Laotian Campaign Ends in Retreat

SAIGON (AP) — Thieu regime troops ended their Laotian drive Wednesday and retreated into home territory, leaving a few hundred marines behind temporarily to keep North Vietnamese artillery off a ridge within easy range of U.S. outposts in South Vietnam.

American bombers and helicopter gunships intercepted a pursuing column of North Vietnamese tanks and knocked out 12 just short of the border, the U.S.

just short of the border, the U.S. Command announced Thursday.

In other development:

- The Laotian Liberation Front command said the invasion against the Ho Chi Minh trail ended in "complete defeat" and 15,400 U.S. and Saigon troops were "put out of action."
- North Vietnamese called off Thursday's session of the Paris peace talks in protest against U.S. air attacks on its territory.

Lt. Col. Do Viet, spokesman for Thieu's command, said Hotel 1, the last fire base in Laos 2½ miles from the border, was abandoned and the 2,000 troops manning it marched across the hills into South Vietnam.

American helicopters lifted out the artillery. A few hundred marines were left on a nearby ridge to prevent North Vietnamese gunners from using it to shell bases in South Vietnam. Spokesmen said they would be pulled out within two days.

The presence of the marines did not prevent other North Vietnamese from opening up again on Khe Sanh, the main U.S. support base near the border during the Thieu forces' 45-day operation in Laos. Field reports said the shelling caused no casualties or damage.

Khe Sanh has been shelled for the last 10 days.

American C130 cargo planes landed at Khe Sanh between the barrages bringing in fuel and ammunition for units still operating in the northwest corner of South Vietnam. They took out the base equipment no longer needed.

SST Funding Rejected By Senate in 51-46 Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rejected further federal funding of the supersonic transport Wednesday, agreeing with the House in a decision that could doom U.S. development of the aircraft.

The vote was surprisingly decisive 51-46 with two ailing senators absent and an opponent of the plane delayed by a snowstorm.

The action was a severe setback for President Nixon who personally lobbied uncommitted and wavering senators almost to the final minute.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said before the vote the White House pressured the fence-sitters "in every way available."

The Senate vote — on whether to spend $134 million through the end of June to continue development of two SST prototypes — followed a similar action by the House last week which voted 215-204 to halt federal funding.

Although that seemed certain to kill any chance for direct federal aid to the Boeing and General Electric which have been building the prototypes for 10 years, the future of an American SST remained uncertain.

The administration has hinted at alternative plans, such as a government backed search for private capital here and abroad. Other possibilities are government-guaranteed loans or creation of a quasi-governmental corporation such as Comsat which operates an international satellite communication system.

But administration officials have not said whether they will be willing to renew the battle over environmental effects versus national prestige and jobs to win $235 million already requested for the next fiscal year.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) the leading SST supporter because of jobs at stake in his home state, declared after the vote, "The program is over."

Jackson said no money can now be spent when current appropriations run out March 30 and he knows of no way the project can be revived.

The only question, he said, how much it will cost to pay off the contractors. During floor debate he estimated this could reach $200 million.

Nineteen Democrats voted for the SST along with 27 Republicans. Thirty-four Democrats and 17 Republicans voted against it. Both Iowa senators voted against it.

The funds for the SST were contained in a $7.2-billion transportation money bill which the Senate promptly passed 94-1 with Sen. Russell Long (D-La.) casting the negative vote.

The Senate rejected the SST 51-42 last December while the House voted twice to go ahead with a 10-year program that has cost $866 million and is two-years short of completion.

"If you vote this down you will be making a mistake you will regret for years to come," Jackson declared before the climatic vote.

He said it would cripple U.S. prestige and the country's aero-space industry and put 13,000 workers out of a job immediately with thousands more later.

Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) the leader of SST opposition, said the Senate vote probably assures no American plane will be built for at least four or five years.

By that time, he said "we may have made progress in solving the very serious environmental problems."

Before the vote, Proxmire rejected all the arguments about jobs and national prestige.

