You know it's spring when you see your first robin of the year. You know it's spring when you see the bank of the Iowa River crowded with students. And you know it's spring when you see the Highway Commission staff out washing the salt and winter smudge off the highway signs along interstates. ## Regents Send Plan to Committee—

B.G.S. Approval Delayed

By LOWELL FORTE

OAKDALE — The Board of Regents Wednesday voted unanimously to refer the Bachelor of General Studies (B.G.S.) degree to its Interinstitutional Committee, thus delaying approval by the Board for at least one month.

The materials on the degree had earlier been referred to the Committee, said University Provost R. A. Heffner, the University's member to committee, "but nothing was said by the Committee about the degree."

The Committee is composed of the three academic deans of the three state universities. Heffner said the other deans looked favorably upon the degree and said he expected the Committee's prompt approval.

Heffner said, however, the Board's actions would make it impossible to include information about the B.G.S. in the University's new two-year catalogue, which is just now going to press.

Heffner had hoped that the Board would approve the degree without recommendation from the Interinstitutional Committee.

"Now," he said, "it looks like we will have to print a supplement to the catalogue."

Heffner told the Board that under the rules of the Regents it was unclear whether the Committee's approval or recommendation were necessary.

Wayne Richey, the Board's executive secretary, said he thought the Regents Procedural Guide required action from the Committee. Richey referred to a paragraph that reads: "The function of the (Interinstitutional) Committee shall be to study such aspects of the relationships of the teaching, research and service programs of the institutions as may be referred to it by the Board or that may come to its attention from other sources from time to time."

The B.G.S. was approved by the faculty of the College of Liberal Arts in late March by a two to one margin, with 54 per cent of the 756 eligible liberal arts faculty members voting.

The degree is designed to give, to those undergraduates who want it, a general education without any specific major. It would release candidates from core literature, language, physical education, natural and social science and historical-cultural requirements, but would still require freshmen to take rhetoric.

B.G.S. degree candidates would be required to complete 126 credit-hours, 60 of which would have to be courses numbered 100-level or higher. A limit of 20 credit-hours in any one department would be credited toward the 60 hour requirement.

If Wednesday's Board discussion is an indicator, the B.G.S. is destined for Board approval next month.

Only two of the nine Regents criticized the degree. They were Ray Bailey, Clarion, and Ned Perrin, Mapleton.

Bailey said he was concerned that the degree would produce "students who don't know a thing about making a living. It will let many of them take all the easy courses, and give many of them lots of time to raise Cain."

He also questioned the "low number" of faculty voting of the degree. "Was there any reason to believe that the non-voting faculty members thought that it will all cut and dried and these was not use of getting involved?" asked Bailey.

Dewey Stuit, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, who presented the B.G.S. proposal to the Board, told Bailey "that's the reason we took the vote by mail ballot. We never get more than a 100 or 150 people to vote." He said the B.G.S. vote was extraordinarily high.

University Pres. Willard Boyd told Bailey, "I enthusiastically endorse the degree because it brings, I think, greater flexibility within the University. And, my fear is that not enough students are going to want to take it because of the strong specialized orientation we have in society today that everyone wants to become a specialist. I'm worried about developing some generalists."

Swigert Joins Apollo 13 For Saturday Blastoff

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. — Rookie astronaut John L. Swigert Jr. nailed down the first-string job on the Apollo 13 flight team Friday and the countdown surged smoothly along toward a Saturday blastoff to America's third landing on the moon.

In a decision ending days of doubt and tension, NASA Administrator Thomas O. Paine gave the go-ahead for a 1:13 p.m. CST liftoff after 2½ hours of huddling with key mission officials.

The recommendations, Paine said, were unanimous that Swigert should replace Thomas K. Mattingly II on the team and that the idea of a postponement to May 9 be rejected.

Swigert, assigned when Mattingly was exposed to German measles, slipped smoothly into his spot in two critical days of simulator practice with Flight Commander James A. Lovell Jr. and astronaut Fred W. Haise.

"It was sort of like trying to put Glenn Miller into Tommy Dorsey's band," said Donald "Deke" Slayton, astronaut boss. "Both are great musicians, but each has a different style. They wouldn't play in Carnegie Hall without a rehearsal."

So Swigert rehearsed with Lovell and Haise, covering all maneuvers requiring interplay between the crewmen, and they harmonized beautifully.

U.S. Senate Unit Votes to Repeal Tonkin Provision

WASHINGTON (AP) — A resolution that would terminate the controversial 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution, basis for the Johnson administration's dispatch of 500,000 troops to Vietnam, won the unanimous approval Friday of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The committee acted after the Nixon Administration advised it would have no objection to repealing the resolution.

But the committee decided against an approach that would have required President Nixon's approval — as well as that of both House and Senate — in favor of a concurrent resolution that needs only to pass the House and Senate.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr. (R-Md.) had suggested that congressional and presidential approval of a measure repealing the Tonkin resolution and other cold war grants of authority would go far to restoring amity between the Senate and the executive branch.

The measure, approved Friday, also terminates a 1957 resolution authorizing U.S. action in the Middle East. Both resolutions would be terminated, effective at the end of the present congressional session.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark.) the committee chairman, emphasized to reporters that action is still under consideration on Mathias' proposal to repeal two other resolutions, a 1955 Formosa resolution and a 1962 Cuban declaration. "We are beginning a process of clearing away the obsolete agreements and resolutions," he said. "I hope it will cause a re-examination of all of our commitments around the world."

