Americans Take 2 Nobel Prizes In Science Fields

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Americans completed a clean sweep Wednesday of the 1968 Nobel prizes in science, getting the awards in physics and chemistry.

Luis W. Alvarez, 57, of the University of California at Berkeley won the prize in physics and Norwegian-born Lars Onsager, 64, of Yale University was given the one in chemistry.

They join three Americans who earlier this month shared the prize for medicine and physiology. The peace prize went to a Frenchman and the literature prize to a Japanese. Each prize this year is worth a record $70,000.

"I'm deeply gratified and highly excited to think that I, once one of the boys, could receive this honor," Alvarez said in Berkeley.

Reached at Pasadena, Calif., where he is attending a meeting of the National Academy of Science, Onsager said: "Well, it is hard to say just how I felt when I was told. Obviously, it was a bit of a surprise."

The Swedish Academy of Science cited both men for work so technical it is difficult for laymen to understand. In fact, when Onsager was asked for a simple explanation of the theory that won him the prize, he exclaimed: "Oh brother: Can you give me a few hours — no, better yet, a few days to figure it out."

The academy said that Alvarez's discovery of hitherto unsuspected particles in the atom was one of "the decisive contributions to elementary particle physics."

It added that he found a "large number of resonance states, made possible through his development of the technique of using hydrogen bubble chamber and data analysis."

The "resonance states" referred to the extremely short-lived particles Alvarez and his research team found for the first time in 1960 in bombarding the atom. This put to rest a theory popular in the 1950s that the atom consisted of about 30 particles.

While the theory of the atom may seem to have little practical value, it was increasing knowledge of the atom that led to nuclear bombs and power plants.

Onsager was cited for his theory of "reciprocal relations" which the academy said "laid the foundation for the thermodynamics of irreversible processes." It added that the theory has played "a dominating role for the modern development of theoretical thermodynamics."

Hitchhiker Safety Concerns Police

Iowa City police are on a drive to protect hitchhiking University coeds, according to Police Chief Patrick J. McCarney.

Hitchhiking has become one of the local law enforcement officials' greatest concerns, McCarney told The Daily Iowan.

While hitchhiking last week, two University coeds were picked up and raped. Bernard N. Descoteau, rural route 2, West Liberty, was arrested last Thursday and charged with two counts of rape.

In connection with pleas for no hitchhiking, the police department is sponsoring a female-oriented program which teaches basic methods of defense. Included in this program is a 12-minute movie called "Attack," plus a general discussion by police officials.

Members of the police department are currently visiting all sorority houses with this program.

A pamphlet which the department has just completed is also being distributed. The pamphlet is called "Scream! Scream! Scream!" and contains general rules for women to avoid attack, robbery, and murder.

McCarney said that although hitchhiking in Iowa City was illegal only when a person stood on the traveled part of a street, all enforcement officials preferred that there be no hitchhiking at all.

He explained, "A car that stops on a busy city street to pick up a hitchhiker is a real danger to traffic behind the car. We are also concerned about the safety of the hitchhiker who usually gets into the car of an unknown person."

'Educationalizing' Seen As Trend by Parkinson

By JAN METZGER

After he was introduced as "Britain's sophisticated version of Laugh-in," C. Northcote Parkinson proceeded to intermingle his satirical type of humor with what he believes to be "The Crisis in leaves with something less than that," he said.

The question people continually ask, Parkinson said, is "Are we spending enough on education?"

People always seem to reply that more schools, equipment, and teachers are needed, he said.

"The reason people give for this is that 'we have to keep ahead of the Russians,'" Parkinson said he believed that the wrong question was being asked. The question should be, "Are we educating in the right manner?"

Parkinson said, "We allow the classes today to hold the blind and the maimed. We don't eliminate any. Everyone is trained equally."

One reason Parkinson thinks this is allowed is because, "few people fail to be more sensible than the system by which they are produced."

The idea that everyone should have an equal education has resulted in the belief of some people that, "the one way to see that your child has the best is to see that others get nothing better."

Parkinson also sees the first rate professors on campus as spending most of their time sitting at conferences in Washington, and the second grade professor spending all his time in administrative duties. The student actually has contact with neither of these types of professors.

"The graduate assistants do the actual work of the University and get no distinction for it, Parkinson said. This is the hierarchical system which leaves the student feeling deprived of an education.

Parkinson coined the word "educationalizing" to explain the trend in education today. The old method was for a teacher to take a difficult subject and make it seem simple.

In "educationalizing," Parkinson said, "the teacher takes a simple subject which he has felt to master and makes it seem impossible."

Old Cap Frowns On SDS Rally, Vows Discipline

Two members of the University administration said Tuesday that the proposed Students for a Democratic Society's (SDS) rally Friday was "unauthorized" in the eyes of the administration.

M. L. Huit, dean of students, and Roger L. Augustine, associate dean of students, said they hoped SDS would go through proper channels to get the rally approved.

Augustine said that if SDS went through with the rally as planned, students participating might be subject to disciplinary action.

SDS has stated that it will notify University Pres. Howard R. Bowen through a letter of its intent to hold the rally "in violation of the Code of Student Life." The radical group has scheduled the rally for 11 a.m. Friday on the east steps of Old Capitol.

SDS has not made application at the Office of Space Utilization and Assignment, which is responsible for scheduling group meetings at University facilities other than the Union, to use the Pentacrest area.

SDS also said that it would use loudspeakers at the rally. At the Hawkeye Student Party (HSP) teach-in on Oct. 21, Huit refused students permission to use loudspeakers because he said they might disrupt classes in nearby buildings.

Augustine said that SDS would be permitted to use the Union patio for the rally if it wished.

"Time, place and manner are reasonable constraints on free speech," Augustine said. "They are recognized by the courts as being such."

"We do not object to the place SDS plans to hold the rally. We object to the time. If SDS wanted to hold the rally at the Pentacrest after 4:30, that would be permissible."

SDS May Use University Buses For Protest Trip

University buses will probably be used to transport members of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) to Des Moines Tuesday for an Election Day protest march planned by the radical student group.

SDS turned in a form to the Office of Student Affairs Wednesday requesting that the trip be approved by the University.

Roger L. Augustine, associate dean of students who heads the office, said that, since SDS is a student organization recognized by the Student Senate, the trip would probably be approved.

Member of SDS said that if the trip were approved, they would apply to use University buses for the trip.

Quentin E. Messer, supervisor of the University Motor Pool, said that buses were available for use Tuesday.

However, before SDS can gain final approval for using University transportation, Messer said that the group must have sufficient money in its student account to cover expenses for the trip.

The trip would cost SDS approximately $135 for each bus, the exact cost depending on the mileage traveled and the seating capacity of each bus.

SDS Asks Permission For Statehouse Rally

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Executive Council will act Monday on a letter from Students for a Democratic Society requesting permission to hold an Election Day rally on the west Statehouse steps.

The letter said the election-day activities will center around statements that "The elections are a hoax . . . The negotiations (in Paris) are a hoax . . . The arguments for law and order are a hoax . . ."

Paris, Saigon, D.C. Stir with Rumors Of Bombing Halt

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The United States and North Vietnam appeared Wednesday to have moved nearer a breakthrough toward peacemaking. There was a fresh spurt of mysterious diplomatic activity, and the Prime Minister of Japan said late Wednesday night that he expected the United States to announce suspension of bombing "within several hours."

In Saigon, however, President Nguyen Van Thieu said there had been no agreement on a complete halt in bombing North Vietnam. He declared the bombing could not stop until Hanoi agreed to de-escalation of the war and to talk directly at the peace table with South Vietnam.

While the White House and State Department maintained a tight "no comment" on the substance of President Johnson's secret meeting Tuesday with Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, reports from elsewhere added to the suspense:

• In Bangkok Foreign Minister Thanat Kohman told newsmen upon returning from a U.S. visit that the United States and North Vietnam had entered "final stages" of bargaining about a bombing halt and the start of full scale peace talks. The main point still to be settled is reciprocity by Hanoi for an end to the U.S. air attacks, he said.

• In Paris, U.S. negotiator W. Averell Harriman and North Vietnam's Xuan Thuy held their weekly meeting without visible progress. However, Cyrus R. Vance, No. 2 man in the U.S. delegation, did not show up for the session. Informed sources said Vance had worked most of the night at his Paris office and that there had been several secret U.S. — North Vietnamese contacts recently.

• An official of an allied country said in Paris that "everything is settled" on the bombing halt question, but gave no further explanation.

• In Saigon, where U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth G. Bunker was continuing an unusual series of meetings with President Nguyen Van Thieu, there were unconfirmed accounts that the two were preparing a joint statement in which South Vietnam would at least accept a cessation of the bombing.

• Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, campaigning for the presidency, said in Philadelphia a "new level of diplomatic activity" on Vietnam is under way and "the next move is up to Hanoi." He said he did not know whether there might be a new peace move before next Tuesday's election "and I'm not really in a position to tell you if I knew."

Thieu made his remarks at a ceremony commemorating the Vietnamese war dead. All ambassadors and the chiefs of all allied forces in Vietnam attended with the exception of U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Gen. Creighton Abrams, the U.S. Vietnam commander.

Thieu thus appeared to maintain the hard line position he has voiced continually since negotiations on the bombing halt opened between Washington and Hanoi. Asked what was the stumbling block to the bombing halt and expanded peace talks, Thieu replied: "I don't see any reciprocal response from Hanoi."

Huong's off-the-cuff statement and Thieu's continued hard line could be indications that Saigon is trying to maintain as much pressure on Washington as possible not to compromise any major points in its original bomb halt offer.

South Vietnamese officials have noted before that since the United States is the only one of the allies bombing the North, Washington has the power to halt the air war over the North.

William J. Jordan, spokesman for Harriman's delegation in Paris, fielded reporters' questions cautiously after the peace talks session. To most queries he answered: "No comment."

In one exchange, however, he hinted indirectly at a bargaining progress. He was reminded that last week he had said it was discouraging that U.S. questions were not being answered by Hanoi's envoys and he was asked: "Are you of the same opinion now?"

"The problem of peace is a very complicated one, and it would be surprising if there weren't some questions centering on the issue which were unanswered," Jordan said, "and I wouldn't read too much into that, or too little."

His answer left the impression that Hanoi had replied — in part, at least — to Washington's latest peace package.

The North Vietnamese spokesman, Nguyen Than Le, put a 30-minute time limit on his normally long postconference press briefing and answered questions evasively.

He spent most of the news conference reading extracts from a prepared statement Ambassador Xuan Thuy had read at the envoys' meeting.

'Crime in Streets' Is Major Issue, Franzenburg Says

By MERLIN PFANNKUCH

"Crime in the streets" is the number one domestic issue in the United States today, according to the Democratic candidate for governor, Paul Franzenburg.

Speaking at a press conference in the Union, Franzenburg, who is now state treasurer, said that he had learned that law enforcement was the major concern that was expressed by people as he traveled throughout the state.

