U.S. Troops In Germany By January

War Games Planned Near Czech Border

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will fly 15,500 men and 96 F4 Phantom fighter-bombers to West Germany for January maneuvers near the Czechoslovakia border, the Pentagon announced Friday.

The men, including 12,000 Army troops, will conduct exercises near Grafenwohr, West Germany, for a few weeks before returning to the United States.

The four Phantom squadrons will remain longer to complete additional training, the Pentagon said.

The actions come as part of a broad plan by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to shore up the alliance in response to the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia and tensions in Central Europe.

The announcement said Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford informed NATO ministers of the "proposed U.S. contribution to the increased readiness of NATO" when they met in Brussels on Nov. 14.

The exercises had been planned for later in 1969 but Friday's Pentagon announcement confirmed earlier reports that they had been moved ahead about six months.

The war games will cost the Pentagon considerably at a time when the department is under pressure to hold down spending. Officials estimated the cost could run as high as $16 million.

Advance elements will be leaving the United States about Jan. 5 while the remainder will follow beginning about Jan. 23.

Although the Army units and some of the Air Force personnel will return around March 1, the four Phantom squadrons will remain for an unspecified period.

The Army and Air Force units involved were pulled out of West Germany last summer under a plan to base them in the United States in order to help cut the balance-of-payments deficit.

The Air Force elements include 3,500 men in the fighter squadrons and six C141 airlift wings.

The Army units include two brigades of the 24th Infantry Division at Ft. Riley, Kan., which will link up with a third brigade of that outfit which has remained in West Germany.

The plan has been to rotate the brigades to serve one at a time in West Germany but the Pentagon said Friday that has been changed. After the maneuvers the No. 1 brigade, already in West Germany, will continue to hold the post.

The Pentagon said the exercises "are designed to maintain proficiency in operating procedures and to deal with special requirements pertaining to the European theater." The location is about 30 miles from the Czech border.

The first movement of Army troops to Europe will involve 80 C141 flights hauling 6,000 troops and 57 tons of cargo and equipment.

This advance party will be followed in about two weeks by 70 C141 flights with 4,000 troops and 124 tons of cargo.

Outcome 'Impossible to Tell' In Friday Renewal Hearing

The case of Iowa City's stymied urban renewal program will go before the Iowa Supreme Court Friday.

The case, which is the city's appeal of an injunction preventing action on the program, is far from being open and shut. City Atty. Jay Honohan, who with William Meardon, special city attorney for urban renewal, will argue Iowa City's case, said it was "impossible to tell" what the outcome might be.

Since March, three of the five present City Council members have been enjoined on grounds of conflict of interest from acting on renewal matters. Former Eighth District Court Judge Clair E. Hamilton granted a permanent injunction, sought by 20 Iowa City businessmen, against Councilmen Robert Lind Sr. and Robert (Doc) Connell and Mayor Loren Hickerson.

The businessmen's suit charged that the three have business interests in the renewal area, which under Iowa law would prevent them from acting on renewal matters.

Lind operates an art supply store on North Dubuque Street and Connell owns a tavern on College Street. Hickerson is employed by the University, which owns property in the renewal area. Honohan said that, in attempting to persuade the higher court to reverse last spring's decision, he and Meardon would use "basically the same arguments" as those they advanced in District Court.

Those arguments were:

- That only one of the three enjoined councilmen (Connell) has a property interest in the area since Connell is the only councilman who actually owns downtown property. (Connell testified in District Court last February that he thought he was disqualified under law from taking action on urban renewal.)
- That if the injunction were upheld, councilmen affected should be prevented from acting only on renewal projects in the specific area where they are found to have property interests. The downtown area has been divided into five zones for renewal purposes.

S.F. State President Offers Students Concessions Aimed at Ending Strike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — S. I. Hayakawa, acting president of San Francisco State College, offered concessions Friday aimed at ending a violent month-long strike. But strike leaders quickly rejected them and called him a liar.

Within minutes after Hayakawa announced his program, about 300 black and white students, along with some black community leaders, marched around the campus, shouting, "On Strike! Shut it down!"

The demonstrators held a brief rally at which speakers castigated the acting president, then marched off.

It was in sharp contrast with Thursday, when police with drawn guns and chemical crowd repellents had to protect Hayakawa from a mob which stormed the administration building.

Hayakawa announced creation of a full-scale Black Studies Department, to replace a temporary black studies program, with

SDS Stages Repeat Of Anti-Code Rally

By DUANE SWINTON

Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), already threatened with disciplinary action for holding an unauthorized rally on Nov. 1, held another rally Friday afternoon which may result in further action against the organization and individual students.

Friday's rally was staged on the east steps of Old Capitol from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., a place and time "unauthorized" under University regulations.

The main purposes of the rally, according to SDS, were to violate the Code of Student Life and to show support for three students charged with violating the Code.

Roger L. Augustine, associate dean of students, attended the rally and handed out printed statements to speakers, advising them that the rally was unauthorized and that persons and organizations participating were violating University regulations.

Some members of SDS asked that Augustine leave and not interfere with the rally. Augustine replied that "the University feels each individual should be informed that the rally is unauthorized."

Augustine remained throughout the rally, giving names to his secretary to write down and sometimes standing inside Old Capitol because of the brisk weather.

About 200 people attended the rally.

The rally was not registered with the Office of Space Assignment and Utilization, which is responsible for scheduling events on the Pentacrest. A loudspeaker was also used although University officials had previously said that using a loudspeaker might disrupt classes in nearby buildings.

Brief skits parodying University Pres. Howard R. Bowen, the State Board of Regents and Campus Security officers were presented between speeches.

In one skit, Richard Timmins, A4, Estherville, dressed in a cape and wearing a paper sack for a hat, represented a character he called "Super Howie."

About 10 members of SDS and representatives of the New University Conference (NUC), the Iowa City Peace and Freedom Club and the Hawkeye Area Draft Counseling Service spoke at the rally, despite Augustine's warnings.

SDS made three demands at the rally: that the Code be abolished, that SDS and the three students charged with violating the Code be granted amnesty and that the hearings for SDS and the students all be scheduled at the same time.

Howard J. Ehrlich, associate professor of sociology and anthropology, represented the NUC and said that the graduate-faculty group "stands beside SDS in public violation of the Code and in support of the students charged with violating the Code."

He said that the NUC had not participated in previous rallies this year but had come out in support of Friday's rally because "student and faculty demands concerning the Code have all been ignored."

Another faculty member, Robert F. Sayre, associate professor of English, also spoke at the rally.

