Students' Rights Of Protest Cited

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court insured Monday the right of school children to hold protest demonstrations, but emphasized officials may impose restraints if there are intrusions upon the work of the school or the rights of other students.

"It can hardly be argued that either students or teachers shed their constitutional right to freedom of speech or expression at the schoolhouse gate," said Justice Abe Fortas for the court.

The ruling directly upheld the right of three Des Moines, Iowa, teenagers to wear black armbands to school in December 1965 to publicize their objections to the Vietnamese war and their support for a holiday season truce. One of the three is now a University of Iowa student.

"Students in school as well as out of school are 'persons' under the Constitution," Fortas said in affirming the teenagers' free speech rights.

"They are possessed of fundamental rights which the state must respect just as they themselves must respect their obligations to the state."

At the same time, the court suggested that if the students' action touched off disorder or disturbances or if there was a "collision with the rights of other students to be secure and to be let alone," officials would have been justified in imposing controls.

The three students involved in the case were John F. Tinker, his sister, Mary Beth, and Christopher Eckhardt. At the time of the demonstration, John was 15, Mary Beth 13 and Christopher 16. They were active in Quaker and Unitarian religious organizations.

The Rev. and Mrs. Leonard L. Tinker and their children have since moved to St. Louis, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. William Eckhardt and their son now live in Canada. (John Tinker, now a freshman at the University, said Monday afternoon the decision was important because it set a precedent. Individual students will have more freedom, he said, and school boards will have less power.)

(When the case was first taken to the Des Moines school board over three years ago, he said he did not think it would go to the Supreme Court. He said now he "can't be anything but glad.")

(Although he is still concerned with the freedoms of high school students, he no longer feels directly affected. He hopes, however, that the precedent set by his case will allow other students to become involved.)

The ruling was by 7 to 2 vote. The dissenting justices were Hugo L. Black and John Marshall Harlan.

In a lengthy dissent, Black took what has become a familiar stance. This is that while the federal and state governments have no authority to regulate or censor the "content of speech," people, including students, do not have an unlimited constitutional right "to give speeches or engage in demonstrations" wherever or whenever they please.

Harlan, in a terse statement of his position, said school officials should be given the widest authority to maintain discipline and good order.

Des Moines Superintendent of Schools Dwight Davis said he was not especially surprised by the Supreme Court decision.

Davis said wearing arm bands to school "is not as potentially disruptive" now as it was when this happened in 1965.

He said if students were to wear bands to school today "this would not represent a particular disorder in the classroom."

"The court still took effect to the problem of maintaining order and discipline in school," Davis said.

The decision captured the spotlight as the court returned from a four-week recess with several scores of rulings and orders.

In a major move, it announced it would

$6,700 Base Pay For City Teachers Expected to Pass

Teachers will receive a base salary of $6,700 if the Board of Education approves a proposal Monday night by the Iowa City Educators Association (ICEA) which was warmly received by board members.

Board member Arnold Small stated previous to the new proposal that since the state's economy was only expected to grow 10 per cent this year, the $5,900 base salary figure — an increase of 15 per cent — previously asked by the ICEA was "out of the reach of the district for this particular year." Current base pay here is $6,600.

In revising its acceptable base figure, the ICEA proposed two new wage indexes, one at the B.A.-plus-15-hours level and one at the M.A.-plus-15-hours level, to be added to the three indexes now in use in the school system — B.A., M.A. and M.A. plus 30 hours.

Fringe benefits for teachers would be expanded to include payment of the individual's term insurance (income protection and life insurance), by the board, and sharing by the board and the ICEA of the individual's family insurance plan.

Attending board members Small, John Moore, and Arthur Campbell were confident that the new proposal would be approved at Wednesday night's special board meeting.

- Gave jailhouse lawyers the right to dispense free legal advice to their fellow inmates. The court said Tennessee had no right to keep William Joe Johnson, an advice-giving convict, from helping illiterate or poorly educated prisoners.

Student Senate Rules On Election Procedures

An election-oriented Student Senate approved the constitutional amendments and set March 26 as the date for election of new student officers at a special meeting Monday night.

An election reapportionment amendment sponsored by Hank Feir, B4, Springfield, Ill., increased to 49 the number of senators to be elected. Currently there are 33 members in the senate.

In the past, senators have been chosen by housing units. This year, representatives will also be chosen from the nine colleges within the University. Each college will elect at least one senator plus one senator for each 10 per cent of the total student body enrolled in the college which adds 16 new senate vacancies.

Feir said the current membership does not reflect the expanding role of the colleges within the University as centers of student interest. Electing senators from the nine colleges as well as from the housing units would provide a stronger link between residence constituencies and the academic affairs of the University, he said.

A second amendment submitted by the Senate Housing Committee gives the Student Elections Board original jurisdiction recognized by the Student Senate.

The board will serve as a hearings committee to consider infractions of election rules. If any irregularity exists, the board can recommend a trial.

The amendment also calls for the creation of a Student Judicial Court, which could uphold the election of a candidate or disqualify him, based upon the evidence presented.

The senate also relaxed several requirements for candidates which are set forth in the Student Body Elections Code. At times, senators broke into open argument over some of the alterations while Stu-

Pilots said the bases were left in flames.

A Damascus communiqué declared the Israelis lost three Mirage jets in the dogfight, apparently one of the biggest Arab-Israeli air clashes since the 1967 war.

"Our losses in the battle were two MIG-17s shot down, while our planes returned safely to base."

Most Israeli pilots felt more raids would follow.

"This is just the appetizer," said an Israeli. "We have not yet begun to settle accounts," said another.

Sources said the raid was not in retaliation against Arab irregulars for an attack on an El Al jetliner at Zurich Feb. 18 and Friday's explosion in a Jerusalem supermarket that killed two persons.

