

Wallace Stops off in Iowa

DES MOINES (AP) — Third party candidate George C. Wallace rejected Tuesday a proposal that congressmen pledge to support the leading candidate if the presidential election is thrown into the House of Representatives.

"I don't think it's constitutional," Wallace said at a news conference as he brought his campaign to Iowa for the first time.

"It's just so foolish," he said. Wallace denounced a proposal by Rep. Charles E. Goodell (R-N.Y.) and Rep. Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.), who urged him to endorse their plan asking House members to pledge to vote for the candidate polling the highest number of popular votes in the presidential election.

"These national Democrats and Republicans now publicly display their willingness to enter into a conspiracy to circumvent the Constitution," Wallace said.

"This is typical of the attitude in Washington that is about to destroy our system of government," he said.

The move proves his contention that there is no significant difference between the two major parties, Wallace said.

Shortly after Wallace arrived, supporters from 30 Iowa counties held a state convention of the American Independent party and nominated Wallace for president. Nine electors were chosen by the 127 delegates.

The convention went through the formality in order to assure Wallace a spot on the Iowa ballot. In another formality, former Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia was nominated as a stand-in vice presidential candidate. But Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox' name also was placed in nomination.

The former Alabama governor arrived by plane from Montgomery some 45 minutes behind schedule. He found skies cloudy as he stepped from the plane, the aftermath of heavy rains that pelted Des Moines earlier in the day.

A crowd estimated by police at about 200 greeted Wallace. Some in the crowd carried signs with such slogans as "To law and order with Wallace," "Go for Wallace," and "Davenport Loves Wallace."

Later, at a night rally, an estimated 6,000 persons sat in a light rain and gave Wallace an enthusiastic reception.

Wallace told the news conference his American Independent party at its national convention would come out with "a fine farm program." But he gave no details, saying only: "We're going to see if we can't go from 55 per cent of parity up to at least 90 per cent."

Wallace plans to hold his convention after the Democrats and Republicans have chosen their presidential nominees next month. A date has not been announced.

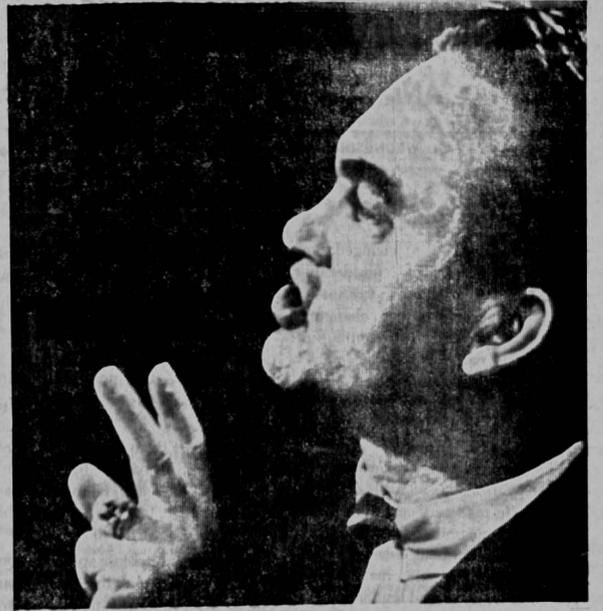

Answering questions, Wallace said he did not think the election would go to the House. He said he expected to win.

Asked if he were a gambling man, would he bet on his chances, Wallace replied: "I'd bet you even. I might give you two-to-one odds."

The former Alabama governor said he was sympathetic to the people of Czechoslovakia but shied from any statement of support for armed intervention by the United States.

In other developments, the Oklahoma Supreme Court issued an order granting Wallace and other candidates of his party places on the Oklahoma ballot, and Wallace also qualified for the Utah ballot.

His staff said more than 135,000 voter signatures on petitions would be filed to meet requirements for getting on the Massachusetts ballot.

WALLACE MEETS IOWANS — American Independent presidential candidate George Wallace brought his message of "stopping crime in the streets" and "giving the country back to the people" to Des Moines Tuesday night. As Czech Talks Approach, Soviets Start Maneuvers MOSCOW (AP) — Russian army maneuvers in western territory of the Soviet Union out fresh pressure Tuesday behind the Kremlin's demand for a halt in Czechoslovakia's liberalization movement.

The Defense Ministry announced military logistic exercises are under way in western parts of the Ukraine, which borders on Czechoslovakia, and in White Russia, Latvia and the Russian Federation. It said they will continue until Aug. 10.

"The questions of organization of rear area services, supply of troops, maintenance of military hardware, and others, are being worked out," the Defense Ministry said in a statement published by the government newspaper Izvestia. "Logistics administrations of military districts and troops are taking part in the exercises and reserves and civilian motor vehicles are involved," the statement added.

The announcement gave no explanation for the timing or location of the maneuvers. But it followed up arrangements for the Soviet Communist party Politburo to meet with the Czechoslovak party presidium at some point in Czechoslovakia for a discussion of the crisis.