Fulbright called the move a "good faith gesture on the part of the committee."

Opposition arose, Fulbright said, to dealing more specifically with Vietnam, especially from Republican members of the committee who say they think that Nixon's Vietnamization policy is succeeding.

The legal impact of the move is questionable, since the Nixon administration has said it does not regard the Tonkin Gulf resolution as the legal basis for U.S. actions in Southeast Asia.

Fulbright said the State Department opposed repeal of the Cuba resolution on the ground that policy is still the same. "We feel it ought to be changed," he said.

The matter will be considered again later, Fulbright said.

The broad resolution that proposed repeal of all four resolutions was sponsored by Mathias and Democratic Senate Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.

A resolution confined to the Tonkin Gulf repeal was sponsored by Sens. Claiborne Pell (D-R.I.) and Jacob K. Javits (R-N.Y.) both committee members.

Withdrawal Of Troops Asked Held

WASHINGTON — The Joint Chiefs of Staff, concerned about rising enemy offensive action, have urged a two-month delay in further U.S. troop withdrawals from Vietnam, it was learned Friday.

Pentagon sources said the military chiefs made their recommendation within the past few days and indicated the Nixon administration will go ahead with a further troop cut anyway.

President Nixon will make a radio-television speech next Thursday night, delivering what the White House described as an updated report on Vietnam.

Nixon is expected to announce a new withdrawal at that time. According to present indications, it will total around 50,000 men.

The deadline for reaching the previously ordered force reduction to a level of 434,000 men will come the day before Nixon's report to the nation.

But it was announced in Saigon this week indicate that level already has been met.

So far, the Nixon administration has trimmed the authorized U.S. troop ceiling in Vietnam by 115,000 men. The actual number withdrawn is about 109,000 because the ceiling set by the Johnson administration never was reached.

The new slice is likely to bring the American troop commitment in Vietnam below 400,000 men for the first time in more than three years.

The Joint Chiefs reportedly cited a recent upsurge in enemy offensive activity and warned that more North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensive thrusts can be expected in the weeks ahead.

Radical Speakers Tell Of Organizations' Goals

By STEVE HARDY

E. C. Smith, deputy minister of Chicago's Black Panther Party, said Friday night, "Black people were brought here for one function — to labor — and since all they do now is screw all day, carry knives and dance, they aren't serving any function."

"Since the capitalists now have to pay for their labor, and black people aren't worth their money, if you're not a Sammy Davis Jr. or a Julia, you're not serving their function. Since we don't serve their function now the government has set up machinery to wipe us out," Smith said.

Smith was a featured speaker at a Radical Students Association (RSA) panel discussion in Shambaugh Auditorium Friday evening.

Smith and "Brother Jimmy," also of the Panther Party, who would give no further identification, both said that armed revolution is "the only way we can ever hope for freedom."

Sue Mandel and Beth Rainsford, of the Women's Liberation Front (WLF) in Chicago, described the WLF's actions and goals, saying, "We've been slaves long enough."

Steve Tabbis, also of Chicago, said on behalf of Rising Up Angry, "The pigs have oppressed and beaten people in our name, claiming they're defending the whites, but we're going to put a stop to that. We're going to be fighting with those people, because we're being oppressed along with them, except in different ways."

Yeah! Yeah! Yeah! Beatles Split Up

LONDON — The Beatles — four mopheads who became millionaires by making music everyone's been screaming about for 10 years — split up Friday.

Paul McCartney, youngest of the now grown-up quartet, which seized world fame as they emerged from their teens, announced he had broken away to pursue a solo career as a song writer.

He said the split could be only temporary. The 27-year-old composer blamed "personal differences, business differences, musical differences, but most of all because I have a better time with my family."

None of the other Beatles — George Harrison, Ringo Starr or John Lennon — was available for comment.

A spokesman for Apple, the Beatles' controlling company, denied the four would split up, although he agreed that McCartney and Lennon, who used to write songs together, had not seen each other for months.

Sharing responsibility

Why won't the University administration allow students some say in policies that govern student conduct in the judiciary system?

The announcement March 27 by Pres. Boyd that two University students would be suspended for their involvement in the Dec. 10 Placement Office disturbance raises this question again.

The suspensions of Bruce Johnson, A3, Des Moines, and Joe Berry, A3, Iowa City, were announced the day Easter break began. Why? Was the announcement timed to gain the least possible student attention and to conveniently eliminate discussion of the case? This seems to be the pattern of administrative action on anything relating to the Code of Student Life.

In the placement case, the students are being penalized under two stringent anti-demonstration sections of the Code that were retained when former Pres. Howard Bowen overruled recommendations by the Committee on Student Life (CSL) to modify one and delete the other. One of the rules, Section 5, was written by the Board of Regents and includes punishment for inciting a demonstration. The CSL had submitted to Bowen a modified Section 5 that would have penalized demonstrators only when they seriously obstructed the process of the University or threatened the safety of an individual. The other rule, Section 7, which CSL had voted to eliminate, forbids unauthorized entry into or occupation of any area of campus at any time.

Boyd timed the announcement of the suspensions about as handily as Bowen had timed his overruling. Bowen was given the final draft of the CSL's Code revisions June 27 after conferring and seemingly agreeing with CSL about their changes throughout the spring of 1969. The members of CSL, including then chairman Daniel Moe, expected Bowen's approval.

