

Council Ticket, Berry Opposed To Renewal Plan

By CHERYL ARVIDSON

Four City Council candidates, all of whom filed nomination papers in a surprise move Tuesday, expressed their views on election issues Wednesday. Although three are running as a ticket and one is running independently, their views were similar.

Clifford B. Kritt, 1534 Rochester Ave., E. Dale Erickson, 86 Olive Ct., and Robert J. (Doc) Connell, 1918 Rochester Ave., are running as a ticket.

In a statement, they said, "We have agreed to run as a team with the avowed pledge to return a voice in the management of city affairs to the people of Iowa City."

The Kritt-Erickson-Connell team presented a two-part program.

The three men pledge "to discard the proposed federal urban renewal program and adopt measures to create favorable conditions for urban renewal by private enterprise."

And Kritt, Erickson and Connell said they favored discarding the city's present form of council-manager government and adopting a council-manager-ward form of city government.

The alternative of the council-manager-ward form of government was legalized by a law passed by the 1967 legislature. The ward plan calls for seven council members. Four of the councilmen would be elected from city wards and two would be elected from the city at large. The mayor would be elected by a direct vote of the people.

The council-manager-ward form of government may be enacted by a vote of a city council or by a referendum vote of a city. Des Moines recently enacted the council-manager-ward form by a referendum. It was the first city in Iowa to vote on the change under the new law.

Daniel L. Berry, 2905 Brookside Dr., is not running with the team but said he favored discarding the urban redevelopment plan before the council.

Berry said that he thought the redevelopment of downtown Iowa City should be done by private industry with private funds.

Berry also favored the adoption of the council-manager-ward form of government by a city referendum.

Berry accused the city of poor planning in delaying the construction of a parking ramp. He said that a parking ramp should be constructed immediately with public funds.

Invalid Petition Halts Stevenson

Because of a lack of six signatures by qualified voters, Iowa City's slate of 12 City Council candidates was reduced to 11 Wednesday.

The petition for Gerald Stevenson, owner of the Paper Place bookstore, was ruled invalid by the City Clerk's office because only 56 of the 75 signatures on Stevenson's petition were those of registered voters.

Iowa City law requires that a nomination paper for a council candidate must be accompanied by a petition signed by 62 registered voters.

Stevenson said that he did not wish to comment on the possibilities of an appeal of the ruling or of a write-in candidacy.

Lawlessness In Cities Critical, Hughes Says

DES MOINES — Gov. Harold Hughes, describing himself as "sick in my guts of lawlessness," said Wednesday "the crisis of the nation's cities" was the most serious danger facing the nation since the Civil War.

The governor gave his views on the problem in a Kiwanis Club speech.

He described a "ghastly treadmill" of crime in cities, and said the trouble was most people don't want to get involved in fighting it.

Despite Recent Setbacks, Columbus Fans Rally

By JOHN BAILEY

Today is historically a special and controversial day.

There are mammoth parades today in New York, Newark and Chicago.

In spite of the controversy and festive spirit surrounding this day, University Italian classes will be scheduled as usual.

Campus security officers have taken no special precautions to deal with potential friction between students of Scandinavian descent and students of Italian descent.

Today is Christopher Columbus Day. On this day 475 years ago, his crews on the verge of mutiny, Columbus suppressedly landed on an island now identified as Walting in the Bahamas.

But although grade school classes are reminded that this is the day Columbus discovered America, historians no longer accept him as the only man or even the first man to reach America from Europe.

According to Ralph E. Giesey, professor of history, current archeological research indicates Scandinavian explorers had short term encampments in America as far south as Newfoundland.

Giesey said the Danish government and others who sponsor research in Iceland and other areas on the subject estimated Scandinavian encampments in North America between the years 1,200 and 1,300.

Giesey, to the delight of Columbus Day fans, said, "Historically the Columbus voyage here, because it led to Spanish colonization, is extremely important."

At least two students, one a University sophomore and one in second grade, Wednesday readily recognized Oct. 12 as Columbus Day.

Kathy Lienau, A2, Des Moines, said, "Oct. 12 — that's when Columbus discovered us." She indicated she would attend a Young Republican meeting to celebrate.

Draft Card 'Turn-In,' Rally Planned By DRU

By TED HENRY

A spokesman for the Draft Resisters Union said Wednesday that a group of protesters will hold an anti-war rally in Cedar Rapids Monday at which four young men will turn in their draft cards to the U.S. marshal there.

Steve Morris, 24, who said he served in the Army in Japan in 1964 and is not a University student, said Wednesday night

Citizens Group Plans Ad Opposing Viet War

The Citizens' Committee Against the War in Vietnam met Wednesday night and discussed plans to buy a full page ad in The Des Moines Register, supporting an end to the war.

The advertisement will carry a banner headline saying "Stop the War," followed by a list of the disadvantages of continuing the conflict. It was tentatively planned. At the end will be a list of faculty and staff supporters of the proposition.

Also discussed was the progress report on a questionnaire for a telephone canvass of the registered voters in Iowa City to determine sentiment concerning the war.

Coordinators of the group are James McCue, professor of religion, and Burns Weston, professor of law.

The next meeting was tentatively set for Nov. 1 with the time and place to be announced later.

that he has not yet decided whether he would hand in his draft card. All men, whether veterans or not, are required by law to carry draft cards.

Morris did not identify those whom he said would turn in their cards.

He said that draft cards are purely symbolic and that by turning them in one "unambiguously disassociates" himself from the Selective Service System.

The Cedar Rapids City Council, with little enthusiasm, agreed Wednesday that Green Square Park in downtown Cedar Rapids, could be used for the anti-draft rally, Associated Press reported.

