Top Demo Group Asks Total Viet Withdrawal

WASHINGTON — The Democratic National Committee's top policy-making group voted Monday to call the Senate to order to consider the issue of whether to ask President Nixon to order a total Viet withdrawal from South Vietnam. The vote was made possible by the decision of Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., to put his amendment on the Senate floor to consider a total Viet withdrawal.

SST Funding Rejected

By Senate in 51-46 Vote

WASHINGTON — The Senate rejected federal funding of the superconducting supercollider Wednesday, with a vote of 51 to 46. The vote was close enough to need an amendment, but not close enough to be a majority.

The amendment was a move by President Ford to force a vote on the bill. The supercollider was defeated, but an amendment to increase the budget for the next fiscal year was approved, 51-46.

The administration has listed at sensitive places, such as the government buildings, a $4 million search for private critical to the nation. Other amendments were quashed, so the Senate was back to the original bill. The supercollider, which is expected to be operational by 1984, is a major ingredient in the government's defense plans.

One false move and somebody is dead...!

EDITORS' NOTE: The incident that Bill Bradley reflects on in the following article occurred in 1970 and happened nearly 40 years ago. Little has happened since that time. America would offer any hope that the efforts of the Iowa City police or the Iowa state legislature have changed. Bradley's piece is in the article that Bill was not meant to romanticize Norman Reed, not meant to portray him as a romantic, not meant to portray him as a tragic hero of the 1960s. In retrospect, it appears more volatile than it did when it happened. The events are near the end of the little-known story of the Iowa City police department's handling of the May Day incident. Bill Bradley is a professor of political science and a former legislator. He is the author of the book 'The Politics of Police Misconduct.'

In the spring of 1970, a high school biology teacher named Bruce Clark, a student of the free speech movement, organized a protest march in Iowa City. The march was peaceful, but the police department's response was violent. The resulting event became known as the May 4 Incident. In this article, Bill Bradley reflects on the inaction of the police department and the impact it had on the community.

In the 1970s, the Iowa City Police Department was under a cloud of suspicion following the May 4 Incident. The police department's handling of the event was widely criticized, and the community was left wondering what had happened.

The event began with a peaceful demonstration, but it quickly turned violent. The police, who were not prepared for the level of violence, fired on the crowd with rubber bullets and tear gas. Many of the protesters were shot, and several were injured. The police department's response was widely criticized, and the event became a symbol of police brutality.

In the years since the incident, the Iowa City Police Department has undergone significant changes. The department has implemented new policies and procedures to address the issues that were raised in the wake of the May 4 Incident.

Iowa Bill Requests Appropriate Officices

THE DAILY IOWAN--A move that shapes the Iowa legislature is the Iowa House of Representatives Committee on Appropriations.

The committee is responsible for allocating funds to various state agencies. One of its primary functions is to recommend changes to the state budget. These changes could include increases in funding for certain programs or departments, or decreases in funding for others. The committee's recommendations are then considered by the full House of Representatives, and eventually the Senate, before being signed into law by the Governor.

Sailing Lure: An Extension of Man

BY JAY ENSLOT

Sports Lure

There is no way within the terms of rules of Iowa, but sailing in rightfully belonging one of the graces of the Iowa City vicinity. The growth of the University of Iowa Sailing Club is without a doubt the best evidence of the popularity of a sport not usually frowned upon by the average person.

The Sailing Club, located in 1939 on a 14.3-foot boat, is composed of the students of the university. The facilities of the Sailing Club are the best in the state of Iowa, and the members become aware of the sport.

For sailing in an area where one's boat was long thought to be a necessity for such sports as Club wind sailing, the Sailing Club is the only one that will show a profit and get out of the clubs' money on buying a boat.

Another Iowa sailor, Fred Eckerd, will be in charge of the upcoming tournament.