Sayre called the rally the "most memorable happening at the University today" and said "an open forum" should exist at the University so the Code and issues behind it can be freely discussed.

Sayre said that he did not completely agree with all the demands of SDS and the three students. "I'm critical of both the students and the administration but I'm more critical of the administration," he said.

Whether the two faculty members will face any disciplinary action for speaking at the rally remains to be seen.

Dewey B. Stuit, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said Friday afternoon he was "not prepared at this time to say if any action would be taken" against Ehrlich and Sayre.

Stuit did not attend the rally and said he would have to study reports of what occurred before any decision on taking action could be made.

However, Stuit said, "As I understand the situation, the rally was clearly unauthorized and participation in it by faculty members is not in the best interest of the University."

Any further charges against SDS and speakers at the rally of violating the Code would probably be made through the Office of Student Affairs.

The Office has already charged SDS; Jerry Sies, A4, Iowa City; Ken Wessels, A3, Dyersville; and Dan Cheeseman, A4, Elkader, with violating the Code for participating in the Nov. 1 rally, which also was held to protest the Code. Sies is also charged with other Code violations for taking part in an Oct. 28 sit-in that protested recruiting by Marines on campus.

Sies' hearing before the Committee on Student Conduct (CSC) has been scheduled for Wednesday and SDS's hearing has been set for Dec. 17.

CSC Chairman James F. Curtis, professor of speech pathology, said Thursday that charges against Wessels and Cheeseman would be heard simultaneously but that their hearing would not be scheduled at the same time as Sies'.

The three students face possible expulsion or suspension from the University under the charges and SDS could have its charter revoked. If any students are charged because of Friday's rally, they would face the same possible penalties. The climax to Friday's rally came when 72 people filed past the microphone and stated their names and student ID numbers as an expression of their support of SDS's proposals.

About 120 persons did the same thing at the Nov. 1 rally. SDS has charged that the University is "on a witch hunt" because only three of those students were charged with violations of the Code.

Army to Release 20,000 GIs Early; Draft Call to Rise

See Related Story Page 5

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army moved Friday to demobilize 20,000 National Guardsmen and reservists by the end of next year and indicated an easing of the Vietnamese war might bring earlier release.

At the same time, the Army said draft calls would be raised by about 3,000 men a month from March through July to replace the guardsmen and reservists and keep readiness of the regular forces from slipping.

It takes about five months to train a new man before he can be assigned to a unit.

The Army said it was canceling plans to disband 48 basic training and advanced individual training companies at Ft. Bliss, Tex. and Ft. Dix, N.J.

These plans were announced Nov. 18, before the Army decided on a target date for release of the guardsmen and reservists which generated a requirement for more draft trainees to take their place.

As the Army put it: "The reason for the change in plans is a need to maintain a training capacity to meet increased training requirements arising from the . . . decision to release the mobilized reserves during the period September through December 1969 and replace them with active Army personnel."

As a result, the Army called off the planned reduction of 1,764 military and 186 civilian jobs at Ft. Bliss and 1,073 at Ft. Dix.

In addition to training replacements for the demobilized guardsmen and reservists, the 30 basic training companies at Bliss and 18 advanced training companies at Dix will be used to school "substantial numbers of members of the reserve enlisted program," the Army said.

Under the REP program, young men enlist in guard or reserve units and go on active duty for six months before spending the remainder of six years drilling regularly with their units.

City Bus Fares To Rise to 20¢

Bus fares in Iowa City will rise to 20 cents next Wednesday. This is the first fare increase since March 1 when bus fares rose from 10 to 15 cents.

Iowa City Coach Company head Lewis Negus announced the increase Friday and cited "a continual increase in operating expenses" as the reason for the higher fare rates.

The new Iowa City fare of 20 cents now equals the fare charged by the Community Transit Lines of Coralville.

'Silent Majority' Speaks Out—

Pro-Placement Petition Circulated

A petition in favor of keeping the Business and Industrial Placement Office open to recruiters from all agencies and industries that want to interview students on campus will be circulated in three dormitories next week.

The petition, labeled, "The Silent Majority," is being circulated by members of the Collegiate Chamber of Commerce of the College of Business.

The Collegiate Chamber of Commerce, made up of about 1,000 students, is the student government organization of the College of Business.

Every student enrolling in the College of Business is automatically a member of the organization.

According to Carol Meyers, B4, Avoca, a member of the group, the title "The Silent Majority" signifies that the petition is from the majority of students on campus who are usually silent about attacks made on the placement office. "The petition is one way of letting people know we do appreciate the placement office and want to keep it open to everyone," Miss Meyers said.

According to Fred W. Roggeveen, B3, Muscatine, president of the group, the petition is a means of replying to the dissent expressed by student protesters on campus in staging sit-ins at the placement office.

The petition will be circulated in Hillcrest, Quadrangle, and Burge halls during the dinner hour from 5 to 6:30 p.m. next Wednesday.

The petition reads: "We, the undersigned, hereby express our strong desire that the University of Iowa Placement Office continue to provide service on the University of Iowa campus. We are specifically in favor of (1) the practice of allowing all industries and government agencies to recruit on this campus, and (2) the continuance of University efforts to afford the opportunity for contact between students and the aforementioned industries and agencies. We strongly object to those actions which intentionally harass the Placement Office and which may deprive us of the opportunity to gain employment of our choice."

Two demonstrations have been held this semester to protest recruiting at the placement office.

On Oct. 28, the Hawkeye Student Party (HSP) sponsored a sit-in in front of a room where Marine Corps recruiters were interviewing students in the placement office in the Union.

Jerry Sies, A4, Iowa City, has been charged by the Office of Student Affairs with violating sections of the Code of Student Conduct for participation in the sit-in.

On Nov. 6, the HSP held a rally to protest recruiting on campus by Dow Chemical Company. The rally was called to an end when only 15 persons came to demonstrate.

"We strongly object to those actions which intentionally harass the placement office and deprive us of the opportunity to gain employment of our choice," Miss Meyers said.

Roggeveen said the group was not denying the protesters' right to dissent. The petition is an opportunity for students to reply to what the protesters have been saying, he said.

The petition has been informally circulated on campus and in some of the fraternity and sorority houses for the past two weeks, Roggeveen said.

About 1,000 signatures have already been collected, including those of faculty members in the College of Business, he said.

He said the group hoped to get more signatures on the petition favoring keeping the placement office open to everyone than the protesters could get to support their demands.

Roggeveen said the petition would be circulated on campus until Christmas vacation begins. He said he would present it to Pres. Howard R. Bowen some time after the first of next year.

Do we need a new pool?

