Pakistani Reins Taken by Army

KARACHI (AP) — President Mohammed Ayub Khan, wearied by four months of rising violence, resigned Tuesday night and turned over the government of this nation of 120 million to the military.

Gen. Yahya Khan, the army's commander in chief, was appointed chief martial law administrator and supreme commander of Pakistan's armed forces.

A student-sparked political uprising that started last fall led Ayub, a retired army field marshal, to step out even before the end of his term in January 1970, when he had pledged that he would not seek reelection. He is 61.

A barrel-chested six-footer of dash and flair, he had run Pakistan since seizing power in a military coup in October 1958 "to bring the country back to sanity." Even critics conceded there had been benefits under his stern but largely benign rule. U.S. military and economic aid totaling more than $4 billion helped.

Ayub Khan announced his withdrawal in a nationwide broadcast. Martial law promptly announced by the government-run Radio Pakistan banned all strikes, demonstrations and political meetings and directed there be no criticism of martial law or the martial law regime in the press.

The orders also provided for setting up of military courts.

Yahya appointed Marshal Noor Khan, commander in chief of the air force; Rear Adm. Asam Ahsan, chief of the navy; and Gen. Abdul Hamid Khan, chief of staff, as deputy martial law administrators.

Ayub declared: "This is the last time that I am addressing you as president of Pakistan. The situation in the country is fast deteriorating. Administrative institutions are being paralyzed. . . Persons who had come forward to serve the country have been intimidated into following mobs."

"The economy of the country has been crippled, factories are closing down and production is dwindling every day," Ayub said.

As part of the martial law, the constitution was abolished and the National Assembly dissolved.

Ayub said he had done his best to settle differences between opposition groups, but "I'm sorry to say that the law and order situation could not be improved."

Nixon Helps Launch Cancer Crusade

Nine-year-old Dvana Butler of East Point, Ga., and actress Virginia Graham Tuesday presented President Nixon with the "Sword of Hope" at the White House to help launch the American Cancer Society's 1969 crusade. Dvana has undergone surgery and radiation treatment to cure cancer discovered when she was one-year-old. Miss Graham is chairman of this year's Cancer Society crusade, which uses the "Sword of Hope" as its symbol.

Dooley Says Aid On Traffic Study Not for Action '69

John Dooley, director of parking, denied Tuesday night any connection with Action Party '69.

Phil Dantes, Action Party presidential candidate, said Thursday that Dooley had offered financial backing to Action Party for a proposed traffic study.

According to Dooley, the traffic study in question is being conducted by a University student in connection with an independent study project in economics.

"If he's giving the study to Action Party, that's secondary," Dooley said.

John Boyd, A4, Boone, is conducting the study. He is using about 90 members of the Action Party to distribute questionnaires to students on campus. He told The Daily Iowan Tuesday he is conducting the project, which deals with student parking problems, traffic flow and cost, for three hours of independent credit.

Dooley and Boyd stressed that Dooley's office is not providing financial backing for the study. According to Dooley, questionnaires to faculty and staff members will be mailed by Dooley's office through the University's campus mail system.

Dooley also said that his office will assist Boyd if he requires information for his study that is considered classified.

"Dooley is helping me out of necessity, not because he wants to," Boyd said.

Boyd added that some information he needed for his study could only be obtained from Dooley's office.

Boyd said that Dantes had apparently misunderstood the study's operations.

The results, however, will be given to the Action Party, so there is an indirect connection between the study and the Action Party, Boyd said.

Nixon, Trudeau Finish 2 Days' 'Cordial' Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau wound up two days of talks Tuesday in an air of cordiality but with no clue to what Canada will do about the new U.S. antiballistic missile (ABM) plan.

"All I can do now under Canada's parliamentary system is go back to my Cabinet colleagues and report the new information received," Trudeau said of the antiballistic missile question.

He said a full assessment will be made on the implications for Canada of Nixon's go-ahead on the ABM system.

Some Canadian critics contend the proposed ABM sites in Montana and North Dakota would involve potential violation of Canadian airspace and nuclear fallout over Canada. Some see the deployment of the system as an unwarranted escalation of the East-West arms race.

Some supporters of Nixon's action, on the other hand, want Canada to join in the new missile defense system.

Nixon and Trudeau, meeting with newsmen in the White House Rose Garden after talks on a number of U.S.-Canadian topics, agreed on the value of their first get-together as government heads.

"This is a new era of cooperation and consultation," Nixon said, adding that he had accepted a Trudeau invitation to visit Canada. The Canadian chief was the first foreign government head invited for an official Washington visit by the new President.

The debonair Trudeau, peering at the sun breaking through clouds, said it was "a symbol of the kind of warm relationship we will have."

The government leaders announced two further meetings will be held by their aides in coming weeks on specific subjects:

Senior U.S. and Canadian officials are to meet April 2 on oil and other energy questions. With new oil finds, the Canadians want to expand their exports to the western part of the United States.

Cabinet members of the two countries will gather in Washington June 26 and 27 to discuss a broad range of economic and financial questions of common concern.

Trudeau, a 49-year-old bachelor, charmed the U.S. capital with his wit and dashing air and joked at a National Press Club luncheon that his reputation as a "swinger" was becoming "more and more difficult to live up to."

Sutton Plan Eloquent, Possibly Impossible

By DON NICHOLS
A DI News Analysis

"A set of eloquent impossibilities," is the definition of a political platform as given by Jim Sutton, independent candidate for student body president, and his running mate, Jim Dougherty.

Sutton and Dougherty have issued a "A Program for Student Government," their statement of the policies they would implement as president and vice president. Despite their insistence that they are presenting a "program" as opposed to a "platform," Sutton and Dougherty are in danger of being trampled by their own definition.

One of the big points of this program is co-operative student housing, constructed, owned and managed by students.

Sutton and Dougherty cited a national conference on cooperative student housing held last October which pointed out the availability of federal funds for such housing. Low-interest loans are available through the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), according to Sutton and Dougherty.

There are several problems with this proposal. First, in order to apply for a HUD loan, a group must be incorporated for two years prior to requesting the loan. The group requesting the loan must also prove it did not incorporate simply to apply for a HUD grant.

While Sutton and Dougherty refer to student government as having existed at Iowa for 30 years, incorporation has only recently been discussed and is not yet a reality for University student government.

The Nixon administration announced recently that federal funds to housing programs would be cut by 33 per cent in the next year.

As Sutton and Dougherty pointed out in their program, HUD loans are based upon need, not convenience.

Sutton and Dougherty break the need for a HUD loan down into three categories: 1. Married students need cooperative housing because urban renewal, they said, would eliminate 100 units of married student housing. 2. Greeks need cooperative housing because an expansion-minded University is going to usurp land currently occupied by fraternity and sororities. 3. Dormitory residents want cooperative housing because dormitories do not contribute to self-reliance and maturity.

Urban renewal proposals for Iowa City were defeated in a move by the Iowa Supreme Court last week.

Urban renewal is concerned with downtown Iowa City and the area between Capitol and Clinton streets, the institutional area east of Linn Street and the commercial area between Court and Burlington streets. Although some married students live in the renewal area, University married student housing is not affected by urban renewal. Sutton and Dougherty point out that the barracks, current University married student housing, are scheduled for demolition by 1970.

To prove the need for cooperative housing for Greeks, Sutton and Dougherty say planned University expansion will take over the area now occupied by fraternities and sororities. A model for proposed expansion is on display in the Union. According to the model, the University will be expanding along the Iowa River north and south of the current campus area. Recent expansion has been between Jefferson and Iowa streets in the area of the Physics Research Center.