But in the quiet of late summer, a week before the close of summer classes, Bowen asked CSL to approve by mail his version of the Code with the stringent anti-demonstration sections. The approval Bowen sought was a rubber-stamped endorsement of the administration's overruling. Bowen called the overruling "minor changes."

Bowen's overruling was a distasteful reminder of his action in the fall of 1968 when he overruled CSL's version of the Code that year without bothering to mention his intention to make changes. The administration's revised, and again more stringent, version of the 1968 code was printed and distributed at fall registration, causing a furor among students.

The Placement protest penalties emphasize in another way, too, the administration's willingness to silence any student voice in student conduct regulation. The penalties were handed down by an "illegitimate" court, fathered by Pres. Boyd without the knowledge or consent of students when he announced last January that judicial authority had been taken from the Committee on Student Conduct (CSC) and given to former Iowa Supreme Court Justice Theodore Garfield. The main prompting for the judicial change was a CSC ruling that would have invalidated section 7 of the Code.

When Boyd ordered the student judicial system dissolved, he said, "No appreciable gap in the judicial system can be tolerated. It must be made clear to all that the University has the capacity to deal fairly and promptly with those who violate lawful University rules."

What has been made clearer to students is that the administration makes and now enforces its own rules governing student life. Now that we have no appreciable gap in the judicial system, we have a chasm between student integrity and the administration's exercise of power. The repeated overruling of the student-represented CSL, the elimination of student judiciary committees and the imposing of penalties by the administration when students aren't here to respond are written somewhere on the walls of the chasm.

We students have appreciated Pres. Boyd's efforts to defend student freedoms from threats posed by the Iowa Legislature. It is certainly unexpected and unfortunate that he would himself exercise power to curb student participation in the process of the University.

Perhaps Pres. Boyd will remember that when he appointed Garfield he said he had strived to follow the dictates of good academic practice in exercising his rule making power. He said then, "If such a practice is not followed, I expect to have it brought to my attention and to remedy the matter as quickly as possible."

If "good academic practice" really means something, it would seem to have to include cooperation between the administration and students. If a student's education is going to mean something, the goals and means to goals should be at least partly his decision.

Will we be allowed some say in University policies?

Committee makes welfare recommendations

WASHINGTON — In a far-reaching welfare reform program, the Research and Policy Committee of the Committee for Economic Development (CED) has recommended a federally-supported national minimum income for all persons, including the working poor, with eligibility determined solely on the basis of need.

The goal of extending public assistance "to all Americans living in want" the Committee declared "should have high priority among the many goals being sought by this nation."

At the same time, the private, non-partisan group of businessmen and educators proposed a program of strong income incentives to work and urged "the incorporation of a requirement for training or work for the able-to-work as an integral element of any income maintenance system."

The 50-man panel called for the establishment of a federally-supported national program of day care centers that will free welfare mothers to take training or jobs voluntarily. Mothers with young children, however, should not be required to take a job or training program, the Committee emphasized.

These and other recommendations were contained in a 76-page Statement on National Policy entitled "Improving the Public Welfare System," made public by Joseph C. Wilson, board chairman of Xerox Corporation and chairman of CED's Subcommittee on Poverty and the Welfare System, which prepared the statement.

The present welfare system, CED declared, is "basically an outdated system, designed to cope with the emergency of a depression but not with the problems of deprivation that are chronic even in a period of affluence." Despite a substantial reduction in the number of poor, there are still 25 million Americans who live in poverty, "more than the entire population of Canada and half that of France or the United Kingdom."

About 60 per cent of the poor population, the Committee added, is still excluded from public assistance programs, and those who are included receive benefits which are "not sufficient to provide a decent living."

To institute a truly uniform national system of income maintenance, the Committee proposed that the federal government "undertake a substantially higher proportion of the financing of public assistance with a phased takeover by the federal government of state and local public assistance costs over the next five years as the goal."

The CED report urged that at the present time the uniform national level of income maintenance should provide, for a family of four, a minimum of $2,400. This figure could consist of $1,600 in cash allotments with the remainder being provided through the Food Stamp Program.

The Committee emphasized, however, that "inasmuch as a minimum income of $2,400 for a family of four hardly provides a subsistence level of income, we believe that a priority claim against future available federal funds should be invoked to raise total assistance to more acceptable levels."

When the minimum income is raised toward a more realistic level, the policy statement added, regional distortions very likely will begin to occur. Therefore, the Committee recommended that "as the minimum income level rises, consideration be given to adjustments for cost differentials where appropriate between various regions of the country and between urban and rural communities."

Although the CED report praises the Administration's welfare program as "a very important first step forward in revising the present welfare system," it differs from the Administration's program in several respects.

The most important difference involves the basic scope of the program. "Regrettably," the Committee declared, "the exclusionary nature of the present welfare system would be perpetuated by the Administration proposals."

An illustration concerns single persons and childless couples, who would be ineligible for assistance. "Yet this group is no less poor or any less in need than any other group now included in existing federal categories; indeed, the highest unemployment rates are those for single people."

The Committee therefore recommended specifically the inclusion of working single-person families and working childless couples in any new federally-aided programs to benefit the poor. About 800,000 persons fit this category.

The Committee's report also takes issue with the Administration proposal that female heads of households should also come under the requirement for work or training as a condition for continuance of public assistance.

"The final determination of whether a mother with young children is needed at home or could more usefully augment the family income through a job should be left to her individual judgment," the Committee stated.

