was killed by a .22-caliber bullet, as were two of the other young women murdered in the Arbor area.

Police said they did not know why Bishop might have been killed. Miss Phillips' evidence of sexual assault was reported.

However, Krasny said it was not clear that the sociology student Bishop knew each other. He said Miss Phillips "had previous contact with Bishop, probably through her interest in social work."

He was helping him while he was on parole and probably lived with him on some of his personal problems. She liked to work with minority races, Krasny said.

A friend of the coed told police earlier that Miss Phillips was researching the six slayings as a sociology project.

Bishop was paroled last December after serving time for rape. He was released under the supervision of a former University of Michigan sociology professor, James Mayer, who asked Miss Phillips to aid in the ex-convict's rehabilitation, Krasny said.

He added that the young woman had been counseling Bishop to improve his life. She was going to "on her own," Krasny said.

North Finkbine 'Lake'

It is highly unlikely that golfers will be swinging their clubs on North Finkbine golf course for awhile. The ground is so waterlogged that the rain that fell Monday night and Tuesday formed a huge irregular shaped lake. In the center of the picture lies a tree that was blown down during high winds last Thursday, and to the right is an island formed by the green for the ninth hole — a shot that would now be tricky to say the least.

Buildings, Streets Flooded As 2 Inches of Rain Fell

By PENNY WARD

Several Iowa City buildings were flooded and some streets were blocked Tuesday as a result of 2 inches of rainfall throughout the morning — all part of another day in the monsoon season that has hit Iowa City during the last two weeks.

Ralston Creek, which flows through the east side of town, overflowed its banks shortly before noon, flooding the Me-Too grocery, the Postal Annex building, and the Iowa City Recreation Center.

No damage was reported at the Postal Annex, although clean-up crews there said that water in the north section of the building exceeded 2 feet in depth.

The swimming pool at the Recreation Center was closed at noon when water seeped into a sub-basement beneath the pool.

Three to four inches of water poured into the University's Graphic Services Building on Second Avenue in Coralville, forcing it to shut down for about one-half hour.

A University Physical plant spokesman said that the city's storm sewers backed up on North Riverside Drive, causing much of the west edge of the University Fine Arts Campus to be under water.

City Public Works Director Ralph Speer Jr. said that about 90 per cent of street intersections along Ralston Creek were flooded about noon. Water 2-to-3 feet deep in some places forced city crews and police to barricade nine streets.

Speer said Tuesday evening that city crews would be working far into the night to clean up debris from the high waters and continue the pumping operations.

Speer said that three sewage lift stations were overloaded and backed up, sending emergency public works crews to the stations located at City Park,

Whiting Avenue, and in the Fairmeadows area.

The Iowa City Fire Department was called to divert water that was reported running down Park Road and draining directly into the basement window of a residence at 702 Park Road. Firemen reported that many basements in the city were flooded, and advised citizens to shut off the electric current in their homes if water began to fill basements.

Johnson County engineers estimated Tuesday that $157,000 damage has been done to county roads and bridges during the recent rainfalls.

County Conservation Officer Wendell Simonson said the Coralville Reservoir was about 9 feet below the level of the spillway and rising Tuesday night.

Simonson said that the 6 inch rainfall received Tuesday in the reservoir watershed area in northern Iowa was sending an enormous amount of water into the reservoir, but that local officials were releasing little water back into the Iowa River because they feared it would increase the already heavy flooding in the Wapello area.

The Iowa Highway Patrol reported that the Cedar River lapped at the edges of Interstate 80 between Iowa City and Davenport.

The Patrol reported the following highway closings: Highway 6 east of West Liberty; Highway 14 southbound north of Marshalltown; Highway 61 from Wapello to Highway 92. Highway 20 is closed west of Parkersburg, and is expected to close east of Parkersburg shortly.

City Police received several complaints of small children playing in high water areas. Four children drowned Monday in Keokuk as they were swept into the Mississippi River after falling into an open drainage pipe in a city park.

Surtax Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A suggestion of possible wage and price controls was raised by Nixon administration spokesmen Tuesday as they battled to keep the Senate from entangling the income surtax extension in tax reform legislation.

But Democratic Senate leaders and Finance Committee members, including Chairman Russell B. Long (D-La.) left no doubt they intend to consider a wide range of tax reforms along with the surtax.

A schedule of hearings on reform proposals outlined by Long at the hearing indicated that the legislation, including the surtax extension, might not reach the Senate floor before fall.

ABM Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, opening debate on the Safeguard antiballistic missile Tuesday, predicted senators will approve the controversial system.

The reason, he said, is that they will want to uphold President Nixon as the President enters into arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union.

"I think it comes down to that in the final analysis," Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss.) told reporters.

Flatt Wants Help on Budget Study

By DAVID KOTOK

The hiring of a consulting firm to aid a legislative Interim Committee study of the budgets of Iowa's three state universities was urged Tuesday by State Sen. Joseph Flatt (R-Winterset).

The consulting firm would aid a full investigation by the Interim Committee of the financial efficiency of the state universities.

Flatt is one of four members of the Legislative Budget and Financial Control Committee appointed by the Interim Committee to plan a study of university financing, organization and possibly student-faculty activities.

The study was prompted by lawmakers' concern over a massive tuition increase, which the State Board of Regents approved after university officials said they could not maintain quality programs with the money appropriated by the 1969 legislature.

that the idea of hiring a professional firm to study the universities was a good one but that the study by the Interim Committee was unnecessary.

Rep. Edward Mezvinsky (D-Iowa City) said he was in favor of hiring a consulting firm to give the legislature an objective view of the efficiency of the universities. He said he hoped the report on the study would not end up "on the back shelf of the Legislative Research Bureau."

Mezvinsky said that, even with a consulting firm assisting, the Interim Committee's holding its own study "still sounds like a witch hunt."

Rep. Joseph Johnston (D-Iowa City)

said he believed that the consulting firm should only report its findings to the committee and that the committee should not do its own study.

State Sen. Minnette Doderer (D-Iowa City) said that the study was unnecessary since "nothing worthwhile has ever come out of a legislative study."

Objecting to the committee study of the University, Mrs. Doderer said, "They never asked me for help and they want to study my constituents."

The three Iowa City legislators' fear of a "witch hunt" is well grounded, said Radl. Radl, the lone Democrat on the committee, said, "It could become a witch hunt if we are not careful."

Radl said he hoped a consulting firm would help direct the Interim Committee investigation so that a "witch hunt" would be avoided.

Flatt said, "It is not my intent to look at individual students or at the private lives of the faculty. I am not interested in any witch hunt," he added.