Franzenburg said that he had spent most of the last two days discussing his extensive law enforcement proposal with law enforcement officials. He said his proposal came out of a need to draw together the various facets of lawlessness.

He urged the revision of Iowa's entire criminal code.

"The Iowa Bar Association has been working on such a revision for five years, but no one in the state government knows of their proposals," Franzenburg said.

Franzenburg said that, if elected, he would ask a legislative committee to bring these proposals out in the open.

He expressed concern over the "complete and utter distortion of the facts about the state financial situation."

Franzenburg said his Republican opponent, Robert Ray, had accused the Democrats of "friending away state funds."

"Horsefeathers," Franzenburg said. "He knows that this is a complete and absolute falsehood."

Franzenburg also accused State Sen. Dave Stanley, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, of making the same distortion.

"These men know better and it is bad business to deliberately mislead the people of Iowa, especially to gain public office," Franzenburg added.

—Local Candidates Sound Off on the Issues—

Nolan, Mrs. Doderer Racing for State Senate Seat

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of interviews with local candidates for state office. Friday, a series on the local candidates for county offices will begin. It will include candidates for county attorney, county sheriff and county board of supervisors. Today's interviews are with Democrat Minnette Doderer, who is presently state representative from Johnson County, and Republican D. C. Nolan, who was Johnson County's state senator from 1952 to 1964. Mrs. Doderer and Nolan are candidates for state senator.

By MERLIN PFANNKUCH

Vying for the State Senate seat from Johnson County are two Iowa Citizens — Democrat Minnette Doderer and Republican D. C. (Cliff) Nolan.

Minnette Doderer, 45, has been state representative since February, 1964. During the last session of the legislature she sponsored or co-sponsored 23 bills which were enacted into law — more than any other legislator.

Mrs. Doderer was chairman of the House Standing Committee on Public Health in 1965 and was elected by fellow Democratic House members Minority Whip in 1967. She is presently director of the National Society of State Legislatures and is a member of the National Legislative Leaders Conference. She is also the new Democratic National Committeewoman from Iowa.

She received a B.A. in economics from the University. She is married to Fred Doderer, personnel director of the University, and has two children, Dennis, a college sophomore, and Kay, a high school senior.

D. C. Nolan, 66, was a state senator from 1952-1964, but was defeated in his bid for re-election in 1964. He is a post-majority leader of the Senate. While in the Senate he was chairman of four major regular committees — Insurance, Highways, Sitting, Judiciary — as well as chairman or member of several special interim committees. He also served as chairman of the Iowa Council on Interstate Government and as a member of the Governing Board of the National Council on Interstate Government Cooperation.

He was born in Guthrie County, and attended Creighton University in Omaha. He has practiced law in Iowa City since 1931 and has served as attorney for Iowa City, Lone Tree, and Swisher.

He also has served as special county attorney, and special assistant attorney general. In recent years he has spent considerable time in helping build up some family-size grain and livestock farms in Iowa. In the community, he has held many positions including chairman of the Johnson County Red Cross, chairman of the Community Chest (now Community Givers), president of the Iowa City Senior Chamber of Commerce, and has served in several other capacities. In 1927 he married Margaret Schwertley and they are the parents of eight children and have 11 grandchildren.

The following questions were presented to the two candidates by the Daily Iowan in separate interviews:

• What is the major issue in your campaign for senator?

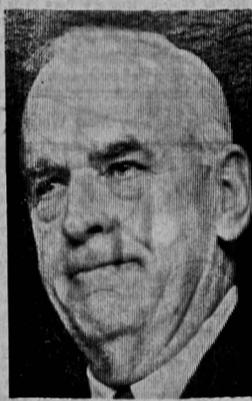

Doderer: I feel the major issue is the progress that we've had in Iowa in the last six years and the continuation of this progress.

For example, we've made great gains in education and in governmental reorganization during the administration of Gov. (Harold) Hughes. We have bettered Iowa's educational facilities and have increased state aid to schools and universities.

I want progress, and if I can't work for progress, I don't want to return to the state legislature.

Nolan: The major issue is to tell the

An old story

The old problem of absences popped up again at Tuesday night's Student Senate meeting.

Only 17 of 29 senators were present for the roll call. This meeting was the first since the Senate, meeting with barely a quorum, voted to limit the number of absences for any senator to five.

Unfortunately, this problem has been a part of the Senate's history. A former Daily Iowan editor, returning to campus for the Centennial celebrations last week, mentioned that the campus had not changed markedly since he was in school. The first story he saw, he said, was one that he or any other former staff member could have written by memory. That story concerned the Student Senate, meeting with just enough members for action, taking steps to curb recurring absences.

Although the situation is getting to be a little funny in an ironic sense, the problem is really getting bad. Both HSP and SRA campaign vigorously for Senate seats and vow to serve the University's students well. As soon as the senators are elected, this campaign talk dies, and absences become the practice, not the exception.

This situation is ironic in that most senators complain about what they term an apathetic student body. The students just can't be interested in their campus life, these students claim. And yet, what sort of example does the student government set for other students?

The answer is, a very bad one.

The Senate should be trying to gain the respect of the students it represents. If all students on campus see a disinterested group of persons who say they are the student government, why should the total student population show any interest in their government either? If the Senate is boring, it should be made interesting. If it is useless, it should be eliminated. But if it is a good organization, it should have an interested membership.

Dorm changes in order

The latest University handout on why everyone should live in the dormitories around campus says students can save money and time on transportation, utilities, rent, laundry and furnishings.

"In addition, you can save hours of time for extra study or socializing," the handout reads.

A University dormitory costs a resident about $4 a day, or $984 for the academic year, the handout says. If living off campus costs a student more than $4 a day, it's no saving, according to the handout.

The newest handout makes a lot more sense than the glorified picture of the dormitories that was mailed out to all students last spring. But it still ignores some of the problems of dormitories.

For a student who wants to live on a dormitory schedule, who wants his meals prepared at a certain time each day and who wants to live in a standardized place, a dorm is ideal. But to advertise dormitories without stating some of the known disadvantages is unfair.

Dorms are very noisy and very disorganized. The noise is mostly a structural problem; the walls are thin, and even with soundproofing material in the ceilings, noise is magnified. The organizational problem is one that comes from the required dormitory living.

The people who live in dorms now live there mainly because they have to. Students who are unmarried have to live in dormitories until they are 21-years-old.

Many of the students in dorms wish they were living off campus. There is nothing wrong with the dormitory system for some people, but others get tired of that way of life. So mixed in with freshmen, who usually think the dorms are fine, are sophomores and juniors who are living there because of University regulations. Unity of dorm actions or activities and coordination of actions and activities are more difficult because of the heterogeneous group of residents.

Dorm prices should not be competitive with apartments and other forms of off campus housing; they should be considerably cheaper. Along with this lower price, the University should allow students to live anywhere they please. This combination would fill the dormitories as well as the present practices do.

If a student wishes to save money in his housing, he could choose a dorm room. If a student wishes to get an education without worrying about housekeeping, he could choose a dorm room. If a student wants total independence and no restrictions, he could find an apartment.

The dorm prices now rival or exceed the cost of living off campus. Combining the money-saving factor with the increase of independence an apartment offers, most students would prefer an apartment.

But a few changes in policies could make a lot of difference.

the leprechaun

by Terry Seal

Oy vay! It has been another of those weeks. Since it's so close to election day, I think I'll make some political endorsements. But first, more important things.

Like many other honorable institutions on this campus, the library is a natural habitat for many otherwise unsheltered blockheads. It seems there was this notice of an overdue book which I had once taken out of the library a few weeks ago and returned. They thought that I still had the book, and so they planned to crucify me when they got the chance.

When I produced the missing book from the stacks, the librarian explained that sometimes these things happen. It seems they check books in without consulting their files. But, as she explained, "only when they are in a hurry..."

Politics this year seems to be a veritable Alice in Wonderland of nonsense. By far and away, the best qualified candidate is Pigasus. He (I think he's male; he might be a she) is the candidate of the Youth International Party. He was nominated in Central Park for President, but the fuzz busted the convention, saving no pigs are allowed in the city. I guess there are really enough pigs running for President.

This leaves us with a choice between the March Hare, the Cheshire Cat, and the Mad Hatter. In descending order of their ability, first is Hubert (March Hare) Onecree, best known as the butt of the Dump the Hump campaign. He's late for a very important date, always. Maybe some day he'll learn that a liberal is not someone who did something yesterday. After his shenanigans in Chicago, he deserves to be retired to Podunk U. As a college professor he can talk his head off about yesterday to a captive audience.

Next on the honorable list is Richard (Cheshire Cat) Nixon. He has the wonderful ability to grin and disappear. He wouldn't debate on the boob tube so everyone could see that the new Nixon is still the old Nixon. Right now, it looks as if he is going to win the election. And he knows it. His response is to just grin. Then he fades away until his next scheduled appearance. Poof! There he goes again. Tricky Dickey wants to win.

The last possibility is (as The New Republic's TRB named him) that "hillbilly Hitler," George (Mad Hatter) Wallace. And mad he is. His candidacy is a good gauge to the amount of stupidity and bigotry prevalent in any area. There is an inverse relationship between intelligence and support for Wallace. I've even seen a few bumper stickers for him in Iowa City. Very few.

Since one cannot vote against a particular candidate, one must either swallow his conscience (impossible) and vote for one of the above characters, or write someone else in. This, I submit, is the best solution.

And to this end, I intend to write in Eugene McCarthy for President. He hasn't a chance in a million to win. But then again, his whole candidacy has overcome one impossibility after another. If there is enough constructive protest vote for McCarthy this year, then he will be a candidate to be reckoned with in 1972 and a political power in the interim. One of these days, an honest man is going to be elected; I should live so long.

Iowa politics presents something of the same pattern of electing the lesser of the two evils. However, Hughes did support McCarthy, which took political courage. His policies are constructive and intelligent. He is going to be a fine Senator. Franzbrun too has enlightened policies. Even though he is hanging onto Hughes' coattails, his abilities outshine his opponent's. Both Republicans, Stanley and Ray, espouse the politics of yesterday.

UI Senate called 'bunch of puppets'

To the editor:

Every day I pick up my Daily Iowan and read about the courageous efforts of our Student Senate asking either Howard Bowen, the Administration, or the Board of Regents to please give the student a voice in the running of our University.

Is the Administration going to listen to these cries from our duly elected Senate? NO! Who ever listens to a group that has neither power nor authority to back up its actions? Even the student lacks enthusiasm — at the voting polls and in backing their proposals. The Student Senate is and, unless changes come about, always will be a bunch of puppets dangling from red tape — operated by the Administration, for the Administration — exerting no real power, no voice, just taking up uninformative space in a newspaper.

Will one person answer this complaint with a truthful account of what major recommendations concerning the lives of University students that the Student Senate has successfully passed and also having received the endorsement of the Administration to go ahead? As a student here at the University, I would like to be informed of the difference there is between this Senate and the one I witnessed four years ago in high school — the Dance Committee!