Included in the construction now being done on campus is a recreation center-sports arena structure. This structure is to be situated west of the stadium.

Considerable emphasis has been put on the recreation aspect of an education at this University. Evidence of this is the physical education requirement for most of the undergraduate degrees given by the school, the plans for the sports arena and in the most recent plans, a proposed swimming pool for the east side of the river.

Members of the State Board of Regents have approved the purchase of several pieces of property behind Burge Hall for the construction of this pool. However, members of the University planning staff now favor construction of the swimming pool in an area north of the Union currently occupied by the Union temporaries.

At a meeting of the Campus Planning Committee Thursday, the proposed sites for the swimming pool were discussed. The discussion eventually got around to the question of need for the facility. Since no adequate answers were given to the committee, the members voted to have the Recreation Committee submit a report stating the need for such a pool.

There is a great deal of debate about this pool. No one is really sure why the University needs another swimming pool. There is one in the field house and one in the women's physical education building. Granted, the pool in the women's gym building is not in the best shape, but it still operates.

Another point that has been raised in the pool controversy is who, exactly, will use this pool. All the recreational additions are stressed as being for the student's advantage. But the women's physical education department has evil designs on this pool, just as the athletic department has plans for the new "student" sports arena.

One of the objections to the site behind Burge Hall was that it would be too far from the women's gym building. Apparently, all the swimming classes in the women's gym programs will be taught in this pool. And that means it won't be open to students during the day.

The proposed swimming pool and the new sports arena are similar in that student fees will be used to pay for both. The $10 student fee that in the past went each semester to the athletic department has been pledged to payment of construction costs for the sports arena. Previously this $10 provided free student tickets to athletic events. While the swimming pool would be initially financed by the sale of bonds, eventually, student money would be used to pay off these bonds and their interest.

It seems strange that student fees have been pledged to build a new home for the athletic department. And it seems equally strange that students may have to pay for a swimming pool that will be primarily used for women's physical education classes.

I really doubt whether a great number of students would use the new swimming pool at all. The cost is substantial, and the money would be better spent for some addition to an educational facility. And if, perchance, physical education were eliminated as a graduation requirement for some colleges, there would be even less use of the pool by women's physical education classes.

The Campus Planning Committee seems to have reached the heart of the question in its meeting Thursday. Whether to put the new pool behind Burge Hall or north of the Union really makes little difference.

The question is, do we need a swimming pool on the east side of the river at all? Maybe the Recreation Committee thinks such a pool is desirable, but do most students? A pool would be nice, but it is not a necessity to anyone's education or recreation at this time.

On the editorial page today are pictures and a story on an issue that attracted much attention this summer and fall but has since been discarded by the national news media: the war and starvation in Biafra.

We think the issue ought to be revived. So does a group of University students who two weeks ago formed the Food for Nigeria/Biafra Committee. The committee is sponsored locally by the Council on International Relations and United Nations Affairs (CIRUNA), and is part of a nationwide student campaign organized by UNICEF.

Frank Hoerster, AI, Des Moines, a member of the group, told The Daily Iowan that tables were to be set up in the Union and other campus buildings to collect contributions to be sent to UNICEF.

Nigerian war called genocide— Forecast for December: 1 million Biafran deaths

By RICHARD ANTHONY
College Press Service

WASHINGTON — The news media, after giving the Nigerian war some attention during the summer and early fall, have by now more or less let the matter drop. The stories that do turn up tend to be about minor military encounters or the latest estimates of the number of Biafrans starving each week. Gone are the multi-page, color photo spreads that brought home to Americans what starving children really look like.

Among politicians interest in the Nigerian war, never very high, seems to have fallen to a new low. Even those thought of as enlightened aren't talking about it anymore. Neither Nixon nor Humphrey so much as raised the subject of Biafra during the campaign.

The war, however, continues unabated and, in fact, shows every prospect of grinding on until there have been massive new waves of starvation in Biafra. Very likely it will end when the will of the Biafrans has been so broken by the lack of food that those who are still alive will be physically incapable of fighting.

This may be the probable outcome of the war, but opinions vary about what a desirable outcome would be. One opinion is that the sooner the Nigerian government achieves a victory, the better. This position is the one held, for example, by African specialists in the U.S. State Department. In the absence of a Nigerian victory, these officials say, they can't recommend U.S. assistance for the Biafrans unless they get the approval of the Nigerian government in Lagos.

Such approval is about as likely as the Kingdom of God on earth, as the State Department people well know. They're committed, however, to the concept of a unified Nigeria, and apparently aren't willing to permit the reality of mass starvations in Biafra to interfere with that particular illusion.

The government did recently set up a special task force, headed by Under Secretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach, to deal with the Biafran problem. This is important, especially since it may make Biafra the subject of public discussion again. Preliminary reports about the task force, though, indicate that it won't be doing anything to relieve the suffering in Biafra until there has been a Nigerian victory. In other words, the task force is a way of making the government appear to be concerned without its having to take the steps that must be taken immediately if the Biafrans are to have any chance of survival.

Unlike State Department officials, though, there are many people whose first and only major concern in the war is that the Biafrans be saved, yet who agree with the Department on the need for a Nigerian victory. These people are sincere, but they're avoiding the one unavoidable conclusion about the war that the Biafrans have decided to fight on as long as they can.

They believe that the Nigerian government intends to kill their race off. Legally they may find some reward in trying to determine whether the Nigerian policy fits the legal definition of genocide. For the rest of us, it is more realistic to try to understand why the Biafrans feel this way they do.

Some of the reasons for their determination are rooted in the ancient hostility between the Ibos — the majority people of Biafra — and the Hausa and Fulani peoples of northern Nigeria. The strength of these ancient hostilities can't be easily gauged by Westerners. Others, though, are of more recent origin and these are readily comprehensible.

In late September, 1966, a massacre of Ibos began in Northern Nigeria. It came in the wake of a military coup that put Northern officers in power, and was inspired by the Northern leaders, who played on the non-Ibo population's envy of the Ibos' success in government, business and the professions. When it ended in October, an estimated 30,000 Ibos had been slaughtered, and a mass exodus of the surviving Ibos to the Eastern region — now Biafra — was under way.

That massacre is one source of the Biafrans' determination; another is their belief that the Nigerian forces make a practice of executing male Ibo captives.

In an article in the Sept. 12 issue of the New York Times Magazine Lloyd Garrison, one of the reporters who has covered the war for the Times, said there is evidence that a captive male Ibo had been slaughtered in Nigerian assaults on 11 different cities in Biafra. He named the 10 towns, and reported that the death toll resulting from the mass executions had been in the thousands.