Another member of the four man committee, Rep. Francis Messerly (R-Cedar Falls) said he believed that student organizations should be studied.

"I want to know who gives organizations like Students for a Democratic Society authority to be campus organizations," he said.

Board of Regents Chairman Stanley Redeker, Boone, said he had no comment on what methods of investigating the regents institutions he thought might be used.

Redeker said, "My main concern is that the entire inquiry be held publicly so that the people of Iowa can view the entire study."

Flatt said he would like to see a professional consultant retained on a continuing basis to provide information on the effectiveness of the three state universities.

University Pres. Howard R. Bowen and Pres.-select Willard Boyd could not be reached for comment.

Francis Messerly said that the 4-member committee would be interviewing consultants this week. They hope to find a firm with experience in conducting university efficiency studies, Messerly said.

A meeting on Friday will decide whether a consultant firm is hired. If the committee accepts the consultant firm, Radl said he thought that the study will begin the following week.

County Officials Refuse Part of Pay in Mixup

By LOWELL MAY

Johnson County officials involved in a statewide pay raise mix-up have decided to spurn a chance at an extra $200 yearly raise apiece. However, they would receive the $2,000 the Legislature intended for county officers.

The mix-up was noticed after the state legislature adjourned this spring. It concerns a law passed in the last legislative session designed to increase the salaries of county auditors, treasurers and recorders and district clerks of court.

The former salary law gave the county officials a certain percentage of the county's tangible wealth, or the property value of the county.

The tangible wealth pay base was determined by the total county property value minus intangible wealth, or monies and credits that make up the county's potential earning power.

Under the new law, the intangible wealth is not subtracted from the total property value to determine the official's pay base. This omission was the cause of the unexpected salary increase.

Although the extra amount in Johnson County amounted to only a $200 increase per officer, larger and more wealthy counties had larger intangible wealths, thus providing their officers with extras that nearly equalled the $2,000 base increase.

In any case, the extra raise is proportional to each county's intangible wealth, and the 1967 statewide total was $2.3 billion.

Each of the four officers in the state's counties is waiting a decision on the legislative action, to determine whether he is in fact, entitled to the extra raise.

Gov. Robert Ray has asked Attorney General Richard Turner for a decision on the situation. However, Turner has not yet made a judgment on the issue.

The statewide reaction and the reaction of the Johnson County officials involved has been that the Legislature did not intend to grant the extra pay raise.

Most people say they think that a $2,000 raise, also passed in the last legislative session, was the only raise the legislators intended for county officials.

However, at least one unidentified state official said he thought the "mistake" was intended.

The general reaction, and the reaction of the Johnson County officials, is that the legislature did not intend to grant more than a $2,000 proposed increase, although at least one unidentified state official, said he thought the "mistake" was intended.

The four local officers met recently and decided to make their intentions concerning the extra $200 apiece known to state officials. They are requesting the County Board of Supervisors to draw up a resolution stating that the officers do not intend to accept more pay than they feel is intended for them, according to County Auditor Dolores Rogers.

County Recorder John O'Neill said Tuesday that he and Clerk of Court Jerry Langenberg had already submitted letters to that effect to the supervisors.

Donald Krall, county treasurer, was reportedly intending to voice the same opinion — that, as O'Neill said, "We feel that it was an error and don't want to take advantage of it."

If the Board of Supervisors acts according to the officer's recommendation, each officer's pay will increase to $9,450 a year rather than the potential $9,650.

However, opposition to such a move has been voiced by two of Iowa City's state legislators, Rep. Joseph Johnston and Sen. Minnette Doderer, both Democrats.

Johnston said Tuesday that it was unfortunate that the Legislature made the mistake, but that the total salary increase had been made law and county officials had no right to change it.

Johnston added that the refusal offer was a "good gesture" on the part of the officials, but he emphasized that jurisdiction must remain with the state in order to prevent county office candidates from running on promises to cut their own salaries.

If county officers set the precedent of naming their own salaries below the state-set ceiling, Johnston said, then candidates could potentially run for these offices promising to accept only a part or none of the prescribed salary. Such considerations do not belong in political campaigns, according to Johnston.

Mrs. Doderer said that the extra increase "was an honest mistake that we ought to forget about."

She maintained, however, that such decisions ought to be localized in the future to stop any further mistakes on the state level.

Rep. Edward Mezvinsky, also a Democrat from Iowa City, disagreed with Johnston and Mrs. Doderer. He said that the officials should and do presently have "the right to whatever action they desire."

Mezvinsky reiterated a point made by the other legislators that the mistake was a result of the legislature's lack of time and facilities, but he maintained that in the issue at hand the decision was "up to the individual counties."

8,638 Enrollment Breaks Summer Registration Record

Final figures for the 1969 summer session represent a record enrollment of 8,638 students at the University.

The largest enrollment is in the Graduate College, which has a total of 4,568 summer students, and the smallest is in the professional colleges, which have a total of only 1,020 students. The College of Liberal Arts has a summer enrollment of 3,050.

The Graduate College had an increase of 247 students over last summer's enrollment of 4,321. The College of Liberal Arts added 179 students over last year's 2,871, but the professional colleges total enrollment dropped by 199 students this summer.

Men at the University once again outnumber women, since 5,093 men enrolled in the summer session and 3,545 women. This is an increase of 73 men and 354 women over last summer.

The following comparative enrollment shows an increase of 427 students over last summer's total of 8,211. The figures for the College of Dentistry are not relevant because the college has no official summer program.

The eight week summer session ends August 8.

A pearl among swine?

Robert Finch is a pearl in barnyard Washington, and we hope Washington doesn't lose him. Finch stands up for what he believes even when facing that venerable warbler, Everett M. Dirksen. Finch's honesty and determination to stand up for what he believes is refreshing in a town of people intent only upon political survival.

But will Finch last after his two apparent defeats over the Knowles nomination and the school desegregation issues? Only time will tell, but there are some indicators.

Finch was bested by Dirksen in a power struggle, but Dirksen's star is fading. Dirksen faces stiff opposition from influential liberals in his party, and there is increasing dissatisfaction with his leadership by "moderate" Republicans. Dirksen with diminished power would spell a possible renewed influence for Finch, but Dirksen has a reputation for being a very durable politician and is still the most powerful man in Washington next to the President.

Perhaps more insidious pressure to get rid of Finch is coming from Nixon's own White House staff. Some of Nixon's staff was angered by Finch's firm stands on the Knowles and school desegregation issues.

With two powerful forces against him, what hope does Finch have. Why won't he resign; or, if he stays on, what meager influence will be possible?

Finch has one important thing in his favor, the President's respect for his judgment. Whether that respect has been eroded will be shown in great part by what the Nixon administration does on school desegregation.

