Searchers Probe Ruins At Venezuela Crash Site

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (AP) — Searchers probed Monday through charred ruins of a plane for more victims of civil aviation's worst disaster, which has claimed at least 155 lives.

President Rafael Caldera ordered all the resources of the nation mobilized to cope with the unprecedented disaster, reported to have affected more than 1,000 persons.

Police and troops stood vigil over the 10-block area of the crash site, sealing off streets littered with baggage, scattered money and fragments of the VIASA DC9 which plunged into the sector Sunday and exploded.

All 74 passengers and 10 crew members perished in the crash which killed at least 71 more persons on the ground. The U.S. Embassy said Monday it had determined that 46 persons on board the plane were Americans. Earlier it had set the figure at 47.

Five of the victims died Monday from injuries.

Authorities feared still more victims would be found buried in the great piles of smoking rubble, and Boy Scouts went from door to door in other parts of the city, asking for sheets to cover the bodies.

Rescue workers picked their way through streets littered with broken toys, splintered furniture and other remains of households, looking for possible survivors.

Fire Department officials said many persons were unofficially listed as missing but the exact number will have to wait a census.

No Grudges Held

John Freeman, new British ambassador to the United States, Monday presented his credentials to President Nixon during a White House visit. The new ambassador, a former newspaperman who once wrote that Nixon's political career was ended, said, "Hello, Mr. President," as he greeted Nixon. "We welcome you," replied Nixon, who apparently holds no grudge.

Housing Policies At UI Go on Trial

About 200 students filled the Union Illinois Room Monday afternoon to hear the arguments in a test case involving the University's approved housing policy.

The case of Kenneth Stults, A2, Knoxville, was heard by the Committee on Student Conduct (CSC) after a room was found large enough to contain the audience.

Stults' counsel, Philip Mause, assistant professor of law, and James Chapman, associate dean of student affairs, said that Section 2 of the Housing and Hours Regulations of the Code of Student Life should be invalidated.

Section 2 requires that all students under 21 live in dormitories, sorority or fraternity houses or other approved housing, unless a special permission is granted for health, work or religious reasons, or the student is living with relatives.

Mause and Chapman argued that the rule was promulgated without sufficient student participation in its formulation, in violation of the Joint Statement on Student Rights, an accepted University policy.

Defense counsel also argued that the section should be invalidated because it does not serve a legitimate University interest in the health, safety or education of the students and because it discriminates against students under 21.

Stults did not contest the facts in the case, but admitted that he was living off campus illegally. He said his position is that the rule is arbitrary and should be abolished.

One witness, James Sutton, G, Iowa City, candidate for student body president, alleged that the University "is programming the life style of the majority of undergraduate students," by the approved housing rule. He also charged that the rule was promulgated to pay off outstanding bonds for dormitory construction.

Sutton introduced as evidence a University Housing Committee Report of 1967 which concluded that dormitory living is not a positive educational experience beyond the freshman year.

Mause questioned Laird Addis, associate professor of philosophy and a member of the Committee on Student Life (CSL), the student-faculty committee responsible for recommending student conduct regulations to the president.

Addis said that University Pres. Howard R. Bowen had informed the CSL that he would not consider changes in the housing regulations prior to fall 1969. According to a statement from Bowen which was read at the hearing, this "in order not to jeopardize the financial position of the dormitories."

Chapman offered the next part of the defense, objecting to the approved housing regulation because of its virtual impossibility of enforcement.

The Office of Student Affairs should be helping students to find suitable residences, not punishing them for living off campus, Chapman said.

Chapman said that the University could maintain its bond payments if only freshmen and transfer students were required to live in the dorms. Fewer dorm students would also make it possible for the Office of Student Affairs to extend its services in the dormitories, Chapman said.

At this point, Thomas C. Watson, director of off-campus housing, was called to testify. Watson brought the charge against Stults.

Watson concurred in Chapman's statements on the unenforceability of the approved housing regulation. Even if his office suspects that a student is falsifying his address, it cannot be proved unless the telephone or electricity are in the student's name, Watson said.

John Larson, assistant to the president and counsel for the University in the case, told the CSC that the CSL had exercised sufficient student participation in the rule-making procedure. In spite of Bowen's statement, Larson said, students were still free to try to influence him to change his mind.

The Code was changed by the administration from original recommendations of the CSL and put into effect before the committee had approved the changes. Larson said that this was necessary so that the University could project dormitory occupancy and set rates for dorm residents. The projected occupancy is used to set the fees so that a revenue from the dorms can be sustained which is large enough to allow for the bond payments to be made, according to Larson.

He told the CSC that its purpose was not to determine whether the regulation was the best possible one, but whether there is a rationale for it and the rule is reasonable.

Larson said that the question of revising the regulation should be a matter for the CSL and the student-faculty Housing Committee.

Stults addressed the committee twice to remind it that he was not seeking a special exception for himself but was interested in seeing the entire rule abolished.

None of the 200 students present came forward and admitted they were illegally living off-campus, as Stults had requested last week.

James Curtis, professor of speech pathology and chairman of the CSC, said the committee would "proceed as rapidly as possible" with its deliberations, but he would not estimate when a decision might be reached.

Members of the hearing panel included Curtis, Cleo Martin, instructor in rhetoric; Louise Beltramo, professor of education; William Hines, professor of law; Gary Lane, LA, Riverside; James Ghee, A2, Iowa City; and Gary Musselman, G, Coralville.

Bowen Cautions On Possible Loss Of Federal Funds

DES MOINES — University of Iowa Pres. Howard R. Bowen told the Iowa House and Senate education subcommittees Monday that the legislature will have to exceed the budget recommendations of Gov. Robert D. Ray or risk losing $16 million in federal funds for University building projects. Bowen said the loss of federal funds would be "a disaster."

Bowen said the State Board of Regents needed $2.1 million more than was recommended by Ray for capital construction in the next biennium to avoid losing the federal funds.

Sen. Robert Rigler (R-New Hampton) said the regents could temporarily delay other projects in order to come up with the $2.1 million to match the federal funds for construction of a basic science, dental science and nursing education building.

State Comptroller Marvin Seldin said it was felt that when Ray's budget request was worked out there would be enough flexibility to avoid losing federal funds.

Rigler told the legislators, however, that if funds were diverted from other projects for the medical building the $16 million for the other projects would be lost.

Bowen said the projects could be cancelled, but that, each time this has been done in the past, several millions of dollars in other federal funds has been sacrificed.

Seldin was instructed to consult with regent officials to see if fund shifts could be made so that federal funds already granted to the state would not be lost. Seldin's report is to be presented when discussion of capital construction at regent institutions resumes.

