

Baker Decision Reversed

MINNEAPOLIS — The General Assembly, highest judicial branch of the United Presbyterian Church, Wednesday reversed a decision it had made Tuesday and upheld the conviction of a University of Iowa professor and his wife charged with disturbing the peace and unity of the First Presbyterian Church, 26 E. Market St., Iowa City.

The Assembly, meeting here Tuesday had voted in favor of a minority opinion issued by two members of a judicial commission that heard the case and had recommended in a majority opinion that the charges against Prof. and Mrs. Joseph Baker be upheld.

However, after the case was resubmitted to the judicial commission and five members of the General Assembly and the commission again suggested upholding the charges, the assembly delegates voted 334 to 246 to support the commission's decision.

Tuesday's action was startlingly unusual, and today's action was more normal." Baker told "The Daily Iowan Wednesday night.

"With even 24 delegates on our side it was a victory," Baker said.

Baker, a professor of English, and his wife, Matilda, had objected to the destruction of the church building and the construction of a new church. The Bakers consider the church an architectural gem.

Pastor Criticized

The Bakers have also been critical of the church pastor, the Rev. Jack Zerwas, and some members of the congregation.

Members of the session, local ruling body of the church, filed charges of disruption of the peace and unity of the church against the Bakers. The Bakers' trial began in Iowa City in December.

A decision on the case was delivered Jan. 31 by a nine-member judicial commission from the Southeast Iowa Presbytery. The decision ruled that the Bakers were suspended from the communion of the church and that Baker could not exercise his office as ruling elder of the church.

Wednesday's decision was the final step in church court appeal action on the case.

The original decision said the Bakers could have one year to formally apologize for their action. After this apology, the Bakers would be welcomed back into the church. If, after the one year period, the Bakers make no move to repent, they could be excommunicated.

"We can't repent for this; we didn't do it," Baker said Wednesday night.

"Rubber Stamp" Expected

Baker said he had expected the General Assembly delegates to "rubber stamp" the decision of the judicial commission. He said, referring to Tuesday's decision, that he was amazed that the General Assembly had taken any action at all.

The judicial commission met Wednesday for about three hours. The afternoon session, during which the General Assembly vote was taken, was closed. The General Assembly has 802 members, but many of the members left Minneapolis before the vote since Wednesday's session was the last day of the convention.

James C. Hickman, clerk of session, the Rev. Robert Gwaltney, assistant pastor, and Zerwas were the only representatives of the First Presbyterian Church who were in Minneapolis.

Hickman would make no comment on the decision. Zerwas and Gwaltney were unavailable for comment Wednesday night.

In statements issued during the Iowa City trial of the Bakers, session members said the session did not object to the Bakers' opposition but to the form the opposition had taken.

The session charged the Bakers with disrupting the peace and unity of the congregation with letters to church officers, telephone calls, petitions and interruptions of church business meetings.

The Bakers, who had been convicted of "disturbing the peace and unity" of the First Presbyterian Church here, saw the charges against them rejected by the Church's General Assembly Tuesday and then upheld Wednesday. — Photo by Rick Greenawalt

13 Greek Houses Fail To Satisfy Kitchen Standards

By MIKE FINN

Two of every five fraternities that serve food do not meet a minimal level of sanitation, according to a recent University Inspection Division report.

While all but two of these fraternities — Delta Sigma Delta and Nu Sigma Nu — have made improvements during the past four years, 11 of the 26 professional and social fraternities that have their own food service still remain deficient.

"In all probability, there is a significant association between those food services and the episodes and individual cases of intestinal upset and respiratory infections which occur on this campus," the report stated.

Reasons for low ratings vary and the report did not list deficient houses and their specific deficiencies. But obsolete and insufficient equipment combined with cramped cooking areas are the overriding reasons for the low ratings, according to Franklin Kilpatrick, director of the Inspection Division.

Kilpatrick said that it would take major capital improvements such as enlarging cooking areas and buying new equipment to get the most of the deficient houses to safe levels of sanitation.

M. L. Huit, dean of students, said that he was satisfied with the progress that the fraternities had made in improving kitchen facilities. He added that the Office of Student Affairs had not been asked by the Inspection Division to force the deficient fraternities to attain safe levels of sanitation and consequently was not doing so.

Kilpatrick said that financial limitations of fraternities was the main reason the Inspection Division was not making the fraternities speed up their improvements. It has been four years since the inspections were started.

"What are we going to do? Tell 1,200 students that they can't go to school?" Kilpatrick asked.

In addition to the 11 deficient fraternities, there were two deficient sororities — Pi Beta Phi and Zeta Tau Alpha, both of which had low sanitation ratings.

Political Events At A Glance

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

These political hopefuls were making news Wednesday night:

Kennedy: Sen. Robert F. Kennedy challenged Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey to take his presidential campaign to the American people.

"I am taking my campaign to the people," the New York Democrat said in Portland, Ore. "I think that's what a candidate should do."

Kennedy, who has been bringing Humphrey's name more into his campaign and ignoring Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, turned a McCarthy supporter's demand for a Kennedy-McCarthy debate into a challenge to Humphrey.

McCarthy: The Minnesota Democrat said his two rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination both represent "a kind of carryover" of policies and personalities which produced American involvement in the Vietnamese war.

Campaigning in Portland for Oregon's May 28 presidential primary, McCarthy linked both Kennedy and Humphrey with administration men and decisions on Vietnam.

Rockefeller: New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller said he does differ on issues with Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, who is considered a potential candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

"We do not share a common position on many issues," Rockefeller said at a news conference in Detroit.

REAGAN 'NOT INTERESTED' — California Gov. Ronald Reagan, a Republican, drew cheers from a crowd of enthusiasts at Cleveland's airport when, responding to a question, he said he was not interested in a second spot on a presidential ticket with New York Gov. Militants Ousted By Poor People

WASHINGTON — The ranks of the poor at Resurrection City, U.S.A., fluctuated rapidly Wednesday as officials of the Poor People's Campaign banished 200 demonstrators homeward and welcomed 400 new ones.

The departing group was made up largely of militant young men from Chicago, Detroit and other Midwestern cities who were expelled for disciplinary reasons.

The Rev. James Bevel, a director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, sponsoring the campaign, said the youths had been unable to get along with the others in the camp, especially the whites.

"Had To Get Them Out"

"They went around and beat up on our white people," said Bevel. "They interfered with the workers and were hostile to the press. We had to get them out."

The arrivals and departures left the shantytown headquarters of the campaign near its planned capacity of 3,000 but Bevel and other officials were unable to say precisely how many were on hand.

A distinguished nonresident showed up to lend a hand on the garbage detail — black actor Sidney Poitier, who said he was there "to re-establish roots among the people who gave me birth."

The Academy Award-winning actor attracted little attention from the impoverished residents of the camp as he went about his duties with a sanitation crew.

New Group From South

The charge Bevel leveled at the 200 marchers who were kicked out — that they "couldn't develop any internal cohesion" — could not be made about the incoming group. The band of 400 Southern blacks, mostly young people who had never been out of the South before, marched into the camp singing, clapping hands and hugging the residents waiting to greet them.

They had walked the last mile-and-a-half of a two-week journey that began in Mississippi and wound by bus through Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Since Sunday they have been camping out in 15 churches in northern Virginia waiting for housing in Resurrection City to become available.

Hanoi Hints Paris Talks Could Lead To Nowhere

PARIS — The United States and North Vietnam Wednesday night recessed their preliminary peace talks until Monday after the Hanoi delegation for the first time suggested the possibility that these discussions might fail.

In calm tones, but with acid words, the two delegations once again declined to budge from stated positions. The leader of the Hanoi delegation, Xuan Thuy, asserted: "In the event these official conversations do not conclude with results, the American side must bear the full and entire responsibility."

A U.S. delegation spokesman said he did not take Thuy's statement as an implied threat to break off the talks.

"Preparing The Way"

"It is a statement of position, preparing the way for the position to take if, for any reason, the talks did fail," William J. Jordan, the American spokesman, said.

"If the talks should fail the people of the world will make their own judgment."

But the way the U.S. spokesman described the session, he left the impression the Americans felt they were getting nowhere. The North Vietnamese refuse to admit they have any troops in South Vietnam, although U.S. intelligence reports from Vietnam say Hanoi has virtually stripped its own territory and has the equivalent of 12 divisions in the South.

"It's hard to see how we can move on toward finding a peaceful settlement of a war when we are dealing with someone who won't even admit he is there," Jordan said.

Time after time U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, the chief U.S. negotiator, challenged the North Vietnamese delegation to avoid public statements and to get down to businesslike talks in private. His efforts were rebuffed. But there is no thought of the Americans giving up in despair. Asked if the Americans had thought of breaking up the conference, Jordan quickly retorted: "Certainly not."

Harriman Tries Again

Harriman tried again to take the conference out of what he calls the realm of propaganda in which, he said, the Hanoi delegation issues statements for the sake of the impact on world opinion. He said some people were getting "disgusted" with North Vietnamese allegations which had no basis in fact.

But immediately after the session at the French international conference center, the North Vietnamese spokesman began reading the text of Thuy's remarks in the meeting. Then the Americans likewise re-

U.S. Jets Pound Enemy Positions

SAIGON — U.S. Air Force B52s and Marine fighter-bombers teamed up Wednesday pounding enemy positions in the demilitarized zone, where growing North Vietnamese strength reportedly poses a threat in the far north of South Vietnam.

Waves of the eight-engine Stratofortresses twice attacked suspected North Vietnamese artillery positions, troop concentrations, truck parks and supply areas in the zone between the two divisions of Vietnam.

Then Marine planes raked enemy positions in the zone. Pilots reported they touched off nine explosions, indicating hits on ammunition or fuel dumps.

The zone not only provides the North Vietnamese with a base close to Marine positions just to the south, but it also is an infiltration route into South Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese have reportedly shown increasing aggressiveness in the far north of South Vietnam in the past week. They attacked Marine bases below the zone Sunday after a week of heavy fighting south of Da Nang, about 100 miles southeast of the border.

Tuesday and Wednesday enemy attacks concentrated around the provincial capital of Quang Tri, 16 miles south of the zone, and around Hue, 25 miles southeast of Quang Tri.

South Vietnamese troops conducting a sweep five miles south of Quang Tri fought a day-long battle with North Vietnamese.

U.S. Marine helicopter gunships were called in and hammered the enemy. After the battle, the South Vietnamese reported counting 78 North Vietnamese dead. Their own casualties were reported light.

Kirk Won't Budge On Amnesty Plea

NEW YORK — President Grayson Kirk of Columbia University said Wednesday that there is "no likelihood" of amnesty for rebellious students, and that he was prepared to discipline, suspend or expel "any number."

Kirk's statement came at a news conference after the second early morning campus police raid in a month left 56 more persons injured, including 16 policemen.