A Roman Catholic priest who had worked in the Biafran town of Asaba says that 800 Ibos had been executed after Asaba was captured by Nigerians. He said the Ibos were ordered to dig the trenches where they were to be buried. Then the Nigerian forces opened fire and killed their captives.

Finally there is the matter of the blockade. At the outset of the war in July 1967 the Nigerian government claimed that a "swift, surgical" military operation would force the Biafrans to capitulate in short order. Almost a year and a half later the Nigerians, aided by generous infusions of military supplies from England, Egypt and the Soviet Union, have managed to reduce the territory held by the Biafrans to about one-tenth what it was at the start of the war, but they haven't been able to win the war. As a result the blockade has become the central element in their assault.

Up to now the blockade has been the direct cause of something like one million deaths in Biafra, but it has failed to bring a Biafran surrender.

In the next few months, however, that may change. The blockade is likely to result in hundreds of thousands of additional deaths, and thus may accomplish the massive reduction in the population of Biafra that is apparently necessary for a Nigerian "victory." The reason a new death wave appears imminent is quite simple — the Biafrans are about to run out of all food supplies.

Until recently the Biafrans suffered mainly from a shortage of protein foods. This meant that the heaviest toll in lives was exacted among very young children who have an especially great need for protein.

Now, however, relief officials in Biafra report that the Biafrans are rapidly using up their supplies of yams, the primary carbohydrate food in the area. According to projections by officials the yam supplies will be exhausted this month or next. When they are gone adults will be just as vulnerable as children. Dr. Herman Middlekoop, the respected head of the World Council of Churches relief operation in Biafra, has predicted that one million Biafrans will die in December. Only a massive relief operation could forestall starvation on this scale. Such an operation is not in prospect.

Genocide is being committed in Biafra. There may be no way to prove this legally, but the facts are plain enough to permit the use of this word. One million Biafrans — mostly Ibos — have died of other than natural causes. Most of them have not been soldiers, or at least have been non-combatants at the time of death. They are victims of genocide.

What is needed now is action rather than recrimination. Some of the Biafrans can be saved, but not without massive infusions of food to provide these necessities, but it won't do so unless Americans can exert strong pressure for such action.

Foe Mounts Sharpest Attacks With Artillery Since Nov. 1

SAIGON (AP) — The enemy launched Thursday night and Friday the sharpest series of mortar and rocket attacks in South Vietnam since the Nov. 1 bombing halt in North Vietnam, the U.S. Command reported.

With four-way peace talks about to open in Paris, the shellings appeared to be a response to the Viet Cong command's orders to launch a new wave of attacks and terrorism while negotiations drag on.

In what seemed to be a well-coordinated operation, the enemy sent up to 400 mortar and rocket rounds into 37 allied bases and South Vietnamese cities and towns, according to reports. Military spokesmen said the targets included five provincial capitals in an arc around Saigon and five district towns. They reported 16 South Vietnamese were killed and 82 wounded in all the shellings.

Eleven additional persons were killed and 22 wounded when enemy troops rampaged through a hamlet 60 miles north of Saigon near the heavily defended provincial capital of An Loc, according to reports. The attackers burned 25 houses before withdrawing the reports said.

Provincial capitals reported shelled were Tay Ninh, northwest of Saigon, Xuan Loc to the northeast, Vinh Long and My Tho to the southwest in the Mekong Delta, and Moc Hoa, west of the capital.

Five rocket and mortar attacks were reported launched at a U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division bivouac, South Vietnamese infantry positions and a district headquarters all within four miles of An Loc.

Prison, Fine For Financier

NEW YORK (AP) — Multimillionaire financier Louis E. Wolfson was sentenced to 18 months in federal prison and fined $32,000 Friday for attempting to deceive government investigators during a probe of a $4 million stock deal. He could have gotten 14 years.

The new sentence is to be served only after Wolfson, 55, completes a prior sentence of a year in federal prison in a separate stock fraud case. He is appealing the judgment, which also included a $10,000 fine.

The combined sentences would extend over a 2½-year period, which could be reduced by good behavior to 20 months.

Both sentences were imposed a little over a year ago in U.S. District Court by Judge Edmund L. Palmieri, who said that in each case Wolfson was "legally convicted after a fair trial."

2 U.S. Destroyers to Steam into Black Sea

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Two destroyers of the U.S. 6th Fleet will steam into the Black Sea in the next few days on a routine operation, Navy spokesmen reported Friday.

The Soviet newspaper Pravda called the mission a provocative sally close to Russian shores.

American warships entered the Black Sea — the Soviet Union's only outlet to the Mediterranean — last June and stayed about four days.

Although Navy officials described this new mission as routine, it seemed designed to remind Moscow that the Black Sea is an international body of water and not a Soviet lake.

Most, if not all, of the Soviet warships now patrolling the Mediterranean enter from the Black Sea through Turkey's Bosphorus and Dardanelles straits.

A U.S. Navy spokesman in Naples said the destroyers Dyess and Turner would transit these same straits for "routine operations in international waters." A Pravda dispatch from Ankara, Turkey's capital, contended it is dangerous for the United States to carry out such a mission now because of rising tensions in the Middle East.

"It is completely obvious that the forthcoming visit of the uninvited guests follows the aim of a further complication of the situation in a region immediately adjacent to the Soviet Union," the Communist party newspaper said.

Row Begins over Sign Showing Girl in Bikini

LONDON (AP) — A sign showing a beautiful bikini-clad girl has started a row in Britain's traditional-bound pubs.

Some British pub signs have been unchanged for centuries. Beer-drinking Britons are fussy about any alterations to their pubs and the thought of putting pin-ups outside "Ye Olde Cock Tavern" or "Ye Old Punch Tavern" is too much for some.

The new-look row started when landlord Kenneth Jensen said he wanted something different in ordering a new sign to hang outside his 16th century pub, the Sun Inn, in the quiet village of Chobham near London. The old sign just showed a picture of the sun.

Customers were shocked when the scantily clad sunbathing girl went up outside the inn.

"We have had a lot of protests about the sign," Jensen said. "It might be suitable outside a travel agency, but not here. You can understand elderly people complaining about such a picture... but even the young ones think it is unsuitable."

An official of the Courage Brewery firm which supplied the sign commented: "We would not have put it up if we had thought it would cause offense. But, as people are offended, we are taking it down."

London's 6,000 pubs and the thousands of others throughout Britain invariably sport signs depicting the names of the inns. Many are named after kings and queens and such national heroes as Lord Nelson.

