School for Poor

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Trustees of the University of Illinois voted Wednesday to expand a program that provides special educational services for "disadvantaged students."

Acting unanimously, the trustees appropriated $546,119 for financing, tutoring, individual counseling, and extra rhetoric and mathematics classes for students at Urbana and Chicago Circle campuses.

The trustees said most of the students for the program will come from the black inner city schools in Chicago.

More than 1,100 disadvantaged students are expected to attend the two this fall. Lyle Lanier, provost of the university, said the 899 disadvantaged students who enrolled at the campuses last year did much better with special assistance than they could have been expected to do without it.

Honduras War

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Two Honduran warplanes bombed San Salvador's international airport early Wednesday and then strafed a border village, Salvador military sources said.

No casualties or damage were reported.

The reported attack was the first action in the war between the two Central American nations since Sunday, when Honduras claimed Salvadoran troops captured five more of its villages. It also came only six hours after the end of the 96-hour ceasefire ordered by the Organization of American States.

Traffic Cop Nabs State GOP Head

Charged with speeding by Iowa City police, State Republican Chairman John E. "Jack" Warren is scheduled to appear in Police Court before Judge Marien R. Neely.

Neely is Johnson County Republican chairman.

Warren, of Waterloo, was charged by police with speeding in the 200 block of Rocky Shore Drive about 5:25 p.m. Tuesday. Warren was 1 of 14 persons charged Tuesday with speeding on that street.

Nasser Pledges Egypt Will Fight To Get Jerusalem

CAIRO (AP) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser declared Wednesday Egypt will fight to liberate all Arab lands — especially Jerusalem.

"We have to fight for the restoration of our lands," he told a cheering audience. "And we shall fight."

"When I say the restoration of our lands I do not mean Egypt alone. I don't mean just Sinai alone, but all Arab lands, and above all Jerusalem," he said.

But, he cautioned, "The road is long and difficult."

Nasser attacked the United States and Britain for what he said was their complete support of Israel.

He was speaking on the 17th anniversary of the revolution that he led against the late King Farouk. His address to the national congress of the Arab Socialist Union was broadcast by Cairo radio.

The United States has continued to back Israel, despite statements by former Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson that America would not support any aggression in the Middle East, Nasser declared.

University Short of Funds For September Handbooks

By JOHN NEIBERGALL
The University lacks the money and is running out of time to print a student handbook for distribution at fall registration, Philip G. Hubbard, dean of academic affairs, said Wednesday.

The 50-page handbook, which would cost about $3,000 to print, would include information about student services and organizations and spell out University policies of student conduct.

Delayed consideration on two conduct policy sections — the Code of Student Life and the Student Bill of Rights — is the reason the University is running out of time on the handbook, Hubbard said.

Both the Code preamble and the Bill of Rights have been revised by the Committee on Student Life (CSL), but the revisions have not received necessary final approval from University Pres. Howard R. Bowen.

Bowen made changes in the CSL's recommended versions of the Code and the Bill of Rights and asked the committee July 15 to review his changes. The CSL has not yet met to consider changes suggested by Bowen.

Hubbard said the Code and Bill of

Student Group Plans Sitting In On State Probe

By BILL MERTENS
A Student Investigating Committee (SIC) is planning to go into action this Friday by sitting in on the first hearing of the Legislative Budget and Financial Control Committee, a SIC committee head said Wednesday.

The committee head, Tom Higgins, an Iowa State graduate student in government, also said that the committee hoped to obtain the legislative committee's minutes to try to determine the exact nature of their forthcoming investigation of the state universities. He said further that SIC planned to obtain the journals of the Iowa House and Senate for a detailed investigation.

SIC, representing students from Iowa State University and the University of Iowa, was formed in Ames to probe the activities of the Iowa Legislature and to look into the "social adaptability" of the legislators.

The announcement of the plans for the investigation came Tuesday in response to a recent vote by the Budget and Financial Control Committee to study operations at the three state universities.

A study of the methods used by the Iowa Board of Regents in determining the "social adaptability" and qualifications of the universities' faculties was included in the legislative committee's plans.

"The primary aim of SIC will be to promote methods and motives of legislative investigations," said group chairman Mrs. Barbara Yates, a senior majoring in English at Iowa State.

"As a taxpayer and student citizen, I'm concerned about the so-called necessity as well as the expense of this probe of the universities," said Mrs. Yates. "There is inefficiency in state government that we wouldn't tolerate in the academic community."

Mrs. Yates said that the committee hoped to curb unnecessary legislative activities by demonstrating to the people the inefficiencies in the state government.

"We are taking a 20th Century outlook," said Mrs. Yates. "We are surprised that legislators have the time for such things as debating state birds and obscene words when there is still poverty and hunger in Iowa."

"The entire investigation is going to be like a satire," said Higgins. "but we are dead serious. We are going to stay calm, cool and emotionless."

Higgins said SIC was going to try at the hearing Friday to determine what the legislative committee meant by "social adaptability."

"One of the legislators said that members of the faculty were part of the community as a whole and had to behave in that fashion," said Higgins.

"We consider the legislators also to be a part of the community as a whole."

