John L. Lewis, UMW President, Dies at 89

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — John L. Lewis, president emeritus of the United Mine Workers (UMW) and one of the giants of the American labor movement, died Wednesday night, an aide said. He was 89.

The aide, Rex Lauck, said Lewis died about 7 p.m. CDT in a Washington hospital, but had no further details immediately.

"We are all so fearful that I don't even want to talk about it," Lauck said. He said the mineworkers union would announce further details Thursday.

Lewis, who waged notable battles with the White House and the coal industry in his heyday as UMW president, had served in recent years as trustee of the union's multimillion-dollar health and welfare fund.

He showed up regularly in his office until recent failing health.

A UMW spokesman said the welfare fund trustees met at Lewis' home a few days before his death.

Lewis had been president of the mineworkers for 40 years, until his retirement in 1960.

He became head of the union in 1920, and headed its frequently bloody organizing battles and strikes through the next three decades — then in the renewed industrial warfare that came after World War II.

Lewis lived across the Potomac River in Alexandria, Va., in the historic boyhood home of Robert E. Lee.

His wife, Myrta, died in 1942.

Surtax Extension in Doubt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration went hunting Wednesday for liberal Democratic votes to help pass the surtax extension — and the results were in dispute.

Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy met with about 50 members of a House liberal organization, the Democratic Study group.

A number of them told newsmen afterward they saw no sign he had changed the general disposition not to vote a surtax extension without coupling it with tax reform.

But Kennedy said he thought he had made progress and he declared, "I think our program can be voted out of committee and passed in the House. . . . I was surprised at some of the sympathetic voices."

There were other indications of administration concern as the June 30 expiration date for the surtax edged closer.

President Nixon scheduled a bipartisan meeting with House leaders Thursday, his first with members of only one branch of Congress. Among those invited were top members of the Ways and Means Committee, Speaker of the House John W. McCormack (D-Mass.) and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

Administration hopes were boosted a bit by support from two members of the Democratic leadership. McCormack told a news conference he favors Nixon's proposal to keep the surtax in effect for another year on a diminishing basis in a battle to combat inflation.

The White House did some inconclusive backing and filling on the question of wage and price controls, with press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler saying that remains as a possible alternative if Congress declines to extend the surcharge.

"I'm not ruling it out," Ziegler said of wage-price controls, "except to say there is no plan to move in that direction should the surtax fail to pass."

The Treasury Department made public a joint statement by the six living former treasury secretaries urging prompt extension of the surcharge. It was signed by John W. Snyder, George M. Humphrey, Robert B. Anderson, Douglas Dillon, Henry H. Fowler and Joseph W. Barr.

City, UI Will Discuss False Fire Alarms

By DEBBIE JUNGMAN Of the Iowa High School Journalism Workshop

Dormitory and student affairs personnel will meet today to discuss possible disciplinary measures for controlling the false fire alarm situation in University dormitories.

City Manager Frank Smiley Tuesday called the University's response to the problem "substantially less than satisfactory."

Smiley threatened to disconnect the fire alarm system in University dormitories unless adequate precautions were taken to prevent future prank alarms.

The alarm system, according to Smiley, is state-owned, but the city provides the necessary local connection at the municipal fire station.

Thus, according to David H. Vernon, dean of the College of Law, the city can legally disconnect the system.

But Section 100.31 of the Code of Iowa states that every school building must have an alarm system.

Smiley Wednesday described his threat as a "last resort," deliberately made to put pressure on University officials.

Phil Connell, assistant to President Howard R. Bowen, said Wednesday that Smiley's threat was not a "plausible solution" to the situation.

"This is not a new problem," Connell said. "Students this year did not invent the problem. They've inherited the idea."

Records show that the number of false reports are "considerably fewer than last year," Connell said.

He noted, however, that the recent concentration of 13 such calls in May of this year made the problem seem worse than it was.

"I'm totally sympathetic with the city and the fire chief," Connell concluded. "This is a real headache and we've got to get something worked out."

According to Richard M. Trumpe, associate dean of student affairs, a "wide range of approaches" have been employed in the University's attempt to control the alarm situation.

Penalties imposed by student committees, expulsion from dormitories and police court convictions were listed by Trumpe as past actions taken by the University concerning student offenders.

Fines of $50 apiece were handed to two violators last week in criminal court, according to Trumpe.

He advocated the court system in dealing with offenders.

Regarding the effectiveness of such legal discipline, Trumpe maintained that it's "too early" to judge the effects of the convictions.

"We need a number of cases to begin to assess the effects," he said.

Fire Chief Dean Bebee said Wednesday, however, that criminal charges and fines were not the answer to the problem.

"The University should simply tell students," Bebee advised, "that if they do it and are caught they will not be in school."

State Fire Marshal Wilbur Johnson also advocated an expulsion policy.

Mayor Loren Hickerson said Wednesday he thought the city had a serious problem, but added that Smiley's threat would, he hoped, not be necessary.

Bill Arbes, Men's Residence Halls head counselor, said the city was justified in being upset over the matter.

Arbes advocated severe disciplinary action on the part of the University and the city, including possible suspension or expulsion of offenders.

Provisional Government To Take NLF Seat

PARIS (AP) — The new Viet Cong-backed provisional revolutionary government of South Vietnam announced Wednesday that it would take over the seat of the National Liberation Front (NLF) at the Paris peace talks.

The announcement came on the eve of the 21st full-scale session of the stalemated talks and is expected to go into effect when the negotiators enter the International Conference Center Thursday morning.

No complications were expected, since U.S. and South Vietnamese official sources made it clear in advance that they regarded the switch as nothing more than a change of name.

A South Vietnamese spokesman called the formation of the new government acrobatics, which will create additional obstacles to negotiation; but he said, "No matter what the Communists do or say, they cannot change the character of the Paris talks which are meetings between two sides."

U.S. sources noted that Washington always had regarded its adversaries in the talks as the other side and would continue to do so, regardless of nomenclature.

In Washington, State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey said the United States would continue to negotiate with the enemy side at the Paris talks under whatever name it calls itself.

McCloskey said the take-over by the new regime is simply a case of old wine in a new bottle. One U.S. official in Paris described it as a typical Communist concoction.

The change-over apparently will not involve any demand for recognition. Such an issue has not been raised by the new government and it would be unusual in view of the fact that neither the NLF nor the Hanoi government is recognized by Saigon and Washington.