Rumors in the Soviet capital said party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev left Tuesday for Czechoslovakia. The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported his departure outright. There was no official confirmation available, however.

The date and place of the meeting were not announced. Speculation in Prague centered around Bratislava or Kosice.

The army exercises could provide a cover for any troops that might be preparing to invade Czechoslovakia if the party talks fail to settle the crisis.

It was only Monday night that the last of about 18,500 Russian soldiers, who entered Czechoslovakia for Warsaw Pact maneuvers in June, were reported to have left the country.

The Soviet press, in a barrage of charges against Prague's liberals, has been laying down a possible justification for any decision to intervene militarily.

The Defense Ministry announcement came after unconfirmed reports from Prague of a new Russian note.

Bowles Checks 20 Draft Boards Cited in Report

Col. Glenn Bowles, Iowa director of the Selective Service System, said Tuesday that he had sent a questionnaire to the 20 local draft boards charged by the Ames Anti-Draft Union with giving out misinformation to registrants.

The Anti-Draft Union conducted a survey in June in which they polled 20 draft boards. A report on the group's findings, released Friday, said that the draft boards were giving out about 40 per cent incorrect information.

Bowles said that the questionnaire was sent to determine if such a survey was ever actually taken and to clarify how it was conducted. Some of the questions on the questionnaire include:

- On what approximate date did the Anti-Draft Union members visit you?
- Did they advise you that they were conducting a survey?
- How did they conduct themselves?

Bowles said he was checking into the charges in this manner since it appeared that the survey was a bit confused. In one case when the survey said that the information it asked for wasn't posted on the bulletin board, it was. The clerk had posted the information on the front of the door so it could be read even when the office wasn't open.

An analysis of the Anti-Draft Union report appears on Page 2 of today's Daily Iowan.

Divers Recover Body Of Iowa City Teenager Drowned in Quarry

Divers recovered the body of an 18-year-old Iowa City youth early Tuesday afternoon from 35 feet of water in an abandoned quarry.

The youth, Charles Bombel, whose guardian is Calvin Geyer, 1402 E. College St., drowned Monday afternoon while he and 10 other youths from Iowa City were swimming.

The quarry, which is about 100-feet deep in places, is near Cedar Valley and the Cedar River, about five miles northeast of West Branch.

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Workers will return to their jobs this morning to complete preparations for the meeting of the Republican National Convention, a CBS Television official said Tuesday night.

Bill Leonard, a CBS vice president in charge of the network's operation at Miami Beach, said an agreement on union jurisdiction over a new piece of television gear was reached in negotiation Tuesday night.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) posted pickets around Convention Hall Saturday and stopped all work on the GOP meeting place as a result of the dispute.

"Representatives of CBS and IBEW on assignment in Miami Beach have reached an agreement concerning the disposition of the dispute over the operation of the Videograph device," Leonard said in a prepared statement.

GIs Stop Red Advance; AF General Shot Down

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. 9th Division infantrymen intercepted and turned back today a company of Viet Cong troops moving toward Saigon from the Mekong Delta, the U.S. Command reported.

The interception came after a stepup of enemy shelling and other actions in the country. One of those actions killed the deputy commander of the U.S. 7th Air Force, Maj. Gen. Robert F. Worley, 48.

U.S. headquarters said the 9th Division of about 115 men in a fight 18 miles south- west of Saigon. U.S. casualties were put at four men killed and seven wounded.

3 Arabs Hijack Israeli Airliner

PARIS (AP) — A passenger of a hijacked Israeli airliner that was forced down in Algiers Tuesday by Arab commandos said one of the hijackers tasted a drop of blood of an injured crewman and said, "It's good, the blood of Israelis."

The passenger, Don d'Allessandro, an Italian priest, was one of 20 non-Israelis released by Algeria and flown to Paris later in the day. The Israeli El Al Boeing 707, seized on an early morning flight from Rome to Tel Aviv, carried 38 passengers and 10 or 11 crewmen. The crewmen and 15 Israeli passengers were not allowed to leave Algiers.

Hit-Run Driver Starts Off Chain Of Trouble Here

Iowa City Police Tuesday night continued to search for a hit-and-run driver of a stolen car who is believed to have stolen two other vehicles after causing a four-car accident Tuesday.

Police said an unknown man driving a car stolen in Des Moines struck the rear of a car driven by Maurice E. Martin, 40, of 809 Willow St., at the intersection of Dubuque and Jefferson Streets about 5:15 p.m.

The impact caused Martin's car to strike a car driven by Donald W. Herdman, 31, of 609 Keokuk Ct. Herdman's car then struck a car driven by Pamela Sandage, 26, of 1606 Lakeside Apts. Police said no one was injured in the accident.

According to Miss Sandage, Herdman and Martin, the driver of the stolen vehicle sped away from the accident. They were unable to give police a description of the man. The license number of the stolen vehicle was taken, however, and reported to police.

A short time after the stolen car was found abandoned in the 100 block of Iowa Avenue, a car belonging to State Sen. Robert J. Burns, 15 Bedford Ct., was reported stolen from a parking place in downtown Iowa City. Police said they believed Burns' car was stolen by the driver of the first stolen car.