A student strike coordinating committee scheduled a rally to seek citywide support for the rebellious students, whose month-long protest has resulted in 998 arrests and more than 200 injuries.

Kirk, 64, an expert in political science and one-time diplomat, rejected the students' most pressing demand — amnesty. "There's no likelihood of granting amnesty," he said.

Expulsion Possible

"I think it is important for me to state if disciplinary probation, suspension or even permanent expulsion must be dealt out to any number of students, this action will be taken," he added.

Movies Shown By Government In Spock Trial

BOSTON — To the peal of organ music in a darkened federal court room Wednesday, several young men were shown burning what were described as their draft cards before the altar of a Boston church.

The television films symbolized the government's case against Dr. Benjamin Spock and four antiwar associates on trial on charges of counseling draft evasion.

Spock was not present in the Arlington Street Unitarian-Universalist Church last Oct. 16 when the cards were burned. The only defendants there were Yale chaplain the Rev. William Sloan Coffin Jr. and Michael Ferber, a student.

Coffin was shown shaking hands with one of the youths as he ignited his card from a burning candle and then dropped it with others in a metal receptacle. Ferber delivered a speech during the ceremony entitled, "A Time to Say No" but it was not recorded by the television crew.

The church ceremony is one of the basic acts upon which the government based its indictment against all five defendants.

Claims Illegal Conspiracy

It claims they were bound together in an illegal conspiracy and that all share responsibility for the anti-draft demonstrations in the Arlington Street Church. Judge Francis J. W. Ford so informed the jury.

The background organ music heard on the film was identified by a member of the defense counsel as a hymn entitled "Sheep May Safely Graze."

Earlier, before the courtroom was darkened for the WBZ-TV film, the defense made its initial effort to cloak Spock and the others with the protection of the United States Constitution against the government charges.

On the witness stand in U.S. District Court as the trial moved through a third day was FBI agent Lawrence Miller, who infiltrated an anti-draft news conference at the New York Hilton Hotel last Oct. 2.

Goodman Cross Examined

Attorney Edward Barshak, cross examining on behalf of writer Mitchell Goodman, one of Spock's four codefendants, asked about notes that Miller took at the meeting and later enlarged into a formal FBI report.

Q. Is it fair to say these notes are brief reminders so you could dictate your report later?

A. Brief reminders and mental notes.

Q. Is it fair to say these handwritten notes don't include everything that was said at the news conference?

A. Of course not. I don't take shorthand.

Q. You had never done this before, had you?

A. No.

Q. Did he (Goodman) say that he was there in response to his conscientious objection to the war in Vietnam?

A. I would say yes, in substance.

Q. Did you not leave out all reference about his conscientious basis for being there?

A. I would have to say yes.

The defense is basing its case on the First Amendment to the Constitution.

charges and denials of police brutality at the 214-year-old Ivy League university, which has about 25,000 students.

The latest violence began at 4:25 a.m., when more than 1,000 police clubbed their way through a wave of yelling students who had defied campus demands that the campus be cleared.

"To the barricades!" the students cried. Moments before the police moved, firemen had put out a series of minor fires without serious damage.

100 Ousted Peacefully

A few hours earlier police without clubs had peacefully ousted more than a hundred students from a building housing the offices of a dean who had called student leaders on the carpet.

In this operation, police officers ordered their men to handle the students gently. Commenting on the absence of billy clubs a police spokesman said, "The kids can't holler brutality if we haven't got them."

Mark Rudd, campus leader of the Students for a Democratic Society and one of the leaders of the protest, was suspended with three other students for refusing to report to the dean for a disciplinary hearing. Tension mounted.

Students continued to mill about the campus and President Grayson Kirk ordered the police to clear the academic buildings and the campus of all except those students living in dormitories.

The message was read on the campus radio station and a dean mounted a sun dial in the main quadrangle to relay it through a bullhorn to the student crowds.

When the students ignored the order and rushed toward barricades they had erected at a campus gate, the riot-trained officers met them, swinging clubs. An officer was struck in the face by a rock, and bled profusely.

A student leader, Juan Gonzales, later charged that 50 plainclothesmen with guns drawn had invaded a dormitory and beaten students with blackjacks.

There was no immediate police comment.

One student who lives in the dormitory was hospitalized with a possible skull fracture, but it was not clear where he had been injured.

Deputy Police Commissioner Jacques Nevard told reporters that "the kind of situation dictates the tactic."

"The police response is pretty well determined by the kind of disturbance it meets," he said.

"That is not justifiable under the circumstances," Nevard replied.

After complaints of police brutality at the first mass police raid on April 30, when student sit-ins were ousted from five buildings they had occupied, a preliminary police report that the officers had used clubs because they were required to subdue violent students. A total of 707 persons were arrested then.

Win Old Cap!

One last chance before finals to hoot and howl and perhaps be the lucky one to win the illustrious Old Capitol building will pull off at 8:30 p.m. Saturday on the Union Patio.

A hootenanny, sponsored by Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), will feature Iowa City talent, including Howie Weinberg, A2, New York; Judy Luedke, A2, Perkasie, Pa.; Michael Dennis Browne, instructor in English, and Denny Ankrum, Iowa City, regional coordinator for SDS.

The winner of a raffle of Old Capitol will be announced during the hootenanny. Ten-cent tickets for the raffle will be sold today and Friday around the campus and at the SDS literature table in the Union Gold Feather Lobby.

The money collected in sale of the raffle tickets will be used by SDS to finance its activities. Admission to the hootenanny is free.

5 Hurt In Auto Crash

A two-car crash on the Lone Tree black-top road, six miles south of Iowa City, Wednesday night sent five persons to area hospitals for treatment.

The driver of one car, Marjorie A. Krebs, 52, 411 Douglas Ct., was treated and released at Mercy Hospital. Her daughter, Karen, 16, was also treated and released.

The driver of the other car, Judi A. Swales, 21, Omaha, Neb., was taken to University Hospitals and held for observation. Two passengers in her car, Mark A. Staley, 8, and Jimmy L. Staley, 10, were taken to University Hospitals with head injuries. No condition reports were available.

Flansburg's protest reporting doesn't deserve AP award

The Iowa Associated Press Managing Editors Association named Des Moines Register reporter James Flansburg as the recipient of the sweepstakes award for news writing Tuesday night. This award was presented to Flansburg on the basis of his stories concerning the student demonstrations here in November and December.

Flansburg's reports, which were printed on the front pages of the Register and were given banner headlines, left Iowa readers with the impression that the entire University community was in conflict with police and sheriff's deputies and that the campus was in an upheaval which would never be replaced with academics again. His reports left University students wondering how they could have missed an all-campus riot and how the University buildings could still be standing after an onslaught of savages.

In Flansburg's story on the December 5 demonstration against Dow Chemical Co. recruiters, entitled "A Bad Day At Iowa City," he wrote of "guerrilla tactics" which turned the campus into a "madhouse." What are "guerrilla tactics"? To a reader, this implies that students were standing on roof tops and in bushes sniping at innocent bystanders. The students who were protesting were, on the most part, orderly and were under orders to break no laws in their protest.

Flansburg reported, "At least two ringleaders (were) faculty members." The two were, in fact, graduate assistants, but they could have been University Pres. Howard R. Bowen and Dewey B. Stuit, dean of the college of liberal arts, from the broad term he used.

Flansburg said, "Two lawmen collapsed during the day's frenzy and were hospitalized." The two lawmen he spoke of were, in fact, not among the forces used to counter the demonstrators but were actually in the Alumni House directing the movement of others. One man collapsed from exhaustion, and the other had an ear infection.

While Flansburg did not really lie in his reports, he did taint his reports with small discrepancies which added up to a story that was not at all representative of the event reported. The term "riot," by dictionary definition, was not misused, but by the same definition, a "riot" could be a two-man fist fight. His story was bad, and his facts were exaggerated.

To students who actually observed the students demonstrating in protest to the Marine and Dow recruiters on campus, Flansburg's reports were extreme.

To those who expect a newsmen's reports to be accurate, unbiased, fair and honest, Flansburg's reports violated every principal of good reporting.

In his staff position on the Register, Flansburg is able to reach almost every family and reader in the state. Those readers were left with a picture of the demonstrations on campus that was inaccurate and unrepresentative.

Another Register reporter, Nick Kotz, recently received a Pulitzer prize for his excellent series of stories which led to more strict requirements for meat inspection. This award was well deserved and well justified.

However, the judges of the AP contest were not in Iowa City to see the event Flansburg reported. The judges had only his writing to base their decision on. But the contest was not based on writing techniques, it was based on reporting. As a reporter, I question whether Flansburg's reporting of the demonstrations on this campus was worthy of the top prize for news reporting. — Cheryl Arvidson

Baker affair getting confused

Wednesday's reversal of a Tuesday decision which rejected charges of "disturbing the peace and unity of the First Presbyterian Church" filed against a University professor and his wife left most followers of the case shaking their heads and wondering what happened.

In 24 hours, the members of the Presbyterian General Assembly, meeting at Minneapolis, did an about face and upheld lower judicial action against Joseph E. and Matilda Baker. This reversal has caused confusion and has complicated and made a little more strange the charges against and trial of the Bakers.

The Bakers happen to consider the First Presbyterian Church, 26 Market St., an architectural gem that should not be destroyed to build a new church. The local ruling body of the church happens to think the Bakers' opposition to the destruction of the building and criticism of the church's pastor has been disruptive. The Bakers may have been wrong in their vocal and written objections, but the local body was just as wrong in their practice of "good church fellowship" to members.

The whole situation is weird and getting more weird. This trial is getting as complicated as a "Mission Impossible." — Cheryl Arvidson

SCLC asks volunteers for summer 'task force'

By DICK KILLEN
For The Daily Iowan

"The Southern Christian Leadership Conference is recruiting summer volunteers for a two-month intensive organizing project in local communities as a follow-up to the Spring Poor People's Campaign. Volunteers will work in the 15 cities and rural areas where the campaign has been organized. The Summer Student Task Force is an effort to follow through on our spring campaign by working through the summer on poverty and racial problems at the local level. There are opportunities for students this summer in:

Political activity
Economic development
Community organization and mobilization
Research
Office work
Rural and urban education

"In selecting volunteers, priority will be given to the desire of students to work, past political or organizational experience, and the ability of campus groups or individuals to finance volunteers."

The above statement is taken from a brochure prepared by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and outlines one project that will carry over the objectives of the Poor People's Campaign into direct field work. The idea is not too different from the kind of idea behind the Peace Corps and the Poverty Program: with one very important distinction. The project is being administered by the SCLC, and financed independently of the federal government. From at least one point of view, the project is eminently reasonable, then, for who but the Blacks are best suited to act to relieve the problems of the Black community? The other side of the coin is, of course, that money, and to some extent man-power, are not in the hands of the Blacks. For the most part the students, both black and white, who will respond to this idea will not have money either; but insofar as they can get backing from student and community groups their participation is possible.