In considering the need for a major day care program, the Committee noted its objections to several aspects of the Administration day care plan. While the Administration proposed that such centers be limited to children of six or over, the CED report maintained that establishing a national day-care program gives the nation an opportunity to provide an essential educational experience for disadvantaged preschool children down to the age of two.

"The early years are the crucial ones in growth and development, when the greatest opportunity exists to create individual patterns, habits, and attitudes that will prevent a repetition of the cycle of poverty and failure in another generation."

In addition, the report recommended the development of a federal program to assist with construction of day care centers, noting that the Administration's proposals provide only for grants to remodel and renovate facilities.

The cost of establishing a national program of day care centers, the Committee conceded, will often be substantially higher than the earning capacity of a mother with two or more children requiring such care. Nevertheless, the CED report asserted, "this approach, though costly, offers tremendous potential benefits to society in terms of better educated children and the addition to the labor force of more skilled and trained people."

An important side-benefit is that welfare mothers themselves become a potential source of staffing for these facilities.

The Committee emphasized, as did the Administration plan, that the income maintenance program must be coupled with strong work incentives. In combining welfare cash payments and food subsidy programs for income maintenance, the CED statement recommended that "the incentive element be set so that the recipients retain an adequate percentage of earnings (centering around approximately half of earnings) above a minimum allowance (such as $720 a year) up to an appropriate cutoff point."

A training or work requirement should be an integral part of the income maintenance system, the Committee declared, noting that "as a matter of principle, we believe that those who are able to work should work."

It pointed out, however, that this requirement should be instituted only after "a proper manpower program is developed to make such a requirement meaningful and safeguards are built into the organizational and appeals mechanisms to assure individual dignity and rights."

The problem of providing adequate job and training opportunities will be examined in a forthcoming CED statement now being prepared.

"Special attention must be given to the problem of (welfare) women who head households," the CED report maintained. These people constitute "a major social problem having grave consequences in terms of neglected and deprived children, who are locked into a despairing cycle of dependency and poverty."

This cycle can be broken, the Committee suggested, "if mothers receiving welfare are provided with the opportunity to undertake job training and to move into the labor force at decent wages that will augment the family income."

Because the number of children is much higher in poor families than among the affluent, the CED policy statement also recommended that more money be provided, both to government and private agencies, so that a family planning program can be expanded in order to ensure that information is easily and readily available to all families.

Overhauling the entire national welfare problem, in the view of the CED Research and Policy Committee, is the shortage of solid information on such vitally important matters as (1) the factors that lead people in and out of poverty; (2) the reasons why the number of people receiving public assistance keeps rising; and (3) the determination of the most appropriate methods to provide genuine help to those in deepest poverty.

"Rarely has so costly a program operated with so little hard data," the report observed. Consequently, it called for a major evaluation and research effort to develop "yardsticks to measure the relationships of employment, education and training, health, housing, law enforcement, adequate income, social skills and attitudes, discrimination, stability of family unit, public transportation, recreational and cultural facilities, schools, and hospitals."

University must define its role

To the Editor: A few days ago Sam Sloss, a senior taking a freshman ROTC course, related the violation of the USA Bill of Rights by Col. Shockey. Apparently Col. Shockey felt that the length of Mr. Sloss's hair demanded a lowering of his grade. This action raises two questions of overriding importance. The first question concerns the particular violation by the Colonel. The USA

Constitution provides that grades shall be determined "solely on academic achievement... with freedom of expression protected and respected." Certainly any reasonable person realizes that modes of dress and grooming are proper forms of 'expression'.

The second question raised concerns the status of ROTC in a university community. The Colonel's blatant admission that "his purposes are different from the rest of the university" is a succinct statement of the problem.

At the end of two years, ROTC students sign a contract that amounts to enlistment. At that point those students are members of both military and university communities and are subject to the regulations of the military establishment as regards dress, etc. Not so with Mr. Sloss. As a student taking a ROTC course out of simple curiosity, he belongs wholly to the university community — and is protected by our constitution.

It is fair to argue that ROTC should be on this campus. After all some students want the program and far be it for the rest of us to deny them that opportunity. HOWEVER, every department must be open to all students if it is to be a legitimate educational endeavor.

The first responsibility of a University is education. And yet University has been unclear on this; has yet to define just what the business of a university is. Important questions have been left unanswered. Should University maintain a Code of Student Life? Should it accept Defense Contracts, and if so, which ones and on what grounds? And how will it relate to the educational purposes of the university? AND, of course, University has yet to explain satisfactorily the presence and function of ROTC.

The particular case of Sam Sloss presents an opportunity for all sectors of the University Community to voice answers to these questions; for students to demand, finally, an explanation of how University perceives its role, responsibilities, and limitations.

God and science

To the Editor:

Our scientists are in danger of absolutely destroying us and the world. Somewhere there must be a terrible lack of balance. We have to get back to moral values, and those are the only values that can harness safely the powers of science. It is not the nature of science to give man moral character, because if it were, we should be getting better all the time because certainly science is getting better.

Our pollution problems show you the dangers of a science that forgets the other part of what God has given us, which is the spiritual values. When we lose those, which are to me the eternal values, then we have lost the balance of life on this planet.

We Baha'is feel very strongly that, although the immediate future is dark, the distant future is bright, because we have fundamentally a spiritual concept of life and of this world, and we feel that God is not going to abandon His creature, Man.

Garfield for the Court

To the Editor:

Pres. Nixon is considering nominating Theodore Garfield to the Supreme Court now that G. Harrold Carswell was not confirmed to the post according to a source high in the administration.

