Sutton Elected Student President

Action Party Captures Student Senate Control

By DON NICHOLS

Jim Sutton, G, Iowa City, and Jim Dougherty, A3, Anamosa, were elected student body president and vice president respectively Wednesday, by a 755 vote margin.

Less than a third of those eligible to vote, a total of 5,479 students, cast ballots. Last year, 4,910 students voted.

Sutton and Dougherty received 3,117 votes. Phil Dantes, A3, Waterloo, and his running mate, Mark Stodola, A2, Cedar Rapids, received 2,363 votes. Dantes and Stodola were running on the Action Party '69 ticket; Sutton and Dougherty were running as independents.

"We've served notice to the University community that we intend to take responsibility for our own affairs," Sutton said in a victory statement.

"It remains to see whether the administration will help us. The administration is on trial."

Sutton said he and Dougherty would begin working immediately to get Greeks the right to buy food through the Univer-

Dougherty added, "I think we offered the student body what it wanted. We'll do the best we can to implement our programs and serve the student interest."

Dantes' only comment on the election was to praise his campaign workers.

"I was really heartened by the effort my people put in on the campaign, especially since many of them had nothing to gain other than personal satisfaction."

The Action Party captured 17 of the 34 senate seats contested in the election. The party has already won a majority of the 10 senate seats filled in special elections, thereby assuring itself control of the senate.

The Underground Culture Kitchen, which had fielded a large slate of candidates, won only two seats. The Vern Burrell Party, which had run six candidates, won four seats. The other seats — and positions on other elected bodies — were won by independents.

The winners in all races were:

The election ended on a controversial note over an ad placed in Wednesday's edition of The Daily Iowan by Sutton endorsing a slate of candidates he said he could work with in the senate.

Stodola told the DI Tuesday night that six of seven Action Party candidates endorsed by Sutton were rejecting the endorsement. A story saying that the six refused appeared in Wednesday's paper.

On Wednesday, however, four of the six candidates said they accepted the endorsement and had been misrepresented by Stodola.

Those who accepted the endorsement were: Stoline, Miss Harris, Jurschak, and Miss Rahe.

The two others, Dierks and Swisher, said they did not want the endorsement because they were working as Action Party candidates.

All six, however, won, so the effect of the ad is still unknown. In all, 18 of the 27 candidates endorsed by Sutton won.

Ex-Marine Head Blames Military For Viet Buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. David M. Shoup, former Marine Corps commandant, says "an aggressive military" encouraged the Johnson administration to wage war in Vietnam in 1964 and abandon long-standing opposition to involvement in an Asian land conflict.

Shoup, as head of the Marines, was a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for four years before that date, retiring in December 1963. He since has been a critic of the U.S. role in Vietnam.

Writing for the March 27 issue of Atlantic Monthly, Shoup portrayed "belligerent," "glory seeking" military leaders who succeeded him as competing with one another to have their services play big roles in Vietnam.

"In Vietnam during 1965," he said, "the four services were racing to build up combat strength in that hapless country."

Bowen Rejects Changes In Code Made by CSC

By LARRY CHANDLER

University Pres. Howard R. Bowen Wednesday rejected changes in the Code of Student Life that had been made by the Committee on Student Conduct (CSC). Bowen said the Code would remain intact unless he approved specific changes offered by the Committee on Student Life (CSL).

In a speech delivered before the Faculty Senate, Bowen said he "must declare the entire Code intact unless further revised."

Bowen's statement means that two parts of the Code's Preamble — part of Section 7 and part of Section 3 — invalidated by the CSC on Jan. 24 have been reinstated.

The part of Section 3 in question states that a student must comply to a "proper summons" of any authorized University official. The part of section 7 in question forbids unauthorized or improper use of University facilities.

Bowen said that student-faculty committees such as the CSC do not have the authority to make changes in University policy.

"If (the Code) cannot be changed by the unilateral action of a single committee," Bowen declared.

He said also that the University president does not need to consult with student-faculty committees before making decisions despite a stipulation of the Joint Statement on Student Rights and Freedoms, which the University has adopted, to the contrary.

Immediate reaction to Bowen's decision was negative.

Student Body Pres. Carl Varner predicted that "there's going to be a real head-to-head confrontation," between the administration and both the CSL and CSC.

Varner cited as a point of contention in addition to the CSC decision on section 7 and section 3 the possible invalidation of the housing restrictions in the Code.

The housing restrictions are currently involved in the case of the University versus Kenneth Stults, A2, Knoxville, who has admitted to violating Code provisions on approved housing. The case is being heard by the CSC.

Varner said he felt that Bowen had assumed to much power in reinstating the stricken sections of the code. Varner said, "Certain parts of the Code and the way they were formulated were violations of the Joint Statement."

Laird Addis, associate professor of philosophy and a CSL member, blasted Bowen's decision and suggested that "students and faculty both ought to get that kind of attitude changed."

Senate Approves 19-Year-Old Vote; Proposal Faces Opposition in House

DES MOINES (AP) — Forces to lower the minimum voting age in Iowa won the first skirmish in a long constitutional battle Wednesday.

On a 45 to 15 vote, the Senate approved a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to lower the minimum voting age from 21 to 19. The proposal now goes to the House where it faces substantial opposition.

The amendment must be approved by two successive legislatures and then ratified by the voters before it can take effect. The vote would come in the 1971 general election.

The amendment, backed by Republican

Gov. Robert D. Ray, won Senate approval after proponents fought off attempts to alter it.

One change would have given 19 and 20-year-olds the rights of majority, or adulthood, and the other would have lowered the minimum voting age to 18. Both amendments would have placed the entire proposal in jeopardy, proponents of a lower voting age said.

Backers of the constitutional amendment praised the quality of today's young Iowans.

They may sometimes appear immature, said Sen. Donald McGill (D-Melrose), but given the chance "they will rise to the occasion."

Other senators said 19 and 20-year-olds are more mature, knowledgeable and interested in government than their fathers were at the same age.

But opponents argued that those under 21 haven't had the experience in earning a living and paying taxes to make intelligent decisions at the polls.

Commented Sen. John Walsh (R-Dubuque), who at 28 is the youngest member of the Senate:

"If it weren't for the young people when I ran for office, I don't think I'd be here today — and I think they showed pretty good judgment."

Sen. Minnette Doderer (D-Iowa City) said the traditional age of adulthood — 21 — stems from the medieval age for knighthood.

"This is no longer the age of knights, it is the age of astronauts," she said.

