

Rain, Ice Paralyze University, City

A freezing rain which snarled traffic in Iowa City and the surrounding area Tuesday is forecast to continue today, although temperatures should be a little warmer.

Although city schools closed for the third time in 70 years, University classes met as usual, except those that instructors missed.

Gordon Strayer, director of public information, said Wednesday afternoon, "It would take a widespread emergency before classes would be cancelled."

"We have several thousand students who live within three blocks of campus. It's a rare day when they can't get in," he added.

But because of the icy sidewalks and streets, many pedestrians suffered falling injuries.

Dr. Lois Boulware, assistant director of Student Health, said Wednesday that about 15 students had been treated by Student Health doctors by noon for bruises, sprains and possible fractures, all resulting from falls on the ice.

The Office of Space Assignment reported two cancellations.

The Committee on Student Conduct rescheduled Wednesday night's hearing of the alleged violation of the Code of Student Life by Jerry Sies, A4, Iowa City, to tonight.

The CSC will hear all three cases tonight. The two other students involved are Ken Wessels, A3, Dyersville, and Dan Cheeseman, A4, Elkader.

The other rescheduling is a concert by the Iowa String Quartet which was scheduled Tuesday night. The concert will be at 8 p.m., Feb. 19 in Macbride Auditorium.

Iowa City Police reported no major problems or accidents Wednesday. There were numerous reports of cars sliding into other cars or into ditches.

The Johnson County Sheriff's office reported 15 semi-trucks off the road near the Tiffin Interstate 80 interchange. But they reported no serious accidents or injuries.

The Iowa Highway Patrol advised motorists in the Iowa City area to use extreme caution when driving, although they reported road conditions were improving late Wednesday.

Paul Dvorsky, superintendent of streets, said that he had ordered more salt and sand so that if the present supply didn't hold out there will be supplies to fall back on.

The city crews began salting the streets at midnight Tuesday. They have used about 90 tons of salt and 200 tons of salt and sand mixture.

Dvorsky said that the crews were trying to keep the downtown and main arterial streets clear. He said the streets in the residential districts were in very poor condition.

Dvorsky said that it took 500 pounds of salt-sand mix to a mile just to clear the middle of the streets.

One of the city's sand spreaders rolled into a ditch early Wednesday morning because of icy streets.

The University Physical Plant said that it had used 70 to 80 tons of sand on its streets and sidewalks.

Dvorsky said that the job of keeping the streets clear was doubled because of the continuing rain.

"As soon as the sand is spread it is frozen over again," he explained.

Local wrecker services said that although they had had many calls, they hadn't been able to get their wreckers off the lots until 1 p.m. Wednesday because of the ice.

One firm had to send one wrecker out to pull another one out of a ditch.

Private car owners weren't the only ones who had trouble moving on the city streets.

City buses didn't start running until 10 a.m. Wednesday. Lewis Negus, owner of the Iowa City Coach Company, said that he didn't know whether his buses would run today if the bad weather continued.

There were only four taxis running in the city Wednesday. One company reported that 15 cabs went out Wednesday morning, but all except three were back in the garage by noon.

Greyhound Bus Lines reported that service had been interrupted Tuesday night and Wednesday morning, but by 4 p.m.

Wednesday buses were again running, only 40 minutes behind schedule.

Ozark Airlines said that Wednesday flights were all classified as "doubtful" and that flights today depended upon the weather conditions.

Neither the Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. nor Northwestern Bell Telephone Company reported serious problems because of the storm.

The utilities company manager, Don Findlay, said that an outage east of Iowa City on Rochester Road affected service to about 25 customers.

He explained that the ice had contributed to the outage. Construction work on that line made it particularly vulnerable to ice.

There were a few other outages around the city, he said, but his crews had repaired them.

The University's power outage between 11:45 a.m. and 12:20 p.m. Wednesday had nothing to do with the ice storm, according to Duane A. Nollsch, director of the Physical Plant. A transformer north of the Union broke down and caused the partial outage.

University Theatre, the Main Library, the Art Building, the Women's Gym, and the Union were affected by the power loss.

Ted Magnuson, manager of Northwestern Bell, said that the only effect of the storm was an abnormally high calling load which at times resulted in delays in getting dial-tones and reaching long distance operators.

Wednesday mail delivery was considerably slowed down by the icy streets and sidewalks.

Both city and rural mail carriers started on their routes, but according to Postmaster William Coen, not all were able to deliver all their mail.

Incoming mail was slowed because of the storm — especially from the west. Coen said. A mail delivery that should have reached the city about 1:30 a.m. didn't arrive until 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Coen said mail was leaving the city about on schedule.

Although most businesses were open, owners and managers reported "light business."

The Courthouse offices were closed Wednesday because not enough persons could get to work to run the offices.

'We'll Try Spring, Fall, Summer Before Moving'

By WILLIAM L. SEAVEY

Twenty persons questioned Wednesday about their reactions to the weather gave responses ranging from "It doesn't bother me a bit" and "I enjoy it" to "You people must be crazy to stay in this area."

Many complained of car troubles — windshields caked with ice, flat tires that needed fixing, and roads so slick it was impossible to drive them.

Here are some of the more salient observations:

Ralph Deadman, Iowa City: "It was more trouble walking the two blocks to work after I'd parked the car than it was getting to the parking lot in the first place."

Don Miller, A4, Brooklyn: "It isn't nearly as bad in town as it is in the country."

David Day, A3E, Pepper Pike, Ohio: "Because of what I consider poor public works department reactions in cleaning the streets, it's inconvenienced me quite a bit. I made it to class only to find out that many of my professors didn't, because of the poor snow removal and protection of public safety."

"Last night on the Coralville strip I did bump into a car, although I did neither extensive damage to my car nor the other. I could not control the car at all; the street was solid ice. They could have had some sort of sanding on the street, and there was none."

Kathleen Mahoney, G, Webster City: "I didn't get anything done today. Classes were cancelled and then I spent 45 minutes trying to find out if I was going to have a test. Then I went to the library and the lights went out."

Debby Brock, A3, Sioux City: "I think they should close the University down."

Lewis Converse, Iowa City: "The weather is OK if you don't mind falling down every once in a while."

Patti Shelangoski, Iowa City: "I fell down four times."

Gordon Strayer, Iowa City: "I have a very sore tailbone and neck as a result of two falls in my own driveway."

Gretchen Bronaugh, Iowa City: "I think it's fantastic. It's such an exciting difference. It's different from the daily drag of boredom."

Bruce Strother, Iowa City: "I broke the ice chipper on my windshield."

G. M. Sims, Iowa City: "We just moved from Texas and you guys have got to be out of your minds to stay in the area. We're going to give you a chance with spring and fall and summer before we make up our minds whether to move back to Texas or not."

Dance Concert To Feature Bach, Brubeck Music

University Dance Theatre will present sixteen dances done to music ranging from Bach to Brubeck in its annual mid-winter concert, Discovery VIII, Friday and Saturday.

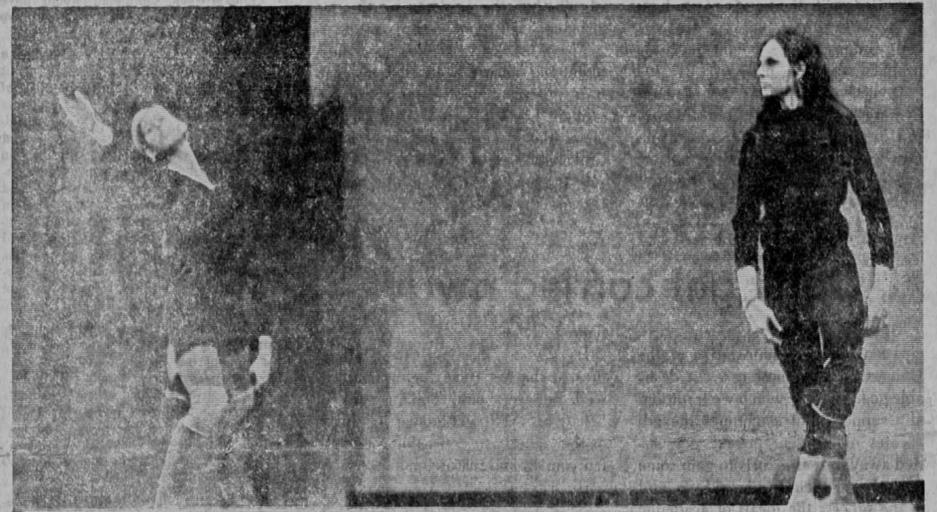

Tickets for the 8 p.m. performances at Macbride Auditorium are available at the Union box office. University students must present their ID cards to obtain tickets. General admission is $1.50, and there are no reserved seats.

