A battle of至fighters— withe students, for Democratic Society, protest group, and the University’s ROTC, supervisory personnel—ended in the announcment yesterday of no charges against a female student involved in the flare-up at a ROTC flare drill yesterday evening.

An arrest was made by University Police of a ROTC student involved in the incident.

Campus Security Director William Money (right) and Lt. Kenneth Saylor (left, glasses) were surrounded by protesters Thursday night after a flare drill was made by an ROTC alarm. The incident occurred when the smoke-insignia worked on what was called an "emergency alarm".

Students Pose Major Threats Today
To Academic Freedom—Sidney Hook

By JUDY SCHULTZ
Daily Iowan Reporter

The major threats to academic freedom today lay in two forms. One is the political issue, and the other is recidivism on the part of some instructors.

The former is easy to identify. It is a matter of the right to that kind of education which holds and sustains the entire growth of freedom.

The latter is more subtle. It is a matter of the right to that kind of education which holds and sustains the entire growth of freedom.

These two threats are in the same category as the threats to academic freedom that exist in the United States today.

Academic freedom is the freedom of educators to express their opinions, to investigate, to teach, and to publish the truth as they see it, without unreasonable censorship by local, state, or national authorities.

The broader the net is cast the right becomes more difficult to maintain.

Hook advocates neutrality on the part of instructors for the reasons that he sets forth. He believes that instructors should not take any position on political issues; that they should not participate in political organizations.

This is not to say that instructors should not take positions on political issues; that they should not participate in political organizations.

Instructors are free to take whatever positions they wish on political issues.

They are free to express their opinions on political issues.

They are free to participate in political organizations.

The only requirement is that they do not do so in a way that would influence their students.

It is probably clear to even beginning sociology students that preparing and political power have little necessity of relationship to one another. That is,

is, that it is possible to be a egalitarian, totally unassuming person, showing publicly, and at the same time, standing up for one's interests. It is possible to have a good deal of status and prestige and yet be in possession of quite limited or even no power.

The situation in Washington is a good illustration of this. With the "law of power" completely out of work, with the military and its allies in the White House, and the people of Washington having been left with only a little more power than is necessary to decide how many gay paper clips to buy for government offices.

But something has to keep the people's "elected representatives" from running roughshod over the people. If it didn't, the people would have died out of a s now drift. The bright blue

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article attempts to put into writing the feeling of Ramona, Tim, Dan, and John, who are discussed in the article,
-who were arrested Tuesday for protesting to the police. The story is based on the authors' experience.
It is not our intention to be a full biography for each of the characters mentioned. The views expressed in this article are those of the authors, but may not necessarily be those of the Daily Iowan.

Sommers, Tim, Dan, and I had it all for a few moments, then things started to change. We went down there for the police who were right in the city. They said it was cold and we were citizen. Our action came from at least three different immediate sources.

The first source for our story ought not particularly the most impressive source came from our thoughts about the two main campaigns the Iowa Peace Action Committee (WPAC) had been working on. The first was meetings with the local radio stations.

Two stories had begun to be valued, aaiser, and instead of unimportant. To the red light. I am wondering

how it will be, don't,

Extended Cease-Fire Pondered by Sadat

By JAY EVOLUTION
Sports Writer

Sadat has called for a cease-fire and talks.

Sadat, who is in Europe for a two-week visit, reportedly plans to meet with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and President Yasser Arafat of Palestine. The talks are expected to take place in the coming days, with a possible end of the conflict as early as next week.

Sadat's decision to seek a cease-fire is seen as a major step in the Middle East peace process. The United Nations has been urging both sides to end the ongoing conflict and work towards a lasting solution.

Sadat's visit to Europe is also seen as an opportunity to strengthen Egypt's position in the international community. His talks with European leaders are expected to focus on a range of issues, including the conflict in the Middle East.

Sadat has been a vocal advocate for peace in the region and has repeatedly called for a peaceful resolution to the conflict. His efforts have been praised by many, including the United Nations, which has praised his commitment to peace.

Sadat's visit to Europe is expected to conclude on Sunday, after which he will return to Egypt to continue his efforts towards peace in the region.

Down the Tubes

The great theatrical tradition, the American epic, some ancient forgotten myth, has always been a part of our heritage. It is the hallmark of the afternoon televsion, as it has been for over a year. But here is "The Secret Storm"—as acting as a final, sad epitaph as fresh as yesterday's beer, as potent as alcohol, as the hallmark of afternoon television, as it has been for over a year. It has its "highs" and "lows"; the "highs" of this time are when the show announced the recent death of a father, his funeral and dinner with Doc.

Down the Tubes. This show starts by taking the name of the show and associating it with the thing it represents. The show starts with the name "Down the Tubes" and the idea of a father dying and a funeral. It then goes on to talk about the show's past and its future.