In a surprise move, Mrs. Doderer produced a survey conducted by some Council Bluffs high school students which showed that 29 senators said they would support a lower voting age and only three said they would oppose it. Twenty-nine senators did not respond to the poll.

"If any of you have forgotten what you told these young people, you can come to my desk and look," Mrs. Doderer said.

Of the 29 who indicated in the poll they would support a lower voting age, only one — Sen. Charlene Conklin (R-Waterloo) — voted against the resolution Wednesday.

At an early morning news conference, Ray said, "Politicians fail to communicate with young people, largely because they don't give them the right to vote."

Ray said 19-year-olds are "prepared to vote" and are "openminded. When a youth gets to be 21, he has lost the burning desire to be part of the voting process."

Nixon Asks Extension Of 10 Per Cent Surtax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, formally asking a one-year extension of the 10 per cent income tax surcharge, told Congress Wednesday he was caught in a budget bind but would try to outdo the Johnson administration in holding down federal spending.

Nixon held out the possibility in a special message that the surtax could yet be repealed if the Vietnamese war ends and inflationary pressures ease.

Nixon, detailing what he termed a fundamental counterattack against the "economic aggression" of inflation, said the budget outlook had deteriorated since former President Lyndon B. Johnson submitted spending and revenue estimates in January.

But even while reporting that half the Johnson-envisioned budget surplus next year of $3.4 billion would disappear under present circumstances, Nixon pledged vigorous economies with the aim of winding up even further in the black than his predecessor had anticipated.

Administration sources suggested Nixon would aim for a budget surplus of at least $4 billion in the 1970 fiscal year which begins July 1. To achieve it, they suggested that he would have to chop federal spending programs by $2.5 billion or more.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Congress' price for extending the surtax should be a $10 billion cut in requested appropriations and a $5 billion cut in actual federal spending.

And Congress should take the responsibility of directing some of the cuts, Mansfield said in an interview, rather than leave that burden to Nixon as it did to Johnson last year when the surtax was enacted.

Mansfield said he believed Nixon had made a difficult decision in asking for the extension.

"But with the Vietnamese war and other expenditures still on our backs," the Montana senator said, "he probably didn't have much choice."

House Speaker John W. McCormack (D-Mass.) and Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.) both predicted Congress would approve the tax extension.

Nixon declared "the problem of inflation was neglected far too long," and said the nation could not risk a budget barely in the black.

"Only a combined policy of a strong budget surplus and monetary restraint can now be effective in cooling inflation, and in ultimately reducing the restrictive interest rates forced on us by past policies," he said.

The chief executive told Congress he would "submit budget revisions which will reduce federal spending in fiscal 1970 significantly below the amount recommended in January."

Budget experts said they believed Johnson's January blueprint would now produce spending of $197 billion instead of the originally projected $195.3 billion. Thus Nixon promised to hold spending significantly below the $195.3 billion level.

Administration sources were reluctant to define "significant" but seemed agreed that $1 billion would represent a significant reduction.

In calling for a 12-month extension of the tax surcharge beyond its scheduled June 30 expiration, Nixon said this would yield $9.5 billion in revenues — an amount included in the Johnson budget.

Youths Charged With Disruption Of Church Group

A charge of disturbing the peace was filed against three area youths Wednesday, by Johnson County sheriff's officers in connection with disrupting a church youth group Friday night.

According to Sheriff Maynard E. Schneider, the three youths charged were Cletus D. Bender, 18, of Route 1, Kalona; Gorden K. Breneman, 20, of Route 1, Riverside; and a 17-year-old rural Riverside youth.

The trio allegedly pulled the main fuse block to the Lyle Hostelter residence in southern Johnson County where the church group was meeting, pulled coil wires on several cars and poured orange juice over another car.

Further investigation revealed that the youths were involved in other destructive incidents in the past, including tipping over a horse drawn buggy, and tearing down a church sign and telephone wires, Schneider said.

The three youths have been released pending appearance in the Coralville Justice of the Peace Court Saturday to face the disturbing the peace charges.

Goldfinch Under Attack— Iowa, Kansas Feuding On Bird, Flower Issues

DES MOINES (AP) — "They're hitting us where it really hurts," said Rep. William Gannon, "Right in the bird."

The House minority leader said he hopes Iowans will not lose their cool over a resolution introduced in the Kansas House of Representatives to declare Eastern Goldfinch — Iowa's state bird — a public nuisance.

Gannon, a Democrat from Mingo, noted that, after all, the resolution was simply "in kind retaliation" for a move in Iowa to declare the sunflower — Kansas' state flower — a noxious weed.

"It is my firm hope there will be no further escalation of the hostilities," said Gannon.

The Kansas resolution, introduced by six representatives Wednesday, states that the Eastern Goldfinch is "unattractive, bothersome and raucously noisy" and "possesses no other redeeming qualities."

The resolution proposes to make it lawful to hunt and kill the Eastern Goldfinch, also known as the wild canary, at any time without a license.

The resolution would appear to be at variance with opinions expressed in the book, "Birds of America," which praised the Eastern Goldfinch as "one that the bird student will never tire raving over."

The Iowa House has condemned the sunflower to the noxious weed list — making it a legal target of county weed commissioners — and the bill is expected to receive approval of the Iowa Senate soon.

The sunflower, said Iowa legislators, is harmful to crops because it sucks up so much water, and it's such a tough flower that it sometimes damages farm equipment.

And they note that Kansas long ago declared the sunflower to be an "obnoxious weed."

Some Iowa lawmakers were not concerned about the Kansas resolution.

"I wouldn't recognize a Goldfinch if I tripped over one," commented Sen. Arthur New, (R-Carroll).

Others were ready to negotiate a truce. "We'll take all the Goldfinches in Kansas if they will take all of their obnoxious sunflowers back," chirped Sen. Joseph Coleman (D-Clare), sponsor of the sunflower bill.

False economy?

Many people outside of Iowa think of this state as a large cornfield inhabited only by hogs and hicks who live in small towns — like Podunk Center.

Iowa does have cornfields and hogs and small towns — and Podunk Center.

But Iowa has much more than that. In Iowa City alone, we have a major medical center, a dynamic law school and one of the top music schools in the nation.

A week-long Fine Arts Festival this May will celebrate the opening of a $1.8 million art museum. North of the new museum, work is in progress on the $10.9 million Hancher Auditorium and music building. Other additions planned for the Fine Arts Complex will make Iowa City one of the major cultural centers in the country.

But all of Iowa is not as well endowed in the arts as this, its former capital city.