Most fraternities are located on Ellis Street on a hill west of the Art Building. Some fraternities are located on North Dubuque Street near City Park. Most sororities are located on East College Street and nearby areas in the 700 and 900 blocks east. Four Greek housing units are in the 200 block of North Clinton Street across from the women's dormitories. University expansion would affect these housing units only after expansion has been carried out along the river.

The point about dormitories not being conducive to maturity is backed up by a University Housing Committee report of August 1967. But to solve the problem of the dormitories, Sutton and Dougherty suggest a village cluster of "Fullerdomes" which would be "constructed on student-owned land outside Iowa City or at Lake Macbride.

Lake Macbride is 20 miles north of Iowa City.

Action Party's Accent On Study, Not Action

By STEVE KOCH
A DI News Analysis

The Action Party '69 platform is made vague by the accent that presidential candidate Phil Dantes and vice presidential candidate Mark Stodola have placed on in-depth research.

Throughout their campaign, Dantes, and Stodola have stressed the need for basic research before any action correcting the problems of student living and government is taken.

Dantes and Stodola stress, for example, "greater use of The Daily Iowan and other mass media," but do not spell out what they mean by "greater use."

Dantes says he will work to legitimize the student body in the eyes of the Iowa public, again little more than a vague statement of intent.

Dantes speaks also of improving relations with Iowa City and enforcing regulations for health and safety standards. The question to ask is "Why has this not been done before?" In fact, the attempt has been made, but has been ineffective.

The support of opening parking lots adjacent to the dormitories is an old proposal brought out annually. Dantes cites the need for the lots but fails to offer a program for this case.

The question of University financial aid to troubled Greek houses is another issue where the solution proposed by the Action Party seems to be blanket. No rationale is offered as to why the student body or the taxpayers should support private social institutions.

Dantes and Stodola favor a clearer delineation of student judicial jurisdiction and support reform proposals for the system.

This doesn't answer crucial questions about what the authority of student judicial procedures should be in relation to administration authority. It leaves the basic problem unsolved.

The proposal for expansion of the dorm-

Thieu Asks NLF To Meet Secretly

SAIGON (AP) — In his most conciliatory statement since the Paris peace talks began, President Nguyen Van Thieu said Tuesday he is prepared to open direct, secret negotiations with the National Liberation Front (NLF).

In a news conference that touched on several major aspects of the Vietnam situation, Thieu also said:

• Resumption of bombing of North Vietnam would not be proper now.

• He remains opposed to a coalition government for South Vietnam.

• With the enemy offensive continuing, this is not the time to talk about withdrawing any of the 540,500 American troops now in his country.

Thieu said the offer to talk with the NLF, which is a reversal of his previous position, had been delivered to the front's delegation in Paris. He said he expects a hopeful response. However, a representative of the front in Paris declined to comment on Thieu's remarks.

Thieu's previous refusal to negotiate directly with the front delayed for months the opening of the expanded peace talks with the United States and South Vietnam on one side of the table and North Vietnam and the NLF on the other.

The first hint of a possible change in the South Vietnamese government's stand came on Jan. 27 when Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky said in Paris his delegation was ready to meet privately with the other side to discuss peace. But he avoided saying the talks would be with the NLF.

Thieu indicated the extent of the switch by saying he posed no conditions for the direct talks and preliminary arrangements.

The president disclosed the new willingness to talk with the front when asked about reports that private talks had already taken place in Paris.

"I can't say they have started," Thieu replied, "but we are working on it and we are hopeful."

"We are ready to have private talks with the National Liberation Front if they like. There are many things we cannot discuss quite frankly in private."

Asked what he could offer the front in secret talks in Paris, Thieu replied: "I can't tell you right now what we might offer them. It all depends on their attitude at the talks."

U.S. officials in Washington, pleased by Thieu's attitude, said they had been informed of the South Vietnamese stand some time ago.

The Thieu statements came as President Nixon continued a review of Vietnam policy in Washington. They were interpreted in Saigon as a move to help the U.S. President in his efforts to maintain public support.

Turner Hits Pterodactyl

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa Atty. Gen. Richard Turner testified in federal court here Tuesday that an "underground" newspaper confiscated by state agents at Wilton Junction was "mere trash" and that he was "surprised" to find his name mentioned in it.

Turner testified the material was "voluntarily surrendered" to state agents by the printer.

The testimony was taken in a preliminary hearing in which two representatives of the "Pterodactyl" are seeking $11,000 damages for what they claim was an "illegal seizure" of their newspaper.

The "Pterodactyl" is circulated around the Grinnell College campus in Grinnell.

Henry Williams, identified as a staff photographer for the paper, testified the confiscated issue contained pictures of a recent nude demonstration on the Grinnell campus, and several "light satire" articles about how Turner's office handled an investigation of the demonstration.

"I don't think it had any news in it," Turner testified. "There is no intrinsic value in any copies I've seen of this trash."

Wilhelm, 25, and Lawrence Frank, 20, a Grinnell College student, have asked the court to issue an injunction requiring Turner to return the material confiscated.

Their attorney, Clark Holmes of Des Moines, contends the material was confiscated without a warrant and without first determining that the material was obscene.

Harold Eugene Saylor, president of the publishing company where the material was confiscated March 13, testified state agents talked to him about 10 days before the incident.

Turner said Saylor's attorney, John Stephens, called him and made an offer to turn the material over to authorities.

"Each issue of the paper was getting progressively worse and I figured the next issue would be the belligerent of them all," Turner said. "I initiated this action after conferring with attorney Stephens."

"It wasn't a seizure, no question about it. The material was delivered to us voluntarily by the printer," Turner said.

ALSO IN THE NEWS LAST NIGHT:
WASHINGTON — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's doctors reported that his condition continues to be critical although he has "shown no deterioration in the last 24 hours." It was a mixed grim and optimistic outlook, similar to their report earlier in the day. The doctors reported that, for the first time, that they were uncertain whether Eisenhower will survive his latest heart problems, but then recalled that in past illnesses he has shown "remarkable recuperative power."

DES MOINES — The Iowa Senate voted down 37 to 20 an amendment to give 19-year-olds full rights and privileges of majority, but adjourned before taking action on giving them the vote. Opponents of the move to broaden the original voting measure to include the rights of marriage, drinking and entering contracts claimed it was an attempt to kill the entire measure.

LOS ANGELES — The state was granted a day's recess in Sirhan Bishara Sirhan's murder trial before launching its cross examination of the star defense psychiatric witness.

DES MOINES — A co-sponsor of a resolution calling for a study of sex education materials in Iowa schools said he will demand that the resolution be given a public hearing. "This is a matter that must be aired thoroughly," said Sen. William Denman (D-Des Moines).

GENEVA — Bilateral talks with the Soviet Union on limiting antimissile nuclear shields are not likely to start for several months, and then only if the political climate is right, the United States indicated.

CHICAGO — Emergency steps are being taken to safeguard people and property from floods that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says could swell into the worst in the history of the Midwest. Record snowfalls are expected to begin melting next week.

6 Candidates Snub Sutton's Backing

Six Action Party '69 senate candidates rejected late Tuesday night their endorsement by independent student body presidential candidate Jim Sutton.

Sutton, in an advertisement in today's Daily Iowan, listed seven Action Party candidates among those he called "men and women we can work with." Action Party vice presidential candidate Mark Stodola said Tuesday night he had left acceptance or rejection of the Sutton endorsement up to the seven candidates and that six of them had rejected it.