If Nixon does vigorously enforce the Supreme Court decision on desegregation by numerous Justice Department suits, Finch's influence may still be strong. But is Nixon's reasoning (that enforcing the integration deadline uniformly would cause the enforcing agencies to deal with so many cases that they would do an inadequate job) merely a political smoke screen?

If Nixon is really listening to Sen. Strom Thurmond, school integration in the south will be hindered and Robert Finch's influence has gone down the drain of political practicality.

We hope that Finch won't have to leave and that the administration will work to integrate the school systems in the south. Finch is probably the brightest star in the administration. He works at his job by trying to provide new ideas and continue good programs; he tries to do what he believes in.

Nixon stated continually throughout his campaign that he was a man who would take the unpopular stands and fight the unpopular fights it they were right. Let us hope for Robert Finch's sake and for this country's sake that Nixon's statement was not simply campaign oratory.

FCC Commissioner blasts TV networks

From The Daily Iowan News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal Communications Commission Commissioner Nicholas Johnson said last week that some corporations and industries have become so large and powerful that they have "the incentive and the power to control the information reaching the citizenry of our free society."

Johnson, writing in TV Guide magazine (July 5), contends there are areas where corporations and industries influence television with their heavy advertising outlays.

He also said: "Many broadcasters are fighting, not for free speech, but for profitable speech." Johnson said the major networks practice a form of censorship, bypassing areas that conflict with corporate profits or personal philosophies.

The FCC commissioner, who has gained a reputation for his outspoken views, declared: "Sure there's censorship. But let's not be fooled into mistaking its source. For at the same time that network officials are keeping off your television screens anything they find inconsistent with their corporate profits or personal philosophies, the FCC has been repeatedly defending their First Amendment rights against Government censorship."

Just recently, for example, the FCC ruled — over strong protests — that the networks' coverage of the Chicago Democratic convention was protected by the Constitution's "freedom of the press" clause.

The commissioner suggested that networks could satisfy requests for more cultural and information programs by devoting one-third of their prime time (6 p.m. to 11 p.m.) to programs other than sports or entertainment.

"It could be non-sponsored cultural, educational and public-affairs programming. If the networks were required to stagger such fare, then at any given time during the 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. period of greatest audiences the American viewer would have an alternative, a choice.

"There would still be at all times two networks with the commercial-laden, lowest-common-denominator mass entertainment of situation comedies, Westerns, quiz shows and old movies. The third, however, would have something else," Johnson said.

Other opinions expressed by commissioner Johnson include:

"We have been shown miles of film from Vietnam, it's true. But how much has television told you about the multi-billion-dollar corporate profits from that war?"

"Did you ever find out from television, for example, that a single recent price-fixing case involved a 'robbery' from the American people of more money than was taken in all the country's robberies, burglaries and larcenies during the years of that criminal price fixing?"

The new community

By Jim Sutton

The new tuition has generated charges and countercharges between the University administration and the legislature. Students caught in the middle have been the losers, as usual.

Why are students and the press excluded from University committee meetings? What justification is there for the University, and a public University at that, to suppress information? Why does the medical faculty which teaches 2 per cent of the student body, control 35 per cent of the seats in the Faculty Senate?

Why is there no central balance sheet which shows the total amount of student financial aid from all sources? Why did President Howard R. Bowen fail to increase student financial aid until students expressed their feelings by boycotting classes? Why did the president double financial aid from $1.1 million to $2.2 million dollars immediately after the boycott?

Why must students live in dormitories which are more expensive than dwellings in the free market? Are students forced to live in dormitories (which have been proven anti-educational by a faculty report) merely to pay off the debt on dormitories which were a mistake in the first place?

Our major thesis is that the University is deeply divided on questions of tuition, the University priorities which make tuition necessary, research versus teaching, the war, student responsibilities, and the privileges of a chosen academic few.

These differences are caused more by failures in the structure of the University rather than that popular scapegoat, the generation gap. It is because those in authority have lost sight of the needs and wishes of those they govern that the University is far from being the effective center of learning which it reports to be.

'Students, the brightest hope.'

Editor's Note — The writer is president of the U.S. Farmer's Association, 1024 Grand Ave., Des Moines, and editor of that organization's publication, U.S. Farm News. The article was written in response to a letter from the editors asking Mr. Stover's reaction to the recent series carried in The Daily Iowan by Booth Wallentine of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, which was critical of the activities of campus militants.

By F. W. STOVER

The series by Booth Wallentine dealt with campus riots, campus militants, the tactics of confrontation, defense of ROTC and A Need to Restore Confidence. The following is my reply to Mr. Wallentine:

The first article starts out quoting a campus slogan, "You are either part of the problem or part of the solution." Since we used a cartoon in the spring of 1968 showing officers of the big four farm organizations singing in unison at the Chamber of Commerce Farm Institute and depicting them as being part of the farm problem instead of the solution, we can agree with that slogan. The cartoon was carried in the May 1968 issue of Farm News and also in our book, "The Truth About the Farm Betrayals."

After reading these five articles about the college students described by Wallentine as having "no discipline," uttering "perfidious cries" and who have "burned buildings, ransacked offices and destroyed millions of dollars in public and private property" and left a "mark of ugliness," our first reflection was that this evaluation was coming from a farm organization that had a great opportunity to exercise some influence on the youth of the Midwest.

In view of the fact that the Farm Bureau was the one dominant organization affiliated with the Extension Service, educational groups, 4-H Clubs, etc., and received public support including financial support for many years plus a lot of free publicity, they should now accept some responsibility for the offspring they helped to produce. My comment is that we grant them the right to criticize their own handiwork. We want to hasten to add, however, that the students Mr. Wallentine is flailing are the best of the crop, not the worst.

Mr. Wallentine begins his second article by asking whether the campus disorders are a conspiracy or a spontaneous explosion. Then he begins his third article: "Student disruptions are not spontaneous happenings. They are well planned tactics."

He exhorts others to give the radical militants the "silent treatment" and then he lets loose with five articles of about 500 words each. He pretends to express concern about a "taxpayer revolt" and curtailed funds for education and yet implies approval of withholding subsidies pending suppression of student radicals. He makes a spirited defense of ROTC and apparently approves using our universities for recruiting centers for an overgrown military machine. Yet he piously writes: "Americans have always avoided the militaristic society. And that's good."

Having thus placed himself firmly on both sides of that crucial question, he proceeds to other contradictions.

Being firmly opposed to government intervention in farming, especially regarding farm price supports and payments, this Farm Bureau spokesman wants government intervention in our colleges. He can hardly wait for this intervention. In his second article he says, "We must await the results of the government investigation." But then he says college administrators should "move quickly and firmly to oust those who want alienation from American society." His last line is "Let's hurry up and decide."