Fortunately, the legislature created the Iowa Arts Council in 1967. State funds and private contributions are matched in federal funds to take cultural activities under the council's sponsorship into communities that could not otherwise afford such events.

Many professional Iowa artists have cut their fees by one-third for events sponsored by the council, and, after the council's limited funds have been applied, the benefited communities seldom pay more than 10 per cent of the actual cost of the event. Any profits realized remain in the community to continue its cultural activities.

The University, through its Extension Division, departments and resident artists, has been deeply involved in the council's worthwhile activities. More than one dozen council-sponsored events in the nooks and crannies of the state last year involved University personnel.

For instance, world-famed violinist Charles Treger performed in Cherokee (pop. 7,724), the Iowa String Quartet — one of the top quartets in the country — took their priceless set of Stradivarius instruments to State Center (pop. 7,728) for a concert, and the antique opera house in What Cheer (pop. 956) held the University Opera Workshop's production of "Orpheus in the Underworld."

Robert Alexander, associate professor of art, is supervising a valuable inventory being taken of all public art objects and architectural landmarks in the state. The University Dance Theatre will present a concert of modern dance in Storm Lake later this spring.

Next year, for example, Artist Equity has offered a traveling exhibition, Simpson College will send its excellent Madrigal Singers on tour, and the Des Moines Civic Ballet plans an Iowa Dance Camp.

An original band composition is to be commissioned for the Eagle Grove Community Schools, a Fine Arts Festival is planned for Chariton (pop. 5,042), and an art review magazine is to be published.

Photo exhibits, a puppet show and a touring Shakespeare troupe further demonstrate the variety of programs sponsored by the Council.

But it may not last. Last week a legislative appropriations subcommittee voted not to include any funds for the Iowa Arts Council in the next budget. The governor had asked for $30,730 — administrative costs — for the council for each of the next two years. The council has had an appropriation of approximately $25,000 in past years.

The council operates under a federal plan that would provide from $31,000 to $45,000 next year, depending on Congress, to each of the states participating in the plan, but each state arts council must provide matching funds. The federal money must be used for programming and may not be used for administrative costs. The Iowa Arts Council has pledged of matching funds — many in the form of time and services — from various groups in the state, but these are useless if the council has no money to administer the program.

Surrounding states have not been stingy with their funds. Michigan, for example, puts $100,000 into its arts program each year. Minnesota has budgeted $85,000 in past years and its governor has recommended that the amount be doubled.

But a group in the Iowa legislature wants to withdraw all of this state's funds from its arts council.

The chairman of a joint appropriations subcommittee of state departments, Sen. John Mowry (R-Marshalltown), attempted to justify cutting off state funds to the council by drawing an analogy to the various agricultural commodity associations that have had their state funds withdrawn when they became self-supporting.

The analogy is faulty, for the Iowa Arts Council is not self-supporting, nor will it ever be. The arts have never been able to pay for themselves and will continue to require subsidies. But every penny of this subsidy is worth it because of the cultural enrichment the Iowa Arts Council has given to the state.

The legislature has spent much money through the Iowa Development Commission to attract industry and people to Iowa. To protect that investment, the legislature should budget more funds to the Iowa Arts Council to provide the cultural recreation to keep people here. Therefore, cutting off funds to the council would be false economy.

We hope the full appropriations committee or the legislative chambers will overrule the subcommittee.

Kooper, Bloomfield fool around on ego trips

The adventures — live or otherwise — of Al Kooper and Mike Bloomfield are probably best described as an ego-trip. Both are superb rock musicians — not blues, despite their pretension; that much should be gotten straight — who are at the moment unattached to any particular group, so they're spending their time fooling around. And that is what it is.

Both were leaders, last year, of important new groups, but both have moved on. Kooper's group, Blood, Sweat and Tears, has changed its style and actually improved since his departure. Bloomfield's group, the Electric Flag, dragged on for awhile after he left, then dissolved. In the meantime, here were these two really good rock musicians, both with probably a bundle of bread, no gig and, apparently, no new direction to go in or no desire to find a direction.

So instead they fool around. First came SUPER SESSION (Columbia CS-9701), with Kooper as main honcho — inspiration, producer of the album, keyboards, vocals, etc. Side one had Bloomfield as guitarist and side two featured Steve Silles, former lead guitarist for the now-defunct Buffalo Springfield — another good musician without a gig to call his own. The Bloomfield side has some boring blues numbers and isn't worth much — strictly fooling around. Silles actually saves this album — his country-flavored solos and hard-driving rhythm make side two very bouncy and extremely listenable, especially "It Takes a Lot to Laugh, It Takes a Train to Cry" and "Season of the Witch."

Then comes THE LIVE ADVENTURES OF MIKE BLOOMFIELD AND AL KOOPER (Columbia KGP6), which is no more than an extension of the "Super Session" album and idea. The first record was studio done, ostensibly a jam session but with a lot of work done after the original musicians were through — horn sections added, etc. "Live Adventures," a two-record set, was recorded live, at the Fillmore in San Francisco — a more-or-less untampered-with selection of the best work done during a three-night stand before an audience which was really just an excuse to get the thing recorded.

Perhaps because it was done live, perhaps because there's no electric studio gadgetry thrown in, or perhaps simply because they had played together before and therefore knew each other better now, "Live Adventures" is a far superior album to "Super Session." There is some pretty nice stuff here — both rock and blues (Elvin Bishop sits in on one side, replacing Bloomfield) — and undoubtedly a lot of people will hail this as a new breakthrough for rock — the live jam session, just like jazz has been doing for all its life — and an important, landmark recording. Maybe so, but still, a lot of it is boring and some of it is bad, and there's just no doubt that Bloomfield and Kooper are fooling around, avoiding the hard work of discovery which, as serious and talented musicians, they owe to at least themselves — if not their audiences — to get down to.

Coming hard on the heels of these two albums is a "solo" effort by Kooper. I STAND ALONE (Columbia CS-9718). Of course, he gets plenty of help from a band, an orchestra, a backup vocal group (the Blossoms — best thing on the record), but what this record is really is Kooper showing off — look, ma, I can write songs, arrange music, sing real good, play guitar and, wow, I'm a wizard on the keyboards. Well, okay, sure, what else is new? The original material is not particularly original; the arrangements are schlocky; Kooper's singing is nice but has been better; and so on. Some of these cuts sound like rejects from the first Blood, Sweat and Tears album; others, well... Kooper is a very heavy musician, no doubt about it, so he just doesn't do "bad" stuff. But this record was so clearly made for no better reason than to make a little money that it's a shame to even talk seriously about it. So let's not. Come on, Al, we know you can do better than that.

