Students and the faculty prepare for the reappearance of the University Senate in the fall.

The Senate has a long history, but its recent reappearance has not been without controversy. Students and faculty members have been divided over the Senate's role in academic decision-making.

The Senate's most recent reappearance was last spring, when the Senate was created as a way to address student concerns about the administration's handling of the new senate constitution. Despite this, it is unclear whether the Senate will continue to play a role in academic decision-making this fall.

One of the Senate's main functions is to represent student interests to the administration. However, some faculty members have expressed concern that the Senate is not adequately representing students' interests.

Despite these concerns, the Senate has proved to be a valuable forum for students and faculty to engage in open dialogue about academic decisions.

New Group Started To Help Veterans

By ARTHUR HENDRICK

A new veterans' organization has been formed in the area in recent months. The group is called the "Veterans Council," and its purpose is to help veterans of World War II who are unemployed or otherwise in need of assistance.

The council is composed of veterans of all branches of the armed forces, and it meets on a regular basis to discuss ways of providing assistance to members. It has already helped several veterans find jobs, and it plans to continue its efforts in the future.

The council is also working to raise awareness of the problems faced by veterans who have returned from service. It is trying to educate the public about the sacrifices made by America's service men and women, and it is working to ensure that their needs are met.

The council is open to all veterans who wish to become involved. It meets on the first Thursday of each month at the American Veterans Center, located at 123 Main Street. For more information, please call 555-1234.

Narrow Streets Are Planned That Way, Says Lundberg

By CHARLENE COLE

Bruner argues that the design of our streets and neighborhoods is crucial to the quality of life in our communities. He emphasizes the importance of considering the needs of all residents, including those with special needs.

"Narrow Streets Are Planned That Way" is available at local bookstores.