Proxmire told newsmen that had the SST survived, there was a possibility he would have run for the presidency on a platform of opposition to that and other federal expenditures he considers wasteful.

"The SST has not survived and consequently the issue is gone and I'm very happy," Proxmire said smiling broadly.

UI Student Group Pickets Store In Firing Hassle

A small group of University of Iowa students calling itself "Students for Fair Business Practice" picketed Heep Big Beef, 117 South Clinton Street, between 11:30 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. Wednesday.

The protest was due to the firing of six students last month, allegedly without sufficient reason.

Mike Mayfield, A4, one of the six fired, said that on Feb. 16, the six were handed their pay checks and told they were no longer employed. Mayfield said his employers cited their wish for a "complete turnover in personnel" as reason for the firings.

At an employe-management meeting prior to Feb. 16, according to Mayfield, the owners specifically told the employes their jobs were secure.

Mayfield stated that at Wednesday's picketing one owner threatened court action against the group.

"Students for Fair Business Practices" was organized to inform the public of places in Iowa City that "rip-off" students, Mayfield said.

Top Demo Group Asks Total Viet Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic party's top policymaking group voted unanimously Wednesday to call for total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina by the end of 1971.

The Democratic Policy Council's action goes beyond that taken by Senate Democrats recently in calling for total withdrawal by a fixed date before the current congress ends in January 1973.

In addition, it sharpens political lines between Democrats and the Nixon administration.

The resolution calls on the administration to announce that all American forces will be withdrawn by the end of 1971 and urges Congress to enact legislation barring U.S. funds for the war after Dec. 31.

It thus puts the council on record in favor of the proposal rejected 55 to 39 by the Senate last August, whose chief sponsors are Sens. Mark O. Hatfield (R-Ore.) and George S. McGovern (D-S.D.).

McGovern, a council member, is the only announced candidate so far for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

Some 68 of the 100 Council members attended the all-day meeting. They also adopted a women's rights amendment introduced by author Gloria Steinem but deferred action on the economy and other issues.

The Vietnam statement was developed by a committee chaired by former Ambassador W. Averell Harriman. The language calling for enactment of the so-called Vietnam Disengagement Act was proposed by the Rev. Joseph Duffey, national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action and unsuccessful Democratic Senatorial candidate from Connecticut in 1970.

It was accepted by Harriman and the entire package was adopted without dissent.

Duffey and Steinem told reporters the action demonstrates the change in the Democratic party since 1968 when it rejected an effort by antiwar forces to call for an end to bombing of North Vietnam.

The statement charges, "The administration's policies offer the prospect of endless war" although "The overwhelming majority of the American people favor a total American withdrawal in 1971."

"There should be a firm, unequivocal declaration by the government that all American forces will be withdrawn by the end of this year," the statement said. "An announcement of complete withdrawal this year should be used to negotiate the safe withdrawal of our troops and the speedy release of our men who are prisoners of war."

The women's rights proposal calls for equal status for women in positions of responsibility, such as keynote speaker and chairman, at the 1972 convention.

Special Education Problems Topic of Local Council

By LORRIE PIACENZA
Daily Iowan Reporter

The recent education tax freeze, new programs for special education, the need for special education teachers and an attack on the state special education program by Richard Martin Radl (D-Linn) were all topics of discussion at a Council for Exceptional Children (C.E.C.) meeting held Wednesday night in the Union Michigan Room.

The tax freeze bill, House file 121, states that the tax monies from local taxation for education will remain the same at the district level, except for special education projects. Additional tax money can be used for new projects, but cannot be used to hire additional administrative personnel," said guest speaker Clifford E. Howe, professor of education and chairman of the Department of Special Education.

"Special education is allowed a 5.3 per cent growth factor," he continued, "which means the school board has the option of initiating a tax increase of 5.3 per cent for new special education programs."

