Eyes of Iowa Turn From Sky to River

WATERLOO — Residents of Waterloo and most of northern Iowa were waiting for the Cedar River to crest Wednesday night.

Although most of the unusually heavy rain which had flooded the area stopped about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, the river was expected to crest at about 13 feet at midnight. Flood stage for the river is 15 feet.

Damage estimates of more than $1 million had been made by Wednesday night but most of the residential damage to the Waterloo area had not been computed. Three persons have been reported killed so far by flooding.

The Waterloo city hall, which had been closed Wednesday as water covered the downtown area, was expected to be open today.

Waterloo received 9.33 inches of rain in 33 hours after torrential rains pelted the northern Iowa area Tuesday night.

By 10 p.m., water was receding from the residential areas, and most persons were waiting for the storm's after effects in the streams and creeks above Waterloo.

Most of the water damage in Waterloo was concentrated in the eastern section of the town, which is an older residential area. The worst flooding occurred from an area north of Franklin Street, a reporter from Waterloo Radio station KWVL said Wednesday night.

Earlier Wednesday evening, the Associated Press gave this account of the storm damage:

Three persons, including a 15-year-old Waterloo boy, drowned during flash flooding in Black Hawk and Bremer Counties.

Authorities identified two of the dead as Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hardin of Waverly.

Their bodies were pulled from the flooded basement of their home Wednesday morning.

In Waterloo, the body of Ricky Barnes, 15, was pulled from flood water on the city's east side after a dike on Virden Creek crumbled.

"No sewer system in the country would have taken care of that much water," Waterloo Mayor Lloyd Turner declared.

The city's street commissioner, Carl Fegerlind, had 40 to 50 men filling sandbags. They were awaiting further developments before calling for volunteer help.

A member of the Black Hawk County chapter of the Red Cross, Glenn Stech, said about 125 square blocks of Waterloo were flooded.

Stech said the area affected about 10,000 of the city's citizens.

Red Cross disaster headquarters were set up at the abandoned St. Francis Hospital in the city and preparations were made to accommodate 200 persons Wednesday night.

"It's bedlam out there," Stech said in respect to the evacuation of persons from their homes.

Aside from Waterloo, the cities and town hit hardest by flash flooding were Waverly, Denver, Dunkerton and Oelwein.

Water from three to nine feet was reported in Waverly, where families in the north end of the city were pumping water from their basements.

Farmland near Denver, population 1,050, was reported inundated. At Dunkerton, northeast of Waterloo, persons were reportedly evacuating their homes.

Oelwein's sewage treatment plant was flooded by about three feet of water and the city was dumping raw sewage into Otter Creek.

The Weather Bureau said separate storms had moved across the state on a band 30 to 40 miles wide from Sioux City to Dubuque.

At one time, officials said 80 per cent of the bridges in southern Bremer County were washed out or under water.

The Highway Patrol said Iowa Highway 3 was closed west of its junction with Iowa 150 about four miles north of Oelwein because of a bridge approach washout.

Highway 3 east of Waverly had a water over the road but was open for one way traffic.

The Weather Bureau reported that the west fork of the Cedar River is expected to crest at 15 to 16 feet, about three to four feet above flood level, at Finchford in Black Hawk County this morning.

At Shell Rock, the Shell Rock River was expected to crest at 13 to 14 feet, about one to two feet above flood stage, late Wednesday night.

A watch for severe thunderstorms was set by the Weather Bureau for Wednesday night, covering all or portions of Muscatine, Scott, Clinton, Cedar and Jackson Counties.

Hijacked Passengers Get Free Ride Back from Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. — Fifty-six passengers, detained in Cuba when a hijacked American jet was allowed to return to the United States, landed at Miami International Airport Wednesday aboard a chartered airliner, leaving behind in Havana a Cuban who said Fidel Castro had "ordered me back."

The passengers were flown to Miami aboard a propeller-driven DC7 chartered by the U.S. government after Cuban authorities, for the second time in 17 days, refused to allow a hijacked DC8 jet to leave Havana with its passengers.

National Airlines Capt. Sidney L. Oliver, the pilot, said Cuban authorities refused to let him bring back the passengers because of safety reasons.

"They said they would not take the responsibility if anything happened on take-off," Oliver told a news conference. They wouldn't give me any specific reasons."

A second U.S. airplane was dispatched from Miami Wednesday night to Cuba to pick up the passengers. A National Airlines spokesman said they were returned to Miami later in the night.

Oliver said the hijacker, who he said boarded the plane in Los Angeles and was listed on the passenger list only as "Hernandez," threatened to blow up the plane with a phony grenade that later turned out to be a can of shaving lotion.

It was the second U.S. airliner this month forced to return from Havana with only its crew.

Oliver said Stewardess Kathleen Dickinson acted as interpreter for the hijacker, who he said was "extremely nervous."

Miss Dickinson quoted the hijacker as saying: "Fidel has indicated to me that I've got to go back to Cuba any way I can."

"I tried to pump him but I couldn't get any more than that except that he missed his family and friends very much," the 23-year-old Miami girl said.

"I tried to work in personal questions a couple of times but he cut me off. There were a couple of times when I believe I could have knocked the gun out of his hand, but I didn't do it."

When they arrived in Cuba, Oliver said, the hijacker "made a big show of unwrapping his hand grenade. It was a can of Old Spice shaving lotion."

FBI agents met the crew when the four-engine craft touched down at 5:11 p.m.

The return was a replay of a hijacking on July 1 when a Northwest Orient Airlines DC8 was forced to Cuba and came back to Miami without its 86 passengers, brought back several hours later by an aircraft chartered by the U.S. Government.

Officials at Havana's Jose Marti Airport, where seven hijacked commercial planes have landed this year, gave the same reason for detaining the Northwest passengers.

Both the Northwest pilot and Oliver indicated the Cubans were harrasing them. They said the 10,000-foot runway at the Havana airport was more than long enough for the DC8s.

Wednesday's hijacking marked the first time one of the commandeered planes had stopped for refueling before heading to Cuba.

The refueling was accomplished in a tense, 10-minute scene in New Orleans after the hijacker took charge of Flight 1064 over Texas.

He threatened to blow up the plane with his so-called grenade if police got too close.

Miss Dickinson said the hijacker approached her shortly after the plane left Houston.

"He had this thing in his hand," Oliver said. "He called it a hand grenade and it was wrapped up in a cloth and it looked like a grenade. He held it like a grenade."

Oliver said the hijacker repeatedly pointed his pistol at the phony grenade, threatening to fire.

When the plane arrived in Havana, Oliver said, the dark-complexioned hijacker was the first person off the plane, walking jauntily, was escorted away by security guards.

A passenger, John Morgan of San Francisco, was carried off the plane on a stretcher and was driven away in an ambulance. Recovering from a back injury, he lifted his head to indicate he was conscious.

"I've got a Cuban in the cockpit with a grenade in one hand and a pistol in the other," Oliver reported by radio as the plane winged over the Sabine Pass on the Texas Gulf Coast. "I am being ordered to Cuba."

The flight had originated in Los Angeles and made a scheduled stop at Houston. It was 35 minutes away from landing at New Orleans when Oliver reported that he no longer was in command of the plane.

Oliver told the hijacker the plane had 3,600 pounds of fuel, not enough to fly non-stop to Cuba.

Then the pilot reported to the New Orleans control tower that he was coming in for a fuel stop, but warned that it would be dangerous to attempt to hold the plane on the ground.

"This character is requesting to go to New Orleans to get fuel," Oliver said, "but no one can deplane. No one can get close to the airplane except people to refuel."

Hijacker Facing Air Piracy Count

MIAMI — Oran Richards, a former mental patient who seized temporary command of a Delta Air Lines plane July 12 while babbling that he was dying of cancer, was bound over to a federal grand jury Wednesday on charges of kidnaping and air piracy.

After hearing testimony from one witness, U.S. Commissioner Edward Swan ruled that it was adequate to hold Richards and continued his bond at $250,000.

After first ordering the flight to Cuba, Richards broke into tears, dropped his gun, and the plane was landed at Miami.

Prague Sympathizers Seen Ready Support

PRAGUE — President Tito of Yugoslavia and Romanian Communist leader Nicolae Ceausescu were reported preparing Wednesday night to come to Prague in a dramatic show of support for Czechoslovakia's liberal leaders in their fight against Moscow and the orthodox Communists of Eastern Europe.

Word of the expected visits coincided with release of a letter by the Soviet-line countries warning the Prague leadership that current developments in Czechoslovakia endangered the basis of the Communist system.

The letter was drafted by Communist party leaders from the Soviet Union, East Germany, Poland, Hungary and Bulgaria at a just-concluded conference in Warsaw. It was distributed Wednesday by the Hungarian news agency MTI.

