

—Move Branded As 'Calculated To Intimidate Negroes'—

Detroit Cops Laying In Their Own Arms - Just In Case

DETROIT (AP) — With traces of violence still lingering from the July riot, Detroit policemen are buying their own Army carbines in case of riot duty — a move a Negro leader attacked Friday as "calculated to intimidate Negroes."

"This is just another indication of what we've known all along," said the Rev. Albert B. Cleage Jr. "Police departments consider themselves the enemies of the black community."

Cleage, chairman of an all-Negro committee he helped set up to plan reconstruction of areas wrecked in the July 23-30 riot, angrily called for city officials to halt the purchase of Army weapons.

"This is outrageous, ridiculous and absurd," Cleage said in an interview. "They are buying these weapons and it is obvious to assume they will use any weapons they want to. They intend to function independent of the police commissioner and the mayor."

Police Commissioner Ray Girardin said the department has about 700 rifles and shotguns, "probably one of the largest inventories in the country, but that's not enough for full-scale warfare."

During the riot, he said, half the city's 4,400-man police force was on duty at the same time and policemen had to borrow hundreds of rifles from gun stores.

Girardin said the department is trying to increase its weapons inventory. "Meanwhile, I have no objection to men getting bargains on rifles," he said.

Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh could not be reached for comment.

Carl Parsell, president of the 2,700-member Detroit Police Officers Association, said about 400 patrolmen had bought carbines and about 2,000 more were on a waiting list.

The policemen pay a $5 membership fee to the National Rifle Association, pledge to use the weapons for "civilian marksmanship programs which promote practice in the use of rifled arms," and then pay $20 for the government surplus carbines, compared to $60 through commercial outlets, Parsell said.

Parsell said the policemen "feel they were not adequately armed in the riot area and this is the only way we can do it."

"We need these rifles to fight riots and the department doesn't have enough to go around," he said.

Ironically, the rifle group uses the membership fee in its general fund, from which it finances lobbying against fire-arms control bills in Congress.

The carbine, a World War II and Korean War favorite of combat soldiers, is a lightweight weapon with a short range, ideal for gunfire clashes in close quarters.

While Detroit has had no major outbreak of violence since a Sunday in July erupted in destruction that claimed 43 lives, minor incidents of trouble have flared repeatedly.

In August, Deputy Fire Chief Rolland McFadden reported, there were 142 incendiary fires in Detroit, triple the normal rate, and 33 of these were confirmed to have been set by gasoline fire bombs.

"This is one of the meanest kinds of fires," McFadden said. "It starts full speed. When the gasoline hits and the wick sets her off, she just blows."

He blamed the continued fire-bombing, mostly in a few East Side sections and the near West Side area where riot damage was most severe, on "young adolescents trying to follow the example set by their elders during the rioting."

Firemen have been plagued with threats of violence, too, and this week police were ordered to accompany firemen on emergency runs into the riot areas.

Earl J. Berry, president of the 1,850-member Detroit Fire Fighters Association, said in one case firemen had a heart attack victim on a stretcher when a Negro crowd formed and tried to keep them from getting out of a building. Fire Chief Charles Quinlan reports that firemen withdrew from blazes 283 times during the riot because they were being thrown at or shot at.

Berry said many firemen want to arm themselves, and rumor has it some firemen are carrying weapons. Quinlan last week reminded his men that the law forbids them from carrying weapons.

The Record Bureau at Detroit Police Headquarters says 95 pistols were stolen in Detroit in August, up from 79 in August of last year.

The bureau says 2,498 pistols, rifles and shotguns were stolen during the riot. The Robbery Bureau, with the August figures on stolen rifles and shotguns, declined to divulge them.

It is known, however, that at least two gun stores have been robbed in the past month, and the owners reported 600 weapons missing.

50 March On Milwaukee City Hall

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A march to City Hall Friday by about 50 demonstrators, including four nuns and 10 clergymen, initiated Milwaukee's 19th consecutive day of the marathon campaign for a city open housing law.

Meanwhile in other developments, Mayor Henry Maier accused the Rev. James E. Groppi, adviser of the NAACP's Milwaukee Youth Council, of deliberately provoking the violence that erupted several times in recent nights between all-white crowds and police on the South Side.

"He got just the reaction he sought," Maier said, referring to the marches led into the area earlier by Groppi, who has kept the NAACP marchers from the area — since police had to rescue them from a brief foray Monday.

Roman Catholic Archbishop William E. Cousins, who told white demonstrators Wednesday that while he didn't agree with all of Groppi's methods "we support the same just cause," asked the priests ministering to the 700,000 Catholics in his charge for support in the controversy.

Several priests have appeared with white demonstrators, and numerous clergymen have marched regularly with Groppi and the Youth Council.

On the near South Side, 32 stores had been boarded up Friday in a four-block stretch where the violence between white crowds and police trying to control them has been concentrated. One residence also had its windows protected.

Hugo Rondeau, owner of a men's wear shop, said, "People are afraid to come out on the street."

Viet Runner-Up Faces Jail Term; Verdict Decried

SAIGON (AP) — A civilian who finished second in the recent presidential elections was sentenced Friday to six months in prison and fined $27,711. He promptly blamed the verdict on government pressure and announced he would appeal.

Truong Dinh Dzu, a 50-year-old lawyer who now is the government's most outspoken critic, was convicted of writing a bad check in 1962 and of illegally transferring money to an American bank last year.

The government-appointed judge in Saigon's criminal court, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Ve, sentenced Dzu to three months on the check charge and six months on the currency charge, the sentences to run concurrently. Dzu was not in court for the trial.

Many U.S. officials were plainly unhappy about Dzu's conviction. While not commenting publicly, they made clear they felt it unfortunate the government decided to press the charge at this time.

Dzu has been chief critic of the election of Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu and Premier Nguyen Cao Ky to the presidency and vice presidency, charging the vote was rigged.