But the main thing wrong with these five articles and our reason for responding to them is because of what was left out.

Wallentine carries on a one-sided debate with the students, with the SDS as the main target, and not once does he touch on the primary issue, the one chief concern of the most sincere and dedicated students, the topic of the first "Teach-Ins" and "Sit-Ins" to the last marches and demonstrations.

Mr. Wallentine must know, as everyone else knows, that this one all-prevailing question is the illegal and senseless war in Vietnam. His third article is devoted to "The Tactic of Confrontation." But he seems to be an expert on avoiding a confrontation. He heaps abuse on the courageous students who dare to speak out on it and he does not even hint at what his own position is on this one crucial question that is at the very center of this whole controversy.

He says the students involved are "only a tiny minority of those on campus." To the extent that they reflect the growing public resentment against our longest and most senseless war, they are now a majority — on or off the campus. This is what has the Establishment worried. This undoubtedly is why Mr. Wallentine never mentioned it. Talking about student militants or radicals while avoiding the war question is just arguing in a vacuum.

Wallentine is concerned about our national image which he claims these students are destroying. Does he know what our image is or has become? How does the rest of the world see the U.S.? Has he not read about the "Ugly American"? The campus militants want to change that image. We can't change it by continuing the war or by pretending it doesn't matter.

Instead of being the grave danger to our society as Mr. Wallentine sees them to be, the students who are speaking out against the war and the militarization of our country are today's brightest hope for the U.S.

They could "Restore Public Confidence."

A third view

by John Kim

I have no desire to take any part in the "Pet Controversy" that developed last week, but I believe that this issue deserves a few comments, since, as a Daily Iowan editorial writer uprightly pointed out, "In the midst of the tumult and the shouting... come some very interesting points, questions and criticisms."

The beauty of an argument of this kind is that the participants conveniently forget the existence of "the other side of the truth." Two editorials and a few letters to the editor, printed by The Daily Iowan last week, went on record opposing a petition for revision of the University Housing anti-pet rule.

Reasons given by the writers were very legitimate, but what these writers forgot, conveniently, is that the other reasons given by those who petitioned for pets were as legitimate as their own, not to say anything about the fact that the absolute majority of residents in the Templin Park area signed the petition.

First of all, the real issue here is not to judge who is wrong and who is right — both are right in their arguments pro and con. The significant question, then, is to see what measures the administration is going to take about the petition. If there is any doubt whether some of the petitioners were "coerced and/or intimidated into signing," as one letter writer contends, the proper authorities will be also responsible for finding out the truth.

Second, it is understandable that the University Housing may want to keep the anti-pet rule from the point of view of a landlord who wants to maintain the value of his property by not allowing pets. However, we all know that the University has been making money on the barracks which were given to it almost free, and which are being sold for "a few dollars" per construction as part of a plan to eliminate them eventually. The barracks have no property value, and therefore the landlord-tenant relationship in this case is a different one from the ordinary relationship found in private properties.

Thus viewed, the only reason for the existing anti-pet rule should be that residents of the barracks want such a rule. Now that the absolute majority of the residents want it revised, giving legitimate reasons, the University authorities have no reason to deny the petition unless they want to keep the law for "erratic, sporadic and discriminatory" enforcement. Better no rule than cruel rule.

Third, it is unfortunate to observe that participants in the little controversy not only avoided to discuss these significant points but went further by criticizing petitioners on unjust grounds.

One of the best examples was The Daily Iowan editorial, "The wrong direction" (July 3) in which the writer overgeneralizes about Templin Park residents by asking, "Where were they when the anti-tuition strike was going on and other anti-system fights...?" One wonders how the writer could be so sure to state that none of the petitioners has ever participated in any of the anti-system fight.

However, the most beautiful irony of the editorial seems to be a statement that "their (petitioners) bark is in the wrong direction," because they are excited at such "insignificant" issue as the pet rule.

The writer should know better than that. If it were so insignificant, then why was he barking? No matter how insignificant an issue may seem to some, it is a significant issue to many others. So, there is nothing like "wrong issue" or "right issue," but there are only "different issues."

Really, the editorial writer may have been barking up the wrong tree.

More on 'Petting'

To the Editor: I wish to add my voice to those of my pet-loving friends who have heaped chastisement and derision upon The Daily Iowan editorial writer. Obviously a cruel and heartless slob, at best. And who knows what the worst might be. If this is the kind of DI gets to write their editorials, one can only imagine about the more lowly members of the staff.

It is because of these misgivings about the quality of the DI staff that I oppose my friends' efforts to change the anti-pet rule. Just imagine that the rule has been changed. I can see the headline now. "Templin Park Open to Petting." Of course the prooffreader's apology would appear on the classified page, I at all.

Now folks, I don't want to be tripping over hot bodies on the way home from the library, do you? And you know what Freud said about early childhood trauma. We wouldn't want that to happen, would we?

To the Editor:

This letter is directed to M. E. Moore whose editorial on the current pet issue in married student housing appeared on Thursday's editorial page. To say the Templin Park residents are barking at the wrong tree makes a clever editorial but it seems to us that it is far from realistic one.

When a resident is told to get rid of his pet, he must make a decision. Either he will comply or he will fight, if he thinks his cause is just. If he chooses to fight, he must gather evidence and support for his cause, and he must meet all arguments against his decision with rational and effective replies.

We don't think it is fairly or realistic to expect him, as you obviously do, to say "I won't fight for my pet, because didn't support some or all of the current anti-establishment fights," or "I won't fight for my pet because there is a possibility this issue might momentarily overshadow larger issues."

Let us also hasten to assure you that we are deeply concerned about such "real world evils" as racism, war, and poverty, that we are trying to teach our daughter how to cope with them, and that we ourselves are trying to cope with them as best we know how.

The truth and interest rates

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — You can read all you want to about high interest rates and the problem the banks are having with "truth in lending," but it's only when you try to make a loan these days that you realize how tough things really are.

My friend Kalshiner went into a bank a few weeks ago to make a $1,000 loan. The assistant vice president said, "Yes, I'm sure we can do something."

"That's fine."

"Now the prime rate for loans is 8 1/2 per cent."

"That sounds a little high," said Kalshiner, "but I'll take it."

"I said that was the prime rate. That isn't the rate you get. The prime rate is for our large clients who borrow over $1 million. Our rate to you would be 10 per cent."

"Wow, they should call that the prime rate," Kalshiner said. "It's higher."

"No jokes, Mr. Kalshiner. We're not in a laughing mood these days."

"Things are rough?"

