SATIRIST RICHARD ARMOUR
Humor, Seriousness Mixed

Armour Disarms Crowd with Wit

By STEVE DEEDON

Richard Armour discussed humor, satire and irony and played with the topics of evolution, literature, history and politics in his lecture in the Union Ballroom Wednesday night.

But his tone became serious later when he remained on stage for almost an hour with a handful of students who stayed to talk with him.

In the lecture, Armour used his own light verse to point out the difference between humor, satire and irony.

"Satire is a kind of humor, it is the acid," he said. "Humor is a sudden kind of incongruity. To keep the reader interested, you must have a proper proportion of both."

He made parodies of history, and doctored up the poems of Shakespeare, Tennyson and others, making couplets by adding his own second line to a line of theirs. For example, "On fathom five the father lies / I pushed him, I apologize." The first line is from "The Tempest" by Shakespeare, the second is Armour's.

The 62-year-old writer said, "I believe that if what is least used goes first, it will be our heads."

Armour said his joke on evolution was provoked by the possibility of man's toes evolving out of existence and a biologist's theory that man could have evolved from brown seaweed or stones.

"I say pardon me, every time I stub my toe on a rock."

Armour described much of his humor as Swiftian — exaggerating people and life in the manner of the Lilliputians of Jonathan Swift's literature.

After bringing up that subject of shortness and tallness, Armour said he predicted presidential campaigns by the candidates' heights. He said that the race between Nixon and Humphrey was close because they were both the same height, five-foot eleven.

"Nixon won because he looks taller," Armour said. "Next time an election comes, don't ask the polls, ask me."

All kidding aside, Armour said, he worries about hero images in presidents and he thinks it is a duty of sorts for satirists to make them look human by pointing out their faults.

Much of Armour's work is done in light verse. He reminded the audience that light verse is not humor. Poetry is concerned with lofty ideals, he said, but light verse is written as entertainment. He uses verse to condense thought, he said.

He made a like distinction between humor and satire. He said that humor is basically for entertainment, while satire usually has a cause behind it — such as the correcting of abuses.

Armour's talk was mostly extemporaneous. Before he began the lecture, he told Union employees, "I have some notes, but nothing's canned. If I wrote out my speeches, they would have to be edited."

When his lecture was over and he had answered questions from the audience, 20 persons gathered with him around the stage to discuss the writer's craft, politics, and the situation in Southeast Asia. And while he wasn't grinning anymore, a calm smile settled on his face.

Armour's advice to writers: "He (a writer) has got to see his work in print. Editors don't know that you're young."

He told those few remaining that the market for humor was very thin.

Then he went on to talk about the Vietnamese war, saying the Soviet Union and the United States could end it.

GOP Doves Question Nixon's Idea To Support Johnson Foreign Decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Influential Republican senators split Wednesday on President-elect Richard M. Nixon's decision to let the Johnson administration speak temporarily for him in foreign affairs.

Sens. Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.) and Mark O. Hatfield (R-Ore.), Vietnam war doves, questioned the wisdom of Nixon's unprecedented statement that he will support President Johnson's decisions and carry them forward after Jan. 20.

Dirksen of Illinois backed Nixon's move as the best solution to what he called a "sticky situation." He noted that the interim commitment was limited to Vietnam, the Middle East and "outstanding matters" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Dirksen's position was similar to that of Sens. George D. Aiken (R-Vt.) and Milton R. Young (R-N.D.) who have questioned Johnson's Vietnam policies.

Case, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he hopes Nixon has not given Johnson a blank check for policy decisions that might tie the new administration's hands.

"I assume that President-elect Nixon has been given extensive briefings on world trouble spots and concurs with Johnson's proposed approaches to them in the next 60 days," he said.

"I have a feeling that there is a beginning of the end of the fighting in Vietnam and I hope the new administration will be flexible in handling developments as they come."

Hatfield, who supported Nixon before the Miami Beach convention despite the incoming president's hawkish war stand, said in a separate interview he hopes the president-elect has not committed himself to continuing Johnson's policies indefinitely.

"I hope his statement was a matter of strategy designed to get the Paris peace talks going in a significant way," Hatfield said. "I just don't believe he was endorsing Johnson's Vietnam policy."

Dirksen said he assumes that Nixon was briefed thoroughly on the position Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford took Tuesday in notifying South Vietnamese leaders that unless they agree soon to participate, the Paris talks will go on without them.

Apollo 10 to Approach Moon, May Try Landing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 10 mission, set for the second quarter of 1969, will go within nine miles of the moon and may make a lunar landing, it was revealed Wednesday.

Apollo 10 thus will be the first U.S. manned spacecraft with a chance to land on the moon, carrying all the necessary hardware for such a mission.

Should the moon landing take place, the lunar module will separate from the command module while in moon orbit and then make its touch-down, leaving one man aboard the command module with two aboard the landing craft.

Present plans call for the lunar module to separate from the command module and make a simulated landing at about 30,000 feet from the moon's surface.

But officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have said privately that the mission may be changed to the actual lunar landing.

Prime crew for the Apollo 10 mission, not to be confused with next month's Apollo 8 flight, were named Wednesday. They include Air Force Col. Thomas P. Stafford, the flight's commander; Navy Cmdr. Eugene A. Cernan, lunar module pilot, and Navy Cmdr. John W. Young, the command module pilot.

Stafford, Young and Cernan served as the back-up crew on the highly-successful Apollo 7 spaceflight last month.

Stafford, 38, and Cernan, 34, have flown into space together before. They flew the two-man Gemini 9 flight in June, 1966 which lasted three days and included a space walk of more than two hours for Cernan.

Stafford was also aboard the Gemini 6 flight, commanded by Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra, Jr., which rendezvoused with the already-orbiting Gemini 7 spacecraft in December 1965.

Young, 38, was pilot on Gemini 3, the three-orbit flight which opened the named phase of the Gemini program in March, 1965. In July, 1966, Young was commander of the Gemini 10 flight which docked in space with an Atlas Agena rocket and used that rocket to push out to a record 475-mile altitude.

Apollo 8 is planned to orbit the moon no closer than 69 miles.

It will have only one the command and service module. It will not include the lunar module, which is designed to land on the moon. Apollo 10 will be what space officials call a "full up" flight. It will include all of the hardware necessary for a moon landing, with the possible exception of suits needed for stepping onto the moon's surface.

The command and service module and lunar module combination will get its first manned workout in Apollo 9, an earth orbit mission set for the first quarter of 1969. Crew of Apollo 9 will be James A. McDivitt, David R. Scott and Russell L. Schweickart.

The Apollo 9 mission calls for exercising both the command and lunar modules in a low earth orbit. The lunar module, with McDivitt and Schweickart aboard, will separate from the command module, piloted by Scott, and then rendezvous. The two spacecraft will dock, just as they would in lunar orbit, and Schweickart will walk in space from one spacecraft to the other. The crew will later test both the ascent and descent stages of the lunar module.

The lunar module will be left in orbit and the crew will return to earth aboard the command module.

Coed Pleads Innocent To Obstructing Charge

A University coed plead innocent to a charge of obstructing police officers, in Police Court Wednesday. The case was continued to a future, undetermined date for trial by Judge Marion Neely.

The girl, Mary E. Theis, 21, Dubuque, was charged Nov. 8 following an incident in the Union in which she posed as a deaf-mute and indicated to police that she had been raped by two men.

Miss Theis later admitted that the story was a hoax that she said she had invented for a class experiment, according to police.

The charge of obstructing an officer is a misdemeanor.

News in Brief

ALSO IN THE NEWS LAST NIGHT:

BOSTON — David P. O'Brien, 21, of Cambridge, the first draft card burner to take his case to the Supreme Court, only to lose an appeal and begin a six-year federal prison term, had his sentence revoked for a "change of attitude." The disposition by U.S. District Judge Andrew A. Caffrey placed O'Brien on probation for three years, provided he accepts civilian work in a hospital in lieu of military service.