Dr. Robert Hardin, dean of the University College of Medicine, said $1.5 million more than recommended by Ray is needed or some medical programs will have to be dropped.

The Luck of the Irish Turns on 1 Local Lad

The luck of the Irish was consumed by throngs of barflies in the form of green beer Monday, but seemed to work against one Iowa City man — the only St. Patrick's day intoxication casualty.

Jim Jabanski, 24, of 602 First Ave., was arrested by police in Joe's Place Monday night for intoxication after he allegedly tried to cause a disturbance.

Returns on sales of green beer were incomplete when The Daily Iowan went to press because, as one bartender put it, "we're too busy selling to count."

CLU Unit Backs DI Right to Print 'Obscene' Words

CEDAR RAPIDS — The Hawkeye Chapter of the Iowa Civil Liberties Union has come out in defense of The Daily Iowan's printing allegedly obscene words on the front page of its Feb. 27 issue.

The Civil Liberties organization stated Saturday night:

"After examining the facts, we find the newspaper's publication of the story was an appropriate exercise of freedom of the press as guaranteed by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution."

The DI was criticized by State Rep. James T. Klein (R-Lake Mills) for printing a story about a high school "underground" newspaper in Iowa City which contained what some school and police authorities have called obscene and objectionable words and phrases. The DI story contained a poem which had been one of the sources of the controversy about the newspaper.

Klein called Friday for the resignation or dismissal of DI staff members, both students and faculty, who had any part in the publication of the story.

John Ely, chairman of the Hawkeye chapter, said the Civil Liberties Union is also concerned over the alleged seizure by state agents of pictures and articles intended for publication in the next issue of the Pterodactyl, an "underground" newspaper circulating on the Grinnell College campus.

Editors of the Pterodactyl charged that the material was taken illegally from the print shop in Wilton Junction.

A spokesman for the Iowa Attorney General's Office said, however, that the printer voluntarily handed over the pictures and articles.

March Planned To Support Bills On Migrant Labor

Approximately 200 students from universities and colleges across the state are expected to march with the United Auto Workers (UAW) members in Des Moines Wednesday to support two migrant labor bills.

Ken Wessels, A4, Dyersville, said that the Iowa City chapter of the Peace and Freedom party was going to send as many students as possible to march with the workers, in the first labor march since 1947. Wessels estimated 200 would attend and Edris Owens, UAW Iowa director for political action, said that he "welcomed the students with open arms."

Owens estimated that over 1,000 marchers would form at the river bridge on Grand Avenue, about 10 blocks west of the capitol building, at 8 a.m. Wednesday and march to the steps of the capitol. There, he said, he hoped the group would be addressed by Gov. Robert D. Ray and the Senate minority and majority leaders.

"They have all been invited," Owens said. "I hope they will talk to us about these bills."

Owens said that he hoped that the march would dramatize some of the migrant worker conditions to people in the state. All the bad conditions don't exist in South Carolina, Owens said. When you see some of the conditions that exist, it "kind of makes you ashamed to be an Iowan."

The two bills which the marchers support are one which would provide stiff health regulations and sanitary requirements for migrant labor camps, and another which would set a minimum age requirement of 10 for children who could work.

Owens admitted that he thought the bills had little chance of passing at the moment, but he said that he hoped the march might make some Iowans aware of the conditions in which migrant laborers live and work.

Owens has invited other organizations and unions to participate in the march. Some of the organizations include the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the League of Women Voters and other civil rights groups.

Students will be leaving Iowa City at approximately 6 a.m. in order to arrive in Des Moines in time for the march.

Vigils Set Across Nation To Protest Mutiny Trials

Public and administrative furor continues to grow over the mutiny trials of 27 soldiers from the Presidio Stockade in San Francisco. Vigils will be held today in over 100 cities, including Iowa City, with the possibility of 100 more vigils occurring in other cities to protest the mutiny trials.

At least two U.S. senators have indicated a need for an investigation of the incident, while four others have shown interest in the affair, according to a letter sent by the Committee for the 27, a national group which has organized support for the soldiers.

The letter said that Sens. Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) and Charles Goodell (R-N.Y.) have indicated that they want an investigation of the events surrounding the trials. Four other senators, including top-ranking Richard Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, have shown interest in the trial, the letter said.

The 27 soldiers were prisoners in the Presidio Stockade, where they participated in a sit-down demonstration on Oct. 14 to protest the shot-gun killing of another prisoner. They were also protesting general conditions in the stockade.

The men claimed that they had filled out the standard Army forms to voice their grievances but that the officers in charge refused to acknowledge the grievances.

The men were charged with mutiny when they refused to break up the demonstration. Since then, three of the prisoners have escaped, three have been sentenced to 14, 15 and 16 years at hard labor, one has been sentenced to four years at hard labor, and the remainder of the men are being tried or are awaiting trial.

Election Issue

All candidates whose names will appear on the March 26 all-campus election ballot are requested to submit a 50-word statement of goals and policies to The Daily Iowan by noon Thursday. These statements should not be the same as a platform.

If the candidate has not submitted a photograph to the Student Election Board, he should attach a picture to his statement. All statements must be signed. They will be used in an election issue to be published March 25.

Plan Offered for City's Redevelopment

By MARK ROHNER

A local citizens' group Monday offered the City Council a five-point program for downtown redevelopment, now that urban renewal is apparently a dead issue.

Also Monday, Gov. Robert D. Ray and Mayor Loren Hickerson called upon the state legislature to clarify urban renewal law so other renewal projects will not be jeopardized by a recent Iowa Supreme Court decision which invalidated all renewal action taken by the City Council since 1964 on conflict of interest grounds.

The Rev. Robert Welch, spokesman for the Citizens Political Action League, said his group was willing "to do all we can to make it feasible for downtown Iowa City to be a regional shopping center."

The group's program, which Welch outlined at an informal council meeting, included the following suggestions:

- Exploring the types of assistance available for development projects.
- Enforcing the building codes to insure safety in the downtown area.
- Working for legislation to clarify the conflict of interest laws in the state code.
- Exploring through Iowa's senators and congressional representatives other avenues open to obtaining federal aid for redevelopment.
- Proceeding in an orderly manner towards achieving the goal of a regional shopping center in downtown Iowa City.

City Manager Frank Smiley told Welch that the council would attempt to coordinate the group's proposals with programs being submitted by similar groups.

Smiley said the council was "not sure exactly what we'll be doing" about the demise of the city's renewal project. He did say, however, that it was improbable that the city would seek a rehearing on the recent high court decision.

At a press conference in Des Moines Monday, Gov. Robert Ray said state law "should be corrected so we don't have to face the problem of urban renewal being eliminated."