Joel Kovarsky, M1, Iowa City, was the only Action Party candidate to accept Sutton's endorsement.

Sutton also endorsed several independent senatorial candidates. Unlike the six Action Party candidates none of these announced rejection of the endorsement. Several independents contacted by the DI said they accepted the endorsement. Not all were available for comment, however.

Action Party candidates rejecting Sutton's endorsement were Dean Stoline, A2, Norwalk; Bill Swisher, A1, Atlantic; Dave Dierks, A3, Glenview, Ill.; Garnet Harris, A1, Atlantic; Joe Jurschak, A1, Portsmouth; and Marilee Rahe, A1S, Earlville.

Sutton, commenting on the candidates' rejection of his endorsement, said, "I think it's unfortunate that some people feel they can only work with one person to protect student interests. It raises the question in my mind as to whether they were ever interested in student interests more than mere political advantage."

Candidates contacted by the DI who accepted the endorsement were Roberta Wendrich, A3, Rock Island, Ill.; Carol Ehrlich, G, Iowa City; Jim Needles, A4, Atlantic; Dan Cambridge, A3, Atlantic; John Wunder, G, Dysart; Iris Jane Gross, A3, Skokie, Ill.; Michael G. Kullik, 12, Grafton; David Akerman, A4, Ottumwa; and David B. Shadt, G, Iowa City.

Get out and vote

A pathetically low number of students will probably turn out to vote in the all-campus elections today. Past voting records show that only about 25 percent of the students care enough to cast a vote for a new student government.

Student government this year has seen its low point. For the most part, Student Senate has been ineffective and divided on important issues.

The Daily Iowan staff urges all students to evaluate the candidates and vote today — not for what student government has been but for what it could be.

Each of the following editorials supports one of the two candidates for student body president. The opinions are not that of the staff but of the individuals signing the editorials.

Dantes

There are many ways to try to beat the system at the University. One is to complain about the problems and inactive student government, decide to cast off the political and social structures and start from scratch at reorganization. Another is to recognize the problem areas and then take bold and creative action to solve the problems without razing the political and social structure. The first approach results in chaos; the second results in effective action.

Phil Dantes believes that student government must be drastically changed if it is to survive. But he also believes that government can be changed only if changes are made within the framework of our present system. Dantes' operating maxim is that the most effective action will come from a practical and relevant approach to change.

Government, he believes, should work only where it can have its greatest effectiveness. Student government should not let itself be totally caught up in long-range plans and programs. Rather, student government can and must help solve student problems now.

Dantes' platform deals with current student problems. He offers solutions to those problems and can back up his suggestions with practical thinking and sound research. Some of his ideas for better student life include improving the dormitories, both as residential dwellings and social organizations; getting a better concert series for University students; and improving the pass-fail course structure we now have by increasing the number of pass-fail courses that can be taken and opening the pass-fail system to all students above the freshman level.

Dantes believes that if students do something the right way, they won't have to go to the administration for a yes or no answer — the administration will come to the students.

And if Dantes and his Action Party senators are elected, the University won't have to worry about a Student Senate filled with conflicts. Dantes and the Action candidates have started working together already. So vote for action, effectiveness and good student government — vote for Dantes.

— Cheryl Arvidson

Sutton

No matter who is elected student body president today, the face of student government will be changed. If Jim Sutton is elected, the change will be most noticeable and, in my opinion, most beneficial both to students and to the University as a whole.

Sutton's program calls for change which goes beyond the usual "chicken in every pot" rhetoric associated with student elections. As he says himself, "Of course I'll vote for beer in the dorms, better dorm rules, and decentralized student activities, who wouldn't?"

However, Sutton's program goes beyond this to such "revolutionary" things as student-owned cooperative bookstores and housing, and such minor things as reduced rates for herd books and lab books, and a method of determining whether "new edition" of text books are really new before ordering them to replace old ones.

People who oppose Sutton have said that his ideas are just rhetoric and are impractical. Their comments usually begin, "It would be nice, but it just can't work because of (check one) opposition from administration, opposition from businessmen, indifference from students . . . and on and on."

These arguments are a little sad, especially coming from University students in a University community. There is no reason Sutton's ideas can't work, if students support him, and students have every reason to support him, since they are the beneficiaries of his program. Maybe the program is idealistic, but since when is idealism a crime? Maybe the program goes beyond what students envision as their "legitimate concerns" but why not?

Sutton may drag students kicking and screaming out of the social events-grades-booze bag into the real world and it may hurt for a while. Reality can be hazardous to your ego. But in the long run it will be for the best. After all, it has to happen some time.

Sutton's program contains two things which have been sadly lacking in student governments I've observed: imagination and farsightedness. These qualities can make student government more productive and at least more interesting.

REFOCUS CINEMA—

A night in a New York police station

Refocus will present Norman Mailer's "Beyond the Law" today at 7 and 9 p.m. in the Union New Ballroom. The Mailer film shares with John Cassavetes' "Faces" the superficial similarities of hand-held cameras, available illumination and actual sound. While both films were made independently outside the motion picture industry and have a decidedly raw look, they are the results of quite different concerns and artistic sensibilities.

Mailer's film is a more improvisatory venture. There was no script as such and the cast are as much amateur performers as professionals. Mailer's aim was to have the film create itself as it happened, to become in his own terms, familiar to those who have read his novels and journalism, an existential experience.

"Beyond the Law" is however in no way formless. It concerns itself with one night in a New York police station and the lives of the men involved, both police and criminals. The chief focus is on lieutenant Francis Xavier Pope, the character not surprisingly played by Mailer himself. Pope embodies Mailer's quite complex ideas and feelings about the lure of corruption, men's relationship with evil, and the brotherhood of criminal and police. His film is concerned with the deeper relations between these people, relations that exist beyond the superficial divisions of the law.

The film immerses you almost immediately in the violent and tense world of the police station. The line-up, the confrontations of police and criminals in separate interrogation rooms, the sheer noise and sense of the place is admirably conveyed. In all of this Mailer's cameras stay pretty close to the desperation, fear and simply intensity of faces.

In the later parts of the film the drama opens up to include something of the private life of his main character and of two of his subordinates in the detective squad. The conversation of these two and their single-tracked concern with the sexual is used as a continual counterpoint to the domestic crisis of Lieutenant Pope and his wife. And the interplay of Pope and his wife reminds one continually of the encounters of police and criminals in the police station.

The film, then, is consistently forceful and suffers from a surprisingly small number of lapses into awkwardness and amateurishness. Some of the players seem slightly uncomfortable and Mailer himself alternates between half the time really being Pope and half the time doing his imitation of what he thinks Pope is like. Other performers, Rip Torn as a bearded hippie and Beverly Bentley as Mrs. Pope, especially, stand out, and the only scene that seems to me a complete failure is the visit of the Mayor. This scene is funny, but it is a joke out of key with the rest of the work.

This scene and occasional lines of dialogue are the only taints of indulgence in the film. This is not however to suggest that the film is totally successful. There is something too diffuse about the structure, one wishes there were more of a concerted focus at work. The jittery camerawork, while doing much to maintain the tone and excitement of the whole also does its share to obscure the drama and conflict of certain key scenes.

Mailer is of course a great talent. His novels "The Naked and the Dead," "Dear Park," "An American Dream," his essays and journalism, most particularly his two latest works, the brilliant "The Armies of the Night" and "Miami and the Siege of Chicago," have more than proven this. His work is characterized both by its seriousness of intention, its passionate intensity and physicality, its sensitivity to nuance. There is also Mailer's total command of American diction, his sense of the richness of its profanity. This vigor of language is very much present in "Beyond the Law."