Also, the idea as it is presented in the brochure is not long range; but if the response is large enough, and if the SCLC determines that it can count on the large scale participation of the established community, there is no reason why it could not grow accordingly. For further information and details, you can write to: Mr. Stoney Cooke, Student and Campus Activities, SCLC, Room 367, 475 Riverside Dr., New York, N.Y. 10027.

Also from the SCLC and the Rev. Ralph Abernathy: "I urge all students who support this Poor People's Campaign of militant nonviolent action to join us in Washington as soon as studies and examinations permit. We especially need students starting May 27, when we will be building up our demonstrations and preparing for a great march on Washington May 30. We are encouraging students to come and stay as long as possible if it becomes necessary to intensify the campaign beyond May 30.

"Students in America, both black and white, have provided great physical, moral and intellectual support for human rights movements in the past. It was students who were shock troops through sit-ins, freedom rides, the Birmingham and Selma movements. We are now confident that they will join their poor brothers and sisters of all races, faiths and nationalities in this campaign."

"Demonstrations in Washington are scheduled to begin May 20 after the arrival of masses of poor people from all parts of the nation. By the time of the large influx of students beginning May 27, the campaign is expected to have escalated to a level of serious confrontation if the national government fails to respond adequately to poor people's needs."

Let us hope that the troops the government has waiting outside Washington are not indicative of its primary intentions.

'Elvira Madigan' quiet and lyrical, but it gets repetitious, reviewer says

By JOHN BRENKMAN
For The Daily Iowan

"Elvira Madigan" is the quiet, lyrical story of two lovers that is revealed with simplicity and beauty by the Swedish director Bo Widerberg. The film is based on the late 19th-century romance of Count Sixten Sparre, a Swedish army officer, and Elvira Madigan, a circus performer. They run away from their families to spend a summer together in the Scandinavian countryside. Trying to hide from past friends and memories, they aimlessly wander in search of their freedom. But it never comes. Elvira and Sixten are plagued by the guilt that surrounds Sixten's having abandoned his wife and two children. Unable to escape this remorse, they drift farther apart, until the illusionary happiness they once had is splintered. At last, they play out their tragedy.

The exquisite photography of Jacques Persson carries the story. The camera's rhythmic jaunts through woods and fields are filled with muted color patterns that are at once peaceful and exciting. The interior scenes lie in almost perfect stillness as the sun throws a gentle glow into the shadowy rooms. The visual images are more than sensual; they are extremely controlled expressions of mood and meaning.

Unfortunately, those images eventually become repetitious. Although they are highly artistic and beautiful, they do not reach the complexity that is needed to express gradual disintegration of this love that is riddled with guilt.

The fault for this lies not in the photography, but in the story itself. Widerberg never develops the pair's growing isolation from each other. He merely hints at it by showing us brief glimpses of their estrangement and loneliness.

This incompleteness of story strongly contrasts to the sensual excitement of the images which themselves become boring because they cannot carry the weight of the film.

Another failure, however, is unforgivable. That is the dubbing. From what we see, Pia Degermark and Tommy Berggren sensitively portrayed these ill-fated lovers. (In fact, Miss Degermark won the 1967 Cannes Film Festival award for best actress for this role.) But we never hear their performances. The absence of their real voices makes any comprehension of the subtlety of their acting impossible. The loss is inexcusable.

In spite of these failures, "Elvira Madigan" remains a highly sensitive and beautiful film.

Blood donors sought

To the Editor: Miss Justean Sparks was injured in a motorcycle accident in which her companion was killed. She is listed in serious condition at University Hospital.

She has used some eight pints of blood, at some expense. It is possible for friends or interested students to donate blood in her name to replace that which she used. I'm sure she would appreciate it very much.

'High and Low' called Kurosawa's masterpiece

By ALLAN ROSTOKER

"High and Low," the last Cinema 16 film of this semester, is one of the handful of masterpieces in the history of the cinema. It is a rich and complex film of astonishing artistry and craftsmanship, directed by a man whose control of the medium is the finest in the world.

Akira Kurosawa is perhaps more famous for his other films; for "Rashomon," "Ikiru," "Seven Samurai," and "Yojimbo." His film "High and Low" is, I believe, the supreme achievement of an incredibly proficient career.

The film is based on an American detective novel and the plot can be stated in a few sentences. Mr. Gondo is a chief executive of a shoe company who is involved in a power struggle for control of that concern. He has mortgaged everything to raise the necessary money.

Suddenly he receives a phone call that his son has been kidnaped and although it turns out that his chauffeur's son has been taken by mistake, the kidnaper still insists on the ransom. The film divides itself into two parts. The first details the moral dilemma of Gondo and the turning over of the ransom and the return of the child. The second follows the police as they track down the kidnaper.

The film operates on many levels. It is a police thriller of the highest order, although what is important to Kurosawa is not the identity of the kidnaper, which he shows us fairly early in the second half, but rather the process by which his capture is effected. Following this process in extraordinary detail — showing us the steps simultaneously with the police people's reports on them, providing a brilliant portrait of an urban Japanese city — all this is reminiscent of Kurosawa's profound interest in process, as evidenced by his study of the warriors in "Seven Samurai" and their defense of a peasant village.

Kurosawa uses this second half of the film in marked contrast to the first. The Japanese title should more accurately be translated as "Heaven and Hell." The rich house on the hill, Mr. Gondo's house, is the Heaven of the film's first half. The lower city of the intern-kidnaper is the hell of the second half, a half whose longest sequence is a journey through night as detailed and vivid as Dante's inferno.

Many of the scenes, as the best in all of Kurosawa, remind one strongly of Dostoyevsky. Kurosawa's love of him is well known. They share a passionate and moral world, a deeply religious vision of humanity. The great and awesome beauty of "High and Low" is in the depth of that vision as well as its formal perfection.

Of course the film could simply be called the best thriller ever made. It is also, of course, much more than that, and I have only abstracted part of its substance.

A note: The film runs two hours and twenty-three minutes, so the second show for today and Friday will begin at 9:30 p.m.

Involting ... by Don Schallau

EDITOR'S NOTE: Don Schallau cancelled his registration at the University last Friday, charging that the University was a "home of intellectual and moral prostitution, a bastion of white racism," and left for California to work in the presidential campaign of Sen. Eugene McCarthy. He will continue his column as he travels.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — I am writing this column in bus depots on the way to Los Angeles. While on this "freedom ride," I have chosen to reflect on the meaning of Sen. Eugene McCarthy's personality for me; in doing so, I will be explaining why I have chosen to work in his California primary campaign, rather than joining one of the "orthodox" radical groups, such as SDS.

To put it simply, McCarthy grasps involution; no other politician and few Americans openly discourse using the term involution.

But several weeks ago, in Life magazine, a poem by McCarthy was published, entitled "Lament of an Aging Politician," wherein Clean Gene describes himself as "...mired in involution and complexity."

It is not too surprising to me, actually, that McCarthy should say this — that he should grasp what Teilhard de Chardin, the founder of the concept, had written. Nor is it surprising either that McCarthy should have succeeded thus far and will, in time, become President.

I shall explain why I say this about him. Rarely in the campaign has it been mentioned that, after he graduated from college, McCarthy entered a Catholic monastery of the Benedictine order (St. Johns Abbey, Collegeville, Minn. — Ed.). He stayed only nine months, then went to the University of Minnesota, where he earned an M.A. in sociology and economics.

From this experience with the potentials and shortcomings of both monasticism and university sociology, facing upheavals and mounting injustice everywhere, he sees, I think, the need for a totally new philosophical framework for conducting government as well as religious affairs.

People speak of the underground church and deinstitutionalized religion, but these terms betray a tendency to hide from our social situation, for religious men to disappear into the masses.

The real need, though, is for confrontation, not flight; and for publicity, not conformity.

McCarthy is therefore the first American involutional politician, a truly new American. As more Americans become new — and more American — this pied piper will be able to lead us home to ourselves and our true nation.

Pompidou Beats Challenge In Assembly Censure Vote

PARIS (AP) — Premier Georges Pompidou successfully rode out Wednesday night attempts in the National Assembly to overthrow his government, but was immediately faced with the threat of renewed student upheavals.

A motion of censure over the government's handling of student riots and the spreading strike wave which has idled eight million workers needed 244 votes for passage. It won the support of 233 deputies and thus failed by 11 votes.

Passage of the motion would have forced the resignation of Pompidou and his cabinet and compounded politically an academic and industrial crisis that has all but paralyzed France and jolted the 10-year-old regime of President Charles de Gaulle.

Students Gather

While the vote was being counted in the assembly, about 5,000 students gathered a mile away on the Boulevard St. Michel to protest the government's ban on the return to France of student leader Daniel Cohn-Bendit, a re-habilitated German enrolled at suburban Nanterre University.

Cohn-Bendit, 23, who was visiting Amsterdam for talks with Dutch students, smiled when he heard of the ban and declared: "I can always slip back into France."

The last previous motion of censure against the government mustered 236 votes, only eight short of the necessary 244. It was held April 25 on the regime's information policies.

In the showdown on the current unrest, 73 Communists, 121 members of the Federation of the Democratic and Socialist Left, 34 centrists, 4 independents and Edgar Pisani, President de Gaulle's former agriculture minister, all voted to censure Pompidou's government.

Motion Beaten Down

The premier beat down the motion by announcing his readiness to discuss the demands of the striking workers. Trade union leaders came back almost immediately with word they were ready for "real negotiations."

But the leaders of the three major trade union federations presented a sweeping list of demands that would add millions of dollars to the nation's wage costs just when French industry was girding for head-on unfettered competition with its five partners in the European Common Market.

Pompidou had appealed to the deputies to back De Gaulle and the government in carrying out needed reforms in a climate of order, not anarchy. But the threat from the university students and the striking workers remained to be resolved.

Georges Seguy, secretary-general of the Communist-backed General Confederation of Labor, indicated the scope of the threat when he told a news conference that the paralyzing strike wave will continue to spread "until the workers have the certainty and guarantee that their demands will be met."

$120 Minimum Demanded

These demands include an increase in the minimum wage to 600 francs, $120 a month. The minimum in the Paris region, higher than elsewhere in France, is at present less than 400 francs, $80.

Other demands confronting the government:

- Guaranteed employment and unemployment benefits.
- Extension of trade union rights within factories so as to guarantee social advances obtained by workers.
- Progressive reduction of the length of the work week with no wage cuts.
- Full parity of workers throughout the country with those in the Paris region, suppressing the differential wage scheme now in operation.
- Guarantee of the right to work through the setting up of new industries in backward regions. These industries to be controlled and financed by the government.
- An easing of taxes on workers at the bottom of the wage scale.