Kiem confirmed earlier reports that Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, his 41-year-old deputy, had been named foreign minister of the provisional government and would head the delegation to the Paris talks.

At a news conference, Kiem made clear that the new government would take over the NLF program and press the same demands at the peace talks.

He implied that the provisional government would under no circumstances negotiate with the present Saigon government.

Kiem spelled out the aims of the revolutionary government as the NLF broadcast over the clandestine Viet Cong radio in Vietnam what it said was the new political unit's 12-point action plan.

Among other things, the plan promised to cooperate with other political parties in South Vietnam as well as abroad to set up a provisional coalition government. This government will organize a general election to create a national assembly.

Registration Begins Monday

Summer registration begins at 8 a.m. Monday and the first day of classes starts at 7 a.m. Tuesday.

This year, only the eight-week summer session will officially be offered. However, both the Department of Chemistry and the Department of Spanish-Portuguese will hold classes for 12 weeks.

General and Organic Chemistry courses will be held for 12 weeks and Intermediate Spanish will be taught for six weeks, to be followed by a six-week session in Introduction to Hispanic Literature.

The eight week session will end Aug. 8.

The Action Studies Program will offer four courses this summer — A Comparative Analysis of Student Movements, Action Theater, Christian Pacifism, and White Racism: Study and Action.

Legislators Ask Control Over University Tuition

DES MOINES (AP) — Legislative control over tuition hikes — or possibly over spending — by Iowa's three state universities may be necessary, two leading legislators said Wednesday.

An immediate legislative study of spending at the University of Iowa, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa to determine how best to approach the problem was urged by Sens. Joseph Flatt (R-Winterest) and Francis Messerly (R-Cedar Falls).

Flatt is chairman of the Senate Higher Education Committee and Messerly heads the Senate Appropriations Committee. Both said they opposed the 60 per cent tuition fee increases recently approved by the State Board of Regents.

They asked immediate authorization for the study by the newly formed Legislative Council, which held its first meeting in Des Moines Wednesday.

Sen. Seeley Lodwick (R-Waver) chairman of the council, said the group would defer action until its July 9 meeting.

"I think it is now necessary to move away from the position of just appropriating money with no strings attached," Flatt said.

"I'm of the opinion the Regents have more money than they need now," he said.

Flatt indicated the legislature may insist on budgeting appropriations for the universities in greater detail than those approved during the 1969 session. Each school got a lump sum to spend as school officials see fit.

"I am giving consideration to whether the legislature should have some opportunity to okay tuition increases," Messerly said.

Messerly, a Cedar Falls contractor, called for a complete investigation into all spending policies of the universities as soon as possible.

Messerly said results of the investigation might convince the Regents to rescind part of the tuition fee hikes ranging from $200 to $250 at the universities, effective next fall.

Two Republican legislative leaders were chosen to head the newly created Legislative Council over protests by the four Democratic council members.

Inflation Controls Bring Downsurge in Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Concerned over lack of a breakthrough in Vietnam peace talks, nagged by increasing inflation and squeezed by tight money, the stock market has plunged more than 60 points on the Dow Jones average since mid-May.

The Dow industrial barometer closed Wednesday at 904.60, a 6 per cent decline from the 968.85 pinnacle of May 14. It had been as high as 985 last December.

The mid-May downturn followed two months of advance. A groping, lackluster market in mid-March had perked up on rumors of a peace breakthrough, sending the Dow average up more than 60 points.

Restrictive action by the Federal Reserve Board (Fed) in an effort to cool the overheating economy has put a real crunch on the money and credit supply, said Eldon Grimm, senior vice president and analyst for Walston & Co. on Wall Street.

The idea is to deflate the economy — to bring on a mini-recession, he said.

Skyrocketing interest rates have been one result of the Fed's race to close the gap on an inflation roaring off at near 8 per cent.

Stock brokers last week saw their brokers' loan rate upped to 8½ per cent. This is the interest brokers must pay on the money they borrow to help customers buy on margin.

But Bache & Co. commented that lending rates no longer were the problem. Availability of cash was the problem.

This was demonstrated Monday when the nation's banks raised their prime rate of interest to a record 8½ per cent. In effect, they were saying they didn't have enough money to go around and they expected the rate to chase some customers off.

The signal was read to mean tighter money all around.

Also, certain issues took a beating in reaction to news developments.

Conglomerates have been under fire by the Justice Department and analysts say mergers have declined sharply from their heady 1968 pace.

Squabbles over defense spending and the antiballistic missile have kicked down the aerospace industry, Grimm said.

And with the Nixon administration's asking for extension of the surtax and proposing to do away with the 7 per cent investment tax credit, there has been a retrenching in capital expenditure plans by airlines, machinery manufacturers, computer leasers and railroads.

After all the news has run its course and taken its toll, furthermore, scare selling extracts its fee, said Grimm.

About half the reason for the market's going down is scare selling, he said.

City Urban Renewal Project Delayed

Iowa City's urban renewal project is not expected to begin until sometime next year, since the proposed project is still under study by federal attorneys in Chicago.

The plans must be approved by federal officials before the city can take any further action on renewal. A public hearing, which would be followed by a council vote on whether to accept or reject the project, now apparently will be held in September. The hearing was originally planned for July.

Remarks cost Lieutenant White House spot

Reprinted From The Washington Post
 Air Force First Lt. Joseph E. Caudle's remarks last month criticizing Washington's Cherry Blossom Festival as an example of "defacto segregation," has cost him the chance to serve as a White House social aide.

The White House confirmed that Lt. Caudle's name was withdrawn by the Air Force on April 14.

"He was still in the screening process, and it would have been another month before the screening would have been completed," Lt. Cmdr. Charles R. Larson, chief of White House social aides, said.

Larson added that Caudle had been to the White House one time to observe the duties of social aides. It was on a Saturday at a reception given by Mrs. Nixon for wives of obstetricians, Caudle said.

The 23-year-old Air Force officer, who is an astronautical engineer assigned to the Armed Forces Technical Applications Center in Alexandria, Va., said he was told he was removed from the social aides list "not for what I said, but the fact that I said it."

He said he preferred not to discuss the matter further.

As an escort for the princess from Colorado during the April festival, Caudle was instructed to introduce her to the audience of 10,000. When he did so, he added his opinion that the absence of blacks from the group of 50 princesses was "extremely inappropriate" for an event in Washington.