Asked how much power the local board has to start or cut classes in special education, guest speaker Myron Rodee, special director of Joint-County System in Cedar Rapids Special Education, answered, "The pressure against this kind of action would have to come from the parents or their lawyers advocating for the child at the local level."

"It's not reasonable to assume that the state will go around and look for violations," Howe added.

Hazel Turk, a teacher at Pine School, who was in the audience, objected to the notion of child advocacy:

"It doesn't seem fair that parents of handicapped children have to go and buck a school board to get their children an education. Parents with normal children don't have to do this."

Turk suggested that since C.E.C. was a fairly substantial power group, it could lobby for changes in the advocacy system.

Other interests of special education were also brought up, the chief one being the "non-categorical classroom."

"Lower functioning kids need special classes, while higher functioning ones would do all right with a regular teacher," Rodee said.

"These children are the mildly mentally retarded, the ones with mild learning disabilities, or who are emotionally disturbed or culturally disadvantaged," Howe added. "The focus is no longer on what is wrong with the kid, but what's wrong with the school he or she is in or the teacher he or she has."

"A special education student is better off in an institution than in school," said Radl Sunday on the television program "Eye on Iowa." The program had been viewed by some of the members of C.E.C. and it was widely agreed that Radl was "sadly misinformed." A letter-writing campaign and an appearance by Rodee on the program May 16, were suggested as ways to make C.E.C.'s viewpoint known.

About four units involving several hundred American troops have moved out of Khe Sanh. Preparations were made to destroy facilities there after the several hundred troops remaining are pulled out within the next three weeks.

Besides the shelling, the NLF ambushed American forces in South Vietnam along Highway 9, the main route into Laos.

An American engineer unit was caught in an ambush, and was reported to have stalled more than 100 vehicles as its lead vehicle lay burning across the road. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Associated Press correspondent Holger Jensen reported from the area that two companies of North Vietnamese troops — about 120 men — had slipped into South Vietnam to join NLF units in harassing attacks along Highway 9 between Lao Bao at the frontier and Khe Sanh.

Harassing attacks were reported along the highway on both sides of Khe Sanh, and there were scattered clashes between U.S. and North Vietnamese troops.

Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported from the northern front that three U.S. helicopters were shot down Wednesday by the NLF. Five Americans were killed.

U.S. intelligence sources said the North Vietnamese were repairing parts of the trail cut by Thieu's forces and were rebuilding at Sepone, the supply hub 25 miles from the South Vietnamese border.

In Washington, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said the aim was to disrupt logistics and supplies and by the time a final assessment can be made in the fall "this will prove out to be a very important operation."

Laird conceded that his troops ended the drive sooner than planned because of "the tremendously vicious and violent reaction on the part of the North Vietnamese." The South Vietnamese task force in Laos at the peak was 22,000 men, and in the final phases of the withdrawal field report said it was outnumbered 2 to 1.

About one-fourth of the task forces was knocked out by Saigon account. The command listed 1,146 troops killed, 245 missing and 4,235 wounded.

The Saigon command said 13,668 North Vietnamese troops were killed and vast stores of food and munitions were seized or destroyed. U.S. field officers consider the claims of NLF dead are greatly exaggerated.

The U.S. Command supported the Laotian operation with air power and it was costly, with 89 helicopters lost, 51 Americans killed, 28 missing and 78 wounded. Many other helicopters were damaged or downed but recovered.

Mark IV Housing Complex Opens Next Week

Mark IV, Iowa City's first low rent housing project, will open April 1, and will be available to university married students.

Mark IV is an apartment complex composed of 248 units, 32 of which will open April 1. The remaining units will open in phases.

Mark IV began when Robert J. Bartelt, a housing consultant from Chicago, took on Iowa City's need for low income housing, took his plans to Sharm Sheuerman of Scheuerman-Richardson Realtors, and began work with Scheuerman to get a sponsor and government aid for the housing project.

The owner of Mark IV is Spa/Redco, Inc. of Chicago. However, according to Scheuerman, the program is financed mostly by the federal government under section 236 of the Housing Act. The project will cost $3.8 million.

