repertory Theatre.

"A good actor can give different characterizations and shift from role to role," Catalano said. "And a typecast actor is no longer challenged to extend himself and to use his real acting ability."

Sees Way Charted

"I think the President has charted a way to go in his messages to the Congress, in his proposals of legislation," Wilkins said.

"I feel definitely that the Congress has not always lived up to the presidential standard, and that even after enactment officials in some of the bureaus and agencies have thrown either light or heavy roadblocks in the way.

"We do not regard this as a blanket condemnation of the administration, knowing the problems of bureaucracy. We would like to see a little cracking down by the administration on the peo-

The University Repertory Theatre will give five performances each of four plays this summer. Catalano said that it was possible to see the performance change over a period of time, and an actor could learn how to control the moods of an audience.

Catalano said the director of a Repertory Theatre production had to be more particularly creative, because he must help the actor find the proper way to express different roles.

Labor Market To Be Probed

Two federal officials will be among the speakers at the eighth annual Employment Security Managers Institute on Labor Market Economics and Administrative Skills which begins Sunday.

Myer Freyman of the U.S. Labor Department will discuss "Staff Training and Development," and Frank C. Goddell of the U.S. Civil Service Commission will talk on "Applications of Leadership."

Thirty-three employment security managers from Iowa, Kansas,

Nebraska, Utah and Wyoming are expected to attend the institute, which is conducted by the University's Center for Labor and Management. Thomas P. Gilroy, program director, is in charge of the institute.

Other topics which the participants will cover in reading and lectures include fiscal and monetary countercyclical policy in economics, the changing role of employment security and economic and social implications of manpower planning.

Kaline, Brown Mending, So Doctors Remove Casts

DETROIT (AP) — Slugger Al Kaline is out of the cast that protected a broken hand and should be putting his power back into the Detroit Tigers bid for the American League baseball pennant in a few days, team officials said Thursday.

A similar report was given on outfielder Gates Brown's injured wrist.

"We took the casts off Kaline and Brown," said Dr. Russell Wright, team physician. "They will be back playing soon."

"The new x-rays on both look good," he said. "From now on they'll be wearing splints instead of casts."

Nicklaus, Devlin Tie For Top Spot In British Meet

HOYLAKE, England (AP) — Defending champion Jack Nicklaus stormed in with a three-under-par 69 Thursday and joined Australian Bruce Devlin in the lead at the halfway stage of the British Open Championship.

The first half already has produced the upset elimination of Masters champion Gay Brewer of Dallas, Tex., who failed to qualify for the last two rounds after shooting a disastrous 80 for a two-round total of 158.

Nicklaus, of Columbus, Ohio, had 71-69-140 after two rounds and Devlin had 70-70-140. Both were four under par after 36 holes over the sun-baked Hoylake course.

Another round will be played today over Hoylake's 6,995-yard par-72 layout with the final round Saturday. There will be a playoff Sunday in case of a tie.

Sanders Contends
 Doug Sanders, the snappy-dressing dandy from Ojai, Calif., was only four shots out of the lead after shooting a 73 for 144, with four birdies.

"I've won tournaments from four shots back," he said.

Three other Americans remained in contention but well back.

Phil Rodgers, the pudgy pro from San Diego, Calif., who was beaten in a playoff for the title in 1963, three-putted three greens in shooting a 73 for 147. He eagled the third hole with a great six-iron shot six feet from the cup.

Deane Beaman, the rookie pro from Bethesda, Md., couldn't control his drives and skied to a 76 for 148. Bert Yancey of Philadelphia also was at 148 after improving with a 73.

Grad Library Courses Offered To Interested Underclassmen

By DONNA ENSLOW
Students entering in library science can take several graduate level courses during their junior and senior years, according to Frederick Wezeman, director of the School of Library Science.

The University does not offer a bachelor's degree in library science but does offer a master's degree.

Reference I, Cataloging and Classification, Book Selection and History of Libraries and Librarians are the courses that can be taken by upperclassmen.

Students entering the graduate program who have completed these courses can either take additional advanced courses in library science or additional electives.

"These courses are of great benefit to all college students," said Wezeman, "because they help anyone make better use of the library. They can also help a student decide whether he wants to enter the School of Library Science for a graduate degree."