There is a final album from the Electric Flag, and it's called THE ELECTRIC FLAG (Columbia CS-9714). It's not very good, although it certainly isn't bad, and apparently was made only to fulfill a contract obligation. Bloomfield is gone and the heavy personality is drummer Buddy Miles. Actually, there are several personnel changes from the first Flag album, and this band is really a transitional one between the original Flag and the new Buddy Miles Express. The sound of this record is not that of the old Flag but it hasn't quite reached the furious, hard-driving intensity of the Express. Instead, it's somewhere in between, in limbo. Good R&B is what it is — a flag turning into an express, just starting to build up steam and not yet really moving.

CINEMA—

A flawed documentary

The Western Civilization Film Series feature, which will be shown at 8 p.m. today in the New Chemistry auditorium, is a French documentary of the first world war called "Over There." It shares the usual flaws of documentaries, but is despite these a film of merit.

Most documentaries suffer from a rather standard list of illnesses: a domination by commentary which succeeds only in distracting one from the visuals and refusing the film any real flow or rhythm of its own; a lack of concentration and power due to the attempt to cover too much territory and time; a recourse to certain conventional imagery for a situation, such as the imagery of street demonstrations and parades in this film; a failure to really vary the pace or tempo of the film in any expressive manner.

"Over There" has all of these flaws. The commentary tends to be snide and overly ironic, the commentator remaining silent at few moments in the film. The attempt to cover the entire war and its causes leads to a generalized and journalistic approach. The visuals are too often redundant and are seldom given the duration they deserve. This matter of duration leads to the choppy nature of the film's rhythm. It should come as no surprise that the most effective moment in the film is a long, uninterrupted shot of a man stacking dead bodies on a wooden platform.

What "Over There" does have to recommend it is material like the shot mentioned above. The documentary footage seems not only fresh but to have been chosen with a fine eye for detail and movement. There is also a nice sense of buildup and contrast in the joining of shots. And as always in documentaries there is that fantastic physical texture and tone of old film images, that sense of time and the past so impossible to duplicate in modern films.

"Over There" then is not a great documentary, but it is a film whose basic material is so strong and powerful in itself that the whole project takes on a not inconsiderable impact and drama. It is not the film of poets like Resnais, Marker, Franju; it is rather the film of compilers and craftsmen.

Due to the trauma of Refocus, I haven't been able to take in any of the uptown films till now. So I apologize for this late note on "The Magus." I must admit however that I didn't rush to see "The Magus." It promised little. The director

Guy Green has worked on such homely, humanitarian fare as "The Mark" and "Patch of Blue." The presence of Michael Caine in any film only assures the audience of a few ludicrous examples of cinematic sex. Candice Bergen's beauty is as wooden as her acting. I do not share the general adulation of Anthony Quinn.

Well, things turned out as expected, except that here Green has attempted to cope with the rather sophomoric and pointless games of John Fowles script. Bergen is awful, Caine continues to walk through his roles with an undisguised lack of interest only matched in the modern cinema by that voice without a soul called Richard Burton. Quinn recites all his little homilies with the ghost of Zorba the Greek still looking over his shoulder. Anna Karina is merely awkward speaking English.

The film itself seems incredibly long, taking time out as it does for pointless little romps in the woods, swims and sessions in bed. The story of the hero's (Caine's) adventures with the Magus or magician (Quinn) is elaborately worked out, involving as it does various interpretations of who or what the Magus actually is. It is even mildly amusing, to help you pass the time, to guess how things will turn out, not that it really matters.

The film remains fairly ambiguous throughout. It also remains detached, as if everyone concerned with the production had their minds on other things. The dissection of the hero (which is one way to see the film, as a psychodrama to reveal him to himself) continues from one overdramatized scene to another. There are flashbacks that are as trite and glossy if they deal with a past love as when they deal with wartime collaboration and massacre.

The production is lush (all the bad movies these days are lush), the locations picturesque, the color pretty if unexpressive. Green's direction is characterized by its lack of sweep, of movement, of economy, of stress or involvement. Anonymous directors have their place in the film and can well serve a good script. But when the script is ludicrous and needs a director who has at least the flair to cope and make something of the ludicrous, allow the exaggerations their head, then anonymity is a curse.

"The Magus" is cursed in all departments.

Sorry about the horse

A lot of people in Iowa City have been complaining about the water lately, but I think they're all getting carried away. I'm sure it isn't any different than water anywhere else — say, in Des Moines.

To prove that theory, I ran cold tap water into three test tubes, corked and labeled the samples, and sent them off to three different chemical laboratories for analysis.

The results weren't really conclusive one way or the other, but I did get some interesting replies.

The first analysis sent back a letter stating: "Your horse has diabetes."

The second analyst sent back a bill for $650, for damage to valuable chemical equipment.

The third analyst didn't reply himself, but I eventually got a letter from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. In the letter was an offer to buy my rocket fuel formula, if I could find some way to control its tendency to explode at high temperatures.

One of the news services covering the Iowa Legislature in Des Moines has sent out an urgent call for some temporary help; apparently the current session is producing so much news for them that they're getting swamped. Anyone interested should contact Ripley's Believe It Or Not, care of the Statehouse, Des Moines.

Another conflict is developing in the matter of campus security men carrying guns. Oh, the guns are all right, but the men can't decide what kind of holsters to wear; half want Sam Browne belts with the shoulder strap, and half want hand-tooled cowboy belts with quick-draw holsters and Roy Rogers silver buckles.

Nixon Receives Bill Raising Debt Ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate sent to President Nixon Wednesday a bill raising the national debt limit by $12 billion to a record $377 billion.

The measure, expected to be signed promptly, will enable the administration to meet its financial obligations in the immediate future.

Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy testified Monday the federal debt on April 15 was projected to exceed by more than $2 billion the present $365 billion ceiling.

The House passed the measure 313 to 92 on March 19.

The Senate vote Wednesday was 67 to 18.

The $12 billion increase will expire June 30, 1970, when the ceiling will return to a permanent $365 billion level.

This could force the administration to return to Congress next spring for another look at its fiscal policies, since the debt is projected to reach $374 billion in both March and April 1970.

Mesquakie Leader Explains Tama Tribe's Fight with U.S.

By PENNY MAHER
A student audience heard the leader of an Iowa Indian tribe predict Wednesday night that a defeat for the Indians in their current battle with the U.S. government could sound the death knell for the tribe.

