

Special Forces Camp Falls

SAIGON (AP) — The Lang Ve special forces camp has fallen to North Vietnamese troops supported by Soviet-built tanks, South Vietnamese headquarters reported Thursday. But it said 76 defenders, including 12 Americans, escaped.

A government spokesman said the camp, astride the invasion route from Laos in South Vietnam's northwest corner, was overrun about 6:40 p.m., Saigon time. The camp had been under siege for 18 hours by infantry, rockets, flame throwers and, for the first reported time, tanks.

The spokesman said 316 defenders, most of them civilian irregulars, were killed, wounded or missing. He said the survivors escaped to the Marine combat base at Khe Sanh, about three miles to the east. They were said to include 60 civilians, four South Vietnamese Special Forces troops and 12 U.S. Green Berets.

Some of the defenders were reported lifted out of the camp by U.S. helicopters when it was decided to abandon it.

It was the second frontier Special Forces camp to fall to the Communists in the last two years. A Shau, 80 miles to the south, was seized in March 1966, and was never retaken.

The Vietnamese command had announced Wednesday morning that Lang Ve camp had been overrun and that an aerial observer reported seeing enemy soldiers swarming through the perimeter.

The U.S. Command later reported, however, that defenders were holding out in bunkers and that they had received radio reports from the embattled defenders as late as 4 p.m. Wednesday.

The Communist offensive slowed in most of the 35 cities that had come under attack, but in and around Saigon, sporadic fighting persisted.

Marauding bands of Viet Cong roamed Cholon, the Chinese sector. Two battalions of South Vietnamese marines cordoned off the area and began a house-to-house mop-up.

Jet bombers attacked an enemy detachment spotted before dawn today five miles south of the Saigon city limits. Bomb blasts jarred windows in the heart of the capital.

At Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon, allied troops inched their way through the streets of the old city, battling to wrest control from the Communists.

In a claim that didn't jibe with American reports, Radio Hanoi declared the Lang Ve camp was overrun at 2:30 a.m. Wednesday after a fight of little more than two hours and the defenders were annihilated or captured. It said two outposts to the south also fell.

Saigon authorities said five of the nine tanks were destroyed, four by the defenders' 57mm recoilless rifles and the other by air strikes. But the toll on the garrison was obviously heavy.

A Special Forces sergeant at one point radioed Da Nang that only five of the 25 Americans were still alive — he and four others in a headquarters bunker. He said a wrecked tank was on top of the bunker. All the camp's installations above ground had been leveled.

U.S. planes and Marine artillery at Khe Sanh reportedly fired tons of explosives in support of the garrison.

There was no word of the fate of 2,500 Laotian refugees, including 500 soldiers, who fled to Lang Ve two weeks ago from a town near the frontier to escape attacking North Vietnamese troops.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, was in the northern sector for an inspection trip. He conferred at Da Nang with the Maine commander, Lt. Gen. Robert W. Cushman Jr.

Asked whether the Lang Ve action might be the start of Hanoi's big drive, a senior member of Westmoreland's staff commented: "I wouldn't go that far."

Like all Special Forces camps, Lang Ve was not expected to be able to withstand a massive enemy attack. The camps are spotted in strategic areas, often near the borders, where scouts can keep watch for enemy troop movements and intelligence information.

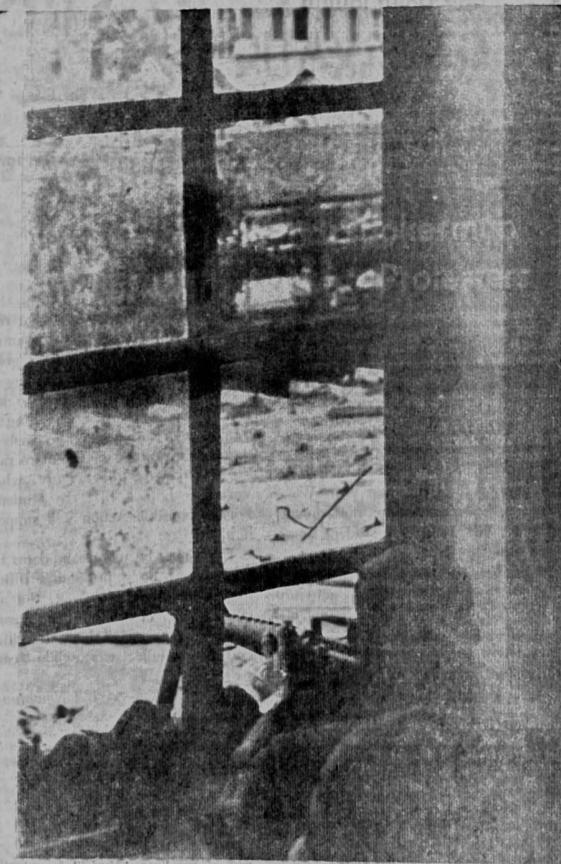

The capabilities of air and artillery to provide support often has meant survival for the camps, however, and relatively few have been overrun.

From Lang Ve and Khe Sanh in the west to Gio Linh and Cua Viet in the east the allied positions near the DMZ were facing up to an increasing enemy threat.

U.S. Army troops have been rushed into the northernmost 1st Corps area to help meet the threat, and allied air power has defied the monsoon weather to repeatedly bomb enemy positions along the DMZ.

In the north, some of the major action also continued that began with the enemy's lunar new year offensive Jan. 30.