It was found later one-half mile north of Rapid Creek Bridge.

A third car was stolen Tuesday night and police said they believed the theft was by the same person. The third car, belonging to George M. Brown, 647 Emerald St., was stolen from a downtown street.

ed Adj. Gen. S. T. Del Corso to go to Cleveland to confer with Stokes.

He said that since police reported the disturbance was not of riot proportions, the state had no immediate plans to order the National Guard into the area. He added, however, that officer personnel of guard units were being alerted.

Witnesses said the shooting started when five men opened fire on a passing police task force car at Beulah Avenue and Lakeview Road.

The car, riddled with bullets, backed off and called for help.

Police surrounded the building and took what cover they could find to stay in darkness. Police said they shot out the headlights of a car that pulled out of a nearby driveway.

Two of the wounded officers were identified as William McMillan, 35, who was hit in the head, chest, abdomen and thigh, and Richard Hart, 33, who was described simply as having been shot several times. Police said shouts came from inside the apartment house: "We'll shoot anything white."

Police said a fire broke out at East 125th and Superior Avenue, a few blocks north of the shooting. The fire department was called and a policeman said, "You better send an escort with them."

The airline said later three Jews — non-Israelis — were flown to Marseille while 12 Israeli passengers and the all-Israeli crew were held.

The other three passengers aboard were the hijackers, the airline's office said.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Prime Minister Levi Eshkol called the hijacking "highway robbery" and asserted Egypt "must assume some of the responsibility." He claimed the commandos' headquarters is in Cairo.

The Algerian government, which held the $6 million jetliner, backed but did not participate in the Arab fight against Israel in the war of June 5-10, 1967.

A Danish passenger said in Paris that one of the hijackers had taken over the controls himself and brought the plane down in Algiers to a good landing, but the story conflicted with an Algerian press account that the hijackers' role was only to radio Algiers for landing instructions.

The nearest yet to an official report on the incident, the statement of the Algerian press service, said the copilot of the flight was injured by one of the three hijackers. After that, all the crew members followed the armed men's instructions, it added.

The copilot's injury was reported minor.

Father d'Allessandro said that when the injured crewman was brought from the cockpit to the rear of the plane, drops of blood fell on some tableware. The priest said one of the gunmen wiped his finger across one drop of blood, touched it to his tongue and then remarked: "It's good, the blood of Israelis."

The priest added that he and two other priests showed their pectoral crosses and medals and this won them kind treatment. One hijacker, however, told them, "If you are Catholic priests you had better pray."

An Arab guerrilla organization, the Front for the Liberation of Palestine, said in Beirut that one of its units did the hijacking. They aped hijackers who landed 13 U.S. planes in Havana this year.

Two Americans were among the passengers. One was Rina Uziel, 23, of Brooklyn, N.Y. The other was Gabriel Gaiz, 17, a student from Long Beach, Calif.

Both flew to Rome Tuesday night from Paris.

They and other passengers who returned to Rome quoted the hijackers as declaring they were seeking an important diplomatic letter.

The hijackers were described as courteous and almost friendly men who told the passengers not to panic and who spoke many languages, including English, Arabic, Hebrew and French.

Budget-cutting pains

America has grown, changed, improved and modernized considerably since the days of the Pony Express. Indications are that this changing, modernized America will continue in its dynamic pattern.

Yet, while the rest of the country is modernizing, the mail delivery system is in danger of returning to a semi-Pony Express situation.

The U.S. Postmaster General, W. Marvin Watson, voiced his fears about cutbacks in mail service and delivery to a Senate committee Monday. Watson said that without increased, not cut appropriations, the mail in the U.S. would be ceased on Saturdays and eventually limited to four days a week for delivery.

The volume of mail is increasing and the costs of delivery are also on the rise. The planned federal cutbacks in funds would cause a loss of 83,000 postal workers over a four-year period. During this time, mail volume would increase 9 billion pieces each year.

Although the Senate goal of a reduction in government spending is good, some decision must be reached on certain agencies that need to expand, not contract services.

Obviously, the postal authorities have no alternative but to reduce service if they are given a spending cut that puts them back to 1966 operation level with a 9 billion piece a year mail increase. However, this is an alternative that the postal authorities should not have to consider.

Government defense spending could be cut a little and the result would more than cover the postal needs. A cut in government spending is good only if it does not adversely affect the citizens of the country.

Four day instead of six day mail delivery is ridiculous. If we can send people to the moon, at least we should be able to receive their correspondence on Saturdays.

'Green Berets' said financed by taxpayers

To the Editor: John Wayne's "The Green Berets" will soon be showing Iowa City moviegoers that wars are better than ever.

Wayne has been doing in bad guys for years — "Redskins," "Japs," and now "VCs" have fallen under the blank cartridge fire of six-guns, B.A.R.s and M-16s. In the movies Wayne can pick off a running man at 129 yards with a band held .45 (in Army slang, this pistol is called the "John Wayne Rifle"). The way this movie tells it, the Vietnam "thing" can turn an average man into a brawny, hairy-chested, hell-raising Freedom Fighter.