The first charge against him involved a $8,474 check that bounced, back in the days of President Ngo Dinh Diem. Dzu said Friday the check bounced because his foe Diem froze his bank account. He added that friends had made good the check.

The second charge was that he illegally transferred $11,500 to the Bank of America in San Francisco. Dzu declared the money never came from Vietnam but was deposited by "American friends who are paying for my children's education."

Drastic Housing Revisions Urged By University Group

COUNCIL BLUFFS (AP) — A faculty-student committee at the University of Iowa suggested wholesale revision of housing regulations Friday to give upper classmen and adults freedom to live where they please.

In a study prepared for Pres. Howard Bowen, the committee said dormitory life "is adolescent and a general hindrance to self reliance and intellectual maturity."

But the committee said the dormitory system should be retained for younger students who are least resistant to social regulations and most in need of security.

Bowen presented the 244-page study to the Board of Regents without comment. He said he would make his own recommendations later. The board accepted it for review.

Single Rooms Proposed
For students in upper classes and over 21 the committee proposed single rooms, apartments or suites in university housing and an end to rules governing off-campus quarters.

It said faculty members might join students over a wide age range in occupying a single housing community.

The University should drop its paternal role in the matter, the committee said, because of "basic changes in American society, greater permissiveness toward youth and the restiveness students everywhere show toward social restrictions."

In a six-month study, begun in January, the committee conducted a survey among some students, parents, faculty and alumni.

It also visited Stephens College, Indiana University, Michigan State University, The University of Michigan, Illinois Institute of Technology, and Wesleyan University in order to see what those institutions do about student housing.

A seminar featuring well-known architects, educational historians and educational administrators was sponsored by the committee in May.

Bowen commissioned the special housing study at a time when several factors had combined to cause a reconsideration of housing plans on the campus.

Student Tastes Changing
Bowen pointed out then that private enterprise had built hundreds of new living units in the city, that student tastes in housing were veering away from conventional dormitories and the student body make-up was shifting toward more older students in graduate and professional schools.

Royce Beckett, professor of mechanics and hydraulics, was chairman of the committee when the study was made. Other members, representing faculty were Eva Erickson, associate professor of nursing; Willis D. Poland, acting director, University Counseling Service, and Robert Sayre, associate professor of English.

Students on the committee were Jay Eaton, B3, Waukon; Jay Hamilton, L3, Hampton; Jan Meiches, A3, Omaha; and Frank Renner, A4, Bartonville, Ill.

$158 Million Wage Hike Set For Railroad Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House board recommended Friday a compulsory $158 million wage package for 137,000 railroad workers. The industry branded it "clearly inflationary."

The board's recommendations, praised by President Johnson, would give the rail shopercraft workers a two-year total of 11 per cent in general wage hikes plus 20 cents an hour in special skill increases for most of them.

Johnson called the board's recommendations in the sticky rail dispute "one of the finest products" ever handed down by a presidential panel.

The wage hikes set by the board will become mandatory in 30 days unless the railroads and six shopercraft unions reach a voluntary agreement. A voluntary settlement is viewed as highly unlikely.

The board's recommendations gave the unions in large measure what they had demanded, but cut down the initial cost by spreading the pay raises over two years.

"From our initial examination of it, we conclude that it is clearly inflationary and that it cannot be supported by the evidence that was made available to the special board," said chief railroad negotiator John P. Hiltz Jr.

Industry spokesmen declined to say whether a court appeal is planned.

But Hiltz said the board's recommendations raise the question whether they meet the criteria set up by the Congress passed in July to halt a two-day nationwide strike of the shopercraft workers.

He said the law requires a settlement "in the public interest" that is "fair and equitable" to both sides and protects the collective bargaining process.

Hurricane Doria Heads For Coast

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Erratic Hurricane Doria executed a loop over the Atlantic Friday and bore down on the Maryland-Virginia coast line with winds of 90 miles an hour.

At 10 p.m., the Weather Bureau in Washington recommended evacuation of all residents of the east coast outer banks from Delaware south to Cape Charles, Va., at the southern end of Chesapeake Bay.

Indications were the center of Doria would come ashore at Wallops Island, Va. — site of a National Aeronautics and Space Administration installation — about 8 a.m. today.

The Weather Bureau located the dangerous hurricane at 10 p.m. about 125 miles east of the Maryland-Virginia border.

Physics Center Addition To Be Built

COUNCIL BLUFFS (AP) — With funds granted recently by the Legislature and the federal government, the University of Iowa will soon begin building a $2.4 million addition to its Physics Research Center. Preliminary plans and budget for the addition were approved by the Board of Regents here Friday.

At the same time the regents gave approval to development of a general purpose research facility at the State Sanatorium at Oakdale in order to provide space for scientific research.

The Oakdale project calls for construction of a one-story metal building which can be adapted on the inside to the needs of specific research projects in the College of Dentistry, for which there are funds but no space at the present time.

Intended for undergraduate instruction in physics and astronomy, the proposed seven-floor physics addition will be added to the east end of the new Physics Research Center. Two lecture rooms of 150- and 300-seat capacity will extend south of the addition with a lobby entrance from Iowa Avenue.

The board also accepted two federal grants totaling $739,497, which will be combined with a 1967 legislative appropriation of $1,710,000 to meet the preliminary budget of $2,449,497, less equipment.

The addition is the first to receive preliminary plan approval among four major buildings planned by the University with funds from the recent legislature.

Architects Selected
The Dubuque firm of Durrant, Deiniger, Dommer, Kramer and Gordon was selected to provide architectural services as final plans are drawn and preparations are made for bidding on construction. Completion of the building is expected in 1970.

The new addition will be shared by the Department of Physics and Astronomy and the science education program. Science education will be housed on the fourth floor and the astronomy department will be on the top floor on roof. The large lecture rooms and other general assignment classrooms will be available for use by all campus departments.

