Rockefeller Enters GOP Race

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, reversing his previous position, threw himself into contention Tuesday for the Republican Presidential nomination and vowed to fight Richard Nixon for it, "right up to the last vote."

"I now commit myself to seeking this office — and so serve our nation — with all my heart and mind and will," he said.

Rockefeller's expressions ranged from jutting-jawed determination to breezy optimism as he made his announcement and then replied to questions in a news conference.

His wife, wearing a bright, tangerine-colored dress, sat on his right while he spoke. He frequently turned to look at her.

Just 40 days ago, in another news conference, the New York governor took himself out of the race for the nomination. A number of the men who persuaded him to change his mind were present Tuesday.

In a conversation at his official residence later, Rockefeller said to a reporter, "The country has changed. Never in history has so much changed in five weeks. Now I am giving the people an option."

Four Reasons Given

In a statement which he read before the questioning began, he set forth four reasons for reversing himself:

1. "... the gravity of the crises that face us as a people."

2. His conviction that "to comment from the sidelines is not an effective way to present the alternatives."

3. He said many persons, "within the Republican party and outside it," urged him to get in the fight.

4. "Personally, I am deeply disturbed by the course of events — growing unrest and anxiety at home, and the signs of disintegration abroad."

Comments promptly came from Nixon, the apparent frontrunner for the GOP nomination and from Gov. George Romney of Michigan, who Rockefeller supported until he dropped out of the race in early March.

Nixon's statement said in part:

"Glad To Have Him In"

"I think Gov. Rockefeller's announcement will make for a more exciting convention and will result in a more meaningful discussion of the issues. . . . I'm glad to have him in. I have thought all along that it would be very helpful for the Republican party to have another active candidate in the contest."

Romney echoed this thought, adding: "Because no other candidate in either party can match his executive experience in national and state government, every American should give his availability for the President the same careful consideration that the Michigan delegation will in determining which candidate it will finally support at the convention in Miami Beach."

On March 21, when Rockefeller said he would not contend for the nomination, he said he would answer "any true and meaningful call from his party."

Asked if he now has heard that call, he replied, "I think the draft is really the result of events."

His supporters said this refers primarily to President Johnson's announcement that he would not seek re-election.

At another point, Rockefeller said he has been edging toward his decision to run over the past 10 days or so.

He said he had discussed his decision with "many of those who are present, in this room." Among them were Sen. Thurston Morton and William E. Miller, running mate with Barry Goldwater in 1964. The two last week made an extensive trip "in which they felt and expressed to me their deep conviction that this was the right course of action, that this was in the interests of the party and that it was the desire of the people," Rockefeller said.

Local Republicans, Democrats Alike Welcome Rockefeller's Entry In Race

Local Republicans and Democrats Tuesday night expressed anticipation of an interesting campaign and a good race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Commenting on the late entry of New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller in the campaign picture, persons interviewed said they expected greater debate and discussion of pertinent issues.

Rockefeller is scheduled to speak at a rally on the Old Capitol steps at 4 p.m. Thursday. Rockefeller's speech will be held in the Union Main Lounge in case of rain.

Marion R. Neely, Johnson County Republican Chairman, said Rockefeller's entry would assist in creating a better Republican candidate.

Neely said Rockefeller's late entry would not affect his chances because of the need for competition in the Republican party.

Iowa's 24 delegates to the Republican national convention were elected March 22 in Des Moines. Most of the delegates, Neely said, are uncommitted and waiting to be sold on a good man.

Neely said the Rockefeller bid will provide healthy competition with no ill effects to the Republicans.

Russell Ross, professor of political science, said he did not think Rockefeller's entry would split the party over a candidate choice.

"Rockefeller will have a hard time getting the majority of Iowa's delegates," Ross said.

If Rockefeller would have declared his candidacy earlier, he would have had a better chance to capture 50 per cent of Iowa's delegates, Ross said. He said Rockefeller had seven delegates now and might be able to get three more delegates in Iowa.

"I'm happy to see Rockefeller in the race," Rep. Fred Schwengel (R-Iowa) said.

Schwengel, reached by telephone in Washington, said Rockefeller would have some support in Iowa, but his support would depend on his campaign intensity.

"With two big men who respect each other in the race, Rockefeller's entry will improve Republican prospects," Schwengel said.

Schwengel said Rockefeller's entry would move the Republican party from page seven of newspapers to page one.

John Murray, L.S. Ames, said Rockefeller's entry would provide dialogue, not monologue, before the convention. Murray is head of Students for Rockefeller on campus.

Murray said he expected about 100 students to work for Rockefeller. Murray predicted that Rockefeller could get support from 10 to 12 of Iowa's national delegates.

Iowa City workers for Democratic presidential hopefuls Sen. Eugene McCarthy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy said they did not expect Rockefeller's entry to affect the Democratic campaign.

"I'm delighted to see Rocky in the race," William Suplee, Iowa Kennedy Campaign coordinator, said.

Suplee and Mrs. Paul Cilek, co-chairmen of the Johnson County McCarthy group, said the two Republican candidates would add debate and excitement to the campaign.

Welcome Home Harmon, Happy You Could Come

By KAPPY BRISTOL

Gentle Wednesday began a day early with a "happening" at the Iowa City Municipal Airport Tuesday night.

About 70 wildly-costumed, sign-bearing, guitar playing, arm waving students sang, "Harmon'll never go away again" to the tune of "Hello, Dolly." And you can bet that Harmon probably won't go away again. At least, if he does, he won't tell his friends about it next time.

The occasion for the happenings was Harmon Dresner's homecoming. Who is Harmon Dresner that he should receive such a standing ovation upon his descent from an Ozark Airlines airplane?

Harmon Dresner is a junior drama student from Chicago, Ill., who happened to go home for two days this week. His friends decided to meet him at the airport. And when Harmon Dresner's friends come to meet someone at the airport, it's to stage one of the funniest things ever seen on or off the stage.

Seyfer and Clark are members of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, where the car rolled from. A wrecker failed to get the car out and a crane will be brought in Wednesday. Iowa Conservation officials gave the fraternity until tonight to get the car out of the river, according to Seyfer, who is house president. — Photo by Rick Greenawalt

'Do Your Thing Day' To Be Mixed Up, Busy

By DENNIS BATES and SUZANNE OLSON

Today is gentle Thursday, mixed-up Wednesday and plain busy for any day.

The gentle.

"Those so inclined," as the poster read, will walk in the Governor's Day ceremonies after Gov. Harold Hughes has reviewed the ROTC cadets at the Athletic Field parade grounds. In addition, the gentle people will present flowers and condolences to the ROTC members.

At noon, gentleness focuses on the Pentacrest. Box lunches will be swapped, kites will be flown, beads and flowers will be shared, and harps and guitars will be played.

The peace and quiet will return to the Union Main Lounge to hear Hughes speak or just to congregate on the patio. At 2 p.m. there will be a poetry reading by George Starbuck, Anselm Hallo and Michael Dennis Browne, all instructors in the Writers Workshop. Following the reading will be a marionette and puppet show and dancing, also on the patio.

When the sun sets, there will be a pastoral "gathering on the green across from the Union; a quiet time; perhaps a joining of hands."

Brad Steiger, author and lecturer on the supernatural, will explore "inner space" at 8 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium while participants "remember the sunset and anticipate the sunrise."

Gentle events will close back on the Union patio with dancing to music by St. John and the Heads, a local rock 'n' roll group, sponsored by the Hawkeye Student Party (HSP).

The mixed-up.

Occurring concurrently, but not in direct connection with the gentle events, will be a series of events sponsored by the United Front. The major difference seems to be that the gentle events have no definite sponsor, while the demonstration and other similar events are being sponsored by the United Front, a coalition group made up of Students For a Democratic Society, the Afro-American Society and the HSP.

The most definite plans for today's demonstration were decided in a planning rally Tuesday night. These activities include carrying coffins at the parade grounds, reading and presenting petitions to Hughes and Pres. Howard R. Bowen.

Student Senate Vetoes 2nd Young GOP Club

By DON ROBERTSON

Amid bangs from a pounding gavel and frequent calls to order, senators scurrying helter-skelter about the room, points-of-order, clarifications from the parliamentarian, hissing of fellow senators and general chaos, the Student Senate Tuesday night voted down 19 to 12 a bill which would have granted a temporary charter to a second group of Young Republicans on campus.

The debate had been building up for many weeks. It began when Hugh Field, L2, Waterloo, ran for the presidency of the campus chapter of the Young Republicans Club, a duly chartered group on campus. His opponent was Terry Branstad, A3, Leland, Branstad lost by about 50 votes, challenged the election unsuccessfully, then formed another group called University of Iowa College Young Republicans. The new group drew up a constitution, completed all the necessary work, and finally petitioned the senate, Tuesday night, for status as a chartered organization.

Presidents Testify

After all spectators, except the press, Field and Branstad, were asked to leave the room, both Republican group presidents attested to their recognition by the state Republican Party. In fact, letters

News In Brief

WASHINGTON — The newly named U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, George W. Ball, predicted an eventual political settlement of the Vietnamese war. But he cautioned against trying one-sided concessions or "a show of weakness" to bring this about.

and walking in parade form in front of the reviewing stand.

Plans were also discussed to form a peace sign on the parade grounds and to sing peace songs there.

Steve Morris, A1, Iowa City, a member of SDS, said that another Nov. 1 must not occur because of poor organization or because the police did not know what the demonstrators were planning.

Some of the approximately 50 people at the rally wanted to stress the peace and love aspect of the day while others emphasized the necessity of picketing the Business and Industrial Placement Office.

Both the Marines and the Army will be recruiting today in the placement office in the Union.

No definite action was taken on this proposal.

Other demonstration plans confirmed Tuesday night included a rally at 10 a.m. on the Pentacrest during which anyone is invited to speak.

About 10:45 those attending the rally will walk over to the parade grounds west of the Field House.

After a 45-minute military ceremony, the demonstrators will have about 15 minutes in which to make their demands to Hughes and Bowen.

Hughes will hold a press conference at noon followed by a luncheon in the Union with the military units. The demonstrators were uncertain what action they would take, if any, during the luncheon and during Hughes' speech after the luncheon.

Another rally is scheduled by the demonstrators at 3:30 p.m. to hear Hughes' answer to the demands presented earlier in the day.

The events scheduled by the United Front are not definite, and they are somewhat mixed into the gentle events.