The battle for Hue was most important but there were other clashes across the country. In many areas the fighting had tapered off from the intensity of last week and the people were trying to begin a recovery from the destructive attacks that hit 35 populated centers.

Varner To Seek President's Job In Student Body

Student Sen. Carl Varner, A3, Centerville, announced Wednesday that he would seek the office of student body president. Varner said that his running mate would be Gordon Shuey, A2, Jefferson, who is now a student senator from Rienow Hall. Varner is a senator at large.

"I will be running to improve student government by giving it positive and pragmatic leadership," Varner said in a written statement.

He said he would emphasize a four-point program for better student government:

- The Senate should give priority to student problems on this campus instead of taking stands on national and international issues.
- The senate must become a responsible body which seeks to represent its constituents rather than the personal views of the senators. It should adequately and carefully consider the consequences of its actions.
- The senate should support the rights of students to the due process of law, orderly dissent and to equal access to University facilities.
- A platform consisting of realistic, concrete goals that are attainable.

Wide Gap Seen

Varner said that there had been a wide gap on campus between campaign rhetoric and actual accomplishment. He said his specific platform proposals would be announced later.

Varner said that he would seek the nomination of Students For Responsible Action. However, he said that even if he obtained that nomination, he would run a more or less independent campaign.

"I will concentrate my campaign in the dormitories for support," Varner said. "But I will try to get candidates to run with me for all Student Senate positions," he said.

Varner said that he wanted direct communication between the senate and the Board of Regents so that the regents might better understand the problems of students on this campus.

He was critical of the present senate, Senate Criticized

"The present Student Senate, under the domination and control of the Hawkeye Student Party (HSP), has too often resorted to irresponsible actions and excessive radicalism. Examples of such action are the so-called declaration of independence and the ill-fated attempt to pay bond money for arrested demonstrators," Varner said.

The other announced candidate for the student president's office is Ken Wessels, A2, Dyersville. Wessels and his running mate, Phil Hubbard, A3, Iowa City, are seeking the support of HSP.

Some of the specifics that Varner said he would work for include fewer dormitory advisers, more money for the senate to distribute to student organizations, dormitory contracts offering a choice of what meals a student eats in the dorms and the announcement of final exam schedules before each semester's registration.

Kleinberger Reinstated As Rhetoric Instructor

By ROY PETTY

Paul Kleinberger, G, Silver Spring, Md., the rhetoric instructor who was suspended from his job following his alleged participation in the Dec. 5 antiwar demonstration, was reinstated Tuesday, The Daily Iowan learned Wednesday night.

"I'm happy that it all worked out," Kleinberger said, "but I'm also disappointed I didn't have a chance for a public hearing to demonstrate to anyone who may still have any doubts that I'm not guilty of anything inappropriate."

Kleinberger's full statement, as prepared to and finally accepted by Braddock and Stuit, read as follows:

"As I have explained during our several conversations, I would join you in considering any aspect of the Dec. 5 demonstration which tended to endanger the existence or independence of the University."

On that basis, the letter continued, Braddock and Dewey B. Stuit, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, officially continued Kleinberger's part-time appointment. The decision was not made public until Wednesday.

Deal Offered

Kleinberger told the DI Wednesday night that nearly two weeks ago the Executive Committee of the College of Liberal Arts informed him that he would be reinstated if he publicly stated his regret for his part in the demonstration, and promised not to join in similar protests in the future.

Kleinberger said he refused to consent to the committee's stipulations, since he said he was "really not guilty" of the original charges — that he had been part of a "conspiracy" in planning the demonstration, and had rescheduled his rhetoric class on Dec. 5 — but he did meet with the committee, along with Braddock, on Jan. 22.

No decision was reached at that meeting, nor at two meetings on Jan. 25 and 31 between Kleinberger, Stuit, Braddock, and Orville Hitchcock, professor of speech and a member of the committee.

Braddock told the DI Wednesday night that by Tuesday he, Stuit, and Kleinberger had "reached an accommodation" which resulted in Kleinberger's statement.

Statement Discussed

Kleinberger said that for the past week

he and Braddock had been discussing the form of the statement, but that he had left Iowa City Tuesday, after giving his final statement to Braddock and Stuit, before the decision to reinstate him was reached.

"I'm happy that it all worked out," Kleinberger said, "but I'm also disappointed I didn't have a chance for a public hearing to demonstrate to anyone who may still have any doubts that I'm not guilty of anything inappropriate."

Kleinberger's full statement, as prepared to and finally accepted by Braddock and Stuit, read as follows:

"As I have explained during our several conversations, I would join you in considering any aspect of the Dec. 5 demonstration which tended to endanger the existence or independence of the University, or to create obstacles to the fulfillment of its educational objectives, to be indeed regrettable. It has always been my intention to further those objectives, and I expect to continue to work constructively, responsibly, and in a manner appropriate for a university teacher and a citizen of a democratic society."

Dismissal Followed Arrest

Kleinberger's suspension and dismissal resulted directly from his antiwar activities on campus.

He was convicted of disturbing the peace during the Nov. 1 anti-Marine demonstration and was charged with conspiracy in connection with the Dec. 5 anti-Dow demonstration. That case has yet to reach the trial stage.

Braddock announced Kleinberger's suspension on Dec. 7. Some of Kleinberger's students maintained that his teaching was competent and asked for his reinstatement.

On Dec. 14 the executive committee of the Rhetoric Program said that an investigation had found Kleinberger's teaching to be competent and asked for his reinstatement.

