Candidates For Council Talk Issues

By RICK LEPLEY

The four survivors of Tuesday's City Council primary all said Wednesday that their campaigns would now shift to discussions of specific issues and problems of Iowa City.

Mayor Loren L. Hickerson, front runner in the primary with 1,725 votes, said that he wasn't surprised at the outcome of the vote or the small turnout at the polls. The turnout of 3,445 voters was the smallest of any primary held in the last 10 years. He credited the poor showing of voters to his contention that only general issues had been discussed to date.

Hickerson listed three main issues as prominent at the present time.

- Carrying out the urban renewal program with decisive action. On this point he says that the candidates' true commitments will be tested.

- Problems and improvement of city services, particularly the sewer problem.

- Governmental costs, such as taxes and efficiency.

Commenting generally on the election, Hickerson said, "The challenging candidates worked hard, and this always pays off."

"One thing about campaigns is they help to interest citizens in problems of the government. As an incumbent, I feel strongly that any problem looks different on the other side of the Council table. Pointing out problems of government is an important part of campaigning as are making promises of things to be done," Hickerson said.

Local lawyer J. Patrick White, who finished second in the voting with a total of 1,701 votes, said he was "pleased to finish ahead of one incumbent, but disappointed that we weren't ahead of the other one."

White noted a need for Iowa City to "come up with a City Council willing to strive for an exchange of information between the community and the Council."

He listed urban renewal as the topic most mentioned and asked about by people he has talked to, but he expressed hope that the candidates would spend time discussing other issues.

Besides urban renewal, White said issues were:

- Economics of operation, such as maintaining low taxes, and better budgeting.

- Checking the adequacy of pay for police and firemen.

- Traffic safety.

"The City Council must be more concerned with saving lives than with traffic circulation," he said.

Incumbent Councilman Robert H. Lind Sr., who was third with 1,238 votes, said he thought relocation from urban renewal would be a main issue in the campaign. He also said traffic and sewer problems would be issues of importance.

Robert A. Lehrman, who finished fourth with 1,102 votes, said, "The trouble with Iowa City government is that it excludes too many segments of the population."

He noted that four men on the City Council were businessmen and the other (Hickerson) works for the University. Lehrman said that they "just don't have the interest of a little over half of the people at heart."

Lehrman said he thought students and poor people are not well represented and stated that none appear on any commissions or on the Low Rent Housing Commission.

Lehrman said that Police Judge Marion R. Neely should resign because of a conflict of interest. Neely is also Johnson County Republican chairman. Lehrman said that this will be an issue.

"I think," Lehrman added, "that the critical thing for students is to use the power they have. If 75 per cent of the registered students turn out for an election they can elect anyone they want."

Mrs. Doderer Won't Ask New Opinion—Adaptability Probe to Stand

By CAROL BIRD

State Sen. Minnette Doderer (D-Johnson County) said Tuesday that she would not resubmit to the Iowa attorney general her question as to whether the state legislature's Interim Budget and Financial Control Committee could investigate the "social adaptability" of the faculty of the three-state universities.

After visiting with Iowa Att. Gen. Richard C. Turner Monday, she said she had come to the conclusion that the situation was "absolutely hopeless." "After discussing the whole problem with Turner, I feel there is no point in submitting the question again," she said.

SEN. MINNETTE DODERER Won't Renew Request

"His (Turner's) mind was made up a long time ago and now he is trying to justify his decision to me," she added.

Mrs. Doderer, along with Rep. Joseph Johnston (D-Johnson County), sent a letter to Turner's office in July asking for a ruling on the legality of the "social adaptability" investigation proposed by the Committee June 18.

According to Sen. Doderer, the key question contained in her inquiry was: "Did the legislature, in setting up the Interim Budget and Financial Control Committee intend to grant authority to this Committee to probe any area of state government whether or not the probe was connected with budget and financial or reorganization matters?"

A legal opinion was handed down Thursday by Elizabeth Nolan, an assistant to Turner, stating that an investigation into the "social adaptability of those hired with public funds" was legal.

The legal decision stated: "We are of the opinion that the budget and financial review committee has not exceeded its authority. Whether those being employed (with public funds) are respectable and capable is a proper subject of legislative inquiry."

Sen. Doderer charged last Thursday and again Monday that the attorney general's office had failed to answer her question.

She also charged that neither Miss Nolan nor Turner could come up with a court case on which to base their decision that the Committee could study "social adaptability."

Referring to Miss Nolan's citing of a law day speech given earlier this year in Cedar Rapids as justification for her opinion, Sen. Doderer said, "The speech had nothing to do with what I asked."

The speech, delivered by David M. Elderkin, former President of the Iowa Bar Association, said, "The idea that an institution of learning is the exclusive

Vance: Revolutions, Turmoils Lie Ahead Troubleshooter Calls 1970s Time to Strengthen Peace

DES MOINES (AP) — A decade of "turmoil, revolution and small wars lies ahead for the world in the 1970s," Cyrus Vance, former chief troubleshooter for President Lyndon Johnson, predicted Wednesday.

It will be a decade, Vance said, in which the peacekeeping powers of the United Nations must be strengthened to bring into its own "this vital aspect of the UN's capabilities."

He urged expanding the troops available to the United Nations for peacekeeping from approximately 11,000 to about 25,000 and establishing a $60 million UN "Peace Fund" with the United States footing most of the bill.

"We must face the reality that until we succeed in developing a stronger UN, the world community and all its members — strong and weak alike — will remain dangerously insecure," he said.

Vance, a former United States negotiator at the Paris peace talks who recently returned from a trip to Vietnam, spoke at a United Nations Day ceremony at the Iowa Statehouse.

A crowd of more than 1,200, most of them high school and college students, listened attentively to the speech in the Iowa House chamber adorned with the flags of United Nations member nations.

The overflow from the House chamber heard the address via closed circuit television in the Senate chamber.

Vance, a New York attorney, said developing better arrangements for preserving peace, with greater sharing of responsibility, is one of the world's highest priorities.

It would be fitting, he said, if the UN could accomplish this in the organization's 25th anniversary year, 1970.

He said he hoped the United Nations would start discussing in the near future a recommendation formulated by a United Nations Association national policy panel headed by President Kingman Brewster of Yale University "for something very like it."

Vance said the panel called for:

- Giving the United Nations "what it should have had from the beginning" — armed forces available on call when they are needed to keep the peace. Vance suggested establishing a UN force of 25,000 troops, with an "earmarked reserve" of 15,000.

- Establishing a $60 million UN "peace fund" from which the UN could finance the initial months of a peacekeeping operation while a basic pattern of funding the effort is worked out. Vance said he believes the United States should contribute up to one-third of this fund, but it is "essential that France and the Soviet Union do their part."

- "Vigorous upgrading" of UN mediation and conciliation capabilities to help prevent conflicts from breaking out and resolve them when they do.

Vance said the "middle powers" of the world should be the nations providing troops to the UN peacekeeping force. He said the major powers should arrange to provide logistic support.