The busy.

In addition to other events today, several additional meetings are being held.

James Goddard, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, will speak at the College of Pharmacy Auditorium at 4:10 p.m. There will also be a meeting of graduate assistants to discuss proposed procedures for the dismissal of graduate assistants at 8 p.m. at 107 English-Philosophy Building.

And, of course, today is May Day, an age-old holiday recognized through most of the world.

were read from Jack Warren, State Young Republican chairman, in which he said the state group would authorize two groups on this campus and would hope the University administration would do the same. Rovert Augustine, associate dean of students and adviser to the senate, spoke for the administration and said it would agree to two organizations.

Before voting on the bill which requested the charter authorization, the senate amended the bill to request a temporary charter, rather than a permanent charter, with the agreement that both factions would submit to a general party election Feb. 1, 1969, in which the party would again unite itself behind one officer slate. The election was to have been under the direction of the Elections Board. Several senators spoke to the point that this would not solve the problem, but most likely only postpone it. Field called it a "shoddy compromise." Sen. Gary Sissel, said "it's about time the senate faces issues, not put them off." The senate acted by denying the new charter. Following the meeting, Field was unavailable for comment, and Branstad said he would reserve comment for later.

Voting Rights To Be Probed

In other business the senate authorized a commission of five senators to examine student voting rights in Iowa City.

The senators are acting under the authority of a bill passed by the senate which calls for immediate action by Johnson County officials to correct current voting limitations placed upon university students.

Currently, to vote, students must have a valid Iowa driver's license with a Johnson County address, a Johnson County license plate on their car, cannot live in approved university housing, and cannot hold part-time employment with the university.

The senate found these regulations in direct conflict with statewide voting procedures and indicated they will ask the Iowa Civil Liberties Union to help in the investigation.

Columbia Sit-In Disrupted By Cops; Militants Urge All-Out Student Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City police stormed five occupied Columbia University buildings in the dead of night Tuesday and broke up a week-long student sit-in, which had paralyzed the Ivy League campus.

"We anticipate a full schedule of classes Wednesday," a university spokesman later announced.

However, even as he spoke, undergraduate militants sought to promote an all-out strike of students and faculty. Their target was Columbia President Grayson Kirk, who called in the police to smash the disruptive demonstration.

Kirk Resignation Asked

Groups roamed the littered uptown Manhattan campus, shouting, "Kirk must go! Kirk must go!"

Kirk said he had no intention of resigning.

In the club swinging, fist fighting, pushing and kneeling that marked the violent subjugation of the Columbia demonstrators, 100 youths and 15 policemen were reported injured, none seriously. There were 628 arrests, on charges of trespassing.

The early morning assault against the barricaded and occupied buildings turned the once-peaceful Morningside Heights campus into a dark and seething uproar of students, who bled, wept, screamed and denounced police as "fascists."

Police Brutality Charged

There were complaints of police brutality against the 600 to 700 students whose sit-ins began April 23. Columbia has an enrollment of 25,381.

New York Times reporter Bob Thomas said he had been severely beaten by police, and added: "I observed some really savage beatings given to students."

David B. Truman, the university's vice president, condemned the occupied buildings could not be retaken "without some roughing up."

Lindsay Asks Report

Police Commissioner Howard R. Leary congratulated his policemen on "an excellent job." However, Mayor John V. Lindsay asked Leary for a report on the brutality charges.

Lindsay said in a statement: "Regardless of the merits of their cause, a few hundred students cannot be allowed to impose their will on a university of some 20,000 students through destructive, illegal tactics."

"Only after a remarkable display of patience and restraint did the university file criminal charges of trespass and formally request the New York City police to remove the students who had taken over school buildings. Once the charges were filed, the police had no choice under the law but to arrest and remove the trespassing students."

Riders, Revenues Increase Despite 15-Cent Bus Fare

By RON GEORGEFF

Bus riders and fare revenues have increased despite a 15 cent fare, Lewis Negus, president of Iowa City Coach Co., said Tuesday.

Negus said the number of city bus riders in March, 1968, was one per cent more than in March, 1967. Also, fare revenue in March, 1968, was 20 per cent more than revenue in March, 1967.

"I am pretty happy with the results of the fare increase," Negus said.

"I will definitely continue city bus service up to June 10, but after that it will depend upon what the city wants," he said.

Negus said he would not continue his service if city officials decided to buy their own buses and go into a public transit business.

City officials are currently preparing applications to obtain federal funds to finance bus purchases.

Negus said the biggest drop in passengers after the 15-cent fare began came from the Hawkeye Apartment area.

City bus fare increased from 10 to 15 cents March 1 after the City Council discontinued a $5,000 monthly city-University subsidy to the bus system. The subsidy began in September, 1966, after the bus company experienced financial difficulty and considered going out of business.

Before the subsidy was cut-off, city officials and Negus negotiated to replace the subsidy arrangement with a bus contract. The subsidy had been found to be excessive by two University accountants. Contract negotiations broke down Feb. 15 and have never resumed.

Doctors Admit Eisenhower Had A 'Mild' Attack

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower was reported resting comfortably and in "excellent spirits" at the base hospital Tuesday. He was brought here Monday night suffering from what authorities now call a mild heart attack.

The 77-year-old soldier-statesman played golf Monday morning at his winter home at Palm Desert, 40 miles south. After being taken ill, he canceled an appointment for a visit from King Olav of Norway and called for his doctors.

After examining him at home, they ordered him flown here by helicopter.

"Gen Eisenhower developed some chest discomfort," a medical bulletin said. "... he spent a comfortable night without chest discomfort. Special blood tests, electrocardiogram and X-ray studies have been accomplished and are being evaluated.

"This morning (Tuesday) his blood pressure and pulse are normal, he remains comfortable and in excellent spirits. "Mrs. Eisenhower followed the general to the base by automobile and is staying at the hospital."

This Strategic Air Command base has Southern California's largest military hospital. It handles Vietnam returnees, retired air force personnel and base personnel.

OBSERVATIONS

Greek system defended

Last week two students submitted a brief to Pres. Howard R. Bowen and the Board of Regents calling for an end to the administration's sanction of the Greek system. At least one of the points made in the brief deserves some consideration.

The students say in the brief that their desire to see the Greek-University relationship changed is generally due to the Greek's exclusivism. Furthermore they list a number of facts that they say indicate preferential treatment being given to the system.

They mention that the administration pays advisers who work exclusively with the system and that the system is allowed to use the Union. But all students are allowed to use the Union and all groups of students have advisers assigned specifically to them according to the type of housing in which they live, so it is difficult to see preferential treatment there.

The best proof they present of the alleged preferential treatment is the administration's stated position to use every effort to insure full occupancy of the Greek housing units. This administration pledge, if broadly carried out, could put the administration in the position of requiring students to live in Greek houses if not enough students want to live there.

If the administration ever tried to do something like this, the outrage would be considerable. Although most students do not object to the Greek system — indeed, it seems that usually the most vocal opponents are people who have tried to meet the system's qualifications and failed — it is doubtful that the administration should promote it any more than any other type of housing unit or social activity center. And certainly the administration should not be on record as favoring the system — as the full-occupancy protection policy seems to indicate it is — even if such a thing is not enforced.

Columist Donald Kaul, speaking to Greeks from Big 10 schools was critical last week of what appeared to him to be lack of concern about major national problems by the members of the Greek system. He was greeted with long and vigorous applause.

Pres. Howard R. Bowen told the Board of Regents earlier this year about what appeared to him to be considerable awareness and an interest in solving some of the problems of the system by its members.

Just about any copy of the system's newspaper, The Oracle, contains more criticism of the system than it does anything else. In it also are accounts of the numerous social service projects carried on by Greek houses.

Organizers of the peaceful antiwar demonstration in February were surprised to find some Greek organizations inquiring about demonstration plans so that they might participate.

Each of these things indicates that there are changes being made in the system, that there is a desire to make it more than a place in which its members can socialize and that the system is filling a much broader place in the University than most non-members give it credit.

This is not to say, of course, that the system should let itself become stagnant. The criticism must be continued. More changes need to be made.

Yet, at the same time, non-Greeks should remember that there is nothing wrong with having fun. Indeed, many non-Greeks might look to the system as an example of how to do so.

Briefly . . .

The marijuana arrests last week on campus re-emphasize the need to legalize the possession and use of marijuana. Because of the alleged connection of more dangerous drugs with marijuana sales in the arrests one wonders whether the forced underground use and sale of marijuana does not promote the sale and use of other drugs by forcing students who want marijuana to buy it from the same guy who peddles the more dangerous drugs.

Enforcing the irrational marijuana laws also costs money besides bringing considerable inconvenience to those who are caught violating them. There are better things for our law enforcement agencies to be doing.

The Council on Teaching has urged that spring recess be separated from Easter beginning next year. Such a move would make vacation fall in the ninth week of second-semester classes, a seemingly logical time for it.

The change would be progressive and desirable. All that is needed for it to become effective next year is Pres. Howard R. Bowen's approval. He should give it.

A tradition for many years at the University has been the annual Finkbine Dinner. Fifty of the "outstanding campus leaders" among the male student body are invited, as are the alumni who were invited to the dinner when they were students.

Last year at the dinner, Tom Hanson, who had been student body president, sounded off about the Greek system when he was asked to speak. At the dinner last week, this past year's student body president, John Pleton, was not asked to speak.

The attendance percentage of the "outstanding campus leaders" at the dinner was not impressive. And it may be significant that not one of the students invited was a black student. Have we no black students who are considered "outstanding student leaders?"

The Garden of Opinion The Rocky road

by Rick Gari

New York's Gov. Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller, after testing the wind for 40 days, launched his shaky canoe on the turbulent sea of the Republican nomination fight Tuesday. But if he plans to follow the path Hubert Humphrey is taking he may see a quick sinking.

Rockefeller apparently realized he didn't have enough strength within the party to win in conservative primary states against Dick Nixon, but he also shrewdly realized that Nixon's victories would not mean very much if he had no opposition.

In reality, though, Rockefeller may have waited too long. Humphrey could afford to, and perhaps had to, but Humphrey was a natural heir to all the non-left elements in the Democratic party.

Rockefeller, like Barry Goldwater, represents a minority within a minority party, and his minority is more compliant than the well-organized vocal Goldwater rightists.