Stuit said on Dec. 15 that the University would come to a decision about Kleinberger independent of the outcome of the state's case against him.

Stuit informed Kleinberger on Jan. 3 that he was dismissed and could appeal to the executive committee of the College of Liberal Arts.

Soviet Warships Join U.S. Force Off Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have moved a force of warships into Korean waters where American fighting ships have been concentrated in the Pueblo crisis.

Government sources said Wednesday there were 10 or 15 Soviet warships in the area, including cruisers, destroyers and frigates. They are believed to have come from Vladivostok, the Soviet Union's naval base in the Far East.

Meanwhile, the United States has withdrawn the giant 85,000-ton aircraft carrier Enterprise from the Sea of Japan, leaving behind two other carriers, destroyers and support ships in a force of about 20 U.S. vessels.

The sources, disclosing these developments said there was no connection between the presence of the Soviet ships and the withdrawal of the Enterprise. But they conceded the actions could create the impression of a partial American pullback in the face of Soviet naval pressure.

Withdrawal of the Enterprise to the southern fringe of the Korean Strait was tied by some U.S. sources to diplomatic moves aimed at getting Communist North Korea to return the intelligence ship Pueblo and the 82 survivors of her crew.

There were reports that Hungarian diplomats at the United Nations have suggested that pullback of the Enterprise might promote a willingness on the part of North Korea to talk seriously about returning the Pueblo.

The Pentagon confirmed that one member of the 83-man Pueblo crew had been killed and three were injured. It did not give any details of how the death and injuries occurred.

Gls, South Korean Students Clash

SEOUL (AP) — U.S. troops fired warning shots into the air Wednesday, then swept back 400 South Korean students who tried to march on Panmunjom where U.S. and North Korean delegates were assembling. It was the first clash between American soldiers and South Koreans.

The students were protesting against three secret meetings of the United States and the North Koreans at Panmunjom on the seizure of the USS Pueblo, from which South Korean delegates have been excluded.

An open armistice meeting was held at Panmunjom but the Pueblo was not discussed. But South Korean sources said a fourth secret U.S.-North Korean session was held before the open meeting.

These sources asserted the United States handed over an apology in an attempt to get back the 82 crewmen and a dead fireman from the Pueblo, seized by the North Koreans Jan. 23.

A U.S. military spokesman denied the United States apologized but did deny there was a secret meeting. North Korea insists over U.S. denials that the Pueblo invaded North Korean territorial waters and has demanded an apology.

South Koreans and their government have been critical of the secret meetings. They feel the United States has paid too much attention to the North Korean capture of the Pueblo and not enough to North Korea's infiltrators, such as those who invaded Seoul Jan. 21 in an alleged attempt to assassinate President Chung Hee Park. They want sterner U.S. measures to halt infiltrators.

Student leaders from six major colleges and universities in Seoul met Wednesday night and decided to hold protest rallies.

Iowa City, Coralville Discuss Mutual Problems—In Peace

By CHERYL REVDISON

The anticipated meeting of the Hatfields and the McCoys with the Johnson County Regional Planning Commission occurred with sewing circle serenity Wednesday night.

The mayors and city councils of Coralville and Iowa City met to discuss questions of annexation and sewer service, both issues with pending litigations.

Alan Vestal, chairman of the Regional Planning Commission, said the meeting was the first in a series of meetings between the two communities.

Vestal said the meeting would serve "to open up the areas of discussion," and no solutions would be reached in the first meeting.

Iowa City Mayor Loren Hickerson said the Iowa City council was "tickled to death to have the meeting."

Hickerson said Iowa City had no desire to limit Coralville's growth or the logical direction of growth. He said he hoped someday the two communities could merge because of the friendliness and natural interests of the communities.

Areas Seen As Expansive

The areas north and northwest of Coralville, which are areas both communities are attempting to annex, would be expensive for Iowa City to service, Hickerson said.

The city would be "quite willing, but not anxious," to service those areas, Hickerson said.

Hickerson said Iowa City would prefer to continue providing sewer service to Coralville as a customer with fair rates.

While Coralville as a customer, Iowa City would be able to continue servicing Oakdale, an area northwest of Coralville annexed by the city, through the existing sewer system, Hickerson said. It would also improve the west side sewer potential by redistributing the load.

Coralville had attempted to build a sewage treatment plant of its own but was enjoined from construction in a suit filed by Iowa City. Coralville has appealed the injunction to the state supreme court.

Location Would Concern City

If Coralville were to build its own plant, Hickerson said Iowa City would be concerned with the location of the plant, the soundness of the plans in terms of regional development and the adequate handling of the University's long range needs.

Hickerson said Iowa City would be willing to withdraw court proceedings over annexation if the sewage service and territorial annexation problems could be worked out informally.

Coralville Mayor Clarence Wilson said, "We're of the same opinion on most points and are willing to try to work something out on sewers and annexation."

The two mayors agreed to meet within a week to look at and discuss all factual, financial and planning figures available and set further meeting dates.

Vestal concluded the meeting by saying, "We're on the verge of great things for the whole region."

Dow Offers To Send Spokesman To Meet With Antiwar Protesters

The Dow Chemical Co., which is scheduled to conduct job interviews on campus Monday, has offered to send a company spokesman to the campus with the interviewers.

This fact was brought out Wednesday afternoon during a meeting between University officials, Iowa City Manager Frank R. Smiley and representatives of student groups planning to protest the Vietnamese war and Dow during the job interviews.