Reliable sources in Belgrade disclosed Tito's plans and also said Ceausescu would come to Prague. Tito, first of the rebels against Kremlin control, has been charting an independent course since his break with Stalin in 1948. Ceausescu also has been increasingly defiant.

As Europe's Reds chose sides in the Czechoslovak crisis, there were these other developments:

• In Moscow, the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party held a special meeting on Czechoslovakia, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported. Summoning of the Central Committee underlined the seriousness which the Kremlin attaches to the situation.

The Soviet press has compared developments to the Hungarian crisis of 1956 when Soviet troops intervened to put down a revolution against the Budapest Communist regime.

• In Prague, a Czechoslovak army statement said Soviet troops who lingered after the end of Warsaw Pact maneuvers last month were moving out "according to schedule." The army said "all Soviet troops," part of an original unit of 18,500 men, would leave the country but gave no date.

Iowan to Receive Father's Kidney

OMAHA — A young Iowan will undergo a kidney transplant Monday in Denver. Robert R. McHugh, 23, of Woodbine, Iowa, said Wednesday that he will receive one of his father's kidneys.

His father, Robert O. McHugh 48, a farmer, is traveling to Denver by car.

"I got out of school and started working a construction job," young McHugh said. "That was in 1963 and I was fine until about eight months ago."

He said doctors suggested a relative donate a kidney and his father volunteered.

Dr. William Holthaus, assistant medical dean of the Creighton University Medical School, said kidney transplants are not as rare as liver, heart and lung transplants, but are still considered major surgery.

Coup Replaces Iraqi President

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iraq's third military coup in a decade has replaced President Abdel Rahman Aref's leftist government with a Revolutionary Command Council headed by Maj. Gen. Ahmed Hassan el Bakr, Radio Baghdad announced Wednesday.

Aref flew to London in an Iraqi airliner, accompanied by four men who appeared to be guards. Looking haggard, he was met by Iraqi Embassy officials and was driven off in a limousine. An embassy spokesman said, "Mr. Aref is very tired. He doesn't want to speak to anybody."

Aref also was kept away from newsmen at Istanbul, where his plane was detained briefly on a fuel stop. Apparently Turkish authorities were making sure he was not being taken to London against his will. His wife has been in the London Clinic several weeks with an undisclosed ailment.

Baghdad announcers said the coup was bloodless, but later called for all first aid personnel to report to their posts. A dispatch from Tehran declared there had been heavy fighting in Baghdad and other cities, and clashes with Iran near Iraq's frontier.

In Washington, U.S. officials said preliminary assessments indicated no significant changes in Iraq's course. A State Department spokesman reported about 400 Americans live in Iraq. Most of them work in the oil industry.

The rebels ousted the tall, 52-year-old president and his cabinet, which is headed by Premier Taher Yahya, as "a bunch of illiterates." Then they elected Bakr, 52, a former premier, to the presidency.

Bakr was premier in 1963, when the Baath Socialist party ruled Iraq. Though a moderate, he was dismissed when Aref's brother, the late President Abdel Salam Aref, purged all Baathists from the government.

The new president belongs to a Baathist wing bitterly opposed to the radical leftist faction of the party now ruling neighboring Syria. This party seeks to spread its influence throughout the Middle East.

His relations with Egypt while he was premier were uneasy. This could mean a switch later, for ties between Cairo and Baghdad during the Aref regime had been close.

Aref had advocated a political settlement of the Arab-Israeli dispute. He contributed troops to the Arab campaign in Jordan, but was accused of sharing responsibility for the Arabs' defeat.

Aref had run Iraq since his brother, President Abdel Salam Aref, was killed by the crash of a helicopter in a sandstorm April 13, 1966.

North Viet Troops Reported Massing Around Saigon for Summer Offensive

SAIGON — Elements of a new North Vietnamese division, the 308th, have moved into position south of Saigon, apparently part of a growing force that is preparing to hit the capital before September, intelligence sources said Thursday.

It was not clear how many units of the division had been sent to Long An Province, about 30 miles south of the city.

Intelligence sources also said enemy units northeast and northwest of Saigon were pulling back and around to a position west of the capital. Saigon's western approaches are its most vulnerable, and the move may foreshadow an attempted two-pronged attack from the south and southwest.

U.S. Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford said Wednesday that the enemy was gathering forces for an all-out offensive against not only Saigon but other centers in an attempt to influence the Paris peace talks.

Clifford talked to reporters at Da Nang before winding up his four-day visit to Vietnam with a trip today to the Mekong Delta.

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu had a similar prediction. He said enemy leaders were gathering all their resources and "reserving their most elite troops for the coming attacks against Saigon and other cities."

Earlier Wednesday night, Viet Cong gunners fired six mortar rounds into Nha Be, just southeast of Saigon, where large petroleum dumps are located.

The government report said there were no casualties, but it did not say whether there had been significant damage.

B52 bombers hit six times late Wednesday and early Thursday 52 to 58 miles northwest of Saigon in Tay Ninh Province. Two enemy regiments and possibly more are infiltrating through the region, according to intelligence sources.

Clifford said his prediction of a big enemy offensive between late July and September was based on briefings he received from military commanders in Saigon and in the northern part of the country.

The present absence of significant fighting anywhere in South Vietnam is only "the lull before the storm," he added.

Wanted: draft board member

The local draft board is having some difficulty in filling a vacant position in its membership. Although the board has been operating illegally, or apparently illegally, since December, 1966, its operation has just recently come to local attention.

Selective Service regulations state that a draft board must operate with three or more members, but the Johnson County draft board has only two members. The vacancy occurred some time ago, but, according to Lt. Col. Glen Bowles, head of Iowa's selective service, the board has had trouble finding men who could serve on the board.

Since the local chapter of Resist found out about the discrepancy of membership and threatened to take some action to legalize the board's operation, two potential members of the board were quickly found. One was Philip Hubbard, dean of academic affairs, and the other was a farmer from West Branch, Vincent Murphy. Both men seemed willing to take on the job at first, but later expressed some qualms about it. Hubbard finally refused the position, and Murphy has refused to verify that he will accept the position.

The operations of the local draft board are very questionable. Bowles seems to think that there is no violation of the Selective Service regulations because a board operating with two members is operating with a quorum of the members required on a board.

The issue of a quorum is not relevant in this situation. The Selective Service regulations state that a three member draft board is required, so to operate with fewer than three members is in violation of the regulations. The board is operating with partial membership, and this type of operation cannot be legal, especially considering the importance of the board and its decisions.

Perhaps the reluctance of Hubbard and Murphy can be attributed to their feelings that a position on the board, which has been operating in the wrong for more than a year, would lead to more problems. If, in fact, the board has been in the wrong, then all the men who have been drafted by the board in the period of operations with only two members could be said to have been drafted illegally.

Hit 'em in the grandstand

An interesting situation has popped up in the last few months at High Away State University, in nearby Blames, High Away.

It seems that the local Afro-American Student Association, a group of talented and promising young black scholarship students, got together and demanded that the administration appoint at least one black dean and a black professor in every college and department on campus — and they threatened to drop out of school, taking their talent out of the "military-industrial complex."

The administration issued statements of concern, saying that it would immediately appoint an ad hoc committee to look into the black scholars' demands. Five weeks later, such a committee was set up, and in a few short months, a 36-page statement, couched in familiarly academic wordiness, buried the whole issue under a ton of complicated reasoning and watery promises of compromise settlements.

A few black scholars did drop out of school, but nobody really noticed.

Curiously enough, a very similar situation occurred at Iowa State University, in Ames. Except in this case, the people making the demands were black athletes, not scholars. At Iowa State, an ad hoc committee was slapped together in a hurry and it quickly recommended that the athletic department meet all the demands, including the hiring of a black football coach and the recruiting of black coaches in other sports.

Don't worry, Iowa State will search high and low for a black football coach, or the school might be in danger of losing the punch on its defensive line and the pass-run versatility of its offensive backfield. Iowa State football fans wouldn't like that at all. Especially considering what kind of season Iowa State had last year.

So that's what "Black Power" really is. Hit 'em in the grandstand or, more directly, in the budget, and they'll meet your every demand.

I have a plan to improve High Away State: if the black athletes, instead of the scholars (who obviously aren't very important there), demanded not only black coaches but an administration grant of $500,000 to the school's Medgar Evers Scholarship Fund, they might get some results.

You see, students who lack certain native athletic abilities don't mean a great deal to the average university administration. But threaten a university — particularly in the Big 10 — with a guaranteed losing season and therefore a thin crowd in the stadium for the next three seasons, and you're in business.