Humphrey could sit back and wait for the South, labor and disgruntled whites to rush away from Kennedy and McCarthy. Rockefeller has been waiting several months for the Republican moderates to flock from the Nixon parade. They haven't.

He'll have to start a stampede, and if it doesn't begin soon he can forget it.

What, though, may be said for Rockefeller and his chances of getting the herd on the move?

It could be said, I think, that Nelson Rockefeller is more like Franklin Roosevelt than any political figure since FDR, even Jack Kennedy.

That's why Kennedy feared Rockefeller so much. Rockefeller had been more than just an heir to wealth; he had developed it even more and, he knew how to command the business world. Kennedy didn't seem to care.

Rockefeller, like FDR, is innovative. He doesn't shrink from the prospect of having to spend large sums of money, because he apparently believes the end is worth the means, even if it is your money.

Rockefeller knows his way around patrician circles, and this is hardly a disadvantage in the White House. Barbecues never were very chic anyway.

His financial assets, which probably surpass the Kennedy pile, are enough to make him a threat, and when combined with his record as governor for three terms, his photogenic wife and young family, and his respect even in Democratic circles, the governor must send some shivers down Nixon's back.

But the record is not all roses. Rockefeller still is the recipient of much hate from the Goldwater people because the governor had the gall to tell people Barry's ludicrous ideas were ludicrous.

Then he fell on his face so badly in the garbage war this winter that even his staunchest supporter, The New York Times, stuck letter openers in his jugular. And, he has always been independent of the party apparatus (he could afford to) and he once made a campaign promise to hold the line on taxes but later increased "fees" in New York.

His divorce and remarriage, which probably led to his defeat by Henry Cabot Lodge in New Hampshire in 1964, have become less than major issues, although it could be noted that whispering campaigns are still about.

The latest one to come out of the right-wing camp was that his wife had tried to commit suicide recently but the fact was hushed up by Rockefeller's camp, the rumor mill had it.

These things are never nice to handle, and once they've been publicly repudiated they also leave an ignorance gap filled with people who don't know all the facts and remember only the worst.

Rockefeller runs one great risk, and it is comparable to the one Humphrey runs. By not entering the primaries, both men risk giving the impression that the primary winners are wanted by the people but they, the non-warriors, are tools of the political bosses.

And, in a democracy, this is an important debating point for a Kennedy or a Nixon.

Rockefeller will have to hit the road and hit it hard. Nixon can't sew up the nomination by primaries alone, but Rockefeller can't sew it up on endorsements alone. Both need commitments from delegates.

Perhaps the greatest asset Rockefeller brings into the contest is his seeming ability to be the only man who can bring the archaic GOP into the 20th century, attract independents and Democrats who are tired of pedestrian programism and bring an emotional response from the people in support of the President.

Nixon says we need new leadership. We do. Humphrey says we need the politics of happiness. We do. Kennedy says he can do more. We can. McCarthy says we need some changes. We do.

Rockefeller says he can win.

Weekend music events draw small audiences

By STAN ZEGEL

In this last month of school, some of the best musical events of the season are being presented, including the ribald farce "Orpheus in the Underworld" this weekend.

Friday, violinist Charles Treger and pianist Kenneth Amada performed Frank's "Sonata in A Major" before 27 people in Phillips Hall Auditorium. The woefully underprivileged concert was the first musical event in that auditorium, which, although not acoustically perfect, is adequate, comfortable and convenient. It ought to be used again.

All of 13 persons appeared Sunday evening at the Unitarian Church for a benefit concert to purchase a piano for the Society. It was easily one of the more enjoyable presentations of this semester. Had the program been published, perhaps more people would have had the pleasure of the evening.

Haydn's pretty "Trio in G Major," performed by flutist Patrick Purswell, oboist Wilma Zonn and clarinetist Pau' Zonn began the program. Miss Zonn was joined by pianist Joan Purswell for Alan Stout's "Music for Oboe." In less genteel times, the composer would have been lynched. The Purswells teamed for two pieces for flute and piano, one pretty, the other pretty bad.

Miss Purswell and Steven Osburn executed Mozart's canonic "Fantasia in F Minor for piano-four hands" in the Society's new Yamaha piano, and were followed by Zonn's performance of Lehmann's "Mosaik" for solo clarinet, a piece calling for non-musical sounds from the instrument.

The wonderful evening closed with Monteverdi's "Four Gazonnetas for any three treble instruments (or voices)," a rousing work which the musicians performed on flute, clarinet and oboe.

A bonus number could be heard during intermission as the sounds of J.S. Bach's "Second Brandenburg Concerto" filtered into the building from a trumpet practicing in the neighborhood.

I hope the Unitarians buy another piano soon so that they will have an excuse to present more concerts like Sunday's.

Once again, lack of promotion ensured a small audience as the Cultural Affairs Committee's "Meet the Arts" series concluded in the Carrie Stanley Lounge Monday evening. Pianist Marian Buck-Lew explained and performed Schumann's delightful "Carnaval."

Unfortunately, the explanation was too long and detailed. It reminded me of a long-winded prayer before a banquet while the food gets cold. It seemed Miss Buck-Lew was reading her thesis instead of guiding ten laymen through the musical caricatures which comprise the pretty piece.

There are three main events yet this week. They are a choir concert, an organ concert and the final concert for New Music production.

The unaccompanied choir will present the program they performed on their recent tour of Mexico at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Union Main Lounge. The concert was originally planned for tonight.

The main piece on the program will be Alberto Ginastera's "Lamentations of Jeremiah." Also planned for the first half of the concert are several motifs from the 18th century, including G. Gabrieli's impressive "Jubilato Deo" and works by Gallus and Hassler.

Contemporary choral composers, especially Latin American ones, are also represented in the 60-member choir's program.

Conductor Daniel Moe has organized the third portion of the concert into a choral symphony by selecting five works of various modern composers (including the Mexican Carlos Chavez) which have different tempos, each of which becomes a movement. Thus, Earl George's "Cantata Domino" will be the allegro, a Benjamin Britten work will be a slow tempo and Christiansen's "This is the Day" will provide the scherzo. An andante and allegro will be supplied by works of Chavez and Fissinger.

No tickets are required for admission for this program which won critics' praise when on tour.

This semester's major organ concert will occur at 8 p.m. Friday in the modern Gloria Dei Lutheran Church at Mark and Dubuque Streets.

Paul Manz, head of the music school at Concordia College in St. Paul, will play one of Mozart's great works, the "Fantasia and Fugue in F" which Mozart wrote for an old-time barrel organ — a big music-box-like instrument.

The theme from "Mathis der Mahler" will be featured in a piece by Michaelson, and the majestic "Fantasia and Fugue in G" of J.S. Bach will join works of Buxtehude and Handel on the program.

A special event will be the performance of three of Manz' own compositions. Like all of the concerts of this week, no tickets are required for admission.

Two kinds of truth, part II, Inside and Outside

by Paul Kleinberger

Descartes divided the world into an Outside and an Inside, and we've been choosing up ever since. Philosophers of the Inside have been losing worst. "I think," said Descartes, as the only thing he could initially be sure of, "therefore I am." But for some funny manipulating, he'd have gotten no farther, and even that initial deduction comes apart under a kind of logical analysis which wasn't available in Descartes' time. What's left is not even "I think," but more like "somethings happening." That's not much to go on, when what we were trying to do was get from the experience we could be sure of to the "outside" extensional world of bodies and nature and newspapers. All we can strictly logically do with those "thoughts" is think about thinking them: that's phenomenology, which may be pretty certain but doesn't have a great deal to say.

The outsiders, meanwhile, were looking at the world and trying to be sure of things like causality (Hume), but finding no way to connect the logical category with to the observed events.

We have always seen this happen, and then that, but we never see this make that happen. Natural laws are just theories; we never prove a necessary relationship between the two.)

In addition it became apparent that logic itself, and mathematics, one thought keys to the eternal verities, were themselves only deductive systems, lovely in their self-consistency but not otherwise connected with anything.

Enter Kant. We had an interesting time recently in an English seminar, trying to think of a modern school of philosophy which couldn't be called Kantian. What happened was that Kant changed, not philosophy's answers, but its questions.

We can't look out at the world of things-in-themselves, because all we see is our (individual, personal) perceptions, "thoughts." We can't look in at the self, because all we meet are thoughts. So we relax and look at thoughts. We immediately find, though, that they are thoughts of an extensional world, complete with causality, bodies, other people, and a good probability of sunrise. We can be sure of causality not because of how the world works, but because of how our minds work. The world we experience is the one, one we've got, so we philosophers just have to make the best of it.

This put a very different complexion on the search for truth. We were to look not beyond, but at our experience. Yet at the same time, reality was not to be equated with individual personal experience, because that experience gives itself as experience of an "outside" world, enduring and transcending individual perceptions of it. This is not the "thing-in-itself," the ground or our perceptions — rather it is the public world, the commonsense world, that our perceptions appear to be perceptions of. (When I see this table as a table seen from over here, I see it as a table which you or I could also see from over there, which would be the same table, but which would look different.)

The search for truth thus became an investigation of that public world. The most obvious application of the philosophy is modern science, the collection and organization of public facts. Facts which (in principle) are subject to public verification are logically independent of the perceptions of whatever individual happens to observe them.

From Kantianism grew positivism and then language analysis, which I take it to be what most philosophers are doing these days. Positivism starts out by taking truth to be an attribute of language rather than of the world. This ends up meaning that to make a statement about the world is simply to assert that if certain observations are made under certain conditions, certain experiences would result. (It's true that that white patch is a rabbit and not a stone, because if you walk over there you will experience what seems to be an observation of it running away.) The criteria for truth are related to the assertion by definition — that's what it means to say that it is a rabbit.

Obviously then, any sentence that cannot be translated into a set of predictions we could (in principle) check up on must mean nothing at all. Checking up is, in principle, a public process, since that patch "really" being a rabbit must logically have nothing to do with whether you, personally, happen to have forgotten your glasses or to be seeing little green snakes this week.

Thus, positivism sees language as making testable predictions about a public world. Language analysts go a step further, recognizing that language is part of that public world. They study such concepts as "freedom" or "will," not by introspecting or old-style philosophizing, but by studying how the terms, or others which imply them, are actually used. This means that the reference even of the words an individual uses about himself is public, and not private, so that the things a person says about himself must refer not to some mysterious happening in his head or his soul, but to a set of possible public facts.