"You don't know the half of it. Everyone wants money, and we don't have any money. Our safes are practically empty. We just don't know what we're going to do."

"I know what you're going to do."

"What?"

"You're going to raise the prime rate."

"You've been talking to David Rockefeller."

"As a matter of fact, I haven't," Kalshiner said. "But can we get on with my problem?"

"Of course. Now I must warn you that although we tell you the rate on your loan is 10 per cent it's really 18.65 per cent."

"Why did you have to tell me that?"

"Because," the vice president said as he put his hand on a Bible, "of the Truth-in-Lending Act, which requires us to tell you the actual amount of interest as opposed to the interest we advertise."

"Well, why don't you tell the people the actual interest rate in the first place?"

"Because under the Truth-in-Lending Act we're not required to do so. Wouldn't you rather think you were paying 10 per cent than 19 per cent?"

"I guess so."

"Now, under the Truth-in-Lending Act, I am also required to tell you that we will deduct the first payment and the interest out of your $1,000 loan, which will add another 1.94 per cent to your interest charges."

"I knew you'd get over 20 per cent before I got out of here."

"Mr. Kalshiner, if you don't want this loan, we can give it to somebody else."

"I'm sorry. I see you still have your hand on the Bible. Is there anything else you want to tell me?"

"There are certain bank handling charges for putting through the loan which will add another 2 per cent."

"Bonnie and Clyde were amateurs compared to you guys," Kalshiner said.

"Mr. Kalshiner, that wasn't a nice thing to say. Do you think we like telling people the truth about our loans? Do you think it's fun to have to keep my hand on this Bible every time someone wants to borrow money? We didn't want the Truth-in-Lending Act. We fought it because we knew how unhappy it would make everyone. But it's the law of the land and all the fun has gone out of the loan business."

"I'm sorry," Kalshiner said. "Heck, if I have to pay 23 per cent for a loan, it's fine with me."

The vice president put his hand back on the Bible. "Now let me tell you about the postage charges."

'The Wild Bunch'

To the Editor: Having just endured Sam Peckinpah's film, "The Wild Bunch," and having recently read Allan Rostoker's review and estimate of the film and its director, I am moved to respond.

Unless Mr. Rostoker, in his promised review, retracts everything favorable he said about this miserable excuse for cinematography, it will confirm once again my opinion that Mr. Rostoker is a very miserable excuse for a reviewer.

Surely, in an academic community of this size, there must be someone who knows enough about films to make his opinions worth reading and iterate enough to express himself clearly; one might even be justified in hoping for a certain degree of taste. Mr. Rostoker has none of these qualifications.

'Young Turk' Views His Service in House—

Johnston Disappointed with Legislature

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the second in a three-part series on Johnson County's three state legislators. This article deals with Democratic Rep. Joseph Johnston, from Johnson County's east district. A final article will deal with Rep. Edward Mezvinsky, also a Democrat, representing Johnson County's west district.

By DAVID KOTOK

Rep. Joseph Johnston (D-Iowa City) said his first term in the Iowa Legislature was disappointing because of the lack of legislation dealing with young people's problems, the cities and poverty.

Johnston said in a recent interview, "One of my major disappointments in the last session was its indifference and neglect to the concerns of the young people of the state of Iowa."

He cited three major failures:

• The inability to pass the 19-year-old vote bill;

• The Voter Reform Bill, which if passed would disenfranchise many students;

• The Legislature's passage of the appropriations bill, resulting in tuition hikes at the state universities.

Johnston accused the Republican Party of "playing partisan politics" in submitting the Voter Reform Bill.

"The three most controversial parts of the Voter Reform Bill seriously restrict the voting ability of Democrats, and I don't think it is an accident!" Johnston said.

The bill was drafted by the Republican State Central Committee.

Johnston contended that besides restricting student voting, which he said is 70 per cent Democratic, the bill would hurt Democrats in two other major areas.

It would restrict mobile registrars. (Mobile registrars are legally qualified to go out and register voters who might not register at the county courthouse because of a time conflict with their working hours.)

Johnston believes the restriction would impose a hardship on wage earners and poor persons, who frequently vote Democratic.

The bill would also reduce from four to three years the time limit between voting and reregistration. Those who only vote in Presidential elections would therefore have to register every four years.

Johnston also accused the Legislature of trying to "pass the buck" for the tuition increase. "Clearly the responsibility for the tuition increase rests with the Legislature," he said.

"When the Legislature repealed the sales tax credit for low income families and then repealed sales tax on construction and advertising," Johnston said, "the state taxed the poor to benefit the wealthy."

Johnston claims the state gained $13 million by removing the tax credits for the poor but lost an equal amount of revenue by removing the sales tax.

He said that the legislature ignored the financial problems of the cities by denying them state aid. He said this would force cities to raise property taxes "which are the most regressive type of tax."

The 31-year-old Iowa City lawyer considers himself a member of the new breed of urban, young legislators known as "the young Turks" in the Iowa House.

"Young legislators realize we cannot solve complex problems with simplistic answers. We must be more sophisticated in our thinking."

Johnston believes that the Interim Committee of the Legislature has the right and the duty to study appropriations to the three state universities.

Johnston said he would object to an investigation of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS).

"It (SDS) is not the responsibility of the legislature unless it can be shown that SDS is responsible for the tuition increase."

In the last session of the legislature, Johnston bitterly attacked the policy of credit burcaus in not allowing clients to examine their own records at the bureau.

He said, in reference to the establishment of data banks, "Big Brother is not coming; he is here."

"Data centers may become a serious invasion of privacy, but at least constraints on credit bureaus will insure that the information is accurate," he said.

Johnston told The Daily Iowan that he had been urged to seek higher office, but that if he had to decide now, he would seek reelection to the Iowa House.

He said his goal was to acquire a leadership role in the Democratic House contingent.

Nixon Asks Rise In Jobless Wage

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon proposed Tuesday bringing 4.8 million more workers under unemployment insurance, doubling the employer-paid tax base and forbidding states to pay jobless benefits to strikers.

The AFL-CIO attacked Nixon's legislative proposal for not imposing federal insurance payment rates on the states. The bill merely would urge the states to voluntarily bring their now widely varying scale of payments up to 50 per cent of a jobless worker's normal weekly wage.

"The President is right in setting a goal of 50 per cent replacement of lost wages, but he is making a tragic mistake in leaving to the states for another two years the responsibility for achieving this goal," said Bert Seidman, Social Security director for the AFL-CIO.

The bill, which would also provide 13 extra weeks of unemployment pay in the event of especially high unemployment, was announced at the same time the Labor Department reported the nation's jobless rate remained at a relatively low 3.4 per cent of the civilian labor force last month.