Ray said he feared that the court decision which ruled that a conflict of interest would exist if a city councilman owned even one share of stock in a firm having any interest in an area chosen for urban renewal, could invalidate renewal programs under way in other Iowa cities.

Mayor Loren Hickerson, in a memorandum submitted Monday to the Cities and Towns Committee of the Iowa General Assembly, said, "In enacting existing legislation, the General Assembly obviously assumed that urban renewal and low-rent housing programs are in the Iowa public interest, and presumably intended its statutes to enable these programs, not to curtail or prevent them."

Hickerson questioned whether the Supreme Court ruling, which invalidated Iowa City's renewal program, was serving the public interest.

The mayor said that Iowa City's experience, "would seem to offer evidence that in practical terms, under the Iowa law as interpreted, it is necessary to devise such programs primarily to avoid any conceivable conflict of interest on the part of officials, not primarily to meet the most clearly evident local needs in the areas of urban renewal and low-rent housing."

In the memorandum, Hickerson emphasized "the vital importance to Iowa public policy of considering both the statute and the Court's interpretations" in the light of his observations on public interest.

The City Council meets in regular session tonight to vote on another controversial local issue, the question of whether to add softening facilities to the municipal water plant.

The resolution on a contract for the softening facilities has already been deferred twice at formal council meetings to give councilmen time to study the question further. Councilmen have indicated the resolution will not again be deferred, but will be accepted or rejected tonight.

Councilmen agreed Monday to defer two modifications to the housing code which would have been voted upon tonight. The ordinances, both of which would extend certain requirements to homes built before 1930, were originally drafted to meet requirements for receiving federal urban renewal funds.

Freedom at stake

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following editorial is reprinted from the Cedar Rapids Gazette.)

Regardless of whether it is smelly tripe or stuff of standard taste that goes into Grinnell College's underground publication, The Pterodactyl, nobody — including the Iowa attorney general's office — has a right to seize that property before publication and suppress it without due process of law.

If there was due process in the seizure of pictures and written copy Thursday from a plant that does the Grinnell paper's printing in Wilton Junction we have yet to see an explanation that supports it.

Two agents from the state bureau of criminal investigation reportedly seized the material just by asking for it from the printer. They did this, apparently, without the owner's consent and without a warrant of any kind from a court.

The material seized, according to its owners, included satirical articles criticizing the attorney general's office for its probe of a disrobing incident at Grinnell.

If state agents thus can seize and suppress an "underground newspaper's" unfavorable written material on a state officer's say-so alone, they can seize any publication's copy prior to its printing — including editorials like this one.

The day that happens and they get away with it, people — you won't be living in a free-speech, free-religion, free-assembly, free-press country any more with all the Bill of Rights assurances and freedoms we've enjoyed. You'll be living in a backslid, heavy-handed, fear-fogged police state, and you won't be liking it one bit.

We concur with the Gazette's forecast. We strongly adhere to the concept of printing without fear of prior censorship and printing without fear of suppression just because our choice and play of news does not correspond with the choice and play of news some state officials would like to see. Without assurance against interference of this type, no publication would be free to serve its readership in the best way possible. — Cheryl Arvidson

Although President Nixon's decision last week to go ahead with a modified sentinel antiballistic missile program is not a threatening deployment on the part of the United States, it is bound to escalate the arms race. And certainly it is not a step in the direction of lowering the world's suicidal capacity.

The President's decision just one day after the Senate had ratified the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, which was held up on Capitol Hill for over four months at Richard Nixon's initiative, not only reduces the significance of the highly-pitched treaty but also lessens the chances of nonnuclear nations adhering to the treaty.

However, we have to wait and see what will happen if the arms control talks between the Soviet Union and the United States that are to begin Tuesday in Geneva. The latest U.S. move might endanger these talks. President Nixon, perhaps, might be considering the ABM proposal as a "bargaining card" for "fruitful" talks with the Soviets.

Two things seem to have come out of this decision by Nixon. The President evidently wants to project an image of toughness when it comes to national defense matters as against a warm and friendly image he had projected during his recent European trip.

Also the President seems to have wanted to strike a balance between the doves and hawks and between the Democrats and the Republicans in the Congress. Democratic senators like Kennedy and Fulbright have advocated U.S. ratification to the nonproliferation treaty and at the same time strongly opposed the deployment of ABM.

While the Republican senators like Goldwater and Thurmond strongly opposed U.S. signing the treaty and went in an all out support to ABM as it was originally proposed.

Both the Pentagon and the White House were emphatic in telling that the proposed modified ABM program is essential to protect America's second strike capability — to protect America's deterrence — in case of a nuclear attack from Soviet Union.

According to Pentagon sources an all-out strategic nuclear exchange between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. could cause about 120 million U.S. fatalities. The sentinel level of ABM deployment would reduce these fatalities by 20 to 30 millions.

If the Soviet Union were really preparing for a nuclear attack it obviously would like to beat America's second strike capability before hand. In fact the present American move is only a reaction in response to a Soviet deterrence reportedly built around Moscow. All this would only lead to another round of escalation in the nuclear arms race.

The very day Nixon was announcing his decision on ABM, French President de Gaulle was reported rightly viewing a big change in East-West relations, with Red China replacing the USA as the chief threat in the minds of Soviet leaders.

Let us wait and see what the Senate reaction will be when it comes to voting on President Nixon's modified ABM proposal. Faith and confidence in each other is what is needed between Russia and the U.S. Perhaps then, and only then, one could foresee an end to the present "mirror image" rationalities of national leaders.

Reader supports Daily Iowan staff

To the editor: in support of the DI staff
It seems pathetic that a number of legislators have taken it upon themselves to "clean up America" so to speak, i.e., the request for a mass resignation by the DI staff and those affiliated thereof.

The article in question was published, in my estimation, with a sincere approach to reporting as it is. The objectionable words printed within the article seemed entirely pertinent, if not necessary, to clarify the news item.

If, however, the words were not appropriate and were in fact obscene, why then was the university community which the paper serves not genuinely appalled? Perhaps one might suppose that the readers were adult enough to recognize these "profanities" as news values and not as dirty words.

It is a pity that in a world which expects maturity to be exhibited by young intellectuals, that the "adult" adults cannot be expected to do likewise.

Therefore I extend my congratulations to Representative Klein for being able to see a dirty word for nothing more than that.

Group Outlines Movement for Uniting 25 Million Protestants into 1 Church

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — An unprecedented movement to unite the 25 million members of nine Protestant denominations into one Christian church was outlined Monday.

It was the latest step in an eight-year ecumenical venture by a group called the Consultation of Church Union (COCU).

No vote was planned immediately on the unity proposal. An actual church union is not expected for several years. Some representatives say final unity — if at all — will not come until the late 1970s.