Taxpayers have been cheated by this movie, for John Wayne has produced this profitable piece of crude "entertainment" largely at taxpayer expense. According to an arrangement under Defense Department Instruction 54-10, government agencies, including (and particularly) the military, can and do give their cooperation to producers of films that reflect advantageously on the United States. The Pentagon and the military were most happy to cooperate with John Wayne on "The Green Berets," giving him Fort Benning, Ga., as a screening ground, soldiers as extras, and planes, choppers, rifles, mortars, machine guns, grenade launchers and whatever equipment was needed for the sake of realism. So taxpayers have already paid for this movie through Pentagon subsidization.

Theatre patrons should not let Wayne do them in as he does the "bad guys" — they should boycott this movie.

All-Around-Critic Ralph Nader To Turn Guns on Autos at UI

Ralph Nader, 34-year-old lawyer spotlighted in the news by his success as a self-appointed lobbyist for safety and health legislation in the last four years, will speak at the University at 8 p.m. next Wednesday in the Union Ballroom. His topic will be "Unsafe at Any Speed," which is also the title of one of his books.

Tickets will not be required for the Summer Session Lecture, which will be open to the public. Nader, a native of Winsted, Conn., is the son of a Lebanese immigrant who arrived in the States in 1925 and opened a restaurant which he still operates.

A graduate of Princeton University and the Harvard Law School, Nader has lived most of the last four years in Washington, D.C., where he first gained national attention through a one-man crusade for automobile safety.

Nader's book "Unsafe at Any Speed," published in 1965, has been followed by articles on such subjects as inadequate inspection of fish-processing plants, lack of meat inspection, and drug safety. He has written for such magazines as Atlantic Monthly, The Nation, The Economist and The New Republic.

In a January issue, Newsweek called Nader the "mainspring of a consumers' movement practically dormant since Upton Sinclair gored the packers of diseased and filthy meat with his book "The Jungle" back in 1906." Last summer Nader wrote an article for The New Republic titled "We're Back in the Jungle" and dealing with the lack of meat inspection.

During the past two years, Congress has passed laws setting federal standards for which he has crusaded in the areas of auto safety, flammable fabrics, clinical laboratories and the meat packing industry.

Nader's influence appears to reach organizations outside the government, also. For example, his criticism of the wide use of dental X-rays last year was followed by the issuing of a recommendation by the American Dental Association to its members that they stop making dental X-rays a standard part of dental examinations and use them only when they are a necessity.

Nader recently was sharply critical of television sets which were found to emit dangerous levels of radiation. Another subject he has been investigating is heart transplants, asking such questions as these: Who should get artificial hearts? Under what conditions and warranties? At what price?

Pueblo Irks Mrs. Bucher

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Lloyd M. Bucher, wife of the commander of the captured intelligence ship USS Pueblo, was described Tuesday as being displeased by the apparent lack of communication between the White House and relatives of the ship's officers and crew.

She also was said to be displeased with the federal government's handling of the negotiations for the release of the ship and the men, who have now been held by the North Koreans for six months.

The description came from Miles Harvey, a San Diego attorney representing Mrs. Bucher, at a news conference arranged by a group of congressmen.

"I can state unequivocally on her behalf she obviously is not satisfied with things as they have been going," Harvey said.

Among those arranging the news conference were Reps. William J. Scherle (R-Iowa), Bob Wilson (R-Calif.), Lionel Van Deerlin (R-Calif.) and Charlotte T. Reid (R-Ill.).

Mrs. Bucher attended and read a statement, but said she could not answer questions because of her emotional condition. Questions were handled by Harvey as her attorney.

Apology Needed For Crew's Return

TOKYO — Deputy Premier Pak Sung Chul of North Korea says the crew of the Pueblo will not be released until the United States apologizes for its "criminal acts," the North Korean news agency reported Tuesday.

In a broadcast monitored here, Pak was quoted as saying: "The U.S. imperialists must fully realize that they can never get the crew sent back . . . unless they make an apology . . . and give assurance that they will never commit such crimes again in the future."

"If the organizers of the crimes refuse to assume the responsibility for the crimes of the crew of the Pueblo, then the crew will have no alternative but to pay an appropriate price by themselves."

Engineer Unit Honors Rouse For Services

Hunter Rouse, dean of the College of Engineering, has been elected an Honorary Member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Society has announced.

The honor is given annually to no more than five persons who have rendered "distinguished service that contributes significantly to the attainment of the goals of the engineering profession."

As director of the University's Institute of Hydraulic Research from 1944 to 1965, Rouse supervised 33 doctoral students in their dissertation projects and was instrumental in employing some 200 other students from all parts of the world in the Institute's research program. In connection with his own research, he has served as consultant to more than a dozen governmental, educational and private organizations.

In 1948 Rouse received the George Westinghouse Award of the American Society for Engineering Education (ASEE) for "excellence in engineering education," and in 1958 he received its Vincent Bendix Award for "outstanding contributions to engineering research." He was the first member of the ASEE to receive two of its four major awards.