Don Wanatee, secretary of the Mesquakie Tribal Council at Tama, told the approximately 40 students attending a Peace and Brotherhood Mass at the Union that the Mesquakies are fighting a last-ditch battle to maintain their culture and tribal ways.

"We want to retain our culture because we see value in it. We see our religion, kinship system and parents as valuable," he said.

Wanatee said that the policy of the Bureau of Indian Affairs has been to integrate Indians into the mainstream of American life and, in effect, to eliminate the tribes as cultural groups. As a part of this policy, the Mesquakie Community School in Tama was shut down last September.

The Mesquakie were successful in getting a court order to reopen the school but, Wanatee said, were having trouble getting an educational plan for the school approved.

"We have been going all over the country to get help. We want not only a good school but one that can be depended on and that we can be proud of," he said.

The educational plan that the Mesquakie tribe is proposing calls for a bilingual, bicultural day school on the tribal lands. Wanatee said that the Indians realize education is necessary, but that they feel they have a cultural advantage that cannot be gained from the white man.

Wanatee said that the Mesquakie school would combine the best of both cultures. He said a lack of cultural identity was the reason for most Indian dropouts from school, and that the educational plan the tribe proposed would encourage them to retain their identity as Mesquakie Indians, yet give them the tools necessary to participate in American society. "It is nice to teach the three R's, but it is better to teach how to live with your fellow men. I think we could do this with our community school," Wanatee said.

Wanatee said that the school would be controlled by and run for the Mesquakie Indians. The school would be financed by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, as provided for by treaties and federal law.

The Time of the Seasons

The seasons are funny, what with snow falling during the first week of spring in Iowa, so it shouldn't be surprising to learn that it's summer in Australia, down under. Sitting on a beach and getting a tan seems like an impossible dream for Iowans, but for pretty Sue Spratt, a 17-year-old Sydney girl, it's old hat. By the time girls are trying on their new bikinis, Sue will be sporting wools — autumn is coming on in Australia. — AP Wirephoto

Tennessee Ruling Could Affect Ray

NASHVILLE (AP) — In an action which could apply to James Earl Ray's case, the Tennessee Supreme Court ruled Wednesday a man convicted of a crime cannot win freedom on habeas corpus on grounds he was pressured by his lawyer to plead guilty.

Ray, serving a 99-year sentence for the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King, now claims he was induced by his lawyer, Percy Foreman of Houston, Tex., into pleading guilty.

Foreman has denied any pressure on Ray.

Referee OKs Bid by Tose For Eagles' Football Team

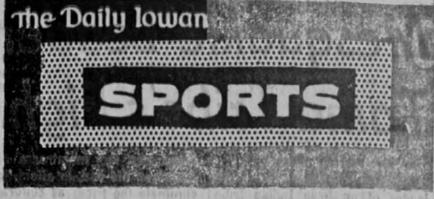

BALTIMORE (AP)—Sale of the Philadelphia Eagles on a conditional contract to Leonard H. Tose, Norristown, Pa., trucking executive, was confirmed Wednesday in a hearing before a federal bankruptcy referee.

Joseph O. Kaiser, the referee, said final settlement for the team would have to be made on May 1, but that the present owner, Jerry Wolman, would have the right to repurchase it by Aug. 1. In an unusual development, Tose admitted that the price had now gone up to $16,155,000, caused by an agreement that he would pay the fee of a Washington broker. The broker, Robert Melnick, will receive a $100,000 fee paid by Tose in addition to the $16,055,000 originally bid for the team.

Tose told a newsman after the hearing that he could make no decisions for the team until May 1, when he expected to be the executive head of the Eagles organization.

"I will have the final say, including the bid," he said, adding that he expected to delegate authority "to people I put in charge."

Yanks Beat Tigers' McLain

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Rookie Bobby Murcer tagged off Denny McLain, ace of the Tiger staff, who worked the first six innings for Detroit. Bill Burbach, another New York rookie, allowed just one hit in the six innings he pitched.

Jim McAndrew pitched six shutout innings and rookie Wayne Garrett tagged a pair of home runs, leading the New York Mets to a 6-3 victory over Cincinnati. Alex Johnson rapped a three-run homer for the Reds.

Tim McCarver's two-out, two-run double carried St. Louis to a 2-1 victory over Boston. The Cards bunched three of their four hits off Ray Culp to score both their runs in the fourth inning.

The White Sox used hits by Luis Aparicio and Duane Josephson, a walk and an error for a pair of first inning runs that beat Pittsburgh 2-1.

The Chicago Cubs ripped Sam McDowell for six runs in the fourth inning and walloped Cleveland 10-0 for their fourth straight victory. Ken Holtzman went seven innings, striking out six.

Wrestlers Hope to Improve Record in NCAA Tourney

By MIKE SLUTSKY
Iowa's wrestling team will try to add some sparkle to an already outstanding season when the Hawkeyes head west to compete in the NCAA championships beginning today at Provo, Utah. Coach Dave McCuskey's team, with a 15-2 record, enjoyed the finest dual-meet season in Iowa history, and went on to finish second in the Big 10 meet.

The Hawkeyes have had about three weeks since the Big 10 championships to prepare for the NCAA meet and some changes have been made in the lineup.

Rich Mihal, who had a 14-1 dual-meet record and placed second in the Big 10 at 160 pounds, has been dropped to the 152-pound division. He has switched places with Joe Wells, who had a 7-0 record and placed third in the Big 10 at 152.

McCuskey said that Mihal had wrestled under his 160-pound weight limit much of the season and should have a better chance of doing well in the 152-pound class. One of Wells' biggest assets, according to McCuskey, is his quickness. This should give him an advantage in the heavier and slower weight classes even though he may be giving away some size.

Don Yahn has regained the 145 spot which he lost mid-way through the season. Yahn failed to make weight for the Oklahoma meet and saw no action the remainder of the season. Yahn, who posted a 6-3 dual-meet record, replaces John Irvine.

For the first time in 16 years, freshmen will compete for an Iowa varsity team. A Big 10 ruling earlier this month allows freshmen to compete in NCAA meets and the Hawks will have two rookies in the lineup at Provo.

The two will be Dave LaRoche of Chicago and Paul Zander of Tripoli. LaRoche will wrestle at 115 and Zander at 191, two weights not used in Big 10 competition.

The remainder of Iowa's line-up will be Tom Bentz (9-3) at 123, Don Briggs (4-2) at 130, Joe Carstensen (13-2) at 137, Steve DeVries (125) at 167, Verlyn Strellner (11-1-1) at 177 and Dale Stearns (11-1-1) at heavyweight.