Others have names, such as the Magpie and Stump opposite London's famed Old Bailey criminal court, which even the customers can't explain.

Another London pub called the Three Lords carries a sign depicting three Scottish noblemen, Lord Lovat, the Earl of Kilmarnock and Lord Balmerino, who all had their last night's rest at the inn before being taken to the Tower of London and beheaded as traitors to King George II in 1745.

Engineering Dean to Attend UNESCO Conference in Paris

Hunter Rouse, dean of engineering, leaves today for an international conference of UNESCO in Paris to discuss "Trends in the Teaching of Engineering."

To date, more than 30 months have been spent on general planning and initial implementation of new courses in the University engineering curriculum. The college currently is seeking a balance between four major aspects of an engineering education: proficiency in the applied sciences, mathematics, analysis and design and the humanities, according to Rouse.

The dean said recently that, beyond the curriculum itself, a suitable balance should be reached between undergraduate instruction, which emphasizes the application of known principles, and graduate study, which encourages the application of new principles and discovery of the unknown.

The dean said that, beside providing the student with the ability to successfully engage the immediate problems of our environment, an enlightened curriculum would allow for "the preparation of the student for a professional lifetime of continuing education."

"We are presently within sight of the curricular balance we seek," the dean continued, "yet free to adjust to new conditions as rapidly as technological and social change demand."

A total of 20 representatives from the American Society for Engineering Education, the National Science Foundation and the National Academy of Engineering, as well as 11 other American universities, will attend the conference. The meeting will be held at the UNESCO House Monday through Thursday.

Faculty Members Recording History in Own Publications

Members of the Department of History here not only teach history, but record it as well.

Seven monographs or research studies, an edition of memoirs, a novel and a collection of readings have all been published this year. In addition, previously published works by two members have reappeared in new editions.

Robert Dykstra, professor of history and author of one of the books, called it an "extra good year" for the 19-member staff. He said that a department might publish four or five books a year, but ten was unusual.

Professor Alan B. Spitzer, department chairman, said that there was no special program within the department to cause the high number of publications. He called the publications "a most respectable contribution" and said they reflected a "healthy diversity of interest within the department."

Subjects range from a sociological analysis of Dodge City and other cattle centers to an analysis of a 1962 West German political scandal.

Prof. Malcolm Rohrbough, who published a monograph this year, said his originated from a dissertation written for his Ph.D. requirements. He added, however, that they might originate from interests encountered while teaching or reading. He said that it might take up to five years or more to research and write the study.

Ichord Says Chicago Riots Included 'Revolutionaries'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a House investigating panel said Friday evidence in hearings this week shows there was participation by Communists and other revolutionaries in street riots which accompanied the Democratic National Convention in Chicago last August.

The hearings by a subcommittee of the House Un-American Activities Committee concluded after "Youth International Party" leader Jerry Rubin—wearing a Santa Claus costume—appeared briefly at a closed hearing.

Afterwards, Rubin said the government had been bugging his telephone lines.

Rubin and his attorney, William Kunstler, exhibited a legal memorandum filed by the government in which it acknowledged electronic surveillance that indirectly involved Rubin.

But the government memorandum stated that the "monitored conversations are clearly unrelated to" federal charges of loitering against Rubin.

The Justice Department acknowledged the bugging to a U.S. court in Richmond, Va., where Rubin is appealing a loitering conviction stemming from the 1967 peace march on the Pentagon. The statement to the court was made under a legal requirement for disclosure of any bugging involving a defendant.

But the department statement said "Rubin was not the direct object of this or any other electronic surveillance, but was overheard as a result of the electronic surveillances directed against others in the interest of national security."

The subcommittee chairman, Rep. Richard H. Ichord (D-Mo.) called a news conference after Rubin appeared to say "certainly the record shows that the leaders of the demonstrations collaborated with the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong."

Tom Hayden and Rennie Davis, co-chairmen of the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, who identified themselves as organizers of demonstrations in Chicago, testified about contracts with North Vietnamese officials.

Hearing Ends on Dancer's Image

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The hearing on Dancer's Image ended Friday the way it began — on a controversial note.

The Kentucky Racing Commission, which must decide whether the colt was under the influence of phenylbutazone when he won the Kentucky Derby, was handed another problem.

Closing arguments will be heard today, but neither counsel for Peter Fuller nor the state's attorney wished to go first. The commission said it would hand down a ruling on the issues just before the arguments were presented.

The state's final witness, Dr. Francis Ozog, stamped his approval on the report showing the presence of the medication in the colt after a post-race sample. He did so while conceding that one of the five tests could have contained errors.

Fuller's attorney, during the 14 days and 77½ hours of testimony, have contended the tests performed by state chemist Kenneth W. Smith were inconclusive and contained many errors.

Ozog would not go along with this assertion and said that on the basis of his experience he considered them satisfactory.

He is the racing chemist for Colorado, where phenylbutazone is permissible, within limitations, on horses that are racing. The anti-inflammatory drug cannot be used in Kentucky.

Denies Rumor of Firing—

Eckert Resigns as Commissioner

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lt. Gen. William D. Eckert resigned unexpectedly Friday as he flatly denied that he had been fired. There was no immediate indication as to his successor.

However, M. Donald Grant, chairman of the board of the New York Mets, said after the surprising press conference that "I think the car needs some repairs so it will drive smoother."

Asked if that meant a new car was needed, Grant replied, "No. We are getting a new chauffeur."

Eckert was named commissioner on the retirement of Ford Frick Nov. 17, 1965. His contract, reputedly at $65,000 per year, had four more years to run. He will remain in office until his successor is named.

Baseball, locked in a struggle for national popularity with professional football, is beset by the problems of expansion — there will be 24 teams next year, divided into two leagues, each having separate divisions of six cities. Also, it is threatened with a players' strike unless the pension plan is upgraded with some of the money from the enormous TV contract, said to be around $50 million annually.

The announcement of Eckert's retirement and plans to restructure baseball hit like a bombshell at the close of the winter meetings.

A three-man committee consisting of Jerold Hoffberger of the Baltimore Orioles, Dick Meyer of the St. Louis Cardinals and Phil Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs represented temporarily by John Holland, Cubs' general manager, was named to consider the possibility of a restructuring of the entire management of baseball including both the major and minor leagues.

In answer to a question, Hoffberger said, "We will pick the new commissioner the same way we have picked the others. But I don't think it should take a year to pick anybody."

It took the owners several months to select Eckert after Frick had made it known he would not accept another term.

There had been little indication that the commissioner was considering the move until the press conference was called.