Bavarian Symphony concert to feature Haydn, Hindemith

The Minuet to be heard here tonight in Franz Joseph Haydn's last symphony is one commentators cannot resist setting to verse. Sigmund Spaeth would have us remember the stately dance tune with

In the days of the Georges
The costumes were gorgeous
The dance of the Court
Was the Min-u-et.

Bernard Jacobson prefers to apply the "O'Reilly Minuet Test." If you are in doubt whether a given Minuet is by Haydn or Mozart, says Jacobson, sing it to the words "Are you the O'Reilly that runs this hotel?" If the tune fits the text, it's Haydn; if it doesn't, it still could be Haydn, but it's much more likely to be Mozart. (The test works because the third movements of Haydn's last dozen symphonies start with an upbeat, a device Mozart seldom employs in a similar situation.)

Composed in 1795, not 1785 as tonight's printed programs say, Haydn's "Symphony No. 104 in D Major" is one of his most popular, and is often used as a textbook example of the form of a classical symphony. Haydn himself seems to have thought highly of it, for he refused to compose another symphony that could rival it during the remaining 15 years of his life.

Although the work is sometimes called the "London" symphony, a better handle is the alternate nickname of the "Bagpipe." This description is aptly derived from the droning of the cellos and French horns at the opening of the final movement as the violins play a Croatian folk song. (It seems that we just can't get away from having words associated with the melodies of this piece.)

The "Bagpipe" symphony is to open tonight's concert by the famed Bavarian Symphony Orchestra of Munich, now on their first American tour. Music lovers from as far away as Kansas City will be here to hear the ensemble conducted by Rafael Kubelik. Kubelik is the conductor of the Czech Philharmonic (a group whose concert here last year is fondly remembered) before leading the Chicago Symphony Orchestra for 3 years.

Another work to be heard is the "Symphony in D Minor," the only symphony composed by Cesar Franck, and the first phonograph record ever owned by the late University President Virgil Hancher. Written in 1889 by a saintly individualist, the remarkable thing about the piece is not its form (for instance, it has only 3 movements instead of the usual 4), but that Franck retained the imagination to write it at all during the period he was Professor of Organ in the stagnant musical atmosphere of the Paris Conservatory.

At the first performance one of the composer's colleagues loudly criticized the piece, asking, "Who ever heard of writing for the English horn in a symphony?" Since Haydn and Beethoven didn't use the instrument in their symphonies, what right did Franck have to use it? We can presume citing the beautiful English horn melody in "Harold in Italy" performed here last week by the University Symphony Orchestra and composed in 1834 by one of the Conservatory's own former students, Hector Berlioz, would not have been accepted as adequate defense.

Also to be heard tonight will be Paul Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphoses on Themes of Carl Maria von Weber," one of Hindemith's major works, and a fitting prelude to his monumental "Mathis der Maler" that will be performed here on November 20 by the University Symphony Orchestra.

Union Board's interesting "Glory Be!" will be presented Saturday night in the Union Wheel Room. There is no admission charge for the event, which starts at 8 p.m. The musical purpose of the program is to demonstrate how the music of the church is keeping pace with the times. Excerpts from the Folk Mass, and the liturgies of the Lutheran, Baptist, Roman Catholic and Christian churches will be presented at the informal gathering by musicians from local congregations.

'Reform UI — or burn it to the ground'

To the editor:

The New Left on this campus has made some rather serious efforts toward reforming this school. Demonstrations, teach-ins and discussions with the school administration have been held. The results have been dismal. The new Code of Student Life is more repressive than the old one. Students are still trained to kill in the ROTC department and are sent off to Vietnam to maim and destroy innocent human beings. Graduates are either sucked into the LBJ death machine or are fed into the corporate capitalist structure.

The future prospects for reform look equally dismal. Perhaps the lying, hypocritical wishy-washy University administration could be forced into doing something if it could do anything but it has a 14th century Iowa legislature behind it that regards any attempt to change anything as heresy, treason and real down to earth nitty gritty evil.

A meaningful alternative exists, however. We can make this school serve the interests of the people but we could make it stop serving the interests of the enemies of the people. We could burn it to the ground and raise the black flag of anarchy over the ashes.

Of course, we cannot run merrily off to University Hall with torches in our hands just like that. The orderly processes of law must be preserved at all costs or else we would just have chaos. It will be necessary to ask the government of the state of Iowa for permission to burn the University to the ground and it will be necessary to ask the Iowa City Fire Department for permission to do this burning inside the city limits of Iowa City. How about it, state legislators? You don't want us to run the school our way and we don't want you to run it your way. Can we compromise on no school at all?

I would like to open this matter for public discussion with attention directed toward the following two questions: (1) Can this University be reformed? (2) If it cannot, should it be destroyed?

Colleges can set own regulations, U.S. court rules

(Reprinted from the Chronicle of Higher Education, Oct. 14, 1968)

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Federal courts have the power to intervene in the educational process only where "erroneous and unwise actions in the field of education deprive students of federally protected rights or privileges," a four-judge federal panel here has ruled.

The four judges outlined standards of procedure by which all such cases involving students at public colleges and universities will be handled in the future. Their outline was contained in a court order arising from two cases involving student discipline which came before the U.S. District Court for Western Missouri.

Although the standards are applicable in that court only, it is anticipated that they will influence the handling of similar cases in other courts throughout the country.

The standards allow institutions a great deal of leeway in establishing rules of conduct. Said the court:

"If it is true, as it well may be, that man is in a race between education and catastrophe, it is imperative that educational institutions not be limited in the performance of their lawful missions by unwarranted judicial interference. Attendance at a tax-supported educational institution of higher learning is . . . optional and voluntary. . . . By such voluntary entrance, the student voluntarily assumes obligations of performance and behavior reasonably imposed by the institution of choice relevant to its lawful missions, processes and functions.

"These obligations are generally much higher than those imposed on all citizens by the civil and criminal law."

The court continued: "So long as there is no invidious discrimination, no deprivation of due process, no abridgement of a right protected in the circumstances, and no capricious, clearly unreasonable, or unlawful action employed, the institution may discipline students to secure compliance with these higher obligations as a teaching method or to sever the student from the academic community."

Student discipline, the court said, is "a part of the teaching process," except in the cases of irrevocable expulsion for misconduct. Even then, "the process is not punitive or deterrent in the criminal law sense, but the process is rather the determination that the student is unqualified to continue as a member of the educational community," the court said.

A court should intervene in institutional student discipline, said the panel, only when there is:

- "A deprivation of due process, that is, fundamental concepts of fair play;
- "Invidious discrimination, for example, on account of race or religion;
- "Denial of federal rights, constitutional or statutory, protected in the academic community; or
- "Clearly unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious action."

In its order, the court also took notice of students who have been disrupting the activities of colleges and universities.

"There have been, and no doubt in the future there will be, instances of erroneous and unwise misuse of power by those invested with powers of management and teaching in the academic community," the court said.

But, it continued, "When such misuse of power is threatened or occurs, our political and social order has made available a wide variety of lawful, nonviolent, political, economic, and social means to prevent . . . misuse of power."

Reader praises Huit's behavior

To the editor:

In your editorial in Tuesday's issue of The Daily Iowan you claim that Dean M. L. Huit's note to the demonstrators at the anti-Marine sit-in "made the administration look humorous and a little panicked." Perhaps the humor and panic is rather in the eye of the journalistic beholder. You claim that the administration "went to the trouble of almost causing trouble," because they were prepared for the sit-in. It is an elementary fact of life that every time a university administration acts, it stands the risk of causing trouble, nervous or otherwise, for someone. Would you prefer government-by-epilepsy on this campus?

While I agree in general with the sentiments of the majority of the demonstrators, I also agree with Dean Huit's position. Huit acted with restraint and wisdom. This is more than can be said for those few self-righteous thugs who tried so desperately to "confront" him.

Veddy Old School— That's C.N. Parkinson

By JOANNE WALTON

The man is definitely Old School. He looks like a Cyril Northcote Parkinson. He looks rich stodgy. Do not wager your sweet bippy.

Parkinson noted in an interview Wednesday afternoon that, for the second time in his life, he is in the U.S. during the last days of a presidential campaign.

"My first thought is that the office of president is almost impossible to fill," he observed. "You're asking more of one man than he is likely able to offer."

He compared the U.S. executive government to that of European nations — "even those unfortunate enough to be republics" — and deplored the vesting of all responsibility in one man "who's required to work 25 hours a day."

Of the idealism of young people protesting the Establishment, Parkinson said, "To make a perfect world, we need perfection in mankind, and as we are far from perfect we must be doomed to disappointment."

He said before individuals could seek a world organization for peace and love, they should take a more realistic approach and strive for unity on one continent.

The mass media took bows and boos from Parkinson, as he defended them against charges of fostering violence in their audience, and knocked them for "making romance compulsory."

He said he had seen no facts or figures which would convince him that violence as depicted by the media encourages the same behavior in the public.

Parkinson, an author, historian, playwright, and international lecturer, said he makes a point of visiting the campus bookstore whenever he speaks at a college or university. The University of Iowa, he said, has "all the symptoms of a very literate school." He also complimented the University on its attractive campus, calling Old Capitol "the handsomest building many a university can claim."

HSP to Discuss Protest for Dow

The Hawkeye Student Party (HSP) voted Wednesday night to hold an open meeting Friday night to discuss a possible demonstration against Dow Chemical Co. recruiters, who will be on campus next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The meeting was tentatively scheduled for 6:30 p.m. in the Union Harvard Room.

HHH Makes N.Y. Plea

NEW YORK (AP) — With time growing short, Hubert H. Humphrey campaigned Wednesday on the sidewalks of New York, appealing to thousands at a street corner rally to prod friends, relatives and neighbors to the ballot box.

"I need every vote we can get," the Democratic presidential candidate declared in making a traditional election year appearance in Manhattan's garment district before a crowd that filled about three blocks.

Humphrey recalled that Harry S. Truman and John F. Kennedy — two other presidential candidates waging uphill campaigns — had appeared "at this same spot" to seek help and then had gone on to victory.

"Now," said Humphrey, "I ask for your help as I never asked for it before."

It was Humphrey's fifth campaign visit to New York City and he returns once more Saturday.

Humphrey's top political aide, William Connell, said that Humphrey has an excellent chance of winning without the election being forced into the House of Representatives.

He predicted that Humphrey — "if the momentum continues" — had a good chance of carrying seven of the biggest states, excluding California, which he termed "wildly unpredictable," and Illinois.

Nixon Calls HHH a Follower

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon journeyed Wednesday to Hubert H. Humphrey's Minnesota and called the Democratic presidential nominee "a man who has trotted meekly along behind his master" — Lyndon B. Johnson — and cannot now be expected to lead.

The Republican nominee for the White House took a calculated campaign detour to put in an appearance in Humphrey's home state, and declared that his rival's "failure to exercise his intellectual courage has been his most serious failure."