The Rev. William Benfield Jr. of Charleston, W. Va., chairman of a union commission, presented the plan to 250 representatives of the nine denominations at COCU's eighth annual meeting. As proposed, the new church — still unnamed — would have three levels of ecclesiastical offices and four geographical organizations.

"There is no more exciting possibility for renewal of the church in America," said the Rev. Paul A. Crow Jr., general secretary of the group. But he added that "fired, jittery or impatient churchmen could stifle" the massive unity movement.

The participating churches are the African Methodist Episcopal Church, African Methodist Episcopal Zion, Christian Methodist Episcopal, the Christian Church sometimes called the Disciples of Christ, Episcopal Church, the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., the United Church of Christ, the United Methodist Church and the United Presbyterian Church in the United States.

Three denominations are black, but they represent only 3.2 million of the 25 million involved. One section of the outline deals with racial balance of all levels of the new church.

Among other highlights of the outline are:

• The offices or orders would include bishops at the district, regional and national levels, presbyters who would be leaders of parishes and congregations, and deacons working in specialized ministries.

• The church would have parishes — one or more congregations not necessarily geographically defined — districts and a national assembly.

• The national body would be composed of bishops, presbyters, deacons and laity, elected to it by the regions. On matters of faith and order, the national assembly would vote separately as bishops, presbyters and deacons and laity, with concurrence by the three groups required for approval.

Nixon Policy On War Hit By McGovern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharp criticism of President Nixon's Vietnam policy by Sen. George S. McGovern Monday brought rejoinders from Democratic and Republican senators that the President should be given time and leeway to set his course.

McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat who unsuccessfully sought his party's 1968 presidential nomination, recalled the political turmoil of last year and President Lyndon B. Johnson's withdrawal from the race. And then he declared:

"The new commander in chief must grasp what his predecessor learned to his sorrow — that in any continuance of the war in Vietnam lies the seeds of national tragedy and the certainty of personal political disaster."

McGovern said Nixon is continuing Johnson's policies, and added:

"I believe that the American people had every hope and expectation that the Paris talks would bring a military disengagement, that we would minimize clashes with the enemy and seek to hold the loss of lives on both sides while the Paris discussions were pending."

"And yet, in defiance of all the dictates of common sense and respect for human life, we have pursued the opposite course."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana reacted to McGovern's speech by telling reporters that those who criticize Nixon's course should remember that the Republican President inherited the Vietnam problem.

"We should give him leeway and flexibility to develop his own policies rather than follow those of the previous administration, which are still in effect," Mansfield said.

"He has said he is seeking a reasonable settlement in Paris. Let us give him a chance. Let's see what he can do."

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said that when senators who make proposals for an immediate reduction of American troop commitments, as McGovern has, "I would just politely like to know what they are going to do about the war."

Speaking of McGovern, Dirksen added it is only "the opinion of one man" that Nixon may face a political tragedy.

Plan Offered On Lobbyists

DES MOINES (AP) — A plan to require business firms and associations employing lobbyists to file quarterly reports of money spent to influence the legislature has been proposed by Sen. La Gaudinier (D-Des Moines). He explained his proposal in a letter to Sen. Arthur Neu (R-Cedar Rapids), chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee.

Gaudinier's plan differs from other lobbyist control plans because it requires the clients, rather than the lobbyists themselves, to disclose expenditures.

Under the Gaudinier proposal only a member of the Senate could submit a complaint concerning nonfiling of a disclosure report or filing of a false or misleading report.

The confidentiality of the complaint would be maintained while the Senate Ethics Committee conducted hearings and gathered evidence, but any reprimand or recommendation for censure would be made public.

Most lobbyists, many of whom are lawyers, have objected to making financial disclosures themselves and have said Bar Association ethics prevent them from revealing fees.

Mother, Children Safe After Ordeal

Mrs. Denise Cuello holds her two children, Nadia, 6, and Jans, 7, in Paris Monday after the mayor of Verrieres le Huisson succeeded in talking Mrs. Cuello's divorced husband into releasing them. Cuello had held police off at gunpoint and threatened to shoot the children rather than turn them over to his ex-wife. Authorities had feared a repetition of the tragedy in which a man killed his two children and himself last month when police tried to move in on him in Cestas, in southwest France, in a similar case.

Parking Hearing—Innovative, Useful

By DAVE COLLOGAN
DI NEWS ANALYSIS

Several novel ideas were connected with a hearing held last week by the Parking and Security Committee.

The committee, an advisory group to Pres. Howard R. Bowen, held a public hearing Thursday to give members of the University community an opportunity to comment on a proposed parking plan for next year. As a result of these comments, a new plan is now being developed.

There are several innovations connected with this hearing.

The idea of a hearing itself is new. John D. Dooley, director of parking lot operations, said that the committee has never held a hearing on parking before. "We just never had one. I don't know if we were scared to or just didn't think anything would come of it," Dooley said.

When the idea of a hearing was first introduced, several committee did vote in favor of the motion. More than 500 copies of a letter announcing the hearing were sent to various campus organizations.

The second innovation is the fact that more than 100 people did attend the hearing. Although this is a small percentage of University-connected people, most of those present were representing larger groups. English and Rhetoric teaching assistants, College of Law students and faculty, the New University Conference, Action Party '69, the Student Senate, the Graduate Student Senate, and the Faculty Council were among organizations represented by speakers.

The opportunity to speak seemed to be appreciated. More than half of the 21 people who spoke expressed their thanks to the committee for allowing them to be heard. John Diehl, L3, Iowa City, expressed his gratitude by saying, "Parking is a frustration and it helps me a little to express it."

John J. Omara, associate professor of civil engineering, said, "I think it was a good idea to have the hearing. I believe the committee learned something from it." James French, BS, Davenport, a student member of the committee, felt the hearing was "very helpful."

"I think that, besides getting reactions both pro and con, we got some positive alternatives," he said.

One of the alternatives mentioned by many was to begin immediately to implement a system of peripheral lots with a shuttle bus system. The bus system was originally scheduled to begin operation in two to three years. Dooley, who submitted the first proposal to the committee, has already begun work on another plan with the opinions of the speakers taken into account.

"I think that two of the things that definitely came out at the hearing were the objections to night time-parking fees and to the idea of building more ramps," Dooley said. "These two things will be deleted in the next proposal."

ROTC Protested in 2 Demonstrations

By PENNY MAHER

About 100 persons, mostly spectators, gathered Monday afternoon on the east steps of Old Capitol for the second demonstration within two days to protest the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) program at the University.

Monday's protest was started by Jerry Sies, A4, Iowa City, who suggested it at an earlier anti-ROTC demonstration held Saturday night in the Union. Saturday's demonstration was organized by the Independent Ad Hoc Contingent on ROTC, an organization which disclaimed any connection with Monday's demonstration.