Marcia Thayer, director of Dance Theatre, said Wednesday that seven of the dances were choreographed by two senior dance majors as part of their senior concert dance requirements. They are Mary Lea Leitch, A4, Iowa City, and Patricia Gray, A4, Cedar Rapids.

Dance Theatre is a performing dance group whose members are selected by audition at the beginning of the year.

Members may choose to take it for one hour's credit, Mrs. Thayer said, although more take it for non-credit.

There are about 40 members in the group. The Theatre recently received a grant from the state Arts Council and this spring will be going on tour, presenting some of the dances to be performed in Discovery VIII this weekend.

Search for Cause Continues—

'Big E' Fire Toll: 25 Dead

PEARL HARBOR (AP) — Adm. John J. Hyland, Pacific Fleet commander, said Wednesday that Navy investigators "are rapidly narrowing down the probable cause" of the explosions and fire that killed 25 seamen and injured 85 others on the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise.

All but one of the 17 previously reported missing were found during a crew muster, the Navy said. An air and sea search continued for the missing man.

Hyland declined to answer questions about preliminary findings. He said "The fire damage was less than I expected." He called the incident a "very unfortunate accident."

The Navy's Pacific Fleet command revised the death toll to 25 after a 14th Naval District spokesman here had put the figure at 24.

Hyland's session with reporters was a brief. He read a prepared statement and left without answering any questions.

"On behalf of the Pacific Fleet I want to extend condolences to the families of the men lost," he said.

He said he was "confident we will find out just what caused the fire." He praised the crew of the world's largest warship, saying they were "well-trained and did things quickly."

Three of the injured were flown Tuesday night to Brooke Army Medical Center in Texas for treatment of burns. Fifty-eight others injured were at Tripler Army Hospital in Honolulu, the remainder aboard the Enterprise in Pearl Harbor.

The Navy said both assessment of damages and clean-up of the ship were now under way. Twenty men from the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard at Bremerton, Wash., arrived here to inspect damage from the fire which swept the stern of the world's first nuclear carrier following a series of explosions.

Fifteen aircraft aboard the 85,000-ton carrier were destroyed in the blaze which broke out around 3:15 a.m., Hawaii time, Tuesday as the ship conducted a bombing training exercise 75 miles from Pearl Harbor.

The first explosion occurred in or near an F4 Phantom jet parked on the flight deck about 75 feet from the stern of the ship.

The Navy first attributed the initial explosion to a bomb falling from an airplane landing on the carrier, but later withdrew this pending an investigation.

After the fires were extinguished, the carrier returned to Pearl Harbor under its own power. Its propulsion system and eight nuclear reactors were not involved in the fire.

Cmdr. Samuel B. Lancaster, public affairs officer for the Enterprise, said that the 1,123-foot carrier would be sent to the mainland for repairs.

There were indications that the "Big

"E" would head back to its home port at Alameda, Naval Air Station in California, but the Navy made no official statement.

The explosions tore three large holes in the flight deck. One penetrated into three lower decks. The largest of the holes was 15 feet across and 20 feet long.

CSC Will Hear 3 Cases Tonight

Hearings of three University students charged with violating the Code of Student Life will be held by the Committee on Student Conduct (CSC) at 7 tonight.

One of the students — Jerry Sies, G, Iowa City — was originally scheduled to be heard Wednesday night, but his hearing was postponed until tonight because of bad weather.

Sies will have a joint hearing with Ken Wessels, A3, Dyersville, and Dan Cheeseman, A4, Elkader, the two other students charged with violating the code. Students for a Democratic Society, an organization charged with violating the code, will be heard at 7 p.m. Friday.

The hearings, which are open to the public, will be held in the Old Capitol Senate Chambers.

In 8th District Court, Major Cases Are 'Still Pending'

By GARRY KNUSSMAN

Major 1968 court cases in Iowa City and Johnson County can be summarized in one phrase — "still pending." Only one of four court cases which dominated the news last year was completely resolved. University student Jerry Sies, A4, Iowa City, won a two-month battle with the city over public access to city housing inspection records.

Three other major cases are still pending in court at this time. They are the conspiracy charges against seven current and former University students; a manslaughter indictment against Gregory Ward Burt, of West Des Moines; and a murder charge against Laurence P. Holderness, of Iowa City.

Seven University students were indicted for conspiracy by a

Johnson County District Court Grand Jury Jan. 11. The indictment followed the arrest of 18 University students Dec. 5, 1967, after demonstrations against on-campus recruiters of the Dow Chemical Company. Dow is a major manufacturer of napalm, an incendiary chemical used in bombs in the Vietnamese war.

The seven students charged, some of whom are no longer students or residing in Iowa City, were Albert G. Marian, G, North Liberty; Bruce Clark, A1, Des Moines; Dennis Ankrum, former student and Iowa City regional coordinator of Students for a Democratic Society; Jean Gammon, former student; Stephen G. Morris, A1, Iowa City; Ross Peterson, A2, Des Moines; and Paul Kleinberger, a former University graduate student.

The indictment charged some of the seven with using two-way radios to co-ordinate the demonstrations. But at a February hearing, the prosecution failed to present any exhibits as evidence.

Lawyers Move Dismissal
Defense attorneys for Marian and Peterson later moved for dismissal of the charges. The motions cited the lack of specific evidence and claimed the prosecution did not show what type of acts were committed.

Defense attorneys subsequently filed a motion requesting the dismissal of the charges for all seven indicted. The motion claimed the state conspiracy law was unconstitutional and not applicable to the case.

District Court Judge Harold Vietor ruled Oct. 9 that the original motion for dismissal did not properly raise the questions of constitutionality and legal sufficiency. Vietor said the questions would have to be filed in a demurrer, or a request for a stay of proceedings.

Demurrers were filed by the defense attorneys for all seven Oct. 18, in accordance with Vietor's ruling. These briefs are still pending in court at this time.

One Charge Dismissed
A charge of resisting arrest filed against Frederick McTaggart, G, Iowa City, was dismissed Oct. 18 after the prosecution failed to file additional evidence in District Court. Two other persons charged with the same offense have since left Iowa City.

Most of the cases against the remainder of the 18 arrested were resolved in Iowa City Police Court after the persons forfeited bond or were fined.

The City of Iowa City became embroiled in an extended battle with a University student over public access to the city's housing inspection records in April. City Attorney Jay Honohan and City Housing Inspector James B. Hemesath were charged with illegal concealment of public records April 8 by Sies.

Public Records Withheld
Sies claimed the locations of condemned property and the names of related landlords were withheld from him Mar. 29 by Hemesath. Sies said he needed the information for a course.

Honohan and Hemesath responded by filing for a temporary injunction in District Court to prevent Sies from seeing the records.

The Hawkeye Area Legal Services Society, which represents low-income persons, and its since retired director Gary Veldey entered the case April 29 as a friend of the court. Veldey expressed interest in the case because the records involved low-income persons, who were residents of the housing in question.

The basic issues of the dispute were first raised at a May 2 hearing before District Court Judge William Eads to consider the request for a temporary injunction.