In 1963 the American Society of Civil Engineers granted him the Theodore von Karman Medal for "distinguished achievement in engineering mechanics."

Houston Doctors Install 7th Heart

HOUSTON — A surgical team at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital performed its seventh human heart transplant in less than three months Tuesday and its second in three days.

The team's key surgeon said such operations now are an effective means of treating terminal heart conditions.

The latest heart recipient is Henry W. Jurgens, 57, a lathe operator from Beatrice, Neb. A hospital spokesman said several hours after surgery that Jurgens was responsive and alert, continued to improve and had no real problems.

Report 'exposing' Iowa Draft Boards bogged down in opinions, errors

A report prepared by nine members of the Ames Anti-Draft Union claims that much of the information given to registrants by local draft boards is misleading and false.

But the charge almost becomes lost in the report's unscientific procedure, inaccurate statistics and highly personal opinions, and this lessens the report's credibility.

Several members of the committee went to 20 local boards in central Iowa and asked the clerks 16 questions about draft laws and procedures. Each interview lasted from 10 to 15 minutes with the questioner posing as an uninformed registrant of the county. After the questioners left the interview, they wrote the answers to the questions down.

The method used is subject to inaccuracy since the questioners had a vested interest in the matter (all Anti-Draft members), thus making their reactions to the statements subject to prejudice; and the answers to the 16 questions were trusted to memory.

The report broke the answers to the questions down into four groups: satisfactory (S), qualified (Q), vague (V) and incorrect (I). In appendix 1 under each question that was asked the responses were categorized either S, Q, V, or I.

The report says there were 93 I responses. However, addition of the I responses in appendix 1 adds up to only 81 I responses. Similarly, the report lists 25 Q responses and 159 S responses when addition only yields 24 and 139 respectively. Only the V responses add up to the same number in the appendix and in table 1.

The total number of responses (S, Q, V, and I) is 312, when the figures in the report's table 1 are added. Yet the total number of responses when added from the itemized list in appendix 1 is 279.

These figure discrepancies make a reader wonder how carefully and scientifically the report was prepared.

However, either the report's figures or the other set of figures show that the incorrect answers do not add up to 40 per cent of the total, as the report says. Either set of figures shows that the percentage of incorrect answers was approximately 29 per cent.

A figure of about 40 per cent can be derived from adding the V answers and the I answers, but this is not what the report states.

If statistical errors were the only errors in this report, they could probably be overlooked as bad arithmetic or amateurish gathering of data. It seems obvious that there was no scientifically trained or qualified researcher on the staff which prepared the report.

But the survey suffers in other areas as well.

A survey of this nature should be as objective as possible and should stick to its defined purpose, which is to show the truth of the charge that "local draft boards in Iowa give false or misleading information to registrants seeking advice on Selective Service laws, regulations, and procedures."

Phrases such as, ". . . lives have been lost in an unjust war as a direct result of false or misleading Selective Service information," don't seem to fit in the report in either of the above cases. Even if these things are true, they are not relevant to the survey.

Specifically, this survey does not show that misleading information by local boards caused anything. The survey only shows, as its stated purpose says, that there might be misleading information being given by draft boards.

And it is not even certain that the boards are giving misinformation. The survey says that the answers are incorrect in a lot of instances, but the rating system is not too objective. For instance, if a clerk said that she didn't know the answer, her answer was called vague. This seems strange. It seems better for her to say that she didn't know than to make up an answer which could more easily be incorrect.

Finally, the report slips into personal feelings about why the draft is not "fair and just." It is not for this survey to say whether the system is fair or just. These statements only detract from the objectivity of the report.

Norman Van Tubergen, a staff member of the Mass Communications Research Bureau, said that what the survey does is basically present opinion as fact. These questions really have no correct or incorrect answers, he said. What this survey really shows is that the draft board opinions do not agree with the Anti-Draft Union member's opinions. This could be a valid survey, since a survey can be conducted to show anything, but the survey should say this is the intent.

Tubergen said that the scientific methods used in the survey were very incomplete. He said that a great many of the supporters of this kind of a movement are from the intellectual movement and that they may be offended by the inadequacy of the survey.

"While I agree with this politically, scientifically the survey is a farce," Tubergen said.

However the report does have good points. It reveals that registrants may be getting misinformation. For example:

• The boards in Webster City said that the regulations were not public information. According to the Anti-Draft members, the records are public information.

• The Eldora board said that it didn't have a copy of the regulations.

• The report showed that at least eight boards in Iowa didn't have the name of the local government appeal agent posted in a conspicuous place, as the Anti-Draft Union members say the regulations require.

• And the report showed that Boone County didn't even have a government appeal agent.

The report also suggested improvements that the State office of the Selective Service System should issue more frequent information bulletins; that a person other than the clerk should be appointed as a local advisor to registrants; that local boards should be ordered to comply with regulations by posting the names of the advisor and appeal agent; and that copies of the regulations, laws and related material should be placed conspicuously in each of the local board offices, and registrants should be encouraged to consult them.