Scheuerman said Mark IV is not just for low income families. Applicants for Mark IV may have a maximum income of $5,100 for a family of four, opening up the project to medium income families not eligible for the Iowa City Leased Housing Program.

The Mark IV project is located between Coralville cutoff road and West High School. It consists of 31 buildings with eight apartments in each building. The buildings are varied with three different types of architectural designs.

Also present will be a community building including maintenance space, an office, recreation facilities, and a laundry room.

Rent for Mark IV apartments will be from $108 for a one-bedroom apartment to $177 for a four-bedroom apartment, Scheuerman said. All utilities are included in these costs.

The project, according to present plans, will be a 700-unit complex. The units now under construction are the first phase of the complex.

'One false move and somebody is dead...'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The incident that Bill Brashler reflects on in the following article is not a recent one; in fact, it happened nearly a year ago. Little has happened in that time, however, that would offer any hope that the attitudes of the Iowa City police or the Nixon administration have changed. Brashler says in a preface to the article that it is not meant to romanticize Norman Fischer or any other individual. Fischer's words, he says, "serve only to mirror the individual thoughts prevailing within a crowd as it walks toward a police station in the year 1970." Brashler notes that the police appeared to have no strategy or procedure with which to deal with the students. "They shot first, investigated later, they arrested first, figured out charges when convenient. The police reacted capriciously and viciously at a moment's notice, with guns instead of common sense," he says. The year is now 1971 and little has changed. Those same men who sent American youth into Cambodia to kill Asians and to be killed themselves, those Iowa City policemen who shot at black students walking down a street in Littletown, America, are all still in power. It is getting warm again and May 4 and May 6 draw closer. The columns of this page are open to the thoughts of those policemen who leveled guns at the students of the University of Iowa — black and white alike. Brashler says, "Maybe they will change their heads when they have seen the whites of our eyes." Maybe. Read on.

By BILL BRASHLER

Of all the paragraphs written about last spring's chaos in Iowa City, not one mentioned the fact that someone came incredibly close to being killed. And that someone would have been as innocent as any one of the four victims at Kent State.

One incident in particular stands out. In retrospect it appears more volatile and more vicious than it did when it happened. It was an incident that capped off the long week of crowds and police lines, and one which found the Iowa City police more trigger-happy and unprepared than at any other time.

Bruce Clark, a sophomore from Iowa City in the liberal arts college, and Norman Fischer, a graduate from Pennsylvania in the Writers' Workshop, didn't even know each other before that day, the Friday of Cambodia Week. Fischer had wandered onto the Pentacrest like hundreds of others to listen to the plethora of pleadings from the steps of the Old Capitol. He listened like most of the rest of us then, half out of conscience, half out of boredom.

...it's sunny, the sun catches the pillars, the bronze dome of the Old Capitol, it filters through the trees very delicately and some people lean out of the buildings all around and some walk by and some stand way back in the crowd that is forming, curious but not knowing just what to do about it. At this point in that afternoon Bruce Clark comes up to the mike. He's a little too tall for it, leans over and speaks professionally into it, his voice clear, well-modulated. He's wearing a pair of brown chinos, a sports shirt, horn-rimmed glasses and looks like the class president. He's not. He talks and I begin to listen...

Clark commanded attention because he spoke of an incident which held more potential than anything else that had happened up to that point. All week the milling crowds in the streets and on the Pentacrest had only frustration and the shock over four murders four hundred miles away to keep them agitated. They desperately needed a cause, a provocation, an incident which would make the abstract struggle a personal, local horror at which to react.

The broken glass on Iowa Avenue, the police arrests, the show of force which occurred Tuesday and Wednesday nights had only served to build the chaos and resentment. It waited now to crest. Willard Boyd gave it his level best by ordering some 200 Pentacrest campers arrested on Thursday night. Yet even that act did not seem repressive, instead it came off as being frightfully stupid and misinformed. It served only to parallel the general state of affairs across the country, and it brought about a reaction of ennui rather than outrage.