Honohan argued that Sies wanted to examine the records so that he could tell tenants in the unapproved housing they would not have to pay rent. This was illegal according to Honohan.

Hemesath listed the groups of persons who had previously been allowed to inspect housing records. The groups listed were present and potential renters and present and potential landlords. He also said part of the downtown area was off-limits for housing inspection.

Sies' attorney argued that the housing records should be open to the public and said this was the central issue of the dispute.

Sies testified he wanted to use the information in the records to form a "tenants association" to protect tenants from landlords who were violating laws.

The city council responded to the controversy May 9 in an informal session called to clarify city policy concerning records. The meeting was held after three Iowa City women, including State Rep. Minnette Doderer (D-Iowa City), had also been Risk lives to go to class?

Neither rain, nor snow nor sleet can stop the U.S. mail, or so the saying goes. However, the mail was stopped on Wednesday after a massive ice storm crippled Iowa City.

The mail has lost its tradition of reliability to the University because the University would not cancel classes.

Travel by any means was virtually impossible. The streets and sidewalks were like glass; cars had at least one-half inch of solid ice engulfing them; ice covered snow that covered ice. And yet, the great University rolled on.

By about 1 p.m. Wednesday, Student Health officials reported about 15 injuries ranging from strains and gashes to possible fractures. Countless others fell but didn't bother to go to student health.

According to Gordon Strayer, director of public information, classes were not cancelled because "it would take a real wide-spread emergency before classes wouldn't meet." He says that with thousands of students living within three blocks of the central campus, there would be little problem attending classes.

However, thousands of students live much farther away from the central campus. And most faculty members live away from campus, too.

Before the sidewalks were salted, it took about one hour to walk ten blocks. After the streets were salted, it took at least twice as long to drive anywhere. And that was not considering possible complications — like side streets that have not even been plowed since the last snow let alone salted after the ice storm.

The University occasionally calls a recess in classes for memorial services and the fall convocations which open each academic year. But, according to Strayer, the University runs seven days a week, twelve months a year.

No class schedule for any institution should be sacred. No student or faculty member should be expected to risk his life to either attend or teach a class.

It was obvious Tuesday night that an ice storm was moving in. It was also obvious that travel would be difficult on Wednesday. And, when the ice resulted in power failure to the women's physical education building, the Union, the library, University Theatre and the University art building, it was obvious that some classes would be unable to meet regardless of whether the students or the instructors could get in to campus.

The University is so concerned about the welfare of its students that it is enforcing a stringent Code of Student Life to insure the stability of the academic community. Perhaps the University should also be concerned with the health and safety of instructors and students.

Don't get carried away

"Student power" or student participation in the administration of the University is, in most cases, a desirable goal, and one which we traditionally support. But sometimes the advocates of "student power" get carried away in their efforts to gain some control over their academic lives, and in the process the ideals of academic freedom — just as desirable and necessary, and possibly more so — can be endangered.

The Action Studies Program (ASP) is at present conducting a pilot course and teacher evaluation under the aegis of Student Senate in three selected areas of the University: the College of Business, the School of Journalism and the Department of Speech and Dramatic Arts.

The evaluation was set up after complaints were raised that a University-sponsored evaluation conducted last year had been "locked up" and was unavailable for inspection by students. The goal of the ASP evaluation is to eventually check every teacher and course and publish the results. That way, poor or irresponsible teachers and worthless courses can be avoided by students and hopefully done away with. It's a good idea in theory, and at present the test run is being handled well. But we shouldn't allow Student Senate or ASP to get too carried away in their efforts to crack down on rotten courses and instructors.

We hate to sound conservative or anti-student power, but this isn't a matter of students versus corrupt, unfair or outdated administrative policies. Given some kind of official or quasi-official sanction for the evaluation, and given at some future date a group of people preparing the questionnaires and conducting the surveys with certain prejudices or set theories about education — a suppression of academic freedom could result.

A lot of us fear the possibility of today's efficiency and uniformity measures turning tomorrow's administration into an academic "Big Brother." But we ought to remember that even if "Big Brother" were student-controlled, we would be no less enslaved. ASP's pilot evaluation should continue, but with a careful eye to preventing possible suppression of faculty independence and academic freedom.

If the new administration is really serious about bringing Americans together, a good calendar of creative achievement could be developed from the major events of the old year. The tragedy of the strife and starvation in Biafra and the majesty of America's Apollo flight to the moon were both marks of 1969. The combination should suggest to the new administration that the world could be fed if America worked as hard to combat world hunger as she works to get to the moon.

Americans are constantly bombarded by reminders of this country's commitment to the space race. Kiddie cartoons on television and toy counters all over the country emphasize the space theme. Think what could happen if Americans were so constantly reminded of the problem of world hunger.

The President himself could ask all Americans to give up a meal each week and send the money saved to the federal government for foreign-aid food purchase. Restaurants could be asked to have containers to collect money which will be picked up periodically by postal agents. Supermarkets could have large containers into which shoppers can drop canned food and staple items to be sent overseas. The containers would be picked up periodically by Army trucks.

Elementary school children could begin early to experience the joy and dignity of human service, and they would be a vital and active force in combating world starvation. A Penny-a-Week Campaign could be initiated in the public schools (when they are in session): a weekly collection deliberately low to avoid competition between rich and poor students. Nationwide statistics for 1966 show an elementary and secondary school enrollment of 43,055,055. Average daily attendance was 39,969,000. A Penny-a-Week Campaign would have collected almost $400,000 weekly to help eliminate world hunger.

One of the major events of 1968 was a national epidemic of Hong Kong flu. That reminder should focus the attention of the new administration on the problems of disease — both in America and worldwide. A new foreign aid emphasis should encourage a new image for America; an image not of the world's strongest or richest country, but rather the world's most humane country. America's preoccupation with sharing her resources should become so evident that people the world over will know that if American resources are not flowing into their nation, it is because their own leaders refuse to accept them.

Let America wage war upon the infant mortality rate the world over instead of encouraging preparation for war through the delivery of guns and tanks. Let America provide skilled medical personnel in the most remote areas of the world, devoting knowledge and research toward the elimination of rare diseases unknown on the North American continent.

The shocking brutality at the Democratic National Convention which marred the 1968 calendar should encourage the new administration to take seriously the legitimate needs of our nation's law enforcement officers. One of the most important issues in creating safe city streets is dealing fairly and justly with those who have the job of stopping crime in the streets; namely, the cops.

The cop has the most important and demanding job in the country and yet he is the most underpaid man in America. Society's unjust disregard for the cop is illustrated by the fact that the median annual pay for a cop in the large city is $5,300. Yet every time a riot breaks out in the ghetto, white America expects the cop to stop a problem he did not start.

A new federal administration should encourage legislation requiring the starting salary for cops in large cities to be a minimum of $10,000 a year. Such legislation would go a long way toward establishing a new image for the cop. He will be more dedicated to his job, because he will be paid in proportion to the responsibility required of him.

For the first time in America, the cop will have the dignity and respect he needs to begin to meet social problems rather than suppress them. Better-qualified young men will be attracted to the career of law enforcement.

What is true of the cop is also true of the fireman, the hospital worker, the teacher, and all other essential personnel in our society. We are fond of describing some jobs as "necessary for defense." We should begin to concern ourselves with those jobs which are necessary for survival, and for the encouragement of growth to full human potential of every American citizen.

Let the new administration extend federal loans to all needy kids who want to go to college but cannot afford the cost — every one of them. Let the federal government be the guiding light for other institutions in our society, so that the Church, for example, will become sincerely involved in solving the problems of man without worrying about the possible repercussions in the collection box.

If the Establishment in America can honestly sit down and make the kinds of basic changes the youth of America have been demanding, perhaps there is a glimmer of hope for survival of both young and old, black, white, Mexican, Puerto Rican, Indian, indeed America itself.