UNITED NATIONS — Canada urged that the United States and the Soviet Union enter into strategic arms limitation talks before the end of the year, in advance of the reconvening of the Geneva disarmament negotiations.

ROME — Labor unions began a 24-hour general strike at midnight designed to plague the nation with one of its biggest labor walkouts of the postwar era. The stop-work order by Communist and non-Communist unions affected more than half the national work force of 20 million.

DES MOINES — The Iowa attorney general's office said the State Highway Commission can't legally close its meetings to discuss their five-year plans.

LOS ANGELES — Silent screen star Ramon Novarro, 69, killed Oct. 31 in his Hollywood Hills home, left an estate estimated at $500,000, his will showed.

DECATUR, Ala. — George C. Wallace, making his first public appearance since his unsuccessful bid for the presidency, broke ground for construction of a $4.2 million mental hospital dedicated to his wife, the late Gov. Lurleen B. Wallace.

College Closed By Racial Strife

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The president of 18,000-student San Francisco State College ordered classes suspended Wednesday until further notice as trouble involving the Black Student Union flared again.

The police tactical squad arrested eight persons after a campus police officer was kicked and a television cameraman roughed up as Black Student Union leaders and 350 of the 1,300 faculty members met separately.

Pres. Robert R. Smith, appearing haggard and distraught, told a news conference the events showed that "we are moving further and further toward physical confrontation between people and has demonstrated that a minority can close a campus and that we can't keep it open with the assistance of police."

Smith declined to estimate how long the closure would remain.

The Black Student Union is in the second week of a strike called to enforce demands which include reinstatement of part-time instructor George Murray, a Black Panther, who called for students to arm themselves on campus.

Most of the students, predominately white, have continued to attend classes through the strike.

'Nixon Plot' Trio Pleads Innocent

NEW YORK (AP) — A father and his two sons, immigrants from the Arab nation of Yemen, pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges of conspiring to assassinate President-elect Richard M. Nixon.

Justice John R. Starkey of Brooklyn Supreme Court reduced their bail from $100,000 to $25,000 each. In New York, the Supreme Court is a trial court.

The defendants did not immediately post the lower bail.

Ahmed Ragueh Namer, 43, and his sons, Hussein, 29, and Abdo, 19, had been indicted earlier Wednesday on four counts — conspiracy to kill Nixon, criminal solicitation of an unidentified person to commit the crime, possession of two rifles and possession of two switch-blade knives.

U.S. Warns Hanoi On DMZ Misuse

PARIS (AP) — The United States, badgered by the Communist side to come to the peace table without its balking Saigon ally, countered Wednesday with a warning to Hanoi that misuse of the demilitarized zone — (DMZ) — hindered progress.

American informants at the stalled Paris peace talks said the warning was delivered at a secret meeting of a top U.S. negotiator and his opposite number on the Hanoi delegation.

The State Department in Washington announced earlier that the U.S. delegation told the North Vietnamese "serious talks" were out if Hanoi used the DMZ between North and South Vietnam to launch attacks.

A State Department statement said Hanoi's attention was "forcefully" called to North Vietnamese firing on allied forces "from positions within the DMZ" since Nov. 9. It stopped short of saying those incidents violated a Hanoi-Washington understanding that prompted President Johnson to halt bombing and shelling of the North.

A North Vietnamese delegation official refused to comment.

Earlier in the day, Duong Dinh Thao, the No. 2 man on the delegation of the National Liberation Front (NLF), challenged the United States to come alone to the peace talks if Saigon refused to participate.

"If Saigon does not send a delegation then the three parties, the National Liberation Front, North Vietnam and the United States, must meet without delay to find a solution on the basis of the program put forward by the NLF," Thao said.

There was no indication, however, that the United States was ready immediately to carry out Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford's threat Tuesday that the Americans would go it alone if President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam persisted in his boycott of the conference.

U.S. officials emphasized that the United States still expected a four-party peace conference and was working to get Saigon's participation. They said they expected a South Vietnamese delegation eventually, but set no deadline.

Against this background of conflicting U.S.-South Vietnamese peacemaking views, Pham Dang Lam, chief of Saigon's observer mission at the talks, conferred for 40 minutes with the U.S. delegation chief, Ambassador W. Averell Harriman.

Lam said: "Our position has not changed. We are very serious about this."

Thieu has announced he will boycott four-party talks unless two conditions are met. The conditions are that Saigon head the allied delegation, relegating the United States to a subsidiary role, and that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong merge their delegations, thus effacing the self-proclaimed independent status of the NLF. Hanoi would head the Communist side.

"President Thieu suggested a two-sided meeting," Lam said, "and we are awaiting the reply of the interested parties."

Two interested parties, Hanoi and the NLF, have already rejected Thieu's demands. The third, the United States, is having top-level discussions with the South Vietnamese government in Saigon.

Enemy Activity in DMZ Draws U.S. Retaliation

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command announced today that "five incidents were reported early this morning involving enemy activity in the southern portion of the demilitarized zone" (DMZ) between North and South Vietnam.

U.S. artillery or naval guns fired back at enemy positions in the zone in four of the five incidents, the command said.

The report came soon after Washington had warned North Vietnam that serious peace talks in Paris could not be conducted if the DMZ were used for attacks on allied forces.

The command said four of the five incidents took place Wednesday, and one on Monday. It said three of the five involved firing at U.S. reconnaissance planes.

A State Department statement issued in Washington Wednesday denied that U.S. reconnaissance flights over the North during the bombing halt violate the U.S.-North Vietnamese understanding that led to the cessation of bombing.

The U.S. command also announced that a new operation, "Daring Endeavor," had been launched about 15 miles south of Da Nang. Involving U.S. Marines and troops of the Americal Division, it began with an amphibious and helicopter assault last Sunday.

So far, spokesmen said, 19 enemy have been killed, 15 have been captured and 230 suspects have been detained. U.S. losses were listed as one killed, 22 wounded.

Continuing reports of enemy activity in the DMZ and recently intensified shelling of military and civilian targets in the South have prompted the U.S. Command to undertake a careful assessment of enemy intentions while diplomats try to arrange expanded peace talks in Paris.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, refused to speculate Wednesday on the enemy's aims in talking with correspondents.

"This is the time for all of us working in the military to keep our eyes open," he said, "watch what is happening and compare it with all the things we know and have watched before. Then we can make a judgment."

Student lobbyists?

The Student Senate Tuesday night formed a new committee to work for student interests in the state legislature.

This committee, called the Legislative Action Committee, is an excellent idea for solving some of the misunderstandings that exist between the University's population and the state legislators.

An idea along this same line was suggested here in Iowa City by Paul Franzburg, then the Democratic candidate for governor. Franzburg suggested that each state institution have student representatives on the Board of Regents, the governing body for the three state universities.

Franzburg's idea was a little hazy, both in its presentation and operations. The Regents, while they do make the governing policies for the institutions, are actually responsible to the state legislature. At the Regents' meetings, the presidents of the three state schools and several of their key administrative officials take active parts in explanations and, if needed, justifications of proposed changes and programs for their schools.

But these matters are primarily of a broader scope than student interests. Most of the matters the Regents deal with concern changes in school policy, capital improvements and long-range plans for academic facilities and operations.

So a student representative on the Board of Regents would be a little useless.

However, if the Student Senate could form an effective committee to work with the state legislature, much could be gained. Nearly every other interest group around the state has a lobbying organization, and few groups can boast of a membership of nearly 20,000 interested persons.

The first example cited by the Senate of an area where a student lobby could help is establishing an 18-year-old voting requirement. This plank was included this year in the Democratic party's platform but not in the Republicans'.