Mailer's film then has both its uniqueness and its accomplishment to recommend it. That it is such a different kind of film from "Persona" is a further indication of Refocus' completely praise-worthy intent to demonstrate the diverse wealth of the modern cinema. "Beyond the Law" is a good film now, and promises more for the future.

'Ex-hawk' on war blasts Fulbright, Paris table talks

To the editor:

I have never written a letter or protested against anything except that I have made a lot of noise against the dirty, unwashed in our universities and Congress.

Senator Fulbright (Ark.) has, as far as I'm concerned, always given the President and especially the Secretary of Defense a hard time. I'm not trying to be a bigot but I think that he is a stupid ignorant man with whatever education he may have had. (He does not use any common sense whatsoever). In other words, I think he is a jerk.

I have never been a fan or partial to President Nixon or Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, but I think that they are a great team and I don't think that a jerk like Fulbright should be in a position to criticize them.

I used to be a so-called "hawk" on Vietnam but when the jerks from South Vietnam went to Paris and had to argue and bicker about the size, shape, etc. of the table and our guys were getting killed in their damn country, it bugged me.

Who am I to bitch about this? Nobody. I'm just guy who enlisted in the USMC when he was 16 in January, 1942, for 4 years. I went in the army in 1948 for 3 years and then went in the Air Force for a couple of more years and then tried to enlist during the Cuban crisis. I would have been glad to go to Vietnam until the table argument.

Fine teaching more important than money prize

To the editor:

The selection committee for the 1969 Excellence in Teaching Awards very much appreciates the cooperation of the DI in making known our desire to evoke wide student participation in the nomination of recipients. We do, however, take exception to the emphasis the DI placed on the monetary aspect of the awards.

We believe that the recognition of outstanding teaching should in no way be lost sight of in the granting of these awards. Recognition of fine teaching should be an honor in itself, with the awarding of money only a secondary, though pleasant accompaniment.

The Excellence in Teaching Awards offer a rare opportunity for students to express their deep appreciation to individuals fully committed to the most important, though sadly, perhaps the least prestigious, part of their careers in a large university.

In a university of this size, fine teaching is perhaps too often over-shadowed by the demands of research and writing. In making these Awards, we can contribute to recognition of the value of good teaching by focusing on teaching itself rather than on "Making Three professors $1,000 richer."

Reader suggests student-tenant unit

To the editor:

This is a suggestion for the organization of a Student-Tenant Union on the University campus.

A Student-Tenant Union would afford legal services for students involved in Landlord-Tenant suits, hopefully with the participation of the college of Law; it would provide a clearing house for rentals; it would act as an approving authority giving a seal of approval to those landlords meeting minimum housing standards.

Organizations of this sort have proved very successful on other campuses, notably the University of Wisconsin.

A farewell to poverty

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — My friend McAlister, the only poor person I know who will admit it, was very depressed the other day.

"I knew they'd get tired of us very fast."

"What do you mean, McAlister?" I asked him.

"Poverty is out. You don't hear people talking about it any more. This year's big thing in Congress is hunger."

"Well, you have to be realistic about this, McAlister. Congress can't be expected to stay with one problem very long. They've already had their hearings on poverty. They have to go to something else or the American people will lose interest."

"I guess you're right," said McAlister. "Don't get me wrong. I don't have anything against hunger. Some of my best friends are hungry. But I was hoping that they would at least solve the poverty problems before they went on to hunger."

"Your mistake, McAlister, if you don't mind my saying so, is that you don't understand the attention span of the American people. They can't stay with any subject too long. They gave poverty a fair shake. That's all we heard about for two years. That's plenty long enough. If you can't solve poverty in the United States in two years, then it's obviously unsolvable. Besides, it's not much fun to be reminded all the time that the United States has a poor people problem."

McAlister sighed. "I understand all that, and I was under no illusion that anyone could solve my problems. But it was all the attention I got that I miss. Do you know I was interviewed by four different foundations in one week? Reporters used to buy me drinks in exchange for me telling them what it was like to be poor. There were TV cameras all over the neighborhood. College kids from Vassar and Swarthmore moved in during the summer to pull us up by our bootstraps. It might not have done much good, but the excitement sure relieved the tedium of being poor."

"OK, McAlister. You people had your day. But we can't stay with poverty forever. It doesn't have any sex appeal. The more you talk about it, the madder people get. And if you try to do anything about it, then you're really stepping on people's toes. Now hunger is a different kettle of fish. All you have to do with hunger is give people food."

"Why didn't they do it in the past, if it were that simple?"

"Because Congress didn't know you could make hunger a political issue until this year. You've got to think of them too."

"There I go," said McAlister, "only thinking of myself."

I started to feel sorry for him. "McAlister, don't get discouraged. Poverty may make a comeback. Perhaps it won't be called poverty, but they'll call it something else."

"Maybe they could call it pro football," McAlister said. "Americans don't seem to lose interest in that."

"Let's not lose our perspective," I said angrily. "Pro football is not a joking matter."

Decision on Englert Delayed

The Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission decided Monday to delay its decision on the Englert tract until the City Council has received a report from the Parks and Recreation Commission, which is also interested in the land.

Developers have sought to have the 30-acre tract north of City Park zoned for apartment buildings, but residents of the surrounding area have requested that the tract be turned into open parkland. A group of adjacent property owners has gone so far as to offer to help the city buy the tract for parkland.

The Planning and Zoning Commission originally approved plans for development of the area as an apartment building complex. However, the City Council returned the matter to the commission pending an investigation of the tract as potential parkland. Since developers have since submitted several other plans for the Englert tract to the commission, commissioners decided Monday to continue to accept the plans but refrain from making a final decision on the matter until the Parks and Recreation Commission has completed its study and reported to the City Council.

City Manager Frank Smiley said he hoped that Parks and Recreation would submit its report some time prior to the beginning of summer vacations. In other action, Planning and Zoning decided to let the city's legal staff attempt to reach a settlement with businessmen seeking to build at the new Sycamore Mall Shopping Center, on the city's southeast side.

City ordinance requires that not more than two mortgages can exist in an area under development which is zoned commercial. According to William Mearson, attorney for the Sycamore Mall businessmen, several mortgages already exist on the land in question. Ultimately, a portion of the existing ordinance may be waived to permit development.

Student Given To Labor 18 Hours

A University student was sentenced to eighteen hours of labor at the Pine School for handicapped and mentally retarded children in Police Court Tuesday.

William D. Shepard, 21, Boxholm, was sentenced to complete the 18 hours of work within 30 days, after he pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny under $20.

Shepard and another University student, Dean C. Adams, 21, Park Forest, Ill., were arrested on March 19 and charged with taking two cartons of cigarettes from the Me Too Food Store at 26 S. Van Buren St.

Adams pleaded not guilty to the same charge. No date has been set for his hearing. Adams is free on $25 bond.

LEGAL AID PLAN OKD—DES MOINES (AP)—Counties could finance legal aid programs for indigents involved in civil suits under a bill filed in the Iowa House Tuesday by the Iowa Judiciary Committee. Approval of a county board of supervisors would be required before the legal aid program could go into effect.

Nobel Winner In Medicine To Talk Here

Professor George von Bekesy, winner of the 1961 Nobel Prize in medicine and physiology, will be a visiting lecturer Monday in the Departments of Otolaryngology and Maxillofacial Surgery, and Speech Pathology and Audiology.

Von Bekesy will present his major address on "Lateral Inhibition in Sense Organs" at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center. The lecture is open to the public.