Dow manufactures napalm, a fiery explosive used in Vietnam.

Phil E. Connell, assistant to Pres. Howard R. Bowen, said that the president's office had received a letter Wednesday offering to send a company spokesman to the campus if the University requested. Connell said that a decision on whether to request such a spokesman would be made probably today or tomorrow.

Exactly what sort of meeting with students such a spokesman would consent to was not clear in the letter, according to Connell. At Wednesday's meeting, Connell said that possibly a number of conferences with small groups of students could be arranged.

Large Assembly Wanted

But several of the students indicated that they would like to see such a spokesman speak at a large assembly and be subjected to questions from those attending. Connell indicated that he would check to see whether such an assembly could be arranged and whether the Dow spokesman would consent.

Most of the meeting consisted of dialogue between University officials and the representatives of the protesting groups. University officials outlined what types of protest activities would be in violation of University regulations.

It appeared that a number of informal agreements were reached between the students and the administration. The administration indicated that it would allow a "hall of shame" to be placed along the route to the Business and Industrial Placement Office inside the Union. The "hall of shame" would be created by lining the route with demonstrators holding pictures of the results on civilians of napalm use in Vietnam.

No Blocking Allowed

The administration representatives, however, told the students that no blocking of access to the placement office would be allowed. It also told the students that results of the demonstration might necessitate clearing demonstrators from the area for periods of time during the day. The administration indicated that it would reserve the right to limit the number of persons inside that part of the Union in which the demonstration is planned.

Bert Marion, G, North Liberty, said he expected about 250 persons to participate in the demonstration. The majority of the demonstrators would picket, carrying signs outside the Union East entrance. Marion said. The students agreed that none of the signs used inside the Union would be mounted on sticks.

Besides the picketing and the "hall of shame," a rally is planned.

GORDON YOUNG
Des Moines Register

Feb. 7, 1968
Richard Turner said Tuesday night, you're late and suddenly you remember: no money. Worse yet, your balance in the bank is only $15 and you'll need more.

So you pop into Whelstone's, show them your ID card, give them a dime and write a check for $25. Sure you can't cover it, but that's no big hang up; your monthly check from home will be here next Tuesday, you hope. You make a resolution not to let it happen again, and then security off to pick up your date.

Congratulations. You've just committed a felony punishable by up to seven years imprisonment in the Iowa State Penitentiary.

You may not regard yourself as one of those bad check artists — the so-called paper hangers whom J. Edgar Hoover calls "bandits with fountain pens" — but the fact is, you've lied, cheated and broken a contract.

It all seems so seductively simple. Yet this shirtsleeves casualness has led hundreds of men in recent years to reach for a pen and find the penitentiary.

This week alone, approximately 200 inmates at the Men's Reformatory — about one-third of the population — and around 100 of those at the State Penitentiary could tell you just how costly, compulsive and careless the writing of bad checks can be.

And any Iowa merchant who has ever been the reluctant hang-board for a bouncing check probably believes that the appropriate place for check violators is behind bars.

One Iowa City merchant, who asked not to be identified, recommended last week that persons who write bad checks, especially forgers and those who have no bank accounts at all, should get automatic jail sentences.

In response to a question, the merchant said that he had never encountered such a professional check writer, but he repeated his assertion that all check violators should get automatic jail sentences.

The contrast between the merchant's outraged, punitive viewpoint and the casual attitude of the average student illustrates the gap between myth and reality in the bad check problem.

Interviews with other Iowa City residents, and an extensive study in Nebraska three years ago, reveal three widely-held beliefs which do not correspond to the actual seriousness of the problem:

Myth No. 1: Businessmen annually lose millions of dollars in thousands of bad checks.
Myth No. 2: Bad check writers are smooth-talking, high-living con men who really know their business.
Myth No. 3: The law is too lenient with check writers and should be tightened up to get more of them behind bars. That's the only way to solve the problem.

As for the first myth, just how big and bad — in reality — is the bad check problem? Specific, current figures are difficult to find, although there is an abundance of alarming estimates of the number and value of bad checks.

A study prepared last year for use by bankers estimated that the five Iowa City banks handled 250,000 checks a week. Just how many of these checks are bad is anyone's guess. Usually the merchant notifies the customer that the check bounced, the customer deposits enough to make it good, and the matter never comes to the attention of the police.

As for the yearly, national loss to businesses from bad checks, one can take one's pick of the statistics:

- The Saturday Evening Post says losses on forged and stolen checks amount to $30 million.
- The New York Times asserts the total loss is $500 to $600 million.
- And Time says the loss is

— Exaggerated Losses Noted —

The Problem Of Bad Checks Said To Be Full Of Myths

By GORDON YOUNG
First Of Three Articles

Such figures make sensational headlines and are typically viewed with consternation by editorial writers and businessmen. Curiously, however, they are not attributed to any authoritative source.

The situation was encountered repeatedly by the only investigator to date who has studied the bad check problem scientifically. He is Frederick K. Beutal, a Harvard graduate who was a professor and acting dean of the University of Nebraska College of Law from 1945 to 1963 and who now is on the faculty of the University of Puerto Rico College of Law.

Beutal and his law students conducted an exhaustive, foundation-financed study of the bad check problem in Nebraska which was published in 1957 as part of his book entitled "Experimental Jurisprudence."

Beutal's research is now out of date and applied only to Nebraska. It does, however, help the problem in perspective and could serve as a frame of reference for Iowa.