A spokesman said the raid was the result of a recent "heavy increase in Fatah and other terrorist acts in various sections."

The Zurich raid, he said, "is a different kettle of fish."

Israelis believe the raid to be the first act in what usually moderate Foreign Minister Abba Eban described to the cabinet Sunday as Israel's new policy of "active self-defense."

Ground targets were camps of the Al Fatah guerrillas, strongest of the Palestinian commando groups, located near El Hamme at the western outskirts of Damascus, and Maisalon, 15 miles farther west.

Israeli army spokesmen said the attacks were in reprisal for intensified raids along the border since Jan. 20, including machine gunning of a civilian bus Sunday.

Unofficial sources in El Hamme told Associated Press correspondent Elias Antar that seven civilians: five women, a man and a child, were killed. The Syrian government first reported 20 civilians wounded and no deaths. Then it announced five injured children had died in a hospital.

Three Al Fatah men were reported hospitalized with wounds.

Heart Attack Fells Wayne Grantham, UI Psychologist

Wayne D. Grantham, 47, of 1430 Oaklawn Ave., died Sunday afternoon of an apparent heart attack while attending a motor-cycle meet in Fairfield with his son.

Mr. Grantham has been with the University since 1952, working as a psychologist at the Hospital School with the severely handicapped.

He received his B.A. from the University of Denver in 1947, and his M.A. from Drake University in 1950. He also attended the University of Boulder and the University of Missouri.

Before coming to the University, he worked for the State Department of Child Welfare.

Mr. Grantham was married Dec. 22, 1945, to Harriett Schlotfeld.

He was a member of the First Methodist Church and a past president of the Iowa City Optimist Club.

He was also active in the American Psychology Association and the Iowa Psychology Association.

He is survived by his widow; two sons, Pat and Gary; his mother; and a grandson.

Services will be held Wednesday at the George L. Gay Funeral Home. Rev. David Schulz will officiate. Burial will be in Memorial Gardens.

Nixon Begins British Talks

LONDON — President Nixon said Monday night the United States and Britain have the common means, common communication, and common ideals to bring about "a durable peace in our time" for the entire world.

He flew to Britain from Belgium after announcing that the United States would "in due course" open negotiations with the Soviet Union.

The chief executive, whirling around Europe in eight days to "feel the pulse" of the Atlantic alliance, declared he is talking to Prime Minister Harold Wilson about world affairs — "not just Europe."

He did just that for almost four hours at Wilson's official country residence, Chequers.

The President's strong words of a revitalized London-Washington relationship were expressed in the context of global affairs such as a summit meeting with the Soviets, a solution to Vietnam, and the fires burning in the Arab-Israel Middle East conflict.

The Chequers meeting was the opening round for more talks going on today at Downing Street. The President leaves Wednesday morning for Bonn and goes from there to West Berlin, Paris and Rome.

The President's repeated assertions of policy could be summed up in almost a single sentence: step-by-step diplomacy, hand-in-hand with Britain, hand-in-hand with the Western alliance partners, and hopefully hand-in-hand with the Soviet Union and anyone else desiring peace around the world.

Providing a backdrop for Nixon's talks with the British was a controversy involving a reported French proposal to Britain for a new European framework.

Nixon and his official party kept silent on the reported proposal of President Charles de Gaulle for a loose economic union which would undercut U.S. influence and eventually eliminate both NATO and the Common Market.

The President, however, expressed U.S. support of both organizations during a day which blended business and pageantry.

The pageantry marked his first stop in Brussels, where brilliantly uniformed horse guards escorted Nixon to the tomb of Belgium's unknown soldier.

At NATO headquarters, he told representatives of the European allies that he intends eventually to "enter into negotiations with the Soviet Union on a wide range of issues."

Later, under gray clouds at London Airport, where he was met by Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Nixon spoke of his hopes of achieving peace. The President said he and Wilson would discuss "the problems of the whole world, not just those of Europe."

This comment opened the way for talks

A great depression

With a growing University come more graduate students, upon whom falls the responsibility of teaching most of the required or core courses for undergraduates; and with growing costs of living and running the University, those same needed graduate teachers and researchers are about to be pressured into virtual extinction by a shocking cut in their allotted incomes.

Most graduate students are dependent upon their teaching assistantships or fellowships alone for their own, and usually a family's support. According to a recent faculty newsletter, Dewey B. Stuit, dean of the college of liberal arts, could foresee no immediate increase in the stipends and salaries paid to graduate assistants. But with a conjunction of several major increases in their yearly costs of living, what, heavens to sheer practicality, are these "fixed income" students to do to finish their educations?

Most recently, there has been the threat of about a $200 yearly increase in tuition that would seriously affect the limited budgets of the majority of the University's teaching assistants who must pay tuition out of their regular salaries.

Then, the University has also steadily been working toward the elimination of its low-cost housing for married students. The increase for a graduate student and family could be as much as $50 a month — from the present rate of $68 a month with utilities paid if the student is living in one of the quonset huts to $100 a month not including heat and other utilities at the new Hawkeye Apartments. Living at the Hawkeye development in Coralville also necessitates a car (or, for those who try to make do without, at least an increasing bus fare).

A graduate student with a wife and one or more children is paid only $3,000 to teach two courses for ten months. Not all graduate families are forced even that much. In one year, if he is forced to move, if the tuition boost goes through and with last year's general increase in the costs of living (2.7 per cent off the dollar), the expenditures of a graduate assistant could increase about $550 to $750 — in effect a loss of from one-sixth to one-quarter of his pay.

Most graduate assistants don't even get summer money, and summer work that pays more than subsistence is all but impossible to find. Add to this the further fact that graduate assistants, counted among the state's employees, do not even qualify for unemployment insurance when they can't find new work, the picture is bleak. Regularly hundreds of graduate assistants experience a summer "lay off" with no recourse to compensation.