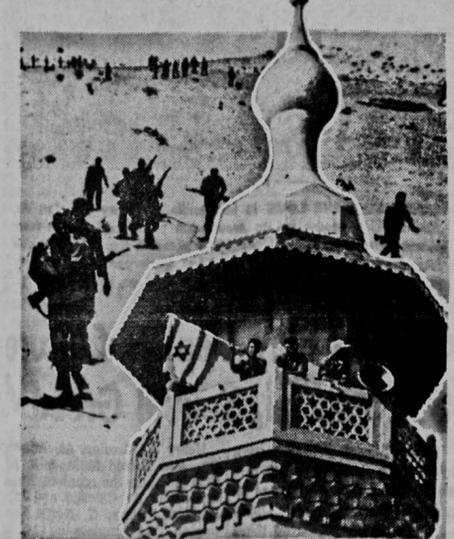

The school offers training for professional library positions in public, school, college, university and special libraries, said Wezeman. It also offers, in cooperation with the College of Education, courses that lead to certification as a school librarian.

The School of Library Science was established in 1965 by the State Board of Regents, although a program of courses in library science has been offered for many years, primarily to meet the needs of school librarians. The regents gave the final approval needed for the school's program in April, and the school will officially begin this fall.

Wezeman expects 30 full time students.

Housing Unit To Explain Its Purpose

Low-rent housing must be explained to the local public, officials of the Iowa City Low Rent Housing Agency said at their meeting Thursday morning.

The meeting followed an informal discussion with local realtors Wednesday night.

"This discussion indicated the need to educate the public by supplying specific facts and details about low-rent housing," the Rev. Robert Welsh, agency chairman, said.

The agency has encountered various problems of definition, according to Welsh. One such definition is low income.

"Low income is defined differently by federal agencies and the Iowa State Code," Welsh said. "This agency must decide what should be considered low income in the Iowa City area. It said that some economic problems would not be solved through low-rent housing, and that proof was needed to determine whether or not a housing program would be beneficial.

Welsh said that the Iowa State Employment Service would be asked to supply some of this information.

The agency also agreed to pre-test the attitude survey of Iowa City low-income residents it has drafted. Welsh told the members that they should be certain of the survey's accuracy.

"We can't rush into a project like this," he said.

Newark Violence Prompts Meeting

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Mayor Hugh Addonizio met with his special task force on community problems Thursday following a rock-throwing disturbance by more than 200 Negroes at a police station Wednesday night.

James Threatt, head of the city's Human Rights Commission, said the two-month-old task force, made up of some 30 members from civil rights groups, labor and business, would meet to investigate the factors leading to the incident and discuss corrective measures.

The disturbance started with the arrest of a Negro cab driver, John W. Smith, 40, who police said was tailgating a patrol car an then passed it on the right hand side.

DIPLOMAT CATCHES THIEF—
TOKYO (AP) The burglar who broke into French Consul Reginald Auckin's house last week didn't reckon on the consul's past as a cross-country runner. Discovered hiding behind a curtain when the Austins came home, the burglar fled down an alley. Austin, 44, caught him after a 500-yard chase.

Club Members Learn, Usually Earn

By TERRY TAYLOR

About 30 investment clubs in the Iowa City area are learning about the stock market and trying to make a profit at the same time.

At least that's the general idea according to Richard J. Hellman, D4, Waterloo, who is also a registered pharmacist and president of the Karies Klub, an investment club composed of dental students.

"Our primary purpose is to learn about the stock market and investments," Hellman says. "Although we do intend to make a profit, it doesn't always work that way."

The Karies Klub, formed in May, 1966, received a 22 per cent return on investments in its first year of operation. Hellman is quick to point out that the 22 per cent figure was composed of bad decisions as well as good ones.

"Boeing was our biggest boo-boo. We should have bought it, but we waited for the price to go down — instead it went up."

The Karies Klub, like most local investment clubs, meets monthly. Hellman said each of the 17 members contributes $5 a month to the investment fund. Stocks are bought and sold by majority decision of club members.

At each meeting three Karies Klub members report on two stocks and some phase of the stock market. Then club members discuss these and other stocks before making purchase decisions. The secretary-treasurer reports on stocks the club holds and prepares annual financial reports.