Fair and Cooler

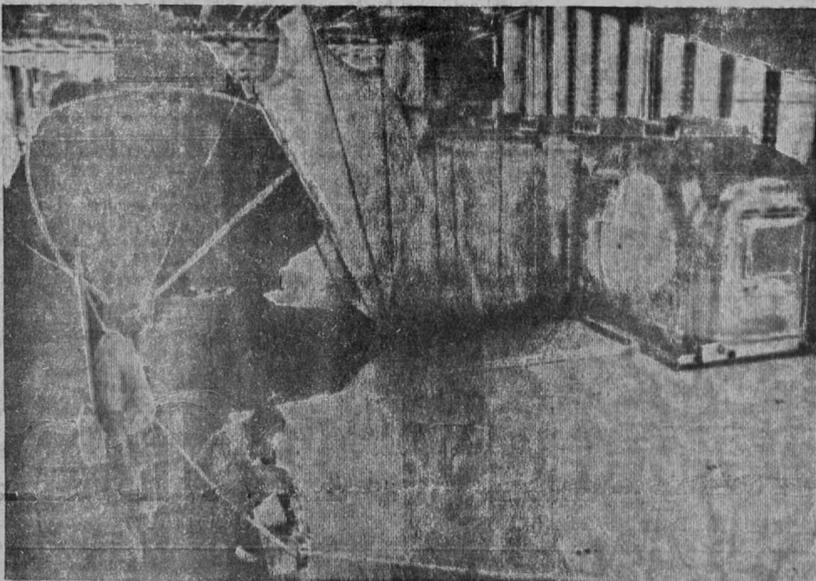

Continued fair today. Temperatures lower. High today in upper 70s, lows tonight in mid 60s. Warmer Friday, with chance of rain.

We are going to see if they are behaving in the fashion of the American legislator," he said.

Higgins said the Ames group now consisted of about 10 students from Iowa State and that faculty help is expected.

Iowa Student Body Pres. Jim Sutton said he hoped to meet with the Ames group next week and organize a group at Iowa. The groups from the two schools will then set up a separate investigation for each university.

The groups from the two schools will meet when SIC has hearings of its own, which Higgins said will begin in about two weeks.

1970 Property Taxes Will Be Raised To Pay for Government Spending

By GEORGE REYNOLDS
City property owners' 1970 property tax rate will be boosted by about 22.6 mills to help pay for a 36 per cent increase in three areas of local government spending.

The boost means that the taxpayer will pay an additional $22.60 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation.

University property, owned by the state, is not subject to the local property taxes. Therefore, property tax increases will not affect residence hall fees. However, it is possible that some off-campus landlords will pass the tax increase on to their tenants by increasing rents.

The three local government units financed by property taxes — city, county and school — have projected 1970 budgets totaling $24.3 million. This is $6.4 million above the 1969 spending level of $17.9 million.

The total mill rate for all three areas is expected to climb from 117.56 to 140.16, an 18 per cent jump. At this rate, the tax bill for a home assessed at $5,400 (with an approximate $20,000 market value) would be $756.87, an increase of about $122 over the 1969 bill.

The final mill rate, however, will not be set until assessors complete their 1970 valuation of property within the city.

The greatest jump in spending will be by the city. The 1970 budget, approved after a July 15 public hearing, calls for a 75 per cent increase, from $5.2 to $9.1 million.

Much of the additional funds to pay for the city spending jump will come from non-property-tax sources. $1.5 million will come from the sale in January, of a $2 million street improvement bond issue. The balance of the bond income is scheduled for 1971 spending. Additional city revenue will come from city water, sewer and parking systems fees and from the state and federal governments.

City income from property tax will increase 16 per cent, from $2.1 to $2.4 million.

The 1970 mill rate to finance city spending is expected to be 38.741, up 5 mills — 15 per cent — from this year's 33.6 mill rate.

The Johnson County budget is expected to be increased by 12 per cent, from $3.8 to $4.3 million. The county's proposed budget was announced Friday, but will not receive final approval until after an Aug. 15 public hearing.

Most of the county financing will come from property taxes. The balance will come from fees for county services and from state and federal funding for such things as welfare and health programs and for road construction and maintenance.

Johnson County will ask for about 14.42 mills from Iowa City property owners. This is a 3 1/2 per cent increase over the 13.96 mill rate in 1969.

Apollo to Be Home From Moon Today

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 11 astronauts spoke a hymn of praise for the men and the nation that sent them to the moon as they passed the halfway point Wednesday of their starlit journey home.

In brief, moving farewells in their last telecast from space, their historic voyage of exploration was described as a symbol of "the insatiable curiosity of all mankind."

As they sped toward one of the strangest welcomes any President ever gave his nation's heroes, the astronauts — Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins — expressed their gratitude to the waiting world simply, but with feeling.

"We've come to the conclusion," Aldrin said, "that this has been far more than three men on a voyage to the moon, more still than the efforts of a government-industry team, more even than the efforts of one nation.

"We feel that it stands as a symbol of the insatiable curiosity of all mankind to explore the unknown."

Their talks came some 18 hours before their spacecraft was to burn like a meteor into the earth's atmosphere and splash down into the Pacific Ocean 1,196 miles southwest of Honolulu.

Each man talked for about three minutes. Armstrong introduced the other two and then himself spoke the last words of the telecast. "To all the people who are listening and watching tonight, God bless you. Good night from Apollo 11."

Speaking directly into the camera, Armstrong said they wanted to share with mankind their reflections on their odyssey.

Collins described the complexity of the machines and equipment that sent them to the moon and back and said the trip itself had been terribly difficult and demanding.

"This trip of ours to the moon may have looked to you simple and easy," he said. "I'd like to assure you that that has not been the case. . . ."

"All this is possible only through the blood, sweat and tears of a number of people."

Then Collins paid tribute to the thousands of technicians who assembled the machines and equipment, the men who tested them and the men on the ground who guided the flight.

Aldrin said the flight brought to mind a song of praise from the Eighth Psalm of the Bible:

"When I consider the heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars which Thou hast ordained, what is man that Thou art mindful of Him."

Aldrin said, "Neil's statement the other day upon first setting foot on the surface of the moon, 'This is a small step for man, but a great leap for mankind,' I believe sums up the feelings very nicely."

After all three spoke, the television screen filled with a final look at their home planet, still a shimmering blue half disc in the black of space 105,000 miles away.

County Demos May Postpone Election of Head

The election of a new chairman of the Johnson County Democratic Committee may be postponed.

Mrs. Arthur Small, of Hills, said Wednesday she planned to ask that the election of a new chairman to replace Dan Boyle be postponed until September.