Sies was not present at 1 p.m. Monday, the time he had set for the demonstration, nor did the assembled protesters make it to the President's Office, as had been planned. Instead, they settled on the Old Capitol Steps.

Marc Hess, A1, Fairport, N.Y., a spokesman for the Independent Ad Hoc Contingent on ROTC, told the crowd that his group had nothing to do with the protest.

He said that Sies and his followers were attacking the ROTC cadets in leaflets that had been distributed on campus.

"We're for a movement against the organization ROTC. We don't have anything against the people," Hess said.

Hess said that the gathering called by Sies could be a detrimental act, and that he was sure that Students for Democratic Society (SDS), the leading radical group on campus, would condemn it. SDS did not participate in either Saturday's or Monday's demonstrations.

"It could blow our whole movement to get ROTC off campus," Hess said, referring to the Sies-initiated leaflet.

When Sies arrived at about 1:30 p.m., spectators in the crowd challenged him about the position stated in the leaflet. Sies said that he was condemning people who kill women and children, but not necessarily ROTC cadets.

"If any ROTC members want to demonstrate with us, I'll be more than happy to have them," he said.

Ron Hughes, an Iowa City man recently returned from serving with the U.S. Air Force in Thailand, pointed out that many students are more or less forced into the ROTC program so that they can afford to go to school.

"They take their orders from the older generation; if they don't, it will ruin their future," he said.

Sies said that he would condemn the leaflet if it would facilitate action. He said that it was a silly thing for people with common goals to argue about.

"Let's do something about getting the dudes who make a bad scene," he said.

Sies told the crowd that he had met with Pres. Howard R. Bowen Monday morning and had demanded that immediate steps be taken to abolish ROTC, and that he had asked Bowen to reply to his demands that afternoon.

Bowen, who was in Des Moines to appear before a legislative committee on the subject of appropriations, left a letter for Sies briefly explaining his response to the demands.

In the letter, Bowen pointed out that every academic program of the University is subject to review, and that ROTC is no exception. He said that, ordinarily, he would be quite willing to recommend a "judicious and careful review" of ROTC through normal academic channels, but not under the pressure of "threat or coercion."

Bowen said that a review conducted under such conditions would not meet the standards of fairness, sincerity and absence of prejudice and pressure.

He said that, in the absence of "threats, pressure and harassment," he would in due course consult with the Faculty Council and Administration Council to determine if a review of the ROTC program would serve any useful purpose. He said if such a review were made, it would be conducted through normal channels involving the College of Liberal Arts.

After reading the letter, Sies expressed the feeling that it was just another way of saying no. He then asked the crowd how many persons present felt that students get a fair deal through normal channels.

Sies offered several further choices to those present. He suggested sitting-in at Bowen's office or at University Hall. "Let's mess up the bureaucracy a little; the bureaucracy is what makes it work," he said. Sies' suggestion was coolly met, however, and the demonstration soon broke up.

Saturday night's demonstration filled the east lobby of the Union and forced those attending the ROTC military ball to arrive through a corridor of some 50 to 60 sign bearers.

Black Beret cadets arriving at the dance were special objects of scorn for the demonstrators, who occasionally chanted "go to school — study — get ahead — kill." There were no incidents, however, and the ball went ahead as planned, highlighted by the crowning of Linda Bainbridge, A4, Cedar Rapids, as Military Ball Queen by the University ROTC cadets.

Military Queen

Linda Bainbridge, A4, Iowa City, was chosen Saturday night as Military Ball Queen by the University ROTC cadets.

Long Walk Down the Aisle for ROTC Cadets

ROTC cadets and their dates arriving at the annual Military Ball in the Union Saturday had to make their way through an aisle of demonstrators holding signs protesting the ROTC program at the University. It was the first of two demonstrations aimed at ousting ROTC from the campus in as many days — the second being held Monday afternoon on the east steps of Old Capitol.

Iowa Senate OKs Drugs Unit Transfer

DES MOINES — Hoping to escalate the war on illegal drug use, the Iowa Senate Monday approved a bill giving narcotics and drug law enforcement duties to the state Bureau of Criminal Investigation.

The measure, passed on a 50 to 8 vote over the objections of the State Board of Pharmacy, now goes to the House.

The pharmacy board, which has had drug law enforcement responsibilities since the 1930s, would retain its regulatory authority over legal sale of narcotics and dangerous drugs.

Sen. Lee Gaudinier (D-Des Moines) said misuse of drugs has become such a large criminal problem in Iowa that an agency specializing in criminal investigation should tackle it.

(Marion Neeley, Iowa City police judge, said Monday that he was extremely gratified that the members of the Senate not only recognized the narcotics problem, but were willing to take the steps necessary to correct it.

(Neeley testified in February before the Senate Committee on State Government in support of the transfer. He said the State Bureau of Criminal Investigation was the best law enforcement agency in the state and would be able to coordinate all the other law enforcement bodies under the Department of Public Safety.

(He said he hoped the House would also take quick action "in this most important step in gaining effective enforcement of narcotic drug abuse laws in this state.)

2 Youths Injured In Auto Accident

A one-car accident early Sunday morning on American Legion Road resulted in the serious injury of a Solon youth.

Listed in critical condition at General Hospital Monday night was William F. Irving, 18, who suffered a head injury. A second youth, Marshall Collins, 19, of West Branch, a passenger in Irving's car, was listed in fair condition with a broken arm and lacerations.

The Iowa Highway Patrol said that the Irving car went out of control while traveling at a high rate of speed, went 342 feet, rolled over several times and landed in the middle of the road on its top.

Irving was found unconscious after he was thrown 50 feet from his car. Collins was pinned in the wreckage.

Why does a perfect size 7 look perfect only 21 days every month?

It has nothing to do with calories. It's a special female weight gain... caused by temporary water-weight build-up. Oh, you know... that uncomfortable full feeling that sneaks up on you the week before your menstrual period. This fluid retention not only plays havoc with your looks but how you feel as well. (It puts pressure on delicate nerves and tissues, which can lead to pre-menstrual cramps and headaches, leaves emotions on edge.)

That's why so many women take PAMPRIN®. It gently relieves water-weight gain to help prevent pre-menstrual puffiness, tension, and pressure-caused cramps.

PAMPRIN makes sure a perfect size 7 never looks less than perfect. Nor feels less than perfect, either.

Rain Halts Monsanto Open; Play May Continue Today

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP)—Play in the final round of the $100,000 Monsanto Open Golf Tournament was postponed Monday for the second straight day as a driving rain continued to drench the Pensacola Country Club course.