An Air Force spokesman said Caudle had been selected in February to serve as a White House social aide, and that while the Air Force respects the individual's personal opinion, it was felt Caudle chose an inappropriate time to express it.

No action was taken against him, nor is there any stigma attached to his record because of his removal from the list, the spokesman claimed.

He termed Caudle "a very bright fellow" who graduated from the Air Force Academy in 1967 and had been a Fulbright scholar in Germany.

The White House, he continued, was not involved in the removal of Caudle's name from the list.

Nader's Raiders set

From The New York Times
 WASHINGTON, May 31 — More than 80 law, medical and engineering students have been recruited by Ralph Nader as members of investigating teams that will descend on a dozen or so Federal agencies this summer.

"These students are going to reach for the cobwebs," Nader, the crusading lecturer and writer on consumer causes, said in an interview.

"They will be studying how the agencies actually operate, to what extent they are carrying out their declared missions and how they interact with the rest of official and unofficial Washington."

"They will recommend improvements in reports to be made by the end of the year," said Nader.

The team of seven law students from Harvard and Yale universities became widely known here as "Nader's raiders."

This summer's investigations will get under way about June 1. Major targets will include the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Food and Drug Administration, safety agencies of the Health, Education and Welfare Department, the Marketing and Consumer Service of the Agriculture Department and occupational health and safety activities of the Labor Department.

Rockefeller's Latin tour explained

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — The State Department is now hard at work trying to figure out what went wrong with Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's trip to South America.

If they really want to know, I think they should talk to my friend Gonzalez, a South American diplomat who told me what happened the other day.

"You Americans are always going about these things in the wrong way."

"How's that?"

"You think the solution to South America's problems is to send an ambassador of good will down there."

"But President Nixon sent Gov. Rockefeller to South America to show the people that the United States has not forgotten them."

"Si. That was your mistake. The South Americans thought you had forgotten them, and they were very happy. It is only when you sent Rockefeller down that they were reminded of all their grievances and decided to demonstrate. You have should left well enough alone."

"You can say that, Gonzalez, but the truth is that President Nixon feels very close to South America and he wanted to make a friendly gesture by sending Rockefeller on a tour of the Latin countries."

"Are you certain of that?" Gonzalez asked.

"What are you driving at?"

"Who was the most famous good will ambassador to South America in our time?"

"Richard Nixon, when he was Vice President under Dwight Eisenhower."

"And what happened to Nixon when he went to South America?"

"He was pelted with stones and tomatoes and vegetables."

"Si," Gonzalez said. "Now, having received such a reception there, why would he send Gov. Rockefeller?"

"Because . . . because . . . Gonzalez, you're not implying that President Nixon knew what Rockefeller would be in for?"

"President Nixon has never cared too much for Gov. Rockefeller, has he?"

"I don't know if they're warm friends, but I can't believe President Nixon would . . . then again he might . . . Gonzalez, this is a terrible thought you have put in my head."

"It is possible President Nixon may not have done it consciously, but even Presidents of a country as big as yours do things subconsciously."

"The old Nixon might do that. But the new Nixon would never do it. I will shut my ears to such blasphemy."

"Senor," said Gonzalez, "the difference between North America and South America is that in most countries we jail or exile our opposition. But in your country, you send them on good will tours. Our method is more civilized."

"All right, Gonzalez, if everything you say is true, then let me ask you this question. Why would Rockefeller take such an assignment?"

"Simple," he replied. "So he wouldn't have to campaign for Mayor John Lindsay."

Another Program Cost Up—Defense Costs Aired

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon hardly had time Wednesday to concede that the cost of its primary missile program had approximately doubled before being slapped with another charge — that a submarine rescue program is running about 2,700 per cent above original price estimates.

Barry J. Shillito, assistant secretary of defense for installations and logistics, said Wednesday Air Force figures tend to support the estimate that the Minuteman II intercontinental

Interest Increase May Hurt Bonding

Increases in bonding interest rates may delay the sale of bonds for — though not the construction — of a new city parking lot presently scheduled to open Oct. 15.

Bonds were originally scheduled to be sold early this summer to finance the 311-space lot being built south of the Civic Center.

However, bonding interest rates, now at 7 per cent, have increased 3 points since the city last sold bonds in November. The increase is due in large part to the increase this week in bank interest rates.

City manager Frank Smiley said Wednesday that he and city attorney Jay Honohan were attempting to replace the bond money until fall.

Smiley said there might be a possibility of using some reserve city funds to replace the bond money until fall.

Smiley told City Council members Tuesday at an informal council meeting that the city's financial consultant in Chicago, Paul Speer, had warned him that if the city sold bonds this summer, it should expect to pay 7 per cent.

Speer advised Smiley to delay the sale of bonds as long as possible to allow the bond market to "settle down" after the recent increase in commercial rates.

The commercial rates are now 8.5 per cent. However, municipal bonds rates are generally lower because income from municipal bonds is tax free.

The bond market generally is unstable after commercial rate changes but usually settles

Two were students at Michigan — one of them studying law; two were coeds at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti, one was a high school pupil and one a junior high pupil.

"It's enormously important to us to provide maximum security for our students," Fleming said.

He spoke at a news conference after his meeting with Kalom.

The University of Michigan has no campus police force but pays a large part of the Ann Arbor city police budget.

Fleming said that providing security was especially difficult in a case like this, where it is not known how the killer made his initial contact with his victims.

Police still say they have almost nothing to go on in their search for the slayer.

Parks Unit: Make Landfill into Park

The Iowa City Parks and Recreation Commission proposed Tuesday that the old city landfill be converted to use as a park. The site, located just east of Highway 218 and south of By-pass 6, is presently under 20-year lease to the University.

The University had plans to construct a parking lot on the land. However, those plans did not materialize.

A recent study indicated that the landfill site would be a good location for a park, especially the land along the Iowa River. The area has also been suggested by Public Works Director Ralph E. Speers as a possible site for a new city shop building.

Merritt C. Ludwig, University vice president of planning and development, has said the University would consider proposals to modify the lease.

Annual permits to haul oversized loads had been removed from three of the firms and one-trip permits from the fourth for repeated violations of rules under which the permits were issued.

Commission members rescinded, then tabled the motion of May 28 that took the permit privileges from Warren Transport, Inc., Waterloo; Matson, Inc., Cedar Rapids; Hove Truck Lines, Stanhope; and International Transport, Inc., Rochester, Minn.