He said unilateral big power peacekeeping efforts haven't worked out too well and tend to "generate worldwide political resistance which can defeat the very purpose of the intervention."

Besides, he said, it is the middle powers — notably the Scandinavian countries, Canada and India, although 56 nations have contributed troops to the UN force — which have the most experience in UN peacekeeping operations.

Their peacekeeping successes, from the first UN border watch in northern Greece in 1947 to the present UN units in Kashmir and Cyprus, constitute "an impressive body of experience" on which the UN can draw, he said.

Vance cautioned, however, that peacekeeping must be linked with efforts to settle peacefully the issues underlying a dispute.

He said peacekeeping "must not paper-over a dispute, nor should it be a device for suppressing legitimate pressures for social, economic or political change."

"We must always keep in mind that the purpose of UN peacekeeping is not to impose or oppose any ideological system."

"Its job is to insulate the processes of internal politics from outside interference which may threaten international peace and security," he said.

Stanley Resigns From Legislature

State Senate Majority Leader David Stanley of Muscatine, candidate for Congress, resigned from the State Senate Wednesday after 11 years in the Iowa Legislature. Gov. Robert Ray will call a special election to fill the last year of Stanley's term as senator from Cedar and Muscatine counties.

Speculation Wednesday was that Sen. Robert Rigler, (R-Hampton) might be chosen to succeed Stanley as Senate majority leader.

Stanley's successor as majority leader will be named in a Republican Party caucus before the next session of the legislature convenes in January.

Stanley said in an interview Wednesday night that he did not have any idea what candidates would be named for either his majority seat or his present Senate seat.

"Three or four possibilities have been brought to my attention, but I hesitate to say who they are," he said.

"I personally will not endorse or support a candidate for nomination in either case," Stanley said.

Stanley said, "As a candidate for Congress, I must devote full time to national issues and meeting the people of our congressional district. But a state senator must work full time on state problems during the 1970 legislative session."

Stanley will oppose present First District Congressman Fred Schwengel (R-Davenport) in a primary election next June.

He served three terms as state representative and has served three years of his second term as state senator.

Stanley was defeated in his bid for a seat in the U.S. Senate in 1968 by former Iowa Gov. Harold Hughes.

Herky Is Gone Without Squawk —Fowl Play?—

Herky the Hawk has been bird-napped.

The football uniform and papier mache head of Herky, the University's familiar mascot, disappeared after the Oct. 11 game at Madison, Wis.

Dave Pate, A2, Iowa City, said the Herky head, with a football uniform stuffed inside, was covered up and locked inside his car, which was parked in front of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house in Madison. Pate said that when he returned to his car on the morning of Oct. 12, the car had been forced open by a wire coat hanger and Herky had flown the coupe.

Pate said all the fraternity houses in Madison had been contacted about the bye-bye birdie, but so far no clues had been turned up as to the mascot's whereabouts.

Pate said the cheerleaders had notified Roger D. Augustine, associate dean of student affairs, that Herky was missing and Augustine advised them to try first to locate him on their own, before calling in the civil authorities.

Meanwhile, University cheerleaders are frantically trying to hatch a new Hawk to sub for Herky at Saturday's Homecoming game. A spokesman said Wednesday night that the head had been molded but had yet to be painted.

It is being assumed at this point that the mascot was taken as an intercollegiate prank; however, the possibility has not been ruled out that a just plain nasty person hocked the hawk. The dirty bird.

Living Cost Continues Upward Surge, Climbs 1/2 Per Cent During September

WASHINGTON (AP) — It cost nearly a nickel more a pound to bring home the bacon last month, and other price hikes added fuel to the nation's worst inflation in some 20 years, the government said Wednesday.

Living costs rose one-half of one per cent in September, pushing the federal Consumer Price Index to 129.3. That means it cost $12.93 last month for the goods and services that cost $10 ten years ago.

Bacon led the parade of food price hikes, climbing from 90.9 cents to 95.8 cents a pound, the Labor Department said. Grocery prices on the average remained unchanged instead of showing the usual September drop, and higher restaurant charges boosted over-all food prices one-tenth of one per cent.

Clothing prices showed twice the usual September rise, up 1.7 per cent for the month; housing costs climbed six-tenths of one per cent, and medical care, five-tenths of one per cent.

The only major item to decline was transportation, down five-tenths of one per cent largely because of lower new and used car prices in anticipation of the 1970 model year, said the report by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Assistant Commissioner Arnold Chase said the over-all five-tenths of one per cent rise for September was the same as the average monthly rise in living costs so far this year.

"I would not call it an acceleration," he said. "The acceleration has stabilized."

Still, prices were rising at an annual rate equal to the 5.9 per cent increase in the Korean War year of 1951 before wage-price controls were imposed. The sharpest increase before that was 9.1 per cent in 1947 after World War II controls were lifted.

The Nixon administration, still insisting its tight money, high interest policies will eventually slow the rate of inflation, has steadfastly discounted any thought of wage-price controls now.

Chase said the administration is pinning its hopes on the future.

"September is in the past," he said.

He predicted that next year's rise in living costs will be less than 1969's.

Despite the rise in living costs, average purchasing power of about 45 million workers showed some gain for the first time in months because of a five-cent rise in hourly wages.

The average gross weekly paycheck of $117.80 was worth 40 cents a week more in purchasing power after deduction for taxes and price hikes.

They Had A Dream

BOSE IKARD
by Reasons and Patrick

The legend of the American cowboy was born on four dusty cattle trails in a brief period after the Civil War. The trails, like the cowboy, won a place in the folklore of the West. They were known as the Chisholm, Western, Shawnee and Goodnight-Loving trails, and over them an estimated 10 million Texas longhorns were driven to Northern railheads in less than 30 years.

Bose Ikard, an expert black cowhand, helped to blaze one of them — the Goodnight-Loving trail — and he rode it for four rigorous years. During that period, Ikard won a reputation as a top rider, roper, bronc buster and fighter and, in the words of pioneer cattleman Charles Goodnight, "was the most skilled and trustworthy man I ever knew."

Born a slave in Mississippi in 1847, Ikard was brought to Texas by his master when he was 5. The Ikard household — Bose took the name of his master — settled in Weatherford, and young Bose learned to hunt, ride and to herd cattle at an early age.

He was 18 when the Union victory made him a free man, and soon afterward he went on the trail with Oliver Loving — another pioneer cattleman. Loving joined Goodnight in a scheme to drive their herd north to Colorado. Instead of going by a direct route through Comanche and Kiowa territory, they drove 2,000 head southwest to the Pecos River and then north across New Mexico into Colorado.

That route became the Goodnight-Loving Trail.

Ikard rode it for four years and won the admiration of Goodnight. The two men shared common hardships. They suffered the cold, the heat, thirst and the dangers posed by Indians, outlaws and stampeding herds.