It was the Boydian mentality, that fundamental Richard Nixon pomposity which grieved like Pontius Pilate over the blood of the kids in Ohio while it condemned thousands of others just like them in Cambodia, that piqued those who spoke into the microphone that Friday afternoon. It was a pathetic yet remote horror, and no one could justify the breaking of glass in Iowa City to atone for it.

Yet Bruce Clark didn't speak of such things. He spoke instead of an incident, honest to goodness, in which a group of black students were shot at by Iowa City Police. It had happened the night before as the blacks walked by the windows of Herteen and Stocker's jewelry store. A patrol car drove up and fired what they called warning shots at the blacks. Some of them ran, others were pinned down and taken into custody. The police accused them of breaking and entering, a charge which had no validity and was later changed to disorderly conduct. The police said nothing about the warning shots which were fired, probably assuming such was common procedure for those guilty of disorderly conduct. Yet the guns had been pointed in the eyes of the blacks; one bullet punctured the jewelry shop's window about six feet up from the sidewalk.

As Clark railed about the incident, it was announced that a contingent of black students would soon come forth with a statement of their own. Later a group of around 50 walked starkly onto the steps of the Old Capitol, their faces hatefully deadpan, looking holes into the audience while their spokesman recapped the incident. He proceeded to condemn not only the police but everyone involved with the week's events. "You continue to stage this carnival freak show," he said, "and manage only to bring down more wrath upon black people and warning shots fired at our heads." He said this whole mess was white's problem, the blacks were not interested, just concerned with trying to cope with their own day-to-day problems.

Then the blacks walked off, as slowly and impassively as they had come. But they had made their case very clear. Wisely, Clark seized the moment, realizing that it was changed, more so than at any time before.

"We're standing here doing nothing," he said. "We're wasting time when the pigs have already shown us where they stand. Racism is part of this thing, it's the fabric of the whole society. We've got to move to end it. We've got to show solidarity with these black students."

These were fighting words, words the crowd could respond to with something other than passive compliance. Even the semi-interested like Norm Fischer were now receptive.

...there is a little buzz in the crowd that does not come from the trees and suddenly everyone is talking. Then Clark is back on the mike and says he is going to march on the Civic Center and demand an answer to this charge. He says he wants to know what went on, that the police should answer for their action. He's going right now, who's with him? Now, of course, I am all ears and finally awakened all the way. Because, like I say, I do not like racism, I get excited about racism, racism pisses me off like Zeno's Paradox. I am all set to march to the station, and march I will, no matter what. There is such a thing as courage which is not courage at all but sheer will. You make up your mind to do something, in an instant, for it is always in an instant, and you do it. You march, I march, with maybe 50 other people and led by Clark...

The crowd was more like two to three hundred in number, for the Pentacrest nearly emptied behind Clark. It was, by no stretch of the imagination, a hostile or incensed migration. Instead, most of the marchers were simply interested, curious at what might happen, willing to stroll down the street in the spring sunshine. There could be no doubt about the legitimacy of the black's gripe, for those black, glowering eyes had a fearful, uncompromising honesty about them. So the crowd moved, and its movement seemed to give it portent, ominously so, like water, or anger, swirling into a drain.

...we march down Clinton and turn toward the civic center. But soon we have to slow down as more and more people begin to follow us. There is rib-cracking excitement in the air because everyone senses that now somebody is actually going to do something. There is so much bald fear of the police that any action whatever occasions oohs and aahs from the crowd. Because this is right now, today, in Iowa on a day in May when God in his disinterested goodness blesses us — cops and crooks alike — with his sun. Yet this is a police state, a mad state, and we are all afraid. We read the papers like everyone else.

But there is a carnival spirit, too. Everyone in the line is a comrade. I see a fellow walking beside me on a crutch who sings and fumes and grunts and hollers as he hobbles along. I want to say look, break my leg, I'll hobble, you walk erect. I'm nothing and my lousy life would be made only rosier by a kind act as that. And we are all everyone lovers then. And on we march...