In an interdepartmental newsletter, one department chairman noted that Stuit is "pushing hard for an increase in graduate student stipends." Faculty, that same bulletin noted, continued to experience a gradual increase in pay on a yearly basis, along with more and better fringe benefits. What departments ask of their graduate population and what is practical or possible are becoming frighteningly irreconcilable.

Departments don't want their graduate students to foot-drag toward the completion of an advanced degree. The teaching assistant must take a full course load that precludes most possibilities of "moonlighting" for extra income. In a college town, there would be little enough work that pays well enough to significantly aid the graduate students who squeeze out a few hours for side employment.

It is even often frowned upon for a graduate student to leave school to build up his savings. When he returns, he may well find himself the butt of prejudices against his age or for having taught at some "lower level" than his graduate work was training him for. His money may well have been given to some younger, "more promising" student, leaving him without any sort of income. The chances of finishing an advanced degree after one takes a "leave" have also been shown to be significantly decreased.

Increases in costs of housing, in tuition and in the general cost of living are causing a financial crisis for a large percentage of the campus population. If the graduate teaching assistant is not considered for immediate increases in salaries to compensate for the pending rise in cost of study and living, only extreme hardships can result.

Graduate students who receive the maximum $3,000 income are already considered welfare cases. They are already being forced onto the welfare roles to meet medical needs and, often, for their daily meals (food stamps, now in peril, are becoming a popular alternative to starvation).

Stuit, and the entire University, must do more than "push" for increases in graduate student salaries and stipends. The squeeze is on for graduate students, who are experiencing what can only be called "A Great Depression."

For those who haven't seen it:
Excerpts from the House Un-American Activities Committee's "Report on Guerrilla Warfare Advocates in the United States," submitted May 6, 1968:

"1. A curfew would be imposed in the enclosed isolated area. No one would be allowed out of or into the area after sunset.

"2. During the night, the authorities would not only patrol the boundary lines, but would also attempt to control the streets, and if necessary, send out foot patrols through the entire area.

"If the guerrillas attempted to break out of the area or engage the authorities in open combat, they would be readily suppressed.

"3. During a guerrilla uprising, most civil liberties would have to be suspended and seizure operations would be instituted during the daylight hours, and anyone found armed or without proper identification would immediately be arrested.

"Most of the people of the ghetto would not be involved in the guerrilla operation and, under conditions of police and military control, some would help in ferreting out the guerrillas. Their help would be invaluable.

"4. If the guerrillas were able to hold out for a period of time, then the population of the ghetto would be classified through an office for the control and organization of the inhabitants. This office would distribute 'census cards' which would bear a photograph of the individual, the letter of the district in which he lives, his house and street number, and a letter designating his home city.

"This classification would aid the authorities in knowing the exact location of any suspect and who is in control of any given district. Under such a system, movement would be proscribed and the ability of the guerrilla to move freely from place to place would be seriously curtailed.

"5. The population within the ghetto would be exhorted to work with authorities and to report both on the guerrillas and any suspicious activity they might note. The police agencies would be in a position to make immediate arrests, without warrants, under suspension of guarantees provided by the Constitution.

"6. Acts of overt violence by the guerrillas would mean that they had declared a 'state of war' within the country and therefore, would forfeit their rights as in wartime. The McCarran Act provides for various detention centers to be operated throughout the country and these might well be utilized for the temporary imprisonment of warring guerrillas.

"7. The very nature of the guerrilla operation as presently envisioned by certain Communists and black nationalists would be impossible to sustain. According to the most knowledgeable guerrilla war experts in the country, the revolutionaries could be isolated and destroyed in a short period of time."

Coed would like grades abolished

To the editor:

When I came to Iowa City as a freshman, I was very naive. I glanced through the registration book and was enthused by the great expanse of knowledge to be gotten. I decided to let go for "grade inhibitions" and take whatever seemed interesting. I signed up for Russian, philosophy and several psychology courses. I have since been disillusioned.

Toward the third semester, Russian became a grind. I found myself studying for the tests — the aesthetic value of the course had gradually diminished. In philosophy I memorized the boring arguments of Thomas Aquinas, not because I was interested, but because I knew it would be on the test. During my sophomore year, I wanted to take zoology. I was promptly told at registration, however, that I would surely "flunk" because I lacked the proper background in chemistry. This semester I wanted very much to renew an old high school interest I had in astronomy but for the first time, I didn't even try. I realized my lack of scientific background would defeat me.

I decided to major in philosophy but was continually reminded of its impracticality. I finally compromised myself and majored in English, for not only is it practical, but it is somewhat philosophical. I was quickly disillusioned by my first teacher in a beginning lit course. She gave me a subjective grade because she felt I was close minded and hostile.

Now I am compromised to the point where I feel very worried about grades and passing. I used to disregard and even skip some tests — not because I was rebelling, etc., but because grades were truly irrelevant to me. I feel cheated and pushed into a corner. I'm sure that the compromise is minimal in college when compared to the "outside world," but why is the outside world the way it is?

I blame it in part on mothers who give their children dollars for A's. The personal responsibility that people could feel is crushed in the early years and channeled into the competitive, evaluating system. Grades are a perversion and should be abolished.

Policies Meeting Closed to Press

The Educational Policies Committee of the College of Liberal Arts held its regular meeting Monday afternoon, but the meeting was closed to the press.

Dewey B. Stuit, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, informed The Daily Iowan that he would have to discuss with other members of the committee whether future meetings would be open.

This was not the first time that the Educational Policies Committee's meetings have been closed to the press. Last semester, DL reporters were also refused admittance to the discussions.