Commissioner Koert S. Voorhees, a Cedar Falls Republican, moved to rescind the prior action and others ap-provisional critics have been correct in saying the C5A superjet transport program will cost $5.2 billion, about $1.8 billion above original estimates and $2 billion above contract target prices.

The GAO, budgetary watchdog for Congress, also said in its report to the House Armed Services Committee that the Air Force could have predicted the large increases as early as December, 1967.

Nevertheless, the cost increases were not reflected in routine air force management reports six months later or revealed to Congress until last November, the GAO said.

Proxmire added further fuel to the debate over military expenditures, saying he had information that the Air Force's Short Range Attack Missile program has increased in cost during the past year from $300 million to $600 million.

He said the Navy originally planned to buy 12 of the deep-diving craft for $36.5 million but has settled for 6 at $480 million.

Teens Who Set Fire See Family Buried

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. — Susan and Rodger Bailey wept Wednesday at the funeral of their parents and 10 brothers and sisters — killed in a fire that police say the youngsters admitted setting.

Never in the history of this valley — or possibly the nation — has anything like this ever happened, the minister told the sobbing children and mourners.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey and children, ranging from 6 months to 17 years old, all burned beyond recognition, rested in six cloth-covered wooden caskets grouped in the funeral home parlor.

During the eulogy by the Rev. R. L. Phillips of the Baptist Gospel Temple, 15-year-old Susan burst into sobs and buried her tear-stained face into the shoulder of Sheriff Lee W. Bechtold.

Bechtold and a deputy escorted the slim, yellow-miniskirted brunette and her 13-year-old brother into the funeral home. The officers never left the youngsters.

Susan and Rodger neither talked to each other nor to any of the some 250 relatives and family friends attending the funeral.

The boy and girl were hustled away in a sheriff's car before the coffins were removed for a 20-mile trip for burial at Elizabeth, in neighboring Wirt County.

Bechtold said Susan and Rodger, who are being detained at the county jail at Elizabeth, would not be permitted to attend the graveside ceremonies.

Both await continuation of a preliminary hearing, tentatively set for June 24. State law calls for juveniles charged with a capital crime to be tried in the same manner as adults.

Maximum punishment under a murder conviction in West Virginia is life in prison without parole.

Police said both youngsters confessed to relatives to setting the gasoline-fed blaze, which swept through the family's eight-room frame home Sunday.

Relatives turned the children over to police, authorities said. A family member and police said Susan was angry at her parents. They said Susan had been ordered not to date an 18-year-old youth who is her first cousin.

Parking Plan In Residences Is Considered

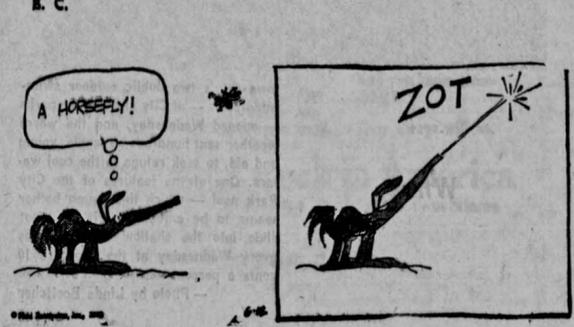

City Manager Frank R. Smiley announced Wednesday that he was considering recommending to the City Council a new parking plan for Iowa City residential neighborhoods.

The city has received several complaints from roofers, plumbers, television repairmen and others who have been receiving $5 parking tickets for parking on the grass between sidewalks and streets. The workers have complained that there is no room for parking on the streets and said it is impractical to carry tools long distances.

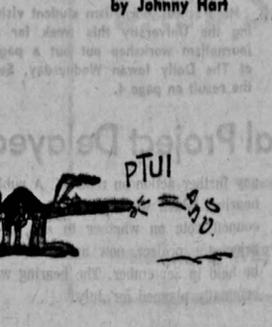

Smiley named neighborhoods within two to three blocks of the downtown area as being the most heavily congested.

Smiley's plan is to install on each block one parking meter that would limit parking to one or two hours. This limited parking might open up a space for service vehicles, although Smiley stated, "I don't feel we can restrict such spaces to a particular use."

Smiley said that he expected several blocks to be selected as trial areas and that results would be referred to the City Council for final action.

U.S. Open Begins Today With Littler As Darkhorse

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Casper and Gary Player are furnace hot, Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus are ice cold and in-between is luke-warm Gene Littler, the man to watch in the 69th U.S. Open Golf Championship starting today.

"He's the forgotten man of the tournament — the course is tailored for him; he could take it all," former PGA titleholder Dave Marr told a locker-room assemblage of 139 pros and 11 amateurs put in final practice licks for the four-day, 72-hole test over The Champions' Cypress Club layout.

Littler, 38, the quiet man from San Diego, Calif., who is blessed with a perfect one-piece swing, could be the most celebrated dark-horse ever to tee up a ball in this aged championship.

He is the year's leading money winner with more than $101,000 in official earnings. He is one of three players who has won two tournaments. He has a steady, mechanical game that rarely develops flaws. Nobody's noticed him.

He is very fond of the sprawling, tree-lined and snake-infested course — a 6,967-yard spread playing to a par 35-35-70 — but he typically shrugs off his own chances.

"Shucks, I'm not playing that well," he said. "I've played only two tournaments since the Masters and I'm not hitting the ball that flush. Still, I remember I was playing pretty bad when I went to Oakland Hills at Birmingham, Mich., and won the Open in 1961."

The first threesome, composed of Roy Beattie, Dick Rhyan and Henry Johnson, tees off at 8:30 a.m., EDT. They'd better not forget their umbrellas. The forecast is for two days of cloudy, drizzly weather following humid 90-degree temperatures.

Littler is in one of the first blue-ribbon groups of the course. He is bracketed with PGA champion Julius Boros and former British Open titleholder Bob Charles of New Zealand at 10:39 a.m., EDT.

Palmer, seeking to break a prolonged slump, is off at 11:04 a.m. with Australian Kel Nagle and ex-amateur champion

Deane Beman, now a freshman pro. Player is with defending champion Lee Trevino and Amateur champion Bruce Fleisher at 1:47 p.m.

Casper, 1968 leading money winner and Pro of the Year, starts at 2:18 p.m. with Dan Sikes and roly-poly Bob Murphy. Nicklaus is a late starter at 2:35 p.m. with ageless Sam Snead and Dave Marr.