Cedar Rapids Mayor Robert M. L. Johnson said the park is open to anyone who wants to go to it. He said there is no public address system for use as Morris requested, and there is a $100 rental fee for use of the park bandshell. Morris said he didn't know immediately whether the group would rent the bandshell.

Morris said that Monday afternoon's scheduled protest rally coincides with a nationwide week of demonstrations against U.S. policy in Vietnam. He said a march on the White House is scheduled for Oct. 21.

He estimated that several hundred persons would attend the Cedar Rapids rally from Iowa City, Cedar Rapids and Ames.

Last July 29 seven members of the Iowa City Draft Resisters Union picketed the Ft. Des Moines Induction Center to express their opposition to the Vietnamese war.

Action Heats Up Con Thien Sector

SAIGON — U.S. B52 saturation bombers pounded suspected Communist buildup areas with 300,000 pounds of bombs late Wednesday night and again early this morning as the war heated up once more around the invasion prone northern sector of South Vietnam.

The eight-engine stratoforts blasted bivouac, staging and storage areas, supply

Future Farmers Take Dim View Of Hippie Scene

KANSAS CITY — The Future Farmers of America stand about as far from the flower children of hippieland as you can get and still share the same planet.

This state of affairs, a survey showed Wednesday, suits the apple-cheeked, crew-cut, all-American rural types just fine.

"People would respect them more if they acted like human beings," an inquiring reporter at the 10,000-strong annual FFA convention was told by Dale Bidgani, 17, Benson, Ariz.

"Instead they use dope and act like a bunch of nuts."

"I think the hippies would lead us away from the American way of initiative and aggressiveness toward a society of non-ambitious people," said Eddie McMillan, 21, Bushnell, Ill.

"Hippies don't look neat and some don't even look clean," complained spic and span Aaron Digran, 18, Monroe, Wis.

"Maybe they're crazy. I don't know," said Eddie Childres, 17, Clarksville, Tex. "They're just no good."

"They're a bunch of kooks — they aren't gaining anything and they're not helping their country any," was the judgment of Ben Pettit, 16, London, Ohio. "They talk about loving everybody, but I don't see any love in fighting cops and throwing rocks and bottles."

Some of the sunburned farm youths took a more tolerant view of the hippies while sharing the general distaste for their social outlook and habits.

"I respect them for having their own opinions," said David Dietze, 17, Canby, Ore. "But I don't agree with them."

"Drug users ought to be thrown in jail," he declared.

Asked whether he thought a typical hippie could survive a hard day's work on a farm, Brown laughed and shook his head. "They're just not our kind," he said.

A group of Iowa City second graders visiting the Natural History Museum, in Macbride Hall Wednesday, gave various versions of who discovered America. George Washington, Eric the Red, John Adams and Abraham Lincoln were among those mentioned.

After six assorted answers from second graders, Lowell Bridgett, the son of Arthur D. Bridgett, 403 W. Benton, identified Columbus as "the man."

If Columbus Day fans are better organized next year, perhaps models of Columbus' ships, the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria, will be launched on the Iowa River bound for exploration at Columbus Junction downstream.

Yorra Calls HSP 'Gutless' Party, Blasts DI Editor

By MIKE FINN

A spokesman for the newly formed Students for Responsible Action said Wednesday night that Hawkeye Student Party was "too gutless to stand behind their proposal."

Speaking at an SRA rally held in the Old Capitol Senate Chambers, Myron Yorra, G, Boston, attacked a move by several HSP senators at Tuesday night's Student Senate meeting to have rescinded the autonomy amendment which they had previously supported. The HSP is not officially backing the amendment, which calls for an end to administration interference in students' "non-academic" lives, but most of the campus party's members have supported the amendment.

Yorra was also critical of Bill Newbrough, editor of The Daily Iowan.

"He knows no more about SRA than he does about the running of a newspaper or the Committee on Student Life (CSL)," Yorra charged.

Newbrough, who was present at the meeting, was asked by Yorra to explain his understanding of CSL.

Newbrough explained that it was his understanding that the CSL could make recommendations on student life to anybody including Pres. Howard R. Bowen and the senate. He said that CSL recommendations are rescindable only by the CSL, regardless of any senate proposals.

Yorra and Sen. Carl Varner, acting chairman of SRA, disagreed with Newbrough on whether there was any "feedback" to the senate on CSL recommendations.

The student-faculty senate that SRA proposes would replace, enlarge and legitimize CSL, according to Varner. CSL is responsible only to Bowen, Varner said.

He proposed that the student members be elected in the all-campus elections. Varner said that the students would be responsible to students if this proposal were adopted.

Varner explained that the student-faculty senate was in addition to the present structure of either the student senate or the Faculty Senate. They would assume basically the functions of CSL.

Over 40 students attended the rally.

HSP Discusses Plan Of Reorganization

The Hawkeye Student Party (HSP) took steps toward reorganization Wednesday night but failed to make a definite statement of support or denial of the "declaration of independence" amendment of the Student Senate.

HSP senators were split at Tuesday's senate meeting when the majority of the HSP senators voted to rescind, or withdraw, the amendment while others of HSP voted not to rescind.

Wednesday night's meeting seemed to favor a more strict organizational plan, since many HSP members complained of being confused and disunited.

Sen. Chuck Derden, spokesman for the amendment (although HSP denies it is the sole sponsor of the bill) drew applause when he called for members to be "willing to work for split-second organization."

Notably absent from the meeting, however, were Sens. Phil Hubbard, Lee Breneman and Gary Goldstein, HSP members who voted for the amendment but against the motion to rescind.

FBI Informer Describes Hearing Of 'Elimination'

MERIDIAN, Miss. — A pudgy, balding police sergeant, styling himself a paid informer for the FBI, testified Wednesday a Ku Klux Klansman told him the imperial wizard of the Klan's White Knights approved the "elimination" of one of three civil rights workers killed in 1964.