Eckert told the news conference that he had been in baseball long enough to realize that a knowledgeable baseball man should be at the head of the baseball structure.

"In light of this and to better assist in carrying out the restructuring," said Eckert. "I have told these gentlemen my retirement is at their disposal."

Eckert, 59, a retired general in the Air Force, was a surprise pick for the post in November 1965, when he succeeded the retiring Frick as baseball's fourth commissioner.

He said then and in an interview only several months ago that he did not think his lack of background in professional baseball was a disadvantage.

The committee to work on the reconstruction is to begin meeting Monday and report back to the owners in February.

It was announced that one owner said he wanted to eliminate "the inefficiency and duplication we have allowed in the major league organization."

The committee also was to consider modernizing the game itself. Walter O'Malley, president of the Los Angeles Dodgers, and Detroit Tigers' president John Fetzer were reported to be enthusiastically in favor of the plan.

Eckert was the fourth man to hold the office of baseball commissioner.

When World War II broke out he was put in command of a B-17 group of the Eighth Air Force in the European Theater and won the distinguished flying cross, the air medal and the French and Luxembourg Croix de Guerre.

Following the war he directed all Air Force contract negotiations. From 1952 to 1956 he was Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for material in Washington.

Although his interest in baseball was only that of a casual fan, he was an avid sports enthusiast and active in golf, hunting and fishing. His appointment as commissioner of baseball came as almost a complete surprise to the sports world.

Under Eckert's leadership, the majors expanded from 20 teams to 24, with four new teams to take the field in 1969. They include San Diego and Montreal in the National League, and Kansas City and Seattle in the American League.

With the expansion, which necessitates league playoffs prior to the World Series, baseball moved even more strongly into conflict with pro football. The overlap formerly was one week. In 1969 it will be three weeks.

Iowa Wrestlers Travel to UNI

After winning seven of eleven individual crowns last week in a meet at Minnesota, Iowa's injury-hampered wrestling team invades Cedar Falls to take part in an invitational meet at the University of Northern Iowa.

About 10 teams will participate in the meet, according to Hawkeye Coach Dave McCuskey.

"Minnesota and Mankato State will be participating, but I don't know what other teams were invited," McCuskey said Friday.

McCuskey said that as in last week's meet, no team scores would be kept.

"Only individual champions will be listed. Also, since a lot of wrestlers will be competing, it will be straight elimination. Last week everyone wrestled two or three times, but it won't be that way for this meet," McCuskey said.

Heading the list of Hawkeye injuries is co-captain Rich Mihal, Big 10 Champion at 160 pounds last year. Mihal has a broken hand and will be out for three or four weeks.

Phil Henning, 167-pound senior, will also be out three or four weeks with a knee injury.

The Hawks make their first appearance at home next week in the AAU meet at the Field House.

It was reported in Friday's Daily Iowan that Gale Sayers would be making a personal appearance at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Iowa City Feb. 6. Sayers, however, has not as yet confirmed the visit. More information will be released as it becomes available.

Iowa Swimmers Begin Season on Road

The Iowa swimming team will open its season at 2 p.m. today when it travels to Northern Illinois University for a dual meet.

Coach Bob Allen said, "We beat them last year and we should take another victory this year."

A few of the swimmers have colds, but other than that the team is physically ready for a victory, according to Allen. "Our spirits are high, and we're ready to perform."

Allen predicted that the Hawkeyes would be strongest in the diving, distance and breast stroke events. He said the Illini would be strong in the medley relays, back stroke and sprint events.

A dual meet includes 13 events, and each man is allowed to participate in three.

Hogan Denies Rumor That He's Quitting Golf

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Ben Hogan, one of the great golfers of all time, is not, repeat not, quitting tournament golf, he said Friday, despite a wide-spread quote Thursday from him that he was.

"I said I might not be able to play any more tournament golf, and I expect I was taken literally," Hogan said Friday.

The all-time fairway great said his arm was improving after surgery last month in New Orleans.

Iowa's Hawkeyes, ranked 20th in the nation by the Associated Press, will put their two game winning streak on the line against the Milwaukee branch of the University of Wisconsin at 7:30 tonight in the Field House.

The Hawks opened their season last Saturday with an unimpressive 91-73 victory over Cal Poly, but they came on strong and ran over Northern Michigan 99-69 Wednesday.

The game will be the Hawks' last home game before they hit the road and meet Wichita State and Drake next week and get into the tougher part of their non-conference schedule.

Coach Ralph Miller was pleased with the Hawks' performance against Northern Michigan. He had called the Cal Poly game "jackadassical" but said "We put forth a better effort. . . . Our attitude was much better. . . . I was fairly pleased," when talking about the Northern Michigan game.

Wisconsin has played three close games and has a 1-2 record. It beat Eastern Illinois 79-78 in its opener and then lost to North Park 82-78 and St. Norbert's 78-76. The Panthers were 16-11 last year and have four returning starters.

Glen Vidnovic and Chris Phillips have been the Hawks' big guns so far. Vidnovic, a 65 stringbean forward, scored 21 and 23 points in the first two games and grabbed 12 rebounds against Northern Michigan.

"Vid played very well," Miller said after the Hawks' last victory. "I'd take that kind of performance anytime."

Phillips, a 6-3 senior, came off the bench and poured in 22 points in the Hawks' opener. That performance — one of the few bright spots for the Hawks in the game — earned him a starting role against Northern Michigan. He responded with a 18-point output.

"Chris did a good job defensively containing their fastest man, Terry King," Miller said.

So far, Vidnovic and Phillips have some dazzling statistics. Vidnovic has hit 78 per cent of his shots and has averaged 21.5 points per game. Phillips has hit 60 per cent of his shots and is averaging 20 points a game.

John Johnson, the Hawks' 67 junior college transfer who tied an Iowa single game rebounding record with 23 against Cal Poly, is averaging 16.5 and Dick Jensen has a 15.5 average. Johnson leads the team in rebounding with 32 and Jensen is second with 26.

Angry Parishioners Plan Pope Protest

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Defiant parishioners fighting for their ousted rebel priest called on all Italian workers Friday to stage a protest before Pope Paul VI when he says Christmas Eve Mass in front of the blast-furnaces of Taranto.

The people of Isolotto parish put up posters urging workers from all over the country to flock to the Taranto steel center in southern Italy and appeal directly to the Pope to reinstate the rebel priest, Don Enzo Mazzi.

Pope Paul announced Dec. 1 he would celebrate midnight Mass this Christmas before blast furnaces at Taranto to show Christian solidarity with workers.