In addition to offices and shops, the building will contain 10 classrooms, 12 seminar rooms, 21 small laboratories, and three science education laboratories. Design of the addition will be similar to that of the Physics Research Center.

Since completion of the Physics Research Center in 1965, the faculty, graduate students and research facilities of the Department of Physics and Astronomy have been separated from the undergraduate division, which stayed in the old physics building, now called the Mathematical Sciences Building.

90,000 Square Feet
The undergraduate physics program now occupies 23,600 square feet of space. This addition will contain 90,000 square feet. The science education program is now in a converted residence where improvised laboratories without gas or water supplies must be used.

The regents also approved a landscaping project for another University building which is being completed. It is the newly named Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center west of General Hospital. The $35,000 project includes walks, curbs, retaining walls, lighting and the planting of trees and evergreen shrubs.

The preliminary budget for the first of the Oakdale research facility buildings is $90,000. The building will contain 5,280 square feet of floor space. Funds for construction and some interior finishing will come from state capital appropriations ($75,000), income from the University dental clinic ($8,000), and a U.S. Public Health Service research grant to the College of Dentistry ($7,000).

The construction will be planned and supervised by the University Architect's Office. Completion of the building is expected in a few months.

SPACE AVAILABLE for undergraduate instruction in physics at the University, will be more than doubled when this proposed addition to the Physics Research Center is completed in 1970. Preliminary plans for the $2.4 million structure were approved

Friday by the Board of Regents. This drawing shows entrance to lecture halls with two of the seven floors of the building visible above.

Railroads accused of aiding end of passenger train service

Anthony Haswell, the executive director of the National Association of Railroad Passengers, has said he has information that the Union Pacific and Santa Fe railroads are planning drastic reductions in their passenger service.

Haswell says he has been told that the Union Pacific's passenger service would be reduced to one train a day over the entire system and the Santa Fe would be left with only a fraction of its nearly 20 passenger runs now in operation.

A recent experience of mine on the Union Pacific's City of Portland streamliner gives me reason to believe that Haswell's information is correct. My impression was that the railroad no longer cared about the conditions on that train.

The cars on the train were showing signs of age and the lack of maintenance. They were dirty and needed paint and refurbishing on the inside. The windows had not been washed in a long time; they were so dirty in one coach that it was virtually impossible to enjoy the scenery outside. The restrooms stank.

The automatic doors on many of the cars no longer operated properly. The cooling units in at least three of the ten cars worked erratically: one of the dome cars periodically was hot and stuffy, then was uncomfortably cold. In one of the coaches it was in excess of 120 degrees, because the heat was on and could not be shut off, the cooling would not operate and the outside temperature was in the 90s.

Although there were attempts to repair the various air conditioning failures, only a few were successful. The hot coach was, of course, unbearable during the day. But during the night, when the temperature in it did fall to only about 100 degrees, the passengers assigned to it were expected to sleep there because the train was full and there was no other place to go. The dome and lounge cars were closed at midnight.

Furthermore, the train's attendants, although claiming to be sympathetic with the plight of the uncomfortable passengers, seemed to be taking very little action to do something about it. They were nice enough, and maybe they couldn't do anything, but niceness meant little to a passenger in that car who had paid for what he thought would be a comfortable seat for the day-and-a-half trip from Denver to Portland.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has proposed that the entire intercity rail passenger network be surveyed to determine which trains should be designated as part of a National Rail Passenger System.

Such a system would facilitate the coordination of existing passenger service so that the trains running under its control would operate over routes assuring a maximum of patronage. Substantial savings would supposedly be made by common use of facilities and elimination of duplications in service.

Haswell's group is a non-profit organization devoted to the preservation and improvement of rail passenger service. Its members and some other persons argue that long distance passenger trains offer unique advantages over other types of transportation including all-weather operation and the opportunity to relax and view scenery without the tensions and dangers of highway travel. They support the ICC proposal.

Such a plan should be given careful consideration and probably tested as a last resort before the termination of all long-distance passenger service. It may also be worthwhile for government or corporations to support passenger trains by financing the losses, if this means of transportation has a logical social purpose.

But I suspect many of the people working to save the passenger trains are doing so for purely sentimental reasons. Sentiment does not seem to justify the maintenance of long-distance passenger runs.

Anyone for hamburger

PARIS — I almost had dinner with the Vice-President of the United States, Lyndon B. Johnson, and it was almost one of the greatest evenings I ever spent in Paris.

This is what happened. The Vice-President and his wife had arrived to spend one day and night in Paris and had asked a very poor friend of theirs, who also happens to be a very good friend of mine, if he would select a restaurant to give the dinner. My friend called me up and said: "How would you like to have dinner with the Vice-President of the United States and his wife?"

I said it would be nice. "Well, I haven't cleared it with them yet, but I'm sure it will be all right. What restaurant should we dine at?"

"Why don't you reserve at Novy's? It's got White Russian music and a nice wild atmosphere."

"Good idea," he said. "Where shall we meet?" I asked excitedly.

"At the ambassador's."

"What ambassador?" I asked.

"Haven't you been invited to the cocktail party the American ambassador is giving for the Vice-President?"

"No," I said.

"Well, I'll call the embassy and tell them you're going to have dinner with the Vice-President and I'm sure they'll invite you."

"Gee, that's swell," I said.

I couldn't wait to telephone my wife and tell her. But she wasn't home and I told our maid, Danielle, to tell my wife as soon as she came in that instead of eating hamburgers, we were having dinner with the Vice-President of the United States.

Then I went out to lunch and told every one I met I couldn't have dinner with them that night because I was dining with the Lyndon Johnsons.

In the meantime my wife had come home and when Danielle told my wife about our dinner plans, she dashed out of the house and rushed off to Alexandre's, the famous Paris coiffeur, to get her hair done. Alexandre's is a very fashionable place and you can't get in without an appointment. But when my wife explained she was going to have dinner with the Vice-President of the United States, they threw a duchess out the window and gave my wife her chair.