Gilbert Ryle, a very influential modern thinker and my favorite philosophical punching bag, follows this line to its logical conclusion that nothing ever happens in anybody's head or soul, that consciousness is a myth and a linguistic mistake. To do him justice, I must admit that many mentalistic concepts do act in the way he says; jealousy, for example: we normally think of jealousy as something one feels, but if you follow your girlfriend around in the streets, and constantly spill your soup in my lap every time I sit down at her side, then I'm logically correct in asserting that you're jealous even if you sincerely believe it's an accident.

But Ryle applies this argument to every mental concept. "I can see that you are in pain," he might say, "because I can see you writhing on the floor and screaming, and that's what being in pain means." There is a long and lovely argument, which I'll skip, attacking Ryle's notion logically by demonstrating that it leaves no way for "pretending to be in pain" to mean anything. But it isn't really necessary to argue about it. You may decide that I'm in pain in any manner you please, but I don't have to decide. I know whether I'm in pain, and you don't. I know that I can know, because I've been there.

The Rylean theory can be seen as a response to the same problem that was bothering Descartes, namely the mysterious relationship between the Inside and the Outside.

Ryle's solution is to deny that the inside exists, or to assert that if it does exist, there's nothing "inside" about it.

The mistake lies in assuming that because we've got a concept — my single pain — and because we operate with the concept daily, that there necessarily exists a single object which satisfies it. (Language philosophers used to say the same thing about statements about God.) That the word "pain" exists as a public object in a public language with public criteria for its being true is beyond question. But that that's the word I'm using when I sit on a tack and say "ouch" does not follow at all, even if I say "ouch I'm in pain."

Logically, there are simply two words, the one for what's happening Inside and the one for what's happening in public. They happen to have the same symbolic representation "pain" as a consequence not of logic but of the (contingent) fact that both "pains" are usually appropriate in the same situations.

Like Hume, I don't know why either. Like Kant, I think we should stop looking for a logical connection, since it seems that there isn't any.

I've gone on at length about this particular aspect of the evolution of philosophy because it reflects and expresses a worldview not held by philosophers alone. The quest for certainty led to a public world of public facts, where public verifiability is the criterion for truth. Science works that way, and science certainly does work. Intelligent observation of facts, their careful organization into theories, and the application of the theories to such problems as present themselves accounts for much that man has built in the world.

The problem is that an effective way of thinking has become our civilization's only way of thinking. Mental worlds, since we can't really seriously deny them, are handled only as the imperfect windows through which we look on public truth. This is hardly true of everyone, nor completely true of anyone, but it seems a fair characterization of almost all (outside the arts) that passes in our society for serious thinking. Just to point to the most ludicrous example, how many serious psychologists since the Gestalt school (and not many even of them) have attempted to study a psychological phenomenon by undergoing it, rather than by doing something to a lot of other people and then tabulating their responses?

What I'm trying to get at, then, is that we need another major switch in the questions we ask. As the positivist asserted, only public facts are publicly verifiable. But the private facts of the phenomenologist are facts just as well, given in consciousness, and having, in themselves, no need of verification.

This suggests two enormous fields even for serious logical scientific investigation, one into the nature of that mental world and the ways of affecting it, and the other into the relationship between that world and the public one, between my pain and your tack. That, we recognize with a shock, amounts to studying the mind-body problem, not by looking for the logical link between the mind and the body, or trying to collapse one of them into the other, but by experimenting, like scientists, to see just what other kinds of links there are.

Several things are apparent, and it's not hard to see their importance for a theory of education. The first is that psychologists concerned only with the public facts can experiment on rats and on other people, but the only way to verify a private fact is to be there. The psychologist who tackles these problems experiments on himself.

A second, which I'll be talking about, is that when we recognize that public verifiability is not the only possible criterion for serious investigation, we open the door to many fields of study not currently included in, say, the Iowa catalogue.

We'll probably want an entire department in "understanding," the second major way of coming-to-know. We do it constantly, of course, but always, as if by accident. Because it lies on the wrong side of the Cartesian split, it has been ignored in education, desecrated by science, and generally excluded from the conscious practices of "serious thought" throughout western civilization, up to and including religion.

We have yet to learn much about intuition; that's for science. But we also have yet to learn to use intuition; that's for "understanding."

Bednerik Play About A Girl On The Fence

By VICTOR POWER

Realism, harsh and high-powered, is a feature of a new comedy by a University doctoral candidate which opens at 8 tonight in the Studio Theatre. During the performance of "On a Motor Cycle You Gotta Ride Behind," by Marya Bednerik, G. Winston-Salem, N.C., a 600 c.c. motor cycle steered by Terry J. Gill, A1, Manchester, will roar onto the stage.

"This is a play of balance and control," said Miss Bednerik. She was referring not to the equilibrium of the motor cycle but to the dramatic elements of the play, the second comedy she has written. Last year "No Message" by Miss Bednerik was presented in the Studio Theatre.

"I once heard a lady coming out of a play somewhere remark, 'I don't want a message at a matinee,' so I wrote a play and called it simply 'No Message.' This year, though I have not exactly ridden behind on a motor cycle, the research for my new play has been fun," she said.

"On a Motor Cycle You Gotta Ride Behind," has serious overtones, Miss Bednerik said, but not too serious. She has never yet written a tragedy because she likes to write comedy, she said.

"I am not a feminist but I suppose you might call this a woman's play," she said. Actresses frequently complain that authors don't write rewarding parts for them, she said.

"Here I have written a nice part for an actress," she said. It's about a woman character called Cassidy (played by Mary Beth Supinger, A4E, Marshalltown).

"I explore Cassidy in terms of other people," she said. Cassidy, a girl of 29, worries about her future. She comes home after a year in Europe and faces a dilemma. She cannot decide whether to settle for a nice humdrum married life with a widower next door, Bill Henshaw (Tom W. Fisher, B3, Belle Plaine), with whom she has had an affair, or whether to live with her motor cyclist lover who doesn't like children.

The play will continue at 8 p.m. each night through Saturday. Admission is free to students who possess current ID cards. Tickets are available at the Union box office.

Food Poisoning May Be Cause Of Academy Ills

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Contaminated food may have triggered the epidemic of strep infection that struck about 1,000 cadets at the U.S. Air Force Academy, Dr. Roy Cleere, director of the Colorado Health Department, said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, antibiotic shots were ordered for the unaffected members of the 3,100-man cadet wing to prevent further spread of the epidemic, which academy doctors said attained "serious proportions" before it apparently started to wane Tuesday.

Classes were to remain suspended for the third day today on and near the academy grounds, providing a holiday for about 3,650 school children and 188 teachers. The continued suspension is a precautionary measure, an academy spokesman said.

Cleere said in Denver it may take three or four days for epidemiologists to identify the source of the streptococcus infection. But, he said, they are "suspecting" it was food because the academy has a common mess and the ailment struck hundreds of cadets almost at once.

Soapbox Mike, Amplifier Heisted

Someone may want to start his own Soapbox Soundoff, at least that might be why he stole the microphone and amplifier used for the Soapbox Soundoff.

The theft occurred about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Union Gold Feather lobby during a soapbox session.

It was reported that two young men simply walked in, picked up the equipment, and left.

Iowa Phone Line Cut; FBI Called Into Case

ATLANTIC — The Federal Bureau of Investigation Tuesday joined the investigation of damage to a main telephone cable which disrupted service between Omaha, Neb., and Des Moines for several hours.

Officers said someone fired 12 shotgun slugs into the cable, which carries about 200 circuits, some of them to federal agencies. The shooting occurred about 3:30 a.m., and full service was restored three and a half hours later, according to officials of Northwestern Bell Co.

A Communications Workers of America spokesman in Omaha, Neb., said the union, which has

Bell, Union 'Eye To Eye' In Pay Talks

WASHINGTON — Formal negotiations in the nationwide telephone strike resumed Tuesday for the first time since the 13-day-old walkout began and prospects were reported hopeful for an agreement within 24 hours.

"We are now seeing eye to eye on wage levels that the union can live with," Joseph A. Beirne, president of the striking Communications Workers of America said of talks with the Bell System.

"I am even hopeful that final agreement can be reached shortly," he said, but added that the approximately 200,000 strikers would have to ratify any new contract before the strike could end.

The union, before the strike began, rejected a wage offer which company officials said was worth 5.8 per cent a year. The Bell System said at the time that the union was demanding 7.8 per cent a year.

The strike, first nationwide telephone walkout in 21 years, has caused little disruption of telephone service around the country.

been on strike against Bell System for two weeks, had nothing to do with the vandalism.

"I would assume that the company, to substantiate its sad tale of service not being up to par, might have had something to do with that," said D. K. Gordon, CWA district vice president.

Cass County Sheriff Ben Magil said the cable was damaged seven miles southwest of Atlantic near an American Telephone and Telegraph Co. repeater station. Seventeen shell casings were found on the ground nearby, he said.

Supervisory personnel forced to handle maintenance duties because of the CWA strike, repaired the damage cable. Last Wednesday, Northwestern Bell offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone maliciously damaging its property.

A company spokesman in Des Moines said Tuesday there had been no further reports of vandalism until the Atlantic damage. Last week, Bell officials said lines, cables and communications equipment had been damaged in five Iowa cities, resulting in a loss of telephone service to about 6,000 telephone workers in Iowa.

Bond Cut To $1,000 For 3 In Drug Case

Police Court Judge Marion R. Neely reduced bonds for three men charged with possession of marijuana Thursday and set the date for a preliminary hearing for one of them Tuesday.

Neely reduced the bonds of David R. Leshtz, A3, Highland Park, Ill., Steven M. Siegal, 23, San Francisco, and Anthony H. Borg, 21, 814 N. Dodge St. Borg was also charged with possession of a stimulant or depressant drug. The bonds were reduced from $2,500 to $1,000. Neely also set May 13 for the preliminary hearing dates for them later. All three are free on the reduced bond. Siegal and Borg were arrested at Borg's apartment. Leshtz was arrested at 163½ S. Clinton St. The arrests were made by Iowa City police in a coordinated raid which covered five addresses in Iowa City.

Iowa City Police Detective Richard R. Weber said some cigarettes and cigaret butts found at another apartment were being analyzed to see if they contained marijuana. If the cigarettes contain marijuana, charges will be filed against two persons found in that apartment, he said.