Coover's 'Baseball' is about baseball the way 'Moby Dick' is about fishing

THE UNIVERSAL BASEBALL ASSOCIATION, INC., J. HENRY WAUGH, PROP., a novel by Robert Coover, Random House, $4.95.

"Sports is no longer a microcosm, a sanctuary from life," Howard Cosell once remarked. "Sports IS Life."

Is that true? Really, it sounds too glib, too good to be true, but if you can believe it, then Bob Coover's new novel is for you. And even if that isn't true for you, if you're at all interested in what life is, you should read it anyway, because, as J. Henry Waugh would put it, it's one helluva good book. And it gives hints.

If you've been wondering about the title, it might be just as well to lay it on the line right now and admit, yes, "The Universal Baseball Association, Inc., J. Henry Waugh, Prop." is about baseball — sort of the way "Moby Dick" is about fishing.

And it's a great baseball book too — maybe the best ever written, if you want to read it as one. It has all the excitement and thrills of a turbulent pennant race, and a pitching duel to end all pitching duels; all the color and razzmatazz of those great Hall of Famers like Rag Rooney and Barney Bancroft, "The Man Who Couldn't Quit," the two great managers of the UBA, superstar batters like Witness York, and shut-out kings like Swanne Law and that new pitching ace, young Damon Rutherford, old Breck's boy — portraits of the men who give the name to the game like you'll never find in the Des Moines Register's Peach; all the tension of men on their way up, chipping away at old records; and all the paths of great stars on their way down the pathway to their final bunt, the last call to the showers.

And one could go on . . . Coover's new novel opens with a grand slam first chapter that will have you sitting on the edge of your seat cheering, then grinds along, chapter after chapter, peppered with sensational line-drive paragraphs, triple-play characterization, grandstand play dialogue. After the old seventh chapter stretch, Coover really loosens up and starts firing those sentences in, knocking off your expectations, one, two, three . . . the old fast ball descriptions, curve ball plot changes which break at the last second and are guaranteed to keep you swinging at air; and then, suddenly, the old change of pace, a little spit ball sex, low and inside. Coover retires his readers with plenty of hits but no runs, every base touched and an unbelievable score — not quite a perfect game but quite a jolter for this dull season when so many superstars of yesterday are striking out so often.

But is this fair? Besides being about baseball, Coover's novel is a murder mystery, after a pivotal character is killed; a suspense thriller, as the fans and the entire Universal Baseball Association wait for revenge to be taken; a passion play, after all is said and done; and a very funny, black as death comedy.

But that isn't all either. Coover's new novel is essentially about dreams and illusion, fantasy which can breathe life into reality, or destroy it.

No longer a microcosm? No longer a sanctuary from life? Is that what the man said?

Baseball is, of course, the most All-American of sports, the most mythic and, with its nearly perfect balance of offense and defense and cornucopia of statistical mists, a natural for the fantasy world of J. Henry Waugh, the accountant who not only is the proprietor of the Universal Baseball Association but the key figure in the novel, not a hero figure so much as a God figure. On the kitchen table in his dingy apartment above Diskin's Delicatessen in an unnamed city where the games of the UBA are played out with a toss of the dice and the by-play, action, color, hirings and firings, moving up of rookies and passing away of old stars streams full-blown from his mind, Henry is the prime mover, the "deus" to the UBA's "deus ex machina."

"Why haven't you ever got married, Henry?" his friend Lou asks at one point, and Henry's answer, "I don't know, never thought about it too much," is more than a lie, for, in truth, he hasn't had much time to think of marriage or anything else in the years during which the UBA has been his sport, his obsession, his life.

As he explains to a prostitute friend, the memorable Hettie who too has a place on the diamond of Henry's world, "I'm an auditor for a baseball association . . . I keep financial ledgers for each club . . . and a running journalization of the activity, posting of it all into permanent record books, and I help them with basic problems of burden distribution, remarking of assets, graphing fluctuations. Politics too. Elections. Team captains. Club presidents . . . There are box scores to be audited, trial balances of averages along the way, seasonal inventories, rewards and punishments to be meted out, life histories to be overseen. People die, you know."

And people are born, and their whole lives need to be lived. No longer a sanctuary from life?

The novel opens mid-way in a fantastic game of a season which is promising to be particularly bright after several deadly dull ones (Henry doesn't go to real ball games ever, finds them frightfully boring) and winds up at the beginning of what may well be the most fantastic ballgame ever played and is surely one of the finest pieces of imaginative writing ever put to paper. Along the way, the reader becomes almost as hopelessly entangled in the on-field and off-field drama of the UBA as Henry is and, perhaps, more deeply involved in the life of Henry than that prime mover himself is.

Coover himself has described his new novel as a combination of the "wild, fantastic allegorical and the real world," and there could hardly be a better way of describing it. The novel is, in every way, an important step in Coover's answer to the death of the "novel of realism," what he calls a "visionary fantasy kept within the confines of the structure of something real." In choosing baseball, that most "unreal" of all American pastimes, as his "something real," Coover has performed an act of pure genius — and, incidentally, neatly avoided the pitfalls of the second novel by conceiving and carrying out a work so dissimilar to "The Origin of the Brunists," his brilliant first novel, that comparisons are totally inadequate and out of place.

"The Universal Baseball Association, Inc., J. Henry Waugh, Prop." is a fun book, a funny book, a rich book, a beautiful book, a brilliant book. With its artful combination of comedy, pathos, drama, sex, adventure and suspense, all subtly weaved throughout by the keen artistry of a novelist who has a unique and penetrating vision of the world, it is a book for all seasons.

Coover is by no means the most "avant" of the new breed of avant-garde novelists, but more than anyone else writing in the English language today he fills the all-important role of the missing link which spans the artistic credibility gap between fantasy and reality. More than anyone else, and better, he is sewing up the stitches on the wounds of the spirit torn between two worlds — the world of the "real" and the world of the "realer." Between the stitches, one can catch glimpses, occasionally, of illumination from that distant reality which is within, that which must surely be the real.

No longer a microcosm? No longer a sanctuary from life? Was that sports the man was talking about, or man's dreams — dreams which can breathe life or destroy?

The Garden of Opinion Super Tex strikes again

by Rick Garr

Super Tex strikes again. Yep, pahdnus, ol' Lyndon done shot 'em down agin. After promising Congress that he would cut spending by $6 billion if it would raise taxes, our beloved President resorted to politics once more.

And who do you think was caught in the middle? Why us, the pawns, of course.

Ol' Super Tex got his tax surcharge, but to weasel his way out of the spending cuts he hit Congress below the belt by outraging the public. He promptly dispatched crony Mary Watson over to the Hill to curly announce that Saturday mail deliveries would have to go.

The nation will no doubt rise in anger, Congress will be flooded with protests for its despicable lack of foresight, and Lyndon may not have to cut spending in the Post Office Department.

Super Tex knows all the levers, folks.

Got a hot road machine you want to test run? Got a muffler-shorn cycle you want to rev up a little? Well, just bring it on down to the South Dodge Street Speedway.

There's enough roadway for everybody; it's one way, and there are just enough signal lights to have a drag every third block or so.

You can get some great thrills, too. The bark on some of the trees nearby is still rattling from one cyclist's roaring passage. The world speed record for a 25 mph zone was almost shattered last week.

Don't sweat the Fuzz, man. They haven't been seen on South Dodge since the V-8 was invented. They're about as likely to stop a thunderous cycle as Mao is to say a rosary to Adam Smith, as the saying goes.

Maybe someday one policeman will come up to help out. He could hold the flags, and when some kid runs out from between the many parked cars and gets mashed he can wave the yellow one for everybody to cool it for a few hundred yards.

Then on to the green flag and more noise, more patches of rubber and more fun.

Got a note from my old mistress, Rosy Buttox, the other day asking why I hadn't had any columns last week. The note was artistically printed in ink and script of some kind, showing Miss Buttox' obvious concern over my silence.

Well, Rosy, I can't write too many because if I did I wouldn't have time to read all my hate mail.

One of the more recent Gallup Polls showed that among black Americans, only 4 per cent favor Tricky Dick Nixon for the Presidency.

Now if a liberal Democratic President like the Great Bumpkin, who has passed so many Civil Rights laws, can be viewed with mistrust and hatred by the black community, what does this say about the likelihood of urban peace during a Nixon Presidency?

Aren't police the symbols of the state and the men in public office? To me, such poll findings are ominous warnings of a dire catastrophe, fans, if Tricky Dick is elected.

But, maybe Republican delegates will rise up before the convention. Wallace's support is growing (from 9 to 16 per cent) and this cuts into Nixon's fold. And, Gen. Gavin and Clumsy Claude Kirk in Florida have come out for Rocky, so all is not lost yet.