The Nobel Prize was awarded to Von Bekesy, who now is associated with the Laboratory of Sensory Sciences at the University of Hawaii, for his discoveries concerning the physical mechanisms of excitation in the cochlea, or inner ear.

His present research is devoted principally to lateral inhibition of the sensory processes. He has found that many phenomena which were considered to be specific for hearing are present in a similar way in other sense organs, such as the skin, retina of the eye, and taste.

CORRECTION
The Daily Iowan incorrectly reported the name of one winner in the Folk Festival contest last weekend. Dave Gross, G. Wilmette, Ill., was one of the winners.

Your Vote 'Signs' a Contract—

The Way Senate Works

By DON NICHOLS
EDITOR'S NOTE — Since today is election day, the following is a description of what the senators you elect will be doing in the Student Senate for the next year.

Student government is a contract between the student body and those whom the voters have elected to govern. Every vote cast for a candidate is a "signature" affirming a contract. Candidates who have the most "signatures" are given the governing contract and assume duties and powers of their offices.

Students attending the University are members of the University of Iowa Student Association. When students vote, they establish a contract as association members with those who will represent the student association.

The president of the student body is the chief executive of the student association and its government. The president is ultimately responsible for the actions of student government.

The student body president makes weekly reports to the University of Iowa Student Association Senate — commonly called the Student Senate. The president does not, however, have veto power over the senate. Senate committees submit reports to the president, who may request additional committee action, but cannot reject committee reports.

The president is also chief publicist for student government. He is often called upon to explain senate actions to University officials and to discuss with them new courses of action for University affairs.

The vice president of the student body is the presiding officer of the Student Senate. He has few other stipulated functions. He is adviser to the president and does other jobs as the president directs him.

The University of Iowa Student Association Senate is the legislative arm of student government. The senate creates new legislation and is responsible for revising the Student Body Constitution. The senate appropriates around $30,000 each year to different recognized student organizations. The senate may grant permanent recognition to student organizations and may also revoke a group's recognition.

The senate is composed of 49 members — 44 elected from residence constituencies and academic colleges within the University, and 5 chosen at large.

The senate has six permanent committees and an executive committee. When a bill is introduced in the senate, action is deferred to the senate committee dealing with the area of the bill's legislation. The committee reviews the bill and then passes the bill to the floor of the senate with its recommendations.

The Academic Affairs Committee deals with the broad area of Student Senate legislation dealing with the academic lives of students. The Academic Affairs Committee tends to be a "catch-all" for legislation that does not fit in any of the other senate committees.

The Student Rights and Freedom Committee has much the same function as the Academic Affairs Committee, but deals mainly with the personal lives of students as opposed to their academic lives. It, too, often receives many bills that do not fit in the jurisdiction of the other senate committees.

The Housing Committee examines senate legislation specifically dealing with student housing.

Appointments to special Student Senate advisory positions originate from the Personnel Committee. This committee reviews applications for senate subcommittees and recommends to the senate any special appointments.

The Committee on Student Organizations grants provisional recognition to student groups and helps groups work toward permanent recognition from the senate. The Committee on Student Organizations may also revoke provisional recognition.

The Legislative Action Committee, the senate's single executive committee, is the official lobbying group of the student association. This group organizes writing campaigns to the governor and the state legislature and promotes student interests to businessmen and professional groups.

Let's Get It Straight

DIRTY FLOORS

While traveling in the north of Italy, a man stayed at an inn where the floor was very dirty. "I was about to ask the landlady to scrub it," he said, "until I realized that it was made of mud, and that the more she scrubbed it the worse it would be."

It is the same with human nature. There can be no improvement of man's naturally corrupt heart and life apart from God. The Italian inn would have had to have an entirely new floor installed before it could be kept clean; and a man must have an entirely new nature—he must be born again—before his life can please God.

Some people have a religion that is nothing but a code of morality, forgetting that morality in itself is no ticket to heaven. God does not judge us primarily by the way we behave, but by why we behave as we do. The man who sends a large donation to charity, so that he may vindicate himself in his own eyes and the eyes of others, is acting from motives totally unacceptable to God, while the poor person who sacrifices a dollar out of love to God and man is accepted of Him. The motive makes all the difference. But how to acquire right motives?

God has made provision for this by sending His Son, Jesus Christ, into the world to die on the cross, pay for your sins, and set you free from their penalty, which is spiritual death. If you will accept His sacrifice in your behalf, and receive Him as your Saviour, you will be born anew. Then it will no longer be a matter of scrubbing a mud floor, but of possessing a floor of an entirely different nature, that can be cleansed daily by the grace of God. He offers you this exchange right now. Will you accept it today?

Athlete Aid Ban Bill Advances

DES MOINES (AP)—Iowa's area schools would be prohibited from giving athletic scholarships — even those funded from gate receipts — under a bill approved Tuesday in the House Schools Committee. "This doesn't mean booster clubs can't give scholarships, but they can't go through the school," said Rep. Leonard G. Andersen (R-Sioux City). "Our feeling is area schools are no place for semiprofessional athletics," Andersen said. "Abolishing scholarships will put them back on an amateur basis." The bill specifically prohibits area schools from using public funds or money from athletic events for athletic scholarships or awards of any kind based on athletic ability. Rep. Charles Grassley (R-New Hartford), the committee chairman, said this also outlaws athletic scholarships from student fees. One lawmaker who opposes use of state money for athletic scholarships, but approves use of gate receipts for them, said he will try to amend the bill when it is discussed by the full House to allow gate receipt scholarships. "As long as they are self-supporting, I don't see any reason to kick them in the face," said Rep. Robert Kreamer (R-Des Moines).

Student Parties can't benefit students. They play at politics and splinter students on important goals. We know. We used to be a party.

Sutton-Dougherty believe student government ought to be a student guild which protects the daily student interest and, in the long haul, obtains already available federal housing money to build student co-operative housing; obtains student money to build a bookstore; expands student publishing; creates student enterprises which generate income for working students.

Granatelli Planning Indy Assault With Conventional Power

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Granatelli, his turbine racing cars sidelined by rules changes, announced plans Tuesday for an assault on this year's Indianapolis 500 with conventional-powered cars and one of the most potent driver lineups ever put together. The team will include Mario Andretti, two-time national driving champion; Graham Hill, last year's world driving titleholder and Indy winner in 1967; Art Pollard and Austrian Grand Prix star Jochen Rindt.

Granatelli told a luncheon of the International Motor Press Association that each driver would have a brand new car of radical design, plus backup cars, some tested and some untested. Included will be four Lotus wedge-shaped machines designed by Britain's Colin Chapman and powered by Ford V-8 racing engines, a pair of new super wedges to be equipped with Plymouth 318-cubic-inch stock block engines; a new Gerhardt-built turbocharged Offenhauser and the Brawner-Hawk Ford driven by Andretti in the 1968 race. Andretti, Hill and Rindt will be assigned to the new Lotus Fords, with Pollard handling the Plymouth-powered machines. It will be Plymouth's first effort at Indianapolis. Granatelli said the team also will shoot for the United States Auto Club championship, involving some 18 oval and road course events, beginning with a 150-mile race at Phoenix Sunday. Andretti will drive his 1968 car in that race, with Pollard in the Gerhardt-Offy.

Granatelli, a portly 46-year-old who has made millions with his STP oil treatment firm, switched to conventional-powered equipment after his controversial turbines were ruled out of competition by regulations adopted during the off-season by the USAC. Parnelli Jones had one of the turbines in front by a wide margin when mechanical troubles struck it down with 10 laps to go in the 1967 event. Pollard was leading last year's race near the finish when his turbine also failed.