The final 18 holes, first postponed Sunday, will be played today — weather permitting. The weatherman, who had predicted "occasional rain" Monday for the Pensacola area, forecast "heavy rain" for early today.

Monday's round was suspended for two hours, minutes before leader Jim Colbert was scheduled to tee off, and then postponed.

If the course is still unplayable today, 75 per cent of the purse will be divided among the 71 players, with Colbert winning $15,000 and Deane Beman, one stroke back, winning $10,800.

The pro-amateur preceding the Greater Jacksonville Open starts on Wednesday.

Colbert, a former life insurance agent and Kansas State freshman quarterback who has been on the golf tour four years, had a 54-hole total Saturday of 13-under-par 200 with rounds of 69-67-64 over the par 71 layout. Beman, another former insurance man, had a three round total of 201.

Two strokes back at 202 was U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino. Bracketed at 203 were South Africa's Gary Player, in his first U.S. start this year, and 1963 rookie-of-the-year Ray Floyd. Perennial runnerup Tommy Aaron and two-time NCAA champion Dick Crawford were next at 204.

Defending champion George Archer was well back in the pack with 212.

Frazier Takes 5th In NCAA Tourney

Carl Frazier earned a fifth place in the 600-yard dash at Saturday's NCAA indoor track championships in Detroit. He was the only Hawk runner entered.

Frazier's time was 1:11.1 in the event which was won by Michigan State's Bill Wehrwin.

The Iowa trackmen will not be in action again until the annual spring trip to Arizona in two weeks.

Johnson Selected Iowa's MVP; Vidnovic Gets 'Honorary' Captain

MONTICELLO — John Johnson was named the most valuable player on Iowa's basketball team at the annual banquet honoring the Hawkeyes here Monday night.

Glenn Vidnovic, a 6-5 junior from McKeesport, Pa., was named Iowa's honorary captain at the banquet.

The 6-7 Johnson, a junior forward from Milwaukee, averaged 19.7 points to lead Iowa in scoring and was tops in rebounding with 256. Johnson's 46 point output against Wisconsin Milwaukee set a single-game scoring record for the Hawkeyes. He twice equaled the school one-game rebounding record of 23.

The top scorer in 10 of Iowa's 24 games, Johnson was named to the third all-Big 10 team by United Press International and was given honorable mention by the Associated Press. He averaged 18.2 points in 14 conference games.

Johnson is now eligible to win the silver basketball awarded by the Chicago Tribune each year to the most valuable player in the Big 10. Iowa's Sam Williams won the honor last year.

The Hawkeye star is the third Johnson to be nominated for the Tribune award. The two others are Ken Johnson of Indiana and James Johnson of Wisconsin.

Others already nominated by their schools are Dave Scholz of Illinois, Lee Lafayette of Michigan State, Al Nuness of Minnesota, Don Adams of Northwestern and Dave Sorenson of Ohio State. Purdue and Michigan have not yet named its nominations.

Vidnovic was the Hawkeyes' No. 2 scorer with a 15.7 average and established a Big 10 free-throw record by hitting 34 in a row. He set an Iowa record by making 13 without a miss against Purdue.

O.J. Hopes Bills Trade Him If Contract Is Unacceptable

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—The next round in contract talks between O. J. Simpson and the Buffalo Bills is scheduled late this week, after pro football's meeting at Palm Springs, Calif., breaks up.

"If we can't agree, I hope they trade me," the Southern California All-America and Heisman Trophy winner said Monday at a news conference.

Then he mentioned other possibilities, such as playing pro football in Canada or going to court to challenge the constitutionality of pro football's draft system which gave Buffalo of the American Football League draft rights to him.

Chuck Barnes of Indianapolis, president of Sports Headlines, Inc., which is handling Simpson's dealings with Buffalo, said, "We hope we don't have to go to court. We don't anticipate doing it."

"We feel Buffalo could make enough off of O. J. in this fall's exhibition season to take care of him for the next four years."

Barnes noted that Buffalo is scheduled to play the Los Angeles Rams in the Los Angeles Coliseum Sept. 6.

"I think it's safe to say that with Buffalo's 1-12-1 record last season, the game wouldn't be a sellout without O. J. . . . they might draw 30,000 people. With O. J. playing, it would probably draw 70,000," Barnes added.

Coin Toss Planned for Alcindor Draft

NEW YORK (AP)—The long-awaited coin-tossing ceremony deciding which National Basketball Association team will have the right to draft UCLA All-America Lew Alcindor will be held Wednesday, it was announced Monday.

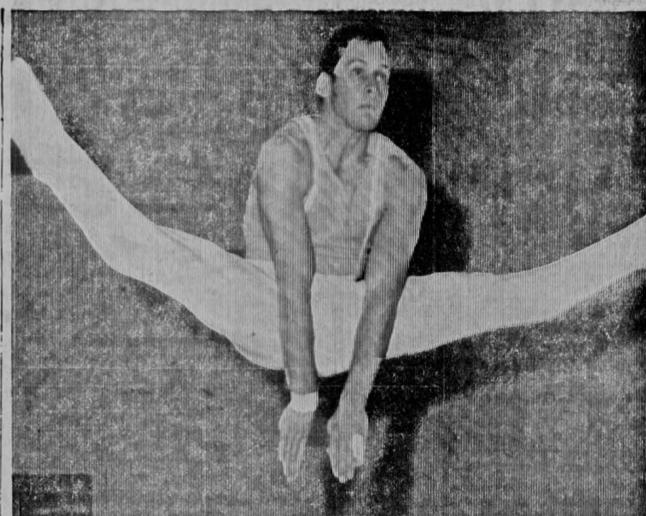

The toss for the No. 1 selection in the annual NEA draft in May will take place in the office of Walter Kennedy, the NBA commissioner.

The toss will be between the teams finishing in last place in the circuit's two divisions, currently Milwaukee in the East and Phoenix in the West.

The toss will be held at 11 a.m., EST.

Alcindor, the most sought after college player in many years, had been reported drafted by the New York Nets in a secret draft by American Basketball Association teams. This was denied by both the league and the Nets.

SOPHOMORE STAR BARRY SLOTTEN Brother Stirred His Interest in Gymnastics

Barry Slotten Hopes to Help Hawks to Big 10 Gym Title

By TIM BROSS
Gymnastics is beginning to grow on Barry Slotten, fortunately for Iowa's gymnastics team.

Slotten, a sophomore performer for Iowa in the floor exercise, trampoline and long horse, said that baseball was his first love, but that he was rapidly becoming attached to the gym sport.

Iowa gymnastics Coach Mike Jacobson rates Slotten as potentially one of the top gymnasts in the Big 10.