He found that Nebraska banks returned approximately 500,000 bad checks a year totalling $30 million.

However, these returned checks constituted less than half of one per cent of all checks cleared by Nebraska banks each year, or a ratio of one bad check for every 200 good ones.

Moreover, only 45-hundredths of one per cent of the checks were for insufficient funds, nine-tenths of the rest were for no account and a minuscule our-thousandths of one per cent of all checks written were forgeries.

Moreover, Beutal estimated that the total loss from bad checks — that is, from all those that never actually were collected — ran to less than one per cent of the gross sales in the state, about $500,000 yearly.

Bad check losses, in other words, amounted to about the price of three candy bars a year for every Nebraskan.

Beutal's study suggested that the conventional, Main Street attitude exaggerated the scope and substance of check violations.

On the other hand, the fact that about one-third of the inmates at the Anamosa reformatory are serving time on check charges also would indicate that it remains a serious and costly social problem.

"It is unquestionably a very big problem here," Johnson County Atty. Robert Jansen said in an interview last week. "If for no other reason than in terms of volume."

Jansen said that in 1966 he prosecuted 140 criminal cases in District Court, of which about 65 were check violations. He estimated that last year one-third of his time was spent prosecuting bad check cases.

Only traffic offense cases occur more frequently, he said. The cashier of the Iowa State Bank and Trust Co., O.D. Bartholow, said that students as a group did not write more bad checks than other population categories.

It was his opinion, however, that since Iowa City's population is of a transient nature, the incidence of bad checks is greater here. He noted that patients and relatives at the University and Veterans Administration Hospitals account for many new faces in town, in addition to the annual influx of freshmen and transfer students.

"Your merchant's best protection against taking bad checks is to know his customers," Bartholow commented. "In a town like Burlington or Ottumwa he has a better chance of doing this than in Iowa City."

Police detective Sgt. Donald Strand, agreed with Bartholow's belief that there are proportionately more check violations here than in similar Iowa communities.

"It's a terrific problem," he said. Pointing to a new set of filing cabinets in his office, he said that his department had recently got them to store the records for the new cases it handles.

Strand's secretary, who devotes full-time to handling the paperwork in bad check cases, said that a survey last year showed that from January to August there were 1,100 complaints of bad checks to Iowa City police.

Given the number of checks processed by Iowa City banks, that means that the police receive complaints on about five-hundredths of one per cent of the checks written here, a figure comparable to Beutal's Nebraska statistics.

Strand said that the violators made their checks good to merchants in about half the cases, but he could give no dollar estimate of the actual loss.

If these statistics do not quite substantiate the myth that businessmen each year lose millions of dollars in thousands of bad checks, this is small comfort to those who are convicted of check violations.

These men know only too well that the bars on their prison windows are not made of rubber, as their checks were.

They form the basis of the second myth about the bad check problem and will be the subject of the second article in this series, to be published in Friday's Daily Iowan.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson asked Congress Wednesday to approve a massive assault on crime, with special emphasis on tougher laws to curb dangerous drugs — mainly LSD and other hallucinogens.

The program also includes individual efforts aimed against organized crime, gambling, rioting and alcoholism.

The President linked a renewed call for legislation to curb firearms sales with a new proposal which would make it a crime to cross state lines to incite riots. He said these are aimed at "two causes of death and destruction — the criminal agitator and the gun."

A caption to a picture in Wednesday's edition of The Daily Iowan erroneously identified Marvin Paustian, El Davenport, as Tom Mohr, G. Pomroy. The DI regrets the error and apologizes to both parties.

'Free University' Gets Off To Rousing, Surprising Start

By DEBBY DONOVAN
Ass't University Editor

About 229 students enrolled in courses of the new Action Studies Program Monday and Tuesday at Registration.

Other students may enroll in any of the courses by attending the first meeting of the course or by contacting a professor in charge.

About one half of the students enrolled in the courses for credit, according to George C. Hoyt, associate professor of business administration and a member of the program's steering committee. The other half chose to either enroll in groups that were not offered for credit or to enroll in the other courses for no credit.

The Action Studies Program has been described as a "free university within the University." Students and faculty get together and plan programs of study on various current problems.

Hoyt said Wednesday night that the steering committee had not been "prepared for the degree of spontaneous response."

"Better To Proceed" He said he thought it was "better to proceed in this way and make a few mistakes and then retrench, than to spend a year discussing the program."

"We have taken action — we have made some mistakes. I'm sure people will tell us what the mistakes are," he added.

A careful evaluation of the program will be in order after it has been in effect, he said.

The more popular courses, which had over 20 students enrolled in each, were: History of Vietnam, Contemporary Afro-American Literature and Thought, Literature and Revolution, Literature and Theology, Poverty Action Program, The New Industrial State and the Question of Peace and Practical Creativity for Poets, Writers and Other People.

The courses will meet as follows:

Course Schedules
The New Industrial State and the Question of Peace, with William P. Albrecht, assistant professor of economics; John C. James, instructor in history; Robert R. Miller, assistant professor of business administration; and Richard M. Roseman, assistant professor of economics, met Wednesday night.

Poverty Action
Poverty Action Program, with Roland K. Hawkes, assistant professor of sociology and anthropology; Gary S. Goodpaster, assistant professor of law, and others, will meet at 7:30 tonight in 216 Phillips Hall.

Literature and Revolution, with Alan B. Spitzer, professor of history, and John E. Grant, professor of English, will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in 221 University Hall.