Sgt. Wallace Miller of the Meridian Police Department emerged as a surprise witness in the conspiracy trial of 18 white men charged in the deaths of the three workers during Mississippi's racially troubled summer of 1964.

Miller said Edgar Ray Killen, one of the defendants, told him that imperial wizard Sam H. Bowers, 42, of Laurel, Miss., authorized the "elimination" of Michael Schwerner, 24, a field worker for the Congress of Racial Equality. Bowers also is a defendant.

Elimination, Miller said, was a term for murder.

Schwerner, Andrew Goodman, 20, both white New Yorkers, and James Chaney, 21, a Meridian Negro died of gunshot wounds June 21, 1964 a few hours after they were arrested, then released in Philadelphia, Miss., the government contends. They had inspected ruins of a burned Negro church earlier in the day.

"Told Me They Were Shot"

"Mr. Killen told me they (the three workers) were shot, and dead, and buried about 15 feet in the dam," Miller told an all-white jury of seven women and five men. He said the conversation took place June 28, 1964.

FBI agents didn't find the bodies of the three until Aug. 6 after a 44-day search in which a party of 400 sailors called in by President Johnson took part.

Miller said Killen told him Schwerner, Goodman and Chaney had been chased down Miss. 19 at speeds of about 100 miles an hour.

As he delivered his testimony, the 18 defendants, sitting in a row along a wall, showed no emotion. The battery of 12 defense lawyers, however, leveled a continual stream of objections.

Miller, 43, a native of Neshoba County who has lived in Meridian the past 25 years, said that in April, 1964, "I was contacted by Mr. Killen and asked to join the White Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

Guns "Upon The Bodies"

Earlier, George A. Berley, a firearms expert for the FBI, said an examination of the victims' skin and clothing for evidence of powder residue showed the muzzle of the guns had been placed "upon the bodies or within one inch."

He testified that four of the five bullets came from a .38 caliber Smith & Wesson pistol and were Smith & Wesson handloads or reloads. The fifth, fired through an English-type revolver, was .38 caliber Smith & Wesson commercial make.

Miller's appearance came as James E. Jordan, a man of mystery since his grand jury testimony about the deaths, waited in the wings as another key witness.

Jordan, a 40-year-old construction worker, was indicted along with the 18 men on federal charges of violating the civil rights of Schwerner, Goodman and Chaney.

However, Jordan's case was transferred to another jurisdiction after he testified before a federal grand jury that indicted the men. Since, the FBI has refused to give his whereabouts.

The only official statement from the FBI concerning Jordan has been, "He is in federal protection."

Five armed guards, with their pistols drawn, whisked Jordan into the Post Office building where the trial went through its third day. They entered hurriedly through a side door, but did not go to the third-floor courtroom immediately.

In opening statements, Monday the Justice Department told the all-white jury of seven men and five women that it would offer testimony from informants paid by the FBI. It did not give any names.

A dozen lawyers for the defense failed earlier to uncover the name of the informant who tipped the FBI to the location of the three men's graves near Philadelphia, Miss. The bodies were unearthed beneath a farm pond dam after an intensive 44-day search.

The defendants include Neshoba County Sheriff Lawrence Rainey, 43, his chief deputy, Cecil Price, 28, sheriff-elect E. G. Barnett, 47, all of the Philadelphia area, and Bowers.

Prosecutors said the deaths of Schwerner, Goodman and Chaney came as part of a Ku Klux Klan-born plot.

'Born to Raise Hell' called well done

"Everyone is saying you killed those nurses. What happened?"
"I don't know anymore about it than you do."
"Did you do it?"
"Everyone says I did. Must be so. If they say I did it, then I did it."
The admission of "I did it," comes from Richard Franklin Speck, now convicted of the murder of eight Chicago nurses on the evening of July 13, 1966. It is doubtful that Speck knows what happened that night.

"Born To Raise Hell, the Untold Story of Richard Speck," by Jack Altman and Marvin Ziporyn. (New York, Grove Press, 1967). $5.95. Available at Iowa Book & Supply Co.

Instead of pleading insanity, Speck's lawyer, Gerald Getty tried to plead innocent and attempted to prove that Speck was more than a mile from the murder at the time. The attempt failed and Speck was convicted of the murder of Mary Ann Jordan and the murder of Gloria Davy and Merita Gargulio and Nina Schmale and Valentina Pasion, and the murder of Pamela Wilkening, Patricia Matussek and Suzanne Farris.

Altman and Ziporyn show that a better plea would have been insanity, induced by brain damage and drugs. For Richard Speck freely admitted being accident prone and being hit on the head "hundreds of times," since he was nine. He also admitted, and was treated for, blinding headaches and he blacked out frequently.

Richard Franklin Speck has the intelligence of a 10-year-old child.

Through extensive analysis, Ziporyn concludes that Speck had extensive brain damage, was impulsive, childish and was easily excited by drugs.

Speck, according to Ziporyn, his psychiatrist, was also a basic obsessive-compulsive personality, rigid, puritanical, and sadomasochistic.

He thought of women as either saints or whores, with none in between.

Speck was normal — reasonably — when he was sober. When he used "red" or "yellowjackets," barbiturates, and when he drank at the same time, he became abnormal and the monster within his subconscious was let out.

And on the evening of July 13, 1966, he had been drinking and he had been popping pills.

A murder might not have taken place except he stumbled into a dormitory of young student nurses, on the southeast side of Chicago.

One of them — Gloria Davy — resembled Speck's ex-wife whom he hated.

Speck claims that he knew nothing of the evening of July 13, 1966. But he woke the next morning with blood on his hands. And a gun. He doesn't remember where he got the gun.