Don Mazzi was ousted from his parish Thursday for publishing a controversial catechism that showed Christ as a leader of the poor against the upper classes.

Don Mazzi was in hiding Friday somewhere in the back streets of the rundown, working class neighborhood of Isolotto. But many of his angry parishioners sent him pleas to defy the archbishop, Ermengildo Cardinal Florit, by saying mass in the square in front of the Isolotto parish church.

Don Mazzi vowed Thursday he would never leave Isolotto and would say mass in the streets if need be. But there was no mass in Isolotto Friday, in the streets or in the church.

Followers of the 43-year-old priest discussed plans for a meeting tonight to issue a new call for the cardinal to reverse the expulsion order or refuse to accept any other pastor.

The cardinal's office defended Don Mazzi's ouster.

"The people of Isolotto have always been a turbulent kind of Christians," said Don Paolo Ristori, an aide to Cardinal Florit.

"Don Mazzi was a pastor there for 14 years and the cardinal was understanding. He left them alone until about a year ago. Then they took up a rebellious attitude. They turned Sunday masses into political debates. They described the Gospel as a textbook of class struggle."

Cops Had Niccum on the Line Last Week, D.M. Chief Reveals

DES MOINES (AP)—Police Chief Wendell Nichols said Friday Des Moines law enforcement officers set up a meeting in St. Louis early last week to talk to Michael Charles Niccum about the slaying of Linda Boothe but he didn't show up.

Nichols said that, at the time, Niccum was only one of several suspects in the beating-death of the 17-year-old Des Moines high school girl on Nov. 20.

Niccum was formally charged Wednesday with murder in the case.

Law enforcement officers continued to run down leads Friday in the search for Niccum, 23, who was last reported seen in St. Louis. He also is sought by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on a warrant charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Nichols said Des Moines Detective Paul Gillespie and Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation Agent Rollie Hoffman went to St. Louis early last week to talk to Niccum.

He said the two officers left word at a residence for Niccum to call them and he later called them back but refused to say from where he was calling. He told Gillespie he wouldn't answer any questions about the Boothe case until he had consulted an attorney.

Nichols said Niccum did agree to meet the officers later, but failed to show up for the meeting.

Gillespie and Hoffman are remaining in St. Louis to help police look for Niccum.

In Des Moines, however, Chief of Detectives Cleatus Learning said the search is "not necessarily" being concentrated in St. Louis.

Officers have received calls from a number of Des Moines residents who believed they had seen the missing man, and a Maquoketa tavern operator reported Thursday a man showed him an identification card bearing the name Dale Niccum.

The tavern operator said the man and a young woman with him drove north on U.S. 61 when they left the tavern.

Niccum is believed to be accompanied by his wife, Jacqueline, 18, of Des Moines.

Niccum's mother-in-law, Mrs. Kenneth Branstner of Des Moines, said none of Niccum's relatives have heard from him since Nov. 29.

Meter Maids Giving Both Barrels To Downtown Overtime Parkers

By JOEL CAGWIN
Two tickets for parking overtime at one meter? How's that? Recently, the city has interpreted the parking ordinance to make it possible for a car to be ticketed twice at the same meter.

The ordinance reads: "It shall be unlawful and a violation to... be parked overtime or beyond the period of legal parking time established for any parking zone."

The one-hour meters in the downtown area are now enforced to make it a violation to park for more than one hour by rushing out to "plug" the meter.

For instance, Joe College rises from the sack at 9 a.m. to prepare for his 9:30 class. He throws on his faded blue jeans that are standing in the corner. He slips into his sandals as he runs out the front door.

When he gets downtown, he pulls his car into the only parking place left in town — right in front of the Phillips Hall where his class is. He drops a dime into the meter and the pointer runs up to one hour.

The meter maid comes around the corner with her chalk to mark his tire and check to see if Joe has put money in the meter.

One hour later, the meter maid returns to the scene.

Smiley said that if traffic court judges decided they couldn't fine someone according to the ordinance as it now stands, the city council would probably have to change the ordinance.

The one-hour meters in the shopping area downtown (and the half-hour meters at the corners) are enforced for the convenience of everyone, according to police. The one-hour meters are meant for the people who have short downtown shopping trips to make. Two-hour and 10-hour meters are provided farther from the downtown area for those who have longer trips to make. A parking lot on College Street is provided for those who need up to four hours to do their business downtown.

In short the rules state:
• Pay the meters.
• Watch the time.
• Don't plug the meter. Stay at most only the maximum time called for on the meter — no longer.

Engineers Honor Late Professor During Banquet

The semi-annual Engineering Honorary Banquet, sponsored jointly by Tau Beta Pi, Pi Tau Sigma, and Eta Kappa Nu, honorary fraternities, was dedicated last night to the memory of Professor Emeritus Frederic Higbee, late professor of engineering drawing and past acting dean of the College of Engineering.

More than 75 people attended the banquet at the Colony Village Restaurant, where Iowa City Mayor Loren L. Hickerson gave a speech to honor the late professor.

Higbee died Tuesday. He had often been recognized for contributing his time, energy and professional skill in helping to develop the greater Iowa City area.

General Miller Announces Early Release Of 2 Northwest Iowa Armed Forces Units

DES MOINES (AP)—Two armed forces units from northwest Iowa called to active duty earlier this year will be released sooner than had been expected, Iowa Adj. Gen. Junior F. Miller said Friday.

Miller said the Pentagon had informed him the 174th Tactical Fighter Squadron of Sioux City would be returned from Vietnam probably next May and definitely not later than June.

He said the 2nd Mechanized Battalion, 133rd Infantry, from northwest Iowa apparently would be released in December next year, cutting five months off the normal two years of duty.

The 850-man 174th, an Air National Guard unit, was activated late last January during the crisis over the USS Pueblo.

About 300 of its men were sent to Vietnam, 150 to Korea and the rest to bases throughout the nation, Miller said.

The 2nd Mechanized Battalion is a National Guard unit. Its 850 men come from Sioux City, LeMars, Cherokee, Mapleton, Sheldon and Ida Grove. It was activated in April and sent to Fort Carson, Colo. in May.

Miller said the battalion had been "performing terrifically" at Fort Carson and problems that broke out last spring involving battalion members disgruntled over the call-up apparently had been solved.

Petitions were circulated earlier this year among members of the 69th Brigade of Kansas and Iowa protesting the call-up. Miller said the battalion "may have a few problem children, but this is always expected."

He said about 125 of the battalion's officers and men had been sent to Vietnam.

The Army confirmed Friday that it would release about 20,000 guardsmen and reservists from active duty about five months early and replace them by increased draft calls.