Mrs. Small said she thought election by the members of the county committee should be held at a later date because many members were now out of town. She said she believed that the election should be held at a time when all the members could participate.

Mrs. Small said that the party vice-chairman, Mrs. Donald Volm, could certainly carry out the duties of chairman for the next six weeks.

Boyle said in his letter of resignation July 11 that one of the main reasons for his leaving office at that date was that "the immediate election of a new chairman will allow that person the time necessary to prepare a program of victory in 1970."

If Mrs. Small's motion for postponement fails, the committee will tonight elect as chairman either James Hayes or Eric Bergsten.

Bergsten is a professor of law at the University. He unsuccessfully ran for the Iowa City Council in 1963 and has been active in county politics for several years.

Hayes, an Iowa City attorney, served as Director of the Iowa Crime Commission and Deputy Commissioner of the Iowa Department of Public Safety during Harold Hughes' term as governor.

Kennedy's Auto Permit Suspended After Wreck

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — The driver's license of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) was suspended Wednesday as a result of his auto wreck last weekend in which a young secretary was killed.

In a related development, one of the five girls who stayed behind at a party that preceded the accident was quoted as saying the five did not learn of the wreck until the morning after it occurred. She also was quoted as saying she could not believe the men at the party knew of it either.

The accident occurred late Friday night or early Saturday on Chappaquiddick Island. Kennedy said he was driving the secretary, Miss Mary Jo Kopechne, 28, of Washington, D.C., to catch a ferry.

Kennedy's license was suspended by the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles, which said a preliminary investigation showed the senator was at "serious fault" in the accident.

In other developments Wednesday: Kennedy added two more lawyers to his defense staff — Robert G. Clark Jr., a former District Court judge, and his son, Robert G. Clark III, both of Bridgewater. They join Edgartown lawyer Richard McCarron, who represented the senator earlier this week when Police Chief Dominic J. Arena formally sought a complaint charging Kennedy with leaving the scene.

Arena told a later afternoon news conference, "We're trying our utmost to get to those people who were at the party." Arena said these individuals returned to the mainland the day after the accident and, as far as he knows, haven't been back.

And Arena, in answer to a question, said Kennedy's whereabouts between the time the accident occurred and the time it was reported "still are" unknown to him.

"He's going to have to prove where he was between 1 and 9," Arena said of the senator.

The wreck occurred when Kennedy's car skidded off a narrow bridge, which had no rails, and landed upside down in a tidal pond.

Cigarettes and 1984

Three cheers: the cigarette industry has lost the battle with the anti-lung cancer forces. But wait a minute - does the government have the right to force the cigarette companies to stop advertising on television and radio? Next they'll be banning beer commercials.

This whole matter revolves around the question of what is the power of radio and television? And after the scope of the power is discovered, what kind of regulation should the media have? We think that the television and radio media have tremendous power and that Americans should contemplate whether the media should be subject to government control. We feel that we are not approaching 1984 - WE ARE IN IT.

Many communications researchers will dispute this, saying that research so far doesn't point to a large amount of brainwashing power on the part of the media. But there are some revealing experiments that indicate otherwise.

In one study, school children who had never seen a black before saw the movie "Birth of a Nation." The film depicts blacks as being servile and lazy. After the film, the children were questioned, and they pictured blacks as being servile and lazy.

It can be argued that the children's impression was slight and could easily be changed. It could also be said the study ignored influences like parents and friends.

But today, parents play a smaller role in raising children than they once did, and children don't form strong friendships with peers in their primary groups. The things that are taking up more of the children's time than before are television and radio.

Psychologists know that a person's environment plays an important role in how a child's personality develops. If television is one of the primary components of this environment, it seems logical that it would play an important role in socializing or molding a child's personality.

Adults also seem to be watching more and more television, and we wonder what kind of effect television has on them. Does television and its fairytale land help lull them to sleep psychologically so they can ignore the problems in the troubled world. We think that television and radio have a very pervasive power and have already affected our society. The question is, how do we want to control them? Do we want them to be left to their own tastes and good judgment, or do we want the government to control them?

If the stations use their own judgment, we are faced with the danger of a station, purely interested in money, programming material the audience desires, but which may be harmful to society - such as large quantities of violence.

But if the government controls the media, we are then thrust into 1984 and Big Brother is watching.

What shall we do? Perhaps the solution lies between the extremes. Leaving stations to use their own judgment with loose governmental supervision may be the solution.

The important thing now is that the public should be made conscious of the power of the media it is watching and that the public should have the right to decide how it wants to be influenced - and by whom.

Brown's Manchild 'stark...eloquent'

By PATRICIA GARTLAND

Claude Brown's Manchild in the Promised Land is in itself a remarkable first book, and when one considers the background and experiences of the author, who was just 28 when it appeared in 1965, it becomes even more remarkable.

The story of Brown's first twenty years of life in New York City, mainly Harlem, the book is an eloquent attempt to answer the question raised in its preface, "Where does one run to when he's already in the promised land? ... that is, the New York ghetto to which Claude's parents and hundreds of other blacks streamed after the depression.

With a stark concreteness and careful immediacy, Brown describes numerous episodes in his violent, aptly designated "man-childhood" - his education as a hookey-player and thief beginning at age six, his long absences from home, his experiences with cocaine and his reactions to the curse of Harlem in his teenage years, heroin, his sojourns at youth houses and training schools and in Greenwich Village.

The people who educate and influence Brown, who find or are forced into their peculiar ways of coping with the pressures of life in Harlem, are presented with unsparring clarity: his parents, cowed and broken by the system, who wish Claude and his brother Pimp would be satisfied to be janitors, the youth and workers in the various reform schools, the girls like Dixie forced to begin "tricking" at age thirteen, the holy rollers, the Copts and the Muslims, the endless string of childhood friends who are, as they "grow up," one by one killed or busted.