"If they said I did it, then I did it."

Psychiatrist Ziporyn spent so much time with Speck that he was later criticized by his peers for improper professional conduct. Ziporyn did, however, become the only person familiar with Speck. Throughout the months in the Cook County Jail, awaiting his trial, Speck opened up to Ziporyn, opened the Pandora's box of his personality. Ziporyn, with the aid of Jack Altman, Chicago writer for Time magazine, has assembled a fascinating portrait of Speck as child-like creature, a "drifter," as the newspapers called him, a mentally-ill personality. Fortunately their book does not "run backward until reels the mind," as Time magazine syntax goes. It is a straight-forward account of Richard Franklin Speck.

If you read it at night — and you should read it for the book is well done — don't read it alone.

Don't read it alone — if you do, read it in a locked room with your back to a wall.

Richard Franklin Speck was not caught and treated in time.

There are others like him who will not be caught and treated in time.

The eight Chicago nurses did not have their doors locked on the evening of July 13, 1966.

Orientation chairmen express appreciation

To the Editor:

The newness is wearing off, the books are beginning to pile up. But for two weeks the new students on campus have been given a special chance to settle into the tempo of being a college student. We hope the process of old and new meeting continues smoothly throughout the year.

We would like to thank everyone who made the Orientation program a success. The council members did a commendable job of planning and executing the individual events. The faculty and staff were very generous in opening their homes to the freshmen groups. The home visit is unusual at a large university, but a pleasant way for students and faculty to meet as individuals.

Thanks must be given to the Orientation leaders — the foundation of our program. These responsible upper classmen have willingly assisted the new students and hopefully will continue doing this throughout the year. Thanks also to all the Orientation advisers who answered endless questions.

We think the Orientation program is a valuable experience for new students. We hope its potential will be expanded in the years to come.

Responsible actions needed from Des Moines Register

On the front page of The Des Moines Register Wednesday was a lengthy "news story" concerning a letter to the editor of The Daily Iowan. The way the Register handled this fairly insignificant piece of news is usually better-than-most newspaper.

The "news story" consisted of most of the letter to the editor, published in the DI Saturday, with two paragraphs of introduction. Although the writer of the article made no claim that the opinions expressed in the letter were those of anyone other than the writer, the effect of the article for many readers might have been to indicate that the writer's opinions were those of a majority of University students.

The writer of the letter used "we" as if he were speaking for a great number of University students. I suspect that he has no objective reason for thinking a large number of others agree with him. So it was misleading for the writer to say he was speaking for anyone other than himself.

But the disaster of the whole thing is that the Register gave the letter such prominent play. There are probably thousands of persons around the state who now have the idea that the students don't want the University to end its paternalistic regulations on students' non-academic lives.

If the letter from a single University student were so important that it merited such play, and I don't think it was, the Register should have at least asked for the comments of responsible student leaders about it. Virtually any responsible student leader would have expressed opinions contrary to many of those in the letter.

The injustice has been done, however, and there's little any of us can do about it right now. But we should demand more responsible actions from the Register in the future.

I. THE FINANCE OF STUDENTS

1. Student Costs. Before one can usefully discuss the finance of students, one must identify the costs to which students are subject. Student costs may be defined in two ways: as the cash outlays needed for college attendance and as the economic cost of college attendance. Both definitions have their uses in analyzing the finance of higher education.

The cash outlays needed for college attendance are the ordinary expenditures of students including board and room, tuition and fees, supplies, books, transportation, clothing, personal care, and other incidental expenses. These are the expenses for which immediate cash is needed.

The economic cost, on the other hand, reflects the true cost to the student (or to society) of his attending college. It includes the expenses incident to education such as books, supplies, transportation, etc. It also includes any expense for board and room, clothing, and other living costs over and above what would have been required had he not attended college. Most important, it includes the loss of earnings to the student because he has chosen not to be in the labor force.

When we ordinarily discuss the finance of students, we refer to the annual cash outlays needed — the money that must be raised at the time to get the student to college and keep him there. Economic cost, on the other hand, is usually ignored in discussions of the finance of students. Nevertheless, the idea of economic cost, mainly the loss of earnings by reason of attending college, is highly pertinent to the contemporary American scene. It points up the fact, often overlooked, that students bear the bulk of the costs of higher education. The student's share at present is of the order of three-fourths of the total cost of education.

Those who advocate increased tuitions to be financed by loans, on the ground that more of the cost should be shifted to the student as the chief beneficiary of higher education, naively overlook the fact that students already bear the bulk of the cost.

2. The Sources of Student Finance. Once it is assumed, as is almost invariably done, that each student must himself bear the cost of foregone income, then the essential financial problem is to find ways of securing funds for the needed cash outlays. There are five major sources: parents, spouses, student part-time earnings, grants, and loans.

It has been generally accepted in this country that parents are responsible to educate their children if they can afford to do so. There are disadvantages in this arrangement from the point of view of the growth and maturity of the student. I suspect that the long trend will be toward the earlier emancipation of children and toward less dependence on parents for higher education. For the present, however, parents are a major, and on the whole willing, source of support for students, and the financial realities suggest that they will and must continue in this role.

A second source is the earnings of spouses. Thousands of male students are supported wholly or in part by working wives, and some female students are supported by employed husbands. This system "works" and is frequently used, but it has grave disadvantages. It tends to shut off educational opportunity for young women. There are literally thousands of working wives on any large university campus whose studies have been prematurely ended. Support by working wives also is sometimes unreliable because of the arrival of babies, and it sometimes works hardship on young children whose mothers must be away from home. In my opinion, support of students by spouses is not on the whole a preferred method of educational finance.