In an exclusive telephone interview given Thursday April 9, Hal Regess, judicial advisor to Attorney General John Mitchell, said that Nixon has mentioned Judge Garfield's name as a possible nominee for the Supreme Court if congress continues to defeat Nixon's nominee's.

"Garfield exemplifies the moderate position the President feels is needed on the Supreme Court. Garfield's decision on the Paifner case reflects the current trend of 'Middle America' in rejecting the far out, the unconventional and the bohemianism in America created by the excesses of the Warren Court," said Regess.

Regess also mentioned that plaintiffs Garfield on the high court would give him a chance to correct the Warren Court's "butchering" of the Tinker case. Garfield ruled with the majority of the Iowa Supreme Court in denying the right of students to wear arm bands to protest the Vietnamese war. The United States Supreme Court later reversed the decision.

"The nomination of Garfield to the post should clear the air of talk about Nixon Southern Strategy. Garfield is after all a strong moderate from the midwest who has proven he can work well with and in the interest of college students."

March, Rally Top Moratorium Plans

Local Ad Hoc Moratorium Committee members have made final plans for Wednesday's Moratorium observances.

A second local group — Welfare Rights Organization — (WRO) has yet to complete its plans for the day.

According to Dee Norton, associate professor of psychology and Ad Hoc Committee chairman, the observances of the Committee will begin with a vigil from noon to 7 p.m. at the Iowa City Post Office, 28 S. Linn St.

At 7 p.m., according to Norton, a march and rally will begin at College Hill Park, in the 600 block of East Washington Street.

A petition protesting the war and military spending will be posted on a bulletin board at the vigil and the rally and will be sent to President Nixon after the observances, according to Norton.

Talks are also being scheduled at ten area high schools in connection with the Ad Hoc Committee's activities, according to Norton.

WRO — a group whose membership formally cooperated with Ad Hoc Moratorium Committee members during earlier Moratorium activities — broke away from the Ad Hoc Committee several weeks ago.

However, in a meeting this week, WRO members decided to cooperate in part with the Ad Hoc Committee plans, according to WRO Chairman Edyie Pilkington, 524 Ronalds.

Miss Pilkington said Friday WRO was planning to take part in the Ad Hoc Committee rally but would make signs stating its own views of the Vietnam war.

The original split in the two groups occurred several weeks ago, when Ad Hoc Committee members refused to include as a major part of Moratorium activities WRO's position that an end to the Vietnam war would mean more welfare money in the United States, Miss Pilkington said.

U of I College Of Pharmacy Fully Credited

The University College of Pharmacy has received full accreditation from the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education.

In a report to University Pres. Willard L. Boyd, the Council noted especially the College's "most sophisticated research, graduate and undergraduate professional instruction."

Louis C. Zopf, dean of the College, said the last review by the Council was in 1964.

Since then, the graduate and undergraduate enrollments have doubled. The Council also noted, "The amount of faculty research has increased materially, as has production in the industrial pharmacy, which has an important educational function beyond the service role."

The Council's report complimented the College for its scientific equipment — "some of the most sophisticated types" available. And it lauded the student-faculty ratio.

"In keeping with the increased enrollment," the report said, "both at the undergraduate and graduate levels, the size of the faculty has increased during recent years."

While the faculty exhibits a decided concern for scholarship and research, they definitely have not overlooked the undergraduate professional student. They appear to be aware of modern trends in curriculum planning. They have given considerable time to it and have cooperated with the student curriculum committee."

The importance of the undergraduate was stressed several times by the Council.

The report said, "While graduate education and research activity have come to the fore and are attracting attention outside the state, the backbone of the College has always been a solid undergraduate training geared principally to those entering general community practice in Iowa and neighboring states."

Area Enters The Season For Rabies

As the temperature increases, the area will be entering the rabies season, Sydney Schachtmeister, director of the Johnson County Health Department, said Thursday.

"Rabies is something we can't play with," he said. "It is dangerous, and if just one thing goes wrong, it could mean your life."

He said that if nipped by any animal, however slight the bite, a person should see a doctor as a precautionary measure against rabies.

Schachtmeister also said the animal should be reported to the county Health Department.

He said the animal should be kept alive for observation. This could prevent the necessity of going through the rabies shot series, if the animal proves not to be rabid, he said.

"Under no circumstances should the biting animal be shot or clubbed on the head," Schachtmeister said. "The animal's brain is the important area for the examination to determine whether the animal is rabid."

Nixon Charge Ires Senate

WASHINGTON — The Senate argued Friday about the Supreme Court, the South and election returns as two resolutions were introduced challenging President Nixon's charge of regional bias.

Behind the angry oratory: the political pressures of a campaign year, with 35 Senate seats at stake in the elections next Nov. 3.

"It may in fact be easier to change the Senate than to change the Supreme Court," said Sen. Paul Fannin, (R-Ariz.)

Sen. Albert Gore, (D-Tenn.) who seeks re-election, and who with three other Southerners voted against the Supreme Court nomination of G. Harrold Carswell, proposed that the Senate reject by resolution the Nixon accusation of bias.

His resolution terms the Nixon statement "an assault on the integrity of the Senate."

Sen. Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) introduced a resolution pronouncing it "the sense of the Senate that it is prepared to advise and consent to nominees for the Supreme Court from any section of the United States." Both resolutions were referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee headed by Sen.