If the GOP nominates Nixon in the first week of August, the Democrats will probably feel safer to nominate Humphrey, so McCarthy people should get into the act and get Rockefeller nominated, wouldn't you say?

I can understand why ABC's coverage of the conventions is going to be limited to 90-minute evening summaries, but I think KCRG in Cedar Rapids is selling out to the ad people.

KCRG is apparently making it a habit either to forget about broadcasting public service and news programs or to delay them as long as they can. They have had only about one of every four "Issues and Answers" shows in the last few months, and they delayed the second "Time for Americans" in favor of "The Big Valley."

Maybe KCRG likes the money-green wasteland. Many of us don't, and we are watching other stations.

The Honorable George Corley Wallace, hatemonger-at-large, has done his bit to stifle the democratic process again, only this time he did it through the back door.

A Congressional committee has decided not to set up televised debates between the Presidential candidates this year, mostly because they would have had to let Wallace on to pollute our living rooms.

I think it's sad.

I think, too, that it's kinda ironic that ex-con Sonny Liston, famous for his assaults on police officers, is allowed to stage a comeback in the "sport" of boxing, and Mohammed Ali, who is appealing his conviction because there are only about 800 black people of the 30,000 men on our nation's draft boards, is not allowed to fight and is stripped of his crown.

Now, let me ask you this. If Bart Starr came out tomorrow and counseled everybody to dodge the draft, was convicted and he appealed the conviction, would he be kept from playing for the Pack?

Would Fat Jack Nicklaus be banned from the greens if he did? Would Mickey Mantle be stripped of Number seven? What do you think?

An often misused or misunderstood term in the vocabulary of those opposed to this system is: "co-option."

A simple illustration of what it means is this: when students have had the University's petty regulations up to their necks and are finally angry enough to close down the school if necessary with demonstrations and strikes, the administration steps in and first claims that it has long been concerned with this problem, and as a matter of fact was concerned with it even before students, and that long before students became upset it was investigating and researching and discussing various alternatives, and in its concern for the students' welfare it has decided just recently to change some of the rules so that curfewers are a little later, the privileged group who needn't face curfew is expanded to include another grade, and so on. That's co-option.

What it means on the national political scene is that a dedicated minority risks jail and physical beatings to oppose what it considers to be an immoral and illegal war while liberal politicians help to wage that war by voting in funds, supporting the system that caused it, etc. Eventually the minority grows to such a degree that it threatens to cause some radical changes. All of a sudden the liberal politicians have discovered a cause, and some solutions they hadn't noticed before, and so on. That too is co-option.

It means that either nothing gets done, or a compromise measure is enacted under the guise of "solving the problem" or "radically changing."

It means that some girls in some dorms can stay out later than before but that the University administration still has the authority to interfere in the private lives of citizens of this country and state who are supposedly protected by law from this kind of outside control.

"Co-option" means: it only looks like things are changing.

Gun laws won't effect crime rate, grad says

To the editor:

The current kick of the American liberal establishment is to fight for gun control laws. Moved to action by the assassination of Robert Kennedy which no gun control measure yet seriously proposed would have prevented, the liberals have become fond of talking about the amount of crime reduction that allegedly would result from gun controls. Such was the basis of the argument used by Roy Petty in an editorial Tuesday.

It was interesting to see recently excerpts of a debate between Attorney General Ramsey Clark and an official of the National Rifle Association (NRA). Ramsey cited lower rates of crimes committed with guns in several states with tough gun control laws as compared with several other states. But the NRA official cited statistics, which Clark did not refute, showing that there were no actual differences in crime rates between states in the two groupings. In other words, the same crimes were committed only the type of weapon varied.

My only contact with guns was at Boy Scout camp, so I could care less how they are controlled or even if they are banned. But let's not mislead ourselves or others into thinking that gun controls are going to have a significant effect on the amount of crime in this country.

Hanoi to Release 3 Prisoners Soon

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam disclosed at the Paris peace talks Wednesday the names of three U.S. airmen it has promised to release and American officials hope they may start the flight home Friday.

The meeting lasted nearly 4 1/2 hours, the longest of the 13 sessions held thus far, but U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman said afterward: "Nothing was achieved in that time. There was no progress whatsoever."

The three airmen to be released are:

Maj. James Frederick Low, 43, Sausalito, Calif., a Korean war ace, who was shot down by a missile over North Vietnam Dec. 16, 1967.

Maj. Fred Neale Thompson, 32, Taylors, S.C., captured last March 20.

Capt. Joe Victor Carpenter, 37, Victorville, Calif., captured last Feb. 15.

A spokesman for the National Mobilization Committee in Chicago, which has three members in Hanoi ready to receive the prisoners, said a cable from the North Vietnamese capital gave Low's home as Maitland, Fla., and Thompson's as Big Springs, Tex.

It is expected that the three airmen may be handed over Friday to the committee members in Hanoi. An International Control Commission plane leaves there Friday for Vientiane, capital of Laos. Three U.S. prisoners released several months ago came out on a commission plane.

The length of the meeting had nothing to do with the airmen. Most of the time was devoted to argument about the war in Vietnam.

Their names were given to Harriman during a half hour coffee break by Ambassador Ha Van Lau, No. 2 man on the North Vietnamese delegation.

Xuan Thuy, the chief delegate, did not attend the session. His spokesman said he was "slightly indisposed because of the weather."

At the meeting, Harriman asked the North Vietnamese to say what they would do if U.S. bombing were to stop completely, which they insist must happen before anything else can be discussed.

"And to that central question," Harriman told Lau, "you have given no answer whatsoever."

Harriman told newsmen that during the coffee break a little time was spent discussing the prisoners. Lau, he said, informed him that they were in excellent health.

Outside the meeting, there was discussion between delegates and reporters about the meaning of the current lull in the Vietnamese fighting.

Harriman said he could not interpret it, though he was glad that Saigon had not been shelled for nearly a month.

Nguyen Thanh Le, the North Vietnamese spokesman, told reporters: "In the South, how to strike and when to strike is decided by the National Liberation Front."

LBJ, Thieu Meet Friday To Air War

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson and President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam will meet at Pacific Command headquarters in Honolulu Friday and Saturday to discuss the Asian war and the Paris peace talks.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is to fly to Austin from Washington this morning to accompany Johnson on a nonstop flight from Bergstrom Air Force Base to Hickam Field.

The Texas White House announced the details at a Wednesday night briefing.

Johnson will stay at the estate of the late industrialist Henry J. Kaiser; Thieu will stay at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel.

The talks are to be held at Camp Smith.

No formal session is planned today. Instead, Johnson will be devoting much of his time to a briefing from Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who will be coming in directly from Saigon and a series of on-the-scene appraisals of the war.

The first working meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. Honolulu time Friday.

The conference will wind up Saturday with a 10 a.m. session at Camp Smith and a 1 p.m. luncheon at the Royal Hawaiian.

A time for Johnson's departure from Hawaii has not yet been set. There is a possibility he will remain until Sunday.

The White House was playing the meeting in low-key at least for the time being.

A presidential aide noted it is the fourth Johnson-Thieu meeting — the last taking place in December — in a series of review sessions every six months or so.

"There's no particular urgent political or military reason that required a meeting at this time," the White House official said.

Considerable attention was being devoted here to what political significance, if any, lies in the recent lull in fighting in South Vietnam. Johnson has indicated that as one route toward peace, the United States is prepared to scale down its military activities if the enemy does likewise, even without any formal diplomatic agreement.

Harriman, after another U.S.-North Vietnamese meeting Wednesday, said in Paris the lack of shelling of Saigon "may have some significance."

Meanwhile, in Vietnam, Clifford predicted renewed heavy enemy attacks within the next few weeks.

Man Poses, Shoots Wife

SANFORD, Maine (AP) — A man who allowed newsmen to photograph him while he held a gun against his wife's head — and then shot her to death, apparently accidentally — was charged Wednesday with her murder.

Ralph Goodwin sat on the couch of his brother's home, with his wife, Marilyn, 25, as the newsmen took pictures. One hand rested on her shoulder, while his other hand held a gun pointed at her head.

Goodwin, of Dover, N.H., held his wife captive more than six hours Tuesday night until a newsmen and a policeman he allowed in the house persuaded him to come outside for a television interview.

As the 28-year-old Goodwin and his wife, the gun still pointed at her, walked down the stairs, the gun discharged and Mrs. Goodwin fell with a bullet in her head. She died several hours later.

The newsmen, John Field, 30, a photographer for WGAN-TV, said he thought Goodwin might release his wife if he had a chance to air his grievances.

Goodwin said he wanted to be interviewed, Field told police.

Field said he told Goodwin, an unemployed machinist, how to operate a tape recorder and handed him the microphone.

"I was about to leave when the gun went off," he said.