Nixon flew from Syracuse, N.Y., to Rochester for an airport rally which drew a crowd police estimated at 7,500. There were waving Humphrey placards, chants of the vice president's name from some in the predominantly Republican turnout.

Angel Flight Project Aids Children at Nelson School

By ELLEN REZNEK

Learning to zip zippers and button buttons has been made more interesting for the children at the Nelson School in Iowa City due to the efforts of the Angel Flight pledge class.

The Nelson School is a public school for moderately retarded children that is part of the Joint County System of Cedar, Johnson, Linn and Washington counties. Twenty children between the ages of 6 and 12 attend the school.

Over the summer, for a service project, 20 members of the Angel Flight pledge class made an activities book for the Nelson School children, according to Karla Martensen, E2, Clinton, who was in charge of the project.

These books were designed out of brightly colored cloth and cardboard and contain pictures of children, animals, princesses, knights and comic strip characters, such as Peanuts and the Flintstones. Incorporated into the pictures are zippers, buttons, hooks and eyes, buckles, snaps, shoelaces and bows.

The books are used by the children to learn fastening and tying skills and to develop better hand coordination, according to Mrs. Gloria Kimble, who suggested the project to the Angel Flight members when they asked about service projects they might do for the children. Mrs. Kimble, director of special education for Johnson County, supervises the Nelson School.

She said that the bright colors and variety of pictures contained in the books made learning these manipulative skills more fun and interesting for the children.

According to Mrs. Eve Bloch, one of the teachers at the school, the children are "fascinated by all the things they can do with the books."

Mrs. Kimble explained that these books not only help the children develop skills that allow them to take care of themselves but may also help them develop enough hand coordination so that as adults they can find jobs using these manipulative skills.

Mrs. Kimble said that up until about 10 years ago moderately retarded children like those at Nelson School might have spent their lives in an institution. However, she explained that it has been discovered that these children can learn enough skills to get along in society.

She said that the emphasis now is on keeping the children in their homes and communities and in discovering ways to teach them what they can learn. She said that the use of activities books is one of the ways that has been found to be effective in teaching these children.

There are two classes taught in the Nelson School, one containing students between the ages of 6 and 8, which is taught by Mrs. Sheryl Foster, and one for children between the ages of 8 and 12, which is taught by Mrs. Bloch. Mrs. Kimble said that the children in the classes come mainly from Johnson County and that they represent all socio-economic levels.

The classrooms at the school look very much like kindergarten classrooms. They contain small tables and chairs and several picture books and toys for the children to play with.

The main goal of the school is "to help the children blend in with the rest of the community and to become a functioning part of it," according to Mrs. Kimble.

The children are taught a variety of skills at the school, she explained. They learn cleanliness and how to take care of themselves. For instance, Mrs. Kimble said that the activities books that the Angel Flight members made will help the children learn buttoning and fastening skills so that they can dress themselves.

Each child learns to perform simple tasks such as sweeping the floor, wiping the tables and feeding the school's goldfish.

The children are also taught "functional reading." They learn their addresses and telephone numbers, and they learn to recognize their names in writing and to read signs.

In addition to these social skills, the children are also taught recreational skills such as drawing, singing, playing ball and swimming.

Mrs. Kimble explained that the school acts like an extension of the home. She said that the school teaches tasks that the parents work on at home.

She commented, "When these children are taught practical tasks by using personal experiences that they can relate to, they learn well and do remember."

Mrs. Kimble said that when these children become adults they can be employed in a sheltered workshop environment doing manipulative tasks such as sorting and packaging in an assembly line setting.

She commented that the manipulative skills the children learn from the Angel Flight activities books will be the type of skills they will use when they work.

She explained that in Iowa City moderately retarded people are employed by the Goodwill Sheltered Workshop. She said that the people employed there live at home and receive pay for their work at the workshop.

Mrs. Kimble said that in a sheltered workshop program moderately retarded people can be "limitedly self-supporting and can become contributing members of society by performing tasks that are needed by society."

She complimented the Angel Flight pledge class members for their "creative work" on the activities books and for their concern in helping the children develop to their full capacity.

Wallace Marches South

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP) — American Independent candidate George C. Wallace told a campaign crowd here Wednesday that the United States will "be relegated to a second class power" unless law and order are restored in the nation.

Wallace swung southward into the Appalachian foothills of West Virginia after a tumultuous reception at Detroit Tuesday night which began with frenzied jeers and wound up in a fist-swinging, chair-throwing, free-for-all touched off by the appearance of noisy hecklers.

Musicians Strike 3 TV Networks

NEW YORK (AP) — The men who make music on network television shows walked out in a contract dispute early Wednesday, but it did not appear likely the strike would force any shows off the air.

Tickets were outside the studios of the American Broadcasting Co., the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York City.

Involved in the strike were 800 members of the American Federation of Musicians, AFL-CIO, who struck at midnight. The 11 contract with the networks expired July 31.

Since most shows are taped ahead of their viewing date, the immediate problem for the networks was limited.

Girl in Room Gets Student In Hot Water

GRINNELL (AP) — Noting that Grinnell College "cannot permit such incidents to go unchecked," Pres. Glenn Leggett dealt out punishment Wednesday to a student who allowed a girl to stay in his dormitory room for five days.

Leggett ordered that Richard Schneirov, a 20-year-old dark-haired junior from Chicago, vacate the dormitory room by Nov. 11 and find housing off the campus.

Schneirov also was placed on "conduct probation" for the remainder of the academic year, with the warning that any serious violation of "standards of acceptable conduct" could lead to his suspension or dismissal.

The college president decided on the punishment after the college's Judicial Council, comprised of three students and three faculty members, deadlocked on the matter.

Schneirov said he was unhappy with Leggett's order. He said he would prefer to live in the dormitory, but he did not know what his next move would be.

The student admitted that he violated a college regulation that restricts dormitory visits by members of the opposite sex to 2 to 5 p.m. each Sunday and to three evening "open houses" each semester.

The girl was discovered in Schneirov's room by a maid last month.

'Funny Girl' Play Slated For Dad's Day Weekend

A traveling theater group will present a stage production of the musical hit "Funny Girl" at 8:15 p.m., Nov. 9, in the Iowa Field House.

The musical, sponsored by the Central Party Committee, is one of a number of events scheduled during the U of I Dad's Day Weekend.

Tickets for the show will be on sale from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday at the Field House and from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday in the Union Box Office. Tickets will also be sold from 10 a.m. until show time the day of the performance at both the Field House and Union.

Prices of the tickets will be $3.50, $3 and $2.50.

Tickets for the production may also be purchased by mail and held at the Field House Box Office until 7:45 p.m. the night of the performance. Checks should be made out to the University Box Office.

The leading role of stage singer er Fanny Brice will feature Carmen Natiku, a member of the Broadway cast. This role brought stardom to Barbra Streisand when she appeared in the New York and London productions of the show.

Hickerson to Talk At Housing Parley

Iowa City Mayor Loren Hickerson will speak on "Renewal in Iowa" at the fall meeting of the Iowa Housing and Redevelopment Association, which will be held on Nov. 13 to 15 in Des Moines.

Hickerson will speak at a luncheon Nov. 14 at the National Motor Inn.

"The Cities' Commitment to Housing and Redevelopment" will be the theme of the meeting, which is co-sponsored by the University's Institute of Public Affairs.

Mayors, city managers, housing agency officials and Chamber of Commerce members have been invited to the meeting, as well as urban renewal, planning and housing officials who belong to the association.

Among the subjects to be discussed are post-disaster redevelopment, new federal housing legislation, housing for the elderly and housing code administration.

New York Times Angers Agnew

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times was asked again Wednesday to retract editorials critical of Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, Republican vice presidential nominee, but the paper refused, a Times official said.

Harding F. Bancroft, the Times' executive vice president, said George W. White Jr., Agnew's campaign manager and lawyer, stated he felt Agnew had been libeled and the Times had taken a "dishonest action."

San Diego State Keeps Lead In AP Small College Ratings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
San Diego State and North Dakota State remained one-two in The Associated Press' small college poll Wednesday while Chattanooga moved into the No. 3 spot.

The Aztecs rolled over San Jose State 48-6 last Saturday, brought their record to 6-0 and received 14 of the 17 first-place votes cast by the regional panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Their point total was 312.

North Dakota State, which whipped Morningside 42-14 for a 7-0 record, drew 269 votes without being named on a first-place ballot.

Chattanooga, which collected one first-place vote, moved up from fifth to third after beating The Citadel 31-9.

New Mexico Highlands remained fourth, with Weber State and Tampa tying for fifth.

Eastern Kentucky climbed from 11th to seventh, Indiana, Pa., moved up one step to eighth, Morgan State jumped from 12th to ninth and Western Kentucky tumbled from third to 10th after losing to Eastern Kentucky 16-7.

Hosket Signs with Knicks

BILL HOSKET Becomes NBA Player

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Hosket, a member of the gold medal-winning U.S. Olympic basketball team and the New York Knicks' No. 1 draft choice, signed Wednesday with the National Basketball Association club after revealing he had received three other offers.

Hosket, a standout at Ohio State who averaged 19.5 points and 12.3 rebounds during his college career, refused to identify the clubs involved in the other three offers, but said all had come from the rival American Basketball Association.

Grimsley Favors Ohio State To Edge by Michigan State

By WILL GRIMSLEY
NEW YORK (AP) — Down to sea level again from 1½-mile altitude which makes for light-headedness, we try to recoup from one of our costliest weeks.

Despite a near-perfect record in the Midwest and Far West, we stubbed our toe in the East and South for 38-19 and .667. The season's average remains, however, a respectable .760.

Ohio State 20, Michigan State 18: The Buckeyes find a new quarterback in Ron Maciejowski; the Spartans bruised by the Irish.

Tennessee 25, UCLA 14: The Volunteers still are bitter over the 1967 game that got away.

California 28, Washington 20: The Golden Bears, with one of their better teams, still settling many old scores.

Notre Dame 25, Navy 14: The Irish ordinarily might have a rout, but the Midshipmen always play well in Philadelphia.

Purdue 38, Illinois 7: The Boilermakers will need Leroy Keyes for less than half the game.

Kansas 20, Colorado 18: Any team that can beat Oklahoma can make it tough for favored Kansas and Bobby Douglass.

Yale 33, Dartmouth 20: A nice day for tail-gating at New Haven but the beer turns sour on Dartmouth stomachs.

Penn State 25, Army 7: The Nittany Lions put a stopper on Lynn Moore's touchdown explosion.

Georgia Tech 24, Duke 14: The Engineers are jelling after an up-and-down beginning.

Louisiana State 10, Mississippi 0: It's Saturday night at Baton Rouge — enough said.

Texas Christian 23, Baylor 14: At this stage in the wild Southwest, take the home team. The game is at Fort Worth.

Nation's 1st Lady Jockey Admits She Just Wants to Ride Horses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kathy Kusner, the nation's first girl jockey, is a shy, almost frail lass who feels more at home with horses than people.