Casper, currently rated the best golfer in the world, comes to the Open with the impetus of a smashing victory last week in the Western Open.

"I don't play well here but I love the course," Casper said. Player, the tough little craftsman from South Africa who has won every major pro title at least once and who currently holds the British Open crown, is the choice of the computer machines and the hardened realists.

The 69th Open presents a stern challenge to two of the game's all-time great stars, Palmer and Nicklaus, both in the throes of atrocious and depressing slumps.

"My putting is killing me but I think I've found the answer — I'm stroking the ball much better," said Palmer, 39, golf's multi-millionaire all-time money champion. He hasn't had a major victory since the 1964 Masters. "I know what I want to do but can't do it," moans Nicklaus, a two-time winner, who has been

Alou Breaks Jaw

HOUSTON (AP) — Jesus Alou received a fracture to the left side of his jaw Tuesday night in a collision with Houston shortstop Hector Torres and will be out of action four to six weeks.

The jaw will not have to be wired, but specialists are placing braces on his teeth, an Astro spokesman said. He will be on a liquid diet two weeks.

Alcindor Sued by ABA Rival

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Professional basketball player Dennis Grey, who claims Lew Alcindor slugged him and broke his jaw, sued the UCLA All-American for $750,000 Wednesday.

Attorney Paul Caruso filed the civil suit in Los Angeles Superior Court on behalf of Grey, 22, a rookie center last season with the Los Angeles Stars of the American Basketball League.

Alcindor, College Player of the Year two times in his three-year career, had recently signed a multi-year contract with the Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association for a reported $1.4 million. Grey, 6-8, from San Diego, is still hospitalized with the broken jaw wired.

The flareup came during a practice pickup game at a high school last Saturday. News of the episode was not revealed until Sunday. Grey was in surgery for 2½ hours.

Baseball Gains, Losses Seen By Checking 1968 Statistics

NEW YORK (AP) — The morning papers list the top 10 hitters, the home run and runs-batted-in leaders every day. The weekend averages list all the regulars and most of the pitchers who work regularly. But nobody keeps track of the gain or loss as compared to last season.

By checking through the long list of players who had been at bat 100 or more times through Monday's games, and comparing it with the final averages for 1968, some startling figures emerge.

For instance, Willie Stargell of the Pittsburgh Pirates has improved the most of any batter in the National League with an increase of 102 points from .237 to .339. Randy Hundley, the Chicago Cubs' workhorse catcher, is close behind with a 101-point gain from .226 to .327. Pete Rose of Cincinnati, the defending batting champ at .335 is off 46 points to .289.

Bobby Tolan, who was traded to Cincinnati by St. Louis the day the World Series ended, appears to enjoy the climate in Ohio for he has increased his average 86 points from .230 to .316.

Vada Pinson, who went from the Reds to the Cards in that deal, also is doing better but just slightly. .279, compared with .271. Pinson has missed many games due to injuries.

Denis Menke of the Houston Astros has moved up 81 points from .249 to .330 and ranks fourth best for gains in the National.

Others in the top 10 with their gains are Wes Parker, the Los Angeles Dodgers' first baseman, up 72 points; Richie Allen, the Phillies' tempestuous first baseman, up 66; Tony Perez, Cincinnati third baseman, up 61; Hank Aaron, the Atlanta ace who slid off to .287 last year, up 60; Sonny Jackson, the shortstop who dipped to .226 at Atlanta after being traded by Houston, up 59 points; and Tim McCarver, the St. Louis catcher who had a bad slump in 1968 to .253, up 58.

In the American League, the big gainer has been Rod Carew, the Minnesota Twins' second baseman who advanced from .273 to .390, a gain of 117 points. Rico Petrocelli, Boston's shortstop who has suddenly developed into a slugger, also has boosted his average 105 points from .234.

Eddie Brinkman, Washington shortstop, has to thank Ted Williams for helping him add 87 points on his last year's average. John Roseboro, who dropped to .216 at Minnesota last year, has picked up 85 points, fourth best gain.

Hank Allen, another Washington player who has been helped by Williams, is up 74 points, and Jackie Hernandez, who couldn't hit enough to play regularly at Minnesota last year, is up 73 points with Kansas City.

Shop THE BUDGET SHOP on Highway 218 South of the airport For good used clothing, household goods, appliances, dishes, pots, pans, books, etc. 2230 S. Riverside Drive

Ray Oyler, who has his own fan club at Seattle, is hitting only .207 but that is 72 points above his .135 last year with the Detroit Tigers. Frank Robinson of Baltimore, up 62, Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota, up 61, and Mark Belanger, Baltimore shortstop, up 60, are the others in the top 10.

On the other side of the scales, the worst tumble was taken by Ken Harrelson, the Hawk who retired for a few hours after being traded to Cleveland by Boston. The Hawk is off 87 points from .275 to .188. Willie Horton, the man who walked away from the Tigers for a few days, is down 69 points.

Others on the minus side in the American League are, in order: Tommy Davis of Seattle, down 66; Cesar Tovar of Minnesota, down 55; Bert Campaneris of Oakland, down 49; Jose Cardenal of Cleveland, down 40; Bobby Knoop of California and Chicago, down 37; Ted Uhlaender of Minnesota, down 33; Duane Josephson of Chicago, down 32; Rick Monday of Oakland, down 32.

3-Team Trade Brings Wills Back to Dodgers

The Los Angeles Dodgers got back ex-Dodger Maury Wills from the Montreal Expos as the Chicago Cubs, Expos, and Dodgers participated in a 3-team trade Wednesday.

The Dodgers first traded outfielder Ron Fairly and infielder Paul Popovich to Montreal for Wills and outfielder Manny Mota. After that trade had been completed, the Cubs dealt outfielder Adolpho Phillips and pitcher Jack Lamabe to the Expos for Popovich.

It was understood that the players involving the Dodgers and Expos would join their new teams Wednesday night. The players involved in the Cub-

Expo deal would have to make connections today.

A deal between the Dodgers and Expos had been long simmering, but only the names of Wills and Fairly had been prominently mentioned. Wills is expected to bolster the surprising Dodgers with relief at shortstop and third base.

290 High Schoolers Attend College Journalism Seminar

Approximately 290 high school journalists from 7 states are participating June 9-13 in the 17th annual Journalism Workshop, sponsored by the University of Iowa School of Journalism.