Legal Aid Lawyer To Help In Sies Injunction Attempt

District Court Judge B. J. Maxwell granted a petition filed Monday by an Iowa City attorney to appear as a friend of the court at 9 a.m. Thursday in Johnson County District Court when a hearing will be held to decide whether a temporary injunction should be issued against Jerrold Sies, A4, Valley Stream, N.Y.

The injunction, requested by Iowa City Atty. Jay Honohan and City Housing Inspector James B. Hemesath, would prevent Sies from gaining access to and making public records of building inspection in Iowa City.

In the petition, Gary M. Veldey, 704 Eastmoor Dr., who is director of the Hawkeye Area Legal Services Society Inc., said he would present briefs, introduce evidence, and make arguments against making the records public, because it would affect a substantial number of Iowa City residents, especially those with low incomes living in rented dwellings.

2 Students, Child Of A 3rd Injured In 2-Car Crash

Two University students and the young son of another student were injured in a two-car crash at the corner of Church and Gilbert streets about 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Carl T. Schwab, B3, Des Moines, was treated and released at University Hospitals. A passenger in the Schwab car, Margaret E. Young, A3, Des Moines, was listed in good condition with head lacerations.

The other vehicle was driven by Mrs. Marlu Frank, 22, 2209 Lakeside Apartments. The car is owned by her husband Paul D. Frank, L2, Vinton. The Frank's two-year-old son, Darren, was treated for head cuts and released at University Hospitals.

Mrs. Frank was charged by police with failure to yield at a stop intersection.

Florida NAACP Brands Riot Bill 'License To Kill'

TALLAHASSEE — A $100,000 appropriation to buy riot control equipment, dubbed a license for "gunning down of black children, women and men in the streets" by a civil rights leader, was approved by Florida's State Cabinet Tuesday.

Marvin Davies, state field director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), said members of his organization were "shocked" at the action.

Davies wired Gov. Claude Kirk and Cabinet members Monday, urging them not to pass the appropriation and to use the money "constructively for jobs, training, housing, and recreation."

The $100,000 appropriation is to be used to purchase shotguns and ammunition, billy sticks, chemical Mace, tear gas bombs, and protective helmets for nearly 1,000 state policemen.

Melrose Plans To Be Aired

UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS—Final construction plans for an $85,000 Melrose Avenue improvement project are being compiled and will be filed at a Town Council meeting May 14, according to Town Engineer James L. Shrive.

Tuesday. The Town Council will award the project contract June 11.

Shrive said present plans called for about 80 property owners on and adjoining Melrose Avenue to pay for half of the project. Included in the project will be a widening of the avenue.

The remaining amount, about $47,500, will be paid by University Heights.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first in a series of articles by Iowa Golf Coach, Finkbine Professional and Course Manager Chuck Zweiner. According to Zweiner, the series is designed to help the golfer improve his game, his golf etiquette and his knowledge of the rules of golf. Hints on how golfers can assist in the maintenance of a golf course will also be included.

Tee The Ball High

When the golfer can place the ball on a tee, he should take full advantage of this privilege. The ball should be teed so that the top of the club is in line with the equator of the ball. This makes it possible to hit the ball on the center of the club face without contacting the ground. It will also be easier to get the ball into the air.

Etiquette Tip

Be considerate of others—do not move about or talk when another person is playing a shot.

Rugged Drake Relay Rivals Stifle Record-Breaking Iowa

Iowa's distance medley relay team and high jumper Larry Wilson combined to set three records over the weekend at the Drake Relays in Des Moines.

The distance medley team of Carl Frazier, Mike Mondane, Ron Griffith and Larry Wiecek ran a 9:45.7 to set a new school and break the Big 10 mark set last year by Wisconsin by 5.7 seconds.

Wilson set a school record in the high jump with a 6-7 effort that gave him a tie for fifth place. However, his opponent was awarded fifth place because of fewer misses.

Frazier led off the five distance medley relay performance with a 1:53.9 clocking for 880 yards. Mondane followed with an excellent 45.8 for his 440-yard carry and Ron Griffith ran his 1,320-yard split in 3:00.7.

The Hawkeye anchorman for the final mile was Larry Wiecek, and normally this would be an ideal situation for the Hawks. However, anchoring for Kansas was the world record holder in the mile, Jim Ryun.

Mondane also placed second in the invitational 440-yard run which was supposed to match three of the top four finishers in last year's NCAA 440-yard championship. Some of the luster was taken from the event, however, when the defending NCAA champion Emmett Taylor of Ohio University, decided not to run.

Mondane ran 46.9 but was beaten by a step by Southern Illinois' Charles Benson who was timed in 46.7.

The Hawks' next action is a Big 10 quadrangular meet Saturday at Bloomington against Illinois, Michigan State and Indiana.

6 Hawk Pitchers Combine To Shutout Central Twice

By JOL LOOMER

Six Iowa pitchers combined to shutout Central College of Pella on two hits over 14 innings as the Hawkeyes swept a home doubleheader Tuesday, 3-0 and 5-0.

In the opening game, Hawk right-hander Paul Starman threw three perfect innings to pick up his second win of the spring.

Tom Staack took over in the fourth and allowed the lone Central hit, a double in the fifth.

Mike Klein pitched the final inning to complete the shutout.

The Hawkeyes opened the scoring in the second inning with two runs on an error, two singles, a sacrifice fly and a double-strike.

Bob Perkins reached base on an error to lead off the inning and reached third on Mike Wymore's single. Wymore took second on the throw to third.

Stony Jackson then drove Perkins home with a long sacrifice fly to left-center, and Gary Breshears followed with a single sending Wymore to third.

On the next play, Breshears broke for second base and when Central catcher tried to throw him out, Wymore raced for home. The relay throw to the plate was grabbed by pitcher Jerry Terpstra and Breshears was safe at second, giving the Hawks a 2-0 lead.

Greg Parker capped the scoring in the sixth inning with a 330-foot solo home run over the left field wall. It was Parker's second homer of the spring.

PAUL STARMAN

Donn Haugen upped his record to 2-1 in the second game with three shutout innings, but had to pitch out of a bases-loaded jam in the second inning to do it.

Todd Hatterman and Earl Postler split the last four innings on the mound for Iowa and did not allow a base runner.

Wymore got the first rally of the second game started with a pinch single in the third inning. Pat Prina reached base on an error on the next play with Wymore reaching third.

The two then pulled off a double steal with Wymore scoring and Prina ending up on third after the Central catcher's throw went into centerfield. Prina scored a moment later on another throwing error by the catcher on a pick-off attempt.

In the fifth inning, Breshears scored the Hawks third run when he led off with a single, stole second, reached third on an error and came home on Perkins' sacrifice fly.

The final two Hawk runs came in the sixth. Frank Cataldo led off with a single. Blackman reached first on an error, and Dave Krull, running for Cataldo, and Blackman pulled another double steal. Hatterman then squeezed Krull home, and Breshears doubled Blackman home to close the scoring.

Hawkeye basemen stole seven bases in the second game with Breshears leading the way with three.

Virginia (l) and Frank (r) are:

A. Interviewing an African couple. B. Visiting a Nigerian University. C. Exchanging ideas with Nigerian University students.

Actually, Virginia Blount and Frank Ogden are doing all these things. As members of the 500-student World Campus Afloat-Chapman College, these two Arizona college students had the opportunity to talk with students at the University of Ife, Ibadan branch, Nigeria.

With the help of Nigerian students and professors, the Americans compared religions, art, anthropology, educational systems, economic developments, geography, drama, music, and dance of the two countries. This is the regular course work aboard Chapman's shipboard campus, the s.s. Ryndam.

Virginia and Frank transferred the credits they earned back to their home colleges, Arizona State University and Northern Arizona University, and are going on for their baccalaureate degrees. Chapman College is currently accepting enrollments for the 1968-1969 academic year with the World Campus Afloat program.

ITINERARIES

Fall 1968: Dep. New York Oct. 10 for Dublin, London, Copenhagen, Rotterdam, Lisbon, Rome, Athens, Haifa, Catania, Barcelona, Las Palmas, Freetown, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Punta Arenas, Santiago, Lima, Acapulco, arriving Los Angeles Jan. 29.

Spring 1969: Dep. Los Angeles Feb. 3 for Honolulu, Tokyo, Kobe, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Kuala Lumpur, Colombo, Bombay, Mombasa, Durban, Cape Town, Dakar, Casablanca, Cadiz, Lisbon, arriving New York May 27.

The coupon below, if completed and mailed at once, will provide the first step in reserving space for your fall 1968 and/or spring 1969 semesters with World Campus Afloat where you can take full advantage of Chapman College's unique three-year experience in effective teaching aboard ship and in world ports.

Sudden Death Playoffs Plague Disgruntled Player

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—South African Gary Player has a good reason to dislike sudden death playoffs. He has lost 11 in a row.

On the other hand he has defeated Arnold Palmer and Miller Barber in his only 18-hole play-offs.

Player, who has won all major United States tournaments, the Open, the PGA and the Masters, was one of the early arrivals for the $100,000 Houston Champions International which starts Thursday. He got in a practice round Tuesday over the 7,118-yard, par 36-35-71 Cypress Creek layout.

"Why one-note playoffs?" Player asked. "A 14-handicapper might beat me on one hole. There's no skill involved at all. There's too much at stake to decide a championship on one hole."

Player, who has won more than $500,000 in the United States, said he believes he could win $130,000 a year if he lived in this country.

He believes his stroke average on his current tour is as good as 69 and might be as low as 68.

Iowa Women's Tennis Team Bypasses Growing Pains

By KAPPY BRISTOL

Being a winner after only a year of existence is not exactly commonplace. New teams usually consider themselves lucky to recruit enough talent to win one or two games during their first season.

But the Iowa women's tennis team, organized only last year, has opened its spring schedule with victories over Luther College Friday and Winona State College Saturday.

Iowa won four out of five singles matches in its 6-3 victory over Luther. Jill Duttweiler defeated Nancy Johnson 6-0, 6-3 in the No. 1 singles spot; Ginny Johnson defeated Dianne Rahn 7-5, 6-4; Pat Burns beat Karla Stelling 6-8, 6-1, 7-5; and Karen Beason beat Sue Yeager 6-0, 6-0.