The Olympic rider, first of her sex to crash the hard-bitten world of horse racing as a jockey, insists she isn't a crusader. "I don't care about proving anything at all," she said Wednesday. "I just want to ride horses."

The Maryland Racing Commission bowed to a court order a day earlier and issued a license to the 27-year-old jumping show rider as the first woman ever permitted to race horses on a major flat track where betting is legal.

The slender, brown-eyed jockey said she hoped to begin racing, possibly at Laurel, at the end of November after she completed the Eastern horse show circuit. She said she already had been contacted by owners about possible racing assignments.

Miss Kusner, from Monkton, Md., was a member of the U.S. riding team that finished fourth in the Olympics in Mexico City Sunday. She is currently riding in the Washington International horse show.

Won't it be an abrupt step going from the tweedy world of jumping shows to the often seedy world of day-to-day thoroughbred racing?

"Both involve horses," she said.

Miss Kusner agreed one of her biggest problems might not be on the track but in the jockey room. Won't tracks have to provide separate dressing rooms?

"I would imagine they would have to," she smiled.

The girl jockey, who has short brown hair trimmed in a boyish bob and has thin, almost spindly legs, is 5-4 and weighs 103 pounds. The Maryland Commission turned down her bid for a license after a workout at Pimlico this year, but a court ruled the panel had refused her because of sex discrimination and ordered a reversal.

SPORTS BRIEFS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association announced Wednesday a change in rules to permit some freshmen to compete in all sports immediately, including basketball and football, if they pass a scholastic test.

The change would permit an athlete who planned to graduate in three years to compete in three varsity seasons.

An NCAA spokesman, Charles Neinas, said the rule was changed because some foreign students have the equivalent of one year in college when they enroll in American universities.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Curtis is a guy who likes to hit people. On Sundays he cracks down on the Baltimore Colts' opponents. On weekdays he takes it out on his own teammates.

Curtis was hitting the other fellow, particularly Roman Gabriel, Sunday when the Colts upset the Los Angeles Rams, 27-10. For his savage treatment of the Rams' quarterback and his inspired play, Curtis has been named by The Associated Press as the defensive player of the week in the National Football League.

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Capt. Terrence "Terry" J. Goewert, assistant baseball coach at the Air Force Academy since 1954, has been named head coach.

AMES (AP) — Iowa State football coach Johnny Majors ran the Cyclones through another heavy workout Wednesday in preparation for Saturday's game against Nebraska.

The team spent a large portion of the 90-minute drill on kick coverage and returns, play review and blocking and tackling fundamentals.

Major said sophomore wingback Jeff Allen was running better after recovering from a week-long knee injury. Allen played sparingly against Kansas last Saturday after missing a week of practice.

Nebraska has beaten Iowa State seven straight times since the Cyclones last won, 10-7, in 1960.

Officials expect a crowd in excess of 27,000 in Ames Saturday. A stadium record crowd of 26,000 saw the Kansas game.

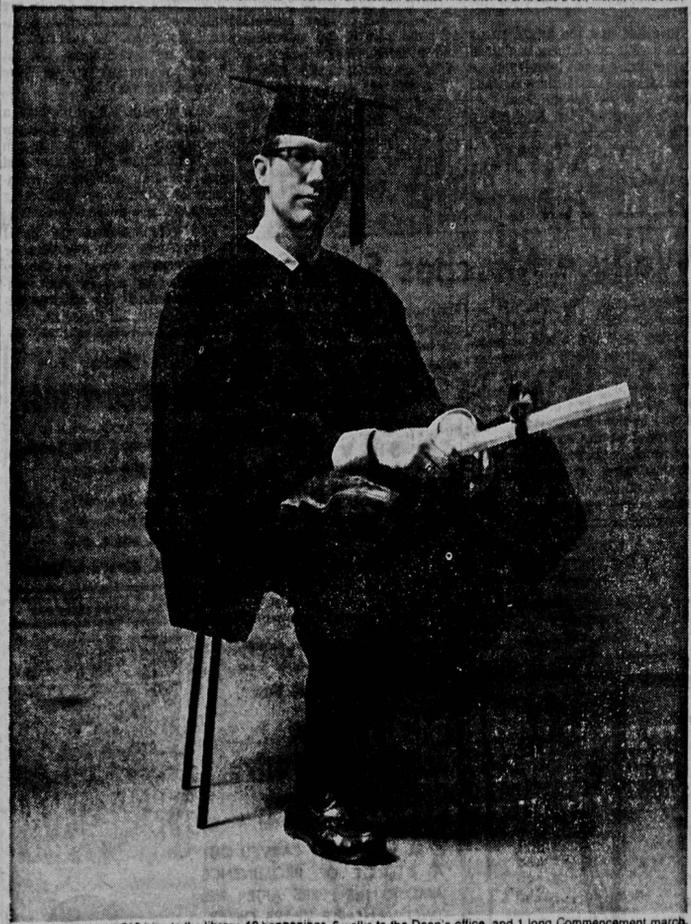

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson offered his congratulations to the U.S. Olympic team Wednesday and said "Your countrymen deeply appreciate sacrifices you made to win such a prestigious place" in the competition.

"Thanks to you," the President said in a statement released at the White House, "the world has witnessed once again the vitality, vigor and fair play which mark the American character."

—6th School Put on Probation—

Utah State Faces NCAA Charges

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Utah State University was reprimanded, censured and slapped with an indefinite period of probation Wednesday by the NCAA for violations of financial aid and eligibility rules infractions.

Arthur Bergstrom, executive assistant to the National Collegiate Athletic Association, announced the penalties against the school for violations involving one student-athlete player.

The NCAA committee on infractions charged the school's head coach helped the student pay off a loan in violation of NCAA rules and allowed the student to participate in spring practice, also in violation of NCAA rules.

Northern Michigan University was also reprimanded and censured for participating in a non-certified postseason football game while its application for NCAA membership was still pending. Bergstrom said no penalty went along with the censure.

The action against the two schools brought to six the number of institutions censured or put on probation by the NCAA. Earlier Wednesday Pan American College of Edinburg, Tex., was put on one year's probation for violations of rules governing recruiting, non-season practice and financial assistance to basketball players. St. Bonaventure and Florida State Universities and LaSalle College were put on probation Tuesday.

The NCAA made a number of policy changes and recommendations during its three-day fall meeting in St. Louis. The recommendations are to be acted upon during the association's convention this January in Los Angeles. A resolution expressing concern over the rising costs of college football was passed. The rules committee was urged to review rules affecting the problem such as limitations on the number of substitutions and the number of athletes who dress for a game.

Rookie Relies on Confidence in NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookies in the National Basketball Association have to polish old skills, learn new ones and gain confidence. Well, Tom Boerwinkle doesn't have to worry about confidence.

Every inch of the 7-foot, 270-pound Chicago rookie center from Tennessee exudes confidence.

Example No. 1: "I feel like I'm a better ball-player now than yesterday. I hope to be getting better for a long time."

Example No. 2: "It's no rougher than I thought it would be. The Southeastern Conference was tough too. They play some real head-knocking ball down there."

Example No. 3: Boerwinkle met Boston's great Bill Russell head-to-head before more than 18,000 fans in Madison Square Garden Tuesday night and neither the crowd nor Russell seemed to bother him as he scored 19 points and grabbed 19 rebounds in Chicago's 103-97 victory over the Celtics in the opener of a doubleheader.

Boerwinkle's confidence is not cockiness. Rather it stems from a real liking of the game. "I love it," Boerwinkle says. But it is work, hard work, to keep acquired skills at their peak and strengthen weak points.

"My jumping has got to improve, but my speed is adequate for my position unless I'm overestimating myself," said Boerwinkle, who gives every indication of being capable of estimating himself correctly.

Boerwinkle has now played against Russell twice, but he has yet to go up against Wilt Chamberlain of the Lakers. This will come Friday night in Los Angeles.

A NOSEY SITUATION — Dallas Cowboys' quarterback Don Meredith (left) and running back Craig Raynham take a look at a new mask they'll use in Sunday's game against the New Orleans Saints. Augustine Receives Honors

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Irby Augustine was recruited at the University of California to be a tight end, but he's glad things didn't work out that way. He's having too much fun on defense. "It's exciting because of the type of defense we play," says the junior defensive end, named the Associated Press Lineman of the Week.

"The defensive end gets to intercept passes, block punts and recover fumbles. It never gets boring," he said.

The Golden Bears, No. 8 in the current AP poll, scored a 43-0 triumph over Syracuse Saturday as Augustine led a defensive charge.

Augustine made five tackles alone, was in on four more, intercepted a pass that led to a touchdown and recovered a fumble that eventually became a Cal field goal.

Douglass Provides Direction To Kansas' Leading Offense

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Kansas has parlayed the bold genius of Coach Pepper Rodgers, the swashbuckling quarterbacking of Bobby Douglass and the nation's most explosive offense into a No. 3 rating in the Associated Press poll.

more season two years ago and now rates him one of the nation's best quarterbacks — if not the best.

With four games to play in his career, Douglass has rolled up 3,007 yards total offense — 2,235 of it by passing and 772 by running.

To go with Douglass, Rodgers has put together a blazing-fast backfield which includes Donnie Shanklin, who carries a 7.8-yard rushing average; John Riggins, who has a 6.9 mark; and flanker John Jackson, a 9.5-second track man.

"This is a good football team," Rodgers says, "but nobody will know exactly how good it is until we play the rest of our games. We've got the meat of our schedule coming up — Colorado, Oklahoma, Kansas State and 10th-ranked Missouri.

Saints Obtain Norton

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Defensive tackle Jim Norton, among six players placed on waivers by the Atlanta Falcons earlier this week, will not be reclaimed and will be picked up by the New Orleans Saints.

Norton said Wednesday he believed he and the other players, five of whom were starters "may be scapegoats" in Coach Norm Van Brocklin's cuts.

The Falcons have a record of 1-6 for the season, having beaten

New York 24-21 Oct. 13. They have won only five games in three years.

Van Brocklin replaced Norb Hecker as coach of the Falcons Oct. 2.

Other players released by the Falcons include defensive cornerback Lee Calland, a regular since he was drafted from Minnesota in 1968; corner linebacker Marion Rushing, a regular since he was chosen from the St. Louis Cardinals in 1966; fullback Brendan McCarthy, a rookie from Boston College; defensive safety Phil Spiller, picked up this year on waivers from St. Louis; and center, Joe Cerne, picked up on waivers from San Francisco.

All were regulars except Cerne.

San Diego Seeks New Grid Team

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Mayor Frank Curran said Wednesday that "feelers are out" for another pro football team to replace the San Diego Chargers if they moved because of a conflict over the stadium contract.

"I have not heard from any other football teams," Curran told his weekly city hall news conference. "but I can assure you there are quite a few feelers out to football teams looking for a place to go."

Curran said the feelers have been sent out by private individuals in the community over the past several months. He did not name any of the teams and said he had not heard from any other team.