The Karies Klub used to meet at a local tavern, says Hellman, but has since moved its meeting place to the office of a local broker who handles club stocks and advises the club.

"The primary purpose is to learn," Hellman says. "Members use the financial reports and investment information located in the Phillips Hall business library and women members and at quite regularly."

The Karies Klub has holdings on the New York and American Stock Exchange, as well as holdings in several over-the-counter stocks.

Each member has an equal amount invested and an equal vote on purchasing and selling decisions. The worth of a member's investment in the club is the total worth of the club divided by the number of members at that time.

If a member wants to resign, he gets all of his investment plus profit, breaks even or takes a loss — depending on the rate of return on investments the club has made. If the club doesn't have enough cash to pay a resigning member, he would then have to pay the fee for the sale of stock plus a $1 penalty.

In addition to such clubs as the Karies Klub, there are investment clubs composed entirely of local business and professional men, clubs with both men and women members and at least one club composed entirely of housewives.

The Caveat Emptor Club meets monthly in the Jefferson Hotel, according to past president Robert B. Ogesen, a local dentist. Its name in Latin means "Let the buyer beware."

Ogesen says each member of the Caveat Emptor Club puts in $15 a month. The cash value of each member's equal share of the stock fluctuates from month to month.

The returns have been as high as 30 per cent on one stock, according to Ogesen. Although the club is currently on sound financial footing, it has at one time been in the red.

"We don't have too much local stock and have never tried any grain futures," Ogesen says. "We have tried to distribute stock to balance good reliable investments with speculative stocks. Originally the club had a strong tendency to be quite speculative. Now we are more conservative because members have more at stake."

Caveat Emptor club's long-term gain from stocks sold in 1966 was $12.61 per share. The club adds the income from dividends to the club investment fund after expenses are taken out.

A person wishing to join the Caveat Emptor Club must pay the amount paid by each of the charter members in order to preserve the equal membership status required by club regulations. According to Ogesen, the equal membership makes it easier for a member to get out of the club.

"The purpose of the Caveat Emptor Club is not to make a lot of money but to teach young business and professional men how to make investments," says Ogesen.

Another local men's investors club, the Professional Investors, meets monthly in members' homes. Club president Richard F. Houston, real estate salesman for the Means Agency, said members pay in $10 a month and add to that amount occasionally for special purchases.

Houston said most of the Professional Investors' holdings are on the stock exchange because in futures are too rapid.

There are stock stories as well as fish stories and most investment club members can tell a lot about the one that got away. The only difference is that they have figures to back their statements.

Houston reflected on a stock the Professional Investors wished they had brought. "At our first organizational meeting a member reported on a stock and we didn't buy it because it was too risky. That stock has since split three times and is worth much more than it was then. We finally bought in after the third split. We still made a profit but we missed a lot of earnings we would have had if we had bought the stock in 1962."

CONFESSING HIS LOVE to his landlady, Henry Strozier, A2, Atlanta, Ga., seems not to arouse too much enthusiasm from Marla Friedman, A3, Chicago. The scene is from the Summer Repertory Theatre's production, "The Underpants." The play is one of four to be presented in nightly rotation, except Sundays, through July 29.

German Play Depicts Culture Of Financial, Sexual Greed

"Basic human attitudes have not changed much since the pre-World War I era. People are as greedy — financially and sexually — as Sternheim portrayed them in his plays."

That is the opinion of David Schaal, associate professor of television, radio and film, and a director in the Summer Repertory Theatre.

Schaal is the director of Carl Sternheim's comedy "The Underpants," to be presented at 8 tonight in the University Theatre.

Schaal said that although Sternheim's comedies were written more than 50 years ago, they clearly depict present middle class society.

Schaal said the Sternheim is well known in Germany, but not outside his country.

"The Underpants" is the first play of a trilogy. In 1964 Schaal produced the second play, "The Snob," here. He said he hoped to direct "1913," the last part of the trilogy, soon.

The trilogy is the story of the Maske family, and the name is the key to understanding Sternheim's comment on the falseness of the middle class society. ("Die Maske" is German for "mask.")