'What transfer of what power?'

A new administration cometh for capital's power-grabbers

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — Power, the opiate of the people who live in Washington, is starting to slip through the hands of the old Administration and is being grabbed by the new. There are signs of the switch taking place every day. For example, Tuesday I was at the Sans Souci restaurant, the place where the White House power structure usually has lunch.

One of President Johnson's aides came in and was escorted to his usual table. He sat there for two hours, alone. The person he was supposed to have lunch with never showed up.

The man I was eating with, who has lived through several administration changeovers in Washington, shook his head sadly and said, "The poor S.O.B. They're trying to tell him something."

"Is that how they usually do it?" I asked.

"Sometimes they cancel his table before he arrives. That way nobody knows he was stood up for lunch. This way, everybody knows. It will be all over town in an hour."

"But suppose the person who was supposed to have lunch with him just couldn't make it?"

"You don't understand. If you've got the power, the person makes it. Somebody else gets stood up. But if you don't have the power any more, then you get stood up. He's looking over here and smiling at us. Whatever you do, don't smile back."

"But he's my friend," I protested. "If he smiles at me, I'll have to smile back."

"He doesn't want you to smile back. He wants you to invite him to sit with us so it doesn't look as if he's been stood up. We can't afford that."

"Why not?" I asked.

"You don't know anything about this town, do you? Suppose word got out that we had lunch with him — I mean just two weeks before the inauguration."

"Well, heck, he's still a decent guy, even if he is on his way out."

"That's not the point, stupid," my friend said. "We have to deal with the new guys over at the White House, and if they think we have any ties with the old guys they won't trust us. If you sit with him, you'll have something to do with that loser, meet him at a coffee shop, but don't get me involved. I've got my job to think of."

"Are you trying to tell me that the new guys wouldn't trust us if we bought an old Administration guy a cup of coffee?"

"I'm trying to tell you that everyone in this restaurant is aware of what is going on. Sure, it would be a nice, brave, gutsy thing to wave and say, 'Come on over for a brandy.' And there are probably a few people in the restaurant who would admire us for it. But most of the people in this restaurant feel exactly as I do. The guy came in here alone. Let him leave alone."

"It seems so cruel."

"Government is cruel," my friend said. "But he'll be all right. He'll probably get $100,000 a year when he gets out of the White House, not to mention an advance of half a million dollars on a book, plus lecture fees. He's not going to starve to death."

"But the thought of nobody ever eating lunch with him..."

"Couldn't I just go over to his table and say goodbye?" I asked.

"I wouldn't chance it. Herb Klein just came in." My friend waved wildly at Klein, Richard Nixon's new communications chief. "Hiya, Herb, baby. How's the old boy?" My friend muttered to me, "Wave at him. Maybe he'll stop by the table for a minute. It won't hurt us if he does."

In the excitement, my friend from the White House got up from the table and left the restaurant. No one else in the Sans Souci noticed he was gone.

'Flush for Freedom' could be catastrophe?

To the editor:

Students . . . beware! Although the Students for Violent Non-Action have obviously formulated an ingenious plan for having everyone flush his toilet at the exact moment when President Nixon finishes his inaugural oath, let me warn you of the horrid catastrophe that would result. It would change the political-religious climate in America, and the following scene would appear in every history book in the world:

(Setting: The White House)
(Time: immediately following Nixon's inaugural oath)

(Character: Richard Nixon played by Richard Nixon Press Secretary played by some unknown Republican)

Press Secretary: Mr. Nixon, Mr. Nixon . . . my God! Just as you finished your inaugural oath the water level in the United States dropped three full inches.
Nixon: (Smiling.) Really?

Press Secretary: Yes, sir. This has never happened during an inaugural oath before. It must be some kind of a Divine Manifestation.

Nixon: Yes. (He reflects intellectually for a moment.) I was expecting a star in the east but . . .

Business student rejects petition

To the editor:

As reported in two articles in The Daily Iowan and the Commerce Crier, circulating on campus recently was a petition entitled "The Silent Majority," which favored accepting the practice of allowing all industries and government agencies to recruit on campus. This document was sponsored by the Collegiate Chamber of Commerce.

Since I personally did not wish to sign this petition, my freedom to withhold my signature exists. The problem arises when, as it now stands, a student who is academically in the business school emphasizing economics, must mandatorily and in fact automatically become a member of the Collegiate Chamber of Commerce. This "organization" of which in theory I must be a part has sponsored a misrepresentative and incompetently written statement for the University community to consider. There was no mention, explicitly or even implied as to whether the interviewer must be legal or whether it must be clearly non-discriminatory. The petition does clearly state, though, that "all industries and government agencies" will be allowed to recruit.

In view of the recent fair employment and civil rights legislation, and especially after the Crescent Electric Thing (if I may borrow from Jim Rogers) it has been established that students must become aware of and investigate for themselves the University's actions, as it definitely does need help in determining its position.

Therefore, it is unforgivable in my mind that the sponsors and signers of the petition could be so concerned for their own economic security in gaining employment of their choice, that they have overlooked the fact that their cooperation may be needed in gaining any employment for some minority groups. This may come in the form of preventing firms who have violated fair employment legislation to interview on this campus.

As long as the "Silent Majority" remained silent, its incompetency was hidden by its apathy. Now that it has spoken, encouraged by the Collegiate Chamber of Commerce, its social unawareness and incompetency has been illustrated to the campus.

Accordingly, I now no longer wish to belong to the organization that incorporates its members mandatorily and automatically. Also, although wishing to continue my studies, I now hereby resign as a member of the Collegiate Chamber of Commerce due to its incompetency and misrepresentation in preparing and sponsoring petitions.

Graduate student seeks 'good will'

To the editor:

This letter is addressed to four different segments of our University and pertains to the personal-emotional component of the "Jerry Stevens incident."

1. To the writer of the anonymous letter: you have chosen to express your fears and your hostility through a method that is generally considered in our society to be cowardly and inexcusable. You chose this method for reasons known only to yourself. One can only ask you how you feel about yourself for needing to choose such a sneaky course of action. Is the person who operates in this manner the one you want to become in your adult life, or can you strive to find more constructive methods of dealing with strong emotions?

2. To Jerry Stevens: As you grope for a place in this white-majority society, can you sense that many persons at the University do not subscribe to the attitudes of the anonymous letter-writer, either overtly or covertly? Is it possible for you, when one thinks of all the special problems you face because of your black skin, to be even so possible for you to recognize good will toward you, to detect support for you as a person? Can you learn to differentiate truth from apparent-truth? You have been attacked. . . . Even if you now fear for your personal safety (if you do) you are in an exceptional position to extend compassion to the letter-writer, for he has not behaved as a man. He, too, needs understanding as a person.

3. To each of us at the University: Voltaire's powerful words are sometimes used on this campus so as to almost make them into a cliché. Nevertheless, perhaps it would be well to consider them in the context of this incident: "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

4. Last, and most searching, to myself: Am I in any way, given my particular set of social and personal values, contributing to a situation in which two persons must become involved in an ugly racist threatening interaction? What is my share — and my shame — in the corporate guilt the white man bears for that which he has done to the black man? How can I behave so the black man will trust me? How do I want him to behave so that I will be able to trust him? How can I reach him so that he will know that although we may differ widely in opinions and experiences, we share a common humanity?

It Takes Teamwork to Walk

Warm Air Plus Cold Air Equals Frustration, Fun

The weather was the big news Wednesday.

It was a rare meteorological event: warm air masses and cold air masses, and all that scientific explanation — something to talk about at this year's weatherman's convention — but to those of us streets couldn't get to work; and walking, even on level sidewalks, was a slow, hazardous, and sometimes painful undertaking.

• The police monitor radio crackled out a report that highway 218 to Cedar Rapids was 100 per cent ice-covered; a lot of people had difficulty getting out of their driveways.