The Air Force already has started freeing 16,127 guardsmen and reservists. It said all of them, including the six National Guard fighter-bomber squadrons now in Vietnam and South Korea, would be back in civilian life by next June 30.

Hong Kong Flu Outbreaks Spread; Chances of Finding Vaccine Slim

ATLANTA (AP)—Hong Kong flu has spread outbreaks of its germ-filled tentacles into 13 states, Puerto Rico and New York City, doctors at the National Communicable Disease Center reported Friday.

The virus, no respecter of social status, has struck from the campus of Yale University to the New York Giants football team and in a Catholic seminary at Baltimore, the NCDC said.

Those new outbreaks are in addition to others at a Chicago Veterans Hospital and at an Air Force base in Grandview, Mo.

Meanwhile, doctors said chances remain doubtful of finding a vaccine which can fully prevent the disease.

"We're lucky in most years if a vaccine is 60 to 70 per cent effective," said Dr. Bruce Dull, assistant director of the NCDC. He added, "Our biggest problem is trying to educate people to understand that flu is different from all other infectious diseases."

Doctors said that only in the flu virus do the antigens — protective agents — change from year to year, area to area, and even from case to case.

They said that the changes are generally small enough so that a vaccine developed to combat one strain of flu has at least limited effect on newer types.

But for the markedly different types, such as the Hong Kong flu, a new vaccine is necessary.

Scientists have developed a new vaccine and are now testing its efficiency on some residents of Orange County, Calif. in addition to inmates at the U.S. Penitentiary in Atlanta and at the Georgia State Prison at Reidsville.

Nose washes taken from the test groups at the time they are vaccinated and again three weeks later are expected to help scientists discover how effective the new vaccine is.

With confirmed outbreaks of the Hong Kong flu reported by state health officials in Alaska, California, Colorado, Utah, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, North Carolina, Washington, Missouri, Illinois and Arizona plus Puerto Rico and New York City, NCDC officials are seeing their predictions of a flu epidemic coming true.

Connecticut, Maryland, Missouri, New York City, Illinois and Arizona were the latest areas to confirm that Hong Kong flu outbreaks have occurred.

Iowa Reports 3 Flu Cases

DES MOINES (AP)—Iowa has had only three confirmed cases of Hong Kong flu, but health officials said Friday they "expect it will pick up" after Christmas.

Dr. Arnold Reeve, chief of preventive medicine for the State Department of Health, said two cases of the virus infection were confirmed Friday by the State Hygienic Laboratory in Iowa City.

The two cases, both in Des Moines, plus one case confirmed earlier in Fairfield, are all that have been reported so far in Iowa, Reeve said.

There probably are other cases unreported, he said, but the surest indicator of an epidemic — increases in absenteeism in schools and businesses — hasn't appeared.

But Christmas visitors to the state are likely to bring in the virus along with presents, Reeve said.

Hours Extended At Post Office For Xmas Rush

The Iowa City and Coralville Post Offices will be open until 5 p.m. on Dec. 7, 14 and 21, according to Postmaster William J. Coen.

Coen also announced that both offices would be open from 1 to 5 p.m. Dec. 15.

He said that so far mail had been light, but if people got busy they could still avoid the annual Christmas mail slowdown.

Coen predicted that the peak mailing days would be Dec. 16, 17 and 18.

He said that mail volume would probably be heavier this year than last since University students would be in Iowa City a week longer than last year.

All Christmas greeting cards, either sealed or unsealed, require 6-cent postage stamps, Coen said.

Murray Urges Patience for U.N.

The power of the United Nations to effectively intervene in world crises "never really got off the ground," political scientist James Murray said Friday in the keynote address to the Eastern Iowa Model United Nations.

Murray, professor of political science and head of international studies at the University, said that one of the major purposes of the U.N., as stated in its charter, was to put down or prevent breaches of peace.

Addressing about 100 persons in the Union Main Lounge, Murray said that no armed forces or regular funds had ever been provided for the U.N. so it was "subject to the capriciousness of governments and legislatures."

To intervene in a crisis, the U.N. must have the argument of either or both the United States and the Soviet Union, Murray said. If only one of two countries is in agreement with U.N. peacekeeping aims, it must be supported by its bloc nations or neutral bloc in order to carry the motion, he added.

"We are living in a time of great fluidity of international affairs," Murray said.

Afro-Asian and Latin American countries no longer know where they stand in relation to the major power blocs of the United States and the Soviet Union, he further explained.

"For every Hungary, there is a Vietnam, and for every Czechoslovakia, there is a Dominican Republic," Murray said. "There is an ambiguity as to which bloc represents tyranny to the developing nations."

Other changes in international affairs raise questions about the role China would play in any power struggle 10 years from now and about a future alliance between the Soviet Union and the United States, according to Murray.

"We must decide if our present interest in Vietnam offers any future cooperation we may hope to have with the Soviet Union to contain an imperialist China," he said.

Murray said that the U.N. was no more involved in Vietnam than it presently is because it could serve no useful purpose.

The U.N. would not propose that the United States withdraw from Vietnam because it knows the United States won't, would it propose coercive force to get the United States out, Murray said. Force would mean a confrontation of the United States and the Soviet Union, he explained.

For this reason, "the United States or other nations won't push hard for U.N. interference," Murray said.

There are a number of things the U.N. could do to make this era of change a peaceful one, Murray said.

He suggested that the U.N. deal with potentially hot issues before they get hot.

"Thailand is a potential Vietnam," Murray said. "The U.N. should take steps before either side commits troops. It may be too late already."

Murray also suggested that the U.N. concern itself with hard economic problems such as food and population control.

"These may someday override ideological problems," he said.

The U.N. could promote international cooperation in areas such as canals, polar regions, mineral regions and outer space, Murray suggested.

"Instead of isolating differences and condemning those at fault, we should seek what we have in common," he said.

Murray advised judging the U.N. conservatively in terms of major issues.

"We must allow the U.N. to evolve with the times and not burden it beyond its capacity," he said.

Probe of Boycott On Wheat Asked By Congressman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Refusal of Japanese importers to buy American wheat should be investigated by the Department of Agriculture, a congressman from a wheat-producing state said Friday.

Rep. Thomas S. Kleppe, (R-N.D.) told Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman in a letter that the boycott has had "an extremely adverse effect upon domestic wheat prices . . . coming as it does at a time when our own wheat exports are running sharply below those of a year ago."

The suspensions of wheat purchases came last month after Japanese flour millers complained that moisture-damaged grain had been found in cargoes shipped from Portland, Ore.