Seguy Told Newsmen

Seguy told newsmen the workers also want an end to reduction of social welfare benefits which was put into effect last fall, together with a reform of the whole social security structure.

The next move to get the striking workers back to the job will probably come in a radio-television address to the nation by De Gaulle Friday night.

With half of the 16 million French workers on strike, the creeping paralysis seemed to have slowed somewhat during the day, but for the first time peasants began joining the movement.

Pompidou was heckled frequently by Communists and deputies of the Federation of the Democratic and Socialist Left during his speech to the assembly.

Prisons Should Be Strict, Sociology Professor Says

Criminals should be punished by unpleasant penalties in prison, as well as by public condemnation, Prof. Robert Caldwell, professor of sociology and anthropology, said Wednesday.

Speaking at an Optimist Club luncheon, Caldwell, an adviser to Iowa's state correctional institutions from 1952 to 1956, said that criminals should be imprisoned for three purposes: retribution, rehabilitation and to keep them out of further trouble.

2 Students Plan Legal Challenge To Greek System

The question of whether or not the Greek system conforms to the University's equal access rule may be settled in court, according to two students who have questioned the equality in Greek rushing procedures.

The two students, Terry Knapp, A4, Cedar Falls, and James Nelson, G, Cedar Rapids, met Wednesday with Pres. Howard R. Bowen to discuss the channels that they should follow in order to force a ruling on the question.

Knapp said after the meeting that he and Nelson would investigate the legality of the Greek position in the equal-access controversy by consulting a lawyer. If the Greek position was found to be illegal, the question could be taken to court, Knapp said. If nothing illegal could be found, Knapp said, the question would be submitted to the Committee on Student Life.

Knapp and Nelson have argued in the past that the three-state-supported universities should end their support of the Greek system.

Knapp's argument against the system rests on three propositions. First, he says, the state-supported universities are committed to a policy of equal access to all facilities for all students. Second, fraternities and sororities are sanctioned by the universities. Third, he argues, fraternities and sororities deny equal access to some students in their rushing procedures.

"We are not opposed to the Greek system. We are just opposed to University support of the system," Knapp said.

Play By Power To Be On Radio

Victor Power's radio play, "The Mudnest," will be broadcast on WSUI radio at 7 p.m., June 29 by the University Radio Players.

Power is the pen name of the Rev. Victor DePaor, G, Waterford, Ireland.

Denis Johnston, visiting professor of dramatic arts, plays the part of an uncle in the family in the play.

Johnston, himself a well known playwright, served as program director for BBC television in London in 1946. He has directed several plays on Broadway including "Ulysses in Night Town," the first stage adaptation of James Joyce's "Ulysses," and two of his own plays, "Moon on the Yellow River" and "Bride for the Unicorn."

"The Mudnest" was written by Power last year for an advanced playwrighting course at the University.

Power, who is also directing the radio performance, said that the play "deals with the incompatibility of two people — neither of them young — who try to make a go of courtship."

The male lead characterization of "Batty" will be played by Robert L. Gilbert, assistant professor of dramatic arts. The female lead characterization of "Aileen" will be played by Patricia M. McGourty, A3, Park Forest, Ill.

Other participants in the play are Peter D. Arnot, professor of dramatic art; Margaret S. Hall, assistant professor of dramatic art; Mrs. Robert Gilbert, 202 Highland Dr.; Mrs. Marybel Goldsberry, A3, Cedar Rapids; Henry E. Strozler, A2, Atlanta, Ga.; and Margaret E. Moore, A4, Iowa City.

ON THE AIR — The Rev. Victor De Paor (Vic Power), G, Waterford City, Ireland, and Denis Johnston (right), visiting professor of dramatic arts, cut a tape in a WSUI studio for a radio performance of a play by Power to be broadcast in June. Power is a Daily Iowan staff writer and critic; Johnston is a celebrated Irish playwright.

Alcoholism Action Deferred

Action on a request for about $45,000 from the city to support a local program to combat alcoholism was deferred by the City Council Tuesday night.

The request was made by the Board of Directors of the Johnson County-Iowa City Council on Alcoholism. This group also proposed the program.

The program would provide educational and counseling services to problem drinkers and to those who encounter them, such as doctors, lawyers, ministers and police.

Figures presented by the Board estimated that there are 1,400

alcoholics in the county.

A proposed budget presented by the Board asked for $11,500 in the last half of 1968, and $33,750 during 1969. In 1969, the budget listed $10,000 for a coordinator, $7,500 for an assistant coordinator. It also provided for a secretary and a variety of materials, rent and miscellaneous expenses.

The group suggested that the money could come from liquor profits funds paid to the city by the state. The point was made that there is some consideration being given to legislation to require this.

'Illegal' Taxes Still Being Collected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Treasury concedes it has no legal right to collect them, Americans are still paying relatively high excise taxes on automobiles and telephone service and probably will continue to do so.

Both the House and the Senate earlier this year approved in identical form extension of the 10 per cent excise tax on telephone service and the 7 per cent manufacturers' excise tax on automobiles.

Final action has been delayed, however, because the excises are part of the bigger controversial agreement to tie a 10 per cent tax surcharge to $6-billion in spending cuts.

A House vote on the entire package has now been postponed, at least until the first week in June and probably later.

In the meantime, the Internal Revenue Service has asked telephone companies to continue collecting the tax and auto makers to continue figuring it on their books because the extension would be retroactive when finally adopted by Congress.

Originally, the 10 per cent tax on telephone service was scheduled to drop to one per cent last April 1 while the other tax was to fall to two per cent.

Congress in mid-April adopted a resolution extending both excises at their old rates through April 30. This was after both houses had voted to extend the taxes at their old rates through calendar year 1969.

The resolution gave the Treasury Department legal authority to collect the tax through April 30 which it has done.

But it has no legal authority to collect the taxes at the higher levels for May. Legally, it can collect only 2 per cent on automobiles and one per cent on telephone service.

Taxes collected at the higher rates by the telephone companies and assessed on auto makers from May 1 through May 15 ordinarily would be deposited with the government on May 31 under the existing collection schedule.

Senate Defeats 2 Amendments To Anticrime Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate defeated Wednesday two amendments to the crime control bill which would have limited a section authorizing court-supervised wiretaps by police.

Opponents contended the amendments, offered by Sen. Edward V. Long, (D-Mo.), would undermine the section and deny law enforcement officers tools necessary to deal with crime.

"Let's not weaken the bill so it cannot be effective," Sen. John L. McClellan, (D-Ark.), the bill's floor manager, told the Senate.

Two amendments offered by Sen. Philip A. Hart, (D-Mich.), were accepted by McClellan and approved by voice vote.

One provides that when notice is given of electronic surveillance to persons who were named in a court order, the judge may also require that other persons whose conversations were picked up be notified if he determines this would be in the interest of justice.

The other requires that when an application is made for an extension of a court order, a statement must be submitted to make a fresh showing of probable cause.

Earlier in the day the Senate rejected, 53-48, another amendment by Long to provide a right to counsel at draft board hearings.

'Sanctuary' Violated

BOSTON (AP) — U.S. Marshals carried a convicted Boston draft evader from his "sanctuary" in a church Wednesday touching off a wild street fight between police and a mob of protesters.

When the marshals arrived, Robert A. Talmanson, 21, of Boston, was in the Arlington Street Church standing in front of the altar. A group of 30 to 40 sympathizers blocked the doorway at the side of the church.

Consumer Credit Protection Bill OK'd By House, Sent To Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation designed to make sure nobody borrows money or buys on credit without knowing exactly what he is getting himself into was passed by the House Wednesday.

Titled the Consumer Credit Protection Bill, the measure now goes to the Senate, which is expected to approve it today. It is the outcome of seven years of controversy in Congress over the "truth in lending" issue.

In addition to sweeping requirements for disclosure of the terms of credit, the bill contains special sections aimed at: under-world-backed loan sharks; sharp-practicing home improvement operators who fast-talk naive homeowners into signing mortgages; and harsh wage garnishment practices.

Consumer Loans Affected — The measure applies to consumer-type loans and purchases, not to commercial lending practices among banks and businesses.

Basically, the measure requires that those who lend money or sell on credit tell the consumer the total finance charge in terms of an annual rate. Thus a 1.5 per cent a month charge for a revolving credit account would also have to be stated a 18 per cent a year. However, if the store's return is less than the nominal annual rate because of the timing of charges and payments, the store could also tell the customer this.

If credit life insurance is required as a condition of a loan, the cost would have to be figured into the finance charge.

Advertising of credit terms would have to be specific in terms of rate, amount and duration of installments. The responsibility would be on the advertiser, not the medium carrying the ad.

There would be some exceptions to the disclosure requirements — for very small transactions, such as revolving credit charges of not more than 50 cents a month.

Extortionate Terms Penalized — Extending credit on extortionate terms would become a federal offense, with penalties up to $10,000 fine or 20 years imprisonment.

Extortionate practices are defined as those involving violence or other criminal acts, or the threat of these, to collect loans made on exorbitant terms.

The penalties would apply also to those who finance such credit — a provision said by sponsors to be aimed at the higher-ups in underworld organizations that engage in loan-sharking. Persons involved in such dealings could be required to testify, under promise of immunity.

Garnishment of wages to collect debts would be limited to 25 per cent of the debtor's disposable earnings, or the amount by which his weekly earnings exceeded the federal minimum wage for 30 hours.

Another section provides that a homeowner who signs a contract involving a mortgage on his house would have three days in which to look it over and back out.

House To Vote On Spending Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members will vote next Wednesday on whether they want federal spending cut $4 billion or $6 billion as the price for enacting President Johnson's 10 per cent income tax surcharge.

The President wants the cut limited to $4 billion. The Senate already has voted to settle for no less than $6 billion.

Rep. James A. Burke, (D-Mass.), told the House Wednesday he will offer a motion that will give members a chance to take sides.

Americans' Debts Top $1.5 Trillion, $8,000 Apiece

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reflecting for a moment on the figure $1,604,100,000,000. That's trillion, not billion.

It boils down to about $8,000 for every man, woman and child in the United States and represents the total amount of money owed by all Americans, from the federal government to the man in the street.

Included is not only the money owed on home mortgages and department store charge accounts but also the debts of corporations and governments at the local, state and federal levels.

The Commerce Department, in making the figures public this week said the private and public gross debt rose by $104 billion during 1967, a slightly slower rate than a year earlier.

The much discussed federal debt, despite a hefty increase, represented less than 25 per cent of the total at the end of 1967. All the current predictions point to another increase all along the line this year.

Individual Americans owed only a little less than the federal government at the end of last year, $331.4 billion including $232.2 billion on home mortgages and $99.2 billion in consumer debt on such items as automobiles, home appliances and charge accounts.

The department's figures showed the over-all federal debt at the end of 1967 as $371.6 billion, up $20.1 billion over the year.