Credit Repeal Hit

DES MOINES (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee buckled under to special interests when it approved repeal of sales tax credits for low income families, the House minority leader charged Monday.

Rep. William Gannon (D-Mingo) said repeal of the credits was a chief aim of the Iowa Taxpayers Association, which Gannon said represents "the large manufacturers of Iowa."

Cleo Kron, superintendent of the Iowa City Water Department, said that the city is treating the water about the same way as the University. He added Monday that the bad taste would clear up "in the next day or two."

During the winter, fertilizer and other organic materials on the ground are absorbed by snow. In the spring, when the snow begins to melt, the absorbed organic ma-

Drinking Water Tastes Badly Since More Chlorine Added

Campus drinking water recently has been leaving a bad taste in people's mouths. That's because more chlorine has been added.

Chlorine is used to disinfect water and to kill bacteria. The normal dosage of chlorine is four to six pounds per one million pounds. Presently, however, the dosage is 30 pounds per one million pounds.

Fisher said that adding chlorine is the only way to insure safe water. Enough chlorine is added to the water to break the organic materials. Then more is added to fight bacteria.

The bad taste is caused, not by the chlorine, but by the derivatives formed when the chlorine is combined with organic materials. The bad taste will vanish when such materials are eliminated.

Lime and filter alum are then added to the water before it goes through a sand filter, which strains away the remainder of the organic materials.

Thus, according to Fisher, the water is safe "although it is not palatable."

Iowa Senate To Reconsider Abortion Bill

DES MOINES (AP) — A freshman senator who voted against the controversial abortion bill in the legislature agreed late Monday to open up a second round of debate on it.

Sen. James Griffin (R-Council Bluffs) filed a motion to reconsider last Friday's 24-36 vote which defeated the proposed bill.

Griffin's motion allows proponents of liberalizing the abortion law a second chance to muster enough votes to get it passed in the Senate.

The first hurdle will be to rescind the original vote. Then its supporters must reverse at least six "no" votes to pass the measure.

Under Senate rules of procedure, Griffin's motion to reconsider can come up at any time. Senators favoring the bill have said they would like to wait until after the Senate's March recess before trying again.

Supporters of the measure earlier had conceded defeat until Griffin, in a surprise move, filed his motion to reconsider.

Griffin said he had decided to open up debate for a second time because "I think the people of Iowa are entitled to a full debate on the bill."

"Cleaned up properly," it would have a good chance of passing, he said.

If the Senate votes to reconsider the bill, it has several options: the measure could be given a public hearing, sent to a committee for further study or held on the calendar for further debate before a second vote is taken.

Hopes to revive the abortion bill received what appeared to be an insurmountable setback Monday morning.

In a parliamentary ruling, Lt. Gov. Roger Jensen stipulated that the bill would not automatically come up for reconsideration. Opponents claimed the ruling broke with Senate tradition.

His ruling came only a few minutes after Gov. Robert D. Ray, who supports a broadened abortion law, told newsmen he hoped the Senate would consider the controversial measure.

The bill would have allowed abortions when the physical or mental health of a pregnant woman is in danger, when pregnancy is caused by rape or incest or when doctors determine that the offspring would have incapacitating mental or physical deformities.

Iowa law now allows abortion only when the life of the mother is endangered by continued pregnancy.

Petition Demands Women's Rights

By SHARON STEPHENSON

The Iowa Civil Rights Commission, which was created by the 1965 status, is given additional funds to effectively enforce the new measure. Sufficient funds should be provided so that the performance of its present responsibilities will not be impaired, the petition said.

The Iowa Civil Rights Law, passed in 1965, prohibits discrimination based on race, religion and national origin, but not on sex. The Federal Civil Rights Act prohibits sex discrimination in employment.

Need for a state law has been expressed because violations of the Federal Civil Rights Act are first referred to the state enforcement agency, the Iowa Civil Rights Commission. Local enforcement may be better than federal enforcement, authors of the petition contend.

The petition also asks that

Iowa Arms Plant Slated for Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird has ordered an independent investigation of safety procedures at the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant near Burlington, Iowa.

Laird made his decision known in a letter to Rep. Fred Schwengel, (R-Iowa) Monday. Schwengel had requested the investigation Jan. 22.

The defense secretary said he had ordered the Armed Services Explosives Safety Board to convene a group of experts who will "undertake an investigation that will be widespread and not under the control or appearance of control of either state or federal authorities."

Schwengel had expressed concern about five explosions at the plant since June 1967 in which 12 persons have been killed.

SEX ED STUDY ASKED

DES MOINES (UPI) — Two State senators have called for a review of sex education in Iowa public schools to determine the need for such courses and the qualifications of teachers.

CHILD PANEL URGED

DES MOINES (UPI) — Two Iowa senators Monday urged the chairman of the Senate Social Services Committee to appoint a panel to study "the needs and abuses, if any," of Iowa's aid to dependent children program.

Glasses are supposed to help your sight, not make you look like one. So why put up with frames that detract from your appearance?

The right kind of glasses can make a big difference. If you're a small, thin person, a big round pair of horn-rim frames will make you look owl-eyed. Small thin-framed glasses look out of place on a big person.

The best way to find what looks best on you is to buy your glasses from an optical company that has a good-sized stock of frame styles. Like Morgan Optical. Our skilled personnel can help you decide what's best for your particular face and personality.

Boy Dies in Hunting Mishap

LONE TREE — A young boy was fatally shot in the head in a hunting accident late Sunday morning near here.

Dead is Peter LeRoy Howell,

10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shipley of Riverside.

Dr. T. T. Bozek, Johnson County medical examiner, said the accident took place on the Homer Eden farm southwest of Lone Tree. Lane Warden, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Warden, who rent the Eden farm, was attempting to shoot a rabbit when his gun accidentally discharged, striking young Howell in the head, Bozek said. The two boys were hunting with Mr. Shipley, Howell's step-father.