While there may be evidence that misinformation is being given, because of the faults of this survey it is difficult to tell how much misinformation is really being given.

Valuation In County Up

Total assessed valuation for 1968 of Johnson County real estate outside Iowa City has increased nearly $6.5 million over the 1967 valuation, according to County Assessor Verne Pottofff's preliminary figures.

Total assessed valuation has been placed at $49,131,724. Pottofff said the increase was the result of both new property and re-evaluation.

The biggest single rise in valuation was in farmland. Pottofff said farmland being turned into residential lots was the cause of much of the rise in valuation of rural property.

Pottofff's preliminary figures show assessment valuation for rural property at $21,998,117 — an increase of nearly $4 million over 1967 figures.

Other sizeable increases over 1967 figures came in the category of commercial and residential buildings.

Pottofff said the increase in valuations of commercial and residential buildings was due mainly to the addition of new property and re-evaluations.

Theatre Celebrates 32nd Anniversary

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first in a series of four stories on University Theatre.

By NED NEVELS
And JUDY BURRELL

Theater productions at the University have long been noted for their professionalism and polish, but the modern equipment of the University Theatre overshadowed the spartan conditions under which drama began at the University over 40 years ago.

The present theater building will celebrate its 32nd birthday this fall, yet it still manages to carry its years with remarkable grace.

Prior to 1935 when the University Theatre was completed, productions were held in Macbride Auditorium on a stage that was only 18 feet from front to back. The stage area had no provision for stage rigging or set changes.

"We built the sets in an old two-car garage just north of the present Law Building," said Arnold S. Gillette, professor of dramatic art and director of the Theatre. "After that we moved the set shop to the second floor of the old North Hall (between Macbride Hall and University Hall). We had to carry the sets in pieces through the corridors and assemble them on stage."

While productions were still being staged in Macbride Auditorium, the set shop was moved to an old church at the present site of Phillips Hall, Gillette said. Most visitors to University Theatre are unaware of its age, Gillette said, but they go away impressed with the careful thought that went into its layout and construction.

"Plans for the theater were being thought over, worried about, revised, revamped and redone for about 15 years before the building was constructed," he said.

The first formal meeting to organize support for the University

Theatre was held in 1920, Gillette said. The original plans called for a theater which would seat 1,200, to be incorporated in the new Union being planned at that time.

The proposed theater would not have had center aisles. Instead there were to be porticos on either side of the auditorium from which the audience could take its seats.

In 1928 different campus organizations, including the University Players and other theater-oriented groups, organized fund-raising luncheons and printed brochure campaigns that netted $50,000 in pledges for the theater construction, Gillette said. An additional $20,000 was required before a bond could be issued to cover the remainder of the estimated $225,000 the theater would cost. The year ended before the money could be raised.

The Great Depression slowed progress on the fund-raising, but the work continued under the direction of E. C. Mabie, professor and director of the Department of Speech and Dramatic Arts.

Plans were altered to build the theater on a site north of the Union. However, this land was not available so the entire project was moved to the west bank of the Iowa River. A decision was made to incorporate the theater with the entire fine arts complex, Gillette said.

A Rockefeller Foundation grant and money raised by various organizations still did not equal the lowest bid submitted on the project, forcing administrators to cut down on the frills and analyze their needs more carefully, Gillette said.

Bargaining with all the contractors involved cut the total cost to within $7,000 of the money available. This last $7,000 was received from the University Contingency Fund so that construction could begin, Gillette said.

"During that time, either by happenstance or careful planning, we caught most of the errors in the building plan," he said. One error in construction was the omission of an orchestra pit. This was deliberately left out, Gillette said.

"It was deliberately omitted because the director at that time thought that he did not want musicals or operas presented in the theater," Gillette said.

He added that if the theater were being re-built today the orchestra pit would be included. Even without the orchestra pit, Gillette said that the theater had managed to produce musicals.

"We've probably had our longest runs and greatest attendance on musicals," Gillette said. Directors have come up with various gimmicks to solve the orchestra pit problem. In "Finian's Rainbow," by Burton Lane and E. W. Harburg, the orchestra was replaced by two grand pianos placed among the audience. Another solution involved hiding a 28-piece orchestra behind the stage and using closed-circuit television to project the orchestra director's cues. At other times the orchestra was costumed and used on stage.

When the construction was finished in late 1935 the theater had a shell but little else. Lighting equipment and stage parts were not included in the final plans because of the limited budget.

"The scene shop was cut from the plans and later built as an addition connecting to the stage," Gillette said. The scene shop and the stage provide an uninterrupted space some 130 feet long, Gillette explained, making it simple to build the set and then wheel it on stage.

"If we didn't have this capability, productions like the Summer Repertory Theatre wouldn't be possible because of the many set changes," he said. "That's probably one of the first things that theatre people visiting our plant comment on — how lucky we are to have a large scene shop."

Gillette said that many new theaters were going up around the country where the designers had not given enough consideration to a scene shop or construction room.