Burns-Johnson Win
In doubles play Miss Burns and Miss Johnson beat Miss Stelling and Miss Yeager 10-2 in a professional set and Katy Mathison and Barb Revnes defeated Nancy Stanley and Gerry Jensen 1-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Iowa lost only one match during its 6-1 victory over Winona State. Miss Duttweiler was defeated by Pat O'Dea 6-0, 6-0, in the No. 1 match for the team's only loss. Miss Johnson won 6-4, 6-1 over Barb Iverson; Linda Knapp 8-6, 6-4 over Carol Feldman; Miss Burns 6-2, 7-5 over Bonnie Lucas; and Miss Beason 6-0, 6-0 over Pat Laska.

The teams of Jean Pohlmann, Miss Beason and Miss Revnes, Miss Mathison teamed to win the two doubles matches.

Tournament Next
The team will compete in the State College Sports Day Saturday at Grinnell. Besides tennis, Iowa women's teams will be entered in softball, swimming and volleyball.

The girls will also participate in the tri-state Carleton Invitational Collegiate Tennis Tournament at Northfield, Minn., May 10 and 11. Teams from Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin will be competing.

The team is an outgrowth of the tennis club which was started last year. It was originally conceived as simply recreational for girls interested in tennis, a function it still maintains.

Pat Sherman, women's physical education instructor, coaches the tennis club. Miss Sherman said the girls' tremendous interest in competitive play last year sparked the idea of forming a team from within the club.

There is only one senior on the team, so Miss Sherman said she was optimistic about the future.

According to Miss Sherman, the main problem she contends with is lack of funds. The team receives its operating money through the Women's Recreation Association. She said its allotment had been "very limited" and, in fact, had already been used up.

Team members were really interested in tackling more meets and traveling more, said Miss Sherman but there were just no funds available for them.

French Receives Rifle Team Honor

James French, A2, Davenport, has been awarded a 22 calibre trophy Anschutz standard target rifle for achieving the highest average on the Iowa Rifle team in Big 10 competition this season.

French received the award at the rifle team's awards banquet at the Amana Colonies last weekend.

City, University To Compete In Penny Days Charity Drive

The annual Phi Gamma Delta Penny Days will be held throughout the Iowa City business district and the University campus today and tomorrow, according to Robert L. Lindene, AI, Sycamore, Ill., of Phi Gamma Delta. Chi Omega has been chosen as the sorority to co-sponsor the event this year.

Penny Days is a contest between the University and the city in support of charity. The winning charity will receive 80 per cent of the total collected, the loser 20 per cent.

Rust, Iowa, and LeMoyne for Expanding Educational Horizons (RILEEH) is the University choice. RILEEH is a program the University has entered to build academic, social and cultural relations with Rust College in Mississippi and LeMoyne College in Tennessee.

Iowa City's choice is the Community Givers of Iowa City. Receipts of their funds are spread over different community agencies such as the Red Cross, Visiting Nurse Association, Boy and Girl Scouts, Goodwill Industries and Retarded Children's Home.

Nutrition For Elderly To Be Discussed Here

Nutrition and food service for the elderly will be among topics to be discussed Thursday and Friday (May 2-3) at the fourth session of the Nursing and Retirement Home Administration course being held at the University.

Topics to be discussed will include food for health — catering to the needs and wants, menu planning, food preparation, food service, modified diets and food service administration.

Council Approves Workshop On Low-Rent Housing Plans

By CHARLA COLE

The Iowa City Low Rent Housing Agency received informal approval from the City Council Tuesday to go ahead with its plans for a workshop concerning alternative programs to providing low-rent housing in the city.

Agency members and councilmen agreed that this was the next logical step to determine costs and public interest in each of the possible alternatives.

The workshop, tentatively scheduled for June, is designed to bring people to Iowa City who have had experience in low-rent housing programs, according to agency chairman, the Rev. Robert Welsh.

He said the agency hoped citizens and groups within the community would see the need for low-rent housing and would do something about it, with the agency acting as a coordinator and advisor committee.

No Program Pushed Welsh said the agency was not pushing any particular program, but it hoped that the private and public sectors of the community could work together to meet the need.

Funds for the workshop was one of four requests to the council contained in the agency's annual report, which was presented to the council at a special meeting.

Other requests included review of existing housing codes and enforcement programs and provision of professional personnel by the city to assist in implementing any programs.

The agency also recommended that Mayor Loren Hickerson ask Gov. Harold Hughes for four things:

- To call a state-wide conference on non-profit housing to help communities understand alternatives available.

- To secure cooperation of governmental agencies in encouraging and assisting private developers and non-profit corporations to meet existing needs.

- Possible creation of a consultative service on housing to advise communities in the state.

- To eliminate the referendum requirement for public housing, which requires citizens to vote on any public program.

Response Wanted

Welsh emphasized that the agency wanted citizen response to the documentation of need and the possible alternatives be cause any program would directly concern citizens.

On April 17 the agency mailed documents showing the need for low-rent housing to the boards of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and to members of the Board of Realtors, the Home Builders Association, the Apartment Owners Association, the Hawkeye Area Community Action Program Board and the Religious Leaders Association.

The agency asked the 173 people who received the documents to answer two questions: do you agree with the agency that there is a need for low-rent housing and do you believe that the community has a responsibility to help provide safe, decent and sanitary housing within the ability of low-income persons to pay?

Welsh reported that 84 people responded and over 85 per cent of those indicated they agreed that there was a need and believed the community had a responsibility to meet the need.

Approaches Opposed He noted that several respondents said they hoped the need would not be met by "ghet" public housing programs or an irresponsible handout program.

Welsh said the agency also opposed both of these approaches.

The documentation of need which was sent to these people showed approximately 1,180 low-income families were living in Iowa City in 1965, not including student families. Although students were excluded from these statistics, Welsh said his agency was interested in the needs of all people.

A profile of need, which contained factual information about 189 of these low-income families, was also included. It showed that 86 per cent of the families were paying over 25 per cent of their gross annual income for housing.

Government figures indicate that families spending over 25 per cent of their incomes for housing are using money for rent which should go for food and other living expenses.

Need Indicated Welsh said he thought that the need was shown and that the response to the questionnaire supported his feeling that there was both a need and responsibility for meeting housing needs of low-income persons.

In a report to the citizens, the agency asked for specific suggestions concerning ways the community could meet the needs. The report concluded, "The responsibility is yours. You will determine the course to be taken. There is only one course no longer open to us . . . that is to do nothing."

Negroes Getting More Jobs But Hughes Still Unsatisfied

DES MOINES (AP) — Negroes are getting more jobs in private industry through state employment channels, the Employment Security Commission said Tuesday.

But Gov. Harold Hughes said state government hiring practices "are no model to follow" for giving minority group members a more-than-equal chance at jobs.

Hughes said private industry is lowering unrealistic standards for employment and said the state should do the same.

The Employment Security Commission, under pressure from Hughes to get more jobs for Negroes, said 7 per cent of its placements in the last six months have been for minority group applicants.

The nonwhite population of Iowa, according to the most recent government census, was 1.1 per cent of the total.

Hughes said he was studying a staff-prepared report on the number and types of jobs held by minority workers in state government. He said the state may not be following what he has urged industry in Iowa to do.

Under the state's Merit Employment Act, government agencies would be unable to practice the "reverse discrimination" of giving job preference to minority applicants because the state is prohibited from considering race, religion or color in hiring.

Last year Hughes called on industry to hire a greater proportion of minority workers and criticized the Employment Security Commission for not placing more minority applicants.

Since then, he said, industry is "making an endeavor to hire minorities, in disproportionate numbers, where there has been a disproportion the other way in the past."

The Employment Security Commission, he added, has drawn compliments from Negro leaders for placing greater numbers of minority applicants.

One reason for this increase, Hughes said, is that job standards are being based more on ability than on formal education.

"Anyone should be hired on ability and capability," he said. "After 100 years of discrimination, a great disproportion has resulted, and government and industry should correct the inequities."

Engineers Slate Conference Here

Engineers from universities and industries throughout the Midwest are scheduled to attend the 14th On-Campus College-Industry Conference to be held at the University Saturday.

Featuring presentations on new fields of technology and recent cost-saving engineering developments, the conference will include addresses by experts in a number of areas.

The conference is sponsored by the Cedar Rapids chapter of the American Society of Tool and Manufacturing Engineering and the University Department of Industrial and Management Engineering.

The meetings will be in the Union Illinois Room beginning at 8:15 a.m. Saturday.

Scholars To Be Cited At Honors Ceremony

Scholastic achievement at the University will be recognized during Mother's Day Weekend on the campus at an Honors Convocation at 10 a.m. Saturday in Macbride Auditorium.

Pres. Howard R. Bowen will present honors certificates of achievement to seniors in undergraduate colleges chosen by the faculty and will present the Hancher Memorial Award to an outstanding junior who has demonstrated academic excellence and qualities of leadership.

Bowen also will present the $1,000 awards for excellence in teaching at the undergraduate level announced last week as won by Gustav Bergmann, professor of philosophy and psychology, Robert A. Corrigan, assistant professor of English in the American Civilization Program, and David W. McDougall, instructor in mechanics and hydraulics.

Dewey B. Stuit, dean of the College of Liberal Arts will present Dean's Awards to an outstanding freshman, sophomore and junior in the Honors Program.

Donald Bryant, professor of speech and dramatic art, will give the Honors Convocation address. His topic will be "Professional and Amateur." Rhodes Dunlap, professor of English and director of honors at the University, will preside over the convocation.

John Pahl James, P4, Cedar Rapids, will give the response for students.

Names of students who have earned a "B" grade average or above will be listed on the program for the convocation, with those in the Honors Program also to be designated. Awards and recognitions bestowed by honor organizations during the current year will also be listed in the program.

Among other activities planned during the coming weekend for mothers of students and other members of their families are the Mother's Day Luncheon in the Union Saturday honoring the University Representative Mother of 1968, an organ recital by Paul Manz of the Twin Cities at 8 p.m. Friday in Gloria Dei Lutheran Church, and a band concert at the same hour in the Music Building.

Also scheduled are a sale of art work by students at a Thiebes Market from 3 to 6 p.m. Saturday in the Union Ballroom, a concert by the University Choir at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Union, a water show by the Seals Club at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday in the Field House Pool, a concert by the Center for New Music at 8 p.m. Saturday in Macbride Auditorium, and a play by a graduate student, Marya Bednerik, at 8 p.m. today through Saturday in the Studio Theatre.