There is in the book a peculiar sort of humor, if that is the proper word, of a sardonic, double-edged sort. Much of it derives from the use of a carefully ironic distance between the author and his younger self, as for example when he describes his return to Harlem from a year in the South, and his delight at the sure signs he is home again - blood and vomit and drunks sprawling in the streets on a bright Sunday morning filled with church-goers.

Brown's language, a blend of youthful slang and dialect, and his more obviously studied prose, seems particularly suited to this retrospective, semi-interpretive work.

The book was criticized when it first appeared for its lack of definition of those factors which helped Claude to "make it" out of the background from which he came; it was praised for its dispassion and lack of apparent polemic. Such reactions would seem to reveal shallow reading.

The strength of the book, to my mind, rests precisely on the detailed way in which Brown shows what influences, in addition to the implied importance of chance, helped shape his later life - the Cohens, Mrs. Meitner, Papanek, Danny (who continually warned him against drugs), his own observation of the effects of drugs on others as well as his disastrous first experience with them, many of the Harlem women, the Reverend James, and many others.

That Brown does not exhibit the open anger of a militant or the detailed analysis of a social or political writer does not then necessarily mean his book is a political or non-political. He achieves his analysis of the situation through the more literary, dramatic technique of autobiography; but again, for the careful reader, causes and effects are relentlessly clear.

The book is one which this reader wants to urge others to pick up and read, as the autobiography of a unique human being as well as a broader learning experience. To be sure, to read it is not then to understand "the black experience," any more than to read just Malcolm X or Baldwin or Parks or Wright or Kelly or Cleaver would be, but it is to receive one further set of insights into what growing up, and indeed what life in general, is like for that proportion of Americans who live in the ironic "promised lands" spread all over this country.

'Cul' void of substance

"Cul-de-Sac," this week's Cinema 16 film at the Union, seems to me a fairly disastrous film from a talented director. Roman Polanski's attempt at bizarre humor is the most explicit of his films in its revelation of the basic shallowness that underlies his polished technical mastery.

Dickie, a gangster with a hoarse voice and the face of a caveman, invades the isolated castle owned by a retired businessman and his recently acquired French wife. George the husband is a tower of weakness, a man with homosexual tendencies and an obsessive attachment to the wife who constantly humiliates him, both in private and with other men. The weird and tense atmosphere set up by the relationships of these three characters is sustained throughout the film until a final violent conclusion is reached.

In one sense the film can be seen as a series of humiliations and paradoxical encounters. George's subservience to his wife and to Dickie is at the heart of the film, and the arrival of guests late in the film only adds to his problems. As played by Donald Pleasance, George's adoptions to life take the form of the most severely angled and grotesque gestures and postures. That his final release should also lose him his wife is perhaps the film's bleakest irony. Everything is neatly played off in "Cul-de-Sac." George's jittery learning and culture is played off against Dickie's massive vulgarity. The gangster's amiable violence sets up tensions on its own. The wife's soft voluptuousness is set against the harsh stone walls and textures of the castle. The normalcy of the guests who arrive late in the film is played out in the context of the bizarre world of the main characters.

Polanski's direction is nervous and intense. Scenes tend to be short and explosive with the few longer takes gaining in effectiveness because of this. All the compositions have a strong sense of thrust and direction, an initial force that moves you from shot to shot. The editing cuts sharply to and away from movement and adds to the film's hecticness. The camera's distance and perspective shifts drastically from shot to shot to add to the staccato tone.

Polanski uses a number of shock cuts with sharp percussive noises to open a scene, and the film abounds with a kind of physical articulation of landscape and interior. Gilbert Taylor's black and white cinematography makes beautiful use of the harsh clear daylight and the dark hovering clouds over the land around the castle. The tense glare of light inside the murky house is also stressed and contributes its tone.

For all of this the film has little substance to support it. Its structure is fairly loose and has none of the preclusion of Polanski's direction. Too many of the effects and motifs are glaringly obvious in their attempts at manipulating the audience. For all the detail of the environment, the characters are decidedly vague and function too often merely to provide Polanski with another opportunity to indulge himself. The film's grotesqueries and discrepancies are too repetitive and without extensions to hold much interest.

Donald Pleasance is outrageously brilliant as George and Lionel Stander is excellent as Dickie. Francoise Dorleac, as Teresa the wife, seems somehow lost in the action.

"Cul-de-Sac" has incidental brilliance. It also has a great deal of material that is never really dealt with. All in all it has the air of a poor and bothersome joke played by a talented and limited artist on his audience.

WASHINGTON - President Nixon's newly announced drug program has left many scientists and legislators involved with drug problems unfavorably impressed. While many medical people and politicians are calling for a shift in emphasis from penalties against drug users to education and treatment, Nixon is calling for stiffer penalties.

And while many are calling for milder or no penalties for possession and sale of marijuana, a substance which many physicians can find no harm in, Nixon is calling for stiffer penalties.

Dr. Vincent P. Dole of New York's Rockefeller University drug treatment and education program said of the Nixon approach, "This is the simplistic approach. It's the attitude that, when a system is not working, you just stiffen the penalties." It won't work, he adds.

Included in the Nixon bill would be stiffened penalties for sale and use of LSD and stiffened penalties for sale of marijuana. Laws against hard drugs likewise would be stiffened. Also included in the Nixon proposal would be the legalization of a "no knock" provision by which police with a warrant could enter a suspect's residence without knocking, breaking in if they felt it necessary.

As for penalties, the prison sentences for sale and use of marijuana would remain the same, but the fine for a first selling offense would be raised from $20,000 to $25,000 and for a second offense to $50,000. The Administration program would also make it a federal offense to transfer or possess marijuana without having a state license, obtainable only for research purposes, and a federal license.

The penalty for sale of LSD would be raised to not less than five years in prison and not more than 20 years for a first offense.