"Many people seem to think that the scene shop is just a place where you pound nails and saw wood so that any space left over in the theater plant after all the other facilities have been cared for goes to the scene shop," he said.

The University building is considered by many theater people to be one of the best constructed university theaters in the country, according to Gillette. It seats 477 in 17 rows of single tier seats. These seats are approached by three porticos on each side, Gillette said. The stage itself is 42 feet deep by 50 feet wide and joins a workshop that is 42 by 75 feet. The stage has a revolving floor 36 feet in diameter.

In the building are housed classrooms, offices, a costume shop, dressing room, box office and rehearsal rooms, making the theater a self-contained unit devoted to dramatic arts, Gillette said.

One of the most successful plays at the theater, Gillette said, was a production of "Peter Pan," written by James Matthew Barry, done here in the early 1940s.

"The theater was packed with children who sat entranced by the play," Gillette said. "By the end of the second act children had scooted down to just below the stage apron and before the play was over they were sitting on the stage and in the wings. I don't think I've ever seen a play that was better received."

'Obscenity' Charge Levelled at Fortas

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee asked Abe Fortas to return for renewed hearings on his nomination as chief justice after a Southern foe bradishd magazines Tuesday filled with nude photographs in charging Fortas' court rulings have encouraged obscenity.

The move threatened to delay a Judiciary Committee vote on Fortas' appointment until after Labor Day and could imperil his prospects for confirmation by the Senate in the face of the filibuster already planned.

Fortas finished four days of testimony last Friday.

Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.), displaying three magazines filled with graphic photographs of nude men and women in suggestive poses, asked that Fortas be invited back. Thurmond lashed out at recent Supreme Court rulings overturning obscenity convictions.

Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.), the committee chairman, agreed to invite Fortas to return. Fortas' foes are expected to take advantage of Senate protocol for a one-week delay after the hearings before a floor vote is taken, and no meeting is considered probable the following week. Congress will quit in early August for the national political conventions and return after Labor Day.

"I couldn't conceive how Fortas could come before the Senate before September," Eastland said.

The Mississippi senator closed the hearings Tuesday at the end of their ninth day, with the proviso that they would be reopened if Fortas accepted the request to return.

Thurmond pulled out the sex magazines to support his attack on Supreme Court rulings which he said helped spur a spread of hard-core pornography.

One magazine called "Week-end Jaybird" included color photographs of naked men and women facing each other. Another labeled "Hawk" contained a series of photographs of nude men.

Mass Killing, A Month Ago Baffles Cops

GOOD HART, Mich. (AP) — Police Tuesday tried to unearth traces of the now-cold trail of a killer — or killers — who shot to death all six members of a wealthy Detroit area family in their summer home about a month ago.

Michigan State Police dispatched their mobile crime laboratory to the Lake Michigan cottage of Richard C. Robison, 42, who was found shot to death Monday along with his wife and four children.

Police said preliminary investigation indicated the six had been dead for about a month. The bodies were discovered Monday by a caretaker who said he last saw the family June 24.

"It was mass murder," said Lt. Col. Melvin Kaufman, deputy director of the Michigan State Police. Meanwhile, Emmet County prosecutor Wayne Richard Smith and under-sheriff Clifford Fosmore issued a joint statement saying "we feel these murders were pre-meditated."

Capt. Guy A. Babcock, who has been assigned to the case, said there have been no clues and no apparent motives discovered yet.

"We won't be completely sure of anything until the crime lab gets done," he said.

Babcock said autopsies would be performed and that until then it would not be certain what type of weapon or weapons were used or how many shots were fired.

The other victims were Robison's wife, Shirley, 40; their sons, Richard, 19, Gary, 16, and Randall, 12; and daughter, Susan, 7.

Robison lived in Lathrup Village, near Detroit, where he ran an advertising agency and published Impresario magazine, which covered the arts.

Chauncey A. Bliss, owner and caretaker of Blisswood, a resort area in Good Hart, found the bodies after a suggestion by a neighbor.

He said Mrs. Randall Moore of Coldwater, living nearby, complained of an odor coming from the Robison cottage, secluded at the end of a narrow, twisting road in a heavily wooded area at the foot of a steep embankment.

Bliss said earlier this month his father, Chauncey P. Bliss, noticed bullet holes in the window of the cottage and checked under the house after he smelled a strong odor. Bliss said he disregarded his father's suggestion to investigate further because he thought the window shots were a result of kids using pellet guns.

Governors Catch Presidential Pitch

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan of California said Tuesday that some "rather sizeable movements" have sprung up, designed to make him a Republican candidate for president. He repeated that he has not solicited specific delegate support.

Earlier, New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller said, "I am the one who has the best chance by far of winning the presidency." He said neither Reagan nor Nixon, the front-runner, would win as things now stand.

Governors trooped into a large ballroom set up for news conferences, throughout the day while attending the National Governors Conference, which ends today.

Reagan has been traveling extensively, especially in the southern states, meeting with Republican delegates. He is going today to Birmingham, Ala. In each case, however, he said his appearances were the result of invitations, that he spoke at fundraising dinners and talked party business.