• Scores of Iowa Citizens, students and residents alike, abandoned their cars in favor of safely riding a bus to work or class — only to discover that the buses weren't running either.

• Drivers who tried going down the steeper hills on College, Washington, Jefferson and Market Streets discovered their cars wanted to go different directions, and didn't want to stop; cars going up the hills didn't make it. Some cars on College Street were parked parallel, some at an angle, and others at a combination position.

• Cars were covered with curtains of ice, and would-be drivers tried a variety of ways to get the ice off, from ice picks to hammers to buckets of hot water — none of which were successful for long. It rained most of the day, and the water continued to collect on windshields and freeze.

• University Pres. Howard R. Bowen said he "didn't expect students to risk life and limb" but he expected them to come to class. A few students saw a contradiction in his statement as they reported to Student Health for treatment of cuts, bruises, sprains and fractures; some couldn't make it to Student Health.

• University and city maintenance departments were over-run with complaints about the lack of sand and salt on streets and sidewalks; some maintenance personnel could only explain that they, too, had trouble driving to work Wednesday morning.

It's 'Freezing Rain,' Weatherman Says

The official meteorological term for Wednesday's sheet of ice is freezing rain, according to Arthur Vetter, assistant professor of chemical engineering. Vetter, who was a weatherman in the U.S. Army, said it differed from snow and hail because it didn't freeze until it hit the ground, rather than freezing in the clouds.

The freezing rain, Vetter explained, was caused by a high, warm air mass moving up from the Gulf Coast to get acquainted with a low, cold air mass that had been hanging around Iowa City for several days.

That chance meeting had two related consequences: (1) the combination of warm air plus cold air naturally produced precipitation — in this case, rain — and (2) the warm rain hit Iowa City's below-freezing streets and sidewalks and froze into a sheet of ice.

Vetter compared the phenomenon to dropping boiling water on a frozen surface. No matter how hot the water is, he said, it will freeze quickly on contact with the frozen surface.

who think "meteorologists" are people who study meteors, it was frustrating and frightening.

Classes were canceled because neither instructors nor students could walk or drive downtown; maintenance personnel who were supposed to be clearing the

LBJ Gives Congress Biggest Budget Ever;

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson included a big boost in Social Security benefits for 25 million Americans in his record-breaking $195.3 billion final budget submitted to Congress Wednesday.

The budget, the largest ever, projects a $3.4 billion surplus for fiscal 1970 beginning July 1 as a result of his recommendation for a one-year extension of the 10 per cent income surtax.

It will be up to a Republican president, Richard M. Nixon, who takes office Monday, and a Democratic-controlled Congress to accept or revise the budget in the months ahead.

But Budget Director Charles J. Zwick, after frequent consultations with Nixon administration officials in recent weeks, said they agreed on the appropriateness of a 1970 surplus.

By implication, this could mean they go along with continuance of the surtax — later confirmed by Nixon in a statement. Zwick emphasized the incoming officials were not committed to the specifics of the budget.

However, Nixon issued a statement giving qualified endorsement to extension of the surtax, pending studies by his administration and the Congress in the next few months.

If Johnson's recommendations are accepted, not only will older Americans get higher Social Security payments, but all wage earners and employers will pay higher taxes to finance the increases.

In addition, it will cost an extra penny to mail a letter. Telephone and auto excise taxes will not drop as now scheduled, and transportation taxes will be increased — including a jump from 5 to 7 per cent in the levy on air passenger tickets.

The President included $25.7 billion to finance Vietnamese war operations in the year ahead. He said this would pay for the current troop strength and levels of fighting. These levels are down somewhat so that the war figure is $3.5 billion less than that for the current year.

Johnson said that, of course, all Americans were hoping the Paris talks would bring an end to the war.

If this happens, he said, different decisions could be made on the surtax and military spending.

He urged that, if Congress voted to keep the surtax, it give Nixon power to end it or reduce it before June 30, 1970, if events warranted this.

Johnson studied his message with figures expressing his pride in the record of his five years in office.

These gave details to many new programs in such fields as education, health and conservation and cited the beneficiaries.

For example, he said 30 million older Americans are getting help in meeting their health care needs through medicare, and nine million children from low-income families are benefiting from federal aid grants under the 1965 Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

However, both Johnson and Zwick called the budget an exremely tight one, and there were sure to be cries in Congress that some programs were underfinanced.

For instance, the President's allotments for some education programs and for water pollution control fall well below the figures authorized by Congress.

Johnson said there had been unprecedented economic growth and increases in living standards during his administration.

"In my first budget message five years ago," he noted, "I stated, 'A government that is strong, a government that is solvent, a government that is compassionate is the kind of government that endures." "I have sought to provide that kind of government as your President. With this budget, I leave that kind of government to my successor."

Social Security Up, but Surplus Predicted

Johnson's Social Security recommendations would mean a basic increase of 10 per cent for all 5 million persons now on the rolls.

In addition, the minimum payment now going to two million old persons would be raised from $55 to $80 a month, a $100 a month floor would be guaranteed for all individuals who have paid Social Security taxes at least 20 years, and 2 million disabled persons would be put under medicare regardless of their age.

This would mean $1.6 billion of increased benefits in fiscal 1970. Johnson proposed to finance this fully by raising the taxable wage ceiling to $9,000 from the present $7,800 and advancing for a year, to Jan. 1, 1970, the next scheduled boost in the payroll tax rate from 4.8 per cent each for the employer and employee to 5.2 per cent.

The President's new proposed seven-cent rate for a letter stamp would combine into one rate the present six-cent first class stamp and the eight-cent airmail stamp.

In addition, he asked increases in the single piece third-class mail rate, chiefly covering advertising material. All of these postal hikes would bring in $519 million a year, he estimated.

Johnson's excise tax recommendations would continue the auto levy at 7 per cent and the telephone service levy at 10 per cent for another year.

Both now are scheduled to drop to 5 per cent on Jan. 1, 1970.

The President said his surtax and excise tax proposals would mean $9.5 billion additional revenue for his 1970 budget.

They helped him present to the Congress and the nation a strikingly better government fiscal picture than was contained in his budget message last year.

Another big factor in the improvement was the booming economy which shot the individual and corporate income tax yields much higher than originally forecast.

Not only did Johnson estimate a $3.4 billion surplus in fiscal 1970, but he also projected a $2.4 billion black ink figure for the current year, fiscal 1969.

In January last year the President's budget forecast an $8 billion deficit for 1969 even though he was including revenue from the surtax which he asked at that time.

Johnson said he believed that a budget surplus achieved by extension of the surtax was essential because of the nagging problem of inflation in the last year.

He cited this as the one serious flaw in an otherwise bright economic picture. The tightness of the budget led the President to recommend very few new domestic benefits, aside from the Social Security expansion which is financed through the program's own trust fund.

He did ask that an urban development bank be set up to provide financing for public facilities in hard-pressed cities.

And he did include more funds for a number of ongoing programs such as model cities, training of the jobless and low-skilled, and health care for low-income mothers and their children.

Calabria's Winning Basket Wasn't a Shot He Planned

By MIKE EBBING

Although Chad Calabria didn't get the shot he wanted in the closing seconds of Tuesday night's game, he was still pretty satisfied with the one he did get away.

Calabria connected on an eight-foot jumper with just five seconds left on the clock to give however, and when I got the ball I decided to drive in for a lay-up. But (Lee) Lafayette was there. I knew I could get a shot off or I could drive and

"Coach Miller told us to give them their half of the court to prevent the long pass in, and then guard them closely at about halfcourt," said Calabria.

"Ward hesitated just a fraction of a second too long on his shot. I was standing right next to him and just as he was starting to shoot, the buzzer went off."

Calabria said he didn't think the Hawks played very well defensively, although they committed only 16 team fouls.

"Too many times, we weren't keeping up with them on defense and they were getting open too often for shots."