Meanwhile, back at the office, I was reading up on protocol and the great Vice-Presidents of our country when the phone rang. It was my friend and he was so embarrassed he could hardly talk. It seems the Johnsons had insisted on a small dinner party, made up of just their friends, and he said he couldn't invite me.

"That's okay," I said, trying to keep my tears away from the mouthpiece. "Let's do it some other time."

"I'm terribly sorry," he said. "I should have asked them before I asked you."

"Really, it's nothing," I blubbered. "I'll be happy to stay home and read a good book."

Five minutes later my wife called up, deliciously happy. "Hi," she said. "This is quite a day. One minute we're going to eat hamburgers at home and the next we're going out with the Vice-President of the United States."

"Wait a minute, social climber!" I shouted. Then I explained what had happened.

"But what will I tell them the next time I go to Alexandre's?" she cried.

"You can fake it. They'll never know."

"What about Danielle? She's told everyone in the neighborhood. What can I tell her?"

"Tell her . . . tell her . . . not to throw out the hamburgers."

The smashing tailors of Beersheba

WASHINGTON — There has been a great deal of excitement in the United States and Israel over suspicions that Israel might be working on the development of an atomic bomb.

United States State Department officials are reportedly furious at the Israelis, because when they built their atomic energy plant 20 miles outside of Beersheba, they told the United States it was a textile plant. The United States was kept in the dark until recently, when CIA photographs revealed that the building wasn't what it was cracked up to be.

It was just by chance that the Americans didn't find out the secret six months ago.

It seems that an important American diplomat stationed in Israel needed a new suit. Since someone told him about the new textile plant, he decided to go out there to see if he could possibly get one wholesale.

As he drove south toward Beersheba, Israeli intelligence agents were alerted and a half-hour before he arrived the head of the atomic energy plant was notified that an American was coming to buy a suit.

A hurried conference was called with the other scientists to decide what to do. They were afraid that if they refused him entrance he might get suspicious and start prying into the plant. So the scientists agreed the only sensible thing to do was to let the diplomat in and pretend that nothing was going on.

ART BUCHWALD

The scientists removed their white smocks, rolled up their sleeves and stuck pins and needles in their vests.

When the American diplomat arrived, he was immediately ushered into a large room where he saw men cutting suit forms out of asbestos patterns.

The head of the plant greeted the diplomat.

"What can I do for you, sir?" he asked.

"I was wondering if I could buy a suit wholesale."

The head of the plant said, "Perhaps you would like something in cobalt blue? Or maybe a nice uranium brown? How about a cosmic double-breasted, with pin-striped particles? It's the latest thing."

"No," said the diplomat, "I don't want anything flashy. You wouldn't have a light gray flannel?"

"Perhaps," the head of the plant replied. "Please, let us take your measurements. Just go into the fitting room behind that six-foot wall of lead and take off your clothes."

The diplomat went in. "These fitting rooms are very well protected," he said.

The head of the plant smiled. "Our customers like privacy, and there's so much activity around here that we don't like things to pile up. Just a minute while I call the fitter. Shimshon, would you please come in with the measuring instruments."

One of the scientists rushed in with a geiger counter, a slide rule and two robot arms. The head of the plant took a pad and said:

"Shimshon, call off the customer's measurements."

Shimshon yelled out, "Ten, nine, eight, seven, six, five, four, three, two, one, O!"

"Enough with the jokes, Shimshon," the supervisor said angrily. "Let's have some measurements."

"What about the lapels?" the diplomat wanted to know.

"Don't worry," Shimshon said, "we'll smash them down if they're too large."

Shimshon measured the pants and then the diplomat put on his clothes again.

"All right," the diplomat said. "Can I charge it?"

"Negative or positive?" the head of the plant wanted to know.

"I don't care," the diplomat said.

"When should I come for my next fitting?"

The head of the plant said, "Why should you, an important man, drive to Beersheba again? Our trailer from our retail store in Tel Aviv will call on you. But please, kind sir, do not tell your friends about us because we have too much work now, and if we take any more orders the plant will explode."

"Money buys happiness"

WASHINGTON — All my life I've been told you can't buy happiness and I must say I used to believe it. But lately I've changed my mind.

Money can buy happiness and usually does.

Take my friends, the Schmicks. They're poor, honest, hard-working people. All they have is each other and they're miserable.

Then take my friends, the Smugs — he's a banker, she inherited money from her father. They live on Park Avenue in the winter and Westhampton in the summer, unless they go abroad. Everything they do costs money, and you won't find two happier people anywhere.

The Schmicks live in a small apartment in Brooklyn in the winter, and they vacation in the same small apartment in Brooklyn in the summer. When they really get desperate, they go to Far Rockaway for a swim.

Once Schmick said to me, "We may not have all the comforts and pleasures of the rich, but do you think that makes us unhappy? You bet your sweet life it does."

The Smugs, on the other hand, wouldn't have it any other way.

Smug told me one night when he had a few drinks too many:

"You know, when I was young I was in love with a poor girl who worked as a secretary. I was poor, too, and we were going to get married. Then I met my wife, who was rich, so I decided to marry her. You know something? I bumped into that poor girl a few weeks ago and she had gone all to pieces. It takes money for a woman to keep looking young. I was sure glad I married the rich girl."

When it comes to children, the Smugs and Schmicks also differ.

Smug told me, "We have two children. We've given them the best of everything. Private schools, riding lessons, tennis lessons, catered parties — we've bought everything for them that money will buy and they're smart, happy, contented children."

Schmick, on the other hand, told me, "We haven't been able to give our children anything but love and devotion — and they hate us."