A third source is summer and part time earnings of students. Fortunately, there is a long tradition congenial to work by students, and earnings are a substantial source of funds. It is often poor economy, however, to load so much work on students that they cannot do justice to their studies and to the community life of their universities or that they must necessarily prolong their time in the university. Reasonable limits on the amounts students are expected to earn are needed. Under today's conditions, these limits usually fall far short of "working one's way through college."

If there is to be equality of educational opportunity, there must clearly be a system of financing students to meet needed outlays beyond what parents can afford and students can earn. The gap can only be met by grants or loans or a combination of the two. I propose a national system of minimal educational grants involving a means test supplemented by a national system of long-term loans without a means test.

3. A National System of Educational

Grants. The grants I propose would be available to any student showing need. There would be no scholastic requirement except that the student be enrolled full-time in an approved college or university of his choice at any level from the freshman year to the end of graduate or professional study. The amount of the individual grant would be set according to need as measured by the cost of a minimal educational program and the ability of the parents to contribute and of the student to earn. The purpose would be to provide a financial base for any student, regardless of circumstances, to attend college as long as his abilities permit without his ending up heavily in debt.

The grants would be financed by the federal government, but would be administered by the colleges and universities.

Since the proposed grants would provide only a minimal base of support, to be augmented if necessary by loans, the budget for each student would be tight and would be set by fairly standard formulas relating to the costs of attending college in his area. It would not enable students to travel from Maine to California to attend college, to live in luxury, or to enroll in high-tuition institutions. Its purpose would be to enable any student to get to and through college without heavy indebtedness if he is prudent and willing to make moderate sacrifices.

4. A National System of Student Loans. The grant system I have described would, by itself, be fairly restrictive. It would provide only the bare essentials for the low-income student and because of the means test would do nothing for the student from families of middle and upper incomes. Because of its reliance on fairly rigid formulas, designed for simplicity, it might be mildly inequitable in its application to particular cases. This minimal and rigid grant system should be supplemented and reinforced by a national system of student loans to provide flexibility to meet individual needs and preference, and to enlarge opportunity. The loan system would carry with it no means test, and hence would be available to persons of all income classes. Loans could be used to finance the extras not available to low-income students from the grants and not available to middle or upper-income students from current family income.

The conditions of repayment could be flexible with wide choices for the borrowers. At the option of borrowers, maturities could be long or short, repayment could be made without penalty at any time before maturity, and the obligation could be assumed either by the parent or the student. The capital would be supplied by the federal government or by the private capital market, but the loans would be subsidized by the federal government; as to interest and guaranteed as to risk. The amount of debt outstanding on behalf of any one student might be limited to a given amount each year, say $2,000, and to a total maximum of possibly $10,000 or more in the case of lengthy courses of study. The much discussed proposal to arrange repayment as a surcharge on the federal income tax should be considered, though as a student of public finance, I believe it would be better not to mix this loan system with the federal income tax.

The loan system would give students of all income classes flexibility and independence. For example, a low-income student unable to "get by" on his grant could supplement his resources by a small loan; a student whose parents refused to contribute to his education would have a way out; a student wishing to end his dependence upon his parents could emancipate himself; a student who wished to attend an expensive college or an expensive program beyond his immediate means could do so within the limits of his borrowing power; a student wishing to extend his education an additional year could confidently make the decision; etc. These free choices, however, would always entail a sacrifice in the form of eventual repayment of interest and principal and would be restricted by the maximum limits placed on the amount to be borrowed by any student.

5. Some Comments on the Combined Grant-Loan System. The combined grant-loan system would give every young person a chance for as much higher education as he wished and was qualified to receive. The grants would provide this education on a minimal basis without the student's having to go into debt. The loans would give the student freedom and flexibility but at the sacrifice of going into debt.

This grant-loan system would exert no onerous controls over the colleges and universities. They would be free to operate according to the wishes of their constituencies. They would offer whatever programs they chose and could support and charge whatever fees they wished. Students — armed with parental support, grants, and loans — would have free choice of institutions and programs. Institutions would be free to provide whatever supplemental student aid they wished in the form of scholarships, grants, or loans.

Play Will Try To "Blow Your Mind"

By SUSANN HOOVEN
Want to disorient your frontal lobes? If so, go to the "blow-in-your-mind play" which will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Studio Theatre. There is no admission.

According to the play's director, James Rockey, G. Omak, Wash., the play is designed to do just that — disorient the members of the audience and completely blow their minds.

The play, which does not have a formal name because Rockey didn't care for the original name and refuses to use it, is about a young boy who commits suicide out of spite for his parents. The parents go on trial for the murder of the boy and the prosecution tries to prove they made their son kill himself.

Plot Complicated
The plot is further complicated by the fact that the parents kept the boy's body in the basement freezer for some time before reporting it to the police.

The play is a critical comment on American family relations and the American legal system, according to Rockey. This is his reason for surrounding the play with a carnival or circus atmosphere. To produce this atmosphere, the hall will be lined with circus posters and a Barker will encourage people to "step right up."

The stage will be exactly opposite from where a stage is normally expected to be, and the audience will have to walk through it to get to their seats.

Breaks Tradition
The costumes and chairs are appropriate not to the situation, but to the character. For example, at the trial the beautiful, but dumb, sister will be clad in a negligee and will be sitting on a bed.

Rockey emphasized that he was not trying to shock or sensationalize with these methods. He is rather trying to break theater tradition and utilize the Studio Theatre facilities differently.

The play was written by Eric Nightingale, who received his

Paving Program Up For Adoption
CORALVILLE — The City Council has set Nov. 14 for adoption of assessments on a 1966 paving program.

The assessment schedule compiled by City Engineer Dennis M. Saeugling will be posted and mailed to property owners.

The council voted at Tuesday's meeting to purchase a new street department truck from Nall Motors Inc., of Iowa City for $3,242. Ford Motor Co., the only other bidder, submitted a bid of $3,345.