There was a considerable amount of political activity in Johnson County and around the University during the campaign. Students here are especially interested in the elections and in their results. There are active groups of Young Republicans and Young Democrats on campus, and their membership is not limited to those eligible to vote.

With a student lobby, the state legislature may gain a better understanding of the feelings of various influential student groups on campus and a better understanding of why specific items are important to the University. In the area of appropriations, students could describe to legislators in a first-hand manner why specific improvements are necessary. It is always easier to understand a complex situation if there is someone present to explain that situation. And a student group is the perfect way to answer some questions the legislators may have.

If the members of the Legislative Action Committee are really interested in making student concerns known to the legislators, their service could be invaluable.

An experiment

"What is new music?" you may well ask after viewing the Arts Page in Wednesday's Daily Iowan.

In fact, so many persons have been befuddled by the page that some comment is necessary.

The page was designed solely to make people who were not involved in or aware of the new music movement on campus think about new music.

The page was experimental. Whether or not it was an experimental success is of little importance. If the page made people wonder what new music, phenometry or art was, it succeeded in its purpose.

When an individual or a group of individuals tries to break tradition, this break usually results in hostility from those who either don't or won't try to understand. If you don't understand new music, attend a concert by the Center for New Music. If you still don't understand new music, talk to someone in the Center. And if you still don't understand new music, then you can decide that you dislike it because you can't understand it.

Musical composition and the reasons behind specific compositions can not be explained in words. If these compositions or music in general could be explained by words or by any other means, they would not be music.

The Arts Page in Wednesday's paper was designed by a person involved in the new music movement in an attempt to break through some of the misunderstanding surrounding the movement. It was an attempt to present the untraditional views of new music and draw attention to a unique aspect of the arts.

Obviously, the page itself drew a lot of attention. And if some of that attention was transformed into curiosity, then a little of the concept behind new music was relayed to the readers, too.

the leprechaun

by Terry Seal

One of my personal pastimes is collecting (and spreading) graffiti. There is something about graffiti that types a place, in this situation, the personalities of the typical undergraduate Midwestern culture.

There is a dearth of good, earthy slogans scrawled across the walls and appliances of the waterclosets of Iowa. Sometimes the scrawlings are amusing or abusive, but always humorous. In the June, 1968, edition of The Realist (edited by Paul Krassner) there is a wealth of "Latinalia" for one and all.

One of my favorites is:
"There was a young couple named Kelly,
Who went around belly to belly,
Because in their haste,
They used library paste
Instead of petroleum jelly."

Then there is the one found in the men's restroom in a local pub: "No one buys the beer here. You just rent it." There is a large amount of truth to be gained from these delicacies of literary art. Here are some more gems:

"Please don't throw your cigars and cigarettes in the can; it makes them soggy and hard to light."

Another:
"In case of atomic attack, put your hands over your ears, then put your head between your legs. Then kiss your arse goodbye."

(*EDITOR'S NOTE: With apologies to the original, anonymous author.)

One graffiti artist made public his opinion of the 1964 elections: "When I look down, all I see is Goldwater." There are even directions to travel by:

"How to get to Texas: go west until you smell it. That's Iowa. Then go south until you step in it. That's Texas."

(*EDITOR'S NOTE: As above.)

Now I can bring to the fore the Union's own lovely little graffiti board. According to informed sources (if everyone else has access to "informed sources," why can't I have them?) the board was removed at the order of the official Iowa state censor, Priscilla Goodbody (she moonlights at NBC for Johnny Carson). It seems that the dirty-minded people watching the board got too excited over the words scrawled on it. Priscilla go home!

I frankly see no reason for the board's removal. Some of the scrawlings were rather intelligent, and then again, some were not. To single out certain words for censorship is about the most juvenile thing the administration has done. If they (whoever "they" are) were a bit more intelligent, then they would have obliterated the few vulgar words written in German. Someone has displayed a great amount of ignorance. Precisely what is the difference between a vulgar word in German (and even Latin) and a vulgar word in English? Answer: none, except the differences to the dirty old men who view, then edit.

To again return to graffiti, there was scrawled in a Berkeley men's washroom: "Happiness is getting here on time."

However, my all-time favorite is one I read on a New York subway platform wall. It read:

"My mother made me a homosexual." Below it was the repartee: "If I give her that yarn, will she make me one too?"

THINGS TO DO AROUND IOWA CITY TONIGHT:

If you get hold of it without contributing to Hugh Hefner and his corporation, read the interview with Eldridge Cleaver in the latest Playboy. (Also check out the misleading advertising technique which cites the names of contributors to the issue on the front cover — e.g. John Updike, Leroy Jones, Ginsberg, etc. — when their contribution within the pages amounts to quotes of one or two paragraph length from each author cited.)

At 8 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium hear Fred Ojile, Milwaukee draft resister, and local citizens, at a draft card turn-in rally.

Read about Cleaver, Bobby Seale, Huey P. Newton, and the Black Panthers in the Oct. 26 edition of Ramparts magazine, which contains part of a projected biography of Newton by Bobby Seale and Eldridge Cleaver.

Dig yourself.

LETTERS POLICY

Letters to the editor and all other types of contributions to The Daily Iowan are encouraged. All contributions should be signed by the writer, typed with triple spacing. Letters should be no longer than 300 words. Shorter contributions are more likely to be used. The Daily Iowan reserves the right to reject or edit any contribution. # 'Law and order': just a slogan? — At UI, in Iowa, in nation — cops, crime rates tell story

Campaign '68 — Local, state and national — will, no doubt, be remembered as the campaign which was dominated by issue of "law and order."

Who can forget when the Nixons, the Humphreys and Wallace went stumping across the breadth and length of the country pledging an end to domestic violence or when the state candidates went calling in the corn-filled rolling hills of Iowa's 99 counties making the same pledge.

Reaction to "law and order" was as diverse as the makeup of those who were constantly bombarded with the theme by politicians seeking some of the nation's highest offices.

Some students and blacks interpret "law and order" as being racist, repressive and restrictive in nature, granting respectability to acts of police violence; some whites may actually have this in mind because they fear the loss of their newly-gained notch on the social ladder and feel they have been bypassed by the rapid rate of social changes in this country.

Other whites may fear a mass black rebellion: some intellectuals and liberals may feel that the cry for law and order reflects just another manifestation of the right-wing turn they feel this country is making; others just want to be able to walk safely in the streets and are truly concerned by the increase in crime — whether it be petty thievery or organized crime.

In the 1967 Uniform Crime Report, issued in August, the FBI reported that serious crimes increased by 16 per cent over the previous year. A further breakdown shows crimes against persons, such as murder, robbery, aggravated assault and forcible rape, also increased by 16 per cent, while crimes against property, such as auto thefts, larceny and burglary, increased 17 per cent.

Maryland had the largest crime increase of any state in 1967, 30 per cent.

According to the same FBI report, the total crime index for Iowa, based on the number of crimes reported per 100,000 persons, increased from 814 in 1966 to 1,071.1 in 1967. These figures represent serious crimes such as those mentioned above.

Breaking the Iowa figures down further, the rate of crimes against persons was 38.4 per 100,000 persons, and crimes against property was 948.7.

In the category of serious crimes only murders decreased in 1967. There were 42 murders reported in Iowa in 1967 as compared to 43 in 1966. Other serious crimes increased considerably in 1967.

Under the heading of crimes against persons, forcible rapes increased from 132

But in addition to training, McCarney said policemen also need some decent laws to enforce.

"There is a need to pass some good workable laws as well as to improve the judicial system," he said.

Differing a bit from his city counterpart, Schneider said "Police education needs to be improved so officers can cope with existing laws."

Police officials, especially, feel they are handicapped by court decisions of recent years which seek to guarantee the civil rights of those accused of crimes, and that these decisions result in the general ineffectiveness of law as a deterrent to crime.

But the increase in reported crime can also be attributed to more police diligence in discovering and solving crimes, better trained officers and improved law enforcement procedures — facts which are often overlooked by law and order advocates and police officers themselves.