WASHINGTON - Incidents and charges over the Army's involvement with nerve gas continue to make news after two military bases which tested the poisonous gas have suspended their tests.

Experiments have been halted at both the Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland and Fort McClellan in Alabama pending safety studies. The Edgewood installation had been testing offensive uses of the gas, while the McClellan base had been testing defensive uses, the Army said.

Although the testing has been suspended, an incident this month at the U.S. base in Okinawa has increased anti-nerve gas furor. The Wall Street Journal of July 18 broke the story, reporting that the U.S. "has apparently deployed operational weapons armed with lethal chemical agents as part of its deterrent force overseas."

The discovery came when it was learned that an accidental release of deadly VX nerve gas recently hospitalized at least 25 persons. The victims apparently breathed the gas when a container of it or weapon containing it broke open.

At the same time news of the Okinawa incident broke, U.S. Rep. Richard McCarthy (D-N.Y.) was charging that the Pentagon planned to start production of a new type of nerve gas at Newport, Ind. The Defense Department denied it was starting such production at Newport, but McCarthy claimed the denial simply meant the sight had been changed or the official name of the substance would be something other than nerve gas.

McCovey Smacks 2, Bench 1 to Pace Romp—

N.L. Wallops Americans, 9-3

WASHINGTON (AP) — Willie McCovey's record-tying two home runs powered the National League sluggers to a 9-3 rout of the American League Wednesday, their seventh straight victory in the All-Star baseball game series.

McCovey's two homers matched the feats of Arky

Vaughan of Pittsburgh in 1941, Ted Williams of Boston in 1946 and Al Rosen of Cleveland in 1954.

A sellout crowd of 45,259, including Vice President Spiro Agnew, braved a constant threat of rain on a hot, muggy afternoon to see the 40th renewal of heavy thundershowers Tuesday night forced a one-day postponement. President Nixon, who was to attend the night game, had to leave for his trip to the astronauts' splashdown in the Pacific today.

Denny McLain of Detroit, scheduled to start for the American League, flew home to Detroit to have nine teeth capped by his dentist and did not get back until 17 minutes after the game had started.

Manager Mayo Smith of the Tigers opened with Mel Stottlemyre of the New York Yankees, who was racked up for three runs including a two-run homer by Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, and charged with the defeat.

McLain eventually showed up in time to throw the second home run ball to McCovey in the fourth.

of Oakland felt the full power of the National attack when he was clubbed for five runs in the second inning and was unable to finish the frame after giving up a record-tying five hits.

McCovey's first homer came off Odom in the big third inning when the Nationals batted around. Some of the American League-oriented fans jeered their favorites.

The big thrill for Washington fans was a 460-foot home run off the mezzanine deck in center field in the second by Frank Howard of the Senators.

Bill Freehan of Detroit added the other American League homer in the third. Both homers came off winner Steve Carlton, St. Louis left-hander.

It was a romp for the Nationals, who have not lost to the Americans since 1962 and opened up a 22-17-1 edge in a series once completely dominated by the American League.

In fact, the Americans had not scored in 20 innings until Howard brought the crowd roaring to its feet with his tremendous homer in the second.

Howard's sloppy fielding gave the Nationals their run in the first. Matty Alou of Pittsburgh singled, moved to second on an infield out, took third on Stottlemyre's wild pitch and scored when big Frank lumbered in and failed to hold a fly by Hank Aaron of Atlanta.

Bench followed a single by Cleon Jones of New York with a 420-foot homer in the second for a 3-0 National lead that was cut to 3-1 by Howard's homer in the bottom of the inning.

Then came deluge. Odom watched helplessly while a parade of Nationals blasted the ball around the confines of R. F. Kennedy Stadium.

Aaron opened up with a single, and McCovey ripped Odom's fourth pitch off the scoreboard in right center.

Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs grounded out, but Cleon Jones of the New York Mets got a life when shortstop Rico Petrocelli of Boston booted his grounder.

Bench followed with a single and Felix Millan of Atlanta doubled scoring both runners. When Carlton followed with another double to deep left center scoring Millan, Manager Smith replaced Odom with Darold Knowles, Washington relief ace, who finally got the side out.

Freehan accounted for the second American League run with his third-inning homer off Carlton and also drove in their third and final run in the fourth when he singled after Howard had walked and Sal Bando of Oakland singled.

McCovey's second homer, a 335-foot liner over the right field fence, was the final gunfire for the Nationals who went quietly through the final five innings as though rushing for a plane.

Sam McDowell of the Cleveland Indians turned in the best pitching effort with two hitless innings in which he struck out four men. Bill Singer of the Los Angeles Dodgers also breezed through two hitless innings, the fifth and sixth.

Manager Smith used 26 of his 28 available men, including his flying pitching ace.

Schoendienst Says Mistakes Wrecked American's Chances

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Anytime you make mistakes to guys who can hit the ball out of the park, they will hit it out," Red Schoendienst said Wednesday after his National League All-Stars wrecked the American League, 9-3, in baseball's 40th mid-season classic.

"They (the American League Stars) have plenty of power," the St. Louis skipper added.

"I'd like to have their clubs every day. But our pitchers were pretty sharp today. They got the ball where they wanted most of the time. And their pitchers didn't."

"I think all the ball parks should be like this one," said San Francisco slugger Willie McCovey, who smacked two American League mistakes — one each by John "Blue Moon" Odom and Denny McLain — for home runs — his first hit in All-Star competition.

McCovey became the fourth player to belt two homers in one All-Star game after Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, playing while on a pass from his Army reserve unit, belted a two-run second-inning homer off Mel Stottlemyre to put the National League on top, 3-0.

The winners banged out 11 hits, five of them in the third against Odom. The slugging American Leaguers were held to six, including homers by Bill Freehan and Frank Howard.

"Good pitching can always stop good hitting," said Atlanta star Hank Aaron. "I thought last year Odom was the best pitcher I faced in the All-Star game. But his ball wasn't sinking today. We hit a lot of high fast balls."