The University Choir will present the program which won the group acclaim on its recent tour of Yucata, Mexico. For the last half of the program, which will feature Spanish, Mexican and American folksongs, the coeds in the choir will wear huipiles, colorful native Yucatan dresses of white cotton made with wide bands of hand-embroidered floral designs at the neckline and the hem.

University Sing, at which campus choral groups will compete for trophies at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the Union, will close Mother's Day Weekend.

REPRESENTATIVE JAILED— DES MOINES (AP) — State Rep. Donald Voorhees (R-Waterloo) was released from Des Moines City Jail Tuesday after being arrested on an intoxication charge at a hotel restaurant. Police Lt. Jack Lee Ross said he arrested Voorhees after he allegedly created a disturbance in the restaurant and refused to go to his room.

Psychiatrist Says Adults Need Drug Education

DES MOINES (AP) — The chief of psychiatry for the Harvard University Health Service said Tuesday some doctors and teachers are more ignorant about drugs than young people.

Dr. Graham Blaine Jr. told the Iowa Medical Society that physicians should better educate themselves about the drug problems and cooperate more with law enforcement officials, teachers and parents.

"In many communities, we have found young people know more about drugs and their effects than do their teachers and doctors," he said.

Blaine also called for more sensible laws dealing with drug use and more research into the effects of narcotic and hallucinogenic drugs.

Blaine said young drugtakers are either seeking experience, oblivion or a change in personality.

Enemy Executed Over 1,000 In Hue, U.S. Embassy Says

SAIGON (AP)—Enemy troops executed more than 1,000 persons, burying some alive and shooting or beheading others, while they occupied Hue in February, the U.S. Embassy reported Tuesday.

Most of the victims were South Vietnamese, but they also included two French priests, three South Koreans and a Hong Kong Chinese who was a British subject, the embassy said.

There have been piecemeal reports of the slaughter of civilians while the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong occupied the old imperial capital during the Tet offensive, but this was the first time any officials gave an overall picture.

An embassy spokesman said it took two months to compile the reports from allied sources and South Vietnamese police because officials wanted to be sure of accuracy.

"Many had been shot, some beheaded," said the embassy report. "A number of bodies showed signs of mutilation. Most were found with hands bound behind their backs."

"Evidence also was discovered of victims having been clubbed unconscious prior to being buried alive."

One Buddhist monk told investigators that almost nightly from a field behind the pagoda he and other monks heard shots and cries for mercy.

In all, 19 mass graves were found in and around Hue, the embassy said. The largest grave, containing 201 bodies, was found near the imperial tombs.

"Victims included Father Urbain, 52, and Father Guy, 48, French priests from the nearby Benedictine mission at Thien An," the report said.

"Father Urbain was bound hand and foot and buried alive with 10 others. Father Guy was forced to kneel and shot through the head."

Another large grave was found at Gia Hoi high school. Almost 200 bodies were found there, and about half the victims apparently were buried alive, the embassy said.

In another grave were 77 bodies, including those of three South Koreans and a Hong Kong Chinese. Another grave contained the bodies of about 50 women.

Twenty bodies in a grave outside Hue were reported to be those of civilians seized by enemy troops from their refuge in the Redemptorist church at Hue Feb. 8 and taken on a death march.

Other bodies were found "bound together in groups of 10 to 15, eyes open, with dirt or cloth in their mouths," the report declared.

Stanford Coed Seeks Office, Unveils Plans

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—Vicky Drake, a topless dancer, is running for student body president of Stanford University, but the registrar says she's not a student.

The girl said she was registered for two classes as a Spanish major and is eligible to run. The girl, who says her real name is Victoria Rowles, said her stage name is Vicky Drake. The reason Registrar Harvey Hall can't find her in his records is that she signed up late and then put in a change of name form, she added.

Nude posters of Vicky Drake appeared on campus Monday saying only: "Vicky for ASSU Pres." ASSU stands for the Associated Students of Stanford University.

Vicky told a reporter she is employed at the Hip Hugger, a club in nearby Sunnyvale.

Her only platform, she says, is the proposal that Lake Lagunita on the campus be made into a nudist lake with nudist beaches and boating and swimming.

Vicky, 22, has 38-22-36 vital statistics and claims a scholastic average of just over "B."

"I am proposing nothing useful," she said. "Nothing more than a little distraction for a lot of book-weary students."

'Bedazzled' Catches Eye But It Isn't Good As Gold

By NICHOLAS MEYER

Peter Cook and Dudley Moore are a pair of extremely funny fellows. Many are familiar with this dynamic duo through their participation in an hysterically funny revue which came over here several years ago as a bundle from Britain entitled "Beyond the Fringe." Cook and Moore have been doing comedy together ever since, among which efforts included a frantically funny appearance as a pair of money-grasping nephews in Bryan Forbes' masterful comedy, "The Wrong Box."

Now, with the aid of stylish director Stanley Donen, the two have written and starred in a screenplay solely devoted to their antics, called "Bedazzled," and it's not as funny as one would think — with their comic credentials — it ought to be. "Bedazzled" is the 17th reworking of the Faust legend, which has spawned everything from operas ("Faust") to short stories ("The Devil and Daniel Webster") to musicals ("Damn Yankees"), and so on and so on.

In "Bedazzled," we get what might be considered the "mod" version of the story, with Dudley Moore as a hapless worker in a hamburger joint, who pines shyly for Eleanor Bron, a dub-iously attractive coworker. For her, he sells his soul to the Prince of Darkness, played, with what can only be described as a novel interpretation, by Peter Cook, who spends most of his time voicing parking meters into expletives and ripping the last pages out of Agatha Christie's novels before they go into bookstores.

Cook gives Moore seven wishes, each with some devilish catch, in which he tries to gain the beautiful Eleanor. What follows is sometimes very funny, but frequently doesn't work at all, for reasons I am none too sure of. Basically, it would seem that the story line in question is one that might have come from a revue skit and just could not stand that expanding to feature-length movie form, but that doesn't quite ring true.

Some Funny Moments There are some very funny moments, to be sure, and the characterizations of the seven deadly sins, climaxing (almost literally) with Raquel Welch as Lust, are very funny indeed, to say nothing of the Order of Leaping Nuns, which is inspired, to say the least.

The ending is downright awful, as if Cook and Moore had finally run out of ideas, and if you come to that, the Faust story has had about all the reworking it can take. Moore, Cook and Eleanor Bron (especially) are all quite good playing parts with the same external characteristics, whose personalities, however, change from wish to wish. Stanley Donen's direction is quietly flashy.

University Plans To Crack Down On Bike Parking

You had better find a legal place to park your bicycle from now on if you've been leaving it just anywhere around the Union or the Pentacrest, John Dooley, director of parking lot operations, said Tuesday that his office intended to begin acting on complaints it was receiving of bicycles blocking sidewalks and generally obstructing pedestrian traffic.

Dooley said that notices would be placed on every bike in the Union and Pentacrest area to the effect that bicycles are to be placed in the racks provided for them only. He said that after two or three days of warning notices the illegally parked bikes would be impounded by Campus Security and the owners would have to reclaim their property.

Dooley said that there was plenty of bicycle parking space available on the north and south sides of the Pentacrest and west of the Chemistry Auditorium.

W.S. Merwin will be heard in reading of his poetry recorded on campus last March, and at least tonight on Literary Topics at 7.

AWS To Sell Candy For Vietnam Project

Associated Women Students (AWS) in conjunction with the Johnson County Red Cross will participate in a fund-raising project today for the purchase of recreational equipment for the men in Vietnam.

AWS members and volunteers will trade packages of candy for donations to the cause in booths located in the Union, on the Pentacrest, at Burge Hall and near Quadrangle.

"We think this money will go for a very worthy cause," said Sue Taylor, A3, Clinton, chairman of the project, "Vietnam May Day."

Money collected from the candy-selling project will be used for the purchase of baseballs and bats, basketballs, badminton sets, and other transportable recreational equipment.

The AWS unit of the American College Division of the Red Cross has formerly worked with the Johnson County Red Cross at the Veterans Hospital and the Johnson County Home.

Farce In 1 Act Slated For Performance Here

"Mother-in-Law Strikes Out," a play described as "a traumatic farce in one act," will be performed at the University May 15 by the Ad Hoc Russian Players of the Purdue University modern language department.

The play will be presented at 7 p.m. at Shambaugh Auditorium and is free to the public.

UI Theatre To Stage 'A Delicate Balance'

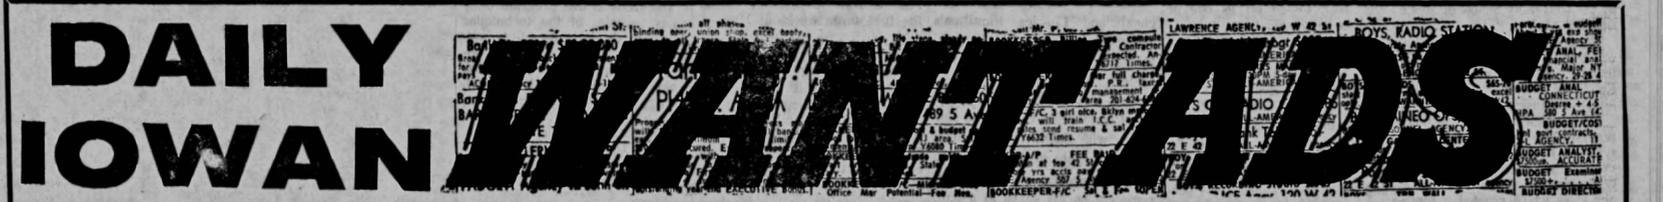

Edward Albee's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "A Delicate Balance," will open May 9 at the University Theatre. The play, last of the 1967-68 academic year, will run through May 18.

Tickets will go on sale Thursday at the Union box office. Tickets are free to students upon presentation of identification cards.

Non-student price is $1.50. The story depicts the disintegration of love as the "delicate balance" when a family's relationships is upset, turning the house into a horror-ridden asylum. Albee's work according to the New York Post portrays a "sympathetic feeling for the embattled characters that represent an advance in the understanding of human inner-torment."

David Schaaf, associate professor of television-radio-film, is directing the play.

Opera Workshop Will Present 19th-Century French Farce

By VICTOR POWER

A spoof on a well-known opera, which itself has become a classic, will be performed for the first time in Iowa City at 8 p.m. May 10 and 11 at Macbride Auditorium by the University School of Music Opera Workshop.