Despite statistics which show crime increasing as well as dissatisfaction with the judicial system, there can be little doubt that much of the current interest in law and order is a reaction to the series of ghetto riots and the activities of student leftists and anti-Vietnam war demonstrators.

Demonstrations on college campuses have now become a way of life, much like panty raids, beer busts, flagpole sitting, maypole dancing and racoon coats were in the college days of our parents. The difference now is students act for a purpose and that purpose is expressing opposition to society's injustices, such as the war in Vietnam and the maltreatment of this country's black people.

Most parents do not understand the radical behavior of some students and their repudiation of America's so-called "system of values."

In addition, there is little evidence to support any contention that law enforcement officials are any more sympathetic to student demands and desires than parents, especially considering the efforts of students to be heard — efforts that sometimes reach nihilistic proportions.

The battle lines have hardened between police and students and the clashes that sometimes result are drastically illustrated by the "Battle of Chicago," the "Liberation" activities at Columbia, the "Free-Speech" rebellion at the University of California at Berkeley and the police-student confrontation at Houston's Texas Southern University.

To the casual observer, police-student disagreements are also a fact of life in ty and the head of the Campus Security Force.

Some students contend that the Code is directed at student dissenters and places them in a position of double jeopardy, in that they may be dismissed from the University for violating a municipal statute, as well as thrown in jail.

McCarney discounted this contention and agreed that the University has a right to dismiss dissenting students. "After all, the school is a business," he said.

Schneider felt that the Code should eliminate some of the University's problems. "The student dissenters won't want to take a chance on getting kicked out of school," he said. "Most of the kids just want to get an education."

MAYNARD SCHNEIDER
"We need a balanced situation — law and order with justice. . ."

Nevertheless, the situation may be ripe for some sort of student demonstration against the Code, although the Student Senate recently went on record as being opposed to any form of student protest that is Code-directed.

If any sort of student protest reaches the proportions of last November's demonstrations, city and county officers may be called in for assistance.

McCarney said it was the policy of his office to wait until asked by university authorities before committing his forces, "even though the school is within our jurisdiction."

"The prerogative to call in outside help in quelling a disturbance is held by those in the President's office," Binney said. "They would have to evaluate the situation."

"We're very reluctant to call in outside help," assistant to the President, Phil Connell, said. "The outside forces are also concerned that we not overreact and make every effort to work out our problems within the University."

Binney's campus security officers don't have the power to make arrests and he said he is neither for nor against the granting of such power, but he doesn't think it will come about in the near future.

"Circumstances have arisen in the past, however, which we could have taken care of had we had arrest power," he said.

Elihu Root, noted lawyer and Nobel Prize winner, said some years ago: "The mere forcible enforcement of the law is quite inadequate. It is not fear of policemen that keeps the peace. It is the self-control of millions of inhabitants enabling them to conform their lives to the rules of conduct necessary to the common interest."

"Men must be willing," he said, "to sacrifice something of their own individual interests for the interest of city, state and country."

But until all laws are made just and applicable to all people, until the economic and political structure of this country has been drastically altered so as to eliminate the conditions which cause and support crime, until ALL crime is considered illegal and treated as such, until people lose the desire of getting something for nothing, until there is warranted respect for law enforcement and police realize that they, too, are subject to the law, Root's contention will be almost impossible to achieve and the cry for law and order today will remain nothing more than an empty sound.

in 1966 to 155 in 1967, robberies from 351 to 278, and aggravated assaults from 688 to 833.

Under crimes against property, burglaries increased from 9,245 in 1966 to 11,881 in 1967, larceny over $50 from 8,279 to 9,964 and auto thefts from 3,662 to 4,273.

The total population of Iowa increased by some 7,000 people over this one-year period.

Crime in the Iowa City area also increased in 1967. The figures in the table above supplied by the city's police department, show crime in Iowa City for 1966 and 1967 and also the number of crimes cleared by arrest for both years.

Police Chief Patrick McCarney attributes the national breakdown of law and order to the leniency of the federal courts in dealing with criminals, although he was quick to add, "The courts shouldn't take all the blame."

Johnson County Sheriff Maynard Schneider took a similar position. "We need a balanced situation — law and order with justice," he said, "but the scales of justice have gotten too far one way."

"I was glad to see some political candidates, like George Wallace, had the 'guts' to stand up and meet the issue head-on and try to balance the scales," he said.

Schneider said there could conceivably be a situation in which there is too much justice, "but," he added, "we don't want the scales tilted too far to the right either and thus create a police state."

Both Schneider and McCarney agreed that training of police officers was one way to insure more justice for accused persons. Citing the need for better trained officers, McCarney said the city police department is taking steps to solve the problem.

Iowa City policemen are constantly in a state of training and as reported in last Tuesday's Daily Iowan, they take courses in criminology and law enforcement procedures at schools and colleges in this area.

some university cities and towns across the country. In light of the demonstrations of November 1 and December 5, 1967, can this also be the situation in Iowa City?

In any regard, McCarney said relations between students, citizens and police in Iowa City are good and he does not think that there will be more student unrest at the University — especially the kind that took place in Chicago, which he feels was communist-inspired.

Students here don't have anything to complain about; however, they may act out of sympathy for other schools," he said.

Dissent is the heart of the issue between students and police, yet the right to dissent basically is not disputed by local law officials. The differences result over what form dissent will take and its degree of intensity.

William Binney, head of the campus security force, said, "In the current disorders on college campuses the groups involved seem to think they have the right to force their particular views or system on others who might reject or ignore them."

"Differences should be resolved peacefully within the structure of existing laws," he said.

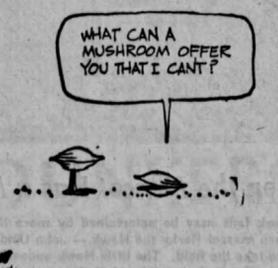

"People can dissent as much as they want," McCarney said, "but they can't deny others their constitutional rights."

"There's a right way and a wrong way to dissent," Schneider said. "If you infringe on other peoples' rights, it is wrong."

One group of laws that students at Iowa take particular issue with is the controversial Code of Student Life. The Code, although repudiated by some student and faculty groups as being unsound and restrictive in nature, is, nevertheless, now a part of the rules governing student conduct.

It has the full support of the Iowa City Police Chief, the Sheriff of Johnson Coun-

Kiesinger Summons Western Diplomats

BONN (AP) — Rumors of possible new Communist designs on West Berlin gained momentum Wednesday night after Chancellor Kurt George Kiesinger called in the ambassadors of the United States, Britain and France.

Soviet Attempt To Beat U.S. To Moon Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading American student of Soviet space projects suggested Wednesday that Russian cosmonauts might try to orbit the moon early in December, about two weeks ahead of the scheduled U.S. attempt.

The Russian goal, he said, would be reconnaissance and photography of the far side of the moon, which would be in sunlight at that time of the month.

The three U.S. Apollo 8 astronauts, ready for a lunar trip launch Dec. 21, plan to inspect the face of the moon during some 10 orbits on Christmas eve and Christmas day. They want to study the locations and approaches to equatorial sites on which another Apollo team may attempt to make a landing next year.

The U.S. authority on Soviet space shots asked that his name be withheld because of the speculative nature of his remarks.

However, he said a Soviet manned survey of the back of the moon would strengthen the belief that the Russians were not ready yet to consider a lunar landing. If they were ready, they too would be studying landing sites on the moon's face rather than "waiting to use the pictures that we get," he said.

Other rocket and spacecraft experts tended to agree with the analysis.

One expert said conditions would be suitable, so far as the Soviets were concerned, for a launch about Dec. 8. A cosmonaut crew sent on a lunar voyage on that date probably would be back on earth before the Apollo 8 craft gets ready to lift off.

