Army Blocks Burial Of Slain Nazi Chief

Col. Eduard Schmidenpfeffer was buried in the Catholic Cemetery, 7 miles from the concentration camp he had commanded. The American-Nazi party president refused to change the burial site to meet requirements set by the United Nations. Before the burial, a military police officer said that 100 armed German soldiers surrounded the cemetery, and 100 armed U.S. soldiers guarded the graves. The ceremony was an event in the continuing conflict between the United States and Nazi groups in Europe.

George Lincoln Rockwell, gone and best forgotten, was a symbol of freedom

The death of American Nazi party leader George Lincoln Rockwell last week and the subsequent developments about whether he should be buried in a national cemetery with full military honors bring up some questions of politics which are probably more important than Rockwell's own ideology and beliefs.

Rockwell and his small band of followers are, in the strictest sense of the word, a small, though very vocal and effective group that is held in awe by some and rejected by others. The purpose of this article is not to judge Rockwell's activities or beliefs, but to discuss the problems in the United States. As was mentioned before, the fact that the American Nazi party is raising such a racket does not prevent even a moderate-minded citizen from realizing the fact that what is happening is not the end, but the beginning of something.

To the naked eye, it appears that the vast majority of the American society does not seem to care or give any importance to the party's plan to bury the body of George Lincoln Rockwell. But the party's plan is certainly not overlooked, with a fanatic zeal that is frightening.