Curran said later that the possibility of replacing the American Football League Chargers has been discussed in segments of the community since the city and the new National League baseball team negotiated a stadium contract a few months ago.

The city last week rejected a Charger request for a 60-day extension to the option period during which the contract allows the Chargers to seek "any better terms" given the baseball team.

RAIN HALTS THOMPSON— BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP) — Mickey Thompson's planned assault on the world speed record for wheel-driven cars was washed out Wednesday by a rainstorm that swept into western Utah.

County Asks Voters for New Building— County Road Facility Cramped

By JOHN NEIBERGALL

Several hundred Johnson County residents might be disturbed if they had to come home from work and disassemble their cars before the vehicles would fit into their garages.

However, problems such as this are real and have sparked a campaign by Johnson County road maintenance men to build a new garage for their equipment.

The main spokesman for the campaign is Harvey Luther, assistant county engineer in charge of road maintenance. The goal of the campaign is to gain approval in Tuesday's referendum for the construction of an adequate county shops building.

"Undoubtedly, Johnson County has one of the poorest road equipment facilities in the state," Luther said in an interview recently.

The existing county shop's building, on the corner of Benton and Capitol Streets, was built in 1925 to provide maintenance space for three trucks and a tractor, Luther said.

The shed is therefore unable to accommodate the present fleet of 46 vehicles and 21 nonmobile units which Johnson County must maintain, Luther said.

Luther described the task of preventative maintenance on county road equipment as nearly impossible because the shop's building is too small even to house machines which need immediate repairs.

The single garage door at the shop's building is not large enough to allow several road machines inside unless they are first partially disassembled, Luther said.

Another problem with the present structure is its location in a busy section of Iowa City. Snow removal and road maintenance trucks come and go in heavy traffic causing a waste of time and money, Luther said.

Luther said that demands for maintenance have risen in proportion to the "hundred-fold traffic increase" in the county since 1935 and with the extension of the 125 miles of roads in that year to nearly 1,000 miles of roads now maintained by the county.

The county shop's building called for by a resolution on the Nov. 5 ballot "is designed to meet county maintenance needs that can be forseen for 50 years," Luther said.

The proposal calls for a $208,000 bond issue. This would represent a tax increase of not more than one-fourth mill.

"In other words, if the resolution passes, the cost for every resident of Johnson County would be about $2 paid during the next ten years," Luther said.

The building would be large enough to provide additional services to help offset the cost, Luther said. He listed such services as road sign painting (now contracted for about $5,000 a year), parts storage, and storage for Johnson County voting machines.

The location for the building is within three-quarters of a mile of the center of Johnson County near the Highway 218 bypass between Iowa City and Cedar Rapids. This is two miles west of Finkbine golf course.

The land is already owned by the county.

If the building is approved, the old shop's building would be sold, Luther said.

Clayton Mahoney, chairman of the Johnson County Board of Su-perisors, concurred. "There is no possible chance that the county will keep the old shed building."

The old building is on valuable commercial land, Luther said. When a similar resolution was before voters three years ago, one bid received for the old shop's location was $72,000. Luther said that money from the sale of the old location would reduce the term of payment for the new building.

Luther said that the earlier referendum was probably defeated because there was no campaign to inform the people of the need for better facilities.

He said that apathy may have also caused the defeat of the bond issue in 1965.

"We take roads for granted," Luther said. "Unless we fall in a big hole or unless traffic is suddenly stopped by a snowstorm, roads are just there."

Candidates Split on Lowering Of Voting Age, Amendments

people of Iowa the financial position of the state.

We will have difficulty in maintaining the present level of state appropriations, most of which I feel are necessary.

I believe the present state budget is false in that the state surplus was used for operating expense. The next budget won't have the $100 million in surplus as base as did the last budget. I believe that a sound budget must be worked out in the legislature.

• Which of Iowa's five proposed constitutional amendments do you favor?

Doderer: I'm not only in favor of all five amendments, but I also helped get them started in the 1965 General Assembly. I was the only one who spoke for having both houses of the state legislature based on population in the 1964 special session of the legislature.

Nolan: I am for the apportionment amendment because it will cut down on the number of legislators.

I oppose annual sessions because they are not needed and will cost an additional $1.5-2 million every two years. Money could be better spent. Anyway, the governor now has the power to call special sessions of the legislature.

I oppose the item veto in appropriation bills because it would place too much power in the hands of the governor. He would be able to kill appropriation measures in the late part of sessions.

I oppose the legislative compensation amendment, which involves providing for expense money for legislators, because it would prolong the length of legislative sessions.

I don't believe the home rule amendment for cities is really necessary as it is already covered by state statutes.

• Should all or part of the service tax be repealed? If changed, how would the difference in revenue be made up?

Doderer: I am willing to look at any provision, but the special interest that wants it changed is going to have to make a good case, because a tax would have to be placed on some other group or let the burden fall back on property, to which I'm opposed.

Contrary to what many Republicans say, we have not had a stifling either on jobs or new construction as the result of the service tax. The Iowa Development Commission has released figures showing that in the first nine months of 1968 Iowa has had a $290 million manufacturing growth as compared to a $316 million manufacturing growth for the whole of 1967.

Nolan: I don't like the service tax, but I'm realistic enough to realize that it would be hard to repeal. I don't know what could be available to replace the service tax.

• Would you favor the building of a new state university in western Iowa?

Doderer: No, because there are now a few colleges in western Iowa. Funds for a new university would come out of the present appropriations of the Board of Regents, to which I'm opposed.

Nolan: I would not favor building a new university at the present time. I believe that junior colleges can handle the present demand. The problem in building a new state university would be in financing it.

• Would you favor state grants of Iowa students attending private colleges and universities in Iowa?

Doderer: I favor them if the grants are based on need. Then such a program would cost the state $1.5 million per year and not $15 million per year.

Nolan: Yes, I think that such state grants would help not only the students but also would help private colleges.

• Would you favor the implementation of some type of regionalism (such as 16 units) to help in administering Iowa's government?

Doderer: Public health and mental health centers would gain from a combined community and/or county effort. The area schools are another example of the benefits of such a program. We need regional juvenile detention centers in place of putting juveniles in our county jails.

Nolan: No. In general it would create only another level of red tape. It would remove the possibilities now available to citizens at the county level. To have such a system would only add to the cost of government.

• Do you favor reorganizing Iowa's minor courts?

Doderer: Yes, because we need trained judges at all levels. I'm in favor of an integrated court system. I favor most of the Iowa Bar Association reorganization proposals, but have some reservations.

Nolan: I don't believe there is a need for a general overhaul. The Justice of the Peace Courts are being gradually eliminated anyway because of a lack of need. I would oppose the elimination of the inferior courts if they were replaced by just one court per county. I believe that the mayor should retain the judicial capacity.

• Are you in favor of Iowa City's low-income housing proposal?

Doderer: Yes, I favor this proposal.

Nolan: I think the proposal is okay.

• Would you favor lowering Iowa's voting age?

Doderer: I feel that 18 or 17 year-olds should be allowed to vote. I sponsored a bill to lower the voting age to 18 in the last session of the General Assembly.

Nolan: I have no strong feelings one way or another on this issue. I haven't given too much thought to lowering the entire legal age, but if such a proposal came up in the legislature, I would probably be against it.

• Do you have any concrete proposals for reorganizing the state government?

Doderer: I would like to clarify the political rights of public employees, under the new civil service bill.

The governor and lieutenant governor should be elected for a four year term and should be allowed to choose their own executive department (cabinet).

We need to expand the legislative research committee.

The number of legislative seats should be diminished to 80 in the House of Representatives and 40 in the Senate.

We need to hold public hearings in committees, instead of having to listen to lobbyists.

I would oppose reverting back to electing the State Superintendent of Public Instruction and the members of the Highway Commission.

Nolan: I would like to restore to the people the right to vote for members of the State Board of Education. This board should consist of one elected member from each of Iowa's seven Congressional districts.

The members of the Highway Commission should be elected on a similar basis.

I am not in favor of allowing the governor to choose his own cabinet.

In general, I feel that an elected official is more qualified for office than an appointed official.

• On the law and order issue — specifically, how can the ever increasing rate of vandalism in Iowa be stopped?

Doderer: There is not any one answer to this problem. The problem must be worked at both the police level and the educational level. We must also strive for equal application of justice.

Nolan: There must be a more vigorous prosecution of vandals. There should be jail sentences instead of fines for vandalism — or at least the guilty party should be required to work out the fine on public service — instead of letting the parents pay the fine.

I also think that parents should be made at least in part responsible for vandalism done by their children.

• What do you think of increasing the city and town share of the road use tax funds by 2 per cent?

Doderer: We have to give not only the 2 per cent more to cities and towns but also must redistribute the secondary road funds of Iowa so that both the country and town areas in Johnson County receives more funds.

The secondary road fund is distributed now on the basis of area and need. The funds should be distributed on need first, and then area. Many counties now getting funds do not need them as badly as Johnson County.

Nolan: I'm opposed to this increase because the county needs are increasing everyday also.

This is the "something good" you've been looking for.

When you go shopping for "something really good" in stereo equipment, you usually have to pay more than you expected, or settle for something less than you expected.

The KLH Model Twenty-Four changes that situation—radically.

The Model Twenty-Four is a complete stereo music system. Its performance and sound quality are close—very close—to that of the best equipment that KLH, or anyone else, makes. But it costs only a fraction of what it sounds like. And it fits gracefully into any living room.

There's nothing missing from the Model Twenty-Four. It has a sensitive, drift-free FM stereo tuner, a custom-made Garrard record changer with Pickering cartridge and diamond stylus, plus jacks for external equipment and for making tape recordings. The solid-state circuitry is powerful enough for any living room, and the unobtrusive speaker cabinets contain a pair of full-range, two-speaker systems.

The modest size and price of the Twenty-Four are the results of advanced engineering instead of corner-cutting. Everything from its components to its oiled-walnut cabinetry is designed to provide a genuine surprise rather than that "nice for the money" feeling. Come see and hear how little it can cost for something really good.

Female Billiards Champion Fights Nerves Before Match

International billiards champion Gail Allums doesn't fight all her billiards battles on the pool table. For the university coed, who "cued" her way to the top of women's collegiate play last spring, conquering her nervous energy before the game means half the battle won.

She draws a deep breath, wipes her hands and begins slowly. "Once you start concentrating, that nervousness goes away," she said, "... unless you're behind."

Gail attributes her first interest in active sports to her Chicago summers spent in day camp — learning to swim and playing volleyball, softball and badminton.

But it wasn't day camp that acquainted her with the pool table. Miss Allums, A4, Chicago, didn't begin playing billiards until a date introduced her to the sport during her freshman year here.

"I'd tried everything else," said Miss Allums, who even enjoys a game of basketball against her fiancé, former Iowa basketball star Huston Breedlove now of Akron, Ohio.