Western ambassadors at the Chancellery, Diehl said. Kiesinger later went to Brussels for NATO meetings where subjects of discussion include what to do in the event of another Soviet-led move into an East European country.

A German parliamentary source, asking to remain anonymous, told the reporter he had information from East Berlin that the Communists would block the surface access routes across East Germany to Berlin starting tonight or early Friday and cut off all trade between East and West Germany.

Former Bonn postal minister, Richard Stuecklen, chairman of the Bavarian wing of Kiesinger's Christian Democratic party, told newsmen, "I have heard something is going on in East Germany. I have also heard that a Polish airborne division has landed in East Germany. But this is only hearsay."

East Germany held a massive propaganda drive to try to cause cancellation of last week's annual convention in West Berlin of Kiesinger's Christian Democratic party.

Defiance of the cancellation demand brought strong warning that the West Germans would have to bear the consequences.

Czech Party Meets; Freedom Loss Feared

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia's ruling Communist party Central Committee gathered Wednesday night for a full-dress session that Czechs and Slovaks feared would further curtail their freedom.

The Central Committee is opening a plenary session Thursday to approve changes in the party reform program forced by the Soviet-led occupation, now in its 13th week.

Recent cutbacks in the freedom of press and freedom to travel abroad prompted some Czechoslovaks to fear that the session would approve further concessions to demands for a return to orthodox communism now being voiced by a pro-Soviet faction of old guard Communists.

Despite a ban on demonstrations and appeals by leaders for calm, there was a growing prospect of weekend clashes between police and students and young workers threatening parades and sit-ins, especially if the party yields to the pro-Soviet elements. The Communist party newspaper Rude Pravo predicted the party leadership would settle accounts with the orthodox wing in order to avert a major political crisis.

"The November plenary meeting of the Central Committee will say what it has to say on the basic questions of responsibility and discipline of Communists and party unity," the paper said, "unless the present differences of opinion between liberals and conservatives are to result sooner or later in a serious internal party crisis that would really threaten the action capacity of the whole party."

One Czech source said the document up for committee approval, listing party tasks for the future, bore little resemblance to the one endorsed by district and regional branches of the party.

The informant said it was extensively rewritten to make concessions to Moscow and to insert large passages of criticism of the post-January reforms, especially of the press, radio and television.

Young Filmmakers Featured In Union Kinetic Art Program

The works of young filmmakers from five countries, including several that have won awards, are featured in the second program of the Kinetic Art series. It will be presented in the Union Illinois Room today and Friday.

According to the Union Board Cinema 16 committee, sponsor of the series, kinetic art is the art of experimental filmmaking. It utilizes unconventional techniques to create a visual experience and the visual experience does not always have a unified story line, nor does it need one.

Jan Svankmajer's prizewinning film, "El Cetera," made in Prague, is an exercise in three new techniques of film animation: collage, successive color wash drawings, and a combination of masking and double exposure.

Three films from Paris are included in the program. "Paris: Mai 1968," produced by the Film Cooperative of Paris, depicts the May student uprising in France.

"Versailles," by Albert Lamorisse, is an exploration from the air of the splendor of Versailles. The film won the grand prize for short films at the Cannes Film Festival.

Another production from Paris is "Spiderephant," done by Piotr Kamler. Kamler, a Polish abstract filmmaker working in Paris, is considered the European leader in experimental cinematography by some critics.

Another award-winning film, "Elegia," done by Jan Huszarik in collaboration with several young filmmakers, employs intense visual imagery to turn its political comment into a hallucinatory vision.

"Tonight Let's All Make Love in London," by Peter Whitehead, features Michael Caine, Julie Christie, The Rolling Stones and The Animals.

Tickets for the series are on sale for $1 at the Union box office. The films will be shown at 4, 7:30 and 9 tonight and at 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Friday.

Nixon Mental Trouble Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Columnist Drew Pearson said Wednesday that President-elect Richard M. Nixon was under the care of a New York psychiatrist when he was Eisenhower's vice president.

However, a Nixon aide and the psychiatrist said the report was untrue.

In a speech at a National Press Club luncheon, Pearson said the psychiatrist, whom he identified as Dr. Arnold A. Hutschnecker, had advised Nixon on psychiatric problems. Pearson quoted the doctor as saying, "Nixon did have the problem of not standing up under great pressure." Reached by telephone in New York, Hutschnecker said, "It is an absolutely false statement because I never said that."

Ron Ziegler, a Nixon press aide at Nixon's transition headquarters in New York, said, "I thought Pearson columns like that came before the election."

Ziegler at first refused to comment; then he described the report as "totally untrue, of course." Asked directly if the story was untrue, he answered,

"Absolutely." Hutschnecker said he had treated Nixon in a strictly medical capacity while he was a senator and during the first few years he was vice president. Hutschnecker said he could not remember the dates. He said treatment was discontinued because Nixon was in Washington, and he was in New York. Hutschnecker said he was practicing internal medicine in the 1950s but has since switched to the analytic field, psychotherapy.

Couple Arrested on Drug Charge

Earl C. Mechtensimer Jr., 447 Second Ave., and his wife, Mary, were charged at 1 a.m. Wednesday by Johnson County Sheriff's deputies with possession of marijuana. Both Mechtensimers are 19.

Eller Gets AP Defensive Honors

NEW YORK — The day of the two-way player is supposed to be over in professional football but they forgot to tell Carl Eller, Minnesota's 6-6, 265-pound defensive end.

Eller dumped Green Bay's Bart Starr three times and hit Donny Anderson so hard he jarred the ball loose for a fumble that the Vikings recovered. Called into the game as a tight end for his blocking, Eller blocked out Lee Roy Caffey, Packer linebacker, on a two-yard run by Bill Brown for the winning touchdown. Oh yes, he also blocked a field goal attempt in the fourth quarter.

Although teammate Alan Page got the nod last week, the Associated Press went back to the same club to name Eller the Defensive Player of the Week in the National Football League.

Stram Apologizes to Bengals

CINCINNATI — Coach Paul Brown of Cincinnati disclosed Wednesday that Kansas City Coach Hank Stram called him Tuesday to apologize for his players' accusations that the Bengals played dirty in Sunday's American Football League game. "Stram said there was nothing to it," Brown asserted, concerning play in the contest last Sunday which Kansas City won 16-9. Brown said that Stram told him Kansas City films showed "there was no substance" to the charges. Brown said that Cincinnati game pictures indicated if there were any roughhouse culprits, they were from the charges.

Grimsley Picks Buckeyes By 7 Points over Hawks

By WILL GRIMSLEY
NEW YORK — Oklahoma and Auburn are late bloomers capable of shaking up the Top 10 and further scrambling the bowl picture, but only one will do it. The Sooners should add the Missouri scalp to that of Kansas, but Auburn may be caught looking over Georgia's head in Alabama. Upset bets: Michigan State over Purdue, UCLA over Washington.

Last week: 44-15 for .746. Season: 322-96, .770.
Southern California 30, Oregon State 23: The Trojans stop Earthquake Enyart and avenge last year's only defeat.
Ohio State 27, Iowa 20: Two of the year's top offensive powers, but the Buckeyes have the stouter defense.
Georgia 19, Auburn 15: The Plainsmen have the muscle and imagination to win but their big effort will come Nov. 30 against Bear Bryant.