McLain's Late Appearance No Surprise to Mayo Smith

WASHINGTON (AP) — Detroit Manager Mayo Smith, skipper of the defeated American League All-Stars, said Wednesday he was more concerned about the health of his star pitcher, Denny McLain, than whether he would start the annual classic.

Smith also said the switch from McLain to Mel Stottlemyre of the New York Yankees was not made at the last minute. He said he told Stottlemyre Tuesday night, after the All-Star game was postponed by rain, he would start if McLain could not make it back from Detroit in time to start.

McLain flew to Detroit after the postponement to keep a dental appointment at 8 a.m. Wednesday morning. He spent three hours in the dentist's chair having nine teeth capped.

The right-hander did not arrive at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium until a few minutes after 2 p.m., while the National League was batting in the second.

McLain pitched the fourth inning, giving up Willie McCovey's second homer of the day. He also struck out two and walked two.

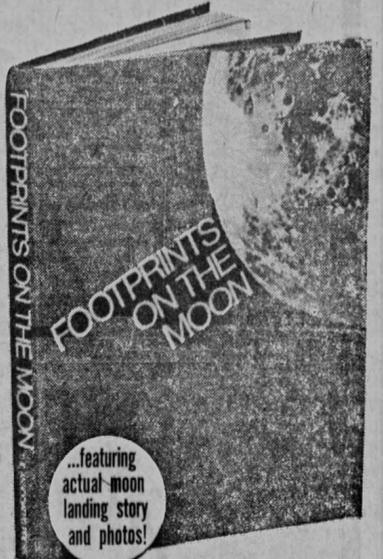

"The fact that he came late had no bearing on the ball game," said Smith after the National League defeated the American League 9-3. "It still would have had the same result."

"He would have pitched only two innings and I would have brought on Stottlemyre or John Odom. I had not planned to use any pitcher over two innings."

WHAT'S NEW?

As a "power tool" an electric comb may seem pretty "far out." But the same was true of many of the gas and electric appliances in common use today.

Of one thing you can be certain. As new and better gas and electric "tools" are developed there will be a plentiful supply of gas and electricity for all of them... at reasonable cost, too.

To help make these two services more useful — to keep them dependable and economical — continuing research and development projects are being carried on by the gas and electric industries.

The net result is better living — at the lowest possible cost in keeping with good, reliable service.

Schools Must Meet Record Enrollment— School Construction Under Way

By PATRICIA HINMAN

With the construction of three new school buildings, renovation work at four existing buildings and additions to three more, the Iowa City Community School District expects to be able to accommodate record enrollments anticipated in the next few years.

According to a study made by school administrators last spring on enrollment projections for the next five years, 5,767 elementary students are expected to enroll in September, 1969. This is an increase of 231 more than last year.

Elementary enrollment is expected to level off at about 6,000 students in 1971-72. Only modest gains are then anticipated for the next two years.

Approximately 3,600 secondary school students are expected to enroll in September. Secondary enrollment, grades 7 through 12, was 3,316 last year.

According to William C. Bleeker, director of secondary education, an increase of 300 secondary students a year is fairly normal. He added that within six years the secondary enrollment will be more than 6,000.

These enrollment projections are based on the present population in the district. The Board of Education is anticipating are located in Iowa City.

A new junior high school in Coralville is also being planned. It is to be constructed near Kirkwood Elementary School.

The school, termed Northwest Junior High for identification purposes by the School Board, will have an initial enrollment of 750 to 800 students when it opens in Sept., 1971.

Site contracts for the school are to be let Sept. 1, and building contracts Nov. 18.

The Iowa City firm of Hansen Lind Meyer is preparing the plans. It is estimated that construction will take 20 to 21 months.

The building is designed so that its central services — library, cafeteria, physical education and music areas — could be expanded to accommodate almost 2,000 students.

The school is expected to cost $2.4 million. Funds will come from the same $4.4 million bond issue as will funds for the new elementary schools.

When the new school opens, West Junior-Senior High will become strictly a senior high school.

Because West will become a senior high school and because the new junior high will grow gradually, only a small increase in the total number of staff to practical arts is to be increased. Practical arts includes art, family life education and industrial arts.

Bleeker said that with the renovation the school will offer more practical arts courses.

Hansen Lind Meyer is in charge of the planning.

Part of the estimated $2.4 million needed for the rehabilitation is to come from a present two and a half mill levy which amounts to about $230,000 per year.

According to Bleeker, no bond issue is foreseen to finance the remainder of the work.

Enrollment at City High School is expected to fall to about 900 and remain there for the foreseeable future because West High, as a senior high, will accommodate more students.

West High School will need additional classrooms when enrollment reaches 1,400, but can then be expanded to accommodate 2,000. Currently enrollment is 1,084, but only 588 of them are high school students.

Rehabilitation work is also planned at three elementary schools. The primary intent of the work at Longfellow, Sabin, and Mann schools is to open up the schools to accommodate both large and small group instruction and to increase the area of the libraries.

Phase one of the rehabilitation program is being carried on this summer. It includes the paving of wooden floors with cement, and the removal of several walls to provide open space.

The amount of work completed in phase two depends on the budget. Phase two of the elementary work next summer will be competing with City High for funds.

Plans for phase two now call for vinyl tile covering to be added to floors. Cabinet work, painting, new restroom facilities, and possibly carpeting in the libraries are also included in this phase.

Gillespie said that there was no termination date for the renovation, and that some of the work may have to slip into a third phase.