"The Underpants" is the story of a young couple who take two roomers. Both men take an interest in Mrs. Maske, who is flattered by the attention. Nobody really knows where he stands with her, but life goes on happily.

Marla Friedman, A3, Chicago, plays the role of Mrs. Maske. She had a role in "Oh, What a Lovely War" at the University Theatre last year. Theobald Maske is played by Tal Russel, G, Carthage, Miss.

Henry E. Strozier, A2, Atlanta, Ga., and Donald L. Muench, A2, St. Louis, are the roomers. Rhonda Neswitz, A1, Chicago, and Raymond di Palma, G, North Kensington, Pa., complete the cast.

Band To Play Dear Old Way At Event Here

By STEVE RYERSON
For The Daily Iowan

The dear old tunes of the Gay '90s will regale the campus July 21.

"Your Father's Mustache," lauded as the "world's worst banjo band," will play songs reminiscent of that era, and a honky-tonk atmosphere will pervade the Union during two performances at 6 and 8:30 p.m. when the Main Lounge will be converted into the tenth member of the nationwide chain of Your Father's Mustache night clubs.

Waiters in straw hats and loud vests will add to the motif. Pop, hot dogs, and ice cream will be served.

Mustaches, hats, garters, other paraphernalia and the decor will follow the Gay '90s theme in an attempt to create an intoxicating sing-along atmosphere.

Band members will play two banjos, a trombone, a tuba, washboards and other instruments in such rollicking songs as "Beer Barrel Polka," "Rock-a-bye Your Baby with a Dixie Melody" and "Bill Bailey Won't You Please Come Home?"

Old time flicks will be shown during the breaks.

The mustache group has appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show and has recorded an album for RCA Victor.

Tickets may be purchased for $1.50 starting Monday at the Union Box Office and Whetstones' Drug Store.

Grad To Present Recital Thursday

David Martin, G, Mason City, will present a tuba recital at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in North Music Hall.

Martin will be accompanied by pianist Beverly Bakkum, A3, Waukon, and assisted by bassist Alan Peters, G, Des Moines.

The program includes "Sonata in G Major" by Benedetto Marcello, "Sonatina for Bass, Tuba and Piano" by Halsey Stevens, "Tuba Mirum" by P. Peter Sacco and "Suite Concertante" by Armand Russell. The last three compositions have been written in this decade.

89 Men Named To Fraternity Roll

Eighty-nine members of University social fraternities have been named to the Interfraternity Council President's Honor Roll for the spring semester.

Of the 21 men named honorees with highest distinction for earning gradepoint averages between 3.75 and 4.0, 12 had straight "A's."

Thirty-one men were named honorees with distinction for earning averages between 3.5 and 3.74, and 37 were named honorees for earning averages between 3.3 and 3.49.

Composers' Works By UI Musicians Played In Illinois

Works by three University composers are being performed at the Contemporary Music Festival at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana.

"Signs" by Edwin Harkins, G, Champaign, was performed Thursday. Harkins will be a member of the Center for New Music this fall.

Two movements from "Thesis," a work by William Hibbard, musical director of the Center for New Music, will be played for the first time Sunday.

"Lilacs" by Robert Shallenberg, assistant professor of music, will be performed for the first time by the music festival's choral ensemble July 23. Shallenberg directs the Electronics Music Studio.

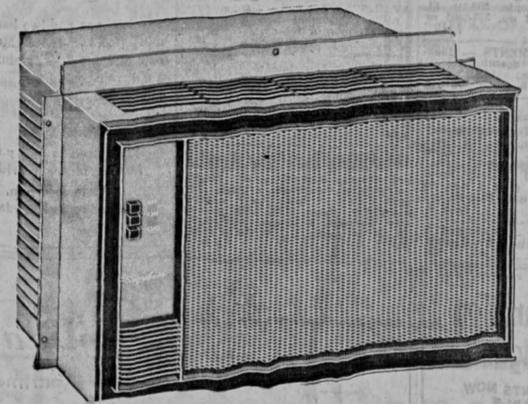

NURSING STUDENTS —

Thirty-five students in the College of Nursing have received letters of commendation from Dean Laura C. Duran for earning a 3.5 or higher grade average for the second semester of the 1966-67 academic year.