Goodnight came to regard Ikard as the best cowhand he'd ever seen and once said he had more "endurance and stamina" than any man he knew. That was high praise for a hired hand, but the relationship of Goodnight and Ikard was much more than that: the two men were inseparable friends.

"He was my detective, banker and everything else in Colorado, New Mexico and the other wild country I was in," Goodnight once recalled. "When we carried money, I gave it to Bose. I have trusted him farther than any living man."

In 1859, when he was 42, Ikard decided to settle on a homestead in Colorado, but Goodnight persuaded him to return to Texas.

Ikard became a rancher in Weatherford, and the two men remained close friends until Ikard died in 1929. He was buried in the Weatherford cemetery, and Goodnight erected a marker on his grave. It said:

Bose Ikard
Served me for four years on the Goodnight-Loving Trail, never shirked a duty or disobeyed an order, rode with me in many stampedes, participated in three engagements with Comanches; splendid behavior.

The future with cyclamate

Editor's Note — The following article was written as a satirical response to the statement banning cyclamate made recently by HEW secretary Finch. The writer is a graduate student in the Department of Art.

WASHINGTON, 1970.
With the demise of the artificial sweetener market at hand, we underwent a number of changes on the national and world scene.

Waves of violence, set off by the recall of cyclamate took form shortly after October as businessmen and suburban housewives throughout megalopolitan areas of the United States destroyed vending machines and stores which formerly sold these artificially sweetened products.

One possible solution to this problem, according to Dr. Benjamin Spock, noted psychologist, would be the institution of an organization similar to Alcoholics Anonymous which would provide therapy sessions for those individuals "psychologically" addicted to cyclamates. According to Robert Finch, Secretary of Health Education and Welfare, cyclamate users do not become physically addicted to the drug, but develop a mental and emotional dependence to it.

HEW was at one time fearful of the possibility of a black market developing, which according to usually reliable sources, never materialized on any large scale. Mayor Richard P. Daley assured Mr. Finch, "It can't happen here."

President Nixon, in a recent news conference, suggested the possibility of expanding the space program to incorporate the search for a new substance somewhere in the galaxy to replace artificial sweeteners which would be neither fattening nor cancerous. Finch said he would prefer to use the money for finding a cure for cancer.

Ronald Reagan, whose political aspirations are well known said "You've tasted one artificial sweetener, you've tasted them all." The spring fashions for the coming year indicate a concern for the new look, this time a Renaissance of womanhood. Clothing tailored to emphasize rounded hips, legs and arms was the pervasive trend at a fashion show in Rome last month.

It was discovered that Twiggy, the British model that made the mini-skirt, had died of an overdose of sleeping pills in her London flat. Speculations had it that the loss of her job and image were responsible for the model's suicide.

African Airlines, in an attempt to provide security for those women wanting to maintain the mini-look featured a spring special called "Reduced rate for reduced weight" and began non-stop flights from New York to Biafra. Black leaders throughout the world condemned this action and demonstrated against the airline.

As a response to all this the Pope refused to recognize birth control.

Richard Nixon's reaction culminated last week in a plan to deal with problems of violence brought about by the end of the sale of cyclamate and an attempt to determine other alternatives

On whose side?

It's almost unbelievable, but the Federal Bureau of Investigation went into little Indianola, Iowa the other day attempting to determine the political ideology of the leaders of the Vietnam Moratorium Day activities at Simpson College.

Well, it's not altogether unbelievable, for the FBI has been consistent in recent years in engaging in clandestine activities. Wiretaps and bugged telephones, the infiltration of dissenting and secret organizations have become part and parcel of the everyday routine of J. Edgar Hoover's feildom.

Agents from the Bureau's Des Moines office went to Simpson under the assumption that the student leaders were alligned to either the Hanoi or Peking branch of the international Communist Party.

Despite the Des Moines office's claim that they only wanted to know who was supporting the Moratorium, it was a clear case of government intrusion into a legitimate political activity.

"It was a big brother is watching you," sort of thing, stated Bill Webster, dean of students at Simpson.

Although the Des Moines agent, Ellsworth Gustafson, declined to say whether or not the Bureau had attempted checks at other Iowa colleges and universities, there remains some doubt, especially as far as this university is concerned, as to whether Iowa, too, was subject to the same sort of discriminate harassment from the FBI as Simpson.

When considering the fact that the largest of the days Moratorium activities took place here in Iowa City, it is likely to assume that University officials were visited by the FBI — whether or not they cooperated with them remains unanswered. Simpson officials refused to divulge the names of the students involved — what about Iowa?

A statement from the University administration should be forthcoming, if for no other reason than to clear up the questions involved.

"God's on our side," is what 6,000 persons were told by the voice of folk singer Bob Dylan Wednesday night at the close of the Moratorium Day activities.

Who's side is the FBI on?

Meanwhile . . .

If students want concerts by big-name entertainment at the University this year, they should buy tickets to the Sergio Mendes Concert tonight.

The Committee on University Entertainment (CUE) was allocated $5,000 from the University to start its concert series. But if the first concert does not succeed, good bye to the money.

To the Editor:

The Daily Iowan has struck again — for Hanoi!

After scanning your issue for October 14, 1969, and observing the black arm band along with your inflammatory articles, I waited to see whether you had the editorial integrity to print a red, white and blue arm band for those who wished to support our President in his realistic efforts to stop this idiotic war. As was to be expected, you did not.

I read, quite regularly, a good share of the glorious underground press, including the Los Angeles Free Press, the Berkeley Barb, the East Village Other, and the Rat, among others, and I find two outstanding differences between their and your efforts:

- they at least admit that they are nothing but radical, leftwing, rabble rousing sheets;
- they do provide some good laughs

call for more study.

A look at the membership of the Committee is revealing. When John Wahlke became its chairman he was just finishing a quarter of a million dollar contract with AID for research on the "political attitudes of youth as a factor affecting economic development." (Whatever Professor Wahlke's interests may have been, this kind of research has often been used by its government sponsor for the purposes of counter-insurgency.)

Committee member Burns Weston is a consultant to the Naval War College, and Albert McKee has been a regular consultant to the Public Health Service and the Armed Forces Epidemiology Board. Dean Zenor, another member, directs the Institute of Public Affairs — an institute highly dependent on government funds for its very existence.

Edward Nelson, Associate Head of the Department of Physics and Astronomy, is also on the Committee. His department is dependent on NASA for almost two million dollars annually. (NASA will not do business with universities that bar military recruiters.) Still another member, Walter Krause, has an almost 20-year history of work for the State Department including consultation with the Central Bank of the Dominican Republic during the Trujillo dictatorship.

The nature of the ties of these men to federal agencies is not to be confused with the ordinary obligations of a competitive research grant. Their ties are different, and we believe that they represent a potential conflict of interest. The pervasiveness of federal funding, of contracts and consultancies, may in fact make the impaling of a "free" committee close to impossible.