DeVries, like Mihal, was a second-place finisher in the Big 10. Strellner and Stearns joined Wells in capturing third places in the conference meet and Briggs took a fourth. McCuskey said Tuesday that he thought the Hawks will do well at Provo. "We've got real good balance and everybody is in good shape. I'm hoping that we'll get some of the boys up to the top."

Most of Iowa's competitors have had dual-meet records and should get seeded fairly high. The seedings will not be announced until this morning but McCuskey is confident that Stearns, Strellner, Mihal, Wells, Carstensen and DeVries will all be seeded high and should have good chances at going far in the tournament.

Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Iowa State (all from the Big 8) and Big 10 champion Michigan State are all rated as contenders for the NCAA team title. Those four, in that order, have been rated the top four teams in the country in the latest ratings by Amateur Wrestling News. Iowa was ranked fifth in the poll. McCuskey said that a lot of individuals entered the meet as independents and often pulled quite a few surprises. McCuskey said that Navy, rated the best in the East, and Oregon State, best in the West, could also come through with some surprises.

Yankee Failure Mike Hegan Looks Better in Pilot Uniform

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP)—Ever since scout Bill Skiff came out with the promise to "give up my year's salary if the kid fails," Mike Hegan has been playing as though it was his money.

Mike, son of famous Cleveland catcher Jim Hegan, has been mashing the ball in the healthy .400 neighborhood in the Seattle Pilot camp this spring, but he was tucked away in Syracuse a year ago with nothing to recommend him but Skiff.

The man who signed him originally in 1962 was Skiff, now a Pilot scout but then on the New York Yankee staff. The Yanks looked upon young Hegan as their Mickey Mantle insurance—but when Mantle finally retired the policy had run out.

Hegan hit a sad .136 in 68 games with the Yanks in 1967 and they sent him down to Syracuse in 1968. This used up their last option and Mike, batting only .260 on the farm team, appeared headed for a minor league career or obscurity at age 27.

Swayed by Skiff, general manager Marvin Milkes bought Hegan for the Pilots. Rumor has set the price at $25,000. Milkes says it was more, but nowhere near the $175,000 he had to pay for each player picked in the expansion draft.

"I," Mike remembers, "was overjoyed."

Hegan came out from the shadow of Mantle swinging a heavy bat and raised his average to .304 by the end of the Syracuse season.

He picked up the bat again this spring and hit the ball like there had been no winter interlude. Facing more pitching than any other player in camp, Mike had a .426 average after 47 times at bat.

"I feel good at the plate," says Hegan. "It gives you confidence to get a good start. I feel now I can concentrate on playing without the pressure of having to make an impression."

Namath, Gleason Battle on Links, Add Vaudeville to Big Time Golf

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—"Suppose a ball gets lost in your beard," Jackie Gleason said to Joe Namath, "can I play it out?"

"Yeah, you can shake it out," countered Namath. "Your mouth is as fat as your belly. I'm going to cream you today."

"You have to hit the ball into the cup, you can't throw it in," said Gleason.

The crowd went into hysterics. It's easy to see why vaudeville died.

Vaudeville came to big time golf Wednesday when Gleason, the fat TV comedian, and Namath the bearded New York Jets quarterback who looks like a character out of Arabian Nights, were paired in the $5,000 charity duel.

The straight men were Arnold Palmer, the golfing capitalist who goes around with his own private army, and Dr. Hans Zimmerman, a retired Honolulu internist. The doctor paid $10,000 for the privilege of completing the millionaire foursome in the pro-am tournament preceding the $200,000 National Airlines Open, starting today.

"I've always admired Palmer and I'm getting to like Namath, I don't care much for Gleason," said the 64-year-old physician, a gray-haired man with thick spectacles. "Besides, the money goes to a children's hospital — a good cause."

The German-born doctor swung with all his might on the first tee and the ball dribbled about 100 yards. Everybody thought he might ask for his money back.

Gleason wore a red hat, red patent-leather shoes and a pair of red checkered slacks which one pundit said looked like a tablecloth from an Italian restaurant. A banquet table.

Namath wore candy-striped cotton slacks that fit his fragile football legs like paper on the wall.

Before he teed off, hitting a lady-like slice, Gleason yelled over to Palmer: "Okay, Arnie, don't be nervous."

The gallery chortled. Jackie obviously missed his script writers. If it had been for real instead of fun, the show would have been cancelled.

Namath, who grips a club as if he's trying to choke it to death, hit a curve ball to left field. It would have been a foul in Yankee Stadium.

Palmer, upstaged, sent a screamer down the middle of the fairway and about a thousand people, who paid $6 a head to follow the foursome, trooped down the fairway in a peppering rain.

What was it that Barnum said?

Mercifully, a heavy rainstorm stopped play after nine holes — canceling the program—with Namath 4-up on his 260-pound adversary. Gleason wrote a $5,000 check to charity, using an overlapping grip.

7 Journalism Students Vie For Daily Iowan Editorship

Seven students have applied for the position of editor of The Daily Iowan for the 1969-70 school year.

Applicants are: Larry Chandler, A3, Waterloo, news-editorial journalism; Mike Finn, A4, Jefferson, public relations (journalism); Lowell Forte, G, Webster City, journalism and law; Eliot Keller, A3, Moline, Ill., radio-television journalism; Malvin E. Moore, G, Iowa City, news-editorial journalism; Don Nichols, A3, Burlington, public relations (journalism); and Susan Sanders, A3, Kansas City, Mo., news-editorial journalism and political science.

Candidates will be interviewed at 7 tonight by the Board of Trustees of Student Publications, Inc., the governing body of the DI and Hawkeye yearbook. The SPI board hopes to reach a decision on the new editor by April 15.

SPI board members say they won't begin choosing an editor for the Hawkeye until after the DI editor is chosen. Applications for Hawkeye editor are still available in 201 Communications Center.

School Board Reviews Personnel, Theory Blasted—5-Year Building Plan

The Iowa City Community Board of Education heard a plan to spread $5.2 million (including a $4.4 million bond issue approved in February) over a five-year building program Tuesday night.

Bids will be opened April 22 on construction of an addition to the Hills Elementary School. The opening, and a public hearing will be held at 2:30 p.m. in the Board of Education office.

A total cost of $231,500 was estimated for the building program. However, construction could cost up to $261,500, if air-conditioning is installed and the parking lot is resurfaced.

These items could be omitted, as could carpeting and finish in four classrooms. All these omissions could cut the cost to $194,500.