Repairs on portions of 14th Avenue and Ninth Street were directed to proceed, based on a report to the council by Saeugling and Public Works Director Thomas C. Ross.

M.F.A. from the Writer's Workshop in June. He is now teaching in the English Department at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. He plans to attend the production.

Members of the cast are Tony Tommasi, G. Brooklyn, N.Y., as the judge; Edward Sostek, instructor in dramatic art, as the prosecutor; and Bob Perkins, A2, Downers Grove, Ill., as the lawyer.

Rick Fazel, A3, Perry, will play the father, Linda Russell, Iowa City, will be the mother, and Rhonda Neswitz A2, Chicago, will play the sister. The clerk is played by Gael Hammer, G, Winfield, Kan.

The makers said the carpet should be watered daily for three months to make it bed down properly and Bill says: "It's one of the funniest jobs I ever had to do. It's the manufacturer's idea, not ours. Most people think it's rather a joke."

Bolivians Bury Che; Doubts Dissolving

LA PAZ, Bolivia — The army announced Wednesday the body of Ernesto Che Guevara had been buried secretly at Vallegrande, near where the army insists he died of wounds inflicted in battle Sunday.

While doubt remained in some quarters that the former top aide of Cuba's Fidel Castro had been slain, the official Cuban newspaper Granma's treatment of the story indicated the government in Havana took the report seriously.

"The newspaper Granma, not having information to accept or refute this news, is publishing the contents of the principal cable dispatches," the Communist party newspaper said.

Fingerprints Identified
The Bolivian army said it based its identification of Guevara on fingerprints and a scar on his arm from a wound suffered when he was helping Castro fight Cuban government forces in eastern Cuba.

"The burial has already taken place," Gen. Alfredo Ovando Candia told reporters in La Paz. He declined to elaborate.

Other military sources said

Guevara was buried Tuesday night and not in Vallegrande cemetery.

One source added: "It was important not to create something like a shrine and that is why the burial place should not be revealed."

Quick Burial Not Unusual
The quick burial is not unusual in Latin America. The army said Guevara died Monday of wounds suffered in the jungle battle Sunday about 300 miles southeast of La Paz. It is customary in Latin America to bury a day after death.

While officials in Argentina where Guevara was born 38 years ago, and the press in parts of France and Italy were skeptical that Guevara had died, a British correspondent who viewed the body in a Vallegrande hospital said he was convinced.

"It was undoubtedly that of Che Guevara," Robert Gott wrote in an article in the Guardian. "I am probably one of the few people here who have seen him alive. I saw him in Cuba at an embassy reception in 1963 and there is no doubt in my mind that it is the body of Che."

No Classes Friday In City Schools

There will be no classes for Iowa City Public School students Friday because Iowa City teachers are to attend departmental workshops.

Workshop in-service is held twice a year so that teachers may compare progress in courses and suggest curriculum changes. William Bleeker, director of secondary education for Iowa City Public Schools, said Wednesday.

Programs are to be given in each of 14 secondary course departments. Librarians are to visit the instructional materials center at Kennedy High School in Cedar Rapids. Five University faculty members will speak to the workshops.

A publisher's representative will discuss modern math with elementary school teachers.

Low Rent Meeting Scheduled

By LINDA ARTLIP
The Low Rent Housing Agency Wednesday offered to inform the 11 City Council candidates on the procedures and programs of the agency.

The agency said it planned to hold an open meeting for the candidates at 3 p.m. Oct. 19 at the Civic Center where it will discuss local housing problems and answer questions.

A second meeting for the six successful primary candidates is scheduled for Oct. 26.

The Department of Planning and Urban Renewal will prepare a paper on available low rent housing programs that will fit Iowa City's needs. Barry Lundberg, department director, said.

The agency accepted a definition for a low income family in this area suggested by Jay Honahan, city attorney. A spouse cannot be defined as a dependent, according to Honahan's advice.

The agency chairman, the Rev. Robert Welsh, said that the group would have to rework some of its statistics due to the new definition.

Too Many Editions Said To Be Cause Of High Book Bills

By JOHN BAILEY

Why are text books so expensive? Who gets all that money you spend on books? Is there an alternative to the present book-selling system?

According to Ray W. Vanderhoef, manager of Iowa Book and Supply Co., one reason books are expensive is the proliferation of titles.

He said this week that many text books have a very limited market and cannot be mass produced in large enough quantities to lower the costs of printing and binding.

Ralph Freyder, manager of University Book Store, said, "Students have never been gouged on book prices. This store wouldn't have stayed in business for nearly 100 years if we were treating students unfairly."

Comments from local book store managers, verified by statistics in Publisher's Weekly, a book trade magazine, indicate that local booksellers are not purposely gouging students.

Publishers Set Prices

Prices on new books are suggested by the publishers. Bookstores usually receive a 20 per cent mark up on new books. A book that sells for $10 nets the seller about $2.

Whenever possible, according to Vanderhoef, attempts are made to secure used books. The book store mark up on used books ranges from 30 to 35 per cent.

When you purchase a new $10 textbook, the book store receives about $2, the author either $1 or $1.50 and the book publisher receives the remaining $7.

Vanderhoef said that one reason Iowa City book stores sometimes didn't have books in time for certain courses was that 30 per cent of the book requests from faculty members were received after Labor Day.

Vanderhoef said that because classes start here fairly late in comparison with other schools, publishers are already hard-pressed to meet demands at schools across the country.

Book orders for individual classes are based on a study of past enrollment in a particular class and anticipated enrollment increases in various departments of the University, Vanderhoef said.

Alternatives Exist

Two alternatives exist to the book store system in Iowa City. One is the student-operated exchange of used books. Another alternative is the cooperative book store system.