Smug told me, "I've tried to impress on the children the importance of being rich and the great benefits that can be derived from having money. They know exactly what I'm talking about and they respect me for my wisdom."

Schmick said, "I tell my kids money isn't everything. There are some values in life that are much more important, such as love, friendship and family. And you know what they do? They go around the neighborhood and tell everyone, 'Our pop is nuts.'"

"Who is Ken?"

She showed me the catalog. Sure enough, there was a doll named Ken, the same size as Barbie, with crew-cut hair, a vinyl plastic chest and movable arms and legs.

"If you don't get Ken," my daughter cried, "Barbie will grow up to be an old maid."

So I went and bought Ken ($3.50). Ken needed a tuxedo ($5), a raincoat ($2.50), a Terry cloth robe and an electric razor ($2), tennis shoes ($3), pajamas ($1.50), and several single-breasted suits ($27).

Pretty soon I had put up $400 to protect my original $3 investment.

Then one evening my daughter came in with a shocker.

"Barbie and Ken are getting married. Here is the list of wedding clothes they'll need as well as a picture of Barbie's dream house."

"Seven ninety-five for a house?" I shouted. "Why can't they live on a shelf like the rest of your dolls?"

The tears started to flow. "They want to live together as man and wife."

Well, Barbie and Ken are now happily married and living in their dream house with $3,000 worth of clothes hanging in the closet. I wish I could say that all was well, but yesterday my daughter announced that Midge ($3), put out by the same toy firm, was coming to visit them. And she doesn't have a thing to wear.

Copyright (c) 1967, The Washington Post Co.

came up to the table and joined the man. He kissed her on both cheeks.

"There!" said Elms. "That's his game. He's a gigolo."

"No," I said. "It looks more like she's his mother."

"Maybe so," he grunted, "but it's typical of him. He makes his mother meet him on the Via Veneto instead of going to her house. He's too important to visit her. She has to visit him."

I started getting angry, too. "A man should have more respect for his mother."

"Did you notice?" Elms said. "He hasn't even asked her what she wants to drink. She probably walked up from the bottom of the Spanish Steps, but do you think he cares?"

"Now the waiter is bringing his mother a drink. It looks like a period," Elms said. "She's become an alcoholic because of him."

"Do you think he'll pay for it?" I asked.

"Not if he can help it," Elms said. "He'll probably think of some excuse and stick her with the check. After all, he's been doing it all his life."

A man stopped by at the table to say hello.

Elms became furious. "He doesn't even bother to introduce him to his mother. He's ashamed of her."

"After all she did for him!" I said, slamming my glass on the table.

"He's inviting the fellow to sit down. Can you imagine introducing your mother to a type like that?"

"No," I said, boiling. "I have a good mind to go over and poke him in the nose."

Elms suddenly relaxed and seemed to lose interest in the whole thing. He said to me quietly, "Forget it. It's only a game."

Why fathers go broke

WASHINGTON — I have nothing against toy companies. In their own way, they bring happiness to the hearts of our young ones and they give employment to thousands of people all over the country. It is only when they try to bankrupt us that I feel we should speak out. If my situation is duplicated around the nation, every father who has a daughter between the ages of 4 and 12 is going to have to apply for relief. This is what happened:

My 7-year-old daughter requested, 4 months ago, a Barbie doll. Now, as far as I'm concerned, one doll is just like another and since the Barbie doll costs only $3 I was happy to oblige.

I brought the doll home and thought nothing more of it until a week later my daughter came in and said, "Barbie needs a negligee."

"So does your mother," I replied.

"But there is one in the catalog for only $3," she cried.

"What catalog?"

"The one that came with the doll."

I grabbed the catalog and, much to my horror, discovered what the sellers of Barbie were up to. They'll let you have the doll for $3, but you have to buy clothes for her at an average of $3 a crack. They have about 200 outfits, from ice-skating skirts to mink jackets, and a girl's status in the community is based on how many Barbie clothes she has for her doll.

The first time I took my daughter to the store I spent $3 on a dress for her and $25 to outfit her Barbie doll.

A week later my daughter came in and said, "Barbie wants to be an airline stewardess."

"So let her be an airline stewardess," I said.

"She needs a uniform. It's only $3.50."

I gave her the $3.50.

Barbie didn't stay a stewardess long. She decided she wanted to be a nurse ($3), then a singer in a night club ($3), then a professional dancer ($3).

One day my daughter walked in and said, "Barbie's lonely."

"Let her join a sorority," I said.

"She wants Ken."

"Who is Ken?"

She showed me the catalog. Sure enough, there was a doll named Ken, the same size as Barbie, with crew-cut hair, a vinyl plastic chest and movable arms and legs.

"If you don't get Ken," my daughter cried, "Barbie will grow up to be an old maid."

So I went and bought Ken ($3.50). Ken needed a tuxedo ($5), a raincoat ($2.50), a Terry cloth robe and an electric razor ($2), tennis shoes ($3), pajamas ($1.50), and several single-breasted suits ($27).

Pretty soon I had put up $400 to protect my original $3 investment.

Then one evening my daughter came in with a shocker.

"Barbie and Ken are getting married. Here is the list of wedding clothes they'll need as well as a picture of Barbie's dream house."

"Seven ninety-five for a house?" I shouted. "Why can't they live on a shelf like the rest of your dolls?"

The tears started to flow. "They want to live together as man and wife."

Well, Barbie and Ken are now happily married and living in their dream house with $3,000 worth of clothes hanging in the closet. I wish I could say that all was well, but yesterday my daughter announced that Midge ($3), put out by the same toy firm, was coming to visit them. And she doesn't have a thing to wear.

2 New University Buildings Named For Faculty Scholars

COUNCIL BLUFFS — The names of two prominent scholars have been given to new buildings at the University by the Board of Regents.

The Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center has been named for the professor of speech pathology and psychology who taught at the University for 35 years before his death in 1965. The Spence Laboratories of Psychology have been named for Kenneth W. Spence, head of the Department of Psychology for 22 years, who died last January.