The Howell boy will be buried in the Riverside Cemetery following private funeral services at 11 a.m. today at Soden and Adams Chapel in Riverside.

The boy was a student at Riverside Elementary School. He is survived by his parents and a brother and sister, Kimberley and Richard.

National Debt Worries Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signaled Congress for help Monday to head off an approaching collision between government borrowing and the legal ceiling on the national debt.

The bill is sponsored by three Republican Iowa Congressmen: Joan Lipsky, Cedar Rapids; Elizabeth Shaw, Davenport and Elizabeth Miller, Marshalltown.

Miss Ottoson said the petition will be sent to other Iowa colleagues, church groups and women's professional organizations in Iowa City to get support from a number of congressional districts.

She said the most intensive canvassing would probably be done on college campuses, where women have the most immediate concern about discriminatory job practices.

Tables will be set up in the Burge Hall and Currier Hall cafeteria lines to collect signatures during the 5:6:15 p.m. dinner hour Wednesday and Thursday nights, and in the Union some time this week.

The petitions are to be circulated on campus and around the state until March 7. They are then expected to be presented to the legislature before the end of the current session.

Player Dispute Could End Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Representatives of the Baseball Players Association met briefly Monday with federal mediation officials and then went into another session with the owners in an effort to settle the thorny dispute.

The players asked the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to step into the picture last Friday, claiming that an impasse had been reached in the negotiations with John Gaherin, the owners' representative.

Gaherin declined an invitation to meet with the mediators. He said he didn't think the negotiations had reached an impasse. Later Friday, Gaherin agreed to meet Monday with the players' representatives headed by Marvin Miller, the executive director.

Bowie Kuhn, the new baseball commissioner, said he believed a settlement could be reached this week. He arrived in New York from Florida hoping to speed matters along.

The San Francisco Examiner reported Monday that Miller has called a meeting in New York today with player representatives of the 24 clubs.

The Examiner said the players expected to vote on an offer from the major league owners and it was possible the deadlock could end today.

Meanwhile, training camps are opening with most of the regulars missing. Miller had advised the members of the association not to sign contracts or report to camp until the dispute was settled.

Players are formally required to sign contracts by Saturday. Until then, a player is not considered a holdout.

Both sides have changed their financial offers in the last few days in the key pension issue. The players have dropped their demand from $8.5 million a year to $5.9. The owners have upped their offer from $5.1 million to $5.3 million.

Slumping Hawks Try to Upset Illini

The Hawks played one of their best road games at Columbus but the Buckeyes, still cherishing title aspirations, proved to be too much for them.

John Johnson had one of his best games of the year, hitting on "Their half court press is one of the best in the nation and that is what they have built their reputation and success on."

The Illini are a big team with a front wall consisting of 6-8 sophomore center Greg Jackson, and 6-8 senior Dave Scholz and 6-5½ senior Randy Crews at the forward spots.

"Jackson has come along very well and I guess you could say he is one of the best big men in the conference," said Miller. Jackson is the Illini's number two scorer with a 16.4 average and is also their number two rebounder. Scholz leads in both categories with an 8.8 rebound average and a 19.9 scoring average.

Poor shooting has been the Hawks' main problem lately. "Sooner or later we will have to relax a little bit," Miller said. "Then things might be different."

Earlier in the season the Hawks were up around the 50 per cent shooting mark from the field, and were among the highest scoring teams in the nation.

That shooting has fallen off considerably of late.

Injuries have added to Miller's woes. Both Calabria and McGilmer, two of the most accurate of the Iowa gunners, have been slowed with knee injuries. Calabria had been shooting around the 50 per cent mark, but since his injury he has been hitting at only about 35 per cent in recent games.

Miller has not decided on his starting lineup yet and said that physical condition would dictate who opened on the court and who didn't.

Down at Champaign two weeks ago, the Illini handed the Hawks their worst defeat in 20 years, 88-69. Illinois hit 60 per cent of its shots in that game.

Wrestlers End Year at 15-2; Big 10 Finals Start Thursday

Purdue's wrestling team could use a few tips from Rick Mount and the rest of the Boilermaker basketball squad. The Purdue matmen lost their 15th consecutive meet of the season Saturday at Lafayette, Ind., as Iowa thrashed the Boilermakers, 32-3.

It was the second time in two weeks that the Iowa grapplers humbled Purdue. Iowa shutout Purdue Feb. 8 in a triple dual-meet at Madison, Wis., 31-0.

Saturday's victory brought the Hawkeye season record to an impressive 15-2. The Hawks will have a chance to atone for one of those defeats when they travel to East Lansing, Mich., for the Big 10 Championships beginning Thursday. Michigan State was the only Big 10 team to defeat Iowa, 18-9, and the Spartans and Hawks will be co-favorites for the Big 10 crown.

Coach Dave McCuskey said Monday that the Purdue meet was really just a warm-up for the Big 10 meet for the Hawkeyes.

"There's not much you can say about a meet like this," McCuskey said. "Purdue is terribly weak and it just wasn't much of a meet."

Iowa's freshmen wrestling team also wrestled at Lafayette Saturday. The Hawkeye yearlings stopped Indiana 23-6 and then squeezed by Purdue 14-10 on the strength of heavyweight Paul Zander's pin in the last match.