Cilek Takes Passing Lead In 3 Conference Categories

Iowa's unheralded quarterback, Mike Cilek, who has been playing second fiddle to Larry Lawrence all season, has roared into the lead in three conference passing categories. In official statistics released Wednesday, Cilek was leading in completion average — 11 for 14

14th in the nation in rushing. Other Hawkeyes appearing among the conference leaders are Tim Sullivan — seventh in rushing; Barry Cries and Ray Manning — fifth and eighth in pass receiving; Bill Powell — seventh in kickoff returns; Kerry Reardon — first in punting with a 39.8 average; Steve Wilson — seventh in punt returns; and Mike Phillips and Larry Ely — fourth and fifth in total tackles. Also, Lawrence is third in the league in scoring with seven touchdowns for 42 points. Ron Johnson leads with 50 points, followed by Ohio State's Jim Otis — 48 points. Podolak and Sullivan are tied for fifth with Leroy Keyes of Purdue. All have scored six touchdowns for 36 points. In team statistics, Iowa is still No. 1 offensively and No. 8 on defense. Its high-powered offense now ranks eighth in the nation with a 435.4 yards a game average. Also, it is 12th in rushing with a 254 yard average and eighth in scoring with 32.3 points a game.

MIKE CILEK Passes with Authority for .786, in average yards per attempt — 14.6, and in least passes intercepted. The statistics include only those quarterbacks who have had at least 10 completions. Cilek has a big lead in completion average with his nearest rival being Ohio State's second-string quarterback Ron Maciejowski, who has completed 24 of 38 passes for a .632 average. He also has a considerable lead in average yards per attempt. Maciejowski is again runner-up in that area with an 8.7 average. The Hawks' accurate passer also is second in touchdown passes with five. Michigan's Dennis Brown repeated as the league's leading passer — throwing for 831 yards and 9 touchdowns. Lawrence slipped to fourth in passing behind Northwestern's Dave Shelbourne and Ohio State's Rex Kern. In other statistics, tailback Eddie Podolak has replaced Michigan's Ron Johnson as the Big 10's leading rusher. Following his record-breaking 286 yards rushing against Northwestern Saturday, Podolak jumped to

Gibson Voted MVP In National League

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
MATSUYAMA, Japan — When Bob Gibson, the St. Louis Cardinal pitching ace, learned Wednesday he had added the National League Most Valuable Player Award to the Cy Young Award he was stunned. "You're kidding," was Gibson's first reaction. Then he added, "It's great. It's just great, because pitchers don't usually win MVP awards. I've got to thank everyone on the team. The whole team helped me have a good year." Orlando Cepeda, the 1967 winner who did not get a single vote this time, was among the first to congratulate the 33-year-old right-hander who set a league record with a 1.12 earned run average while compiling a 22-9 record. Gibson, Cepeda and the other Cardinals were in this city on Shikoku, the smallest Japanese main islands 400 miles southwest of Tokyo, for another stop on their 18-game good will exhibition tour. Gibson's sweep of National League honors matched Denny McLain's success in the American League where the 31-year-old pitcher from Detroit also took both the MVP and Cy Young awards. McLain won both unanimously and Gibson got all the votes for the Cy Young Award. Limited to pitchers, he received 14 firsts in the MVP competition to six for outfielder Pete Rose of Cincinnati. Until this year only Don Newcombe in 1955 and Sandy Koufax in 1963, both Dodgers, had won both the MVP and Cy Young. Gibson's sensational year included one stretch of 15 straight victories. He also pitched 11 shutouts and completed 28 of 34 starts while erasing Grove Cleveland Alexander's earned run mark of 1.22 set in 1915 with the Philadelphia Phillies. The voting was done by a 20-man committee of baseball writers, two from each league city, and points were distributed on the basis of 14 for first, nine for second, etc., down to one for 10th.

San Diego State Continues To Top Small College Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
San Diego State and North Dakota State remained 1-2 in The Associated Press' small college football rankings Wednesday. San Diego State increased its margin over North Dakota State, however, receiving 11 first-place votes and 304 points to 236 points for the runner-up. Chattanooga lost to Mississippi 36-16 after eight victories and fell from third to fifth. New Mexico Highlands, 9-0, and Tampa, 7-1, each moved up a spot to third and fourth. Eastern Kentucky, 7-1, remained sixth, but Texas A & M, 7-1, advanced from eighth to seventh, and Western Kentucky, 8-1, rose from ninth to eighth while Indiana, Pa., 9-0, slipped from seventh to ninth. Weber State, 7-1, moved from 11th to 10th. The top 20, with first-place votes, records and total points. Points awarded for first 15 picks on basis of 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 etc.

Briton Tops Ashe In Tennis Tourney

LONDON — The surprise elimination of Arthur Ashe, America's Open champion, created a furor Wednesday in the British Covered Courts Tennis Championship. Ashe, who last week led the U.S. Davis Cup team to an inter zone victory over India in Puerto Rico, lost to a little-known Briton, Gerald Battrick, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2. Later, in an informal interview, the American admitted he gave only 80 per cent effort. One of the tournament directors, Dave Penman, said he was disappointed over Ashe's performance and the first round defeat of two other U.S. Davis Cup aces, Clark Graebner and Charlie Pasarell. Indicating that he felt that the Americans weren't giving their best efforts, he said he planned to discuss the matter with Donald Dell, U.S. Davis Cup captain, who is scheduled to arrive here today. Questioned afterward, Ashe told newsmen: "Let us say I was trying 80 per cent. There might have been three things wrong with me. I might have a fractured shin. I might have a deposit of calcium on my left heel or I might have tendonitis in my right elbow. "Anyway, I guess you'd say I had a black day."

The Pros Do the Teaching— Writers Workshop 'Unique'

By ARLENE FAULK
Novelists and writers for The New Yorker, The Atlantic Monthly and The Saturday Evening Post teaching in the Writers Workshop provide opportunities for University students to develop their creative writing ability.

George Starbuck, director of the Workshop, said recently that the program was unique because good young writers were put in direct contact with successful poets and novelists. He said also that the instructors had much freedom to set up their own format for teaching.

"Success in the program springs in part from the intuition of the people who set it up," Starbuck said.

"Most writers are good teachers and have a genuine interest in education," he said.

This fall instructors with varied backgrounds in creative writing are using new methods of teaching in the workshop.

Mary Carter is using an experimental approach in fiction writing. She requires a student to hand in a writing of 300 words each day.

Miss Carter, who has written two novels as well as stories for The Saturday Evening Post, Kenyon Review and Redbook, said the idea behind her writing-pressure method was to synthesize professional working conditions for the students.

"The approach is working splendidly for me," Miss Carter said.

"I want to teach those things which helped me the most when I started writing. The main thing is to keep writing and to know that you have to write each day," she said.

She said that experimental teaching procedures are encouraged by Starbuck. Professional writers aren't going to teach in the same way as academic instructors, she said.

"It is important for a student to have a background knowledge of fiction and technical problems in writing," Miss Carter said. "But the Workshop is unique because students find out how fiction works and tackle technical problems in a theoretical way."

Jordan Pecile, winner of the story of the year award from The Atlantic in 1963, teaches Forms of Fiction for undergraduates.

Pecile said that in his fiction course students read novels as a group of writers to develop an acute awareness of technical problems and devices an author used to communicate his ideas to the readers.

"In examining form, students acquire a technical vocabulary that is immensely useful in producing a sensitive and knowledgeable reader," Pecile said.

They already have a broad background in literature, and from studying forms of writing can gain a special grasp of writing that helps in analyzing, criticizing and teaching," he said.

Many other instructors in the Workshop are exercising new approaches to their courses. Starbuck said that the Workshop was designed to allow individuality both in teaching and in a student's writing.

A student must submit poems, two or three short stories or a section of a novel he has written before he can be admitted into the workshop. The student must be accepted by both the Workshop program and the Graduate College.

In addition to writing, the Workshop invites poets and other literary specialists to come and talk about or read some of their works. Artists invited this year include: poets Gary Snyder and Diane Wilkowski; fiction writer Kurt Vonnegut; and Bryan MacMahon, Irish poet, novelist and translator.

Starbuck said that the entire University received benefits from the Workshop. He said that many of the graduate students made good teachers for undergraduates and he hoped their presence had improved the quality of undergraduate teaching.