In the College of Liberal Arts, another committee took it upon itself to investigate ROTC. This was the Educational Policy Committee. Its chairman, Dean Dewey Stuit had earlier this year received the Pentagon Award for promoting ROTC on campus. Members of the Committee are Professors Sam Becker, Dale Bentz, Richard Braddock, Robert P. Boynton, John Dolch, Fred Fehling, Robert Hulbary, Neil Salisbury, Eugene Spaziani, and Robert Yager. Mr. Spaziani, secretary to the Committee, also serves on the Committee on University Relations with the Federal Government.

On May 5, the Committee consulted only with Colonels Spiva and Shockey, but took no action. The Committee next met on June 23. In their minutes dated as covering both June 23 and July 7 meetings (and released to the Faculty Reports on September 15), a strange report appears: "... the Committee had earlier agreed unanimously to recommend retention, rather than elimination of ROTC. . . . What is strange is that there is no public record of that earlier meeting at which this agreement was reached.

Next week, NUC will introduce Project Themis and UI's Department of Defense consultants.

FRANKLY SPEAKING by Phil Frank

From the people 'Blacks also must give a damn'

To the Editor:

Saturday, Oct. 18, almost one-half of the editorial page was given to articles about blacks. Several of these were written in the first person, "I," as though they were letters, but were not signed. Since it is unlikely that the editor wrote all of these articles; "Eyes of A Black," "Invisible Bars," and "Everywhere . . ." who are you protecting? To the blacks who actually wrote the columns:

With attitudes like that you are as guilty as the white man in his stereotyped thinking about blacks. Don't you suppose there are whites who would like to be friendly with blacks. Unless you meet in a class or in a business place where you both have jobs how does one go about being friendly? Do I go out of my way to associate with blacks? No. No more than I would expect them to go out of their way to associate with me, a complete stranger. It would be very forward to do so.

But how do we approach each other? Do we say "Hi! I'm . . . I'd like to get to know a black (white) person? This would probably bring accusations of only paying our dues.

Do we simply try to be friendly with you hoping you will be friendly in return? This is probably the best way, but even it may not work. Friendship is a give and take proposition, and usually more give than take. Can you do that too? Since we do live with different culture patterns, we have the problem of approaching each other. Both sides must give. To this you will probably say: "We've been giving for the last 100 years, man. What more do you want?" Show me a hundred year old university student and I'll believe you. I am not responsible for what people did 100 years ago, and I don't like to be blamed for it.

Stop having a negative attitude toward me. I'll give you a chance. If I know you and pass you on the street without saying Hi, maybe I'm thinking about my Spanish exam, or how I'm going to pay my U bill this month. I've been known to pass my roommate on the street and not see him. I'm not ignoring you. Give me a chance to be friendly.

To those who are crying to be free. Work at it. Don't demand it. Wouldn't you feel aggressive if someone demanded something of you? Violence stirs up the very hatred we are trying to get rid of. How can you expect someone to change his way of living simply because you demand it. You want soul food in the dorms, (from the article "EYES OF A BLACK") you want your black classes, you want . . . you DEMAND. . . .

There is room in a UNITED America for both cultures. You don't have to separate or use violence. Kindness goes a long way. After all, you too should GIVE A DAMN ABOUT YOUR FELLOW MAN.

UNITED STATES AN ASSOCIATION OF ADVERTISERS

Hotel-Casino Sale Financed Foundation Run by Douglas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A hotel-casino sale arranged by gangster Meyer Lansky helped finance a foundation headed for nine years by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. Douglas said Wednesday he knew nothing about the deal.

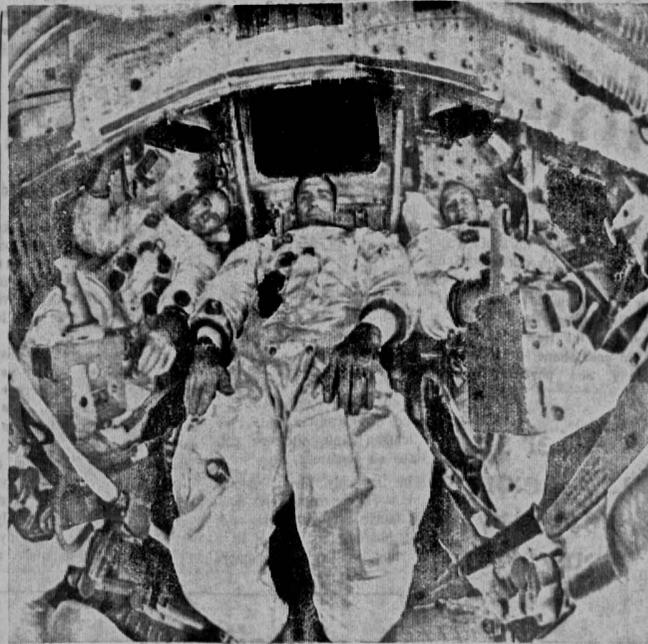

Douglas helped create and direct the Albert Parvin Foundation and served as its only salaried officer — president — until last May.

Douglas was asked if he were aware when he helped set up the foundation that most of its finances would come from a business deal arranged by Lansky. Douglas' office said Tuesday he would have no comment.

But Wednesday, after an Associated Press story about the deal appeared, Douglas said in a Washington statement, "I never had anything to do with the transaction and I never knew anything about it. I had no information whatever about it."

The deal was for the 1960 sale of the Flamingo Hotel-Casino in Las Vegas. Parvin was president and principal stockholder of Hotel Flamingo, Inc., the company that owned the hotel-casino. Under a contract signed by Parvin as company president, Lansky was paid $200,000 for acting as middleman in the sale of the Flamingo to a trio of Florida hotelmen. Parvin, who owned 30 per cent of Hotel Flamingo, Inc. stock, used a portion of the money derived from the $10.5 million sale to finance his new foundation.

The agreement, also signed by Lansky, was dated May 12, 1960. More than a month before, the three Florida hotelmen, Samuel Cohen, Morris Lansburgh and Daniel Lifter, had approved to Nevada officials for approval of their purchase of the hotel-casino.

Council Gets Student Letter Asking Neely to Resign

The City Council has officially received "for future discussion" the letter from 11 University students demanding the resignation of Iowa City Police Judge Marion R. Neely.

The letter, sent last Friday to Iowa City Mayor Loren Hickerson, charges that Neely is in conflict of interest by holding positions both as police judge and Johnson County Republican chairman. The council gave no indication when the letter would be considered.

The one-page letter stated: "Judge Neely, we feel, has not adopted a sense of fair play with justice."

The letter also accused Neely of "a policy of arbitrary and capricious action which leaves itself vulnerable to political influence and often results in gross miscarriages of justice."

The students charge that Neely hasn't acted fairly in cases involving students.

Pope Told to Ask Bishops' Advice

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A world bishops' synod moved toward recommending sweeping reforms in the use of papal power, but Pope Paul VI said Wednesday he would accept only moderate and gradual change in the Roman Catholic Church.