Mythology and American Folk Literature, a non-credit group, with Harry Oster, associate professor of English, will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in 245 University Hall.

Practical Creativity for Poets, Writers and Other People, with George E. Starbuck, associate professor of English and director of the Writers Workshop, will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in 248 University Hall.

Applied Behavior Analysis, with Annette W. Breiling, resident in child behavior development, and Lowell Schoer, professor of education, does not yet have a meeting time and place.

Teaching in the Urban Ghetto, with Kauro Yamamoto, associate professor of education, will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in W-103 East Hall.

A critique of education and business administration and a critical look at the corporate life with Anthony Costantino, professor of economics; Charles E. Martberry, professor of business administration; and Louis F. Biagioni, associate professor and chairman of accounting, will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday in 245 University Hall.

History of Vietnam, a non-credit course, with James N. Murray Jr., chairman of the Department of Political Science, and Hoyt, will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in 248 University Hall.

Hoyt said that other faculty members could participate in the courses if they wished.

Renewal Appeal Gets Amendment
The city filed an amendment to its legal answer to a petition for permanent injunction against urban renewal Wednesday.

The amendment was filed by William L. Meardon, special city attorney for urban renewal, in a pre-trial meeting between the opposing attorneys and District Court Judge Clair E. Hamilton.

Hamilton called the meeting so that the attorneys could agree upon the exhibits that are to be presented at the hearing Feb. 19.

A temporary injunction against the city's plan for urban renewal was granted Sept. 20. Twenty downtown businessmen filed a petition stating that five councilmen had conflicts of interest in the proposed urban renewal area. The temporary injunction was granted on the conflict of interest argument.

A permanent injunction is to be considered at the Feb. 19 hearing.

4 New Motions Filed In Conspiracy Cases

A motion was filed in Johnson County District Court Wednesday in behalf of four persons indicted on charges of conspiracy.

The motion is in behalf of Bruce Clark, Al, Des Moines, and Dennis R. Ankrum, Jean Gammon and Stephen R. Morris, all of Iowa City. The motion was filed by Michael J. Kennedy, a New York City attorney.

Included in the motion are requests that the county attorney file with the court the minutes of the January Grand Jury and further details and background statements of grand jury witnesses.

Similar motions had been filed earlier for others indicted for conspiracy.

Seven conspiracy charges and three resisting an officer charges were filed in connection with an antiwar demonstration on campus Dec. 5. Legal motions were to be filed by last Friday, but Judge Clair E. Hamilton said Wednesday that late motions could be considered by the court.

Sports— Facts and Facets

By JOHN HARMON
 Asst. Sports Editor

All-star athletes usually become great because they have outstanding physical ability, body control, a sound grasp of fundamentals and the ability to execute them at all times.

But when talking about the hall of famers, the element of greatness is decided by a single prerequisite: the ability to deliver under pressure. The really great athletes are the ones who can sink a winning 25-foot bucket at the buzzer or smash that line drive in the last inning to break up a ball game.

There's another type of pressure, however, that many good ball players have to face. It's a type that haunts one even before he steps on the court, diamond or gridiron.

Instead of taxing an athlete's physical assets, this pressure is directed against mental capabilities.

Case in point: Bill Bradley, rookie guard for the New York Knicks of the NBA.

After studying at Oxford for two years, playing little basketball, Bradley decided to give professional basketball a try. The American press jumped at this unique news story and have been interviewing Bradley nearly every day at every town he appears in ever since.

Bradley was expected to jump into the Knicks lineup along with small college All-America Walt Frazier, Michigan All-America Cazzie Russell, and veterans Willis Reed, Walt Bellamy, Dick Barnett, Dick Van Arsdale and Em Bryant to give New York a great winning team.

All this occurred even before Bradley had stepped onto a professional basketball floor or had faced any professional competition.

Is this type of artificial pressure necessary? American basketball fans undoubtedly waited anxiously for Bradley's return to U.S. hardwoods. They also knew he would be unable to reach his level of collegiate stardom in the first few weeks of pro play, until he rounded into top form.

Yet sports pages are still loaded with minutia such as how Bradley laced his shoes in Philly, what he thought of the plane ride to the West Coast and when he thinks he'll become the president of the United States.

Meanwhile, Bradley's teammates apparently don't exist.

A similar phenomenon occurred last year in the highly celebrated coin toss in which the Detroit Pistons lost rights to Russell and had to settle for 1968 NBA scoring leader Dave Bing.

Like Bradley, Russell was touted by the press as the man who would put the Knicks in the playoffs — a feat they avoided with regularity for 10 years.

There will probably be hundreds of cases like Bradley and Russell, not only on the professional, but also amateur level, at least if the present immature attitude of American press continues.

The sports writers fail to realize that the less said about Bradley's shoe laces or his presidential possibilities, the quicker he'll be throwing in those winning 25-footers at the buzzer. That, after all, is pressure.

Hawkeyes Outrun Purdue

By JOHN HARMON
 Asst. Sports Editor

Iowa outran and outshot a fledgling Purdue team here Wednesday night 94-87 before a capacity crowd in the Field House. The win boosts the Hawks' season record to 4-2 in conference play and moves them within striking distance of Ohio State (5-1) and Illinois (4-1).

Purdue's Rick Mount put on an expected scoring exhibition, hitting 31 points from everywhere on the floor, but Iowa, boosted by the presence of sophomore Glenn Vidnovic, was able to outrun the Boilermakers consistently after gaining a first half lead.