Individual debt was up $15.6 billion.

By far the largest single debt was for corporations which owed a gross figure of $641 billion by the end of the year, up $44.3 billion from 1966.

Justice Department Eying Labor Union Racketeering

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has formed a new unit to investigate organized crime and racketeering involvement in the nation's labor unions.

Although the unit was formed several months ago, its existence was kept quiet until Fred M. Vinson, assistant attorney general in charge of the department's criminal division, discussed it in congressional testimony.

Vinson told a House appropriations subcommittee that "the major functions of the unit are to regularly assess racketeer involvement in labor unions and to initiate appropriate investigations."

He testified last Feb. 21, but his statements only now have been made public.

The labor group currently has eight lawyers and is directed by James Featherstone, a lawyer in the department's organized crime and racketeering section.

Vinson said the impetus to start the new unit was given in a report last year by the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice which warned of organized crime involvement in labor unions.

UI To Offer Summer Courses In College Union Programs

The activities of a college union are seldom self-initiating or self-perpetuating. Aside from the students themselves, there is another group necessary to the success of union activities. These people, with the awesome-sounding title of "professional programmers," are more commonly known as committee advisers, recreational and social directors, coordinators and counselors.

This summer, the University, which offers graduate programs in both recreational leadership and college student personnel, will offer a workshop in college union programming.

"The course involves the philosophy of the individual who works with students and the techniques used to motivate them.

Students Should Generate
"This philosophy is basically that the students themselves should generate the program as they see fit," said Richard Waide, assistant director of the Union.

The program will also concentrate on the role of the college union as it relates to higher education and current practices in union programming.

From July 22 to August 2, approximately 25 persons, who are currently filling professional positions in Unions across the country, will attend lectures and participate in seminar sessions at the University for up to two hours credit.

The workshop has two major emphases, the theoretical or philosophical and the technical or operative," said Loren Kotner, Union director.

Morning sessions will deal with the relationship of the college union to the setting, philosophy, and objectives of higher education. These include "The Program Adviser as an Educator," "Leadership and the Group Process," "Research and Evaluation of Programming," and "Values and Subcultures on the Campus."

Case Studies To Be Used
Through the use of case studies, role playing and discussion, afternoon sessions will study the organization of programming units, staffing, financing and techniques of advising.

Co-directors for the workshop are Albert Hood, professor of education, and E. A. Scholar, professor of physical education for men and chairman of the recreation leadership program.

Visiting lecturers will include:

Top Army Shifts Expected

WASHINGTON — A top Vietnam commander is expected to return to Washington in what may signal a series of high level Army officer shifts linked to Gen. William C. Westmoreland's move to the Pentagon.

Sources said Wednesday President Johnson is weighing a Pentagon recommendation that Lt. Gen. Bruce Palmer, who has been in Vietnam one year, be made the Army's vice chief of staff.

Westmoreland has been appointed to succeed retiring Gen. Harold K. Johnson as chief of staff in July.

Palmer currently serves as deputy commanding general of the Army in Vietnam and has been responsible for much of the day-to-day detail of war operations.

Pentagon sources expect other general officer transfers as Westmoreland takes over the Pentagon's third floor Army suite.

Some officers are expected to be reassigned as a matter of routine, but others, according to informed military men, will be leaving because they are not enthusiastic about "Westy's" way of operating.

"I expect you'll see generals leaving this place like mad when Westy comes in," one officer, a Westmoreland admirer, observed.

"In the first place he will want to work with his own people. And second, some guys just don't like his approach."

Westmoreland is said to favor the move for Palmer, a 55-year-old Texas who commanded U.S. paratroops in the 1965 Dominican crisis. In the new job Palmer would get a fourth star.

Federal Jury Raps It To Brown, Convicts Him Of Firearms Charge

NEW ORLEANS — Black Power militant H. Rap Brown drew a five year prison sentence and a $2,000 fine Wednesday night after a biracial federal court jury convicted him of violating the National Firearms Act.

U.S. Dist. Judge Lansing L. Mitchell imposed maximum punishment after defense attorney William M. Kunstler of New York City pleaded for leniency for "the sake of America."

Notice of appeal was filed. Brown, 24, controversial chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, remained free under $10,000 bond pending the appeal.

The firearms act forbids anyone under a felony indictment to transport a gun across state lines.

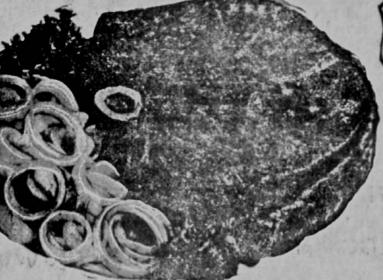

Brown had been indicted in Maryland Aug. 14, 1967, two days before he traveled from New York City to Baton Rouge, La., and back with an M-1 carbine in his luggage.

The jury of three men and nine women found Brown innocent of the first count of the two-count indictment — but convicted on the second. The verdict came after 8½ hours of deliberation. Brown sat stolidly as the verdict was read.

The second count of the indictment was based on Brown's return flight to New York Aug. 18. Maximum punishment under the law is five years prison and a $2,000 fine.

Stargell Smacks 3 Homers

FIRST OF THREE — Chicago Cubs' outfielders Billy Williams (26) and Adolfo Phillips (20) watch Pittsburgh Pirates' Willie Stargell's home run ball land in the seats in the first inning Wednesday in Chicago. Stargell hit two more home runs in the game and drove in seven runs as the Cubs fell to the Pirates 13-6. — AP Wirephoto

CHICAGO (AP) — Willie Stargell whacked three home runs, a double and a single and drove in seven runs Wednesday in pacing Pittsburgh to a 13-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Stargell's feat established a season high in the majors for homers and runs batted in for a single game.

The slugging outfielder, who had driven in only 11 runs in his first 30 games, homered with the bases empty in the first and fourth innings and with one runner aboard in the eighth.

In the fifth when the Pirates rallied to score four times and overcome a 5-2 deficit, Stargell drove in the tying run with a single, then stole second and came home with the lead run on Donn Clendenon's single.

Stargell's sixth-inning double drove in two runs and highlighted a three-run inning for the Pirates, who ended a five-game losing streak, their longest since 1965.

Stargell's double missed by inches of being another homer as it bounced high off the left field catwalk railing.

Giusti Trips Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Giusti, a 23-year-old right-hander, didn't allow a hit until two were out in the eighth Wednesday, as the Houston Astros took a 1-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. Giusti wound up with a two-hit performance.

Giusti's no-hitter ended when Pete Rose blooped a single into shallow left.

Giusti struck out seven, but walked four.

Jim Maloney allowed only five hits for Cincinnati. Maloney had struck out seven.

The only run of the game came in the Houston sixth. Ron Davis doubled off the scoreboard, took third on an infield out, and scored on a single by Rusty Staub.

Giants Win 2-1

ATLANTA (AP) — Willie Mays broke out of an 0-for-12 slump with a run-scoring single in the ninth inning, giving the San Francisco Giants a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves Wednesday night.

Mays' two-out single to left scored Ron Hunt, deciding a pitching duel between the Braves' right-hander Pat Jarvis and winner Mike McCormick, who allowed just three hits in evening his record at 4-4.

Hunt led off the ninth with a single — the fourth hit off Jarvis — and Frank Johnson sacrificed. Ty Cline popped up before Mays came through with the tie-breaking hit. Jarvis had gotten Mays to fly out and fanned the Giants' center fielder twice going into the ninth.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead in the first when Felipe Alou led off with a double and scored on Joe Torre's two-out single.

San Francisco tied it in the third on Hal Lanier's triple to right and McCormick's sacrifice fly to left.

Knicks Draft Don May Miller Signs 2nd Prospect

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks have corralled Don May of Dayton, the star of the recent National Invitation Basketball Tournament, and they may owe it all to Arthur Morse's reputation as a tough negotiator.

"I now own one-sixth of the Knicks," Morse boasted Wednesday after May was signed to a contract by the National Basketball Association team.

Morse, a Chicago attorney who represents basketball and football players in negotiations with professional teams, was referring to May and Cazzie Russell, another of his clients.

Russell, the former Michigan All-America, signed with the Knicks for a reported $200,000 in 1966.

May was the Knicks' second draft choice but 32nd over-all in the NBA's annual selection of college players earlier this month.

"I was told by Don Richman of Seattle that the reason they didn't pick him was because I represented him and that I was too tough," Morse disclosed.

Richman was the SuperSonics' general manager until shortly after the draft when he resigned.

"No, May's contract was not as good as the one that Cazzie got, but it's a good one for both sides," Morse said. "He's a quiet kid but a good, tough player."

GOP Wins Game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans rolled up a 16-1 landslide victory over Democrats in Congress' annual baseball rivalry Wednesday night.

The victory was the fifth straight for the GOP behind pitcher Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Rep. Paul McCloskey, (R-Calif.), capped a 12-run GOP filibuster at bat in the second inning with a two-run inside-the-park homer. Rep. Lee Hamilton (D-Ind.), tripled and scored the only Democratic run.

Iowa basketball Coach Ralph Miller has just signed his second high school prospect for the coming season. Gary Lusk, a stand-out for Madison High School, Madison, Ill., signed a letter of intent Wednesday to enroll at the University.

Lusk joins Ken Grabinski of Clear Lake, who signed a tender to attend the University May 1. Grabinski was an all-state and all-America for Clear Lake last season.

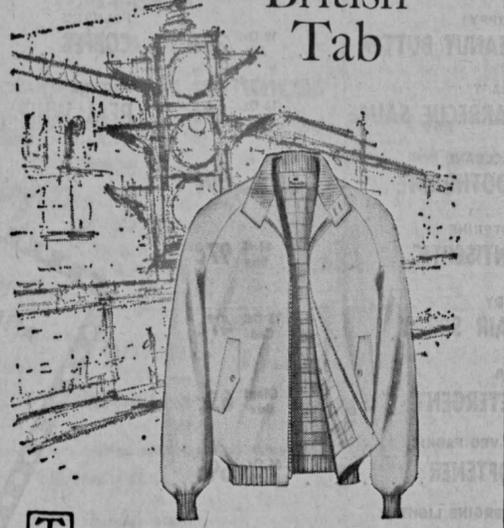

Lusk announced some time ago he would attend the University of Mississippi, but changed his mind because he said he wanted to stay closer to home and play in the Big 10.

The six-foot guard averaged 30.5 points a game last season at Madison. He scored 1,792 points during his high school career, a school record.

Spotlight On Sports

By MIKE EBBING
Sports Editor

Three Iowa spring teams battled through Big 10 championships this past weekend and the result was a sixth-place finish in tennis, track and golf.

Prospects of the baseball team making a first-division finish look even more remote. They are currently ninth in the conference with a 4-8 record and face Michigan State and title-contender Michigan in respective doubleheaders this weekend.