The Pope spoke at his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Basilica, the synod in a hall of the adjoining Apostolic Palace heard new requests that the pontiff seek the advice of his bishops more often.

Belgian Cardinal Leo Suenens, an advocate of church reform, said one of the Pope's recent decrees contained "some incorrect sentences from the doctrinal point of view."

The cardinal also brought up before the synod a suggestion that bishops, as well as cardinals, be allowed to elect popes.

Pope Paul's remarks apparently were intended to warn against expecting radical and immediate reforms to come out of the synod or of the general ferment in the church.

Penalty Lifted In Pot Case

A Davenport man charged with possession of marijuana pleaded guilty in District Court Wednesday and received a six-month suspended sentence.

Charles Mahn Vinton, 25, was arrested Mar. 18 after an off-duty policeman observed him and three others smoking what looked like marijuana on the river bank behind the Union.

A police officer summoned to the scene said he found packages of the substance in Vinton's jacket.

House Gets Mine Safety Bill; Fight on Amendment Foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation proposing tough new health and safety rules for coal mines goes before the House Thursday, almost a year after explosion and fire-entombed 78 men in a West Virginia mine.

No one doubts the bill will be passed, but a battle is expected over attempts by some Democrats to strengthen it further. On the other hand, some Republicans are expected to try to weaken it.

A fight also is expected over an amendment retaining the technical distinction between so-called gassy and nongassy mines.

This amendment gives the owners of the 3,000 small or nongassy mines an additional four years to install expensive explosion-proof electrical equipment such as drills, lights and welding gear, with an additional two-year waiver.

A similar bill passed by the Senate 73 to 0, but Rep. Ken Hechler (D-W. Va.) charges the coal industry is mounting an intense last-minute lobbying campaign to try to cut out costlier provisions of the House bill.

One amendment expected to be offered would abolish a proposed new Federal Coal Mine Safety Board.

Soph Muller to Start at Power Tackle— Iowa in Good Shape for Spartans

By GARY WADE
The Iowa Hawkeye football squad ran through an hour-and-a-half, spirited workout Wednesday in preparation for Saturday's Homecoming encounter with Michigan State.

Head Coach Ray Nagel apprised the Hawks as being "in good shape — both mentally and physically, and ready to give the Spartans a good game with a good chance for a Homecoming victory."

The Hawks concentrated on their overall game Wednesday, emphasizing execution on offense in an attempt to limit the mistakes that have been so costly so far in the Big 10 season. The Hawks also practiced extensively against the Michigan State offensive patterns on defense.

In the only lineup change this week, senior offensive power tackle Melvin Morris, 6-2, 250, has been edged out of a starting position by sophomore

John Muller, a 6-4, 233-pounder.

Nagel said that the Hawks have had very good practices all week long, and that the squad is in a very excellent mental condition after the two disappointing losses in Big 10 action.

"I really believe in this team," Nagel said. "They've shown me a lot of courage and pride and they'll come back strong in these last five games."

push to get back into the Big 10 race."

All the Hawks are off the injured list and ready for Saturday's tangle with the Spartans, all Hawks that is except quick guard Chuck Legler. The 235-pound junior has been lost for the season due to a knee injury.

Nagel feels that the Hawks can win Saturday's game, but added, "We'll have to put together our very best game with limited mistakes to do it."

The players were also unanimous in their desire to win Saturday, especially the graduating seniors who have not seen a Homecoming victory in their careers at Iowa.

The last Iowa Homecoming victory was six years ago in 1963 when the Hawks outscored Indiana, 37-26.

"We've never played Michigan State since I've been here, and we'd really like to stick it to 'em Saturday," said senior linebacker Don Sibery. "And being from Michigan, I've got a little added incentive to do well."

Senior defensive tackle Mike Edwards said, "They're a pretty good team, but we hope to knock them off — and if we play as well as we did against Purdue, we might be able to win one this time."

Iowa City senior quarterback Mike Cilek commented, "I sure wish that it wasn't my last Homecoming game, but we hope to win this one — I mean, we're gonna win this one!"

Starting quarterback Larry Lawrence said, "We've got the same attitude as if we had beaten Purdue, and you can bet we are going to rebound from that one with a win."

"We've never played the Spartans before, and it's the most physical team that we'll play all year," said senior offensive tackle Paul Laaveg. "And looking forward to pro ball, this game is a real challenge to me."

Senior co-captain and All-America candidate Jon Meskimen said, "We're all a little ticked off at the outcome of the last two games, and I think that we just might take it out on Michigan State if things go right."

"They're a real physical team, and it's gonna be a very hard-hitting game," said Iowa's other co-captain, Larry Ely. "But we WANT a victory."

Flanker Kerry Reardon also accented the bitter tone of the Hawks after two losses. "We were the better team in the last two games, and we really outplayed Purdue, yet we got beat."

"We're too good of a team for that, and no team is going to get the pleasure of beating us again — no team can beat us if we play our type of game," Reardon said.

Senior linebacker Rod Barnhart acknowledged the sentiment for the entire team when he said, "We're sure as hell going into this game looking for a victory — and we're gonna get one."

All-America Candidate Meskimen

Iowa senior power guard Jon Meskimen, a mainstay in the Iowa offensive line for three years, is probably the Hawks' best hope for All-America post-season honors. Meskimen was named to the All-Big 10 team last season and was named on several pre-season All-America teams in the honorable mention category this year. Jon is looking for his first Homecoming victory since coming to Iowa this Saturday against Michigan State.

Chiefs' Defensive Unit Moving at Record Clip

NEW YORK (AP) — Kansas City's revamped defensive unit, scourge of the American Football League through the first five weeks of the season, is zeroing in on the all-time record for point prevention.

The Chiefs, who lead the AFL in defense against both rushing and passing, have yielded 56 points on the way to a 5-1 take-off in the Western Division. Last year, they set a league mark by limiting the opposition to 170 points in 14 games.

The 1963 Chicago Bears and 1968 Baltimore Colts share the all-time pro low of 144 for a 14-game schedule.

Boostered by a pair of tough newcomers, rookie cornerback Jim Marsalis and second-year tackle Curley Culp, Kansas City has allowed an average of just 62 yards on the ground and 142 in the air.

No club has dented the Chiefs' defense for 100 rushing yards and they've posted two shutouts — one less than the season record set by the 1960 Dallas Texans before that franchise was shifted to Kansas City.

The power running of Emerson Boozer and Matt Snell has complemented Joe Namath's sure passing hand and helped the New York Jets move into the team offense lead with a per-game average of 373 yards.

Failing to make either first or second team were hitting stars as Cleon Jones of the New York Mets (30), Matty Alou of Pittsburgh (315), Reggie Smith of Boston (309) and Tony Oliva of Minnesota (309).

Vols' Kiner Lineman of Week

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like any good craftsman seeking to improve his trade, Tennessee's All-America linebacker Steve Kiner spent hours last summer studying films of great linebackers in action.

architect of the wrecking job, was named college football Lineman of the Week of The Associated Press.