Johnson was known internationally as an authority on stuttering, an affliction he suffered as a young man when he studied at the University's pioneering Speech Pathology and Audiology Department.

Stuttering Studied

His work established Iowa as the world center for the study and treatment of stuttering.

Spence was on the University faculty from 1938 to 1964, heading the Department of Psychology from 1942 on. His main research interests and contributions were in the learning process in humans and animals.

In 1956 he was among the first three persons to receive the Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award from the American Psychological Association.

From 1964 until his death he was professor of psychology at the University of Texas in Austin.

The three-story Johnson Speech and Hearing Center, located on Woolf Avenue, will consolidate offices and laboratories of the Speech Pathology and Audiology Department, some of which are now in East Hall and two former residences on Melrose Avenue.

$2 Million Spent

Besides the hearing testing suites and offices, the Center includes an anechoic chamber with control room, an acoustic phonetics laboratory, electronics and mechanical shops and a lecture room seating 150. Construction cost of the building was $1,500,000, and moving and equipment costs are to be $494,000.

The Department of Speech is expected to occupy the new building next week, and dedication will follow in a few months.

The five-story Spence Laboratories building adjoins East Hall on Iowa Avenue. It will house graduate research laboratories when moved.

The building includes an electronic shop, a data-processing and computer room, animal rooms and offices for the Center for Research in Learning.

Construction cost of the building was $1,388,000, and moving and equipment costs are to total $192,634.

War Orphans Can Get Aid For Education

DES MOINES — Children of deceased Iowa war veterans enrolled in Iowa colleges are eligible to receive financial assistance for their schooling, State Treasurer Paul Franzburg announced recently.

Franzburg, chairman of the Iowa Bonus Board, said that applications are being received for assistance made possible by the $55,000 annual appropriation made by the 1967 Legislature.

Orphans of World Wars I and II, the Korean and Vietnamese conflicts, who have completed high school or its equivalent and have lived in Iowa for the past two years will be considered.

The aid will be given without consideration of age, financial conditions, scholastic ability or the school or college attended. The aid, which cannot exceed $300 per person per year, can be used for tuition, books, board and room or related expenses while attending an Iowa university, college, junior college, school of nursing, business school or trade school.

Applications are available through the Iowa Bonus Board, in care of the State Capitol.

Grant Winner Seeks Leave

A professor of journalism has applied for a leave of absence from the University after receiving a $10,000 federal grant for publishing.

He is Harry Duncan, who teaches several typography courses. Duncan is one of three Iowa City-area recipients of the $10,000 grants awarded by the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities. Only 11 such grants were made in the nation. The grants were announced Friday.

Duncan said Friday night that there were no regulations on how he is to use the $10,000. He said he had to report next August on how he spent the money.

Duncan has applied for a leave of absence during the coming spring and summer sessions. He said he planned to publish several books, including some volumes of poetry.

He would like to have the books well-illustrated, Duncan said. And he will probably publish some translations from French.

Woman's Condition Critical Following 2-Car Collision

An Iowa City woman remained in critical condition Friday night following a two-car collision late Thursday night at Keokuk Street and the Highway 6 Bypass in which Mrs. Mary Vitosh was killed.

Mrs. Vitosh, 74, of 1303 First Ave., was killed instantly when the car in which she was riding was in collision with one driven by Max Ellyson, 40, of 910 Wylde Green Rd.

The driver of the other car, Mrs. Mary Roberts, 73, of 2029 1 St., remained in critical condition with multiple skull fractures. Ellyson was treated and released Friday morning.

The collision was the second fatal traffic accident to occur at that intersection in 15 weeks.

City Manager Frank R. Smiley said Friday that although there are no plans to install signal lights at the intersection, lights soon will be installed at Linn Street and Highway 6, one intersection to the west of the site of Thursday night's accident.

Funeral services for Mrs. Vitosh will be held at the George L. Gay Funeral Home at 2 p.m. today. She had worked for several years at Barbara's Bake Shop.

The Keokuk-Bypass intersection is marked by stop signs and the speed limit posted there is 45 miles per hour.

Police said the car driven by Mrs. Roberts was going north across the highway and was struck on the right side by the Ellyson car. It was raining at the time of the accident.

The accident was the second fatal collision in Johnson County in two days, and it raised the county's traffic toll to 17, two more than at the same time last year.

Hearing Set On Paving At U-Heights

UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS — An informal public hearing on the paving on Melrose Avenue through University Heights will be held Oct. 12.

Mayor Chan F. Coulter said Friday the hearing, to be held as part of a regular City Council meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Presbyterian Church, has been called to discuss whether the avenue should be paved, how wide the paving might be and whether sidewalks should be included in the project.

Iowa City has termed the paving of four lanes on Melrose Avenue a necessity to orderly development. Iowa City plans to build a new six-lane bridge over the Iowa River at Melrose Avenue.

The City Council, in other action Thursday, ordered a study of street lighting in the suburb to see if more lights should be installed.

At the meeting, Councilman William J. Hausler Jr. declined to take out nomination papers to seek re-election. He said he wanted more time to consider running again.

Councilmen David L. Armstrong, James T. Bradbury and Herbert Locksley, as well as Coulter, have taken out nomination papers. Councilman Joseph Noone has said he will not run again.

Ford, UAW Begin Talks

DETROIT (AP) — For the first time since a strike began nine days earlier, bargaining teams from Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers resumed contract negotiations.

The only major development in the meeting that lasted two hours and 15 minutes was an agreement to meet again Monday, after which both sides said they assumed there would be daily meetings.

A strike which has idled 160,000 Ford workers across the country erupted primarily over wage and fringe benefits demands which the UAW hopes to win at Ford and then take to Chrysler and General Motors for matching or bettering.