The Coach Doesn't Lie

By TIM BROSS

Iowa's gymnastics team is beginning to prove what its coach, Mike Jacobson, has believed for a long time — that the gym team is the best athletic team at Iowa this year.

The Hawkeyes, although they lost the Big 10 title to Michigan last weekend in Ann Arbor, won the NCAA berth from the Wolverines by a mere four-tenths of a point.

Iowa is now one of six schools that will be shooting for the national title, April 3-5 in Seattle. Jacobson said Tuesday that Iowa State, Southern Illinois and Penn State had qualified for the meet.

Jacobson said he expected California, last year's NCAA champion, to represent the West. He did not know who the southern representative would be, but said the South was very weak in gymnastics.

"I expect the top three teams to be Iowa, Iowa State and Penn State," said Jacobson. "California has lost quite a few of its stars from last year, and Southern Illinois is not very strong."

Iowa beat two entrants, Iowa State and Southern Illinois, during the regular season.

Jacobson had much had much praise for his gymnasts' performance at the Big 10 meet.

"None of the team had any concern for themselves at the meet," said Jacobson. "In the last event of the NCAA qualifications, the parallel bars, the team knew just about what we needed to win it, and went for only the team victory."

"Rich Scorza could have easily placed in the top three in the parallel bars and qualified for the NCAA's if he had decided to do a rougher routine. He decided to do an easier routine which he knew he could do without faulting and make sure we got enough points to win the meet."

"Bob Dickson did the same thing, but still managed to place third and qualify for the nationals."

The top three finishers in each event qualified for the individual competition in Seattle. Scorza, for instance, will be able to compete as a member of Iowa's team but will not be eligible for individual honors, except in the high bar, where he placed third.

Iowa qualified six gymnasts for individual titles. Along with Scorza, Dickson will have a chance at individual honors in the still rings, long horse and parallel bars.

Iowa's two Big 10 champions, Don Hatch and Keith McCanless, will compete in their specialties, the rings and side horse, respectively.

Two sophomores, Ken Liehr and Barry Sloten, qualified with their performances. Liehr took second in the side horse, and Sloten took second in the floor exercise.

Other Hawkeye finishers in the top six, were Scorza's sixth in the side horse, Dick Taffe's fourth and Dickson's sixth in floor exercises, Sloten's fifth in the long horse and Mike Proctor's fifth in the parallel bars.

MIKE JACOBSON Boasts About Gymnasts

"Sloten and Taffe had their best routines of the year in the floor exercise and Mike Proctor also did his best routine of the year in the parallel bars and it was under the greatest of pressure," said Jacobson.

"The long horse was a great event for us; it is our most improved event this year."

Jacobson said the Hawkeyes weren't too disappointed about losing the Big 10 meet because of their NCAA berth.

"Most of the boys were pretty tired by that time," said Jacobson. "Dickson and Scorza had already gone through 12 routines."

Injuries also played a part in Iowa's loss. McCanless tore a hamstring muscle warming up for the Big 10 team title competition and was below his usual performance, according to Jacobson.

Scorza suffered a muscle separation in his sternum (breastbone) and was in great pain during the Big 10 meet, said Jacobson.

Iowa will take a squad of about twelve to the NCAA championships and will leave for Seattle Tuesday.

Wills Claims Discrimination; Jim Grant Writes to Governor

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Veteran pitcher Jim "Mudcat" Grant struck out at what he called racial discrimination in this city Tuesday after Montreal Expos teammate Maury Wills said he had been discriminated against for the first time in his big league career.

Grant, a native of LaCoochee, Fla., said he planned to write a letter to Florida Gov. Claude Kirk protesting the incidents which Wills said "bite at me inside." Both Grant and Wills are blacks. Grant said that his letter "will express my disappointment that stuff like this is still going on. Wills is an outstanding citizen of this country. He should be accepted as a citizen, not as a black man, who has to be told that he can't do this or that."

Wills, who holds the major league record of 104 stolen bases and was named the National League's Most Valuable Player while with the Los Angeles Dodgers, in 1962, said he had been asked to leave two bars last Friday "because they said they didn't serve colored people."

Wills explained that he had entered the bars with a newspaperman and a photographer, both white. "We decided to go there because it was suggested that it would be a different atmosphere in which to discuss a story rather than in the ball park."

PEKs Dominating IM Action

Phi Epsilon Kappa professional fraternity has been having things all its own way in the most recent All-University intramural competition. The PEKs walked off with the All-U bowling crown and have semi-finalists in the All-U volleyball tournament and All-U badminton singles tourney.

in their semi-final stages. In singles competition Steve Harding of Quadrangle's Chambers House faces Jim Crabbe of Phi Epsilon Kappa professional fraternity in the first semi-final and Greg Witt of Rienow I Floor 2 squares off against independent Dennis Harken in the second.

Phi Epsilon Kappa defeated Van der Zee of Hillcrest 4-0 in the finals of the bowling championships to gain the title. The PEKs won all three matches and added a point for winning the total score.

Badminton doubles is the only All-U event going on in which Phi Epsilon Kappa does not have a participant. Michael Peterson and Witt of Rienow I Floor 2 go against Arnie Levinson and Paul Joseph of Phi Epsilon Pi social fraternity in the first semi-final. John Evans and Dennis Milnes of Rienow II Floor 3 have reached the other semi-final but their opponents have not been decided yet.

Members of the PEK team were Don Cassidy, Dale Mood, Burt Brunner, Ralph Bastie, Jim Kent, Ken Strand, and Bob Piper. Piper paced the winners with a 518 series.

Other All-U tourneys in progress are handball doubles and table tennis singles. Both are in the quarter-finals and will not be decided for a week and a half.

The semi-finals of the All-U volleyball tournament will be played tonight at the Field House beginning at 7:30. Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity will be pitted against Phi Epsilon Kappa in one semi-final and Higbee of Hillcrest will meet the Set-ups, in an independent team, in the other.

Tennis doubles and squash singles entry blanks are now available in the Intramural Office, 113 Field House. The deadline for the return of the entry blanks is April 2.

The All-U badminton singles and doubles tourneys are also 2.

Eye Transplant Techniques Discussed in Course Here

More people may see as a result of a clinic held at the University last weekend to train undertakers in corneal transplant technique.

The clinic, a two-day intensive course in eye removal procedure, was sponsored by the Iowa Board of Embalmer and Funeral Director Examiners, a division of the State Board of Health. Eleven Iowa funeral directors attended the clinic.

Clarence G. Strub, senior mortician in the University department of anatomy, explained Thursday that a shortage of doctors in rural areas of the state meant that the eyes of many donors registered with the Iowa Lions Eye Bank were not being removed.

The resultant shortage of eyes for transplant, Strub said, often forced prospective recipients to wait months before corneas became available — a wait which could result in permanent loss of sight.

Strub said that since undertakers were trained in anatomy, they were "logical candidates" to perform the eye removal in areas where doctors are scarce.

"There is a growing feeling in the funeral service field that morticians must serve the living as well as the dead," Strub said.

The clinic, held at University Hospitals, was the idea of Dr. A. E. Braley of the University Department of Ophthalmology and head of the Iowa Lions Eye Bank. Dr. Braley, an internationally known surgeon, has performed over 500 corneal transplants.

Instructors for the clinic included, besides Braley and Strub, Mrs. Dorothy Rasley, a supervisor and instructor at University Hospitals, and Ruth Fisher, secretary of the Iowa Lions Eye Bank.