One of those he studied was Lee Roy Jordan of the Dallas Cowboys, an All-America linebacker at Alabama in 1962.

Tennessee's defense was so devastating that Alabama backs were limited to 20 yards rushing.

Kiner learned his lessons well, as any Alabama partisan who saw him wreck the Crimson Tide attack last Saturday will attest.

"You can't expect a quarterback to throw with Steve Kiner wrapped around his neck," said Alabama coach Paul "Bear" Bryant.

Use of Latest Techniques Possible

Burn Center

A new 12-bed comprehensive burn treatment facility which can be expanded to accommodate as many as 15 patients, has been opened at University Hospitals.

The new unit was designed to provide maximum comfort for patients and to take advantage of the most modern techniques used in burn treatment, according to Sidney E. Ziffren, professor and acting head of the department of surgery.

About 50 patients with severe burns requiring extended periods of treatment are admitted each year at University Hospitals.

Located in a former ward area on the fifth floor of General Hospital, the new unit replaces four separate large rooms that were formerly used for patients with burns.

A nurses' station and a small conference room for physicians and students are located at the entrance of the new facility.

Consoles built into the walls of each patient unit contain oxygen and suction equipment connections, television and telephone terminals, and lighting and intercom controls.

Standards to support fluid therapy and transfusion apparatus are suspended from the ceiling and each patient area has an individual unit with mirror, laboratory, and closet for personal needs.

A large treatment area, adjoining but separate from the patient rooms, contains shower facilities, in which water temperature and pressure can be controlled precisely, and two special whirlpool bath units.

Filled with a saline detergent, the baths aid in gently removing dead tissue from a burned patient. A power hoist lowers and raises the patient on a frame device into and out of the baths.

The facility's "skin bank" — a refrigeration unit that preserves skin removed from cadavers — is also located in the treatment area. Cadaver skin grafts are used when a patient does not have enough unburned skin for grafting.

"Cadaver skin grafts must be used in such cases during early phases of treatment to prevent serious or fatal losses of body fluids and also to help control infection," Ziffren said.

"Such grafts are replaced every four or five days because they eventually will slough off the patient, but they do provide adequate protection until grafting with the patient's skin can begin. All areas of full-thickness burn must eventually be covered with grafts from the patient's own skin," he said.

Dressings soaked in a solution containing one-half per cent silver nitrate, a metallic salt, have been found to provide amazing protection against infection, one of the most serious problems encountered in the treatment of burns, said Ziffren.

"While treatment with silver nitrate is a splendid form of therapy, an annoying, but not harmful, problem is that the oxidizing silver stains equipment and paint with a blue-black or brown-black hue," Ziffren said.

To help overcome this problem, the entire treatment area has been painted with a special light blue paint that can easily be cleaned of the silver nitrate residue.

PRESIDENT EDUARDO FREI Condemns Rebels

Head of Chile Says Coups Not Tolerated

SANTIAGO, Chile — With a warning that the people of Chile will not tolerate military coups, President Eduardo Frei said Wednesday that the country's crisis had been overcome and that rebel soldiers would be tried by military tribunals.

Frei told his people during a broadcast speech that the country would remain under a "state of siege" until normality returns. He said he had ordered a full investigation into the gunfire wounding of 14 civilians Tuesday night.

The president made no mention that he had bowed to at least one of the demands made by the rebels, headed by Gen. Roberto Viaux. Viaux surrendered at daybreak and is under house arrest.

Shortly before noon, Frei removed from office Defense Minister Gen. Tulio Marambio and replaced him with Sergio Ossa, until then the minister of public works and transportation. The rebels had demanded Marambio's ouster and appointment of a civilian.

Frei said the rebellion, which amounted to little more than a strike by officers and men of the Tacna Regiment of the 2nd Division, had created tremendous interest abroad, where people asked "Can Chile lose a democratic regime?"

"Today, they have the answer," Frei said. "In Chile, the armed forces do not accept indiscipline."

Hospital Escapees Charged With Aiding Felon's Escape

Two escapees from the Maximum Security Hospital at Oakdale were charged in absentia in Johnson County District Court Wednesday with assisting a felon to escape.

The two — Jerry Kobrock, 18, of Ogden, and Carroll Calhoun, 25, of Mt. Pleasant — are still at large.

They are charged with allegedly having aided 22-year-old Eddy Johnson, a convicted felon to escape. Johnson was apprehended near Oakdale shortly after the escape.

Johnson County Atty. Robert Jansen explained that neither Kobrock nor Calhoun was serving a jail sentence and that therefore neither was subject to a criminal charge of escape.

UI Stargazer Helps In Planet Discovery

A University graduate student and three Cornell University astronomers at the Arecibo Ionospheric Observatory in Puerto Rico have discovered what they believe may be the only known earth-sized planet in the vicinity of another star.

John Rankin, a doctoral student in the Department of Physics and Astronomy now working at Arecibo, said the planet is believed to be rotating around a pulsar — or neutron star — about 6,000 light years away in the Crab Nebula.

The pulsar has been observed to have a slight variation in its pulsing rate of about 4/10,000 of a second. The variation occurs every three months.

Thomas Gold, director of Cornell's Center of Radiophysics, said this variation may be interpreted as a wobble in the position of the pulsar — moving it back and forth a distance of about 200 kilometers.

"Such a movement would be caused by a planet," said University astronomer John Neff. A planetary companion of the pulsar would cause such a motion in the same way that the earth and other planets cause a slight variation in the position of the sun, Neff explained.

Gold said that the planet would have to be about the same mass as earth and about four-tenths earth's distance from the sun — in about the same relative position as the planet Mercury.

Because the power output from a pulsar is much greater than the output from the sun, the planet at such a distance would be very hot, he noted.

Rankin, under the supervision of University space physicist James Van Allen, has been analyzing data collected at Arecibo in recent months to make extremely precise measurements of the pulsing rate. Other members of the Arecibo team are D.W. Richards, Gordon Pettengill and C.C. Counselman.

Pulsars were discovered in 1968 by astronomers at Cambridge, England, who detected a radio source that emitted a rapid sequence of short pulses. This discovery was later confirmed by similar findings from a number of other observatories.

The source usually emitted a sequence of three pulses that took place over a time span of about 0.037 seconds. This pattern then repeated itself 1.337 seconds later.

Astronomers now believe that the pulsars are neutron stars, which represent a condensed state of matter in which the entire mass of the sun would be compressed to a diameter of about 10 kilometers — or six miles.

Since their discovery, pulsars have been used to help astronomers study a number of other problems. One application has been to determine the density of matter in the near-vacuum of space through which the pulsar signals pass.

Another application may be to allow an experimental verification of Einstein's theory of relativity, which states that time on earth runs more slowly in January than in July by an amount estimated at one part in 50 billion.

Paul W. Keyes, producer and head writer of TV's "Laugh-In," has resigned from the show. He has been quoted in the industry press as saying he was disturbed by the show's direction.