Vidnovic, who became eligible only Tuesday after sitting out the first semester, scored 17 points, grabbed eight rebounds and blocked several shots in over 18 minutes of action.

Vidnovic teamed with Sam Williams, Huston Breedlove and Dick Jensen to give the Hawks a consistently fresh front court line-up. All four reached double figures in the most balanced Iowa scoring attack of the year: Jensen and Breedlove scored 10 and Williams hit the Hawk high of 24.

Also high in the scoring column were Ron Norman with 20 and Chad Calabria 11.

Purdue, now 3-3 in league play and 9-7 overall, ran off to a 10-5 lead with 16:02 remaining in the first period, but Iowa Coach Ralph Miller injected some new blood into the Hawkeye running game in Vidnovic and Calabria.

It was downhill for the Boilermakers from that point on. Vidnovic threw in his first varsity shot at 15:46 and followed with two straight buckets to put the Hawks within easy reach.

A jump shot by center Jensen gave the Hawks their first lead at the mid-way mark, but Mount scored a jumper and forward Herman Gilliam a foul shot to put Purdue back on top.

Play became extremely heated in the latter portion of the period with the hottest moment coming when Mount attempted to fake Williams while driving for the hoop. Iowa fans and Miller saw the love as traveling, but the referee saw otherwise and the Hawks were assessed a technical.

Mount missed the free shot, but connected on a followup jumper, to give Purdue a 27-26 advantage, its last of the game.

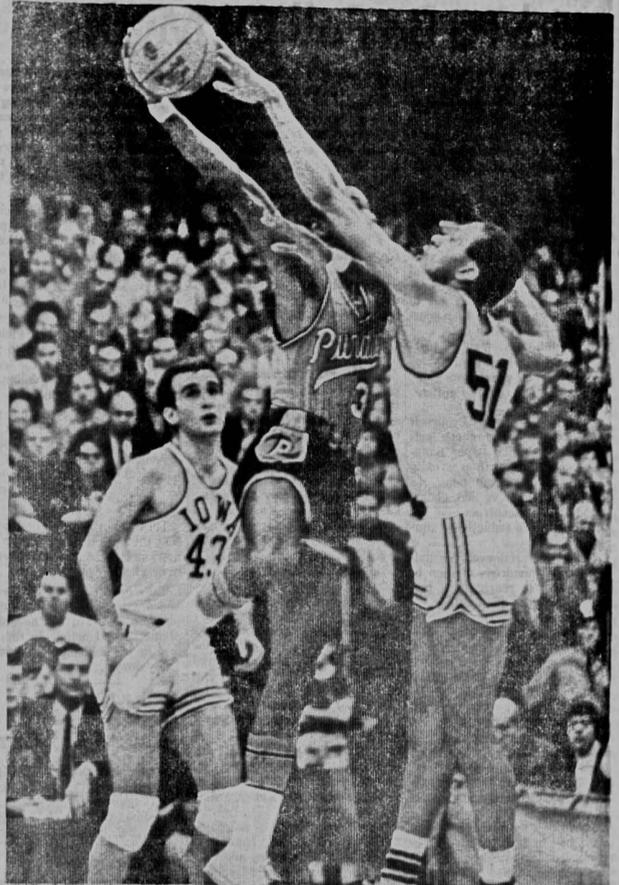

Both teams played similar styles of ball throughout the first half with 2-2-1 zone defenses and fast breaking offenses. The tempo of the game was so fast that Purdue Coach George King gave Mount a two minute rest late in the half.

But Iowa was able to pass the ball around and through the Boilermaker defense with amazing accuracy and to shoot at a 50 per cent clip to fluster Purdue's game plan.

Miller also gave Williams a brief first period rest, but only after the Hawks solidified a 10 point lead.

Mount, however, was caught in foul trouble in the second stanza and went to the sidelines for good at 4:35 when he fouled Iowa guard Rollie McGrath on a fast break.

Miller continued shuffling his lineup in the second period, getting good results from second stringers Vidnovic and Calabria. In the Hawks were able to keep comfortably ahead in the speedy affair.

The Hawks maintained a 12 point lead in the early going of the last half with Williams arling under the basket for two three-point plays against the rugged Boilermaker front line.

Purdue climbed to within eight points when Mount scored on a free throw and field goal, immediately before he fouled out.

Iowa went into control patterns with nearly three minutes left and Boilermaker hopes of rising

UI Poets Play At 'Playboying'

ARTISTIC STIMULATION — Foreign University writers of the International Writing Program spent four days in Chicago earlier this week, and the highlight of their stay was an evening of poetry and relaxation at the Playboy Club. Here, a peculiar phenomenon of American culture — not to be found in the writers' homelands — named Elke, serves coffee to poet Michael Dennis Browne (left), lecturer in English, Writers Workshop; Eugene Nicole, G, France; and Mrs. Zbigniew Bienkowski, Iowa City, a Polish poet. — Photo by Diane Ying

By DIANE YING
The Playboy Club was one of the places visited by 26 foreign University writers during their four-day tour of Chicago last weekend.

Headed by Paul Engle, professor of English and director of the International Writing Program, writers from 18 countries went to museums and the Art Institute, viewed plays and movies and talked with literary critics in the VIP room of the Playboy Club.

"The purpose of the trip," Engle said, "was to give the foreign writers a chance to see something else than Iowa City, to visit the biggest city in the Midwest and to get in touch with various aspects of American culture."