"The best time to strengthen our unemployment insurance system is during a period of relatively full employment," Nixon said.

Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz said the bill did not reflect any White House fear of rising unemployment, but was "a normal insurance policy" and an economic stabilizer.

Nixon said adding 4.8 million workers to the 57 million already covered would leave about 12 million still uncovered, mostly in state and local government jobs.

City Seeking Applications For Top Jobs

Iowa City has a full-scale effort under way to recruit three high level administrative employees.

Needed are a director of community development to fill the vacancy left by former Planning Director Barry D. Lundberg, a city engineer to succeed Melford A. Dahl and a planning coordinator to fill a newly created post.

Lundberg quit this spring to take a position with a Cleveland firm. Dahl leaves city employment next week to head the municipal engineering division of Powers, Willis and Associates engineering firm in Iowa City.

City Manager Frank R. Smiley thought the community development position was filled when he announced June 5 that Beverly Alfred Ittmann Jr., 38, of DeKalb, Ill., had been hired at an annual salary of $15,120.

However, Ittmann wired Smiley on June 30 that he had taken a job with the Spindle-Top Corp. in Lexington, Ky.

Smiley reported Tuesday afternoon he hadn't received a letter promised earlier by Ittmann to explain his change of plans.

Smiley said it will probably take an additional six to eight weeks to fill the position. Under the reorganized plan, the community development director will be in charge of four divisions: planning, urban renewal, housing and inspection.

Smiley said he had no applicants for the community development position, and that he had not had an opportunity to advertise in municipal government publications since most are issued monthly.

Smiley said the city had received 14 applications for the new position of planning coordinator. The salary range is $9,000 to $12,000 annually depending on the education and experience of the applicant.

Smiley said he had placed Public Works Director Ralph E. Speer Jr. in charge of recruiting the new city engineer to succeed Dahl, who was receiving $14,400 a year. Speer said Tuesday he had six applications and expected to make a selection within the next three to four weeks.

Caught in the Act

McCHORD AIR FORCE BASE, Wash. (AP) — The first of 25,000 U.S. troops President Nixon is withdrawing from Vietnam landed at this sun-swept air base Tuesday and stepped to American soil as Little League baseball players waved a sign reading "Welcome home — Thank you for keeping America free."

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, their former commander in Vietnam and now Army chief of staff, told the returning veterans "I want to convey to you the appreciation of our nation — appreciation for a job well done."

Westmoreland warned the troops that they "will be confronted by those who will degrade your performance in Vietnam."

But he told them they would find themselves "more mature, more dedicated to the service of others, more compassionate, more responsible, more realistic and more practical" than their contemporaries who have not served.

The Vietnam veterans stepped out of their C141 transport plane loaded down with souvenirs, dressed in khakis and black combat boots, and wearing beaming smiles.

'Monster Hunt' Slowed As Sub Springs Leak

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — A midget American submarine joined the hunt for the Loch Ness monster Tuesday and promptly sprang a leak.

It was the second snag in the plans of the Loch Ness Phenomena Investigation Bureau, a British-American group seeking the monster — if it exists.

The submarine should have been launched Monday but a crane necessary to the operation broke down.

Dan Taylor, 28, who built the submarine in a garage in Atlanta, Ga., laughed off any suggestion of a jinx. But diving operations with the submarine, a one-man vessel named Viper Fish, were postponed until Thursday.

James said Thursday's operation will be limited to test dives. Extensive mapping of the loch bed will precede the serious hunting.

Reports of a monster in the loch go back for years, usually coinciding with the start of the tourist season. The investigation bureau hopes to provide the first concrete evidence.

Finch: Government May Act To Curb Medical Cost Rise

BOSTON (AP) — Robert H. Finch, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, hinted Tuesday the federal government might act to curb the spiraling cost of medical care in the United States.

Finch said in a speech read to the 22nd annual gathering of the Assembly of the World Health Organization that "the galloping inflation in medical costs" is probably the most severe problem confronting the nation's health services.

"Health insurance... particularly prepared private insurance... must be broadened and it must also be deepened to reach the lower income groups, to extend the numbers of people and benefits covered," Finch said.

The secretary said there will be federal incentives to accomplish this aim. He did not say what they might be.

Finch's speech was read to the Assembly, WHO's governing body, by Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, nominated as the secretary's chief assistant.

Finch's remarks came after a White House announcement Monday that a major administration statement on medical care can be expected Thursday.

Scientists meeting with newsmen declined to say to what degree the flight was considered successful.

Planners Recommend Extending City Limits

The Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday unanimously recommended that the City Council annex land in southwest Iowa City that is bordered by Melrose Avenue, proposed Highway 518 and Highway 1.

The annexation would extend the city limits 300 feet past Highways 518 and 1.

The recommendation was one of a series approved that appeared in a 24-page study done by the city's Department of Community Development. (There is a related story on the study and city planning that follows this story.)

One of the recommendations that the commission amended, then endorsed was:

- No additional shopping centers should be provided in the area, but highway-oriented commercial development should be allowed at appropriate spots along the highways.

The recommendation made by the development department was that "there will be no more commercial zoning in the area."

Commission member William Ambrisco objected to a blanket prohibition of further commercial development in the area.

He said, "It's a natural thing for the area along major highways to have commercial enterprises."

Mrs. Helen Stockdale, a commission member, objected to development along highways. She said that the commission would be promoting "strip" development, which was against the commission's policy.

City planner Dick Gale said that the study's recommendation was made, not to eliminate any further commercial development, but to insure that there will be no concentration of shopping centers in the area.

Gale cited a 15-acre plot off Benton Street already zoned for a shopping center that will serve the area and Wardway Plaza and Coralville strip facilities. He said these would adequately handle the area's commercial needs.

The commission decided that the only appropriate spots for commercial development in the area would be at points along the highways, like the interchanges off U.S. 518. These businesses are supposed to be highway-oriented businesses.

The commission's recommendation to the City Council will require the Council to change its policy. The council has said there should be no commercial development in the southwest area off 518.

Other recommendations endorsed by the Council were:

- That multifamily dwellings be permitted as a part of "Planned Area Development (PAD)" but that no additional multifamily zoning be granted in the area. The ratio of apartment units to single family units should not exceed one to one; and the apartment area traffic should have direct but limited access to the arterial streets.

PAD zoning would allow multifamily units (apartments) to be placed among single family units on the same block after approval by the Council.

- That Melrose Avenue, Benton Street extended to Melrose Avenue, relocated Highway 1, Highway 518, Coralville Cutoff Road and Sunset Street extended to Highway 1 be developed as arterial streets.

- That collector streets be connected to arterial streets at ¼-to-½-mile intervals.