Ken Bannan, UAW Ford director, said the union handed the company a list of so-called non-economic issues it proposes to take up before getting back to wages and fringes, and that it was agreed grievance procedures would be the subject of Monday's bargaining.

County To Handle Gatewood Case

The prosecution of a man accused of murdering his wife Sept. 5 will be handled in Johnson County.

Robert W. Janssen, Johnson County attorney, said Friday that Wesley J. Gatewood, 45, of rural Palo, would be prosecuted by Johnson County authorities. Gatewood is accused of murdering his wife Ruby. Her body was found at Lake Macbride.

Janssen said that evidence indicated the victim died in Johnson County. There had been indications that she might have died in Linn County.

2 Dental Deans Promoted

COUNCIL BLUFFS — The Board of Regents Friday approved the change in appointment of two assistant deans at the University College of Dentistry to associate deans, effective immediately.

They are Dr. Jess Hayden Jr., who is also research coordinator, and Dr. Richard M. Jacobs, who is also curriculum coordinator.

Hayden practiced dentistry in Eugene, Ore., from 1947-1951 and received his Ph.D. in anatomy at Loma Linda University where he was a professor of anatomy before coming to the University.

Jacobs has received a doctorate from Maximilian University in Munich, Germany; a D.D.S. from New York University; a masters degree in public health from the Medical College of Virginia, and an M.S. in orthodontics from the University of Illinois.

Prior to coming to the University, Jacobs was head of the Department of Orthodontics at the University of British Columbia.

Community Givers has set a goal of $146,621 for its 1967 drive. The goal this year is 11 per cent above last year's.

Community Givers provides funds to 15 agencies. In 1966, $116,575 was raised. The goal then was $125,000.

Three agencies which received funds from the combined drive last year have dropped out of the organization. They are the Council on Social Work Education, the Iowa Welfare Association and the United Cerebral Palsy Center. Each received $100 or less from last year's drive.

The agencies budgeted in this year's drive and their budgeted amounts are:

Peace Talks Renew In N.Y.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Efforts aimed at ending crippling teachers strikes in two of the nation's giant school systems were under way Friday as Detroit teachers agreed to vote on binding arbitration and both sides in the New York dispute agreed to renew peace talks.

Leaders of striking Detroit teachers set a Sunday vote on whether to accept binding arbitration of their salary dispute, despite shouts from some teachers to "turn it down now."

In New York, the contempt trial of Pres. Albert Shanker and his two top aides in the AFL-CIO United Federation of Teachers was adjourned and renewed peace talks were scheduled to begin today with Mayor John V. Lindsay taking part.

Including these students will broaden the base for training teachers in special education by the College of Education, University officials said. The county board will pay for the training to defray the cost of the program.

In another action the regents authorized the University to purchase the property at 16 W. Harrison Street from Orion L. Frantz for $6,563. The property is in an area of future campus expansion where several other properties have been purchased recently by the University.

Theater Selects Season's Plays

"Finian's Rainbow," "Night of the Iguana," "Anastasia" and "The Marriage-Go-Round" will be presented by the Iowa City Community Theater this season, Pres. June Braverman announced Friday.

The plays will be presented from November through May, with "Finian's Rainbow" starting Nov. 7.

The theater will hold its fall membership drive Tuesday with a polluck dinner scheduled for 6:30 p.m. at the Episcopal Parish House, 320 E. College St. Square dancing will follow.

Constitution Day To Be Celebrated

CORALVILLE — Robert L. Larson, Justice and former chief justice of the Iowa Supreme Court, will deliver the Constitution Day address at a joint meeting of the Iowa Society and Eastern Iowa Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution at the Carousel restaurant Sunday noon.

The meeting is a special observance of the signing of the U.S. Constitution 180 years ago.

Also addressing the group will be Donald Kirkham, an Iowa State University professor who traveled extensively in the Near East this summer. He will describe current farm and social conditions in the Prague and Bucharest areas.

UI To Help Teach Retarded Youths

COUNCIL BLUFFS — The University of Iowa Hospital School will teach a class of 10 trainable mentally retarded children in cooperation with the Johnson County Board of Education. The agreement was approved Friday by the Board of Regents.

Including these students will broaden the base for training teachers in special education by the College of Education, University officials said. The county board will pay for the training to defray the cost of the program.

In another action the regents authorized the University to purchase the property at 16 W. Harrison Street from Orion L. Frantz for $6,563. The property is in an area of future campus expansion where several other properties have been purchased recently by the University.

THE FIRST INHABITANT of the Hotel Jefferson since the University took it over is Jerry N. Kuhn, professor of education, seen here in his fifth floor office unpacking the books he had packed shortly before in East Hall. Kuhn is chairman of the division of elementary education in the College of Education, one of the departments solving its growth problems by shifting to the hotel. The space vacated by elementary education offices is expected to be filled soon by the departments of special education and psychology and measurement.

Flood Threatens Town In Alaska

SKAGWAY, Alaska (AP) — Women and children were evacuated Friday as the Weather Bureau warned this historic southeast Alaska town to brace itself for the possibility of its worst flood in history.

Only a leaking earthen dike kept the wild, rain-swollen Skagway River from sweeping out of its narrow mountain valley and through the community of 650 persons.

Psychiatrist Tells Lawyers Crime Causes Need Attention

ATLANTIC — The real hope for stemming the crime rate lies in finding the causes of unacceptable behavior and adapting legal and social institutions to these findings, a Des Moines psychiatrist said here Friday.

Dr. John Hege, who holds degrees in both medicine and law, spoke to lawyers attending a one-day institute on "Psychiatric Insights of Practical Use to Lawyers in the Office and Courtroom" at the Atlantic Country Club.

Moderating the institute was David H. Vernon, dean of the College of Law, co-sponsor of the program with the Iowa State Bar Association's Continuing Legal Education Committee.