James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) who strongly backed both Haysworth and Carswell.

UI Law Students Argue Case Before Iowa Supreme Court

By BRAD KIESEY

Four University law students argued their first cases before the Supreme Court of Iowa Friday afternoon.

The nine Iowa Supreme Court justices sat en banc at the College of Law for the annual oral argument competition, held in connection with Supreme Court Day at the University.

Mark Belz, L3, Iowa City, and James Nepple, L3, Vail, argued for the defendant in the case. Jane Fox, L3, Iowa City, and William Gould, L3, Iowa City, argued for the state. The two teams had been selected from four teams in a senior oral argument final competition held at the College of Law Tuesday night.

The argument in the case, Holles v. State of Iowa, was on an agreed statement of "facts" in fictional Middlesex county, Iowa, city of Westminster. The defendant had been convicted of using "obscene, lewd or profane language" on the telephone with intent to harass, threaten or annoy another person.

The defendant was alleged to have called the mayor of the community after the defendant's daughter was sent away from the city recreation center for wearing too short a skirt on the tennis courts there.

"You damn well better do something about it or I'll see that a hell of a lot of votes go against you next month," Holles was alleged to have told the mayor.

That statement served as the basis for the charge against Holles. On appeal the defendant did not deny that he made the statement.

Belz argued for Holles that the words "obscene, lewd and profane" were too vague to be included under the stringent standards for restrictions on freedom of speech. He also argued that the obscenity statute in question lacked the necessary rational relationship between the use of the profanity and threat of intimidation it sought to prevent.

Mrs. Fox argued for the state that "hell" and "damn" by dictionary definition indicated "irreverence toward God or holy things" and were therefore profane.

Gould said that although public officials must give up some rights to privacy in deference to the public's right to free discussion, they need not endure a more serious breach of common civility than a private individual. Further, he said, the statute removes a burden from public officials by protecting them from harassment and intimidation — not discussion — aimed at influencing their public behavior.

Council Discusses City Attorney Job

Mayor Loren Hickerson Friday listed six items he said were under investigation by committee looking into the possibility of hiring a full-time city attorney.

The committee, composed of local attorneys William H. Bartley, William Suellep, Edward Lucas, William Meardon and Phillip Leff, chairman, was appointed after several members of the Council expressed an interest in a full-time position because, they said, they thought it would cost the city less.

Councilman J. Patrick White, who says he thinks a full-time city attorney would be more economical and beneficial to the Council, said Friday that the committee was doing a "commendable" job.

The city presently employs a local lawyer, Jay Honohan, as a part-time city attorney. In a press release, Hickerson listed the following as being investigated by the committee:

- The present workload of the city attorney.
- The nature of the workload in terms of varying needs for legal training and experience.
- Reasonable salary and fee scales for various legal services as reflected in current law practice.
- Present and probable future city needs for specialized legal services, as compared with routine responsibilities of a city attorney in Iowa.
- Costs related to establishing various possible patterns for providing the legal services the city requires.
- Descriptions of roles that need to be filled in procuring adequate legal services.

The release said the Council had agreed with the approach being taken by the committee and had answered the questions of the committee concerning the city attorney's role in relation to the city.

Hickerson said he expected the final report by the committee in the next few weeks. The report will be submitted to the Council for further action.

Friday's meeting, called as an executive session by Hickerson, was the first committee confrontation with the Council since its appointment last month.

Unemployment in March Highest in Nearly 5 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment, climbing at the fastest rate in a decade to the highest level in nearly five years, rose to 4.4 per cent of the nation's work force in March. A total of 3.7 million Americans were out of work.

Total employment also increased — up 468,000 to 78 million — but not enough to balance off an unexpectedly big flood of new job seekers, said the government report Friday.

Most of the employment gain was in part-time workers, and the 230,000 rise in jobs was entirely among adults — mostly women — seeking full-time jobs, the Labor Department said. The average work remained low in the sluggish economy, it added.

A Democratic senator called the gloomy employment report "shocking." The AFL-CIO demanded a drastic change in White House policy to stop the rise, and a spokesman for President Nixon said his policies are not intended to increase joblessness.

"No level of unemployment is acceptable. As long as anyone is unemployed and looking for work we have unfinished business," said White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

The 4.4 per cent jobless rate was the highest since the same figure in August, 1965.

Hit the Dirt—

Iowa centerfielder Dave Krull dives back to first base ahead of an attempted pick-off toss Friday in the nightcap of the Hawks' doubleheader victory over Minot State. Krull had two hits in the second game.

Surprise! Spring Grid Drills Start

By MIKE SLUTSKY
Sports Editor

Ralph Miller has turned the tables.

Last winter, when Miller's basketball charges were making their rush at the Big 10 title, it was Iowa's bewildered football department which was taking much of the publicity away from the basketball team's efforts.

But now that Miller has left for Oregon State to become the head coach there — leaving the Iowa basketball scene in a state of shock — it is the football team which has been pushed out of the picture.

Going completely unnoticed this week because of Miller's resignation is the beginning of spring football drills, which start today at 3 p.m.

Football Coach Ray Nagel, beginning his fifth and probably most challenging season here, will welcome an 82-man squad to spring drills today. In this group are 18 seniors, 27 juniors and 36 sophomores — which includes 26 lettermen from last season's 5-5 team. (The ranks in class are where the players will stand next fall.)