Richard P. Johns of the Iowa School of Journalism is this year's workshop director. He is assisted by Robert Dillon and Judy Franklin, both of Iowa City.

The workshop faculty consists of 15 teachers instructing in their own specialized divisions. The divisions include: Beginning Journalism, School Page, Duplicated Newspaper, Yearbook, Advanced Newspaper, Depth Reporting, Broadcasting, and Photography. The students are placed in the divisions according to their own interests and needs.

Besides attending classes dealing with journalistic techniques employed in the various fields of communications, the workshopers are doing actual communications work, such as publishing a page in the DI.

Classes are held from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Communications Center, Iowa Memorial Union, and the Engineering Building.

Mr. Johns has emphasized throughout the week that one of the finest facilities and staffs has been gathered for the workshop. He also stated that the student-teacher ratio is low in order to give the students much individual attention.

The majority of students are from Iowa, although Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Virginia are also represented.

Approximately 60 students were awarded full or part scholarships to the workshop from their schools, local newspapers, and radio and television stations.

Advanced journalism is being studied by 48 students under the direction of three instructors. This course covers journalism practices for those students who have completed a journalism course or that have had sufficient experience.

Stan Blair, newspaper and yearbook adviser from Technical High School in Des Moines, Ia., stated the purpose, or goal, of the course is to "improve high school publications" and to "make the editors' job easier." To achieve the desired results from the workshop, Mr. Blair cited the need for an exchange of ideas, and a communication with other students through working on the DI staff.

Through discussing and "the use of media and at the same time, getting practical experience," Jan Wiseman explained the methods of improving a high school newspaper, the aim of the workshop. Mr. Wiseman heads the journalism department at Kishwaukee College in Malta, Ill. Also instructing in the advanced division is Miss Sharon Feyen from the University of Iowa School of Journalism. Miss Feyen, who believes that experience is the best teacher, commented that "You aren't going to learn by being lectured at."

Basic fundamentals spark the school page division of the Iowa High School Journalism Workshop. Mrs. Ruth McHone, instructor of journalism at Hoover High School in Des Moines, and Leonard C. Rossman, a former journalism teacher at Perry High School, conduct the class.

This division teaches its 42 students how to write news stories, features, speech stories, headlines, columns, and editorials. They also learn the importance of pictures, copyreading, and lay-out of school page.

Rossman, in his 17th year of workshop teaching, stated all students of the school page division receive a complete written outline of school page ideas to take home and use in a journalistic style.

Ten students are enrolled in the mimeograph division of the workshop. Under the direction of Mrs. Helen Stephens of Linn-Mar High School, Marion, Iowa, they learn the fundamentals of mimeographed newspapers. With combined class resources, they publish a sample paper, the Workshopper.

Eight students take the responsibility of a page apiece for the publication. Through this training, the workshop students learn basic writing skills.

When approached about her class, Mrs. Stephens replied that many of the students had no formal background in the journalistic field, but were eager to learn.

Chuck Hickman, the only male in the class, from University High School in Iowa City, enjoys the field of humorous features. When asked how he felt about the class he replied, "Now I know how it is to be a minority."

Charles Cremer, of the University of Iowa School of Journalism, is instructing the 12 workshopers enrolled in the broadcast division of the Iowa High School Journalism Workshop this week.

By presenting an overview of broadcast journalism, including its history and high points, Cremer has attempted to give the students background and perspective. He has also emphasized the style of broadcast journalism, and how it differs from other writing styles.

The students also are engaged in lab work, which consists of writing, rewriting and airing news. Critique sessions follow in which the class plays back the taped broadcasts and discusses the weak and strong points of them.

Cremer stated that he was "very much impressed" by the 12 "bright, talented, and enthusiastic" students and added that he is enjoying the workshop.

Grant Price, News Director of the WMT Stations in Cedar Rapids, especially highlighted the week for the students in broadcasting when he spoke to all the workshopers in the broadcast division Wednesday afternoon at the Iowa Memorial Union.

The Depth Reporting division of the workshop concentrates mostly on the "why" section considered so important to the good news story. Father Paul L. Weis of Wahlert High in Dubuque and Neil Puhl from Mason City High School teach this division.

Each student writes an article which highlights the week's work. One example of a topic a student chose was to spend a few hours in an emergency ward of a hospital and do a character sketch on one of the nurses. The students will spend the last days of the workshop editing their own articles.

Included in this year's workshop curriculum also are three Yearbook Courses. Division III, instructed by Miss Pat Clark from Griffith, Indiana, centers around the importance of changing a sometimes dull yearbook into a more exciting publication. To accomplish this goal, students are preparing a miniaturized yearbook for their own respective school, and also will prepare blueprints for individual pages.

Mrs. Charlotte Ellis from Marshalltown, instructing Division II, wants to "create a better understanding of year book functions for students." Mrs. Ellis sets as her goal to send home her students prepared to assume a teacher's role. She hopes they can then instruct their staffs.

As to possible changes in next year's planning, both Mrs. Ellis and Miss Clark suggest that teachers themselves come better prepared, so as to be better equipped to instruct students.

Division I, under the guidance of James Bull, La Grange, Illinois, has as its ultimate goal that all students leaving the workshop will have new insights and ideas involving all elements of their yearbook. Of course, the students must cover material which would normally take weeks, but students and also the instructors must produce that much more.

For the most part, students participating in the Yearbook divisions seem to enjoy both their courses and their instructors. One criticism seems very prevalent; the problem of trying to cover too much.

Sandy Voke of Madrid, a student of Division III, commented, "I think that possibly a little less should be covered, so that a student can absorb more basic knowledge."

Photography is also an important division in the seminar. Donald Woolley of the University of Iowa directs the class at the Communications Center.

The students are taking and developing pictures, some of which will be printed in The Daily Iowan. When asked how they liked the course, students replied that it was both interesting and fun.

Beginning journalists at the workshop having little or no experience began their session with a general survey on mass communications. Their instructor, Mrs. Jan Wiseman of Dekalb, Ill., conducted discussions on news gathering techniques, copy editing, layouts, and writing.

As one student put it, "The class gives you a chance to experiment." Later this week they will study photography appreciation and Friday the journalists will assemble a mimeographed newspaper.

Life on campus differs greatly from home life. The answer is Iowa City, as some high school students in the journalism workshop here have recently discovered. Their reactions are many and varied, but all notice a difference between Iowa City and their home town. In the words of one, "You can sure tell it's a college town."