Thus, this weekend will conclude Iowa's spring sports season and leave the Hawks with a second-division finish in all four sports.

Probably the Hawkeyes' best opportunity to finish in the upper half of the Big 10 was in tennis. They finished just 1½ points behind fifth-place Indiana. Indiana gained fifth by virtue of a default from Northwestern.

Northwestern had a firm hold on fourth place before the tournament ended and since it had no chance of catching third place Minnesota, it forfeited its match to Indiana.

The forfeit gave the Hoosiers two more points and made their final total 62 instead of 60.

Iowa tennis Coach Don Klotz was somewhat disappointed that Northwestern forfeited the match simply because a victory would not have improved its position in the standings.

Northwestern's action can become somewhat justified, however, because of the cold and rainy weather confronting the players in the three-day tourney.

Klotz said that a lot of the stamina and endurance can be taken away from a player after competing in weather like last weekend.

Northwestern tennis Coach Clare Riessen and his Wildcat tennis team thus headed back early for Evanston, Illinois.

"I think Northwestern would have been a sure bet to win its match against Indiana," said Klotz Wednesday.

It would have been the case, Iowa would have not only edged Indiana for fifth place, but it would also have been the Hawks' only first-division finish this spring.

Although football Coach Ray Nagel was pleased with the overall play of the Hawkeyes in Saturday's intrasquad game, he is still not committing himself as to the success of next fall's team.

Nagel said Tuesday that the Hawks should be improved both offensively and defensively over last year.

"The thing that bothers me is that everyone else is going to be stronger too," said Nagel. "I'd like to have had this squad when I came into the Big 10 two years ago. It's a tougher league now than it was then."

This year's squad, composed almost entirely of Nagel recruits, will be loaded with sophomores and juniors. In Saturday's game, 22 sophomores saw action.

"That's going to be one of our shortcomings," said Nagel. "We are going to be inexperienced and lack depth, especially in the line."

Offense should be the Hawkeye strongpoint again this season with veterans Ed Podolak, Tim Sullivan, Al Bream and Barry Crees returning.

Nagel expressed some concern about next year's kicking game. He said he expected Podolak and sophomore wingback Kerry Reardon to do the punting. Another sophomore Marcos Melendez, a Puerto Rico native, has been called on to do the conversions and field goals.

One of the innovations installed by Nagel this spring has been a new defense. The Hawks will try a five-two defense in 1968 with a "monster" back. Last year, they used a six-man line and it yielded 277 yards a game to opponents. Only one Iowa team has given up more yards.

"I was happy with the way the players took to the new defense," said Nagel. "I don't think we'll get burned by the long bomb as we did last year."

Minnesota will be offering Iowa fans a football doubleheader Nov. 2-3 in Minneapolis. Iowa plays the University of Minnesota Saturday in a Big 10 conference game.

The Minnesota Vikings, an NFL professional team, have proclaimed Sunday as Iowa Day at Metropolitan Stadium. The Vikings host the Washington Redskins at 1:30 p.m.

A special Iowa section will be reserved at the Stadium for Hawkeye alumni and fans who wish to stay overnight and view the pro battle. Viking general manager Jim Finks said also that the Hawkeye Marching Band was being sought as halftime entertainment for Sunday's game.

Finks said that reservations are now being accepted for groups of 25 or more. Under Viking policy on group orders, a down payment of 25 per cent is required, with the balance due around mid-August.

Iowa fans wishing to attend the game in smaller groups may place their orders on July 15, with payment in full required. Finks said that all ticket orders from Iowa would be automatically placed in the Iowa Section unless instructed otherwise.

Further information may be obtained by writing to: Minnesota Vikings, 7809 Southtown Center, Bloomington, Minn. 55431.

Minnesota has still not officially been declared winner of the Big 10 track championship last weekend. The Gophers were listed as a one-point victor over Michigan, but Michigan Coach Don Canham appealed the Gopher victory to the Big 10 Games Committee.

The controversy occurred in the 220-yard dash Saturday when Minnesota's Dick Simonsen was awarded third place by the judges. Canham claimed that Michigan's Sol Espie, who finished almost simultaneously with Simonsen, won third place.

The Games Committee is currently studying the films of the race to determine who actually placed third. Should they rule that it was Espie, Michigan would take the championship away from Minnesota.

Joe Medwick Blames Hitters For Killing Baseball Offense

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It's a shame, people say, how the pitchers have taken over the game and killed offense in baseball. But Joe "Ducky" Medwick thinks the hitters have only themselves to blame.

And Medwick can talk. First, because he has the hitting credential to back himself up. Secondly, because the St. Louis Cardinals pay him to talk to their minor league farmhands about the fine and fading art of hitting.

"They say you can't make a hitter," the one-time Most Valuable Player said, "but I disagree. If you take a guy that has the desire and wants to be great, and if he has some tools, it'll come out."

Medwick, 56, is the Cardinals' minor league batting instructor and he says if there's anything he wants to get across to his pupils it's the level swing.

"You work on getting the level swing and when they get that the home runs will take care of themselves," the lifetime .325-hitter said. "I think now you have boys in the minor leagues, especially in the Cardinals organization, who are better prepared than even before to handle all situations."

But what about the hitters in the majors whose averages are plunging lower than the pitchers' earned run averages?

"They have only themselves to blame; that's exactly right," Medwick said. "They know what to do, but they're not doing it. They should be hitting semi-flat-footed."

"In other words," said Medwick, "stay with the short stride, don't swing from your backside. That way you keep the ball in front of you. All these hitters are swinging from their back-sides and that's why you have so many strikeouts today."

"But look at Curt Flood. It hasn't affected him because he realized this. Look at Roberto Clemente of the Pittsburgh Pirates. He's swinging from his backside and doing nothing. He's got to get back his normal swing if he's going to do anything."

Medwick, voted into baseball's Hall of Fame recently, played 17 years in the majors, mostly with the Cardinals, between 1932 and 1948. During this span he had 2,471 hits.

Fate Of RILEEH Program Here Remains Up In The Air

By GARY HOPSON

No one at the University seems to know if southern RILEEH students will be attending the University summer session as they have for the last three summers.

With time growing short before the beginning of summer school here, Philip G. Hubbard, dean of academic affairs, said recently he was in the dark about what is happening.

The program — Rust, Iowa, and LeMoine for Expanding Educational Horizons (RILEEH) — is designed to use University facilities and staff to provide equal educational opportunities for students, usually blacks, from "developing institutions," in this case, Rust College, Holly Springs, Miss., and LeMoine College, Memphis, Tenn. The University supports the program but does not sponsor it.

Instructions Lacking

Hubbard said the confusion might be caused by the lack of instructions accompanying a $117,000 federal grant this year which was provided by the 1965 Higher Education Act (HEA). Although the money has apparently arrived, it cannot be used until instructions arrive, Hubbard said.

This is the second year the program has been federally financed. Last year the committee in charge of RILEEH encountered few problems with the federal money. James N. Murray Jr., chairman of the Department of Political Science, and a member of the committee which controls the project, said Tuesday that he was also in the dark and feared that before long it might be "too late."

John Huntley, associate professor of English, and founder of the committee could not be reached for an explanation of the difficulty and delay.

Murray said that at this time last year applicants had been screened, but as far as he knew, nothing had been done this year. With summer school less than three weeks away, Murray said, everyone seems to be waiting for instructions on the use of the federal money.

Privately Financed At First

The first two years of the RILEEH program were privately financed and controlled by the committee. It was run somewhat like the American Field Service (AFS) program; students paid their own way while the committee found homes for them in Iowa City and helped them get oriented. The students received no credit for the courses. Total cost was $160 per student per summer.

When Rust College asked that courses be for credit, federal money was needed for increased costs. Many students also wanted to try dormitory life, which again boosted the cost.

Hubbard said it is hoped that the RILEEH program can be expanded in future years.

Drama By Jones, 'Dutchman,' Set For Staging Here

"Dutchman," a powerful play on a racial theme by black playwright LeRoi Jones, will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight at the Unitarian Church, 10 S. Gilbert St., in a benefit performance for the Martin Luther King Scholarship Fund.

David Grant, G. St. Louis, is directing the production in which he also plays the lead role. Jill Van Cleve, G. also appears in the play.

"Dutchman" is the first widely published play to deal with the controversial themes of black consciousness and black anger. It was written in 1964 and made into a film by director Anthony Harvey in 1967.

In "Dutchman," a middle-class black man and a neurotic white girl confront one another in a subway car. The girl tries to seduce the man and later stab him. The furious verbal exchanges between the play's two characters are the basis for most of the action in the hour-long production.

The play is being produced in connection with a course in Contemporary Afro-American Literature and Thought which is offered by the Action Studies Program.

Admission to the play is free, but donations will be accepted for the King Scholarship Fund.

University To Run Food Machines Starting In Fall

All vending machines on campus will be owned and operated by the University, beginning in September.

Contracts with five vending machine companies presently operating the approximately 200 machines on campus will expire or be discontinued after this summer.

T. M. Rehder, director of dormitories and dining services, said Tuesday that his office would control the operation of the machines. The University would order supplies from the companies he said, but would own the machines and also maintain them.

Savings in operating costs was given as the reason for the change to direct University control.

Investment Substantial

Rehder said the University was making a "substantial investment" in the machines. Many of the machines are over two years old, he said, but the University does not plan to buy any new machines.

The machines depreciate 50 per cent in value during the first two years after they're purchased.

Rehder said the operating life of a vending machine was from six to twelve years.

Rehder said the University considers vending machines a necessary service to the University population and not a money-making project.

Money Recycled

Money that is collected from vending machines is recycled into the building operation fund where the machine is located.

Machines in the dormitories and academic buildings go into dormitory operations, Rehder said. Price changes are not anticipated.

The present system of ownership and operation by the company has been in effect since 1953. Before then vending machines were not allowed.

The University currently has contracts with Canteen Services, Coca-Cola, Home Town Dairies, Borden and Full-Time dairies.

Plans Advancing In Establishment Of Local ICLU

Plans are progressing in the establishment of a local chapter of the Iowa Civil Liberties Union (ICLU).

David Vernon, dean of the college of law and head of the organizing committee, said Monday he planned to call a meeting of the organizing committee within 10 days. The committee, he said, would draft the by-laws for the chapter.

Vernon was elected head of the organizing committee at a meeting in Iowa City on May 6. The meeting was attended by 22 members of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and ICLU who voted to form a Hawkeye Area Chapter.

Once organized, the chapter will be an affiliate of the ICLU, which is an affiliate of the ACLU. The Hawkeye area includes Cedar Rapids, Mt. Vernon, Iowa City and other areas of Johnson, Jones and Linn counties.

Vernon said there was no specific need for the chapter, although he thought the population concentration in the Hawkeye area warranted the formation of the chapter.