When the shot went off police opened fire on Goodwin. He was wounded, but his condition is not critical.

The couple had two children.

Go-Go Girl Takes a Fall

It was a tough act to follow.

Tuesday night, Dee, a self-described 37 1/2-26-37 go-go girl, who prefers to be known by her stage name, closed out her act with an ambulance ride to University Hospitals.

Performing at Kennedy's Lounge, the 22-year-old brunette from Hollywood, Fla., said the audience was bothering her a little Tuesday night.

Some of the people in the crowd were "misbehaving" during her performance, Dee said.

"Because of the crowd I wasn't really paying attention as I was leaving the stage after finishing my numbers," she said.

"I took a wrong step and fell on the floor."

"I wasn't hurt too bad, but I passed out for a few seconds and when I woke up somebody said an ambulance was on the way and not to move."

She went to the hospital in the ambulance but refused to be taken on the stretcher.

Suffering only a "little stiffness" and ready to get back to work Wednesday night, Dee said X-rays taken at the hospital showed her injured back, finger and ankle were nothing serious.

Ray, Lawyer Dispute Trip Back to U.S.

LONDON (AP) — James Earl Ray's Alabama lawyer protested vigorously Wednesday against plans to fly the accused assassin of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. to Memphis, Tenn., without his own legal counsel aboard the plane.

Addressing newsmen after visiting Ray in Wandsworth Prison for 45 minutes, Arthur J. Hanes, former mayor of Birmingham, said Ray had asked him to fly back with him but that U.S. authorities had turned down the request.

"He fears being in company of the Justice Department alone," Hanes said. "I don't know the basis of the fear but he says it and he wants me to be present."

Ray decided Tuesday not to appeal against extradition any longer, and Hanes arrived in London Wednesday morning.

U.S. officials have steadfastly refused on security grounds to disclose anything about how they would take Ray to the United States.

But he is expected to go aboard a U.S. military plane or a chartered airliner under heavy guard.

Neither Hanes nor Ray's British lawyer has any idea when the plane will leave.

Hanes explained he had advised Ray to waive extradition because he wants to get started on the case — and "begin without further delay an effort to combat and counteract the unprejudiced, vicious and libelous press and television campaign to portray him as a convicted murderer, a monster, a degenerate and a dope addict."

A few legal loose ends remain to be tied up before Ray can be handed over to U.S. authorities: the British must adjourn or drop the charges of passport forgery and carrying an unlicensed gun, under which Ray has been held.

A hearing is scheduled at Bow Street Magistrates Court today. Although Ray does not necessarily have to be present, British lawyers said it would be legally risky to spirit him out of the country until the hearing is finished, in case either defense, prosecution or the magistrate wanted to question him in court.

Once this is wound up, Home Secretary James Callaghan can sign the extradition warrant on the order made July 2 by Chief Magistrate Frank Milton, who also will preside at Thursday's hearing.

Senator Links Black Market To AID Aides

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is evidence that many officials of the agency for International Development are selling cigarettes, whisky, radios and similar commissary merchandise to the South Vietnamese, Sen. Stephen M. Young, (D-Ohio) said Wednesday.

Young told the Senate the operation of the AID program throughout South Vietnam is scandalous.

Young said the AID director in South Vietnam receives in excess of $44,000 a year; 28 officials receive in excess of $41,700 a year; 82 receive $35,500; 262 receive in excess of $30,000; 409 receive in excess of $24,600; and 76 receive more than $19,000 a year.

"This is outrageous," Young said.

"What justification is there," he asked, "for the AID head in Vietnam to receive almost $5,000 a year more than the chief justice of the United States? What possible reason can be given for paying 110 other AID officials a greater salary than that received by members of the Cabinet, senators and congressmen?"

In addition to base salaries, Young said, the AID officials are given a 25 per cent hardship allowance, a $3,000 maintenance allowance and fringe benefits including air-conditioned housing and medical care and all PX and commissary privileges.

"There is evidence that many sell cigarettes, whisky, radios and other PX and commissary merchandise to South Vietnamese. The black market in Saigon is a disgustingly huge operation," he said.

CHICAGO (AP) — Striking electrical workers rejected Wednesday a new wage proposal of the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. for settling a dispute that threatens removal of the Democratic National Convention from Chicago.

Robert A. Nicky, chairman of the local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW), said the union had filed an unfair labor charge against Illinois Bell with the National Labor Relations Board.

Nicky told a news conference that the Democratic convention "unfortunately has become an issue in the strike."

He said the telephone company's latest offer "is not a new one, it is a revised offer of an old one seeking a three-year contract."

Clyde C. Boyls, assistant vice president of the company, said the offer would grant pay raises from $1.50 to $3.50 a week higher than offered in the earlier company proposal, but that the increase in the total money package was "probably not too much."

Nicky said there still was ample time for agreement and time to complete preparations for the convention, which is scheduled to open in Chicago Aug. 26, if a settlement would be reached soon.

He said the union members had told the company they did not want a new contract but want to bargain on wages in the 18 months remaining in the current contract.

The Chicago regional office of the National Labor Relations Board said it probably would take a week to dispose of the charges filed by IBEW. The union will present witnesses today in support of its charge.

If the charges have no merit, the office will dismiss them. If the charges have merit, the board will call in the company and attempt to have the issue settled.

A board spokesman said that 80 per cent of such unfair labor practices filings are settled at the regional level.

Up, Up and Away Age of Jets Screeches to Halt on Runway

NEW YORK (AP) — At Kennedy Airport at 10:30 a.m. one day this week there were 26 airliners one behind the other awaiting clearance for take off. On a recent afternoon, 60 planes were lined up at Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

What's taking the zip out of the jet age?

There have been two reasons advanced — a so-called safety slowdown, or book-of-rules operation by air traffic controllers who claim they're overworked, and the failure of the air control system to keep pace with the growth of commercial aviation, resulting in mounting air traffic congestion.

"The intolerable delays and congestion in the air and on the ground, which have been anticipated for some years, have become a reality at a number of our major airports," said Stuart G. Tipton, president of the Air Transport Association, in an industry appeal to the Senate.

Tipton blamed the situation on "inadequate facilities and personnel for the airways system."

On Tuesday, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved funds to allow the Federal Aviation Administration to hire an additional 1,996 controllers. These will be added to the 1,631 provided for in a House bill that was approved earlier this year.

Robert E. Peach, chairman of Mohawk Airlines, said delays cost his firm $165,000 during June. Like Tipton, he blamed what he called a long-term failure of the FAA to devise adequate procedures for the rapid movement of traffic.

But Peach also contended that one immediate cause of the upsurge of delays was a "deliberate slowdown by a small minority of the overworked air traffic controllers."

A Washington FAA spokesman claimed the agency has found no evidence of a deliberate slowdown. Nevertheless, the FAA has stationed special observers in New York control towers to look over the shoulders of the controllers.

Wallace to Hold Des Moines Rally

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — American Independent party presidential candidate George Wallace will hold a rally and fund raising dinner July 22 in Des Moines, his campaign headquarters here announced Wednesday.

The visit to Iowa will be part of a eight state campaign during the next 15 days, aides said.

Twigg, Manager Plan Partnership

LONDON (AP) — Top model Twigg, real name Lesley Hornby, announced Wednesday night she plans to marry her manager, 28-year-old Justin de Villeneuve, real name Nigel Davies.

Twigg, 18, said: "The wedding won't be just yet. I'm still very young and I don't believe in young marriages."

Striking Workers Refuse Bell's Bid

CHICAGO (AP) — Striking electrical workers rejected Wednesday a new wage proposal of the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. for settling a dispute that threatens removal of the Democratic National Convention from Chicago.

Robert A. Nicky, chairman of the local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW), said the union had filed an unfair labor charge against Illinois Bell with the National Labor Relations Board.

AT&T, Union Near Accord

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its 24,000 long-distance service employees reached tentative agreement Wednesday on a contract that the company said would cost $36 million over the next three years.

Federal mediator Robert E. Kennedy announced the agreement, which must be ratified by union members.

A strike would have affected communications at the national political conventions in Miami Beach and Chicago.

However, communications for the Democratic convention in Chicago remained in jeopardy because of a strike at the Illinois Bell Telephone Co.

An AT&T spokesman described the settlement as a three-year extension of a contract that would have expired January, 1970. Ralph W. Merrill, labor relations manager, said it was the largest settlement ever negotiated for long line employees.

GOLF TIPS

By CHUCK ZWEINER Iowa Golf Coach

PRACTICE PUTTING ROUTINE
Never practice aimlessly, especially on the greens. Try to practice all length putts to develop a sense of touch or judgment of distance.

Start about one foot from the cup and gradually work your way back away from the cup. This will give you every length putt you will encounter on the course and will help develop your feel for distance.