"He is one of the top four vaulters (long horse) in the Big 10 right now," said Jacobson. "If he put his mind to it, he could become a really great all-around man."

Slotten won the vaulting event against an unbeaten Michigan team two weeks ago and will be shooting for a Big 10 title at the Big 10 championships in Ann Arbor, Mich., beginning Thursday. Slotten won three Illinois high school state titles while at Niles East High School in Skokie, Ill. The school has been especially kind to Iowa's gym team. Niles East graduates who have performed for Iowa include Barry's brother Marc, a Big 10 champion last year in the side horse; Marc and Arnie Lazar; Ken Gordon, and Ike Heller.

Slotten said his interest in gymnastics was aroused when his brother Marc began competing in high school.

"Marc and I were very close and when he would start something, I'd get interested and take it up also," said Barry.

Barry began doing some tumbling on his own while in grade school and began the trampoline as a freshman in high school.

Slotten credits Dale Hardt, a former gymnast at Niles East and Southern Illinois, for keeping him working in the trampoline.

"He really pushed me," said Slotten, "and I really like the event now. I look at it as a challenge."

He would have to like it. While working on the trampoline, he said, he has suffered several broken bones and a concussion.

The trampoline event has been eliminated from NCAA competition and will probably be discarded by the Big 10 after this year because it is so dangerous, according to Jacobson.

Slotten said he doubted if the event would be abolished from dual meets, however, and would probably be used independent of the regular meet. Slotten became an all-around performer when he was a junior in high school and said he would begin working on the all-around again after this season is over.

As a junior, Slotten won the state tumbling title, and, as a senior, took both tumbling and the trampoline titles.

Slotten was influenced to come to Iowa instead of other schools mostly because of his brother.

"I had been thinking about Iowa all along through high school since Marc liked it," said Slotten, "but I got quite a few scholarship offers and had to reconsider. I decided on Iowa because it had a winning team and was fairly close to home. It also has a good business school."

Slotten is confident of the Hawkeyes' chances in the Big 10 championships.

"I'm positive we'll win the NCAA tournament berth," said Slotten. "The Big 10 title is another story; if we hit, we'll win it."

The Big 10 entrant in the NCAA tournament will be decided at a separate meet Friday night. Only the six NCAA events will be used.

Early-Bird Golfers Urged to Bypass Finkbine Courses

Iowa's Athletic Department has a request: Please stay off Finkbine Golf Course.

Warm weather has caused several people to rush the season before the course officially opens.

"Finkbine is not yet ready for play," said club pro Chuck Zwiener. "The frost is not yet out of the ground and a lot of damage can be done by playing a course too early. We are asking people to cooperate by staying off until we officially open."

Campus Security officers have had to escort some early birds off Finkbine. Zwiener said the "no play" rule is being strictly enforced.

The course is believed to be open tentatively on April 1.

Esposito Leads Scoring

NEW YORK (AP)—Phil Esposito of Boston has increased his lead to 20 points over runnerup Bobby Hull of Chicago in the National Hockey League scoring race with only two weeks remaining in the regular season.

Statistics through Sunday's games show Esposito, who broke the NHL record of 97 points on March 1, with 118 points on 44 goals and 74 assists.

'Odd Couple'—Better Than the Marx Brothers

"The Odd Couple," Iowa City Community Theatre's latest offering, debuted what may have been one of the best comedy teams since the Marx Brothers! Mace Braverman, as divorcee-bachelor Oscar Madison, and his cousin Kent Braverman, who played divorcee-to-be Felix Unger, kept up a fast comic pace in a clever but typically "Broadway" script.

Backed by a highly competent cast, Mace and Kent displayed a fine sense of comedy. Exchanges of jibes and judgments of each other were polished to a fine point.

Mace, as the happy "slab" of the couple, delivered a most marvelous awed expression at each compulsively neat task his "mate" undertook. Kent, as the somewhat immaculate Felix, struck just the right balance between a mincing, shrinking violet and the delightfully idiosyncratic man.

Like all light comedy that seems to dominate Broadway these days, "The Odd Couple" relied on what might be pegged as the best T.V. situational writing. But the lines were the best of the often tedious kind of comedy show put together to fill a season on T.V. The Community Theatre, seeking a balance of challenging drama and theatre with a high entertainment value, chose well with "The Odd Couple."

In a play as tenuously constructed as Simon's the burden is, of course, on the abilities of the actors to carry the comedy. Along with the Braverman team, Chuck Thayer (Speed) puffed a tough cigar, Thayer played off against Steve Myers (Roy), another of the poker players, who performed his own bag of tricks with equal competence.

But "high cards" at the poker table were Chris Fazel (Vinnie) and Don Levy (Murray) who developed their characters perfectly. Vinnie's hesitant, seemingly hen-pecked manners balanced against Murray-the-cop's soft-hearted, "straight" concerns were second only to the Braverman's for the laughter they provoked.

Rounding out the cast were Carol Fielding and Mary Fowler as the "coo-coo" Pigeon sisters. If they weren't perfectly British in their accents, they were perfect "pigeons" in their actions. The scene with Felix, in which they show their full "compassion" was a treat to watch.

Director Edward Sostek and his hard working technical crew deserve applause for the smooth and thoroughly enjoyable job they did.

The I.C.C.T.'s next presentation will be "Luv" directed by Gael Hammer. As this review is running after "The Odd Couple" has passed, we can only recommend, for the precedents set by past performances, that those seeking the excitement of good live drama get their tickets early for what should be another fine production.

—D. B. Axelrod

Mai Kontri Ty Op Ti Start'um Thursday

The premier performance of "Mai Kontri Ty Op Ti," a new play by former University student Karl A. Tunberg, will be presented Mar. 20, 22 and 24-29 at 8 p.m. in the University Theatre.

Tickets are available at the University Box Office for $2. Student tickets are free on presentation of identification cards.

Tunberg's play is being directed by Kenneth Cameron, associate professor of dramatic art. The plot of the play is based on a 1954 H-bomb test in which the United States Air Force missed its planned target. The resulting blast caused the islanders of Rongelap Atoll to receive heavy doses of radioactive fallout.

During the next 10 years the Rongelapese were treated and observed by U.S. medical survey teams. On Aug. 22, 1964, the U. S. Congress voted to pay the Rongelapese approximately one million dollars in damages for the 1954 mistake. Tunberg uses these facts to create fiction dealing with the themes of dollar diplomacy and U.S. political paternalism.

Tunberg earned his B.A. degree from Brown University, Providence, R.I. After three years in the armed service, he earned his M.A. Degree from San Francisco State College and then came to the U of I on a music Corporation of America Playwriting Fellowship in 1966. He now teaches English and drama at Central State University, Wilberforce, Ohio, and is working toward a Ph.D. Degree in drama from the U of I.