From the people on the streets to the streets themselves, there is something unique about Iowa City. An atmosphere of casual innovation includes the abstract art in people's back yards and the chalked announcements for "Gentle Thursday."

Unusual sights are everywhere: people swinging on a suspended girder in the art exhibit, young people with long hair playing bells and harmonicas along the banks of the Iowa River, street signs prohibiting parking at anytime, even with dates.

For the high school students, Iowa City is an environment quite different from their own, even in the "off season."

The best way to sell ideas is to advertise. Either consciously or otherwise, this is what many students are doing when they express themselves in graffiti.

On the University of Iowa campus, graffiti is located on walls, in tunnels, on desks and signs, and any other printable surface. Those areas most inhabited by students display numerous examples of this form of creativity.

The categories graffiti cover are as varied as the people who write them. The humorist, the critic, the intellectual, the pacifist, and the artist all use this as a means to publicly express themselves.

The following example of opinion on the tuition increase can be found on the sign in front of the Iowa Memorial Union. It states, "Go directly to University Hall, do not pass go, do not collect tuition."

Intelligent insights are often made by students such as "The cube is an intellectual void" and "Art is the celebration of the ordinary." One emphatic judgment states, "God is Jewish?" Genter reminders admonish students to "Make love not war."

10:00 p.m.: The editors still at work... Late night work on a daily newspaper is introduced to the editors of the page placed in the paper by the Iowa High School Journalism Workshop. From left, they are: John Stites, Norma Blackmer, Ross Klongerbo, Phil Hughes and printer Jeff White.

THIS PAGE OF THE DAILY IOWAN WAS WRITTEN AND EDITED BY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS PARTICIPATING IN THE 17TH ANNUAL IOWA HIGH SCHOOL JOURNALISM WORKSHOP.

In previous years, the Advanced Division of the workshop wrote and edited their own eight-page newspaper entitled the Hawketts. Although publishing their own paper offered some practice, The Daily Iowan provides a more realistic situation for the students. With the cooperation of the DI staff it was possible for the members of this year's Advanced Division to gain the genuine journalistic experience achieved by working on a regular daily paper.

The young journalists were divided into three groups. One group contained reporters, and the other two groups took turns editing and reporting. It was the responsibility of all the groups to prepare the paper according to the standards set by The Daily Iowan. Each individual had to strive to meet these high standards.

UI Museum Receives Collection of Silver

A collection of 95 pieces of silver from the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries is being exhibited at the Museum of Art at the University of Iowa. The silver, donated by Owen and Leone Elliott of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is a collection of British, American, and French works, and will be on display until Aug. 31, 1969. The silver is part of a group of 70 paintings, nearly 200 silver articles, and about 1,000 prints collected by the Elliotts over a period of 40 years.

The exhibit contains silver of both aesthetic and personal interest. Much of it, such as the tureen by Paul Lamerie, contains both. According to Gustave von Groschwitz, Associate Director of the museum, "Many people consider it (the tureen) the best piece in the collection." Yet, at the same time, the design is somewhat macabre even for the Baroque Period (c. 1747). The handle of the tureen lid is a delicately made eagle eating a young deer.

The exhibit also contains a coffee pot with a right angle spout dating from 1713 when coffee was just being introduced in the British Isles. The design appears ingenious and more practical than the present day idea of a coffeepot. Harlan Sifford, Art Librarian at the University of Iowa, disagrees. His experiences with the right-angle spout dictate that with such a coffeepot one tends to miss the cup. "Sure you can learn to pour with one — but only with practice."

Each of the works in the present display, only half of the entire collection, has a story connected to it. On many of the pieces are engraved monograms or dates, representing an acquisition of the article; the large dates may commemorate wedding gifts, anniversaries, or other occasions. In most cases the story behind the silver piece has been forgotten.

One of the utensils bears a more sinister mark of age; a rat-tailed vegetable spoon, with a handle the size of a small billy club which has an ominous crack in the end of it. Asked if he thought this was evidence of ancient foul play, Harlan Sifford proposed a more mundane theory: the wear of two centuries of hands. He then added, "But nobody knows for sure."

Dawson Leaves University; Believes No Generation Gap

After 37 years of service to the University of Iowa, Dr. Helen Dawson is retiring. She leaves behind teaching, research, and expeditions. Many of her students serve on the staff at the University Hospital while others are nationally-known figures.

Farm life interests Dr. Dawson; she likes the independence of being self-sufficient. This appeal of the out-of-doors influenced her decision to retire. She says she wants to travel, fish, and read for enjoyment.

Dr. Dawson began her years at the University of Iowa in 1932 as a member of the Child Welfare Research Station. Since then she has held posts as Instructor, Associate, Assistant Professor, and today she is an Associate Professor, Department of Anatomy at the University of Iowa College of Medicine.

As anthropologist for the Harvard Anthropology Expedition to Ireland in 1935, Dr. Dawson studied women on the Irish West Coast. She authored Basic Human Anatomy, written specifically for the nursing profession.

Many times Dr. Dawson assisted the Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation in examining human remains. Her duties involved determining the age, sex, and race of the victim. Her findings aided in determining a person's identity and the time and cause of his death.

Dr. Dawson's various experiences form a basis for her attitude toward student unrest today. In her opinion, students had of just the same idealistic sense of justice 20 years ago. However, she does not agree with the pol-

Jim Hendrix Helps Blacks

"America has so much good in it, but it has so much evil, you know, and it's based on money mostly." That's Jimi Hendrix, the creator of the synthetic sound in one of his newest albums, Electric Ladyland.

The usual Hendrix structure is there; a long introduction gradually building to the climax. However, this album has new rhythm, even tango.

Some of the greatest musicians have been added to Electric Ladyland's Hendrix-Redding-Mitchell compositions, such as Al Cooper on piano and Buddy Niles on drums. Nevertheless, they say Hendrix has no soul: a race traitor.

He just "ain't" no James Brown. A soul brother would never form a group of three, with two whites, or force some brother militants (who insist whites have no soul) to listen to the Cream.

However, he does believe in militancy; but to incite fear, not death. Sound like mere talk? Jimi Hendrix moves. He believes money, used without greed, for education is one answer to the black problem.

He gives money, including $6,000 in scholarship funds plus a schedule filled with concerts in poor black communities instead of profitable theatres.