Practice some sidehill, uphill and downhill putts to become familiar with each type of situation.

Practicing all types of putts will build up confidence and help improve your putting.

MAINTENANCE TIP
Wear golf shoes when practicing putting. Street shoes will tend to compact the greens and cause them to become hard. Golf spikes will punch small holes in the green and keep it from compacting.

Dodgers Lose 7th in a Row

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mack Jones pinch hit a tie-breaking two-run double in the eighth inning Wednesday night as the Cincinnati Reds beat Los Angeles 7-4 and ended their losing streak at seven games.

Don Pavletich began the three-run uprising with a one-out walk off reliever Jim Grant. Leo Cardenas was hit by a pitch and Jones, batting for Ted Abernathy, doubled off the left field wall, scoring both runners. Jones later scored on Vada Pinson's sacrifice fly.

The Reds broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth when Pinson doubled across one run and another scored on Johnny Bench's sacrifice fly. Cardenas hit his first home run of the season in the sixth for a 4-1 lead.

But the Dodgers tied it with two in the seventh on Ken Boyer's pinch single and a sacrifice fly by Jim Fairey and an unearned run in the eighth, which Ron Fairly drove in with a sacrifice fly.

It was the Dodgers' 12th loss in 14 games.

Sox Take 4 out of 5, Stop Orioles' Streak

CHICAGO (AP) — Tom McCraw scored on a balk by Baltimore's Tom Phoebus in the fourth inning Wednesday night and the run gave the Chicago White Sox a 1-0 victory that snapped the Orioles' seven-game winning streak.

The White Sox, limited to two hits by Phoebus in the seven innings he pitched, scored the run when McCraw opened the fourth with a single, stole second, took third on a wild pitch and trotted home on Phoebus' balk.

Winning pitcher Joe Horlen and relievers Wilbur Wood and Hoyt Wilhelm combined for a four-hitter as the White Sox won their fourth in five games under new manager Al Lopez.

Earl Weaver, beaten for the first time since he replaced Hank Bauer as the Orioles' manager last week, argued the balk call vehemently for five minutes with plate umpire John Flaherty — without avail.

Red Sox Edge Twins 6-5

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) — Pinch hitter Russ Nixon's three-run double in the ninth inning carried the Boston Red Sox to a 6-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins Wednesday night.

The Twins walked back with two runs in the bottom of the ninth after loading the bases on three walks with none out. But Lee Stange came out of the Boston bullpen to nip the rally.

RUSS NIXON Hits Game-Winning Blow

Nixon, a former Minnesota catcher just called up by the Red Sox from their Pittsfield farm club, broke a 3-3 deadlock with his bases-loaded double to the left center field fence off Twins relief ace Ron Perranoski.

Pascual was chased in the seventh when the Yanks scored on a single by Andy Kosco, a walk to Jake Gibbs and a single by Bob Cox.

The Twins rallied in the eighth to tie it 3-3 on doubles by Frank Quilici and pinch hitter Rich Rollins.

Joe Foy tripped and scored on Russ Gibson's single, giving Boston a 3-2 lead in the fifth against Twins' starter Jim Kaat.

Kaat also was tagged for bases empty homers by George Scott in the first and Petrocelli in the second.

Cubs-Phils Split

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jeff James, a rookie right-hander, hurled his first shutout and grove in a run with his first major league hit as Philadelphia walloped the Chicago Cubs 8-0 in the second game of a two-night doubleheader Wednesday.

The Cubs had extended their winning streak to five games, winning 8-4, in the opener as Ernie Banks drove in six runs with two homers and a single.

Braves Lose 5-2

HOUSTON (AP) — Danny Coombs won his first game of the season and contributed a two-run single as the Houston Astros stopped Atlanta's six-game winning streak 5-2 Wednesday night.

Coombs, a 26-year-old left-hander who has spent parts of five seasons with the Astros, hurled seven innings and was relieved by John Buzhardt after Sonny Jackson opened the eighth with a double that set up the Braves' second run.

Houston, which failed to score after loading the bases with none out in the fourth, erupted for four runs with two out in the sixth for a 4-1 lead. Jim Wynn walked and Norm Miller singled, the second hit off Jim Britton.

After Denis Menke walked, Doug Rader singled for two runs, John Bateman beat out a hit to deep shortstop Sonny Jackson's glove, scoring Menke and Rader.

Bucs-Mets Split

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The New York Mets took advantage of an error by shortstop Jose Pagan to score two unearned runs and beat Pittsburgh 5-4 in the second game of Wednesday's two-night doubleheader, ending a six-game losing streak.

The Pirates gave rookie left-hander Jerry Koosman his worst drubbing of the season and won the opener 8-2.

The Mets rallied for three runs in the sixth inning of the nightcap after Pittsburgh had taken a 2-1 lead in the fifth. Ed Charles greeted reliever Luke Walker with a single and with one out Jerry Grote and pinch-hitter Ron Swoboda singled for one run.

Nats Edge Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis Higgins' relief pitching helped Camilo Pascual snap Washington's nine-game losing streak Wednesday with a 2-1 victory over the New York Yankees in 95-degrees heat.

Frank Howard drove in the first run against loser Mel Stotemyre in the fourth with a single, following singles by Cap Peterson and Bill Bryan.

The Senators opened up a 2-0 lead for Pascual in the seventh when Ed Brinkman beat out an infield hit, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Del Unser's single.

Pascual was chased in the seventh when the Yanks scored on a single by Andy Kosco, a walk to Jake Gibbs and a single by Bob Cox.

TUNING UP MUSCLES — Minnesota Vikings' Head Coach Bud Grant supervises opening practice session Wednesday afternoon for a crop of 34 rookies who are trying out for the NFL team at the team's training site at Mankato State College. —January Tries to Defend Title— 50th PGA Tourney Opens

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Lean and hungry-looking Don January opens defense of his PGA golf championship here today with an eye on the weather and a weather eye on a pair of old smoothies, Bill Casper and Julius Boros.

"I've been thinking about the course and the guys in the field and I can't help figuring it's a Casper and Boros type tournament," the 38-year-old titleholder from Dallas said Wednesday.

"The fairways are tight and there's a lot of trouble around the greens. Casper and Boros will punch the ball out there in the middle of the fairway, finesse the ball around the greens and keep popping 69s and 70s at you until you drop."

"Frankly, I'm more afraid of them than the big hitters like Jack Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf and Bobby Nichols."

The 6-0, 165-pound Texan, who beat Don Messengers in a playoff for the title a year ago in Denver, heads a 166-man field, which includes 68 regular tour players and 100 club and freelance pros enjoying their one big chance to hobnob with the headline tournament stars.

Casper, the year's leading money winner and the man who led the British Open through the third round last week at Carnoustie, is the 6-1 favorite, followed by Nicklaus, 8-1, open champion Lee Trevino and January 10-1.

Arnold Palmer, Tom Weiskopf and Julius Boros 12-1.

Boros, 48, the relaxed two-time open champion, fears that the intense Texas heat and humidity may dull his own chances as well as those of such oldsters as Sam Snead, 56, seeking his third PGA crown, Jerry Barber, 52, who beat January in a playoff for the title in 1961, and ageless Paul Runyan, who won the first of his two PGAs 34 years ago.

This 50th championship, played over the 7,096-yard, par-70 Pecan Valley Country Club course which was carved out of a near wilderness six years ago, offers an intriguing confrontation between the "old guard" and the so-called "new breed," the "haves," such as Palmer, Nicklaus and Casper, and the eager "want-to-gets," represented by such young and brash Turks as Trevino, Weiskopf, Bob Lunn and Dave Stockton.

Trevino, the voluble, wise-cracking Mexican-American who has emerged as golf's most exciting new personality, is the sentimental favorite in this South Texas metropolis which is more than 50 per cent Mexican-American. They have dubbed Trevino's worshippers as "Lee's fleas."

The 210-pound Nicklaus is fighting to crush a runner-up complex, having finished second in three national championships this year — the U.S. Open, Canadian and British.

"I guess I've become a choker," big Jack said, but in jest. In all cases, instead of choking, he made strong finishing rallies.

Nicklaus hasn't won a tournament since last fall. Palmer has won one this year — the Bob Hope Classic — but has been in a nagging slump.

Palmer Eyes 1st PGA Victory

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Arnold Palmer wishes to announce that he's not over the hill.

"I feel like I'm 25 and just trying to get my start in professional golf," said Palmer with tongue palmer admitted he always seemed to have trouble getting ready for the PGA. He said one of the reasons was a British Open, usually held the week before the PGA.

"Everybody playing over there has trouble adjusting when they come back," Palmer said. "The greens, the climate, the ball — everything is different."