The following year she played her first intercollegiate tournament game in Oregon, coming in third (although she's still convinced she could have been first).

"But I was so nervous and captivated by a trip to the West Coast, by the mountains and the scenery, how could I possibly concentrate on shooting pool?" she asks.

But at the next tournament, last May in West Virginia, she came out the winner of International Women's Collegiate Pocket Billiards.

Though she can now disarm her competitors with the outward self-confidence of an experienced player, Gail's casual manner is deceiving. Underneath is a concern for the many things yet to be learned from her "instructors" — "the guys off the street" who give her tips and compete against her in the pool room of the Union.

And, though encouragement ples her from all sides, she is not yet sure that she's "good enough" to play professional billiards following her graduation next August.

A recreation major, Miss Allums hopes someday to return to the day camp scene as a supervisor of youth programs for 7- to 11-year-olds. After attending day camps sponsored by the Chicago Park Commission for many years, she became a camp counselor at the age of 11 and worked there for six summers. She laughed as she recalled the non-sense attitudes of her camp counselors and later of her school teachers, who, she said, had been warned to "watch out for that Allums girl."

"I was one of those trouble-makers and they did with me what all good teachers do with all troublemakers — made me a leader."

The last straw was in seventh grade when she rode a donkey to

Russian Textbook Now in English

A Russian textbook, the only one of its kind on ship hydrodynamics and construction, has recently been made available in English through the efforts of two University professors, one of whom has since left the University.

The book, entitled "Theory of Ship's Waves and Wave Resistance," was co-edited and updated by Lewis Landweber, professor of mechanics and hydraulics, and J. N. Newman, associate professor of naval architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The translation was done by Max Oppenheimer, former head of the University's department of Russian. The three began work on the book in 1964. Author of the book is A. A. Kostyukov of the Odessa Institute of Marine Fleet Engineers.

The translation is being published by Effective Communications, Inc., of Iowa City.

class one morning, making a fracas that caused the whole schoolyard of interested students to be tardy that day. From then on she was pushed into responsible positions at school and found herself doing "constructive" things instead of pulling pranks.

"I spent so much time making others act right, I didn't have time to make trouble myself," she said.

Upon graduating from Morgan Park High School, she received a Pullman Foundation Scholarship which helped finance her schooling at any chosen school.

At Iowa she shares living quarters with five other coeds in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul J.

(Mike) Cilek, 404 Brown St. The Cileks, parents of Iowa football quarterback Mike Cilek, have four of their eight children living in the large home, also.

She is now involved in billiards tournaments ranging from the local and regional level up to the international level of competition.

She has been featured in recent issues of Sepia and Bowler's Journal magazines, as well as in Ebony and Big Ten magazines. Gail is also the subject of a chapter in a book on billiards players soon to be published: "The Lions and the Lamb," written by Thomas Fensch, G. Mansfield, Ohio.

Cosmonaut Lands OK After 4 Days in Space

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Cosmonaut Georgy Beregovoy brought his gleaming white Soyuz Union 3 spaceship safely back to earth Wednesday after nearly four days of relatively routine orbiting.

Parachutes landed the craft in snow on the steppes of Kazakhstan.

There was wide speculation that Beregovoy's flight was the final test needed to prove the unmanned Soyuz 2 was brought back to earth Monday. Beregovoy returned at 10:25 a.m. Moscow time Wednesday in the sister ship, landing with the aid of parachutes and a retrorocket.

A space authority in West Germany, Heinz Kaminski, said firing of the braking rocket shortly before the landing was "a rehearsal of a landing system for a moon touchdown."

Kaminski is director of the Institute for Satellites and Space Research at Bochum.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Beregovoy's landing in a predetermined area was so precise waiting friends and correspondents could greet him shortly after he hit the ground.

GOP Train To Visit City

Rep. Fred Schwengel will head a First District Republican caravan which will be in Iowa City from 2:45 to 3:30 this afternoon for an open coffee hour at the local Republican Headquarters, 168 S. Linn St.

The caravan will make a two day tour of Iowa's first district cities beginning this morning in Davenport.

Republican candidates for state office traveling with the caravan will be: Roger Jepsen, for lieutenant governor; Melvin Synhorst, for secretary of state; L. B. Liddy, for secretary of agriculture; Richard Turner, for attorney general; and Maurice Baringer, for state treasurer.

Also traveling with the caravan will be Mrs. David Stanley, wife of the candidate for U.S. Senate; Mrs. Robert Ray, wife of the candidate for governor; and the wives of several of the candidates listed above.

Robert Ray, Republican candidate for governor, will be in Iowa City from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday. He will attend a reception at the local Republican headquarters and will campaign downtown.

ATHENS (AP) — The Greek press reported Wednesday that Jacqueline and Aristotle Onassis will begin a world honeymoon tour today, but she told reporters on arriving in Athens she and her husband will return to the island of Scyros Friday.

Mrs. Onassis arrived in Athens from the island several hours after her husband flew here for a business conference.

She told reporters at the airport: "We'll remain in Greece as long as the weather is good. There is no reason to leave and we have no definite plans for the future."

A Cool Eye, A Steady Hand

Gail Allums, A4, Chicago, the University's own collegiate billiards champ, is one of the nation's outstanding competitors of any sex in a sport which rarely claims women as its stars. Here, Miss Allums displays her fine shooting form at a table in the Union Recreation Area.

Israeli Government Charges Soviet Jets, Pilots in Cairo

JERUSALEM (AP) — Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon charged Wednesday that Soviet naval pilots are making constant reconnaissance flights in TU 16 bombers which are based in Cairo.

In a speech to the Knesset, Israel's parliament, he did not say whether the planes were flying over Israeli-occupied territory, but informants said presumably they do not.

Replying to a motion regarding the Soviet presence in the Middle East, Allon said the planes were under the direct control of the Soviet navy.

He gave these other figures: More than 40 Soviet naval vessels, including 25 modern warships, are now in the Mediterranean. About 3,000 Soviet military personnel are in Egypt, 1,000 in Syria and 1,000 in other Arab nations. Allon declared Israel would not be without outside support in case of Soviet intervention in the Middle East, saying the United States, for example, had a moral obligation to help this country.

In Tel Aviv, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan was quoted as telling a closed meeting of his United Labor party Tuesday night that Israel would turn the Suez Canal into "a huge Egyptian graveyard."

2 on Faculty At Pella Lose Pants, Goatee

PELLA (AP) — Two members of the Central College faculty had a close shave Wednesday at an auction held to raise money for Brian O'Donnell, Central football player paralyzed as the result of a game injury.

The close shave of Donald W. Huffman, head of the biology department, came when the Rev. Henry Vermeer, pastor of the First Reformed Church here, paid $100 for the right to decide whether Huffman would keep or lose his beard.

Vermeer, razor in hand, demolished Huffman's goatee on the spot.

The close shave of Jim Danks, assistant Central football coach, came when auctioneers put the clothes Danks was wearing up for bid. The bidding finally stopped after Danks lost his trousers, which sold for $60.

Revenue from the auction, sponsored by the college faculty, reached $1,235 by noon, bringing total value of a fund established to aid O'Donnell to $15,158.

College personnel have set a $25,000 goal.

Other items auctioned Wednesday included a date with assistant football coach Paul Ebberts, and the services of football captain Ken Piazza as "slave," which brought $26 from another coed after a loaf of bread and Danks' undershirt were thrown in.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The three leading candidates for president have been crisscrossing America for months, each telling voters he can handle the country's problems better than either of his opponents.

Civil rights, crime and labor have been among the key domestic issues as the candidates, with millions of words, have defended their own records and attacked those of their foes.

But what are the records that lie behind that oratory? What for example, was Independent party candidate George C. Wallace's record on labor legislation when he was governor of Alabama? And what is Democratic nominee Hubert H. Humphrey's record on crime? Or Republican Richard M. Nixon's record on civil rights?

To answer these and other questions, Associated Press reporters probed beyond the campaign words of the candidates to examine their deeds while in public office over the past 20 years.

Here are the candidates' records on civil rights, crime and labor:

A mayor of Minneapolis in 1946, Humphrey established a Mayor's Council on Human Relations to deal with alleged racial discrimination. He also won passage of the nation's first municipal fair employment practices act.

At the 1948 Democratic National Convention, Humphrey led a successful fight for a stronger civil rights platform plank.

As a member of the Senate from 1949 through 1964, Humphrey voted for the Civil Rights Acts of 1956, 1960 and 1964. He was floor leader for the 1964 bill and received much of the credit for its passage.

He voted against a bill in 1961 that would have prohibited the federal government from cutting off aid to segregated school districts. The bill was rejected.

One of Humphrey's tasks as vice president was to act as coordinator of government efforts in civil rights.

Nixon: Nixon served in the House from 1947 through 1950 and the Senate from 1951 through 1952. In 1949, he voted for a bill barring states from making payment of a poll tax a requirement for voting in national elections.

In 1950, Nixon voted for a bill establishing a Fair Employment Practices Commission with power to investigate, recommend and seek voluntary compliance. The bill had been substituted for a compulsory FEPC bill filed by President Truman.

As vice president from 1953 through 1960, Nixon was chairman of the President's Committee on Government Contracts.

On May 9, 1957, Nixon asked the heads of federal contracting agencies to deny federal contracts to firms practicing racial discrimination.

When Congress convened in 1957, Nixon, as president of the Senate, gave an informal opinion that Senate rules could be changed by a majority vote. His position supported that of senators seeking to make it easier to stop filibusters aimed at blocking civil rights legislation.

In 1968, Nixon telephoned key Republicans in the House urging them to support the pending civil rights bill with its open housing provision.

In 1956, he described the Supreme Court ruling against school segregation as "but one step in a continuing process of giving substance and vitality to our democracy."

Wallace: Wallace first ran for governor of Alabama in 1958 but was defeated by John Patterson, who received the support of the Ku Klux Klan. Wallace denounced the Klan and was endorsed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

After the gubernatorial election, Wallace returned to his post as a state circuit court judge. When the U.S. Civil Rights Commission asked to see voting records of counties within his judicial district, Wallace took possession of the records and threatened to jail any commission staff member who tried to get them.

A federal judge ordered Wallace to give up the records. He refused and was cited for contempt. Wallace later turned the records over to grand juries and was acquitted of the contempt charge.

Elected governor in 1962, Wallace closed his inaugural address with the cry: "Segregation now. Segregation tomorrow. Segregation forever."

In 1963 he stood in the administration building doorway at the University of Alabama to block entrance of two black students. President Kennedy federalized the Alabama National Guard and Wallace stepped aside on orders of the guard commander.

Wallace called the Alabama legislature into special session on Sept. 21, 1964, to adopt a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment that would bar federal courts from ordering integration of schools. The resolution passed both branches unanimously.

During a rash of bombings in Birmingham in 1965, Wallace called for passage of a state law placing stricter control on the manufacture and use of dynamite. The bill died in the legislature.