The institute was to be given today in Spencer and will be repeated in Cedar Rapids Friday and in Fairfield Sept. 29.

Speaking on the committing of the mentally ill to institutions, Samuel M. Fahr, professor of law at the University of Iowa, pointed out that lawyers are inclined to emphasize the need for guarding against "railroading" persons into institutions from which release may be difficult.

Most states, including Iowa, have statutes governing commitments to mental institutions, but most of these statutes are antiquated, Fahr said.

Other institute speakers were T. M. Wheeler, Sioux City attorney, and Ronald Carlson, assistant professor of law at the University.

Grid Season Begins— Texas A&M, SMU Play TV Opener

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Wide open action — the air filled with footballs and the ground swarming with quick, pass-grabbing flankers — is the fare for the armchair buff today when Texas A&M and Southern Methodist meet in television's college opener.

The game is one of a couple of dozen on the undergraduates' first major program — topped in general interest by the UCLA-Tennessee battle at Los Angeles and contests involving other top eleven. But it's the one you'll see if you have to stay at home.

It will be shown by ABC-TV, with the kickoff at 3:20 p.m.

Aggies Favored

The loaded Texas Aggies are 10-point favorites over the team that surprisingly won the Southwest Conference title last year and lost to Georgia 24-9 in the Cotton Bowl. The Mustangs lost 21 lettermen, including 11 starters from the 1966 title team.

Trigger-man of the Aggies is Edd Hargett, a 185-pound siege gun who completed nearly half the passes he threw last season and ranked second among the nation's major college throwers. Wendell Housley, Bob Long and Bill Sallee round out the Aggie backfield. All are good runners.

Mike Livingston, SMU's No. 2 quarterback for the last two years, moves up to the top spot and is largely a question mark. He has a backup up in Eddie Valdez, who pitched 32 scoring passes for a junior college team last fall.

Bruins, Vols Tough

The UCLA-Tennessee game, matching two teams picked No. 8 and No. 9, respectively in the Associated Press' preseason poll, could well have been a headliner late in the season when teams are battling for the national championship. Both are big, tough and versatile, with UCLA rated a four-point favorite.

UCLA's quarterback ace is Gary Beban, a double threat with his passing and scrambling, while the Tennessee Vols hope to keep the Bruins jumping with an air attack built around quarterback Dewey Warren and Olympic hurdler Richmond Flowers.

Colorado, picked 10th in the preseason poll, plays Baylor at Boulder while Nebraska, the beefy team that lost to Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, invades Washington in a game regarded as a toss-up.

Whipping Winds Postpone Race For Yachting Cup

NEWPORT R.I. — Whipping winds of Hurricane Doria Friday and a forecast of gusty winds for today forced a postponement until Sunday of the fourth — and perhaps final — race of the America's Cup yacht series.

Intrepid, the American defender, swept the first three races by huge margins, and needs only one more victory to repel the challenge of the Australian Dame Pattie.

Officials of the New York Yacht Club canceled today's race and announced that they will try to hold it on Sunday.

But long range forecasts indicated that the race might not be able to be held until Monday or possibly Tuesday at the earliest.

Friday was a lay off day, made at the request of skipper Jock Sturrock of the Dame Pattie. It turned out there could not have been any racing anyway, as gusts of better than 30 knots whipped the waters of Rhode Island Sound.

Iowa Practices Stress Pass Offense, Defense

Iowa's football team went through light morning and afternoon drills Friday.

Pass offense and defense were stressed in the morning workout, which was ended by dummy unit sessions. The Hawkeyes spent the afternoon drilling on unusual game situations and kicking.

The defensive unit also drilled on Texas Christian patterns in the afternoon. Hawkeye freshmen acted as the TCU offensive team.

In Boston, American League President Joe Cronin announced he will call a league meeting after the World Series. A league spokesman declined to elaborate on the reason for the meeting, but it presumably is in connection with Finley's request to move the Athletics.

The league spokesman said only that Cronin had received a letter from Finley stating that "a management consultant report will be ready for study by league members after Oct. 1."

Finley may now have in his possession a proposal for a 20-year lease on a voter-approval 45,000-seat baseball stadium, sports complex which should be ready in about two years.

Mayor Ius W. Davis said Friday he told Finley that, if the A's owner wanted to enter into a lease with the Jackson County Sports Authority for use of the planned stadium, "the city would negotiate for an interim lease which would cover him in Kansas City at the Municipal Stadium during the time the new stadium is under construction."

Archer's 6-Under-Par 66 Leads Philly Classic By 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — George Archer, the 6-foot-6 Californian, scored a 6-under-par 31-35-66 Friday to take a three-stroke lead over veteran Billy Casper after two rounds of the $110,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

Archer, who fired a first round 68, has a 10-under par 36-hole total of 134 to 137 for the 36-year-old Casper, who shot a second round of 33-58 over the White-marsh Valley Country Club course.

The 185-pound Archer, who won the Greensboro Open earlier this year, rolled in six birdies and notched regulation on the other 12 holes.

His two-round total tied the 36-hole record for the tournament set in 1964 by Chi Chi Rodriguez. Bruce Devlin, the first-round leader with a 7-under-par 65, skied to a 73 in the second round for a two-round total of 138.

Deadlocked another stroke behind at 139 were Dan Sikes, Doug Ford, Masters champion Gay Brewer and Bob Charles.

Archer, a veteran of four years on the pro golf tour, started his fine round with a 20-foot birdie putt on the second hole. After saving his par on the fourth with a 20-foot putt, he reached the 475-yard fifth hole in two and canned a three-footer for a birdie four.

Archer, who will be 28 Oct. 1, finished the front nine with three straight birdies. He dropped a three-footer on No. 7, rammed home a 30-footer on No. 8 and a 10-footer on No. 9 to make the turn in five-under-par 31.

He started the back nine with a four-foot birdie putt then matched par the rest of the way.