A collector street carries traffic from residential streets to the arterial, through streets in the area.

- That the use of the PAD approach to zoning be encouraged.

The commission did not recommend the PAD policies to the Council, but sent them to the Council for consideration.

Another study recommendation, that a lineal park system be developed in the area, will be considered at a joint meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Parks and Recreation Commission.

In other action, the council refused a request by Sam and Rose Abrams to rezone 1041 E. Burlington St. from R2 (single family and duplexes) to R3 (apartments).

Mrs. John Morris of 1030 E. Burlington St. said that the neighborhood was being upgraded and "changing to R3A and putting in apartment buildings might discourage the movement upward."

Iowa City and Where It Will Grow

Iowa City's development is planned for the southwest, the square in the map marked target area. The area is bordered by Melrose Avenue, proposed Highway 518 and Highway 1. The two other areas of development to the north and northwest and the smaller one to the east are also marked by the dashed lines. The areas the city will expand into are dictated by the watershed, which is marked by the solid line on the map.

Southwest City Growth Is Predicted

Iowa City's growth in the next 10 to 20 years will occur primarily in the southwest part of the city, with some development north and northeast, a planning report shows.

Dick Gale, a city planner, indicated that the southwestern area will develop because of its accessibility to downtown, facilities (sewer, fire and water) and transportation system. It also falls within the limits of the Iowa City watershed. The watershed is the area that drains to one location, such as a river or a lake. Iowa City's watershed drains into the Iowa River. The watershed's borders approximate the city's limits to the north, east and south and to the proposed Freeway 518, southwest of the city.

Gale said, "We're trying to keep the growth of the city within that watershed until it is full." He explained that when the city expands beyond the watershed's limits, pump stations have to be built for water and sewage drainage. The city controls the direction of its growth with the placement of new facilities, such as sewer and fire stations. The city is presently being guided to the southwest.

The presence of the watershed limits the eastward expansion of the city. The watershed's boundary provides room for southwest expansion.

The city expects the southwest area to follow the growth pattern prevalent during the past years, a growth outward from the center of the city as contrasted with growth from the outside toward the center.

The study's conclusions did not call for any industrial parks southwest. The study's eight conclusions were:

- The southwest fourth of Iowa City, particularly that area between Melrose Avenue, Highway 1 and proposed Highway 518 (called the target area) will become the prime development area of the city.

- The 1,500 acres in the target area will accommodate between 15,000 and 18,000 people.

- The existing commercial areas accessible to the target area, including the potential 15-acre shopping center near Benton Street and Coralville Cutoff, will be adequate.

- One-half of the area's development will have occurred by 1980.

- The expected residential development will create the need for two to three additional elementary schools and 50 to 75 acres of park-land in the target area.

- The trunk sewer and water facilities in the area are adequate for the development.

- The major street system, although presently underdeveloped, conforms to a pattern which conveniently serves the area. Full development of the system should be easy.

- Strong interest will be demonstrated in the development of commercial uses in the immediate vicinity of the interchanges along Freeway 518.

Lineal Parks Planned in New Area

By JIM HARRIS

Development of park and recreation areas in the southwest area of the city has been recommended by the Iowa City Department of Community Development.

The department recommended that a "lineal" park system be developed along creek areas that meander through the southwest side—south of Melrose Avenue and north of Highway 1—toward the Iowa River to take advantage of the natural topography of the land.

A May 22 report to City Manager Frank Smiley said low-lying land southeast of the West Benton Street-Coralville Cutoff intersection would be adaptable for the development of a 25-acre community park.

The lineal parks would vary in width depending on the various streams, but might average 100 feet in width, the report said. The lineal parks could be developed for walking and hiking trails, bicycle paths.

An alternative plan to the community park and lineal parks plan would be the development of individual neighborhood parks throughout the southwest area, the report said.

"The design of these parks would require the selection of separate sites that would meet the required criteria for park and recreation development. The individual neighborhood park development would create heterogeneous pockets activity while a system of lineal parks provides a linkag between park areas, developing a homogeneous park system," according to the report. The report said land acquisition would be one of the major problems.

The City Council July 1 authorized negotiations for the first land acquisition for the project. City Manager Frank Smiley was authorized to get procedures underway for the city's purchase of a 25-to-30-acre site directly southeast of the West Benton Street-Coralville Cutoff intersection.

TV Board Seeks Cigarette Ad Curb

WASHINGTON (AP)—The television industry's Code Review Board recommended Tuesday that networks and stations reduce cigarette commercials gradually in five steps with total elimination by Sept. 1, 1973.

The recommendation by the TV Code Review Board, the National Association of Broadcasters, must be approved by NAB's TV board of directors before it can go into effect.

UI Profs To Build Small Intestine Model

By IRENE BOYD

A University doctor and an engineer are cooperating in efforts to make what may be a unique model of the human small intestine.

The two — Enzo Macagno, professor of mechanics and hydraulics, and Dr. James Christensen, associate professor of internal medicine — are building the model to get a better idea of how the small intestine functions.

In order to do this, Macagno will use his engineering skill to build a model of the intestine.

Their study is supported by a grant to the University College of Medicine from the National Institutes of Health.

"We want to look at the small intestine as an engineer would — as a kind of pumping and mixing device," Macagno said.

"There is no apparent reason why the contents of the gut do not in the wrong direction (back toward the stomach) but we know that they do not," Christensen said.

Finding out why this is so is one of the reasons for building a model of the small intestine.

"We want to construct a unifying hypothesis about how the gut propels its contents," Christensen said.

Macagno explained that simplifying assumptions must be made to reproduce the characteristics of the intestine. They will use rubber tubing, for instance, and will not try to duplicate the texture and porosity of the gut.

More information about the processes of movement in the intestine should contribute to a better understanding of diarrhea, Christensen explained.

Such information will probably be needed for successful intestine transplants, he added.

The normal small intestine ranges from about 9 to 12 feet in length with a hollow diameter of about one to two inches.

Christensen said that people could live with less than the average amount of gut. One woman was kept alive at University Hospitals for about three years with less than one foot of small intestine. But some part of the intestine is vitally needed for digestion.

The small intestine has defied direct observation attempts. For example, the intestine lies limp when contacted by surgical instruments. Chemical dyes are also inadequate because the long tube is folded upon itself, making changes hard to note.

In order to overcome this handicap, Christensen will use a number of small balloons to measure pressure changes in the intestine. These pressure changes indicate the gut is contracting.

A series of tiny balloons swallowed by healthy volunteers and attached to a recorder will give the basic data on the contractions.

Just looking at the data on the gut's contractions does not give a pattern that would represent the small intestine's propelling its contents on toward the large intestine, according to Christensen.