What could have been a severe headache for the Hawks fouled out of the game with 6:20 left. The headache was 6-2 sophomore guard Rudy Benjamin, who was averaging only around six points a game. Benjamin has been just an occasional starter this year for the Spartans, but he caught on fire Tuesday night to almost give his team enough spark for a victory. Benjamin collected 19 points in the first half on shots from all over the court and added 7 in the last half before fouling out for game scoring honors with 26 points.

"I guarded him (Benjamin) some of the game," said Calabria, "and I think he just had an exceptional night. From our scouting reports, we heard that he liked to drive but that he wasn't a real good outside shooter. But tonight, he hit on several long shots, so I think he just had a hot night."

The Hawks' next action is this Saturday afternoon against Minnesota in the Field House.

probably pick up a foul. I decided to stop and go for the jump shot at about 8 or 10 feet away.

"All I can say is that it feels great to win a game by one point and also score the winning basket."

Calabria's presence was acknowledged by the Spartans, however, long before the closing seconds of the game. The 6-1 junior pumped in 11 of the Hawks' final 13 points and finished with 24 points, including 10 of 10 from the free-throw line.

Michigan State Coach John Benington and the rest of the Spartans saw the value of a split second prove fatal in the last four seconds. Lloyd Ward, a 5-9 junior, amazed the 13,700 fans when he tossed in a desperation shot from far out. The officials ruled, however, that time had run out — both on Ward and the Spartans.

Ward's final shot was set up after Benington called time out and the officials reset the clock with four seconds left.

the Hawks their second straight Big 10 victory with an uneasy 77-76 triumph over a stubborn Michigan State team.

"When Coach (Ralph) Miller called time with 11 seconds, he told us to work the ball around and have the guy who threw the ball in to take the shot," said Calabria Tuesday night.

Former Iowa Swim Coach Reaches Top in His Field

By MARY RICHE

An inventor, an author and a coach at Iowa for 43 years, David A. Armbruster is a living legend in the swimming world.

At 78, Armbruster now resides with his wife in Iowa City after serving as the Hawkeye swim coach from the fall of 1916 to the spring of 1958. He taught swimming at the University when swimming first began in the world and only a few could swim.

As an assistant YMCA director in Sioux City in 1911, Armbruster attended a YMCA camp in Lake Geneva, Wis. It was there that he saw a version of the Australian crawl in which the swimmer's feet were tied together. This reminded him of a dolphin's flat tail that waves up and down as it swims. Armbruster's ideas for the new stroke had begun.

With the help of Jack Sieg, team swimmer, Armbruster brought his ideas to Iowa. He had his team swim the 50-yard Field House pool underwater and Sieg used the new stroke. He beat his teammates because of the added speed the new stroke provided, so Armbruster perfected it in the middle 1930s.

Then he filmed the stroke to claim and copyright it as the dolphin-butterfly stroke. An article followed in the National Physician Education Journal.

It wasn't until 20 years later, after coaches opposed the use of the stroke in NCAA, AAU and Big 10 competition, that the International Olympic Committee adopted use of the stroke for Olympic competition. The move required the United States to accept its use, which became official in 1956.

Prior to the acceptance of the stroke by the Olympic committee, Sieg set a record against Wisconsin with a time of 1:02 in the 100-yard distance event. From there the stroke's fame spread to Europe.

Armbruster said, "I received letters from many coaches in Europe asking about the stroke, but the 20 years that passed between its origination and adoption in the United States seemed mighty long."

The stroke is explained in detail in Armbruster's book, "Swimming and Diving," which was co-authored by Bob Allen, a former student of Armbruster and now current coach of the Hawks.

Armbruster was also credited with the organization of the national Dolphin honorary swimming fraternity in the early 1910s.

"We didn't have cars in those days, so on weekends the Iowa River would be filled with canoes. There were too many drownings," Armbruster said.

"So I asked for volunteer swimmers to patrol the river on Saturdays and Sundays as a life saving corps."

Armbruster explained further, "We called ourselves the Eels, and the guys rescued many people. I knew the University of Illinois at Urbana also had such a group. They called themselves the Dolphins, so together we began the national honorary swimming fraternity to be later known as Dolphins."

As time passed, the biggest responsibility of the group on the University campus shifted from voluntary life guards to the current job of presenting the annual Dolphin show during Homecoming.

Also to Armbruster's credit was the idea of using glass windows for underwater viewing without refraction from the surface. He started the idea in the Field House pool in 1927. These windows were adopted by other coaches immediately because it enabled them to more quickly spot and help correct errors their swimmers were making.

The "tumble turn" is another of Armbruster's "firsts." Once again, Armbruster and Sieg combined efforts to perfect this flip turn which is a half-second faster than any other turn, according to Armbruster. This turn is used frequently in NCAA, AAU, Olympic and Big 10 competition today. It was first performed in 1935 during the NCAA championships at Rutgers University by Iowa swimmer Bob Reid, one of Armbruster's students.

Armbruster's biggest honor was when he was elected to the Helm's Hall of Fame in Los Angeles in 1956 and to the Swimming Hall of Fame in Fort Lauderdale around Christmas of 1967. His election was based on votes by the National Coaches Association. "Those honors were two of the biggest thrills of my life," Armbruster said.

His "Swimming and Diving" book has been reprinted by a London publishing company and Armbruster said, "They tell me my book is quite strong over there."

Through his books, Armbruster intended to help beginning coaches with pointers that he didn't have when he first began.

"I have a great interest in giving other coaches some of the advantages and secrets to coaching that I had to learn on my own," Armbruster said. "This is my job now."

Regina Ranks 7th In AP's Prep Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Iowa City Regina, undefeated in eight games, moved up to seventh in the latest Associated Press high school basketball ratings released Wednesday.

Powerful Des Moines Roosevelt maintained its hold on first place, but Waterloo East and Cedar Rapids Washington stayed hot in pursuit.

In the second week of the poll, the capital city Roughriders gathered nine of 12 first place votes and 115 points. Waterloo East and Cedar Rapids Washington tied for second with 103 points each.

Des Moines Roosevelt, led by arile pivot man Toby Houston, has built an 8-0 record chasing after a state basketball crown that narrowly eluded the Roughriders last year.

East, which had an undisputed hold on the runner-up spot in last week's AP poll, has a 9-0 record, and Washington, which received three first place votes this week, stands 8-1.

The title chase thus far shapes up primarily as a three-team affair. No. 4 Paullina, easily the class of the smaller schools with an 11-0 record, placed well behind the top three with 77 points.

Rounding out the top 10 are Sioux City Heelan (8-0), Waterloo Columbus (8-2), Iowa City Regina (9-0), Humboldt (1-0), defending state champion Storm Lake (8-2), and Waverly-Shell Rock (7-1), a newcomer to the AP elite.

THINGS AREN'T LIKE THEY USED TO BE...
And thank goodness they aren't. Back in the 20's, people were really living modern if they had a refrigerator, stove, wringer washer and a few small appliances.
Today even the most modest home has dozens of gas and electric servants — modern, efficient servants that keep you warm in winter and cool in summer... provide the best of entertainment... cook food, supply hot water, wash and dry clothes automatically... and eliminate scores of tiresome chores.
Because of the many new appliances available and the increased use of older ones, the typical family uses more than half again as much electricity as it did ten years ago... and more gas, too.
As a result, most gas and electric bills are higher than in the past.
The unit costs of gas and electricity, however, have remained remarkably low. Most people agree they are two of today's best values.

HUD Approval Is Final Block To Rent Relief

Iowa City's Low Rent Housing Agency is awaiting final approval on a federal government grant to begin a housing project for low-income families.

Under the Low Rent Housing plan, low-income families who qualify for the program would pay a rent equal to 25 per cent of their income to live in acceptable housing. The remainder of the rent would be paid by a federal grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

After a housing referendum was passed in the Nov. 5 general election, the City Council passed a resolution at its Nov. 19 meeting to submit the application for the grant to HUD.