Tracksters Fail, Swimmers Lose In Weekend Play

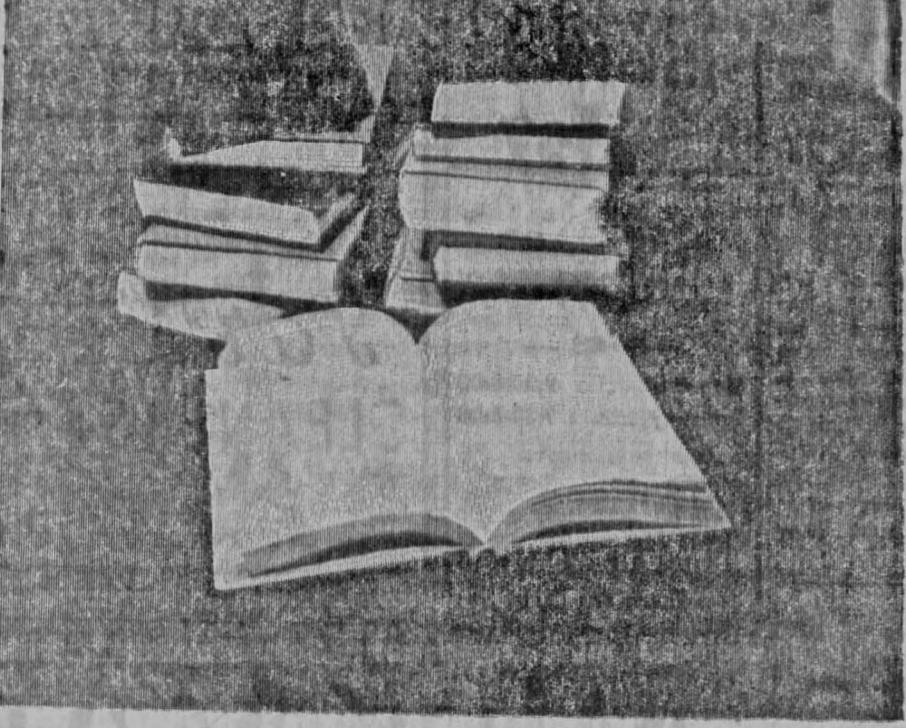

It was a losing weekend for Iowa's track and swimming teams. Michigan downed the tracksters 100-49 at Ann Arbor Friday night and Purdue handed the swimmers their sixth straight conference loss 85-38 at Lafayette Saturday.

The meets were the final tune-ups for both squads with Big 10 championships coming up this weekend. The track team travels to Champaign Friday for the Big 10 Indoor and the swimmers journey to Madison Thursday for the swimming finals.

Iowa captured only three events in the track loss to Michigan. Captain Carl Frazier figured in two of the three triumphs. He captured the 440-yard dash in 49 seconds and teamed with Steve Dettinger, Al Bream and Jerry Petersen to take the mile relay in 3:19.2.

Gary Phelps claimed Iowa's only other victory in the long jump with a leap of 22-2¾.

The swimmers fared no better at Purdue. Jim Cartwright won both diving events and Rick Neustrud took the 500-yard free style for Iowa's three only victories.

CAN YOU REALLY READ?

If you are satisfied with your reading, you may have a surprise coming. Most people read the same way as their parents and grandparents, but with the sum of accumulated knowledge doubling every five years, those horse-and-buggy reading methods will not even make a dent in the knowledge explosion. If you check eight or more items in the left column which apply to your reading, you have extremely limited reading abilities. If you check six or more items in the right column, you are a superior reader, one in a thousand.

A POOR READER

- Reads across the page from left to right
- Takes one minute to read a page
- Reads at 400 words per minute or less
- Takes days to complete a book
- Has trouble remembering what has been read
- Thinks of other things while reading—mind wanders
- Must have a quiet place to read
- Plods along one word at a time
- Continually re-reads sentences and—paragraphs to insure comprehension
- Reads all material the same way
- Has no study method—tries to memorize at about 100 words per minute
- Must say and hear each word mentally—sometimes moves the lips while reading
- Has read less than 10 books in the last year

A SUPERIOR READER

- Reads down the page
- Reads a page in seven seconds
- Reads in excess of 2,000 words per minute
- Reads novels in half an hour
- Has good recall, even after weeks have passed
- Reads without effort—no trouble with concentration
- Is not easily distracted by noise
- Eyes and mind take whole thoughts with one glance
- Seldom rereads
- Knows a variety of reading techniques for all types of material
- Uses proven study techniques—studies at 800 words per minute
- Reads only with the eyes and mind—is not slowed down by subvocalizing each word
- Has read over 20 books in seven weeks time, using only three hours per week

The column on the right very accurately describes a person who has taken the Developmental Reading Course. Developmental Reading is an extremely powerful tool for reducing reading time from hours to minutes. Applicable to all ages above grade school, it vastly increases the ability for consumption of all forms of printed material in the minimum time, with resulting elevations of comprehension and retention of subject content.

Gym Team Buries Gophers, Keeps Perfect 8-0 Record

Iowa's gymnasts won at least the first two places in every event in beating Minnesota 183-105-10 Saturday in the Field House.

The Hawks' record is now 8-0, including five Big 10 victories. Minnesota is now 1-5 in the Big 10 and 7-7 overall.

Barry Sloten and Bob Dickson were double winners for the Hawkeyes, Sloten winning the floor exercise and long horse, and Dickson winning the still rings and parallel bars.

Keith McCanless won the side horse with a fine 9.35 score, defeating teammate Ken Liehr.

Iowa swept the parallel bars, with Dickson taking first, Roger Neist second and Mike Proctor third.

Rich Scorsa, an all-around performer, and Don Hatch, a specialist in the still rings, did not compete in the meet. Scorsa has had sore wrists and Hatch has tendonitis in both arms.

Dave Stende of Minnesota won the all-around title with a score of 48.875; Neist was second.

Iowa will meet unbeaten Michigan next Saturday in Ann Arbor in a meet that could determine the Big 10 champion.

Dual meet victories count toward the team title in the Big 10.