Class to Get Inside Dope From Regent

Jonathan B. Richards, a member of the State Board of Regents, will meet with members of an Action Studies Program course, Problems of the Contemporary University, at 8 tonight in University Hall.

Richards is expected to describe the board, how it is selected, how it functions and then discuss questions and issues posed by the students.

Richards was appointed to the board in 1964. He was graduated from Harvard Law School in 1937 and now lives in Red Oak, where he has a law practice.

Topics likely to be discussed will include broad questions such as: how the University is governed, what power the regents have regarding the University and how the power is exercised.

Behind these findings lies a general interest in finding out how the University operates and a critique by several members of the class that the University is part of a "military-industrial complex."

Students of the class are also attending sessions of the board, which is meeting in Iowa City today and Friday.

Marching Band to Perform

"Sounds from the Stadium," will be the theme of a concert to be presented by the Hawkeye Marching Band at 8 p.m. Monday in the Union Main Lounge.

The 130-member band will play "Step to the Rear," "I Think I'm Goin' Out of My Head," a medley including "Man of La Mancha," "My Cup Runneth Over," "By the Time I Get to Phoenix" and "Alfie," plus other songs presented at football games.

The band is directed by Frank Piersol, professor of music, and Tom Davis, associate professor of music.

"Go! Hawkeyes! Go!," a record of school songs and other half-time numbers recorded by the marching band will be on sale following the concert, according to Davis. It was released last fall, and is now available at the University Band Office and at local record stores.

Tickets for the concert may be picked up free of charge at the Union box office, the University Band Office in the Music Building and Eble and West music stores.

Free baby sitting will be provided during the concert for children from ages two to six in the Union Music Room by Union Board Hospitality Committee.

Odd Weapons Must Be Listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says the American public is not responding to any great extent in registering various weapons classified as "destructive devices" under the new federal gun control act.

They include rocket launchers, hand grenades and machine guns and under the gun control act of 1968 must be registered by Dec. 1.

The IRS believes that tens of thousands of such weapons are in the hands of citizens, many of them brought home as souvenirs by GIs in World War II, Korea and Vietnam. But only 1,583 registration applications have been received from the entire country.

Local School Teaches Preschoolers Both Intellectual and Practical Skills

By ELLEN REZNEK
Letters made of sandpaper and cubes constructed out of beads are two tools used to teach preschoolers the fundamentals of reading and addition at the Montessori School in Iowa City.

This school is part of an international system located throughout the United States and Europe. The original concepts on which the schools are based were developed around the turn of the century by Dr. Maria Montessori, who was Italy's first woman physician.

Dr. Montessori studied groups of children to find out their needs and interests at different ages. She developed teaching methods and materials which enabled these children to learn many skills at a much earlier age than had previously been thought possible, according to Katherine Blake, director of the Iowa City school.

Miss Blake, a native of Ireland, who has been in this country for only a year and in Iowa City since September, attended a special Montessori training school in Ireland for three years in order to receive certification to teach in a Montessori school.

Iowa City's Montessori school, which has been in existence for seven years, has an enrollment of 47 children between the ages of 2½ and 5. These children are divided into two classes, one of which meets each weekday morning and the other each weekday afternoon.

The school is supported by tuition and is run by a board made up of parents of children enrolled in the school.

Special standardized materials, which were first developed by Dr. Montessori, are used at all Montessori schools, according to Miss Blake. She said that these materials were designed to develop the senses, increase physical coordination and aid in learning academic subjects such as reading, mathematics and geography.

Most of the materials are very simple in design. Sensory development materials include paper and cloth squares of different textures, which are used to develop the sense of touch, bottles containing spices with different odors to develop the sense of smell and boxes that make different sounds when shaken, which are used to develop the sense of hearing.

Academic subjects are first introduced concretely using the senses and physical environment, Miss Blake explained.

Reading is taught phonetically, she said. Children are first taught different sounds and are then shown the letters of the alphabet and told that these symbols represent the sounds.

The letters they are shown are made out of sandpaper, and the children trace over them with their fingers in order to learn their shapes. Then they practice forming the letters in the air.

Miss Blake said that after feeling the letters and forming them in the air, it was easy for the preschoolers to write because they understood how letters were formed.

When the children have learned all of the sounds and the symbols for them, they are able to read by sounding out the letters contained in the word, according to Miss Blake. She said that at the California school where she taught last year, all of the five year olds were able to read simple stories by the end of the school year after having been taught by this method.

Besides these intellectual pursuits, the children also engage in what Miss Blake termed "exercises in practical life." These three, four and five-year-olds learn to shine their shoes, mop floors, wash windows and do other housekeeping chores. They also practice such skills as tying, buttoning and zipping.

The Montessori method stresses independence and individual attention, according to Miss Blake. The children work individually, exploring interests on their own and discovering answers for themselves, Miss Blake said.

A child may pursue as many interests as he desires, and because he works alone, he may proceed at his own speed, Miss Blake explained. She spends her time supervising the children's activities and giving individual help when it is needed.

Miss Blake commented that although the children work alone, they are not undisciplined. Each child must put away all his materials when he is through with them.

Because there is only one set of each type of equipment, the children must learn to share with others, and according to Miss Blake, this sharing helps them develop respect for other people's rights.

Miss Blake said that she tried to treat the children "as individuals who are able to take care of themselves and of others."

She commented that the youngsters "all seemed to enjoy school." This is very important, she says, because a child who is interested and involved in what he is doing will learn faster and understand better.

Miss Blake said that when Dr. Montessori first introduced her teaching methods, there was much opposition to it. The system has been described in terms ranging from "progressive" to "radical," according to Miss Blake.

She explained that even today many people criticize the method for not enforcing enough discipline. However, she added that many of the techniques originated by Dr. Montessori, who died in 1952, have been copied and are presently being used in other schools outside of the Montessori system.

The KLH Model Eleven-W

will fill your home with music... for a minimum investment in dollars and valuable living space.

The Eleven-W is a superb stereo phonograph system that delivers a level of performance far out of proportion to its moderate size and cost.

Everything needed for surprising sound is built into the unobtrusive Eleven-W. There's powerful solid-state circuitry, a custom-built Garrard record changer with a Pickering magnetic cartridge and diamond stylus, and a pair of KLH's remarkable miniature full-range speakers. Beautifully housed in three small oiled-walnut cabinets. With jacks for plugging in a tape recorder or radio.

If you'd like to take this kind of performance with you, just drop the "W" and look at the Model Eleven—the same system in a handsome vinyl luggage case, ready to travel wherever there's an AC outlet.

Come see and hear how to get a maximum of music from a minimum of visible equipment.

Waterloo Station Cleared by FCC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission announced Wednesday that so far as it can determine, television station KWWL-TV, Waterloo, Iowa, acted fairly on the question of a low-rent housing project.

Paul Chambers, chairman of a neighborhood group opposing the project, had complained to the FCC that the station editorialized in favor of the project but refused air time for opposition views.

Blacks Studied at West High

By DAVE STEDWELL

Black America — its history, problems and future — has been recognized as a vital subject for study by the students of Iowa City West High School.

The student council selected "Black America" as the theme of its Domestic Affairs Week which ends Friday. During this week, a series of films, lectures and discussions covering various aspects of the theme are being presented to the students.

Several University and community leaders were selected by the council to be featured speakers. Karen Whitney, A4, Des Moines, an Afro-American queen runner-up; Philip Hubbard, dean of academic affairs; and Patrick J. McCarney, Iowa City police chief, talked to the students about different aspects of the problem of the black man in America.

The topics covered during the week have included the history of the black race in America, the rise and decline of black movements in the United States and a discussion by McCarney on the topic "Violence and Riots."

In addition to the local speakers, a group of students from Central High School in Davenport presented a play entitled "Black America." Robert Dilly, a conservative political figure from Des Moines, also spoke to the students.