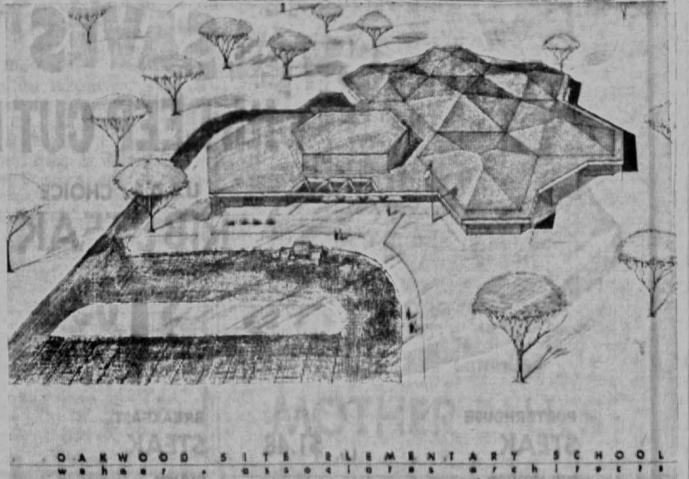

Gillespie added that Longfellow, Sabin and Mann schools are the oldest schools in the system and require the greatest attention.

Additions are currently being made to three elementary schools and should be completed in November or December.

Eight classrooms are being added to Hills school, and four classrooms to both Kirkwood and Penn schools.

All three will have some additional library development.

These schools were taken into the district through reorganization, and, while the enrollment at them has increased, there has been no enlargement of facilities.

New School Plans

Artist's conception of Helen Lemme Elementary School, to be constructed in the northeast Oakwood area. The school, which is scheduled to open in September, 1970, will accommodate approximately 270 students. Hexagonal classroom clusters are grouped around a central area that contains offices, and guidance, speech and reading rooms. The building may be expanded by adding more classroom clusters. Bids on construction of the school will be opened Aug. 20. Wehner and Associates of Iowa City are the architects.

Shimek School

The floor plan of Bohumil Shimek Elementary School, to be constructed on North Dubuque Street, is similar to that of Helen Lemme Elementary School. Bids for the Shimek school will be opened Aug. 6. Like Lemme School, Bohumil Shimek will accommodate about 280 students when it opens in September, 1970.

growth at the same rate as in the past ten years. It has not tried to estimate growth resulting from outside sources, such as persons moving to the district because of the University, industrial or residential growth.

The board sees a need for one more elementary school and possibly another junior high school sometime after 1974. In view of this, the board voted July 14 to budget $80,000 for a site acquisition fund to purchase land for future construction.

In order to accommodate the projected growth in enrollment, two new elementary schools will be opened in September, 1970. They are Bohumil Shimek School, on North Dubuque Street, and Helen Lemme School, in the northeast Oakwood area.

Both buildings will have nine classrooms and will accommodate 270 to 280 students each. Construction of the buildings is such that additions to the original structure could easily be made if more rooms were needed in the future.

The Bohumil Shimek School is expected to cost $430,000 and Helen Lemme School $440,000. Bids for the Shimek School are to be opened Aug. 6, and these for the Lemme School Aug. 20.

Funds for the two elementary schools are to come from part of a $4.4 million bond issue approved this February.

According to John P. Gillespie, business manager for the Iowa City school district, $80,000 for the two schools is expected to come from funds left over from construction of Ernest Horn and Grant Wood elementary schools. These schools are not yet completed.

Gillespie said that money would be left over because bid estimates were lower than had been anticipated.

Plans for Helen Lemme are being prepared by Wehner and Associates and those for the Shimek school are by Harvey Henry. Both firms members is expected with the opening of the new junior high. Preference for these positions will be given to those teachers now in service to the system. Staff selection is expected to begin early in the 1970-71 school year.

In an effort to relieve crowded classroom conditions, renovation projects are planned for City High School, and Longfellow, Sabin, and Mann elementary schools.

Renovation work at City High is to be completed over an extended period of years. The board hopes to have preliminary drawings by January, 1970.

Included in the renovation work are enlargement of the library area, physical education facilities, food service area and practical arts area.

City High School was built 30 years ago to accommodate 600 students. During the 1968-69 school year, the school was accommodating 1,400 students by utilizing early classes and early dismissals for some students.

According to Bleeker, the City High library is now serving an expanded function and is termed an Instructional Materials Center (IMC). The IMC at City High will be enlarged and contain much more than the present 2½ classrooms. Currently it contains all audio-visual aids, print and non-print materials. More materials and conference and planning rooms are to be located in the IMC.

Bleeker added that this area would use a large share of the renovation funds. No cost estimates on the renovation projects have been made.

Another area planned for rehabilitation is the physical education facility. A large indoor physical education area is to be added.

The extent of the food service expansion has not yet been determined. An increase in space, increased storage room and replacement and rearrangement of equipment is planned.

Group Discusses Recreation Pool

By JIM HARRIS

Scheduling priorities of the City Recreation Center swimming pool are causing problems for city recreation officials.

The problems revolve around who should have priority in using the Recreation Center pool after school begins this fall.

The groups involved are the Iowa City Swim Club, the City High and West High swimming teams and the recreational instructional programs directed by the City Parks and Recreation Commission.

At its meeting last week the Parks and Recreation Commission discussed the matter, but reached no decision. The commission decided to meet July 28 with Robert White, athletic director of the public school system, to determine the public high schools' swimming team needs.

Eugene Chubb, city director of parks and recreation said at the meeting that the commission must decide on a schedule for the swimming pool use.

He pointed out that last year's arrangement terminated at the end of the school year.

Last year the public high schools used the pool from 3:45 to 5 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and after 9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Two years ago the City High swim team used the pool from 2:30 to 4 p.m., while city sponsored instructional programs were conducted from 4 to 6 p.m. West High wasn't opened until last year.

Commission member Earl Riley, 2300 Mayfield Rd., proposed that the swim teams use the pool at the same times they did last year.

But commission member Mrs. Milton Rosenbaum, 526 W. Park Rd., said that the pool should be open during the 3:45 to 5 p.m. time period for public recreational and instructional programs.