Honohan Proposes County Adhere to Valuation Order

By MARK ROHNER

A new approach to Iowa City's traffic and parking problems — bikeways — received support from the City Council Monday afternoon.

The proposal was presented to the council in a report delivered by the bikeways subcommittee of Project Green, a citizens' group devoted to landscaping and otherwise beautifying the city.

In Polk County District Court Monday, 22 of the 48 counties for which the ordered increase was rescinded for 1968 had their suits to make the temporary injunction permanent dismissed. However, Forst will apparently not require the 48 counties to comply with the original increase order until 1969 tax lists are compiled.

This makes the status of Johnson County, Iowa City and other complaining cities and counties unclear since they went to court to be included in the permanent injunction suit, which, it appears, will eventually be dismissed for all 48 counties.

Forst has said that the complaining counties have raised some "good questions" which need answering. He has also said that he would like to go to court to debate the merits of increases ordered for 1968-71.

Honohan argued in court Monday that a property valuation increase in Johnson County, without corresponding hikes in other counties, would result in a loss of state aid to the Iowa City Community School District.

As it stands now, all 71 counties included in the original increase order will be affected by it for the years 1968-71. However, unless further court action is taken, Johnson County and the others not granted an injunction will also have to make increases for 1968.

It is stands now, all 71 counties included in the original increase order will be affected by it for the years 1968-71. However, unless further court action is taken, Johnson County and the others not granted an injunction will also have to make increases for 1968.

It is the Leadership Development Program which needs new staff members to design and carry out programs, research, evaluate and develop designs.

The program is now a year-and-a-half old and interested faculty members and students are urged to apply.

Applications are available at the Office of Student Activities in the Union. Completed applications are due at 5 p.m. Friday.

The purpose of the Leadership Development Program is to bring potential leaders into a workshop setting.

They take part in a learning process oriented to understanding how the various participants in a group affect each other.

William H. Gass, Professor of Philosophy at Purdue University is to speak at 8 as he talks about "Misreadings of Literature as Philosophy" or "Philosophy in the Form of Fiction."

Mrs. Sydley Calahan, author of "Women and Their Sexual Revolution," discusses the subject of her book at 10:30 tonight on Night Call, with host Del Shields.

They take part in a learning process oriented to understanding how the various participants in a group affect each other.

"The attitude here is, if you're good enough to be hired, you're good enough to be turned loose on a project," says Don Feistam.

Don earned a B.S.E.E. in 1965. Today, he's an Associate Engineer in systems design and evaluation at IBM. Most of his work consists of determining modifications needed to make complex data processing systems fit the specialized requirements of IBM customers.

Depending on the size of the project, Don works individually or in a small team. He's now working with three other engineers on part of an air traffic control system that will process radar information by computer.

Says Don: "There are only general guidelines. The assignment is simply to come up with the optimum system."

Set your own pace

Recently he wrote a simulation program that enables an IBM computer to predict the performance of a data processing system that will track satellites. He handled that project himself. "Nobody stands over my shoulder," Don says. "I pretty much set my own pace."

Don's informal working environment is typical of Engineering and Science at IBM. No matter how large the project, we break it down into units small enough to be handled by one person or a few people.

Don sees a lot of possibilities for the future.

He says, "My job requires that I keep up to date with all the latest IBM equipment and systems programs. With that broad an outlook,

I can move into almost any technical area at

IBM—development, manufacturing, product test, space and defense projects, programming or marketing."

Council Lends Weight to Bikeways

A new approach to Iowa City's traffic and parking problems — bikeways — received support from the City Council Monday afternoon.

The proposal was presented to the council in a report delivered by the bikeways subcommittee of Project Green, a citizens' group devoted to landscaping and otherwise beautifying the city.

The group's chairman, Mrs. William H. Cole, 531 Meadow St., told the council of three ways it could aid the bikeways project.

First, she said, the group wanted permission to route bicycle trails over city residential streets. Second, she requested City Atty. Jay Honohan's help in drawing up easements for portions of bike trails that would pass over private property.

Third, she asked for advice from City Engineer Melford Dahl on construction of the trails.

"These are all valid requests," Mayor Loren Hickerson told Mrs. Cole. "Nothing you have requested is inappropriate."

Mrs. Cole said that the group had been conferring with the Johnson County Regional Planning Commission and other area governmental bodies and that they had also expressed interest in the project.

On City Manager Frank Smidley's recommendation, the council agreed to refer the matter to the Parks and Recreation Commission for study and referral back to the council.

Monday's report was a reply to one delivered to the council last Tuesday by the Water Conditioning Association International (WCAI), which warned that the proposed addition of water softening facilities to the municipal plant might result in corrosion to mains and home water heaters.

Public Works Director Ralph Speed and Water Plant Superintendent Cleo Kron said in their report that they had conferred with water plant personnel in eight Iowa cities and the University, all of which have softening facilities. None of the superintendents of these plants, they said, had reported any corrosion. Water taste and odor improved after softening was added to the treatment process in Cedar Rapids, Burlington, Fort Madison and Ames, they said. Occasional taste and odor improvement was noted in Ottumwa and at the University, and there was no noticeable change in Marshalltown and Newton, they said.

Only Keokuk reported objectionable taste and odor in softened water, they said.

In answer to a question about possible damage to lawns and other plant life resulting from softened water, Smiley said, "I've been to Ames and Cedar Rapids and their petunias look as good as ours."

Nixon Lauds 'Antiriot' Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rigid rules laid down by Notre Dame's president, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, for dealing with students on his campus who "substitute force for rational persuasion" drew President Nixon's praise Monday.

Nixon asked Hesburgh to give his advice on the subject to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who is conferring this week with the 50 state governors on a national policy approach to "recent disorders that have paralyzed campus after campus."