After the turmoil in the football department during the winter, Nagel is looking for just a normal, peaceful spring. He and his seven-man staff's biggest task will be to find a suitable replacement for departed Larry Lawrence, and to come up with some adequate linebacks.

The Hawks seem well fixed at most of the other positions, having experience at the other spots with a fine group of up-coming sophomores ready to push the veterans for starting berths.

But the biggest chore for Nagel has to be in finding the signal-caller. There isn't a player on the squad who has taken a snap from center as a varsity collegian, although there are certainly several on the squad who appear to have the makings of major college quarterbacks.

No less than six candidates will try out for the quarterback job. They include senior Roy Bash, a brilliant prep signal caller from Belton, Mo., who has played a variety of positions at Iowa, and junior Alan Schaefer, who saw all of his quarterback duty last fall with the Hawkeye scout squad.

The other candidates are all sophomores. The group includes Kyle Skogman of Cedar Rapids, Frank Sunderman of Clarinda, Jeff Elgin of West Des Moines and Rich Wyatt of Chicago. Skogman and Sunderman were the primary quarterbacks for the freshmen last year, while Elgin and Wyatt played other positions.

"We'll give them all a good opportunity to prove themselves at quarterback," said Nagel. "Eventually we will move some to other positions."

Quarterback is the only position in the backfield in which the Hawks' will be lacking experience. Three regulars — wingback Kerry Reardon, tailback Denny Green and fullback Steve Penney — return, and with the return of two outstanding backs who were injured last fall, the backfield outlook is pleasant.

Star fullback Tim Sullivan missed the entire season after a motorcycle accident in the spring, and tailback Levi Mitchell was out for the final four games with a kidney ailment; suffered in the Michigan State game after getting away to a tremendous start.

In all, the Hawks return 15 starters from last year's team which finished in a fifth place in the Big 10. The defensive line appears to be a spot which the Hawks will have little trouble.

The Hawks' defense, which will switch to a four-man front this year, will feature veterans Layne McDowell and Bill Windauer at tackles and Dan McDonald and Jerry Nelson at ends.

Two others who may also play a prominent role in the Iowa defensive front are a 6-3, 230-pound sophomore Bill Rose, and massive, 6-5, 272-pound junior Wendell Bell. Bell was one of nine black players dismissed from the team last spring because of a boycott of opening day practice. Bell is one of three blacks involved in the boycott who was invited to practice this fall.

Key members of the secondary will be halfbacks Tom Hayes and All-Big 10 Craig Clemons, while Rich Salomon and Jerry Johnson have the inside tracks on the safety and a drotator spots. Ray Cavole, Tim Shelton and sophomores Mike Wending and Al Mathews will be pushing those players for starting berths.

There will be plenty of experimenting at linebacker. Veterans Dave Clement and Dave Brooks are the only experienced men at linebacker, and a group of sophomores — Isaac White, Mike Dillner, Buster Hoinkus and Tom Cabalka — will be tried there.

Ken Price, another of the returning black boycotters, will also be given a shot at a linebacking job. The 6-2, 200-pound senior from Houston was a defensive end his sophomore season.

Back on offense, there will be plenty of fine receivers for whoever does win the quarterbacking job.

Ends Ray Manning and Don Osby both return, and they teamed with Reardon and Green to give Iowa its top four receivers in 1969. Led by Reardon's 43 receptions for 738 yards and six touchdowns, the group totaled 105 catches for 1,499 yards and 11 scores.

The Hawks may do some shifting in the offensive backfield, however, and Reardon may wind up at quick end. Green and Osby would then move into Reardon's wingback spot, and Mitchell and sophomore flash Dave Harris would be the tailbacks.

The offensive line will undergo some changes. Quick guard Jeff Mickelson and center Alan Cassidy are the only starting returnees up front, although Chuck Legler, sidelined nearly the entire season with a leg injury, was a starter before being hurt. Legler will be a prime candidate for a starting role if his leg comes around sufficiently.

Top choices to replace departed All-Big 10 guard Jon Meskimen and tackles Paul Laaveg and Mel Morris are Kelly Disser, Jim Miller and John Mulder. High school All-America Craig Darling will also be battling for a starting spot in the line, along with juniors Lorin Lynch, Clark Malmer and Jim Kaiser.

There will be 20 spring drills between today and the end of spring practice, which concludes with the intrasquad game May 16.

Football Season Is Upon Us—

Schuette, Reid Blank Minot St., 2-0, 10-0

By GARY WADE

The Iowa baseball team raised its spring record to 6-9 Friday at Hawkeye Stadium, as senior hurlers Al Schuette and Bruce Reid fired 10-0 and 2-0 shutouts over Minot State.

The same two teams will meet in another doubleheader at 1 this afternoon. Iowa Head Coach Dick Schultz indicated that he would start sophomore Chet Teklinski in the first game and junior Bill Hager in the second.

Schuette, the Hawks' top left-hander, allowed the Beavers only three hits in seven innings while striking out eight and walking two.

Reid, the staff's ace right-hander, allowed five hits while striking out five and walking two. Both seniors raised their spring records to 1-2.

The two shutouts, along with Tuesday's whitewashing of Iowa State, ran the Hawkeye staff's scoreless-inning string to 26 and 20.

The Hawks were led at the plate by freshman catcher Jim Sundberg, who collected five hits in seven trips in the two games, knocking in two runs in the second game.

The Hawks used sacrifice flies to do their scoring in the 2-0 first win. All-America second baseman Gary Breshears led off the third inning with a single, stole second and moved to third on an overthrow. Clean-up hitter Bob Perkins plated Breshears with a long fly to center.