He said he was disturbed by the size of the field — 168.

"A field like this is very unfair to the players themselves in their own championship," Palmer said. "No tournament on the tour has this many."

On another subject, Palmer was asked if he thought golf was being overexposed on television.

"I don't know how you can overexpose something if a person can turn the knob and go to something else," Palmer said. "It's not like football where every channel is jammed."

Laguna Decisions Melendez, Awaits Title Fight with Cruz

NEW YORK (AP) — Ismael Laguna, the former lightweight champion from Panama, boosted his chances for another title shot by outclassing young, hitherto unbeaten Vic Melendez of Puerto Rico in a fast 10-round fight at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night.

The 21-year-old Melendez, meeting his first major opponent, carried the fight to the 28-year-old favorite in the first three rounds to the delight of the crowd of 9,505 that paid $47,855.

But in the fourth round, the flashy Panamanian met Melendez' rushes with stinging left jabs and crisp rights to the head and clearly took charge of the fight.

From then on it was all Laguna as the thin-legged, fast-punching ex-champ gave his young rival a boxing lesson. There were no knockdowns.

The two judges, Tony Rossi and Tony Castellano, each had Laguna in front 9-1 in rounds. Referee Harold Valca had it 7-3 for Laguna. The Associated Press scorecard made it 7-3 championship at Pecan Valley Country Club.

"I'm putting better and hitting the ball well," said the 38-year-old Palmer, who has never won the PGA — the only major title to escape him.

Palmer admitted he always seemed to have trouble getting ready for the PGA. He said one of the reasons was a British Open, usually held the week before the PGA.

"I don't know how you can overexpose something if a person can turn the knob and go to something else," Palmer said. "It's not like football where every channel is jammed."

Each weighed 136 pounds.

The Garden had offered freshly crowned lightweight king Carlos "Teo" Cruz of the Dominican Republic $40,000 to meet the Laguna-Melendez winner. Cruz watched the fight.

It was the fifth straight victory for Laguna since he lost a third title fight to Carlos Ortiz, the man Cruz dethroned, last August. Previously Laguna had won and lost in title fights with Ortiz in 1965.

Laguna is ranked third by the World Boxing Association and second by Ring Magazine. Melendez, unranked by the WBA, is ranked eighth by Ring.

The Puerto Rican, now living in New York, had won 19 bouts and tied in four others in a five-year pro career.

—Once Got Bad Advice Himself—

Jones Has Eye on Deprived

Phillip Jones, a newly appointed admissions counselor at the University, finished high school because he wanted to play football. He went on to college and eventually got an M.A. at the University in 1967 because of people.

"The only reason I went on," he said, "was first of all, my mother and secondly, individuals all along the way who took a personal interest in me."

Now Jones, as the University's admission officer specializing in his office were for this year only and may change in subsequent years. For this fall, he said, he hopes to recruit 50 students from disadvantaged backgrounds through his office.

He said that all candidates must meet standard University requirements. Many will have deficient skills in particular areas, however, particularly reading and writing skills, he said.

Jones does not award Martin Luther King fund scholarships, he said. That function belongs to the Financial Aids office and he merely makes candidates aware of such help.

Are the Martin Luther King scholarships for blacks only?

Jones explained, "We are looking for economically and educationally deprived students. Most people agree that these types of students are to be found in urban areas, of lower class background, and from sub-standard schools. Those selected will be determined by the composition of those areas. The majority will be black. Some will be white, Puerto Rican, Oriental, and Mexican-American."

Jones has spent most of his time since graduation from the University of Illinois in 1963 working with disadvantaged students, he said. He spent one year after graduation as a group counselor for a Chicago youth center on the near North side. Last summer, he worked with the University Upward Bound program. He taught school in Flint, Mich., last year.

Johnson Decries Foreign Aid Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson denounced as "frightful gambles with history" Wednesday moves to "put foreign aid in limbo for a year" or to cut deeper into his $2.9-billion request.

As the House prepared to act Thursday, Johnson issued a statement saying he could live with the $600-million reduction made in that request by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"But with these cuts," he said, "the program has been pared to the bone."

There were some indications that efforts would be made to cut out another $400 million.

Thieves' Market Scheduled

Paper flowers, ashtrays, contemporary paintings and sculpture and other art works will be exhibited and sold during the Summer Thieves' Market from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday in the Union Main Lounge.

The art show and sale, sponsored by Summer Union Board, will include displays of pottery, paintings, graphic works, sculpture and jewelry.

All the items are the work of University students. Any University student is eligible to participate, according to Richard Jacobi, Union Board art advisor.

Most of the exhibitors are graduate art students. About 40 students are expected to exhibit their works, although Jacobi said that only 10 had entered so far.

The amount of work exhibited by each student depends upon the type of work, Jacobi said. Students working in pottery usually display about 30 pieces, to be exhibited during the afternoon.

Each student sets his own price for his work and mans his own display. He retains all his profits.

Jacobi estimated that about $8,000 worth of art works would be sold. He said that this sale would be smaller than those held each semester during the regular school year.

Thieves' Market is a nonprofit activity for the University. Each exhibitor pays a $1 entry fee to cover the cost of a security guard.

The market is designed to give students doing professional work a chance to get public recognition, Jacobi said.

SORRY, NO PINUPS—
BERLIN (AP) — Girlie pinups in truck cabs are proscribed by East German guards checking traffic to and from Berlin through Communist territory. Drivers reported they are required to get rid of such pictures or see them confiscated.

recruitment of the disadvantaged, anxious to take a personal interest in students with disadvantaged backgrounds.

"My job is specifically to identify and process the educationally and economically disadvantaged candidates for admission to the University. That means that I will be on the road this fall about 50 per cent of the time, covering 20 Iowa high schools and 22 high schools in the metropolitan Chicago area," said Jones of his job.

In addition to his official tasks, Jones said he hoped to have a vital working relationship with the students. He said he would coordinate academic and orientation programs for disadvantaged students at the University and also serve as an information source for them.

Jones said that when he was in college his first counselor had advised him to sign up for 17 hours, even though Jones was working 20 hours a week at the library. He said that his writing and reading skills were low and the job turned out to be more than he could handle.

"It is this kind of ill advice that we would like to keep away from these disadvantaged students," he said.

Jones said that the present functions and organization of

Famous Prints On Display Here

Prints by the most noted artists of the late 19th and 20th centuries are being shown through July 28 in the Union Terrace Lounge.

The works, part of the George Binet Collection of Brimfield, Mass., are titled, "From Renoir to Picasso." The exhibit will be a feature of the 1968 Fine Arts Festival sponsored by the Union.

Prints include examples of Renoir's etching techniques and portraits of several noted artists by their colleagues.

Works of artists of the fauve movement and of contemporary impressionist artists are also being shown.

Hailstorm Damage Still Being Fixed

By NED NEVELS
Getting a private audience with President Johnson might be easier these days than getting an appointment to have body work done on a car.

Iowa Citizens with hail damaged cars can look forward to waiting as long as next June to have the ugly welts taken out.

Iowa City repair shops have been deluged with work since the May 15 hailstorm, which left pockmarked cars, shattered windows, and damaged roofs in its wake.

Jim McFall, 527 S. Riverside Dr., said that his auto-trim and upholstery shop put on 66 new convertible tops in June and that he had expected that to be the end of his convertible-top business.

"Then, this month we started getting people who had only recently received the go-ahead from their insurance agents," McFall said. "Now I have 45 tops in the shop waiting to go on and I've got to order 30 more. I didn't think there were that many convertibles in Iowa City."

Many body repair shops are not giving appointments until early October and some won't guarantee anything until January, 1969.

"I couldn't give you an appointment until the end of this year," said Louis Clay, body shop manager at Dunlap's Motor Sales.

Many service managers who have several month's backlog of business report more customers coming in all the time.

Jack Wyatt, service manager at Nall's Motors, said that he couldn't handle any major work until next June and he was giving five or more estimates a day on new work.

The number of estimates being given daily have tapered off some since the big rush in June, according to Bob Beach of B. A. Horner Inc., a Lincoln-Mercury dealer.

"We're down to about 10 estimates a day now," said Ed Hasley, service manager at Wagner-Abbott Pontiac.

The long lines of car owners who started the repair congestion have disappeared, but many car owners in Iowa City will have to endure their damaged vehicles for some time.

Those who feel dejected over this state of affairs can take heart from one unfortunate incident told by Wyatt.

A late model car was inside a garage being lubricated when the storm came and escaped damage while hundreds of cars outside were being hit by hail.

The relieved owner picked up his car and was pulling away when another driver ran a stop light and hit him broadside, totally demolishing the recently repaired automobile, leaving the driver unhurt to contemplate his bad luck.