A week ago, Hesburgh said anyone who tried to disrupt normal activities at Notre Dame "will be given 15 minutes of meditation to cease and desist."

"They will be told that they are, by their actions, going counter to the overwhelming conviction of this community as to what is proper here," he said.

Innocence Abroad-- 1st Visit to CNM

When the Center for New Music (CNM) accomplishes a number, the variety of audience reactions is amusing. There are those sitting erectly and applauding with either real or pretended enthusiasm; others slouch timidly and make the polite response; and still others gaze as if waiting for the next surprise.

Everyone should take in a CNM concert at least once to see what the experimenters are doing to music.

All one can do is relate the sounds the musicians produce to something he has heard previously, wherever it may have been. For example, in the first number Saturday evening, "Immobile for tape and diverse instruments" by Mel Powell, the music resembled those "beep" noises made by computers with blinking lights on "Star Trek."

Two musicians threaded neatly in tuxedos came on stage to present "Diversion for trombone and percussion" by Richard Hervig, the director of CNM. William Parsons alternately struck the vibraphone, gongs, cowbells and other percussion instruments while Jon English sporadically blew his horn. Perhaps the best description was given by another newcomer who leaned over and said, "I wonder if they're reading music for this."

The first two movements of Bela Bartok's "Contrasts for Clarinet, Violin and Piano" were actually relaxing in that one felt fairly certain that no surprises would pop into the current of music. But the last movement was more of a strain and appropriately branded the selection as "new music."

My eyes scanned the program and saw the familiar word "jazz." But "All Set for Jazz Ensemble" by Milton Babbitt proved deceiving:

I recall watching the trumpet er's foot tap the beat, and as I attempted to catch the rhythm myself, I came to the realization that I could not perceive what the trumpeter was keeping time.

A vocal ensemble of eight walked casually out on the stage with that kind of smiley look on their faces that resembled the enthusiasm of Mitch Miller's boys getting ready to sing "Zip-pe-dee-doo-da."

When "Black Against White" by Patrick Purswell was delivered, the chorus' singing sounded like the noises made by instruments in previous numbers. The text for the song was taken from an e.e. cummings poem, which alone may explain part of the uniqueness.

Both Purswell's composition and "Laudate Dominum" by Gary Grossman were characterized by hocketing, in which no one vocal part sang an entire word.

Rather, the words were torn apart with each part singing a different syllable.

"Bodafre" by Martin Farren—the title was taken from an "osmotic permutation" of a Czech word to an English synonym—used something much akin to hocketing. It seemed a discovery of sound in which each chorus member appeared surprised at his ability to make noises such as "st."

By coincidence, a little girl in the balcony supplied the appropriate climax for the number when she hiccupped. It might be of interest to note that the word "hiccup" is derived from a French word meaning "hiccup." Perhaps the little girl was planted there purposefully.

If Boris Karloff had been present, he would have contracted

Kenneth Gaburo's "Antiphony for piccolo, trombone, double bass and two-channel tape" for background music for his next horror show. "Antiphony" was a current of eerie tones with the occasional chilling effect of a shrill piccolo. The tape added blurred syllables to the already confusing menagerie.

However eerie, one could not help but amuse himself with the idea that the electric double bass resembled Garry Moore's contrived Pogo-cello.

In total, the CNM is a unique experience for each individual.

The music may at first be a strain—it seems as though the instrumentalists never stop tuning up. Later, it is still a strain because of the element of the unexpected.

The CNM appears to be an experiment with sound—and sounds like it, too. But it would not be fair to attend just one CNM concert and decide whether one approves or not.

are your contact lenses more work than they're worth?

If you're tired of using two or more separate solutions to take care of your contact lenses, we have the solution. It's Lensine the all-purpose lens solution for complete contact lens care—preparing, cleaning, and soaking. Just a drop or two of Lensine before you insert your contacts coats and lubricates the lens surface making it smoother and non-irritating.

Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. Lensine is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic making it ideal for storage of your lenses between wearing periods.

that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and could seriously endanger vision.

We've built a good, unprofitable one by taking care of all of the people.

When the legislature gave us the go-ahead to operate on a non-profit basis, they didn't give their permission lightly.

In exchange, they said we couldn't be fair weather friends who would turn our backs on people just when they needed us most.

That was just fine with us. It was the way we wanted it, too.

And we kept faith with them. First, we allowed people to keep coverage when they reached 65, an unheard of idea at the time when getting to be 65 meant almost automatic cancellation. We matched that by taking persons in poor health during open enrollments. And through it all, no membership has ever been canceled because a member had a lot of cases. We think these are the only blues to have when it rains hospital and doctor bills.

We've held up our end of the bargain. Together, we've made Blue Cross and Blue Shield a real bargain for our nearly a million members.

It's the hardest working charge card in Iowa.

Now available in Iowa City. FirstCard. A way to buy things that's so simple, so much better, you wonder why it hasn't been available before. Truly, the nicest idea since money.

One card charges everything

Can you imagine having a separate charge account at every place you make a purchase? Sounds silly, but that's where the old charge account system was heading. FirstCard has changed that. It's backed by banks and it says your credit is good at most of Iowa City's leading merchants and at over 330,000 other merchants across the country. Merchandise, repairs, hotel accommodations, air transportation, car rental—name it and you can probably charge it on FirstCard. It's even good for instant cash (up to $250) at any one of the over 3,000 participating banks across the country.

Works harder to make your work easier

With FirstCard you receive one itemized monthly statement and pay with one check for all your purchases. Pay within 25 days and there's no service charge, or budget your payments over a longer period of time. Also, it's easier to stay within your budget when you have FirstCard. Keeping track of one figure is simpler than keeping track of several purchases, at several stores, with several accounts. What's more, you can now take advantage of those special sales that you formerly had to pass up because you had no account at that store.