According to Vernon, the chapter would be interested in the protection and understanding of civil liberties. These would involve, he said, the rights guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth amendments.

Democrats Eying Iowa Delegates

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The three chief contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination are dispatching backers to Iowa this weekend to vie for the favor of delegates to the party's state convention.

Each of the visitors will speak for his candidate Friday evening at a party barbecue at the State Fairgrounds in Des Moines.

The persons who will cast Iowa's 46 votes for a presidential nominee at the national convention in Chicago will be named at state convention sessions Friday and Saturday.

Films To Explore Black Experience

Four films on the "black experience" will be shown at 4 and 7 p.m. today in Shambaugh Auditorium.

One of the four films, which are sponsored by the Action Studies Program, is entitled, "Contemporary Afro-American Literature and Thought." It is a portrait of Malcolm X, filmed during his trip to Europe and Africa three months before his assassination in 1965.

Another of the films was written, directed and acted by black high school children in Los Angeles.

The film showings will last about an hour and are open to the public.

Student Group Plans Summer Of Community Organizing

Large scale organization of Iowa City for the purpose of community education on current social and political issues is being planned by Bert Marian, G. North Liberty.

Speaking of the summer proposal for the Iowa City Community Education Project, Marian said the city will be divided into precincts and blocks for efficient dissemination of information.

Each division will have a neighborhood captain whose job will include organizing coffee hours, cocktail parties and discussion groups centered around information provided by other phases of the project.

Project leaders will provide some of this information in a reprint magazine, according to Marian. Selected documents concerning local and national movements, such as antiwar activities, draft resistance, human rights, election information and urban renewal, will make up the reprint magazine. Articles will be taken from such magazines as Transaction, Harper's, Atlantic, and the Guardian.

Leaflets Planned

Leaflets containing individual articles will periodically be circulated throughout the city.

A street theater company, involving project leaders and townspeople, will sometimes follow leaflet distributions with skits focusing on problems such as air pollution or the ghetto problem.

Marian began planning the project about two months ago. He said he had heard of community organization projects in other cities, but he did not know of any organization of an entire city for better communications, as planned for Iowa City this summer.

Probably from 10 to 15 people will be involved in the education project, Marian said. Hopefully, four of these will be working full time. This will depend on the amount of funds available, he added.

Funds Needed

About $300 has been donated to the project so far, Marian said, but he estimates that a total of about $1,860 would be necessary to pay four full-time workers up to $20 a week and pay printing and miscellaneous expenses for the summer.

"It's going to happen, even with no more money," Marian said. Insufficient funds would only mean a less extensive program, since everyone would have to work elsewhere to make living expenses, he noted.

The project may become part of the University's Action Studies Program, Marian said. A course in experimental theater has already been set up in the program for next fall.

Koster succeeds Maj. Gen. Donald V. Bennett, who will be reassigned.

Residents Warned

Solicitation cards for classified directory listings other than those included in the City Directory and the city telephone book are currently being distributed here.

The Chamber of Commerce has warned that there is a danger of some residents paying for listings advertised on these cards without realizing that they will not be included in the directory or telephone book.

The Chamber of Commerce suggests that residents make no payments on solicitations of this type without first checking with the Chamber office.

Films On Poets And Their Homes To Be Presented

A peek at rustic Ireland, romantic Italy, and the beautiful New England area of the United States, through the eyes of four poets, will be presented in a showing of four films at 8 p.m. Friday at Shambaugh Auditorium.

One film, "Yeats Country," which was filmed in Ireland by the Irish government, won a first prize at the Cannes Film Festival in France. It is the story of William Butler Yeats.

Another film is about the poet Ezra Pound and is filmed in the Italian countryside where he spent many years of his life.

"A Lover's Quarrel With The World" is the story of Robert Frost. The film, a panorama of his poetry, was shot on his farm in Ripton, Vermont, on a battleship, and at a girls' college.

The fourth film is the story of the American poet Theodore Roethke.

The film series is sponsored by the International Writing Program, part of the School of Letters. The series is open to the public and no admission will be charged.

Delay Requested In Sies Hearing

A motion to postpone hearing in the Jerry Sies housing records case from June 4 was filed Wednesday with the Johnson County District Court by City Atty. Jay H. Honohan.

Honohan wanted the hearings postponed because he will be delegate to the state Republican Convention in Des Moines on June 4; and depositions of Sies and Iowa City officials have not yet been taken, and are necessary for both sides to prepare for the hearing.

The case is a result of an attempt by Sies, A4, Valley Stream, N.Y., to examine city housing inspection records. The city is seeking an injunction to prevent his doing so, claiming that Sies plans to put the information to "harmful use."

Varner Proposes Plan For Summer Session

Student Body Pres. Carl Varner proposed Tuesday a two-point plan for the coming summer session. He termed this an effort to give the students of the University better representation throughout the year.

The two points are: representation of students on University policy committees during the summer session and the establishment of a summer senate.

Varner said that in past summer sessions the University policy-making committees have enacted certain rules that have been very unfavorable to University students.

He was especially critical of much of the parking legislation which has been passed by the University during past summers. He did not cite any specific examples.

Varner said that he first intended to ask Pres. Howard R. Bowen for an authorization to give senate members the right to sit in on the University policy committees during the summer session. There will be about five senate members here this summer, he said.

"The sole purpose of having these senators on the committees is to keep the faculty from pulling the wool over the eyes of the students at a time when they are unrepresented," Varner said.

The second point of Varner's plan deals with the establishment of a summer senate.

The summer senate would not have any legislative power but would do research on such items as the parking problem and the possibility of a cooperative book store.

The results of the research will be presented to the student senate at the start of the fall semester with hopes of further legislation.

Student Body Vice Pres. Gordon Shutey will head the summer senate, and Varner will be on campus frequently.

President's House Has Served For 60 Years

By BECKY CERLING

Spring on the campus . . . a coed and her date stroll down Clinton Street, fingers knit loosely by their sides . . . the freckle-faced, impressionable freshman girl . . . the confident, all-knowing sophomore male . . .

"That's the President's Mansion."

The street curves past a large red-brick building set solidly on a long, shrubbery-encased corner plot. Six stately white columns surround the front entrance, and ivy tendrils curl around the lower story windows.

"That's the President's Mansion."

It could be 1908. It could be 1968. The house's sixty years old this year . . . has seen its share of moon-struck couples, and has weathered a lot of historical and social change as well.

Five University presidents have made this spot their home, and the house has had to be adapted to the personalities, family needs, and historical time periods of its owners.

Recently three of those presidents' wives had a nostalgic tea together in the president's house. Mrs. Howard R. Bowen, the current president's wife, invited Mrs. Eugene A. Gilmore, whose husband was president of the University from 1934 to 1940, and Mrs. Virgil M. Hancher, whose husband served the University as president from 1940 to 1964, for a chat over tea to reminisce about their own past experiences in the president's house. Both Mrs. Gilmore and Mrs. Hancher still live in Iowa City.

"Those were the days of the Great Depression," recalled Mrs. Gilmore, a white-haired charmer of 94, describing her husband's term as president. "They cut the president's and faculty's salaries to the bone."

"My maid came with me to the house and brought a girl friend. One did the cooking and one did the cleaning. Then they got married, and I found two Menominee girls from Kalena to work. They were just wonderful. They still come to visit me sometimes when they're in town," she said.

Social customs have changed a great deal since Mrs. Gilmore's day. Instead of the often serious and concentrated discussion that generally follows dinner parties today, guests in the 1930's enjoyed playing charades after the meal. Guests would run upstairs for costumes and equipment, and then return to display their wit and talent to a delighted audience.

"We had such fun," Mrs. Gilmore laughed. "Those men would just howl."

Mrs. Gilmore's "afternoon at home" was another social custom that disappeared soon after her stay in the president's mansion. "I used to serve tea every Wednesday afternoon for any callers that stopped in," she remarked at one point in the conversation.

"I used to do that, too, my first five years here — every second and fourth Wednesday," Mrs. Hancher said. "Then the war came, and no one went calling any more."

The war brought drastic changes to the University, Mrs. Hancher recalled. "The campus was just swamped with area programs. We had Navy pre-flight school in the Field House."

"South Quad was built to house the cadets, but it wasn't large enough, so some of them lived in the fraternity houses. There weren't any boys living in the fraternity houses otherwise, of course, because they were all at war. We used to be awakened every morning by platoons marching to class together from the fraternities."

"The University was almost a girl's school during the war, except for the military units. And it showed," Mrs. Hancher continued. "The girls just wore anything to class — sloppy old jeans, anything. I was glad when the boys came back, and the girls started dressing like girls again."

Both Mrs. Gilmore's and Mrs. Hancher's roles as hostesses were complicated by the fact that the Iowa House had not been built in the Union yet, and there were very few hotels or motels in town. Consequently, they usually had to provide guest rooms for any visiting celebrities who were in Iowa City overnight.

"And then there was always the problem of what to do with guests whose planes or trains didn't leave when they were supposed to," Mrs. Hancher said.

"Once Ralph Bunche, under-secretary for special political affairs for the United Nations, was here for a lecture and stayed at the house. His plane was delayed, so we had him on our hands from that time of the tea until about 10 p.m."

"My husband thought he would like to see something uniquely Iowa, so we took him out to the Amanas, and had dinner at Homestead. Bill Zuber, ex-pitcher for the Yankees, owns the place, and it turned out that Ralph was a big baseball fan. He signed Bill's menu for Bill's little boy, and Bill signed Ralph's menu for Ralph's little boy," she said.

In an interview before the tea Mrs. Hancher said, "It was easier to get help in those days. The house was better staffed than it is now. When we first came, we had a nurse for the children, a cook, two maids, and a gardener. But it became harder and harder to get help. When we left we only had a house-keeper. It was beginning to become a burden trying to take care of the house without sufficient help."

In another interview Mrs. Bowen described some of the entertaining done in the house today — dinners, luncheons, teas, coffees, informal evenings, receptions, informal gatherings, and various kinds of entertaining for various student groups, such as student leaders and freshmen at orientation.

"We always entertain on the day of a home football game both at the box and here at the house for luncheon or dinner. We usually have the regents and legislators then, and also other people out of state who are interested in and support activities of the University," she added.

"We like to invite carolers in when they come, and we try to take every opportunity we can to get acquainted with students," she added.

After the tea, which took place in the spacious, gold-carpeted reception room, the three ladies walked out to the library room to see the view of the river.

The first floor rooms of the president's house are built around a broad, carpeted staircase, which is the first thing the visitor sees upon entering the house. The reception room and a porch are to the left of the staircase, and the dining room, breakfast nook, and kitchen are to the right. In the center, and behind the staircase, are the sitting room and a library.

Upstairs there are six family and guest bedrooms and two servants' rooms. The Bowens, who do not have to have overnight guests as often as their predecessors did, have converted two of the rooms into studies and one into a hobby room. They use the servants' rooms for storage.