Tutors Program Needs Help

A volunteer tutoring program for Iowa City elementary school students — CAP 121 — is extending its tutoring program and needs more tutors, according to Sharon Elswit, coordinator for the program.

CAP 121 sponsored by the Iowa City Community School District in cooperation with Hawkeye Area Community Action Program (HACAP), needs volunteers, 16 years or older, from the University and the Iowa City community.

The tutor and child meet for a minimum of one or two hours per week outside of regular school hours to supplement the child's schoolwork and personal education.

There are 120 tutors working with children. At least 58 more children are waiting to be admitted to the program when tutors are found for them.

CAP 121 began in 1967 as a volunteer tutoring program in three of the Iowa City elementary schools. It now covers all 14 elementary schools in the Iowa City school district.

Any University student or Iowa City resident interested in becoming a volunteer tutor should contact Miss Elswit at the HACAP office, 700 S. Dubuque St., or call 351-4759.

HACAP has also announced the grand opening of Johnson County's first neighborhood center, The Steppin' Stone. The center, located on Highway 6 in Tiffin, is scheduled to open Oct. 30. A coffee hour will be held from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. followed by entertainment.

The Steppin' Stone, sponsored by HACAP, will be open to all residents of Johnson County. The staff at the center will try to help low income residents of the county become more involved in the community through community activities, according to Miss Elswit.

A neighborhood council, to be elected in November, will govern the center.

A teen council, composed of volunteer fund raisers, will plan teen activities for the center. A room for teens has been equipped with a juke box, pool table, and pop machine, all available at reduced costs.

HACAP also plans to organize a senior citizens group. The first meeting is scheduled for Oct. 28 at the center. Planned activities for the group will include bingo, card parties, potlucks and Christmas crafts.

A children's story hour, designed to give mothers time for their own activities, is also being scheduled.

The center will be open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday afternoons. Evening hours will be determined by the neighborhood council and the teens.

The Iowa City Board of Education has hired Mike Roe, a Southeast Junior High School teacher, to coordinate a Children's Caravan as an extension of the CAP 121 program, according to Miss Elswit.

The Caravan, a non-profit traveling activity center for Iowa City elementary school children, will be put into motion by volunteers.

A meeting for all interested persons will be held at 7:30 Thursday night in the Music Room of the Public Library. Interested persons should attend the meeting should contact Mike Roe at the HACAP office or call 351-4759.

Dress Codes Are Liberal At Most City High Schools

By KRISTELLE MILLER
The key to dress in most Iowa City high schools this year is comfort, with students doing their thing style-wise.

Dress codes in the public schools are primarily student-made and reflect the changing styles. Although rollers are out for girls and shoes must be worn, students may otherwise dress as casually as they please. The only stipulations are that students be clean and their dress not be disruptive.

"All we ask is that kids come to school in a neat and decent fashion because cleanliness is one thing paramount in a school of 900," said Richard Taylor, principal of City High School.

A few long-haired boys with Army jackets or ponchos and cowboy boots and several girls with mini-skirts, sandals and bright scarves are at West and City High.

However, the majority of the students are moderately dressed with girls wearing skirts five-to-six inches above the knee and boys wearing dark slacks or jeans and button-down shirts.

Although girls can wear shorts or slacks and boys may sport mustaches and beards, few do, Jim Ferguson, assistant principal at West High, and Taylor said. Both men expressed confidence in students' ability to dress appropriately.

Taylor, who admitted he had made a few changes in the Student Council-recommended dress code, said he believed his students were generally more mature than the "average high school kid in Iowa" and more capable of exercising their own judgment.

"Because of this maturity and the University atmosphere, I suppose we are more liberal. Dress that might shock someone in West Branch does not bother our kids," Taylor said.

Susan Amish, a mini-skirted senior at City High, said, "Mr. Taylor tries to be liberal. Kids pick up a lot because of the University and sometimes they get too outlandish."

She added that even when students have long hair, the administration usually ignores it.

Taylor said he rarely has students sent to him because of dress problems and Ferguson concurred. Ferguson said that in one year and four weeks at West, he had only one dress problem.

"Kids who wear way-out clothes have psychological hang-ups. Dress is a home, not a school problem," Ferguson said.

Students at West High voted last year not to have a dress code, but the administration said there must be one, Ferguson said.

The principal, with a Student Council committee, formulated a code and the principal inserted some rules. He stipulated that boys must wear socks at all times and shorts can be worn only during certain periods of the school year.

"Worrying about dress can lead to a lot of unnecessary hang-ups. What goes in the student's head rather than what goes on his back is what really counts," Ferguson explained.

Jerry Moss, a senior at West, complained about the principal's sock rule. He said that it was unreasonable to ask a boy to wear socks with sandals and that students should be able to do more about their objections to the dress code.

At University High, one of the private high schools in town, there is no dress code and students govern entirely what they wear. The Student Council voted that all students must wear shoes and voted that individuality and informality be the basic dress aspects.

The school administrators said how a student dresses is not objectionable unless it disrupts the classroom.

Kent Winter, principal of University High, said he has never had any problem with dress and saw no reason for a dress code. He said that he had several long-haired students, but that the majority are well-groomed and well-dressed and take pride in their dress.

Randy Stamp, a University senior, dressed in slacks, button-down shirt and a sweater said, "The students who wear the way-out clothes are dumber, the ones who are smarter wear good clothes."

Nana Burford, a University High senior commented, "Boys as a group are a little more conservatively dressed and the girls are more outlandish."

In contrast to University High's policy of no dress code is the conservative view taken by Father E. J. Weeg, principal of Regina High School, Iowa City's other private school.

"If students were left on their own, they would wear as wild stuff as they wear at City High," Father Weeg said.

At Regina, students are required to wear uniforms. Girls must wear a dark blue skirt and a blouse or shell and boys must wear trousers and a button-down shirt. Sweaters are not allowed.

"We are liberated from what we used to be," Father Weeg said, explaining that girls were formerly required to wear white blouses, but may now wear any color.

He said the reason for the no-sweater rule was that some girls were wearing knit blouses that "were as tight and obvious as the literal sweater girl used to be."

Father Weeg said he believed that dress affects the student and if a student "dresses like a bum, he acts like a bum." Therefore, he said, the dress standard is "what the businessmen or ordinary downtown people in polite society are wearing."

Students are not allowed to wear blue jeans or tennis shoes and students must wear socks or hose. Long hair, mustaches and beards are out, although boys may wear sideburns down to their ears.

Father Weeg said the Student Council wrote the dress code two years ago, but that "they threw out a lot of things that I put back in." He said the final decision "as to propriety on dress" still rests with the administration.

Students at Regina disagreed with Father Weeg's views and dress policy.

Jeff DeFrance, a senior at Regina, said that the Student Council had passed blue jeans and T-shirts and that his rights were infringed upon by the current dress policy.