"It's like playing a piano in a mad way," Macagno said of the seemingly random contractions.

But he said he thought a pattern must be there. The two plan to feed data, taken from humans, into a computer that will run the model they are making. They will then check back to see whether the model is functioning like the human intestine.

The gut is like a pipe, Christensen explained.

"However, in this case, the pipe itself brings about the flow. The pipe itself is a pump. The walls are not rigid, but constantly moving," he said.

The small intestine, like the heart, has its own "pacemaker," giving off electrical impulses, Christensen said. The pacemaker establishes the basic time rhythm in which contractions occur. "It is probably the most regular of all the body's clocks," Christensen noted about the intestine's pacemaker.

Christensen has taught at the University since 1965. He is a Markle Scholar in medical science. His early training was undertaken at the University of Nebraska.

About 25 Markle Scholars in academic medicine are chosen in nationwide competition every year. The University receives $30,000 over a 5-year period from the Markle Foundation to support Christensen's teaching and research activities.

Macagno, who has studied in Argentina and in France, has taught at the University since 1956. He was previously a professor in his native country, Argentina.

Soviets Fight Red Chinese Along Border

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Soviets and Chinese Communists clashed Tuesday in a new outbreak of hostilities on the tense Amur River border.

Peking accused the Soviets of sending troops, gunboats and planes into Chinese territory in Manchuria's Heilongjiang province.

The Chinese made the incident known first and the Russians followed several hours later with a charge that one Soviet river worker was killed and three were injured in a "bandit attack" by Chinese soldiers on Goldinsky Island.

A Soviet protest delivered to the Chinese Communist embassy in Moscow accused the Chinese of a "malicious provocation." It implied that the incident was aimed at disrupting Sino-Chinese negotiations on border river navigation under way in Khabarovsk. The note said two Soviet river launches were damaged.

Ex-Yankee Great Rolfe Dies

GILFORD, N.H. (AP) — Robert A. "Red" Rolfe, the soft-spoken former New York Yankees star who for years had been fighting poor health, lost that fight Tuesday.

Rolfe, 40, died at his home on Governor's Island in Gilford, a small town in the heart of New Hampshire's lush Lakes Region.

Rolfe, who helped the Yankees win six American League pennants in the 1930s and '40s, underwent surgery for an intestinal disorder in 1967. That same year he retired as athletic director of Dartmouth College in Hanover, his alma mater.

Rolfe led Dartmouth to the first Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League championship in 1930.

He spent three years in the minors, then was elevated to the Yankees' roster. He stayed with the club until forced to retire in 1942, and recently was named the team's all-time third baseman.

His best year was in 1939 when he batted .329 and led the league in hits, doubles and runs scored. He finished with a .289 lifetime average and helped the Yankees to the pennant and five world series titles between 1936-42.

Rolfe went from the Yankees to Yale, where he served as head baseball and basketball coach. He rejoined the Yankees as a coach in 1946 but stayed only one season. He went on to coach Toronto in the formative days of the National Basketball Association.

Rolfe stayed with Toronto only a year, however, before baseball summoned him again. He joined the Detroit Tigers as farm director in 1948 and a year later became the team's manager.

He steered the Tigers to a second-place finish behind New York in 1950, and was named American League Manager of the Year. He remained with Detroit until replaced by the late Fred Hutchinson midway through the 1952 season.

Rolfe became athletic director at Dartmouth in 1954 and remained there for 13 years. The old campus baseball field on which he played as a youth recently was renamed in his honor.

He is survived by his wife, the former Isabel Africa, whom he married in 1943.

Chicago Lead Cut To 4 in N.L. East

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Kranepool's run-producing bloop single capped a three-run, ninth-inning rally by the New York Mets for a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Tuesday that sliced the Cubs' National League East lead to four games.

The Mets, held to one hit — Kranepool's homer — for eight innings by Ferguson Jenkins, rallied in the ninth when pinch-hitter Ken Boswell doubled and, after Tommie Agee fouled out, pinch hitter Donn Clendenon doubled. Boswell held up at third for fear Clendenon's drive would be caught.

Cleon Jones, the league-leading hitter, tied the score with a two-run double and after Art Shamsky was walked intentionally and Wayne Garret grounded out, Kranepool dropped a single into short left, scoring Jones with the winning run.

Jenkins' airtight pitching and solo homers by Ernie Banks and ex-Met Jim Hickman helped the Cubs take a 3-1 lead into the bottom of the ninth.

British Open Starts Today; 13 Americans to Try For Title

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — Orville Moody and George Archer, the reigning United States Open and Masters champions, head a 13-player American group in the British Open golf tourney, which starts today.

"I think this is about the strongest field we've ever had in the British Open," said Keith MacKenzie, Secretary of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club.

"The strength in depth is so strong that you could take up to 15 players and still not come up with the winner."

A total of 130 golfers start out over Lytham's 6,848-yard, par 71 links to try and take over from South Africa's Gary Player as the king of British golf.

The 34-year-old Player became the 5-1 favorite to repeat after taming this windy course on the edge of the Irish sea during strenuous practice rounds.

And the South African himself said:

"I'm playing as well now as I've ever played. I'm healthy. I think I can get this one for the third time."

Player won in 1959 at Muirfield, Scotland, and collared it for the second time at Carnoustie, Scotland, last year.

Billy Casper, twice winner of the U.S. Open, and millionaire Jack Nicklaus, who has captured everything in golf, are the second favorites behind Player at 6-1.

Moody, the 35-year-old winner of the recent U.S. Open from Killian, Tex., and Archer of Gilroy, Calif., are close behind.

The other Americans involved in the chase for this 109-year-old crown are Gardner Dickinson of Palm Beach, Fla.; Lee Trevino, U.S. Open winner in 1968 from Dallas; Davis Love of Atlanta; Ray Floyd of Lake Havasu City, Ariz.; Gay Brewer of Dallas; Bruce Fleischer, the U.S. Amateur champion from Hialeah, Fla.; Rich Bassett from New Jersey; Miller Barber of Sherman, Tex.; and Bert Yancey of Tallahassee, Fla.

Other non-British challengers are: Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina, winner in 1967; Peter Thomson, the Australian who has won the title five times, and Bob Charles of New Zealand, who triumphed in 1963.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Hill has moved up to challenge Gene Littler for the No. 1 spot among the leading money winners on the Professional Golfers' Association tour.

Hill, who won $25,000 in the Buick Open, pulled into second place with earnings of $99,045, according to figures released Tuesday by the PGA Tournament Players Division. Littler, who earned $1,937 in the Buick Open, is tops with $104,996.