Regulations Proposed For Funeral Homes

DES MOINES — One Iowa funeral home is under police surveillance as a suspected house of prostitution and some others aren't much better, a legislature subcommittee was told Tuesday.

The testimony came from James A. VanderPloeg of Sheldon, secretary of the Iowa State Board of Funeral Home Directors and Embalmer Examiners.

VanderPloeg spoke during a hearing on two proposed laws, one of which would bring funeral homes under state regulation through a licensing board.

VanderPloeg said the same funeral home also is suspected by police of being an outlet for narcotics and illegal drugs.

State law now does not require licensing of funeral homes, but funeral directors and embalmers are subject to examination and licensing by the state.

If a home is not owned by a licensed embalmer or director, the state cannot regulate or inspect it, he said.

VanderPloeg also urged passage of a proposal which would bar "selling funerals door-to-door" under varieties of so-called "pre-need funeral care."

Under current law, licensed funeral directors and licensed embalmers are prohibited from door-to-door solicitation, but funeral homes may employ door-to-door salesmen.

Both measures are supported by the Iowa Funeral Directors and Embalmers Association, a private group.

Speaking against the bills was former state Sen. Tom Riley of Cedar Rapids, an attorney who represents a Cedar Rapids funeral home which had employed door-to-door salesmen.

Riley contended the measures were proposed by the association to protect its members against competition.

The association "is trying to keep lower funeral costs through competition from entering the American scene," Riley said.

Liquor Case Goes to Court

A preliminary hearing for an Iowa City man charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated (OMVI) and making liquor available to a minor has been set for 8:30 a.m. April 4.

Eugene Englebrecht, 29, of Hwy. 1 West, appeared in Police Court Tuesday with his attorney, Jerry L. Lovelace.

Lovelace requested that bond be reduced to 10 per cent of the $1,500 previously set. Police Judge Marian Neely will act on the request this morning.

Englebrecht was arrested and charged March 19 in connection with an incident in City Park. He and another Iowa City man, William Taylor, 35, of 605 E. Burlington St. were charged with making liquor available to a minor, Nancy Clements, 18, of Route 4, Sand Rd.

Taylor pleaded not guilty to the charge. He is serving 30 days in the Johnson County Jail on an additional charge of intoxication.

Englebrecht is currently being held in the Johnson County Jail in lieu of the $1,500 bond.

New Union Board Directors, Officers Take Over Big Job

By RON OLSON

The Union Board's new staff held its first formal meeting at the Union Monday night.

When all positions are filled, the board will include twelve members at the helm of the Union Board areas.

Members of the executive committee are Dick Tyner, A3, Shenandoah, president; Tony Stoik, A3, Wheeling, Ill., vice president; and Kathy Doak, P2, Jerseyville, Ill., secretary.

The area directors appointed so far are: Cathy Engelkes, A3, Grundy Center, Contemporary Affairs; Sandy Starr, A3, Miami Beach, Personnel; John Cain, A2, Eldora, Music; Pam Armstrong, A3, Needham, Mass., Promotion; Ann Larson, A3, Des Moines, Hospitality; Saul Meyer, A3, Ottumwa, Films; Al Caspers, A2, Cedar Rapids, Travel; Terry Hilleman, G, Marshalltown, Recreation; Jane Fruehling, A2, Waverly, Litteraria; and Dave Dawson, A4, Des Moines, Dances and Entertainment.

The board still needs two graduate students to direct the Research and Art areas. Applications are available in the Student Activities Center.

The new area directors for the board were chosen two weeks ago by the previous Union Board directors. After the directors were chosen, they elected officers from among their own ranks.

The new executive committee and the remaining directors then decided among themselves which area each would direct.

Tyner, who was director of personnel on last year's board, outlined the board's major purposes and what objectives he, as president, would strive for.

"The major purpose of Union Board is to program activities for the students of the University," he said. "We are by far the largest programming agency on campus, programming 90 per cent of all student activities.

"I want to see Union Board become a more cohesive body. There is not enough interaction between the Union Board areas. I want to increase interaction so that the members of each area can conceptualize the purpose of each of the other areas, thus providing more efficiency."

The 12 areas of Union Board are divided into a total of 50 committees. Tyner said that applications are being accepted for the 50 committee chairmen. Applications are available in the Student Activities Center. The deadline for applications is Monday.

Tyner also said that 500 students will be needed to serve as members of the various committees. Applications for committee membership will be available on April 14. The Recruitment will continue this fall.

"The executive committee is the overall policy-making group of Union Board," Tyner said. "It is extremely important because it maintains the internal functioning of Union Board as a whole."

"The area directors are in complete command of the chairmen and committees under them," Tyner explained. "They come up with new ideas and coordinate the activities of their areas."

Tyner emphasized the importance of the 50 committee chairmen.

Tax Relief Bill To Be Proposed

WASHINGTON — A bill to raise the minimum standard deduction allowed on federal income tax returns to provide relief for low-income families was to be introduced in Congress today by Rep. John Culver (D-Iowa).

The minimum standard deduction would be raised from $200 to $600, and the additional $100 for each exemption would be retained.

Culver said the Treasury Department told him the proposal would reduce the income tax payments of about one million families with incomes above the poverty level and would completely exempt about 1.25 million families below the poverty level.

Vern Burrell Memorial Party Adding Humor to Election

In the midst of parties that are appealing to the liberal vote, the conservative vote, the action vote and nearly every other kind of vote on this campus, one group of students is working for the humor vote.

The Vern Burrell Memorial Party, according to Dan Cambridge, A3, Atlantic, was formed in response to campus apathy.

"Since nearly every other vote was being appealed to, Cambridge said, "we decided to volunteer our services for the humor vote."

The party itself is named for a band leader who played the Iowa

City area in the late 1920s. The three town men and three town women senatorial candidates who are running under the Burrell banner stumbled across the name on an old poster in the basement of the house where one of them lives.

"Vern Burrell was kind of a Lawrence Welk who never made it," Cambridge said.

- The Burrell platform includes such burning campus issues as:
- Arming the library guards.
  - Moving Mammal Hall to Burge Lobby.
  - Licensing the state legislators.

Pilot Shot in Arab Raid Dies

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
An Arab guerrilla raid on an El Al jetliner at Zurich's airport Feb. 18 claimed the life of the plane's trainee pilot Tuesday. Yoram Perez, 26, felled by three bullet wounds in the abdomen, died in a Zurich hospital.

Thi, added to Arab-Israeli tensions, even while prospects were reported improving for a Big Four conference on the Middle East.

U.S. and British sources at the United Nations said a meeting of the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union to consider the crisis is likely soon. The four are permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

British Ambassador to the U.N. Lord Caradon told newsmen in New York "There's a new impetus and we are pressing forward."

Of six persons wounded in the attack on the El Al plane, Perez was the only one dangerously hit. His wife, Lea, was at his bedside when he died.

Swiss authorities are still holding three Arabs — two men and a woman of the popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine — pending trial. Legal sources do not expect the trial before next fall. No formal charges have ever been preferred.

Actor Dies

Character actor Alan Mowbray, whose more than 400 movie roles ranged from butlers to English noblemen, died Tuesday of a heart attack. He was 72. His films included "The King and I," "Blackbeard the Pirate," "Lady Hamilton" and "The Man Who Knew Too Much."

Fish Kill's Grisly Results Floating Downstream Here

Dead fish are floating down the Iowa River as a result of an extensive fish kill that occurred two weeks ago. The ice cover on the river is breaking up and the dead fish are being flushed down the river and onto the banks.