"You see, America's supposed to have all this is a bold faced lie when we don't give a damn about helping anybody."

But Jimi Hendrix gives a damn.

But Jimi Hendrix gives a damn.

But Jimi Hendrix gives a damn.

Black Journalists Needed

The Kerner Commission Report points out that the news media needs communicators who understand the black community; they face a shortage of black personnel who can accomplish this. In a long-term effort to solve this problem and to make their programs relevant to the needs of today, the University of Iowa School of Journalism will conduct a two-week seminar from June 16 to June 27, for black high-school students.

Twenty-eight students from high schools in Waterloo, Des Moines, Cedar Rapids, Burlington, and Davenport will analyze and study the media at this seminar. The program will include writing for The Daily Iowan, producing tapes for broadcasting on WSUI, and visiting Iowa daily newspapers and radio stations.

The seminar's theme will be the young black and how he or she looks at today's society. The black evolution, black press, and black personnel in communication and their relation to the white oriented media will be explained. Speakers and guests include Earl Caldwell and Tom Johnson, reporters for the New York Times; John Estes, a youth leader from Des Moines; Nolden Gentry, a law-filiated with CLEO but not necessarily with their own program are the Universities of Chicago, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. Also participating are Northwestern University and Ohio State.

Besides these, there will be seven student assistants who will act as tutors.

Project CLEO began at Harvard in 1965 and was followed up at Emory, Denver, New Mexico, and other major colleges of the United States. Ten colleges af-

Completion of CLEO, or the Council on Legal Education Opportunity, beginning the 16th of June and continuing for six weeks throughout the summer, is nearing its end. CLEO is a program designed to involve blacks, Indians, Mexican-Americans, and other minority groups in a law career because of the exceedingly small number now practicing law. This program is a step toward providing sufficient and competent representation for minority group citizens.

Of the applicants, all necessarily college graduates, about 48 have been accepted on the basis of their success in college work rather than their scores on the Law School Admission Test (LSAT).

Paul Neuhauser, Associate Dean of the University of Iowa College of Law and director of the program, stated three main objectives of CLEO. This advance orientation to law school will provide an alternative method for participants to gain admission to a law school. If a student completes the program successfully his application is considered much more readily at the law school he chooses to attend, despite low LSAT scores. A second objective is to remedy an academic deficiency, giving each student a catching up opportunity. Self confidence is a third goal of CLEO. It feels the fear of defeat should be lessened and the attitude taken toward an education in law widened.

Courses will be offered in contracts, constitutional law, and written English. They will be taught by seven professors and lawyers from various colleges and law firms across the nation.

Jet Co. Attacks 3 U.S. Outposts

SAIGON (AP) — The enemy stormed three U.S. positions south of Da Nang Wednesday, killing 14 Americans and losing 76 of their own men in fierce fire fights and hand-to-hand combat. Two of the attacks were aimed at bases of the American Division and the third against U.S. Marine battalion headquarters 20 miles below Da Nang.

HACAP Gets $51,376

The federal government has approved a grant of $51,376 for the Linn, Johnson and Jones county Hawkeye Area Community Action Program, U.S. Sen. Jack Miller (R-Ia.) announced Wednesday.

The grant was one of three awarded to Iowa anti-poverty agencies.

The two others include a $40,000 grant to an anti-poverty group covering Hamilton, Webster, Humboldt, and Wright counties and a $100,000 grant for a community action organization working in Butler, Cerro Gordo, Floyd, Hancock, Mitchell, Winnebago and Worth counties.

POLICE TO TEST TEAR GAS

Johnson County law enforcement officers will participate in testing some newly developed tear gas devices on June 19.

The tests will be conducted at the Eldon Meade farm, Route 1.

30 miles south of Da Nang. Enemy sappers, using a flame thrower and satchel charges, blasted their way into an American artillery base 11 miles northwest of Tam Ky.

About 30 sappers made it through the barbed wire perimeter of the base, but the American defenders engaged them in hand-to-hand fighting and finally drove them off with point-blank artillery and small arms fire.

U.S. losses in that battle were 11 killed and 32 wounded, while the enemy lost 27 dead.

The fire support base, manned by men of the 196th Light Infantry Brigade, is located in a hilly area near a key enemy infiltration route toward Tam Ky, where fighting has been heavy for the past month.

The second attack came when the enemy opened fire with mortars, small arms and rocket-propelled grenades on a night bivouac of the U.S. 11th Infantry Brigade 95 miles south of Da Nang. Fourteen North Vietnamese were killed in the night long exchange, and U.S. losses were reported as one killed and eight wounded.

The third was battalion-sized assault of about 400 men against a U.S. Marine battalion headquarters 20 miles south of Da Nang and one mile northwest of An Hoa.

P and Z Hears Complaints

Opposition from five property owners was received by the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday because of a proposed change in zoning regulations.

Attorney Daniel W. Boyle, who represents the five property owners, some of whom own apartments, took issue with one proposal that would provide two parking spaces for each living unit in a multiple family dwelling. He told the commission that the change was unreasonable because it would require developers to purchase additional land for parking and it would not benefit those living in efficiency and one-bedroom apartments. He pointed out that all persons living in apartment complexes own two vehicles.

County Unit To Buy Dam

The Iowa Natural Resources Council has called for a public hearing July 28 to discuss plans to buy a small dam across the Iowa River in Coralville.

The dam, built by Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. to generate electrical power, is no longer of use to the utility company and could be purchased by the Johnson County Conservation Commission for $1.

now... the sealed in goodness of Lady Lee!

Try something new... something with the Lady Lee label on it... and you'll be in for a pleasant surprise! Lady Lee is the brand-new line of canned fruits, vegetables, and fruit juices, and fresh dairy foods, that's available exclusively at Eagle.

Lady Lee products will surprise you with their flavorfulness, dependable quality, and comparatively low priced Lady Lee canned vegetables, fruits, and fruit juices are prepared with fully ripe, fully fresh produce; and Lady Lee processing maintains the natural goodness of these foods all along the way. Among Lady Lee's wide selection of canned goods, you'll enjoy apple sauce, cranberry sauce, Harvard beets, pickled beets, asparagus, and richly flavorful tomato juice.

Lady Lee dairy products bring you the natural, fresh flavor that's so essential in dairy foods! In this area too, Lady Lee's advanced standards in selection, processing, and packaging are your assurance of consistent wholesomeness and goodness.