The trip was sponsored by The Johnson Foundation of Racine, Wis., which paid all the expenses.

The Playboy visit was arranged by Robie Macaulay, fiction editor of Playboy magazine. He is a former student of the Writers Workshop.

"Philosophy Argued"
Some argued whether the now famous "Playboy philosophy" was a part of American culture, but all the foreign writers seemed to enjoy their visit to the club, where some of the poets gave readings.

Poems were read, chanted and sung in English and in Persian, Spanish, Slovene, Cambodian and Chinese. Literary critics from the Chicago Tribune, the Chicago Daily News and the Chicago Sun-Times were the audience.

The group was also invited to a reception given by the Store-Brandel Foundation. Dr. Karl Menninger, author and psychiatrist, was the host.

The special exhibit of Picasso's works in the Art Institute was praised by all the writers as "magnificent." Their opinions were divided over the two plays they saw, however. "Fortune and Men's Eyes" is an avant garde play which deals with the miserable conditions of prison inmates. "Mame" is a popular musical comedy.

The favorite spot of the foreign writers was Old Town, Chicago's answer to Greenwich Village. Many visited there several times. They toured the oddity stores, enjoyed jazz and saw underground movies.

Cross Section Presented
"This trip represented a cross section of American life," said Danicew Worku, a writer from Ethiopia. The International Writing Program was established by Engle last year. The program invites a number of foreign writers for a year of study, discussion, writing and travel in the United States.

Last year, the writers went to Minneapolis to see "The House of Atreus," a play based on a Greek tragedy by Aeschylus. Their future plans include a visit to Mark Twain's home town, Hannibal, Mo., and a trip by steamboat along the Mississippi river.

"The program provides these writers with the opportunity to learn more about this country and its traditions," Engle said, "and especially to meet artists and critics from the United States, as well as from different parts of the world — men and women with whom they share mutual interests and commitments which transcend cultural and political backgrounds."

Many foreign writers of the Writers Workshop, Engle said, have become centers of information on American life and culture at their homelands.

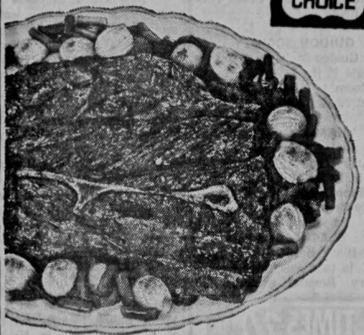

Currently there are 27 writers from 18 countries registered in the program.

Chapman Named Board President

Ansel Chapman, an Iowa City lawyer, was named president of the Iowa City Community Board of Education at a special meeting of the board Wednesday afternoon.

Chapman, who had been vice president of the board, succeeds Dr. Michael Bonfiglio, who resigned from the presidency last week due to ill health.

Board member William V. Phelan was named vice president to replace Chapman.

The board appointed Robert C. Randall, operations manager at Proctor and Gamble Manufacturing Co., to fill the member vacancy until the regular election in September.

Randall had previously served two terms on the board. He declined to run for a third term last fall.

Kelso suggested that students should only take the tests if they had been in the upper 25 per cent of their graduating class or had had college work in the specific area.

The area examinations last 75 minutes each the subject tests 90 minutes. The charge is $2.50.

Kelso said that 90 per cent of those who took the December tests earned credit for exemption from core requirements.

Credit Tests In Core Areas To Be Given

Examinations for credit or exemption in the College of Liberal Arts core areas and some other subjects will begin at 8 a.m. March 16 in 100 Phillips Hall.

Students may register for the examinations until Feb. 21, according to H. E. Kelso, assistant dean of the college.

Students must score at the 50th percentile to gain exemption from a core area and at the 65th percentile to earn credit. The tests are made available through the College Entrance Examination Board and are scored with national sophomore norms.

Kelso suggested that students should only take the tests if they had been in the upper 25 per cent of their graduating class or had had college work in the specific area.

The area examinations last 75 minutes each the subject tests 90 minutes. The charge is $2.50.

Kelso said that 90 per cent of those who took the December tests earned credit for exemption from core requirements.

Ford Cabinet Job Rumored

WASHINGTON — Despite a lack of confirmation, speculation persisted in the capital Wednesday that Henry Ford II might be in line for a cabinet post. Neither the White House nor Ford shut the door completely to the possibility.

The current illness of Secretary of Commerce Alexander B. Trowbridge led speculation in that direction.

Ford told a Detroit news conference Tuesday he has no plans to take a government post "at the present time," and the White House said it knew of no such move.

The Commerce Department acts as the clearing house for a new program to attract business to the Negro slums to create jobs for the unemployed. The Ford Motor Co. is active in this program and Ford himself is chairman of the National Alliance of Businessmen which is helping with the program.

Kerner Won't Run Again

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner decided Wednesday not to seek an unprecedented third consecutive term, opening the door to a shuffling of the 1968 Democratic state ticket.

Speculation immediately centered on three or four potential candidates to replace him on the slate, to be picked by the Democratic State Central Committee.

One of them is R. Sargent Shriver, director of the federal antipoverty program and a resident of Illinois.

Other widely discussed possibilities include State Treasurer Adlai E. Stevenson III, son of the late ambassador to the United Nations; State Auditor Michael J. Howlett and Atty. Gen. William G. Clark.
Although Kerner disclaimed it, reports have persisted he would be tapped for a high federal post if he did not run for re-election.