The cooperative book store system has been used for many years on such campuses as Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the University of Washington at Seattle.

Last February the Hawkeye Student Party (HSP) proposed in its platform to initiate a cooperative book store here.

Cooperative Book Stores Urged

Lee Weingard, head of HSP, said this week that he sympathized with problems of the book store owners.

"Students can solve many of these problems for themselves by organizing a book store. This is one of the things an autonomous student government, proposed last week, could accomplish."

Weingard said that HSP had no immediate plans to open a cooperative book store.

At cooperative stores, such as the one at Harvard, students pay an initial membership fee of $1 a year. When the business year is completed, the student member gets a cash refund of the store's profits, based on the dollar value of a student's purchases during the preceding year.

In 1965, refunds to students at cooperative book stores were 6.2 per cent at Harvard and 5.1 per cent at Princeton.

Another alternative to the present system is a student-operated exchange of used books.

Alpha Phi Omega, a University service fraternity, organized a used book exchange here last spring.

Prices charged for used books were, in most cases, lower than those charged by the book store. Everett L. Burk, A3, Davenport, project chairman, recommended discontinuing the book exchange, because of poor response. He estimated that about 700 books were sold through last year's exchange.

Social Security Still Backbone Of Welfare

By ELIZABETH HSUAN

Social Security is 30 years old. Started as a New Deal program to aid the poor and aged, the system has been expanded and changed, but remains the backbone of America's welfare programs.

A field representative of the Cedar Rapids Social Security office, Ernest McMillan, said last week that the system's basic idea is a simple one.

Workers Contribute

During working years, McMillan pointed out, employees and their bosses contribute to the program, and when earnings stop or are reduced, monthly benefits are paid back to the worker.

The system also covers the self-employed and is expanded periodically, as with the recent addition of the Medicare program.

McMillan said about $1.5 billion goes into Social Security each year and about the same amount is returned to retired or disabled persons or to survivors.

Nine out of 10 working persons in the United States are enrolled in Social Security, McMillan said.

If nothing else, the program has seen to it that just about every American has a number — his Social Security number which also identifies his tax returns.

Numbers Required

McMillan said a worker must have such a number if his job is covered by the Social Security law, or if he receives certain types of taxable income.

Duplicate cards may be obtained from Social Security offices in case the original is lost.

McMillan said about 1,000 University students receive Social Security benefits.

Jackson Pollock's 'Mural' Star Of Enlarged Art Display

By SUSANN HOOVEN

The Main Art Gallery's current display is the most comprehensive it has ever shown, according to Frank Seiberling, professor and director of the School of Art. Seiberling said that usually only paintings are displayed there, but that University-owned prints and drawings are included in this exhibit.

Jackson Pollock's "Mural" is featured. The painting has just been returned to the University from the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

Seiberling said that "Mural" occupied a pivotal place in Pollock's development. Pollock was an artist who gained fame by dripping paint on the canvas. He painted "Mural" on the wall in almost one sitting.

He used some drippings on the painting and they worked so well that this could be where he got the idea for using drippings, according to Seiberling.

"Mural" is the key picture that summarized Pollock's work up to that time, and suggested new directions for him to follow, Seiberling said.

He said that "Mural," which is 10 by 20 feet, was so large that it had to be taken from the box before it could be brought into the building.

Senate Fails To Reactivate Subversive Control Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Everett M. Dirksen ran into acid criticism and was voted down Wednesday in his effort to tie into an appropriation bill a provision for rekindling the dormant Subversive Activities Control Board.

The objection apparently was not so much against the Illinois Republican's aim to remove some legal roadblocks which have stymied the board as against his effort to suspend the rule which prohibits legislation in an appropriation measure.

He got a majority of 47 to 38 but that was 10 short of the necessary two-thirds margin to suspend the rules for this purpose. Dirksen, the Senate GOP leader, said he will offer his motion as an amendment to some other bill. This could be done by majority vote to legislation other than an appropriation measure.

The sentiment of the Senate was further indicated in a later vote of 57 to 35 rejecting a move by Sen. John J. Williams (R-Del.) to cut off funds to the board pending a later decision on Dirksen's proposal.

The board, created by the Internal Security Act of 1950, has been left virtually inactive under Supreme Court rulings that organizations it identified as Communist could not be required to register with the Justice Department.

Concert To Feature French Music Debut

By CINDY HOWELL

A U.S. debut performance of the French composition "Couleurs de la Cite Celeste" will highlight the season's first Center for New Music concert at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Union Ballroom. No admission will be charged.

This composition by avant-garde composer Olivier Messiaen is based on the book of Revelations and is an attempt to translate the colors of the city into sound. Incorporated into the piece are ancient chants of the Christian church.

The Center for New Music is a project that supports new experimental music. The center is in its second year at the University, supported by a three-year grant from the Rockefeller Foundation and University funds.

Richard Hervis, director of the center, said recently that the function of the center was to perform concerts of new music. New music, according to Hervis, was music which, because of its novelty or its difficulty, would not be heard without such a group.

The second function of the Center is to audition and perform works by student composers in the University School of Music and to confer with the students about performance problems.

"Solos for Violin and Five Instruments," written by Harvey Sollberg, a University graduate, will open Sunday's concert.

Other features of the concert will be "Circles," by Luciano Berio, which makes use of e. e. cummings poetry in an effort to associate vocal sounds with instrumental sounds, and "Curative," by Chou Wen-Chung, which is played by the piano and the flute.