The large west room, now a tastefully decorated reception room, was lined with built-in bookcases from floor to ceiling when Mrs. Gilmore first moved into the house. The architects had originally designed the room as a library in the president's office, but after the house was built, the president was given an office in Old Capitol. Mrs. Gilmore had the bookcases taken out, the walls painted light green, and a purple carpet put in.

"Near the north end of the room were two white pillars floor to ceiling, and two pillars in the dining room, too," Mrs. Gilmore said. "They were absolutely ornamental — no use at all. Mr. Gilmore and I thought they were so funny."

One of the most charming rooms in the house is the small library-sitting room in back that looks out over the river. When the Gilmores arrived, the room was a small, unheated room ringed with windows on three sides. The Jessup children had used it to store their toys. Mr. Gilmore suggested that a picture window be put in the center wall and that bookcases be built on the other two sides. A cushioned window seat and yellow-gold carpeting now make the room a cheerful and relaxing place to enjoy the Iowa landscape.

The Gilmores also supplemented the furniture left in the house by past presidents with their own hand-carved and inlaid mahogany furniture from Manila, where Mr. Gilmore served for eight years as vice-governor to the Philippines.

The Hanchers did not do any structural remodeling of the mansion during their 24 years in the house, but they did remodel the kitchen and all the bathrooms.

"Once we put in a new furnace and air conditioner, and the house was torn up for seven months," Mrs. Hancher said in an interview. "All the pipes had to be removed. We went to Europe for three months and expected it to be all done when we came back, but it wasn't. We just lived in a mess. Our parties had to be superimposed over torn-up walls and general chaos."

Mrs. Bowen had similar difficulties with remodeling projects when she first moved in. The Bowens had to put up with the dusty, dirty process of having much of the old plaster removed. The kitchen was being remodeled at the time, as well.

"We lived in here for some time before the kitchen was usable. We had to entertain then, too, so the caterers just had to bring the food up from the Union," Mrs. Bowen said.

"Actually I would have liked to have made the kitchen larger, but we couldn't afford that," she added.

"It gets a little crowded in there when you have a reception for two hundred or a buffet for fifty."

The President and his wife have to work within a budget when they do any remodeling or redecorating, Mrs. Bowen said. "The physical plant — the part of the University that takes care of all the buildings — has an item in its budget for the maintainance and improvement of the house," she said.

The president and his wife are given a housing budget from the University, which allocates the money out of appropriations from the State Board of Regents, Mrs. Hancher and Mrs. Bowen said.

"The University is very generous about letting the house fit the needs of the family that lives in it," Mrs. Hancher said. "And, after all, the president has to live there. It's a requirement of his job."

The three women apparently were quite pleased with the house in general and enjoyed living in it.

"It's a lovely, lovely house, and the University was so good to us," Mrs. Gilmore said.

"I especially like having a suite upstairs with two studies and having a hobby room available," Mrs. Bowen remarked before the tea. "Also, I like the view from the library and the view from the porch."

"We just loved the house," Mrs. Hancher said. "With sufficient help it was charming — charming for entertaining and charming for a family house."

Evaluation Casts Doubt On Rhetoric

RICHARD BRADDOCK
 Rhetoric Coordinator

By JEFF HLUBEK

Students who did not take the University rhetoric core course apparently can write as well as those who took the course.

A study directed by Richard M. Braddock, coordinator of the rhetoric program, revealed no significant differences between two experimental groups.

In the fall of 1964 experimental and control groups were selected from each of five universities to participate in a test which was sponsored by the federal government. The University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls; University of Colorado, Boulder, Colo.; Kent State University, Kent, Ohio; University of Northern Illinois, Dekalb, Ill.; and the University participated in the test.

Three hundred twenty-one University students were exempted from their rhetoric requirement in the fall of 1964, Braddock said. These students were matched on the basis of their American College Test scores with a control group of students who took rhetoric. Both groups of students, he said, were required to take four writing exams from 1964 through 1966.

Braddock said that these tests showed that there were no statistically significant differences between the two groups here.

This result, he said, may be due either to the ineffectiveness of the rhetoric program or the failure of the rating system to observe differences. Student apathy, he said, may also have been a factor.

The students required to take rhetoric, he said, endorsed the course more strongly than the exempted students. Exempted students were more in favor of an elective writing course later in their college careers.

The results might have been more revealing if a more exact system of analyzing and rating the student compositions had been set up, Braddock said. As things stand now, Braddock said, the effectiveness of the University's rhetoric program had been neither proven nor disproven.

Results at the four other universities have been similar. In terms of conclusive results, Braddock said that the test has been "a flop."

Music Lessons To Be Offered

The University will again offer a summer course in music for students of elementary and high schools in Iowa City and surrounding cities, with instruction available in band and orchestral instruments, piano and voice. The course will also be open to any other non-University residents of the area who are interested.

The eight-week program will run from June 12 to Aug. 7. Those interested may register June 10 between 9 a.m. and noon in South Music Hall of the Music Building. Those who wish to register through their school instructors may do so prior to June 10.

Fees will be $12.50 for one half-hour private lesson weekly and $25 for two a week. Private pupils will also be eligible to participate in the all-city bands or orchestra. Rehearsals for these groups will be held at Central Junior High School, Iowa City.

School Bond Sold

Iowa City Community School District building bonds worth $1,015,000 were sold to LaSalle National Bank and Associates, Chicago, at a meeting Wednesday of the Community Board of Education.

The $1,015,000 bond issue, to finance the building of Ernest Horn and Grant Wood elementary schools, was passed in February.

"High and Low"

Directed by Akira Kurosawa, this story of a kidnapping in modern Japan is loosely based on an American crime novel by Ec McBain. But, as in Truffaut's "Shoot the Piano Player," it is possible to transcend the crime film genre — and that is what Kurosawa does here.

Oskaloosa's Herbert Hoover Campaigns For Presidency

By CHARLA COLE

He looks like a small-town preacher, or a county agriculture agent, or a tractor salesman. But he is none of these. He is Herbert F. Hoover, fourth cousin of the late president, ditch digger, ex-farmer, ex-Quaker, and now a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination and full time "worker for peace."

Hoover, 44, of rural Oskaloosa, sold his farm on Veteran's Day, 1965, and announced that he was going to spend the rest of his life "opposing human exploitation."

He said in a recent interview that the first step to end such exploitation would be to end the war in Vietnam, because only then would the United States have resources to devote to its own social and economic problems.

He said he entered the New Hampshire and Wisconsin primaries to air the issues, and added that he was the only candidate who advocated complete and immediate withdrawal from Vietnam.

He ran previously for the Republican senatorial nomination as a peace candidate against incumbentsourke Hickenlooper in 1962 and Jack Miller in 1966.

Although his presidential candidacy did not get overwhelming voter support — he got 247 votes in New Hampshire and officials in Wisconsin never got around to totaling his votes there — Hoover said he thought he did some good by making the issues known.

In New Hampshire he conducted what he termed "empty chair" debates against the hawkish military policies of Richard Nixon, the current front-runner for the Republican nomination.

He said he had hoped to enter the Oregon primary, but did not get enough financial support. He said he thought a candidate should not enter a primary with less than $100,000 to spend, adding that he had spent $300 in New Hampshire.

Hoover said, with a noticeable lack of embarrassment, that he depended for financial support on donations from people who want to encourage his search for peace.

He also digs ditches and lays tiles. His wife, Eleanor, supplies ments the family income by driving a bus.

Hoover, whose normal appearance hardly fits today's image of a "peacenik," began his resistance to war when he refused to register for the draft in 1948 when it was extended to peacetime.

He said he probably could have been deferred on grounds of being a conscientious objector, marital status and children — he has three daughters — age, and possibly health, but instead decided to refuse "after much thought and a long walk late at night."

Nine men in Iowa refused at the same time, according to Hoover, but he was the only one who did not plead guilty, because, he said, he thought the law was unconstitutional and could not be enforced. He was sentenced to 18 months in a prison and was fined $500.

Hoover still thinks the draft law is unconstitutional and chuckled a little over Dr. Benjamin Spock's current trial for conspiracy to encourage young men to violate the law.

He said when he was in New York City in April, 1967, the leaders of the massive peace rally there were trying to discourage him from distributing leaflets which he had printed encouraging men to mail their draft cards back to federal officials. Among those leaders was Spock. Hoover said, "Obviously he changed his mind about resistance."

Hoover said he viewed President Lyndon Johnson's announcement of a bombing pause on March 31 as possibly paving the way for U.S. escalation of the war if the peace talks fail.

He said that peace candidates such as Sen. Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn.) and Sen. Robert Kennedy (D-N.Y.) who had called for a pause were really to blame for giving Johnson this "out." He claimed that Johnson would now be able to say, "We tried it your way and it didn't work."

If the peace movement had called for "complete withdrawal," according to Hoover, the excuse would not have been available.

As to why he gave up a successful dairy farm to campaign, thus far without success, for election as a peace candidate, Hoover said slowly, "I'm not sure I can explain. Part of it was my Quaker background. And then there was a trip I made to India there in 1958. People asked me why I was over there talking about peace, instead of back home."

Much of his attitude toward Vietnam seemed to be shaped by his trip to India, where he and 11 other farm leaders traveled as private citizens to discuss peace, and represented the U.S. government at a trade fair.

He said that wars were caused by "devil concepts" that people held, and always have held. Today's "devil," according to Hoover, is communism, and Americans are obsessed with fear of the devil.

Hoover said that if the United States were to stop concentrating on military ways to defeat the "devil" and put its resources into making life better for its own citizens, people in other countries would see how much could be accomplished and would demand that their own governments do the same. Then all resources would be used for peace instead of war.

However, Hoover admitted that the "devil concept" would be a difficult thing to erase from people's minds.

Despite his idealism and his conviction, Hoover the man is undeniably human. He can laugh uproariously at the defeat of someone whom, he thinks, has betrayed him. He can show unmistakable disappointment when he says that he looked for monetary support and did not find it.

He recently resigned his membership in the Society of Friends because they supported peace candidates who advocated getting conscientious objectors' status through an organized religion. Hoover has never sought such a deferment.

He said that he also disagreed with the Society's accepting government tax exemptions.

In the future is a possible campaign for a congressional seat, more ditch digging, and probably more disappointments. When a man expects so much, disappointments are inevitable.

But Herbert F. Hoover will not give up, even though he jokingly says, "Maybe I should move to another country and invade this one."

When asked whether he really believed he'd accomplished anything, Hoover took so long to reply that it seemed he just wasn't going to. But finally he smiled a little and said, "I think maybe I've changed some minds or even saved some lives."

Then, speaking of the current students' revolution in France, he said, "Maybe someday we'll have peace. I think that would be pretty revolutionary."