Commission chairman Gary Veldey, 704 Eastmoor Dr., and Chubb agreed with Mrs. Rosenbaum and added that some priority should be given to the public.

The Recreation Center pool has six lanes and is 25 yards long. It is the only indoor pool in Iowa City that can be used for the city instructional programs.

Neither City High nor West High have indoor pools. The original plans for West High included plans for an indoor pool, but the plans were changed after construction started.

Riley withdrew his motion and suggested that more than one group might be able to use the pool at the same time.

However, Robert Lee, city recreational superintendent, called the suggestion "pretty impractical" and said from an administrative view point, it just won't work.

"A mother and her nine-year-old child in the same pool as the swimming team is just too impractical."

Lee said that the 4 to 6 p.m. weekday swimming lessons held two years ago were very popular. He said the classes were filled to about 97 per cent of their capacity with 120 people enrolled.

The Recreation Center pool was opened in the fall of 1964. Up to that time, City High had no swim team.

The Iowa City Swim Club used the Recreation Center pool from 5 to 7 p.m. last year. The Swim Club is composed of mostly grade school and junior high age swimmers, Lee said.

Last year the pool was open for public use from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The pool was closed from 2 to 4 p.m. because of few requests for it to open then, Lee said.

Council OKs 1970 Budget For Coralville

The Coralville City Council approved a $1.4 million budget for 1970 Tuesday night. This is a 37 per cent increase over last year's budget.

Coralville property owners will pay $350,724 of the 1970 budget, compared with $299,998 of this year's total.

Water, street and sewer construction were the biggest budget increases. However, they are drawn from non-taxable funds.

The council also approved a bid for about one and a half miles of street improvement by Manatts, Inc., of Brooklyn, Iowa. The Manatts' bid was $168,441. The only other bid for the new pavement and pavement repair was by Metro Pavers, Inc., of Iowa City. The bid was $170,374.

Most of the work will be done on Twelfth Avenue, Tenth Street and Fifth Street.

A second reading of a proposed ordinance to regulate mobile home courts was given, but the third and final reading was tentatively set for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday. It will not be given until council members have obtained further information from Donald Luebke, whose engineering firm, Scruggs and Hammond, Inc., of Peoria, Ill., did the trailer park study.

A rezoning ordinance to allow the location of a 28-acre trailer park north of Interstate 80 and east of Twelfth Avenue was deferred until Aug. 12.

13 Charged for Tampering With Union Pension Fund

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirteen persons were indicted Wednesday on federal charges for being involved in a 20 per cent kickback to the underworld in return for a $1 million loan from the scandal-tainted Teamsters Union pension fund.

The FBI described five of the defendants as Cosa Nostra big shots, who were said to have quarreled at one time while raking in $200,000 in kickback spoils. An "arbitration" meeting straightened things out.

It was the latest of half a dozen indictments through which the government has sought to link the mob and the multimillion-dollar Teamsters pension fund.

In Washington, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover called it a severe blow to the Cosa Nostra in New York, Pennsylvania and Detroit.

There were familiar names in this indictment. There was James (Jimmy Doyle) Plumeri, 66, described in this and other indictments as having a financial pipeline to the Teamsters' treasury. There was Salvatore (Sally Burns) Granello, 46, depicted as Plumeri's go-between in arranging the kickback.

And there was David Wenger, 57, a one-time caretaker for the pension fund who was named in this and prior indictments as the underworld's contact man within the union.

Also figuring in this and previous indictments was John Keilly, 40, a New York mortgage broker who allegedly worked with Plumeri.

Fat, Heart Link Is Questionable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Herbert L. Ley Jr., commissioner of food and drugs, testified today "there is very little scientific evidence" clearly linking a fatty diet with heart disease.

He told the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs that evidence of a connection between smoking and illnesses such as lung cancer "is of a much more concrete nature" than that between fats and heart trouble.

"There is no sound scientific evidence here," Dr. Ley said. "The smoking evidence is, in a statistical sense, much more conclusive."

Nixon Asks Stronger ICC

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon asked Congress Tuesday for authority to appoint a strong executive to head the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC), the nation's oldest and largest regulatory agency.

Claiming overhaul of the 82-year-old ICC is long overdue, Nixon said the commission is hampered by lack of continuity and lack of leadership.

The current chairman of the 11-member commission, Democrat Virginia Mae Brown, quickly gave her "wholehearted support" to the President's proposal.

Nixon's plan would designate the chairman from among its 11 members. The chairmanship is currently rotated annually.

The President also proposed that the chairman's administrative powers be greatly strengthened instead of allowing the authority to be dispersed among the commissioners.

Established in 1887 with five members, the ICC was expanded in 1920 to 11 commissioners and continues to exercise broad jurisdiction over 17,000 railroads, truckers, express companies and freight forwarders.

The commission has come under increasing criticism recently from Congress and other groups for allegedly failing to pursue aggressive enforcement policies.

Nixon attributed part of the commission's problems to the fact that "there is no firm and clear legal responsibility for the commission's day to day affairs" since the chairman does not have the administrative powers held by other federal regulatory heads.

U.S. Pullout Continues

SAIGON (AP) — The United States took another step Wednesday in reducing its combat commitment in South Vietnam, handing over a Mekong Delta base to South Vietnam's 7th Division.

The fire support base Moore at Cal Lay, 45 miles southwest of Saigon, is being abandoned by the 1st Brigade of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division. About 7,400 men of the 1st Brigade will begin leaving for Hawaii in a week.

25,000 U.S. soldiers and Marines will have left the war in Vietnam by the end of August. Some soldiers of the 9th Division already have returned to the United States, and, when the pullout is completed, 11,400 will have left.

The 9th Infantry's 1st Brigade has seen plenty of combat with the Viet Cong in the rice paddies, the streams and canals of the Mekong Delta.

The 7th Vietnamese Division is the main one assigned to continue the battle in the Mekong Delta as South Vietnam grad-