—In Operation Since August—

Ambulances Run Smoothly

By ALBERT O. GRENDLER
The Johnson County emergency ambulance system got a clean bill of health this week. Sheriff Maynard E. Schneider and Emil Novy, a member of the Board of Supervisors, said the system, initiated this summer, is running smoothly. Schneider said that the ambulances are equipped according to Iowa standards for emergency vehicles, and the deputies and attendants have been trained in first aid. "We've had a number of people tell us we're doing a good job," Novy commented Monday. Schneider said his office had answered about 65 emergency ambulance calls since assuming ambulance operation in August. He said fees to date have amounted to $1,348.50. Until 1968, when the county will budget funds to operate the service, Iowa City and Coralville are subsidizing the operation. Iowa City pays $8,000 and Coralville pays $800. County Service Better Schneider and the supervisors indicated that better ambulance service could be provided by the county rather than by private funeral homes because accident cases were usually reported to the sheriff's office. "I'm not overjoyed about being saddled with this ambulance job, but we'll make it work," Schneider said. "Patrol coverage has been cut down in the past few weeks because our deputies are sometimes tied up with the ambulances." Revision and shuffling of schedules would correct this coverage gap, Schneider said. 2 Attendants Added Two ambulance attendants have been added to Schneider's staff. They help with routine chores when not occupied with ambulance calls. The sheriff's office has a gentleman's agreement with local funeral directors to help one another when either is too busy to answer calls. Schneider said such occasions were rare but the agreement assured constant coverage. Schneider said the ambulances had been equipped according to state requirements for emergency vehicles, although there are no legal standards in Iowa for ambulances alone. State law requires sirens and flashing red lights for emergency vehicles. Oxygen, first aid equipment, radios and improved lighting have been added to the requirements. Schneider said that resuscitators and additional cots had been ordered. "We'd like to have a patrolman for a driver, and a doctor for an attendant, but that is impossible," Schneider commented. "Standards should be kept within reason and shouldn't be made by people who don't have any practical experience in the ambulance business." Bureau Conducts Study A study of ambulance standards is being conducted by the University's Bureau of Police Science, according to Lyle Shook, the bureau's assistant director. All public and private ambulance operators in Iowa are being asked about their training, costs, fees, number of accidents covered, equipment, personnel, training and cooperation with local police, doctors and hospitals. Shook said the State Department of Health and State Office of Planning and Progress were interested in cooperating in the study. Many funeral directors want to discontinue emergency ambulance service as opposed to answering routine calls because it was unprofitable, difficult to get personnel, and a burden generally, Schneider said. "As a result, cities and counties are being forced to supply service — and they need help," he added. Shook suggested these standards for such service: Emergency ambulance services and their vehicles should be licensed and standards enforced through regular inspections. All drivers and attendants should be trained like military medics, and certified. A "Good Samaritan Law" should be passed. This would exempt from legal liability any motorist or physician for example, who stopped at the scene of an accident to give first aid.

Old Debt Plagues An Iowa County

STORM LAKE — Edmund Grant has inherited a 100-year-old cash claim against Buena Vista County which could be worth $15 million — roughly 15 times the amount of money in the county treasury. The Winnetka, Ill., businessman came across a $1,000 county general obligation bond in the papers of a deceased relative. The bond — paying 10 per cent interest compounded annually — had never been redeemed. But cashing it at the accrued interest, computed at about $15.15 million by a Drake University mathematics professor, figures to be quite a problem for Grant. County Attorney Ira Skinner says Grant's claim is worthless because the statute of limitations on such debts expired a generation ago for the original purchaser, Lansing M. Lewts.

Grant says he might agree to this — and he might not. "I've merely raised the question so far. I've no idea what it's worth and I'll decide what to do after I get his (Skinner's) letter." The contract pledged the county's property, revenue and assets to repay the bonds. Skinner jokes that if the claim is validated "there probably will be a mass exodus" of Buena Vista's 23,000 residents.

Religious Group Organizes Here

A new campus religious group is being organized here. It is the Baha'i College Club which, members said, will soon seek official University recognition as a student organization. Leaders are Charlotte Ingram, A3, Sioux Rapids; Mary Steil, A4, River Forest, Ill. and Anne Hoskell, A1, Cedar Falls. The club plans to sponsor symposia, guest speakers and other activities to explain the Baha'i world Faith. A University of Northern Iowa assistant professor of speech, Samuel Jackson, himself a member of the faith, will speak at 7:30 p.m. today in the Union Kirkwood Room at a public meeting. The new club needs a faculty adviser, and members asked that anyone interested contact them. Larry F. Rickey, religious coordinator of the School of Religion, will serve temporarily as the club's faculty adviser.

Earth Science Takes To Air

Area residents can now listen to a class session — without leaving home. "Discussions In Earth Science," a new radio program on station WSUI from 8 to 9 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday, features unhearsured student discussion led by Sherwood Tuttle, professor and chairman of the Department of Geology. So that the radio audience may also participate, Tuttle has invited listeners to write in comments and questions. Questions may be referred to members of the class, or used as topics for general discussion.

Hubbard To Discuss Problems With Mayors

Mayor William C. Hubbard is one of six mayors of eastern Iowa cities who will meet in Cedar Rapids Friday to discuss mutual problems. Cedar Rapids Mayor Robert M. L. Johnson said a major topic of discussion will be the application of the new state service tax in city parking lots. Other mayors will be from Waterloo, Dubuque, Clinton and Davenport.

SEE BOTH SIDES OF THE MEAT BEFORE YOU BUY!

Now our butchers are packaging every fresh-cut morsel of meat in clear plastic trays so you can see everything — the cut, amount of fat, and bone — from every side.

As of now we are retiring the old tray. Unlike yesterday's trays, these trays are really freezer-ready without rewrapping or labeling. The trays won't stick and leave fuzz on the meat, either . . . or soak up precious juice that help steaks and chops cook up tender and tasty.

It's our pleasure to prove that we've got the finest meat in town . . . no matter how you look at it.