"Students do not have anything to say. I think we should be able to say more about the dress code. We should be able to have the same rights as the kids at the public schools. Kids are the same; and, besides, we even pay money to go to school here," he said.

DeFrance said if there was no dress code at Regina, students would still dress "decently." John Eckerman, also a senior, agreed with DeFrance and said the dress code is "not liberal enough."

Eckerman pointed out that businessmen wear turtle-necks to Mass and parties and that students should be allowed to wear them to school.

Patty Sippy, a freshman at Regina, thought the no-sweater rule was "way out of line," although she added that uniforms increase the school unity.

Placing Student Teachers Is Hard

By University News Service

If the day ever comes when greater Cedar Rapids and greater Iowa City merge halfway up U.S. 218, the man standing by waiting for a school to be built in the area will be Stuart C. Gray, assistant dean of the College of Education.

Dean Gray is in charge of arranging positions for the University's increasing number of student teachers in more than a dozen nearby school districts.

He places student teachers of elementary and secondary grades, special education and speech pathology, as well as librarians and guidance counselors. He found spots for 380 in these fields during the current semester and expects to place 400 more in the spring.

School districts already contracted with the University for this program keep adding buildings, almost — but not quite — fast enough to absorb the additional students he has every year, Gray said.

And he keeps arranging contracts with new districts to handle the overflow. The principal ones he now deals with are Iowa City, Cedar Rapids, Muscatine, Washington, Central City, Marion, Montezuma, Mount Vernon, Solon, West Branch, West Liberty and Davenport — the last of which is more than an hour away by bus.

Gray spends considerable time with a roadmap spread out on his desk, plotting bus runs to get the maximum number of student teachers to the maximum number of schools fast.

Gray refuses to place students who seek only temporary certification as teachers. He considers a temporarily certified teacher as undesirable as a temporarily certified medical doctor.

"What amazes me is that parents who wouldn't dream of sending their children to such a doctor don't have the same concern over such a teacher," he said.

Gray realizes that school districts use the temporary certification to fill vacancies. His solution to this problem is increased salaries, since he believes that a shortage of medical doctors would quickly follow a reduction of their salaries to the $8,000-$9,000 level at which many teachers are paid.

If school superintendents would decline to accept the temporarily certified teacher, "it would be the greatest thing to happen to Iowa education in a hundred years," Gray said.

He also envisions a change in the near future in the College of Education's present requirement of eight weeks' practical experience for the aspirant teacher. This period, amounting to about half of one semester, is in Gray's mind "just a very very minimum time." Instead, he hopes to see the practical experience period expanded into an "internship" that would fill a whole term.

"This is a profession. Maybe we ought to get a little closer to professional training," he said.

With a whole semester to devote to their on-the-scene experience, students could forsake commuting to surrounding cities every day.

tion, according to D. G. Findlay, manager of the Iowa City office of Iowa-Illinois, is to provide economies in electricity generation and in coal purchase.

Findlay said that Iowa consumers would not realize any immediate change in service, but that more inexpensive service may be the long-range effect.

Charles H. Whitmore, president of Iowa-Illinois, and Dwight H. Swanson, president of Iowa Power, stated they were pleased with the voting. Both indicated satisfaction with the percentage of votes cast (over 80 per cent of all stockholders) and with the percentage of favorable votes.

The two utilities will now seek approval of the consolidation from the Federal Power Commission during a hearing which is scheduled to start Nov. 12, in Washington, D.C.

City Council Confirms Revenue Bond Issue

The City Council Tuesday authorized the issuance of $300,000 in parking revenue bonds. Councilman Robert (Doc) Connell cast the only dissenting vote.

The authorization is aimed at increasing parking revenue which is being reduced as funds are used for the construction of a parking lot in the 400 block of Washington Street, across from the Civic Center.

Connell opposed authorizing the new parking bonds because he disapproves of installing new surface parking areas before a city parking ramp is built.

The council will receive bids for the bonds Nov. 18.

The council also set Nov. 14 as the date for receiving bids on a street lighting project on Washington Street between Linn and Van Buren Streets.

The street lighting project has drawn criticism from some Iowa City property owners. Residents have objected to beginning the project on the grounds that future urban renewal developments may result in the removal of the Washington Street lighting project.

Lebanese Minister Resigns Again After Clashes

Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami resigned Wednesday after bloody clashes between the Lebanese army and Palestinian guerrillas. The fighting unleashed a storm of protests at home and abroad and brought threats from other Arab nations.

Iraq offered the guerrillas military aid. Syria closed its border with Lebanon, and Libya recalled its ambassador. Thousands of Arabs demonstrated in the streets of Beirut, the Lebanese capital, and Iraqis besieged the Lebanese Embassy in Baghdad. Jordanian demonstrators tore down American and Lebanese flags in Amman.

Elsewhere in the Middle East, there were these developments:
 • In Cairo, an Egyptian government spokesman accused the United States of supporting Israel with men as well as arms and said the presence of Americans in Israeli uniforms "destroys all hope of any peaceful solution in the Middle East."
 • In Israel, four bombs, apparently planted by terrorists, rocked a residential area of Haifa, killing one person and injuring 12. It was the worst terrorist incident in the port city in 20 years. Israeli security forces rounded up dozens of Arabs for questioning.
 • The Egyptian military command said a number of Israeli jets tried to bomb Egyptian military positions along the Suez Canal Wednesday but were driven off by anti-aircraft fire, the Middle East News Agency said.
 • Egyptian warplanes penetrated 50 miles early Thursday into Israeli-held Sinai in an attempt to bomb the Jewish settlement of Nahal Yam, the Israeli military command said, adding: "They did not hit the settlement and there were no casualties."

Karami announced he was resigning "because it is not logical for one to assume responsibility for something on which one has no say and which goes against one's opinions and beliefs," he said. He disclaimed responsibility for the army-guerrilla clashes and implied the army had acted without his knowledge. The army issued a statement saying clashes in southern Lebanon over the past week were started by guerrillas who tried to set up positions in frontier villages.

It said two soldiers and five guerrillas were killed, and six soldiers, two civilians and six guerrillas were wounded. It was the most serious clash between the army and the guerrillas since last April, when Karami resigned after bloody street riots. He returned to try to form a new government but it was unsuccessful.

The government clamped an indefinite curfew Wednesday on the northern town of Tripoli, a center of guerrilla support and Karami's hometown.

'Life': McC

NEW YORK (AP) — The magazine "Life" claimed Thursday that House Speaker John McCormack "was more than naive" in whatever took place in the magazine, in its reference to reports of influence on the part of McCormack's assistant, Dr. Martin S. Voloshen. McCormack's spokesman Nathan M. Voloshen said McCormack has no knowledge of a Securities and Exchange Commission mission complaint. "In one instance," McCormack's spokesman himself phoned McCormack's assistant, Dr. Martin S. Voloshen, a convicted corporate insider, and paid Voloshen at least $10,000 to keep him out of jail, the spokesman said.