The students have attended an all-school assembly every day this week. Each of the assemblies has featured a lecturer or a panel of speakers who have talked to the students

Allies Hope For Support From Nixon

BRUSSELS (AP) — Top policymakers from the 15 nations in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization confer on European security today and some expressed private hopes that President-elect Richard M. Nixon will step up U.S. support for an allied power buildup in Western Europe.

None of the foreign, defense and finance ministers arriving in the Belgian capital wanted to speak out on this publicly because President Johnson is still in office. But many of them voiced the hope in private conversation that under Nixon the United States will turn its attention to Europe after the war in Vietnam.

The renewed interest among Europeans for a power buildup stems from the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

On the eve of a yearly stock-taking session by the 15-nation alliance, there were strong suggestions Nixon indeed will have some bold ideas for leading a "new look NATO" into the 1970s.

The suggestions came from two Republican congressmen.

Rep. Paul Findley of Illinois reported the president-elect wants an early NATO summit meeting; arrangements allowing the European allies to participate in global policy discussions; an increase in NATO force levels; new talks designed to achieve a reconciliation with French President Charles de Gaulle, and creation of an arms agency inside NATO.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits of New York, said "once the Vietnam war is ended," Nixon should give top priority to reconstructing U.S. relations with West Europe.

Both men are here for a meeting of the North Atlantic Assembly made up of lawmakers from NATO member states.

Nixon Plans Shakeup At 1600 Pennsylvania

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard M. Nixon made it clear Wednesday he plans a major shakeup of the traditional White House staff system. And a top aide indicated the president-elect intended to be a more "activist" president than Dwight D. Eisenhower.

A Nixon spokesman announced the appointment of a second assistant to the president, H. R. "Bob" Haldeman, 42, a Los Angeles advertising executive, who will handle general administrative matters and Nixon's daily schedule.

Haldeman, a chief of staff for Nixon during the campaign, told newsmen there would be only three or four jobs comparable to his, all of them "generalists" involved in general planning rather than details.

"We don't want specific people locked into specific boxes," Haldeman told a briefing session at the Hotel Pierre, where the Nixon camp is working out the details of the transition of power Jan. 20.

The Nixon Administration wouldn't have a press secretary or appointments secretary, he said. There was speculation, for example, that Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's communications chief during the campaign, would become an assistant to the president, and Ron Ziegler, the traveling press secretary in the campaign, would become a special assistant, doing the detail work with the press.

Beneath the three or four assistants to the president, Haldeman said, there will be several special assistants assigned to specific areas of responsibility.

The staff will be smaller than in other recent administrations, Haldeman said, and will certainly be one of the youngest.

With this kind of organization, Haldeman indicated in answer to questions, the president-elect will be a more activist president than Eisenhower.

"I think," he said, "he'll be very much in it from the beginning."

The preliminary planning for the White House staff was done during the campaign, Haldeman said, and the details are still being worked out. The first assistant appointed, on Tuesday, was Bryce N. Harlow, 52, a White House aide in the Eisenhower Administration.

"We've spent a lot of time on a review of the White House staff," Haldeman said. "We've talked to a number of people who held the posts in past and present administrations and we feel there are a lot of ways we can improve the White House staff structure."

Nixon appeared for the first time since his return Monday to New York from Key Biscayne, Fla., and Washington, when he strolled 1 1/2 blocks down Fifth Avenue from his apartment to the hotel.

The president-elect smiled and greeted a few persons, then went to the 39th floor, transition headquarters, for more staff meetings.

At noon, Nixon went by motorcade to New York's financial district for lunch with members of his law firm. As he left the hotel, a burglar alarm on a truck parked at the Fifth Avenue entrance went off at length, upsetting Secret Service agents, presumably because it was attracting too much attention.

University Parking Problem Still a Headache for Students

By DAVE DIERKS

Five minutes until class time and still no place to park — does that sound familiar?

A growing student enrollment and a growing campus have made parking one of the University's more pressing problems. However, this year the University is on top of the problem, according to John Dooley, director of parking.

At the end of October 8,500 cars had been registered with the University, Dooley said. This number includes cars of students, faculty and staff. In addition, Dooley said, there are from 1,000 to 2,000 visitors on campus each day. The majority of these visitors park in an area near University Hospitals.

Total available parking spaces on campus are about 5,700. Therefore, it would take no mathematics major to figure out that there are more cars than available spaces on campus.

However, Dooley insisted that essentially the University parking system was adequate.

"We don't have a parking problem as such," said Dooley.

"This means, in effect, that there are students waiting in line for other students to vacate their spaces," Dooley explained.

The Old Iowa Field lot would have been more crowded this year if meters had not been installed, Dooley said.

"The meters have been doing a fine job in producing a high rate of turnover of student parkers," he said.

The meters force students, either to return frequently to put more money into the meters, or to finish their business on campus and leave, Dooley said.

Also one parking lot near East Hall was closed this year and an addition to the Physics Building is being built on it.

Trevino, Boros Favored in World Golf

LEE TREVINO Try for 10th U.S. Victory
JULIUS BOROS

ROME, Italy (AP) — The United States, represented by Lee Trevino and Julius Boros, was installed Wednesday night as the 4-1 favorite to win the World Golf Cup — formerly the Canada Cup — for the 10th time in 16 years.

New Zealand's Bob Charles and Walter Godfrey were listed at 5-1 along with South Africa's Gary Player and Coble Le Grange.

At 6-1 were Canada's George Knutson and Al Balding. The followers of golf, apparently are convinced that the U.S. Open and PGA champions are a few shots ahead in the field of 42 nations. The 6,850-yard par 72 Oligata circuit, demanding maximum accuracy because of trees and bunkers, is an American-style course.

Jets, Chiefs Lead in AFL Defense

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Jets have given up only four touchdowns and 133 points. Houston's records are 18 and 199.

The Jets have a big lead in total yardage, giving up only 2,049 — 693 rushing and 1,356 passing. Oakland is a distant second at 2,434.

San Diego still leads in offensive yardage with 3,708 yards.

SPORTS BRIEFS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The punchless Los Angeles Dodgers are making it 10 feet easier to hit home runs in their baseball park.

Work is under way to move home plate that much closer to the fences — shrinking the distance at center field to 400 feet and at the bullpens to 360. The decision to move the plate came from Dodger owner Walter O'Malley, who reportedly feels his team has enough pitching to make up for any help the change might give the opposition.

LONDON (AP) — Thad Spencer, still smarting from Tuesday night's six-round defeat by Britain's Billy Walker, was cleared by a magistrate's court Wednesday of obtaining credit by fraud.

The heavyweight boxer from San Francisco, faced a charge in connection with a London apartment he was said to have rented last May.

John Purcell, the magistrate, acquitted Spencer but commented: "I think the behavior of all parties concerned is disreputable."

The fraud charge concerned an apartment owned by Charles Julian Wills. Wills said Spencer agreed to rent the apartment for a month, but paid only two weeks' rent, pleading he was temporarily short of money.

Wills charged the remaining two weeks' rent never was paid. Spencer told the court the apartment was used only by friends.

Kelly Leads NFL Rushers

NEW YORK (AP) — Gale Sayers' injury and the upset of the Dallas Cowboys by the New York Giants are reflected in the shakeup of individual statistical leaders in the National Football League.

Sayers, who underwent knee surgery and is lost to Chicago for the season after suffering an injury in the San Francisco game Sunday, dropped out of the rushing lead. Leroy Kelly, Cleveland's big running back and defending rushing champ, regained the top with 127 yards on 17 carries, his sixth 100-plus day of the season.

Kelly is the new leader with 890 yards, followed by Sayers at 856.

Fran Tarkenton moved back in front of Dallas' Don Meredith in passing when he led the Giants to that 27-21 upset of the Cowboys. The standings are based on a combination of Tarkenton's 57.4 percentage of completions, 14 touchdown passes, 3.1 percentage of interceptions and 8.13 average gain.