James D. Blank, elementary education director, presented a five-year plan for financing the district's building projects. The object of the presentation was not immediate action, but consideration by the board.

In other action, the board formally approved a $6,600-base teachers' salary schedule for the 1969-70 school year. A salary schedule for secretarial and clerical workers was also approved.

A tentative list of teachers for next year was presented and received the board's approval. This does not include new teachers who will be hired later or presently employed teachers who will resign after the current school year.

Representatives of the Hawkeye Bikeways System, subcommittee of Project Green, presented their bicycle paths proposal to the board and received an endorsement. The board approved the construction of paths to serve as access routes to City High School and Southeast Junior High School.

T-Groups Draw Criticism

By LARRY CHANDLER (Last of a Three-Part Series)

Criticism of the human relations program ranges from criticism of the personnel who conduct the program to criticism of the theory of sensitivity training.

Kenneth Weene, G, Newton, Mass., who has been involved in human relations programs in the Boston area, agreed with sensitivity training but opposed the University's program.

Weene, a psychology student, said he felt that if a program is properly conducted, it can be positive experience.

Weene said that there are three general arguments against sensitivity training. The first is that sensitivity training doesn't do anything.

A lack of research is the cause of the dogmatic stands taken by the opposing sides, Weene said. Neither side has evidence that can really support their position and consequently the arguments usually degenerate into personal feuds.

John Campbell and Marvin Dunnette, psychologists at the University of Minnesota, did an exhaustive study on the effects of sensitivity training. They found that "the trainee's own judgments made at the conclusion of the training period were not related to the amount of change their observers reported. Such a finding suggests that self-insight was not achieved and was not, therefore, the mediator of the observed behavior changes."

healthier than the repressive values of society."

The most important factor as to whether a T-group is good or not, to Weene, is the leadership. "Whether it works or not is how well trained the leadership is."

The trainers must be capable of handling dangerous psychological situations. Weene said he had witnessed hysteria and even breakdowns in some T-group sessions.

Weene said that trainers should have their qualifications and roles specifically defined and should be licensed by the state.

At this time, trainers are not licensed in any way by any governing body.

Weene said he considered inadequately trained people conducting sensitivity training programs as being involved in "dangerous, improper and decidedly unethical and unprofessional activity."

Weene said that "from what I have been able to ascertain to date about the program offered here, it meets none of these qualifications."

He said the use of inadequately trained and inadequately supervised student trainers was "setting student trainers up for major emotional trauma and potentially serious psychiatric illness."

The sensitivity training people at the University countered criticism with their research and said that their people have been adequately trained.

One of the members of the program, Eugene F. Gauron, assoc. professor of psychiatry, agreed that trainers should be licensed or certified in some way.

Opposition at the student level is being led by Gary Lane, L3, Iowa City. Lane feels that the program benefits too few students for the amount of student money from the activities fund which is put into the program.

He said he expected to oppose the program at the Student Senate's spring budget hearings.

Lane and another law student,

Pat Kelley, L3, Ames, also oppose the program on theoretical grounds.

Kelley said, "It seems to me the basic idea of sensitivity training is dangerous." He said he felt that "in certain cases there is some attempt to change personality."

Lane and Kelley said they felt the group had lasting coercive effects on participants. Kelley said, "There is the fact that a lot of people keep going back and back as if they're addicted."

Kelley continued "a lot of the people involved, including the director, are addicted."

Sensitivity training is a hot issue. It can conjure up images of 1964 or man's progress, depending on whom one talks to.

But the issue and program are still there. The issue will become increasingly important due to the greatly increased and widespread use of the process. The question remains whether it is brainwashing or a new way for man to cope with the computerized society.

Mississippi Up in Arms Over a Joke

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis has apologized for the joke about Mississippi and the governor has accepted, but a television station is not ready to forgive and there's even talk of a Senate investigation.

Lewis reportedly said on the "Tonight" show Monday that while flying to New York he had used the rest room over Mississippi, fulfilling a long-standing ambition.

It set off a tempest. Gov. John Bell Williams and other state officials demanded that the National Broadcasting Co. apologize for the comment and Tuesday night Lewis, hosting the show in the absence of Johnny Carson, said:

"Last night we did a joke which I suspect, in reflecting, wasn't terribly funny and we did offend some of our friends in Mississippi. I openly, publicly and humbly apologize. That certainly was not my intention . . . to offend."

The governor said Wednesday he accepted the apology because Lewis had "made the effort" to set things straight.

Ceramic Sculpture To Be Exhibited By 3 UI Artists

A three-man show of 60 pieces of ceramic sculpture and experimental sculpture by two University art alumni and a graduate student in art will open Sunday and run through April 27 at the Davenport Municipal Art Gallery.

The artists are David Middlebrook, G. Jackson, Mich. Stephens, Rock Island, Ill., an instructor in ceramics at the State University of Wisconsin, who earned an M.F.A. degree from the University in 1967; and Daniel Lowery, St. Louis, who was awarded an M.F.A. degree with honors in February.

The three were asked by the Davenport gallery to give the show after they won prizes in the gallery's Mid Mississippi Annual last fall. Lowery won the "best-in-show" prize; Middlebrook, the first prize in sculpture, and Kemeneff, the second prize in sculpture.

Mid-Iowa Flood Threat Down Former Hawk Symington Leans Toward Dove Nest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Fluctuations of water levels are still occurring on the upper Des Moines River, but flood forecasters said Wednesday the threat of flooding has been diminished steadily by the colder temperatures. The Weather Bureau also said that moderate inflows of runoff water are to be expected in northern Iowa over the next few days. The East Fork of the Des Moines River was one foot above flood stage at Burt Wednesday, but at Humboldt the West Fork remained below flood stage.

A drop in the Des Moines at Boone was noted Wednesday morning. The water level at Waterworks Dam was 12.4 feet. The flood stage at the dam is 12 feet.

In the capital city, the Des Moines River reached 25.8 feet at Southeast 14th Street where the flood stage is 21 feet.

At Southwest 18th Street the Raccoon River's north branch crested at 14.8 feet and began dropping slowly. Flood stage at that point is 12 feet.

The Iowa River passed its 16-foot crest at Marshalltown Wednesday and dropped to 15.2 feet. The flood stage there is 13 feet.

Several rivers have passed their crests at various points, among them the Boone River at Webster City; the South Raccoon at Norwalk; and the Cedar above Waterloo.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), once considered so much a part of the military establishment he was labeled the "senator from the Air Force," says Congress is no longer prone to take the word of the Pentagon.