Gov. Tim Babcock of Montana rebutted Rockefeller's assertion that Nixon could not win in November.

"Nixon has strength in the key states from coast to coast," said Babcock, who is Nixon's western regional chairman.

SAILING CLUB TO MEET — The Sailing Club will meet at 7 tonight in the Union Indiana Room. Slides will be shown.

"I want personally to underline their concern," he said.

More than 250 large labor contracts expire from August through December, Johnson said, and "there are key contracts to be settled in steel, aerospace, longshoring, coal mining, airlines and railroads."

The President noted in a statement that his Cabinet Committee on Price Stability has called for restraint by business and labor in price and wage decisions during what he called "an especially critical time in our battle against inflation."

Jansen Thinks Tire Iron Used In Death of Iowa City Woman

The murder weapon used in the beating death of Mrs. Mary Stanfield, 81, of 444 Second Ave., July 3 was apparently a tire iron, according to Johnson County Atty. Robert Jansen.

Jansen said Tuesday that the tire iron was being sent to the FBI for analysis. He said that he and city Detective Lt. Charles H. Snider picked up the tool when they flew to Texas to question Laurence P. Holderness, who is charged with the murder.

Jansen also said that the murder probably took place during an argument.

According to Jansen, the time of the murder is still uncertain, although he places it in the early afternoon of July 5. He said that Mrs. Stanfield was probably watching television or writing before she was killed.

Jansen said that clay, dropped from a car, was found on Mrs. Stanfield's lawn July 6 and that the clay had helped the investigation of the murder by placing Holderness at Mrs. Stanfield's.

Holderness was arrested by FBI agents July 11 in Granbury, Tex., about 40 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

Holderness waived extradition and was returned to Iowa City July 18. Jansen declined to say why Holderness had returned so readily.

Gun Control Foes Win Round

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of gun control legislation won a series of tests Tuesday as the House accepted several amendments to a bill to ban mail order sales of rifles, shotguns and ammunition.

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-N.Y.), floor manager of the administration-backed bill, said one of the amendments would "open up loopholes as wide as the Grand Canyon."

Final action on the bill, which would also prohibit over-the-counter sales of firearms to non-residents, was put off until today.

Despite the acceptance of several amendments which he opposed, Celler expressed belief the House would accept the bill. He said also he would attempt to get the House, on a record vote, to reverse Tuesday's acceptance of what he termed the weakening amendments.

The House approved 99 to 56 an amendment by Rep. John D. Dingell (D-Mich.) that would permit licensed collectors who deal in guns as relics and curios to buy and sell firearms in interstate commerce.

Another amendment accepted by the House, 77 to 56, which Celler said he would seek to reverse, would exempt the National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice from the prohibition in interstate shipment of firearms and ammunition.

Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes (D-Fla.), another gun control opponent who sponsored the amendment, said it would enable the board, a military-civilian governing body, to ship ammunition to rifle clubs run by high schools and colleges.

Celler said it would benefit only the National Rifle Association, an opponent of gun control legislation.

The House also voted, 82 to 77, to exempt shotgun shells and rimfire .22 caliber bullets from the prohibition against selling ammunition through the mails.

This amendment, by Rep. Clark MacGregor (R-Minn.), would leave only ammunition for handguns prohibited under the legislation.

The House refused 179 to 84 to require the states to license the owners of firearms under federal regulations.

The House rejected an attempt to require the states to give mandatory prison sentences to persons convicted of using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Few Non-Whites Work for State

DAVENPORT (AP) — More than half of 53 state agencies surveyed said they had less than six nonwhite employees, the Iowa Civil Rights Commission reported Tuesday.

The commission released some of the results of reports requested by Gov. Harold Hughes to determine if state government was complying with his executive order on fair employment practices.

The commission said 15 agencies reported they had no nonwhite employees, and 13 other agencies said they had less than six nonwhite workers.

The Civil Rights Commission refused to identify the agencies, but it did say that the attorney general, auditor, Dairy Industry Commission, State Fair Board and Supreme Court failed to file reports.

Upward Bound Trip Assailed As Waste of Funds by Riley

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — State Sen. Tom Riley, (R-Cedar Rapids), Tuesday leveled a blast at a federally-financed Coe College antipoverty program, and the program director immediately took issue with the lawmaker's criticism.

At a news conference in Cedar Rapids, Riley said college officials spent $2,000 in federal funds to fly 40 young people to Minneapolis to attend a pop concert.

The program director, Paul Uhlinger, a visiting professor of philosophy at Coe, said Riley's attack was based on misinformation.

Riley, who is the unopposed candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman in Iowa's Second District, said he supports the Upward Bound program in preparing underprivileged children for college.

"What appalls me," he said, "is that this money is being blatantly misused."

Uhlinger said the total cost of the Minneapolis trip was $1,800 and it involved 50 persons, all senior high school students or older leaders.

Uhlinger said part of the Upward Bound project is a study of Minneapolis as a major American city and most of the youths involved in last week's flights were either heading or returning from a two-week stay in the Minnesota city.