Former Head Of Iowa OEO Hits Program

DES MOINES (AP) — A former Iowa state director of the Office of Economic Opportunity Wednesday called federal poverty programs operated by OEO "a miserable failure."

C. Edwin Gilmour, Grinnell College political science professor and former state OEO head, made the statement during a panel discussion at Drake University's annual Institute in State and Local Government.

The OEO has become "ossified, bureaucratic, and indistinguishable now from the old-line welfare agencies, public and private," Gilmour said.

The agency has failed miserably in the war on poverty the last three years because it has been attempting to fight that war from a defensive posture, he said.

Gilmour called for a two-step program to take care of welfare and poverty programs. He called for efforts to organize the poor so that they can stand up and demand their rights.

Another panel member, Donald McKenzie, director of Greater Opportunities, Inc., the Des Moines antipoverty agency, said he "wholeheartedly agrees" with Gilmour's assessment of OEO programs with one exception.

If nothing else, McKenzie said, the OEO "has made the public aware of the problems of the poor, and that is an accomplishment in itself."

Outlaw Faces 17 Charges, All Capital

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — Edward Thompson Jr. waited Wednesday in an undisclosed jail somewhere in North Carolina, charged with 17 capital crimes, including murder.

Two murder warrants and three warrants charging Thompson with kidnaping were brought to North Carolina from Roanoke County, Va., by Sheriff O. S. Foster.

They charge him with shooting a man and a woman in an abandoned house near Roanoke and taking three teenaged girls as hostages. The girls were freed when Thompson, an "out-law," was arrested in Greensboro Tuesday.

Sheriff Carl H. Axson of Rockingham County, N. C., had warrants sworn against Thompson Wednesday charging him with three counts of rape against two of the hostages. The sheriff accused him of raping one of the girls twice and another once.

Rape is a capital crime in North Carolina. Thompson, 37, of Eden, N. C., already had been charged in western North Carolina with six counts of kidnaping, three counts of rape, and one count each on three lesser charges.

On June 25 Thompson was proclaimed an outlaw in Buncombe County Asheville Superior Court by Judge W. K. McLean at the request of the Henderson County sheriff, J. F. Kilpatrick. After the proclamation, any citizen could legally have shot Thompson if he disregarded an order to surrender.

Thompson was arrested while driving a car belonging to the man killed in Roanoke, J. Edward Davis, 50, a salesman. The girl hostages were with him.

They were Jo Ellen Davis, 13, daughter of the dead man; Hester "Cherry" Freeman, 17, whose mother Mrs. Brewster Freeman was found dead with Davis, and Mathilda Love, 13, Hester Freeman's cousin.

Blasphemer Gets 30 Days; Tongue Saved

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP) — A 20-year-old man, convicted of blasphemy under a 245-year-old law, is serving 30 days in the Carroll County jail here.

Irving K. West, who returned to Westminster last January with his wife and infant daughter after serving three years in the Army, was arrested June 20 after a fight on Main Street.

He was tried and convicted on charges he "did unlawfully use profanity by taking the Lord's name in vain in a public place."

West also was sentenced to a consecutive 30-day sentence on a charge of resisting arrest, and fined $25 each for blasphemy, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

Magistrate Charles J. Simpson said police officers testified West had "shouted profanities and used the Lord's name in vain" when he was arrested.

Simpson conceded the law was obscure, but said, "sometimes an obscure law like this is the only way to solve some of these problems."

The blasphemy statute, enacted by the Lord Proprietor of Maryland in 1723, originally called for the prisoner to be "bored through the tongue" for the first offense, "stigmatized by burning in the forehead with the letter 'B'" for a second offense, and "put to death without benefit of clergy" for the third offense.

The Maryland Legislature of 1819 repealed the corporal and capital punishment, but let stand a fine not to exceed $100 and a jail term not to exceed six months.

Hubert Hoeltje, Former Prof, Dies

Hubert H. Hoeltje, former instructor in the University Department of English, died in an automobile accident in Davis, Okla., on July 7. Hoeltje, a visiting professor at East Texas State University for the summer, was on the faculty at the University during the 1940s. He was 74.

He was a native of Iowa and earned bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees at the University in 1919, 1926 and 1932. He specialized in the 19th-century American literature, and had written two books and 30 articles.

His last article, "Misconceptions in Recent Thoreau Criticism," is scheduled to appear in the October issue of "Philological Quarterly," a scholarly journal published by the University Graduate College. He was writing a book called "Two Solitary Stars," describing the relations between Emerson and Thoreau.

His sons, Hubert H. Jr. and Henry, survive him.

Bank Bandit With Beard Shot in Act

POCAHONTAS (AP) — A bandit described as "A huge, bearded young man in sloppy dress" held up the Commercial State Bank here Wednesday and 10 minutes later he was wounded and captured after exchanging shots with police.

The man was tentatively identified as Ralph Carrell, 21, of Owatonna, Minn. The money, estimated by a bank official at $8,000, was recovered.
Officers said a blast from the shotgun of Police Chief Curtis Anderson knocked a snub nosed .38 revolver from Carrell's hand after he had fired several shots at police, sheriff's officers and highway patrolmen in an alley behind the bank.

Carrell was taken to jail after treatment at a hospital for a superficial wound in the hand. Officers said the money was found in a rented truck parked in the alley. Three teenagers near the truck were arrested as possible accomplices and were being questioned by police.

Rod Amle, 33, executive vice president of the bank, said "A huge, bearded young man in sloppy dress and wearing no mask walked into my office at 2:40 p.m."
"He reached into a small sack he was carrying and grasped a revolver which he pointed at me."

Amle said the man herded eight bank employees and six customers, seven men and seven women, into the bank vault with Amle, and demanded a large money sack before he closed the door. Amle said the bandit warned them they would be shot if they tried to get out.
Another customer, Garry Steen of Pocahontas, entered the bank as the bandit was heading the group into the vault. Steen left the bank unobserved and called the sheriff's office and the police chief.
Officers rushed to the scene in time to block the bandit's escape. They said he fired six or seven shots at officers before Anderson's shot knocked the gun from his hand.

Iowa City's Lovely Meter Maids Walk for Work, Try to Be Helpful as They Do What They Must

By TERRY CLARK
Some people might walk a mile for a cigarette, but Iowa City's Parkettes cover at least five miles a day in the line of duty.

It's a case of walking for work, not to work, for those ladies of the police force who are better known to the public as "meter maids."

In their white blouses with a triangular shoulder patch and navy blue skirts, the women are familiar figures as they patrol the seemingly endless rows of parking meters in the city, stop occasionally to write out a ticket, check the license number and place a ticket under the windshield wiper of some careless shopper.

An easy job? Perhaps, but when you consider that there are only seven meter maids to cover the entire city, the task appears more tedious and tiresome.

But the meter maids are friendly and courteous — unless you have overparked, of course. When they are asked for information, they readily smile and try to be helpful.

One of the Parkettes, Anna Rothenhoefer, has been on the force six years. She finds that she has become sort of a traveling information bureau, although her job is mostly routine.

If people want to know where something is or where a store has moved, Miss Rothenhoefer or one of her colleagues is inevitably asked for the information first. Thus they keep up on what is happening in Iowa City.

Their duties vary during the course of the eight hours (8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.) that they patrol Iowa City's parking areas.

In the mornings they collect the money that had been deposited in meters the previous day. They also unjam, fix or replace any meters that they can. As the day progresses, they begin to check their beat, which is assigned daily by Capt. Kenneth Stock of the Iowa City police.

Usually three women cover the downtown area while two others ride three wheeled Cushman motor scooters to check the outlying areas.

Miss Rothenhoefer occasionally meets antagonism as she covers her beat, but she shrugs it off.

She says, "The people who scream and complain don't bother me. It's the ones who come up just a few minutes late and are nice about it that make me feel bad."

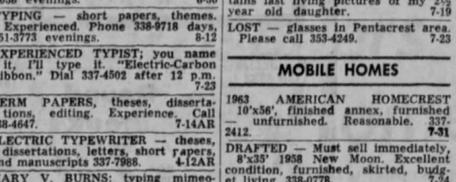

She and the other Parkettes have recently added another role to their daily routine.

From her purse, Miss Rothenhoefer pulled what she termed "her list of surprises."

She unfolded a list of all parking offenders who have not paid their bills. When she finds one of the cars, she calls in to headquarters in the Civic Center. A patrolman is dispatched who puts a "boot" on the car's wheel to prevent it being driven. The boot will be removed when the fines are paid.

Miss Rothenhoefer, who has lived in Iowa City for 35 years and now resides at 130 N. Jefferson St., even got a parking ticket herself once. How?

She smiled and said, "I guess I just got too interested in a dress at a sale and forgot all about the car."