Wendell Simonson, state conservation officer for Johnson County, said that the dead fish on the Iowa River are coming from the Coralville Reservoir and on upstream nearly as far as Tama.

The fish died because of a lack of oxygen, which was caused by agricultural run-off, according to Dr. Robert L. Morris, associate director of the State Hygienic Laboratory.

During the first snow-melt or during a heavy winter rain when there is a heavy run-off there is a severe reduction of oxygen because fertilizer and organic materials in the water use up the supply of oxygen. When the river was still ice covered there was little chance for re-oxygenation to occur and the fish died.

Simonson said that the kill was primarily rough fish but that it was not limited to any particular species. He said that the river would be heavily restocked with fish this spring.

CORRECTION

Campaign statements for Janice Bear, A1, Waucoma, and Suzanne Nus, A2, Fairbank, that appeared in Tuesday's edition of The Daily Iowan were part of their platform, not statements of campaign goals, the DI learned Tuesday night.

Miss Nus and Miss Bear said that the statements were taken out of context and had not been intended for publication on the election pages.

The coeds are candidates for Liberal Arts Student Senator on the Underground Culture Kitchen ticket.

The Daily Iowan regrets the error.

4th Michigan Coed in 3 Years Found Dead in Same Area

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The nude body of a young girl was found Tuesday near the spot where bodies of three other college coeds have been discovered in the past three years.

Police said the body is that of an unidentified girl about 19 or 20 years old. Officers said she had an undergarment around her neck, her right arm was battered and she had been sexually molested. Cause of death was not immediately determined. Her clothes were nearby.

The killing was the fourth murder of a young woman in the Ann Arbor area since 1967.

Last week, police discovered the body of a 23-year-old University of Michigan coed, Jane Mixer of Muskegon, in a cemetery in Van Buren Township.

The latest victim was found on Walden Wood Road, a paved dead-end street in a new subdivision being built on the north-east edge of Ann Arbor.

Investigators still were questioning University of Michigan students in an effort to retrace the actions of Miss Mixer, whose body was discovered last Friday. She had been shot twice in the head.

Participants Find Value in T-Group Lab

By LARRY CHANDLER
(Part two of a three-part series)
The University's human relations lab participants overwhelmingly feel that the program has been valuable to them.

Extensive research by the program's research staff, headed by Jon Jones, associate professor of education, and Randy Swisher, A4, Atlantic, has revealed this satisfaction with the program.

The benefits the participants feel they have received range from profound personal insights to a better understanding of the communications process.

Although the program has been successful here, Dr. Gene Gauron, a clinical psychologist and one of the trainers in the program warns that "T-groups are the 'in' thing." Since T-groups are a fad, there is a danger that unqualified people will conduct labs or that there will be inadequate screening of prospective participants, he said.

A participant of one of the labs, Dave Dawson, A4, Iowa City, said he felt that the program had "broadened the personal knowledge of myself and of other people."

Dawson does see a flaw in the program, though. "It most definitely has its positive aspects, but the biggest negative aspect is the lack of practical application."

Dan Costello, an assistant professor of journalism with an educational background in psychology feels he benefited from his experience at a lab. Costello says, "I was able to introspect and find out a few things I had not been doing."

Costello feels that the lab revealed to him the double nature of an individual's personality. "You have two selves, one you portray to other people and the way you really feel about yourself."

In contrast to Dawson, Costello says that he has been able to make a practical application of what he learned at the lab. He believes the lab has been especially helpful to him in the classroom.

Even though Costello has been able to make practical use of the program, he says it is "very easy to lapse back into the old self."

Costello feels that the program requires a specific type of person to be effective. "I think a person has to be pretty open to it to begin with." More specifically, Costello believes that "you have to want to experience this type of thing."

Jill Wiley, A4E, Des Moines, a student assistant in the program, says, "people discover a lot of things about themselves and other people which prompt them to recognize their own feelings."

Miss Wiley and her fellow assistants are one of the more controversial aspects of the program. Miss Wiley views her role in the T-group to be that of serving as a model participant.

She says that the assistants help the trainer by providing direct feedback to them about the progress of the group. Research has been favorable on the use of student assistants, but some participants felt that they hinder the T-group.

Jones feels the program at the University is a good one and supports his belief with the program's research. He believes the extensive research done is also a strong point of the program.

Jones says that the program has kept labs on former lab participants and, to date, there has been no "data that anyone has been permanently harmed by involvement."

The program's research has been designed to cover all aspects of the program. Staff members have investigated the effects of the various stages of the lab, the personal and interpersonal effects of the lab on the participants and the effects of the lab on a participant's academic life and extracurricular activities.

The research has been positive to date, although Jones feels more investigation needs to be done on the effects of the lab on a person's academic life. There have also been negative responses to the lab and these are used by the program's staff in an effort to improve the process according to Jones.

The major problem, the lack of practical application of the lab's lessons, according to staff members, has not been solved and may not be solved.

Gauron says that the problem is an "interesting commentary on our times." He says the T-group helps the person learn to be honest and open in his communication, but "society's norms are anti-T-group."

He also says that the frustration of trying to apply the T-group's honesty leads to regrouping. Regrouping refers to the tendency of T-group members to reassemble after they return from a lab.

Jones feels that regrouping is not really a problem. He says that his research has not shown this to be a problem. He says there may be some regrouping but this quickly stops and people tend to return to their old mold.

Another major objection to the program is that it is brainwashing rather than self-revelation. The brainwashing charge is denied by Roger Augustine, associate dean of student affairs and a trainer in the program. Augustine says that the program is aimed at personal honesty and personal evaluation. He feels that this "pressure for authenticity should lead to more of a variety of behavior."

Gauron and Jones both feel there is the potential for brainwashing, but it is the trainer's job to stop it from ever occurring.

The people in the program here feel they have a good program and use research to support it. The program has many friends on this campus; but, then, it has critics too.

Thursday, the critics speak out.

Cash Gifts to University Rise

Alumni and friends of the University who support its educational programs through voluntary cash gifts did so in record fashion during 1968, according to an annual report on fund-raising activity by the University Foundation.

A total of $1,260,186 was given by 11,030 contributors, both record highs, according to Darrell Wyrick, executive director of the Foundation.

The total gifts figure is more than 55 per cent greater than the previous high of $814,409 received in 1967. Making up the total were funds received through annual giving, special gifts, capital campaigns, memorial gifts and bequests.

The number of contributors is up from the previous high of 10,903 in 1966.

Deferred income — $333,000 from new pledges generated and $1,955,000 in known bequests and trusts created — is excluded from the 1968 cash gift totals, according to Wyrick.

Another record established in 1968 was the number of individuals — 1,331 — who made gifts of $100 or more and qualified for membership in the Foundation's Old Gold Club. The club's membership increased by 60 per cent over the 1967 total of 850.

According to Wyrick, cumulative cash gifts to the Foundation have passed $5 million since the agency was formed 13 years ago to strengthen the University's scientific, literary and educational pursuits through voluntary giving.

Wyrick also reports that more persons arranged for deferred gifts to the Foundation through bequests, trusts, insurance plans or other methods than in any previous year.

One of the foundation's major projects of last year was raising funds to help finance construction of the University's proposed Health Sciences Library. More than a million dollars has been contributed to date in the national drive, which is the second major capital campaign undertaken by the Foundation in its 13-year history.

The first major campaign was raising funds for the University's new Museum of Art. The Foundation received $1,250,000 from more than 2,000 contributors to help finance construction of the Museum, which opens in two months.