"This is a matter of HUD checking our program before we are given the grant," said Mrs. Oluf Davidsen, secretary of the Low Rent Housing Agency.

"They check things like how many families Iowa City has who would be involved in the program, how many and what kind of units we have to lease, and our admission policy to make sure that there is no discrimination," she said.

Mrs. Davidsen said that the application had to be mailed to Chicago and then to Washington. She said that the agency had checked on progress of processing of the application, but that the processing had not yet been completed.

"We were a little disturbed with reports that Des Moines had started its low rent housing project, which was passed in a September referendum, when we have not received our final okay," she said, "however we found that this was their model city project, not low rent housing."

Mrs. Davidsen attributed the slow processing to the problems of a changing administration in Washington. She said that the agency hopes for the final go-ahead sometime in February.

"After the final grant comes through, our course is clear-cut," Mrs. Davidsen said. "With publicity and help from the County Welfare Department and other organizations, we will be able to accept applications from people willing to rent their housing and from low-income families wishing to live in it."

Journalism Prof Discusses Russia In Marketing Book

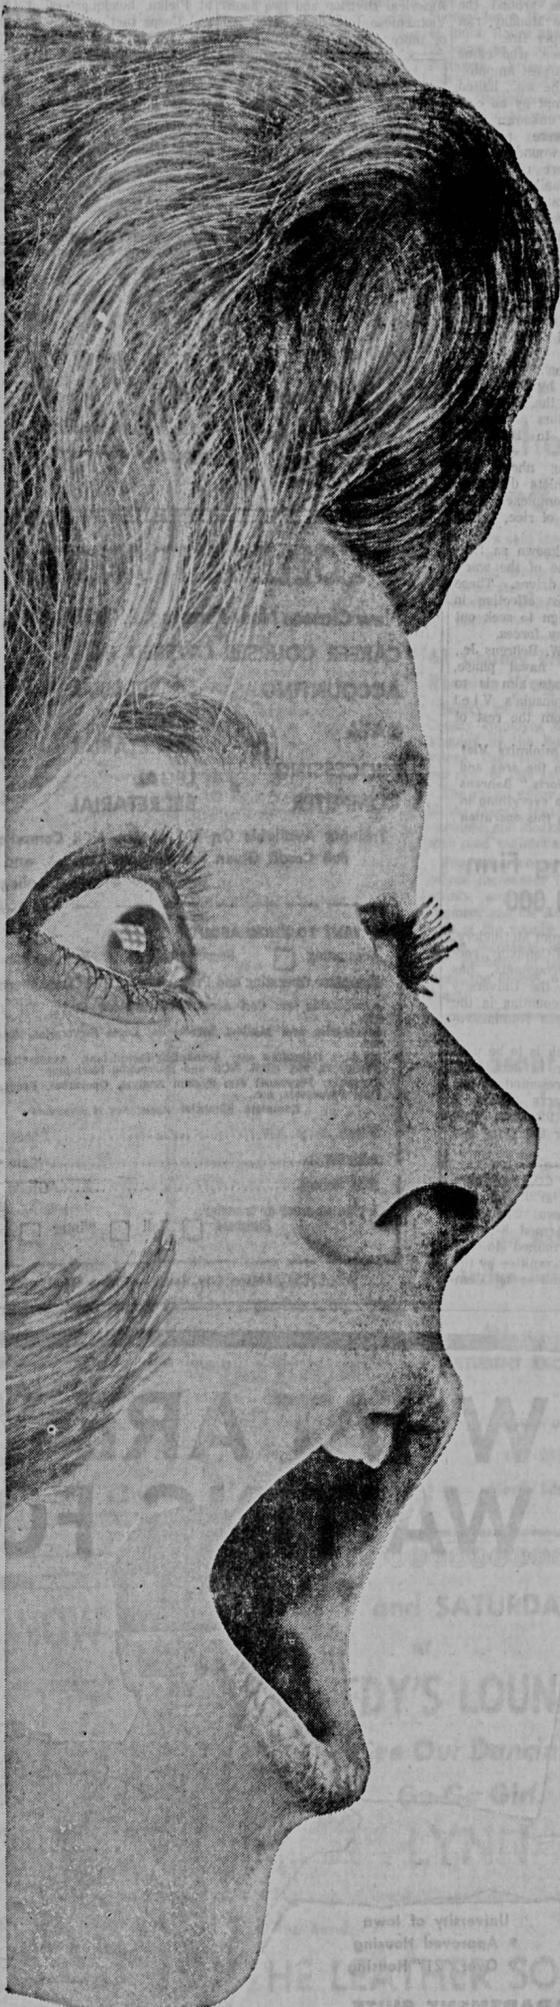

The development and use of advertising in the Soviet Union is discussed by James W. Markham, professor of journalism, in a chapter in "World Marketing: A Multinational Approach," edited by John Ryans and James Baker of the University of Maryland.

The book was published by John Wiley & Sons in 1967.

The chapter is reprinted from an article that first appeared in the Journal of Marketing and was later expanded into a book, "The Voices of the Red Giants," by Markham.

"Red Giants" is an in-depth study of advertising in Russia and China. It has won two awards, the most recent was the Kappa Tau Alpha, journalism honorary, award for the best journalism research book of 1967.

AGRICULTURE LOSES LEAD—AMES — Agriculture in Iowa has fallen behind manufacturing and trades as a provider of employment, according to a study of changes in the state's economy during the 1950s and 1960s, conducted by economists from Iowa State University and the University of Iowa.

Burt, Holderness to Appear

The three items in the council's policy statement were: all records were open to Iowa citizens; access would be denied only if bad intent was suspected; and the effort to obtain a temporary injunction against Sies would continue.

The city's request for a temporary injunction was denied by the District Court and a hearing was set for June 17 to consider a city request for a permanent injunction against Sies.

Honohan introduced additional arguments at the June 17 hearing. He said the Iowa public records law was not valid because several amendments were added unlawfully. He added that buildings not meeting city housing standards involved a wide variety of structures.

Sies' attorney repeated the claim that the question of public access was the central issue in the case.

City Claim 'Untenable'
The basic arguments of the two sides were repeated in written briefs filed June 27 and 28. In addition, Legal Services director Veldey filed in behalf of Sies and stated the city's claim of harmful intent by Sies was "untenable and unrealistic."

The city's request for a permanent injunction was denied July 9 by District Judge William Eads. The court's ruling cited the public interest contained in the issues of the case and stated that the housing records were public records. The ruling also upheld the validity of the state public records law and said the city had failed to show "certainty of damage" in Sies' intentions.

Two additional cases from 1968 are pending in Johnson County District Court. Both cases involve fatalities, one a manslaughter charge and the other a murder charge.

The manslaughter case stems from an incident which occurred May 23. Two University students were struck by a car and killed as they walked along North Duquesne Street. The students killed were Mary Sue Miller, 20, Randolph, and James R. Vanek, 25, Denville, N.J.

Charged With OMVI
The driver of the car, Gregory Ward Burt, 21, of West Des Moines, was arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated (OMVI). Burt attended the University in West-76 and was a student at Westmar College in LeMars at the time of the accident.

Burt was arraigned on the OMVI charge in Iowa City Police Court and released on $500 bond. However more serious charges were filed against Burt June 6 by the county attorney. He was charged with two counts of manslaughter and released on $2,500 bond on each charge. The maximum penalty for manslaughter in Iowa is eight years imprisonment.

The case was transferred to Johnson County District Court after two lengthy closed preliminary hearings June 17 and 21. Defense attorneys for Burt filed briefs July 7 in District court requesting dismissal of the charges. The motion claimed Police Court Judge Marion Neely had exceeded his jurisdiction in transferring the case. The motion also claimed there was lack of evidence.

District Judge Harold Vietor denied the motion for dismissal July 25 ruling "competent evidence for a Grand Jury to indict the defendant" had been submitted.