On Nov. 23, 1965, Wallace asked a federal court in Montgomery to bar enforcement of the 1965 federal Voting Rights Act on the grounds it was unconstitutional. His motion was denied.

On Sept. 2, 1966, he signed a bill which he had proposed to nullify all existing compliance agreements by Alabama school boards with federal integration guidelines.

LABOR
Nixon: Nixon served on the Labor Committees of both the House and Senate.

As a member of the House committee in 1947, he helped draft the Taft-Hartley Law. He voted for the bill's passage over a veto by President Harry S. Truman.

In 1949, Nixon voted to increase grants to states for administration of unemployment compensation and other employment programs. The same year he voted to increase the minimum wage to 75 cents an hour.

As vice president, he broke a Senate tie in 1956 to support a bill giving state highway departments rather than the secretary of labor the authority to determine wage rates to be paid workers in the interstate highway system.

In 1959, he broke a tie to support a motion retaining in the Landrum-Griffin Labor Act an amendment designed to protect union members against unfair actions by their unions.

Federal Bureau of Investigation crime rate statistics for 1965, while Wallace was governor, show Alabama with 1,068 total offenses per 100,000 inhabitants compared with a national average of 1,502.

For 1966, his last year as governor, the Alabama figure was 1,209 and the national average was 1,656.

Humphrey: After taking office as mayor of Minneapolis, Humphrey appointed a new police chief and ordered him to crack down on crime, particularly gambling and prostitution. He reorganized the police department and appointed a Citizens' Law Enforcement Committee.

As a senator, Humphrey introduced legislation to provide federal grants to state programs to combat juvenile delinquency.

In 1958, Humphrey voted against a proposal to bar questioning of a suspect unless he was first informed of the nature of the accusation and of his rights. In the same session, he opposed a bill to bar federal courts from disqualifying confessions solely because of a delay in bringing the suspect to arraignment.

Nixon: During Nixon's career in the House and Senate, there was no major legislation dealing with crime.

Nixon was active while in Congress in internal security matters. He headed the investigation that led to the conviction of Alger Hiss on a perjury charge in 1949.

CRIME
Wallace: During four years as governor, Wallace proposed and won passage of legislation expanding the state police force 25 per cent and creating four regional riot control units.

Fees for automobile license tags were raised to provide additional revenue for the state public safety department.

In 1963, the legislature passed a Wallace proposal to appropriate $5.5 million to modernize the state prison system.

Alabama state police were used to break up a voting rights demonstration at Selma in 1965. When civil rights leaders announced plans to march from Selma to Montgomery, Wallace, with support from the legislature, declared the state lacked manpower to protect civil rights demonstrators and asked for federal assistance.

Federal Bureau of Investigation crime rate statistics for 1965, while Wallace was governor, show Alabama with 1,068 total offenses per 100,000 inhabitants compared with a national average of 1,502.

For 1966, his last year as governor, the Alabama figure was 1,209 and the national average was 1,656.

In 1962, while campaigning for governor of California, Nixon opposed a state right-to-work law.

Wallace: While Wallace was governor he supported legislation increasing unemployment compensation to $38 a week in 1965, $42 in 1967 and $44 in 1968. He also supported increasing workmen's compensation from $33 a week to $38 in 1963.

A right-to-work law was passed by the Alabama legislature in 1953 after Wallace had left that body to become a circuit judge. As governor he opposed repeal of the law.

While a member of the legislature in 1952, he won passage of the Wallace Industrial Act designed to bring new industry to Alabama. Wallace says this has created 100,000 new jobs.

Humphrey: Humphrey had strong labor support when he defeated incumbent Republican Sen. Joseph H. Ball in 1948. One campaign issue was Ball's vote in favor of the Taft-Hartley law.

In the Senate in 1949, Humphrey opposed a bill giving the president power to seek injunctions and seize plants in strikes deemed national emergencies.

In 1959, Humphrey voted for the Landrum-Griffin bill after an unsuccessful attempt to defeat a section designed to protect union members from unfair treatment by their unions.

He supported a resolution in 1963 to turn the railroad employee work rules dispute over to an arbitration board and declare a moratorium on strikes on this issue.

While in the Senate, Humphrey voted for increases in federal minimum wages. He also advocated extension of the National Labor Relations Act to farm workers.

Turner Denies Accusations By Johnston

DES MOINES (AP) — Republican Atty. Gen. Richard C. Turner denounced as "ridiculous" Wednesday charges by his Democratic opponent that he and an assistant had handled private cases involving conflict of interest.

Turner said Democratic candidate Dan Johnston of Des Moines demonstrated "immaturity, lack of judgment and irresponsibility" by resorting to "his current low level of political mud slinging."

Johnston had accused Turner of "arrogant disregard for the law" by overlooking alleged violations of state law by a member of his own staff, special Asst. Atty. Gen. Lorna Williams.

He also said Turner had created a conflict of interest by representing a private client in a case before the State Industrial Commissioner.

Turner said a law banning outside work by his assistants does not apply to Mrs. Williams, whom he said is "one of the hardest working assistants on my staff."

He said his own involvement as the attorney for a woman who asked for workmen's compensation is not a conflict of interest. He said the case was settled before the industrial commissioner before he took office in January, 1967.

Turner acknowledged that he had appealed the case to the Pottawattamie County District Court, after he became attorney general, but said he was "trying to get another attorney to take over the case."

The attorney general said he wasn't aware the appeal was scheduled to be heard Nov. 12, seven days after the general election.

Mrs. Williams, who was out of town Wednesday afternoon, had handled several divorce cases while employed by his office, Turner said, but that was not a violation of the law.

He said the state "is getting much more than its money's worth out of Mrs. Williams."

"To paraphrase Abraham Lincoln's words praising General Grant, I'm going to find out what kind of whiskey Lorna drinks and send a case of it to all my assistants," he said.

As special assistant attorney general assigned to the State Department of Social Services, Mrs. Williams was hired under a special statute, Turner said.

The first-term attorney general said earlier that assistant attorney general had handled outside legal work "for years."

Johnston said Turner's position was "hypocritical."

"Turner's claim that such conduct is not illegal," Johnston said, "because it has always been done," ignores the clear language of the Iowa Code which says that assistant attorneys general shall devote their full time to their duties.

"His past claims of believing in the letter of the law and charges that others bend the law to suit their own purposes seem highly hypocritical in light of his present stand."

Navy Claims Viet Victory

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. swift river boats plowing deep into the southern part of South Vietnam met and destroyed most of an enemy water force, the Navy reported Wednesday.

After a five-hour battle Tuesday, the enemy lost 243 sampans and other small crafts, and shells from the river boats and support craft destroyed 187 bunkers and other fortifications, the Navy said.

The fighting reportedly began with a Viet Cong ambush. Three of the fast, aluminum U.S. river boats were churning up the Bo De River in the southernmost province of An Xuyen when enemy gunners opened up with automatic weapons and recoilless rifles from both banks, the Navy said.

All three boats were hit and a crewman wounded but the Navy said they were able to "return and suppress" the enemy fire.

After a rendezvous with four other boats, the wounded man was transferred to one and it raced down the river under enemy fire that wounded four more, the Navy said.

The river boats were joined by the Coast Guard cutter Wachusett, the Navy support ship Washoe County and South Vietnamese air force A1 Sky Raiders.

Moving from two directions along a 32-mile enemy complex on the river, the force shot up everything in sight.

The mission was the third of its kind in recent weeks and the largest to date. The little boats form part of the Navy's coastal surveillance patrol.

Teachers Reject Settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — A striking teachers union rejected Wednesday a state-advanced plan to end the tieup of the 1.1-million-pupil New York City public school system, a bitter racial as well as educational crisis.

Albert Shanker, president of the predominantly white AFL-CIO United Federation of Teachers (UFT), called the state's proposal a "step backward."

By its action, the union of 55,000 members doomed a vast majority of the city's children to continued exile from classrooms.

New Czech Charter Signed

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (AP) — With anti-Soviet demonstrations quieted, President Ludvik Svoboda and other leaders signed new charters Wednesday creating autonomous Czech and Slovak states joined in a federation. Svoboda said the new charters, to become effective Jan. 1, will insure "the full rights of both Czech and Slovak nations and the fulfillment of national needs."

Teachers Rejected Settlement

They already have lost 24 days of schooling in the new fall term. A peace plan proposed Tuesday by State Education Commissioner James E. Allen already had been accepted by the Negro and Puerto Rican Ocean Hill-Brownsville school district in Brooklyn.

Allen's plan provided for the reinstatement in Ocean Hill classrooms of 79 white teachers whose ouster by the local governing board originally brought on the UFT strike.

Bowen Re-Elected Chairman of AUA

University Pres. Howard R. Bowen has been re-elected chairman of the Board of Trustees of Argonne Universities Association (AUA), an organization of 30 universities responsible for establishing policies and programs of the Argonne National Laboratory near Lemont, Ill.

Bowen was elected to a second term as board chairman following an annual meeting, attended by representatives of the 30 universities, at which board members were selected to succeed those whose terms had expired.

The AUA, organized in 1965, is involved with the University of Chicago and the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission in the management of Argonne under the terms of a 1966 tripartite contract. The AUA formulates, approves and reviews policies and programs for the laboratory which are administered by the University of Chicago, and seeks to develop programs that will enhance the value of the Laboratory to the academic community.

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (AP) — With anti-Soviet demonstrations quieted, President Ludvik Svoboda and other leaders signed new charters Wednesday creating autonomous Czech and Slovak states joined in a federation. Svoboda said the new charters, to become effective Jan. 1, will insure "the full rights of both Czech and Slovak nations and the fulfillment of national needs."

Bowen Re-Elected Chairman of AUA

University Pres. Howard R. Bowen has been re-elected chairman of the Board of Trustees of Argonne Universities Association (AUA), an organization of 30 universities responsible for establishing policies and programs of the Argonne National Laboratory near Lemont, Ill.

Bowen was elected to a second term as board chairman following an annual meeting, attended by representatives of the 30 universities, at which board members were selected to succeed those whose terms had expired.

The AUA, organized in 1965, is involved with the University of Chicago and the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission in the management of Argonne under the terms of a 1966 tripartite contract. The AUA formulates, approves and reviews policies and programs for the laboratory which are administered by the University of Chicago, and seeks to develop programs that will enhance the value of the Laboratory to the academic community.

Student's Play 1st At Studio Theatre

A new play by Robert Butler, dominated society. The Studio Theatre production for January will be chosen later in the season.

In May, in conjunction with the dedication of the Museum of Art on the Fine Arts campus, University filmmakers, artists, actors, instructors and students will combine their talents to examine and experiment with the interrelationships of their individual media to provide a new experience in the temporal arts. This program is called INTER-MEDIA?PLAY*Y&R//, and will illustrate the experimental nature of Studio Theatre and the University's artists and film-makers.

Studio Theatre will present another new play in December — "Hang By Their Shoelaces" by Karl Tunberg, a former grad student, which deals with two individuals attempting to deal with a contemporary military-