Freshman shortstop Ray Smith opened the fifth with a walk, moved to third on Breshears' second hit and scored on a fly to right, this time by first baseman Jim Cox.

The Beavers had no one reach second base against Schuette, who was helped out in the fourth inning by the Hawks' 13th twin killing of the year.

The Hawks unloaded their heavy timber in the second game, knocking out 13 hits — against three pitchers — 3 by Sundberg, who overtook Breshears for the team batting lead as the second sacker went hitless in five trips.

The Hawks managed one run in the first as centerfielder Dave Krull singled, stole second and scored on the first of Sundberg's hits.

Iowa batted around in the second inning as Cox singled, stole second and scored on an error after Smith doubled. Krull plated Smith with a fielder's choice, moved to third on Sundberg's second single, scoring on a fielder's choice to Bob Perkins, who knocked in three runs for Iowa.

The Hawks added a pair of runs in the fourth when Krull walked, again stole second, and crossed the plate on Sundberg's third hit. Sundberg scored on a double against the rightfield wall by Dave Blazin.

Iowa closed out its scoring with a four-run uprising in the fifth as Smith opened with a single, moved to second on a single by rightfielder Jim Shanahan, both scoring on a long single to right by Reid. Reid had a pair of hits as well as pitching the victory.

By JAY EWOLDT

Iowa has lost Head Coach Ralph Miller to the West Coast, but the Hawks hope to retaliate by signing two visiting California recruits who have never heard of Coach Miller.

It comes as no surprise that the visitors — James Speed and Elias Delgado — are basketball players and two of the top college prospects in the nation.

Speed and Delgado are Miller-type ballplayers who may play a crucial role in determining the success of the Hawks next winter and in winters to come.

Speed, an accomplished star at Imperial Junior College, has been one of the most highly sought-after junior college players in the nation, while Delgado has been a highly-recruited high school player on the West Coast.

When Miller resigned to leave for Oregon State, recruiting was expected to suffer, but not so in the case of James Speed and Elias Delgado.

"I never really heard of Ralph Miller," said Speed, "so it doesn't make a big difference to me because I don't know him." Delgado echoes Speed saying "My attitude won't change toward the new coach, since I haven't known either one of them."

Walt (Mac) MacCauslen, freshman graduate assistant coach, was forced into the role of a recruiter upon the loss of Miller and Lanny Van Eman. MacCauslen met Speed and Delgado in Des Moines Friday for a tour of the Iowa campus.

MacCauslen has helped scout Speed, who he called "a key for next year's club. Speed is a great passer and one-on-one player," said MacCauslen. "We've got to have him if we're to play our own style of ball next year."

Speed, at 6-7, played every position for Imperial Valley although he prefers forward. Imperial Valley went 14-17 in rugged California competition, but that did not stop Speed from averaging 24 points, 19 rebounds and four assists per game.

Speed has narrowed his selection of schools to four — Iowa, St. Francis, Northwestern and Montana — but said, "I might go somewhere else and I might not."

Speed may not be familiar with Ralph Miller-style ball, but said he likes Iowa because, "It's a Big 10 school, and went 14-0 so I figured it was worth considering."

Speed and Delgado will be joined this weekend by another recruit who is not so unfamiliar with Miller-style basketball. He is 6-7 Neil Fegebank, the All-State center from Paulina who led his team to 76 straight wins and three straight Class A state championships.

Delgado, a 6-6 forward from Chula Vista, Calif., led Castle Park to a 70-21 mark during his career.

Delgado was twice named most valuable player of the Metro League and was named first team All-California Interscholastic Federation his senior year.

Delgado plans to visit Kansas and Colorado, but said he will enroll at Iowa if he can meet the entrance requirements.

Delgado averaged 23 points and 19 rebounds per game this year while leading his team to a 23-7 record for second place in the conference. Like Speed, Delgado is extremely versatile in his performance and feels he will be able to play either forward or guard in college.

Recruits—Who's R. Miller?

Iowa Netters Top Purdue

Iowa's tennis team won its opening Big 10 meet of the season and ran its overall record to 4-1 Friday afternoon by thumping Purdue at Lafayette 6-1.

The Hawk netters won all the singles matches but one, a nod won the one doubles match which was completed. Rod Kubat and Ian Phillips teamed up to win the No. 3 doubles match, but darkness halted the No. 1 and 2 doubles matches before they could be completed. The Hawks led in both of the matches, which will be completed May 14 at the Big 10 meet.

Craig Sandvig, No. 3 singles player, was the lone Hawk casualty of the day. Sandvig lost a three-set match to Dick Cochrane, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5.

The Hawks will shoot for their second straight Big 10 victory in a meet at Illinois today.

Finkbine Ready! Iowa in Dual Meet

Iowa's golf team will be trying to open Finkbine Golf Course in the proper manner today when they host Augustana of Rock Island in a dual match.

Finkbine will be officially open for the season with the start of today's meet, which begins at 8 a.m. The tees will be reserved during the meet for the teams, but other golfers will be allowed on the course as soon as the teams are finished.

Iowa is 0-3 after its recent spring trip to Arizona and this will be the first match of the season for Augustana.

2 Tied at Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Gene Littler and Bert Yancey swept into a tie for the second round lead at 139 in the Masters golf tournament Friday, but it was a couple of diminutive foreigners who made the greatest gains on the tough Augusta National layout.