A Johnson County Grand Jury indicted Burt for manslaughter and OMVI following an all-day session July 29. Burt was arraigned on the two charges Aug. 2 in District court but no immediate date was set for trial. Defense attorneys filed a demurrer Oct. 2 requesting a stay of proceedings and a dismissal of the manslaughter indictment. The case has not yet come to trial pending a ruling on this demurrer.

The other case began July 6 when the body of an Iowa City woman, Mrs. Claude Stanfield, 81, 444 Second Ave., was found in her home by a neighbor. An autopsy by the Johnson County Medical Examiner said Mrs. Stanfield died July 5 from severe blows on the head.

The County Attorney's office gathered evidence at the scene and charged an Iowa City man, Laurence Holderness who gave no permanent local address, with the crime. Holderness fled the state and was first charged in a federal warrant with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

A nationwide manhunt ended July 11 when Holderness was arrested by FBI agents in Granbury, Tex., a town 40 miles southwest of Ft. Worth. County Attorney Robert Jansen and Iowa City Detective Lt. Charles Snider flew to Texas to question Holderness and arrange for his return to Iowa. Holderness waived the extradition process and was returned to Iowa City July 18.

Holderness received court-appointed defense July 19 and was arraigned in Iowa City Police Court on a charge of murder July 22. Evidence was presented at a closed preliminary hearing Aug. 6. The prosecution claimed the murder was committed with a tire iron which was picked up by Jansen and Snider and sent to the FBI when the two went to Texas. It was also claimed that clay dropped from a car and recovered in Mrs. Stanfield's yard had helped link Holderness to the crime.

The case is now awaiting action in District court pending the outcome of a psychiatric examination on Holderness at the Security Hospital of the Men's Reformatory in Anamosa. District Judge B. J. Maxwell ordered the examination at a Nov. 14 hearing. Holderness pleaded innocent to the murder charge at the same hearing.

His case is now pending. A fifth major case which occurred in the Iowa City area involved the death of a Cedar Rapids woman whose body was found last spring in the Coralville Reservoir area.

Although the FBI, the state police and the Iowa Bureau of Investigation have investigated the charge, no evidence in the murder has come to light except that Geraldine Maggett, 25, of Cedar Rapids was murdered by several blows.

About 700 persons were questioned Wednesday by South Vietnamese teams in the search for Viet Cong supporters among the peninsula's 5,000 to 10,000 inhabitants.

Marines driving ahead into the fortified hamlets destroyed several tunnel complexes and seized 600 pounds of rice, corn and flour.

The operation, known as Russell Beach, is one of the war's largest cordon drives. These have proved most effective in the allied campaign to seek out and destroy enemy forces.

Rear Adm. W. W. Behrens Jr., commanding the naval phase, said the immediate aim is to separate the peninsula's Viet Cong activists from the rest of the population.

"We want to minimize Viet Cong influence in the area and neutralize his efforts," Behrens said. "We will do everything in our power during this operation."

Marines Win Cong Tunnels

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines captured several tunnels on the Batangan Peninsula Wednesday, seized food caches and smashed back an enemy attempt to break out of an allied trap.

Inland, the rest of the 8,200 U.S. and South Vietnamese that clamped a cordon around the enemy supply base Monday, ran into only light sniper fire.

The 3,000 Marines, who came in by sea in the largest amphibious operation of the war, halted the breakout attempt by an enemy force of an unknown size. Two Marines were reported killed and seven wounded. Enemy casualties were unknown.

In another small skirmish, Marines killed four Viet Cong and two guerrillas defected, the U.S. Command reported.

Suggestion for Longer Miniskirts Raises Eyebrows in Legislature

DES MOINES (AP) — The miniskirt created a minor flap in the Iowa House Wednesday.

It all started when Mrs. Dolores Abels, secretary to Chief Clerk William Kendrick, suggested in an orientation session for new secretaries that "for their own protection" they wear skirts no shorter than two inches above the knee.

Mrs. Abels mentioned no names, but attention turned to Marsha Thompson, 19, whose bright orange miniskirt already had caught many an eye.

"They said this advice was for the younger secretaries," Miss Thompson said later.

"I guess the old ones wouldn't be wearing them."

Miss Thompson is secretary to her grandfather, Rep. Leo Sanders (R-Esterville). She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thompson of Sioux Falls, S.D.

As word of Mrs. Abels' suggestion spread, a number of legislators sprang to the defense of the miniskirt, even one as "mini" as Miss Thompson's.

"I don't see anything wrong with them," said Rep. June

Franklin (D-Des Moines), "when they are worn by someone young and cute."

Rep. William Hill (R-Marshalltown) said he had been inquiring around to try to find out whether any legislators had objected to miniskirts and "the only objection I can find is that they are too long."

Rep. Vincent Mayberry (D-Fort Dodge) and Rep. John Tapscott (D-Des Moines) both said they were against a ban on miniskirts.

A new wrinkle was added later in the day when Sanders and his granddaughter conferred again with Mrs. Abels.

Mrs. Abels said she hadn't intended to place a ban on miniskirts, but had merely "made a suggestion" to the younger legislative secretaries.

Sanders, however, said he would ask his granddaughter to lower her hemlines.

Engineering Dean To Speak in India

Hunter Rouse, dean of the college of engineering, will leave Sunday for a 30-day lecture tour of India. Rouse has been selected to serve as a consultant for the National Science Foundation (NSF) in cooperation with the State Department's Agency for International Development.

Visiting six cities and all four major institutes of technology and science there, Rouse will deliver a series of 15 speeches. Thirty Indian students who earned advanced degrees in mechanics and hydraulics while studying under Rouse at the University helped initiate and plan the trip.

In Paris last month, Rouse was one of 20 American representatives at an international UNESCO conference to discuss trends and changes in the education of engineers. He said after the trip that much of the world was depending heavily on the United States for guidance in this area and that western democracies were looking to America for techniques in mass education.

The University College of Engineering has spent 30 months in implementing experimental courses and revising the curriculum. At present, there are nine inter-departmental and four liaison committees with other colleges of the University.

Packard Tells Senate Committee Hearing Appointment Won't Cause Interest Conflict

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Packard told the Senate Armed Services Committee Wednesday that trust and other arrangements he had made would enable him to "avoid conflicts of interest, and the appearance of conflicts" as deputy secretary of defense.

The multimillionaire industrialist appeared at a committee hearing on his nomination for the No. 2 Defense Department post in the Nixon Administration.

The session centered on steps

Packard proposed to take to comply with federal law and committee policy designed to prevent federal officials from participating in official decisions affecting their private interests.

Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss.), committee chairman, who is also head of the Senate panel on ethics, told Packard, "I have not made a final decision in this matter."

"I frankly have been mightily well impressed by what I have heard about your abilities, your qualities of character," Stennis said.

But, the chairman added, "even those things are not enough in this peculiar situation."

Ethics Committee Schedules Hearing on Proposed Rules

DES MOINES (AP) — A public hearing will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday by the joint Senate-House Ethics Committee on proposed rules of conduct for legislators and lobbyists.

Sen. Arthur Neu (R-Carroll) and Rep. Floyd Millen (R-Farmington) made the announcement at a news conference Wednesday.

Neu said copies of the proposed rules would be made available Monday to anyone interested in appearing at the hearing.

He said persons wishing to appear would be asked to submit a written summary of any presentation, and there would be a five-minute limit on any individual's oral testimony.

Millen said he anticipated a large number of people would appear at the hearing.

He said most of them would be legislators and lobbyists, but there also may be a few members of the general public. He said he had received letters from private citizens expressing interest in the proposed rules of ethics.

The 1967 legislature passed a law known as the Iowa Public Officials Act relating to conflict of interest of employes, officials and members of the General Assembly.

Neu and Millen said the ethics committee was proposing rules and regulations to implement the act.

The proposed regulations would become part of the Senate and House rules, if passed. The two