The operatic spoof, "Orpheus in the Underworld," by Jacques Offenbach, will be conducted by Robert W. Eckert, assistant professor of music.

"This wild-flying French farce predates the Gilbert and Sullivan type of light opera by several years," said Richard J. Marriot, G. Davenport, stage manager of the show which created a sensation in its premiere in 1858 at Offenbach's Theatre in Paris, he said.

The opera is a spoof on mythology as well as a satirical takeoff on Gruck's "Orfeo" and Claudio Monteverdi's "Orfeo," said Marriot. Offenbach's "Orpheus in the Underworld," an imitation of Moliere's farces, makes fun of the other Orpheus operas and even steals some of their tunes, he said.

The melodies in Offenbach's opera are lovely but difficult, said Marriot. The best known tune from the opera is the original "Can Can," which later became popularly associated with Parisian nightclubs.

Jaques Offenbach realized his dream of starting his own theatre in 1855 with the "Bouffes Parisiens." In the next three years he wrote 25 farces and satires which became the rage of Paris.

"Orpheus in the Underworld," though the greatest of his operas, was not an immediate success. Most of the audience and critics found little amusement in a satire about Olympian gods, and Offenbach's opera might have been soon tossed off as one of his less happy ventures.

But destiny intervened in the form of Jules Janin, a powerful critic, who hurled a critical thunderbolt at the opera. He accused "Orpheus" of blasphemy.

"Orpheus Called Profane"

It was, he said, a profanity against bold and glorious antiquity. But the public loved it and the author reaped great personal rewards from "Orpheus." His application for French citizenship (he was German) was finally endorsed and the ribbon of the Legion of Honor was bestowed upon him. The opera brought him wealth as well as fame.

In old age, he became a recluse, regretting having wasted his time and talents on satirical operettas instead of more serious works.

The University production of "Orpheus," after its run here will be brought on May 15 to the What Cheer opera house in central Iowa.

"This is the first time that we have brought an opera on tour from the University," said Marriot. "The residents of What Cheer have just renovated their ancient opera house, so we are happy to take our production there."

Tickets for the University performance will be on sale at the Union box office starting today. Admission is $1.

Bluesman Lester, Carmichael Aide, To Sing Friday

Black power and the blues will be the subject of Julius Lester, bluesman and antiwar spokesman, in a three-part program this week.

Discussion on Stokely Carmichael and Charles Hamilton's book Black Power will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in Kessler's Under, 209 S. Burlington St. Lester, who was Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee secretary with Carmichael in Cuba, will participate in the discussion.

He will present a concert with comment on his songs at 8 p.m. Friday in 225 Chemistry Building. His selections will cover Black Power and the blues.

The last part of the program will be an informal discussion and group sing beginning at 10 p.m. Thursday at the Unicorn Coffee House, 10 S. Gilbert St.

Lester's visit to the campus is being sponsored by the Action Studies Program, Union Board, and the Afro-American Student Association.

'New Cinema' Short Films To Be Shown During May

By JOHN LOWENS

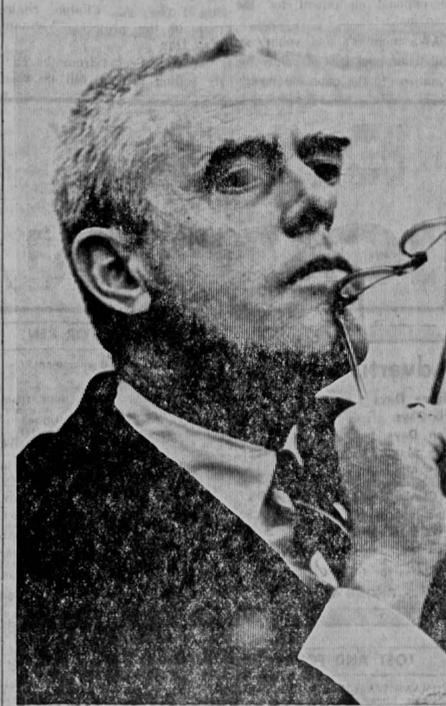

A two-part program of "New Cinema," 18 short films by some of the most respected modern filmmakers, will be shown in Phillips Hall Auditorium during the first three weeks of May.

The "New Cinema" program, which was first shown in this country as part of the New York Film Festival, has a history of sold-out engagements, beginning with its premiere at Lincoln Center. It will be presented at the University by Gamma Delta, a campus-affiliated service organization.

The program has received scores of favorable reviews, most of which mention that these short films (from 3 to 28 minutes) deserve to be seen but are very rarely offered by commercial movie houses. The films in the program include animated and conventional material and are varied in length and pace. Many of them are early films by actors and directors who have since become leaders in modern film circles.

In "Enter Hamlet," Maurice Evans speaks the well-known soliloquy from "Hamlet" accompanied by a wild sequence of filmed images. Peter Sellers stars in "The Running, Jumping, and Standing Still Film," directed by Richard Lester who made the two Beatles films and "The Knack." Francois Truffaut, who made "The 400 Blows" and "Jules and Jim," is represented by "Les Moustons '67" in the "New Cinema" program. The program also

Man Who Poo-Pooed Pot Dangers To Speak Today

By BECKY CERLING

Dr. James L. Goddard, controversial head of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), will speak on "The Investigator and Tomorrow's Drugs" at 4:10 p.m. today in the College of Pharmacy Auditorium.

Goddard outraged physicians and narcotics experts last October when he discounted popular beliefs about the dangers of marijuana at a question-and-answer session at the University of Minnesota.

"Whether or not marijuana is a more dangerous drug than alcohol is debatable. I don't happen to think it is," Goddard told the Minnesota students.

When asked whether or not he thought that the use of marijuana led to addiction to other, more potent drugs, Goddard said that although "it is true most heroin users have smoked marijuana, it is also true that most heroin users have drunk milk. I have seen no proof that there is any connection."

Goddard is also noted for his strict insistence that drug companies produce clear proof of the efficiency and safety of their products before they are allowed to be sold.

Goddard's lecture is part of the College of Medicine Lecture Series, sponsored jointly by the College of Medicine and the Student American Medical Association.

Goddard was asked to be a speaker at the series because he is a well known, controversial person and an effective speaker, Dr. Nicholas S. Halmi, professor of anatomy, said Monday.

The College of Medicine wants to give medical and pharmacy students and faculty an opportunity to hear the commissioner present his views on the drugs people should or should not be allowed to use, Halmi said.

CONTROVERSIAL FDA HEAD TO SPEAK TODAY — Dr. James L. Goddard, controversial head of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), will speak at 4:10 p.m. today in the College of Pharmacy Auditorium on "The Investigator and Tomorrow's Drugs." Goddard is known for his statements last year which discounted the alleged dangers of marijuana.

Center For New Music To Give 'Blues People'

"Blues People," a contemporary composition by Robert S. Moore, will be the featured work at the Center for New Music concert to be held at 8 p.m. Saturday, in Macbride Auditorium.

County Accepts Resurfacing Bid

A bid for resurfacing 10 1/2 miles of county asphalt roads was accepted by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Monday.

The bid of $160,262.10, by L. L. Pelling Co., a local firm, was for Highway 218 between Iowa City and North Liberty, and the section of road connecting Iowa City to Highway 6.

Latin American Poetry To Be Dramatized Today

An attempt to dramatize a poetry recital will be shown at 7:30 p.m. today in the Phillips Hall auditorium.

Twelve graduate students enrolled in Spanish American literature classes will present the first of a series of recitals on Latin American poetry. The recital, which is sponsored by the Department of Spanish and Portuguese, will include 12 poems from 8 countries and will be presented in the English, French, Spanish and Portuguese languages.

The program consists of an explanatory review of 20th century Latin American poetry and the recitation of representative poems written by the most notable contemporary Latin American poets.

Among the poets represented in the recital are Chilean poets Gabriela Mistral, the first Latin American Nobel Prize winner, Pablo Neruda and the Mexican poet Octavio Paz.

A segment of "Song of Myself" by the American poet Walt Whitman is also included in the program. The reason the Whitman work is included in a recital of Latin American poetry is to demonstrate the influence 19th Century American poetry exerted on contemporary Latin American poetry, according to Gerardo A. Luzuriaga, G. Ecuador.

Under the direction of Julio Duran-Cerda, professor of Spanish and Portuguese, sound and light will be incorporated into the recital.

2 Workshop Grads To Read Poetry

Phyllis Janik and Harold Tinkle, two University Poetry Workshop graduates, will read selections from their works at 8 p.m. today in the Lucas-Dodge Room in the Iowa Memorial Union.

Tinkle, who received his Master of Fine Arts (MFA) degree here a year ago is now an instructor at Ferris State College in Michigan.

Janik is currently writing her MFA thesis. Both have published their work in magazines of poetry including "Kumquat," which is published in Iowa City.

If these kids don't make it, neither do we.

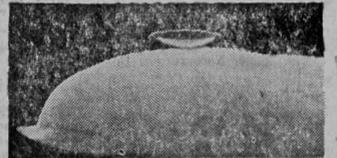

These are big city school children. They are partners of all who try to build and keep our cities alive with hope and promise of personal dignity. If we fail these partners, they will fail, as finally will we all.

To the Bell System, they also are customers and, prospectively, many are fellow employees. Those we hire will bring with them attitudes and skills produced by city life and city schools. Their qualities will help shape the quality of our service. And service is our product.

Bell System companies and people are increasingly engaged to help meet the problems of the cities, especially those concerning education and employability. In these areas our skills and other business resources may have extra value. We shall try to keep our deeds outrunning our words.

Give your contact lenses a bath tonight

In order to keep your contact lenses as comfortable and convenient as they were meant to be, you have to take care of them. But until now you needed two or more separate solutions to properly prepare and maintain your contacts. Not with Linsene. Linsene is the one lens solution for complete contact lens care.

Cleaning your contacts with Linsene retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. And soaking your contacts in Linsene overnight assures you of proper lens hygiene. You get a free soaking case on the bottom of every bottle of Linsene.

It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and in some cases can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Linsene which is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Just a drop or two of Linsene, before you insert your lenses, coats and lubricates it allowing the lens to float more freely in the eye's fluids. That's because Linsene is an "isotonic" solution, which means that it blends with the natural fluids of the eye.

Let your contacts be the convenience they were meant to be. Get some Linsene, from the Murine Company, Inc.