Another of Tunberg's plays, "Hang by Their Shoelaces," was presented by the Studio Theatre in December, 1968.

'Refocus,' Film Festival, Ready-to-Go Monday

"Refocus," the University's nationally-known annual film festival, will bring about 350 still photographs and 30 films here, two of which will be shown for the first time.

Two lectures on photographic techniques will also be included in the fifth annual film and photographic festival, scheduled for March 24-29.

Norman Mailer's "Beyond the Law" and the 1968 National Student Association Award Winning Student Films will have premier showings. Among the prize-winning films is "Cut," made by Cris Parker, G. Cave Creek, Ariz.

Dave Dawson, A4, Des Moines, Union Board Films Director and chairman of Refocus, said the film festival would attempt to inculcate photography into the area of art and to make students more aware and appreciative of photography.

Allen Rostoker, G, Iowa City, film critic for The Daily Iowan, said it would be "by far the best Refocus the University has ever had. It will give students some idea of the richness of films and emphasize the more experimental and harder-to-see films."

Dawson described the speakers as "avant-garde." Wynn Bullock, contemporary photographer, will speak on "Photographic Communication" on March 27. Stan VanDerBeek, experimental film maker, will speak on modern cinematography on March 29. Both will speak at 8 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

Rostoker said Bullock stressed abstract forms on photography, applying more direct use of light. He said he was "one of the best still photographers in America." Bullock developed the process of solarization and found means to control scientifically the line effect in photography.

VanDerBeek is involved with animation and simultaneous images. He invented a domed theater in which several projectors cover the entire wall surface with pictures.

A program of experimental visual forms with slides and video tape will be held March 29 at 1:30 p.m. in the New Ballroom.

Rostoker, who will preview the films for The Daily Iowan, recommended Ingmar Bergman's "Persona," Kenneth Anger's "Magick Lantern Cycle," and Andy Warhol's "My Hustler," which he described as "brutally frank." Films by Bruce Conner and Norman Mailer will also be shown.

in the groove

Rheta Hughes' "Re-Light My Fire"/Tetragrammaton T-111 Rheta Hughes is a black volcanic beauty who occasionally erupts, but, more often than not, the ashes are cool. Her plea, "Light My Fire," is both appropriate and well-delivered, but Feliciano and the Doors swung better.

The pitch for this album is that it took Rheta 8 years to work up the 32 minutes of sounds presented therein. There is certainly not 8 years of selectivity on this album.

The dynamic Rheta is handicapped by her material, most of it supplied by J. Armstead. Songs like "Cry Myself to Sleep" and "Hip Old Lady on a Honda" (now released as a 45 that will probably sell a million) are atrocious. Do dig her renditions of "His Happiness," "Walk on By," and "Sooky" (a knock-out).

The album is Motownish and was, I must admit, a big hit at Elmira Gluckenstein's party.

"This is Howlin Wolf's new album. He doesn't like it. He didn't like his electric guitar at first either." Cadet-Concept LPS-319

To quote Wolf, "the electric guitar has queer sounds." Of course, he's come to dig those queer sounds, but the avalanche of queer sounds on this album, horns as well as guitars, threatens to deposit him somewhere at the base of the mountain.

One easily imagines some pretty sharp consumer-minded executives at Cadet-Concept pushing reluctant artists like Wolf and Muddy Waters into the mainstream, white-oriented album covers (the new packaging is beautiful but somehow reminds me of radicals who get haircuts in the hope of more easily selling their ideas to the "straight" people who aren't tuned in), and maybe they even read McLuhan to them when they tucked them in at night — "the electric drama. It lives mythically and in depth" (from "The Medium is the Massage").

But don't kid yourself; Wolf is like the past-purveyor princess saying "no" all the way to the bedroom. He's loving every minute of it. He might regret the heavy, experimental instrumentation's encroachment on his spotlight, but he must surely be grateful for the tremendous backing he's getting (Morris Jennings, Phil Upchurch, Pete Casey, Gene Barge to name a few; Don Myric's electric flute gives an almost Arabic background to "Smokestack Lightnin'." Greatly weird and weirdly great).

As a blues fan I've grown awfully tired of uninspired renditions of the classics — "Spoonful," "Smokestack Lightnin'," "Little Red Rooster," and "Back Door Man," — but Wolf and a plugged-in company have revitalized these and others. Play this one full blast to fully appreciate the intricacies and subtleties of the backing, the really new feature on this beautiful album (Wolf is already established as a fine vocalist and harpist; my praise for him is understood).

If you like the album, take one backwards step and pick up on "THE SUPER SUPER BLUES BAND" (LPS 3010) Howlin Wolf, Muddy Waters, and Bo Diddley), the album I think this one (and "ELECTRIC MUD") grew out of.

"The things that's going on today is not the blues" — Howlin Wolf.

"Eddie Gale's Ghetto Music" / Blue Note BST-84294 Originally conceived as a stage production, "GHETTO MUSIC" is a strange and moving concoction of Negro Spiritual, Africa (of the Makeba variety), Jazz, and what Father Groppi would call "good Christian anger."

"GHETTO MUSIC" is high art, instrumental opera, in that it doesn't require the verbal props that set scenes and make intention as lucid as split beans; instead, Gale's compositions evoke the emotion itself and seem to suggest visual symbols for that emotion (for me they suggest the stage, particularly modern interpretive dance). Gale heads a 6-piece band and 11-piece chorus. The chorus is employed as an instrument (vocalesse); it suggests rather than states. Only one song has lyrics, and these lyrics are never forced to carry too heavy a burden.

"GHETTO MUSIC" is, however, no "WEST SIDE STORY," telling a tale that could be set anywhere, anytime. "GHETTO MUSIC" is black — with chants, with dirges, with African frenzies. The title, which may seem presumptuous to some, merely provides a context for this black emotion.

The album has only five songs, each a separate movement in an organic whole. The album begins with a sense of dread anticipation that "The Rain" will never stop. It moves through excitement, sorrow, pride, and ends with a sense of welcome anticipation of "The Coming of Gwili." Eddie's son, Gwili, surely a symbol of hope, comes straight from Africa (as evoked by bird whistle, lute, and chant). This album is a major contribution to that movement which would restore a racial identity that white society has smothered for three long centuries. And hey, Eddie plays a mean trumpet!

The last half of the final act of this opera was only sketched when Giacomo Puccini died in 1924, but his friend Franco Alfano finished it for him. At its world premiere in 1926 conductor Arturo Toscanini insisted on ending with Puccini's last notes, whereupon he turned to the audience and said "Here the maestro laid down his pen." Since that time, though, the Alfano ending has been used, as it will be in this broadcast from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.