"In the past," Symington said in an interview, "we have been more prone to take the words of a combination of the civilian and military in the Pentagon. I think

"I have a peculiar position because most of the members of the Armed Services Committee, with the exceptions that prove the rule, are what would normally be considered hawks.

"And most of the members of the Foreign Relations Committee — or many of them might be better — are what normally are considered doves . . .

"But I believe being the only member of either party on both these committees, I think it's been a good thing for me because I'm certain in my own mind I would feel more dovish if I were only on Foreign Relations and more hawkish if I were only on Armed Services."

There was a time when Symington was considered, possibly unfairly, to be a super-hawk clutching megaton bombs.

But the tall, gray, well-tailored senator who was Harry S. Truman's favorite candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960, has become critical of the war and of the ABM deployment proposals, skeptical of the merit and costs of the nation's far-flung military bases and commitments, and unhappy over the free use of secrecy labels.

Symington, also one of the select few on the Senate's special group, overseeing super-secret CIA operations, says that in general "there has been too much mystery, too much classification, too much secrecy, which, I think, is a way of covering up."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commuters "are going to walk to work instead of ride" if traffic congestion gets much worse in the nation's cities, says Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe.

"If you get down to a point where automobiles have to travel five miles an hour, well, you know how long people are going to use them," the former Massachusetts governor said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"They are going to walk to work instead of ride. Of course," added Volpe, a physical fitness advocate, "it wouldn't hurt them if they did."

The secretary said it may be necessary to restrict use of automobiles in cities unless a mass transit breakthrough is achieved soon.

Volpe said congestion now keeps traffic crawling at an average pace of 7 miles per hour in New York City. In 1917, he said, traffic there moved at an average speed of 11 miles an hour.

"So we haven't made much progress in over half a century. So something needs to be done and it needs to be done in a bold and imaginative way," the secretary said.

"Either we make a great deal more progress in mass transportation than we've made in the last five years, or within the next year or two, you're going to have to come to some type of restriction on certain areas within . . . the core city on the utilization of the automobile," Volpe said.

"It could be the utilization of trucks. I mean the delivery of goods during certain hours. It could be the separation of pedestrian and vehicle traffic . . . We are going to have to come to some type of solution along those lines."

Volpe said it is essential that mass transportation "catch up" with highway construction "and minimize these tremendous delays and congestion which are taking place, which are just going to choke the economy of our major cities."

Money to finance a mass transit breakthrough, Volpe said, could come through creation of a mass transit fund, similar to the highway fund used to construct the federal interstate system.

Volpe said he hopes that Congress, if it should reject a trust fund, would provide "a substantial increase" in funds available "to get the program started in a little higher gear than it's going right now."

Congress has authorized $175 million for urban mass transit for both 1969 and 1970. The Johnson administration sought a $25 million increase in the 1970 allocation.

Volpe conceded that revolutionary new systems have no bearing on immediate problems such as getting workers who don't own cars out of the inner city to suburban factories.

"We've got to provide a means of transportation for these people to get these jobs and we can't wait five years to get the answers," he said.

Senate Unit OKs 'Emergency' Bill

DES MOINES (AP) — A bill placing all Iowa law enforcement officers under the control of the governor in the event of an emergency has been approved by the Senate Law Enforcement Committee.

The bill also provides that the governor "shall establish a riot control and emergency mobilization plan to suppress any riotous disturbance."

Supporters of the bill say it is directed at handling labor troubles, student disturbances and racial outbreaks.

City Traffic Jams Worrying Volpe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commuters "are going to walk to work instead of ride" if traffic congestion gets much worse in the nation's cities, says Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe.

"If you get down to a point where automobiles have to travel five miles an hour, well, you know how long people are going to use them," the former Massachusetts governor said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"They are going to walk to work instead of ride. Of course," added Volpe, a physical fitness advocate, "it wouldn't hurt them if they did."

The secretary said it may be necessary to restrict use of automobiles in cities unless a mass transit breakthrough is achieved soon.

Volpe said congestion now keeps traffic crawling at an average pace of 7 miles per hour in New York City. In 1917, he said, traffic there moved at an average speed of 11 miles an hour.

"So we haven't made much progress in over half a century. So something needs to be done and it needs to be done in a bold and imaginative way," the secretary said.

Volpe said it is essential that mass transportation "catch up" with highway construction "and minimize these tremendous delays and congestion which are taking place, which are just going to choke the economy of our major cities."

Cure "Octoplugitis" with Full HOUSEPOWER

Modern living demands a modern home wiring system. In part, this means planned convenience outlets to eliminate extension cords and "Octoplugs."

Wires must be heavy enough to carry the power needed for peak performance of lights and appliances.

Other requirements are a three-wire, 100-ampere service entrance (the minimum for a modern home) and the proper number of branch circuits.

With the addition of so many new appliances in recent years, it's not surprising that many homes do not have full HOUSEPOWER.

CHECK the following list to find out if your wiring is inadequate:

YES NO

Do lights dim when certain appliances are turned on?

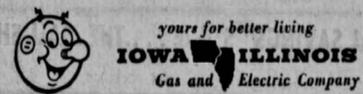

Does your TV picture shrink when appliances are in use?

Are several appliances or lamps plugged into one outlet?

Do you have to limit the use of appliances to avoid blowing a fuse or tripping a circuit breaker?

If you checked "Yes" to one or more items, it's an indication of low HOUSEPOWER.

For assistance in planning improved home wiring, call your electrical contractor.

Paris Talks May Get Hint Of 'New Look'

PARIS (AP) — The Vietnam peace talks go into their 10th full-scale session today with just a hint of a new look, but the U.S. delegation appears anxious to avoid raising expectations too high.

Another round of a stereotyped formal statements is expected, but the Americans and South Vietnamese will be listening for changes in tone or emphasis by the North Vietnamese and National Liberation Front delegations, to determine whether there is any solid retraction to Saigon's bid for direct private talks.

The Americans will not, in any case, comment on reports that some sort of private talks already have been started. The feeling here is that the Paris talks now are at the point where the two sides are maneuvering to prepare for the long-awaited "second stage."

President Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu have provided something of a new look for the talks.

The U.S. President did so by discussing his views on strictly secret talks, as if suggesting that contacts already have been made or are about to be. The Saigon leader did so by what the Americans regard as clearing the air about his position with regard to approaching the NLF.

MAIL HITS NEW LOW—TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli authorities have set up the world's lowest post office in occupied Jordanian territory near the Dead Sea. The site is 1,292 feet below sea level.