Bruce and Carmen Clark begin a chant and many take it up, none louder than me, the racist who hates and despises racism more than anything. END RACIST SHOOTINGS END RACIST SHOOTINGS END RACIST SHOOTINGS. There is a great comfort in the saying of it, the hearing of the other voices all around, the knowing, at least, that all is reduced to this, that life, right now, is the simple, that single minded, that pure. The goal is only to END RACIST SHOOTINGS damn it, and be done with it. And on we march...

On Washington Street, the marchers stretched from the Burger Chef to the boarded windows of Herteen and Stocker. Though Clark and others chanted at the front, there was only the silence of walking at the rear. The single most significant characteristic of the crowd was its spontaneity, a phenomenon which in some ways worked to its disadvantage.

No one had any way of anticipating this crusade, not its leaders, nor its target. In any event, the police were probably alerted only minutes before they could see the first few heads of the crowd. One can only imagine the frenzy which followed. For only a few nights earlier the Civic Center had been besieged by a crowd of similar size, a crowd which lobbed rocks like mortars through the plate glass, a crowd which ebbed and flowed menacingly toward the police lines in a game of cat and mouse.

One can only call to mind the hordes of police cowering beneath the shelling of rocks during the previous nights if he is to contemplate the reaction inside the Civic Center on that Friday afternoon. The aura surrounding the events was similar if not identical, bruise for bruise, regardless of how unarmed the group was as it advanced down Washington Street. The stage was again set. The police had little idea of what it was all about this time, but they were certain of the fact that they, the kids, were coming again.

Yet there was not a large number of police on hand. None of them was dressed in riot gear as in previous nights. They instead wore their cotton-thin, parking-ticket-giving blue uniforms. Two stood at the front of the civic center with shotguns, a few more guarded parked cruisers by the side entrance, an unknown number of other, some in plainclothes, waited inside.

...when we get to the Civic Center we see police to the left of us at the side entrance, police to the right of us at the main entrance. There is a small moment of panic, a second of frozen air. Clark turns to me and says, "Which entrance do you think we ought to use?" I hesitate not an instant. "Front one, hell, we ought to walk right up there."

So we go up the stairs, we, me and Bruce, single-minded and hating racism worse than almost anything there is to hate in this world. We know that these same guns we see before us took shots at our brothers under the skin. We are mad and want to express ourselves dramatically and not take bullshit from anyone or quiet arguments, teeth-pulling nothingness, and crap. Up the steps we go, the police do not move a muscle. There is hardly time in all this quickness to notice anywhere but deep inside the brain that these two men we face are not in this moment human. They stand staunchly gun-poised, not human but just a doorway tending toward the impenetrable.

Up the stairs we go, Clark first. Up the stairs walking quickly, the two of us, wanting to get past them and get inside and not be held back out of our own police station. Then the inhuman door springs to action like the breach of the quickest rifle you can name and grabs Clark, begins butting him hard in the head with the gun. The two of them jump him, mercilessly beating, not restraining but having a field day battering his poor soft brains, their eyes darting and flashing. I am behind, watching a brother being beat, seeing the blood of it. I figure I can wrest from them, maybe hold them off and call it a stalemate for now, the point being made.

But it is not to be so. For as I grab Clark by the back of the shirt there is the vacuum-like sensation of doors being opened and hordes of blue rushing out. Instantly I am blinded, my spectacles crash to the ground, I feel the white-hot burn of mace on my face. I am crazy with anger and I hear Clark screaming...

The two patrolmen guarding the front of the civic center did not wait for Clark and Fischer and the rest of the crowd to try to get past them. Instead they rushed Clark as he strode for them, and in a sudden flurry of pushing and garbled obscenities, they wrestled him to the ground. They made no attempt to refrain from using the butts of their shotguns in subduing him. That is perhaps what drew Fischer into the melee. He instinctively grabbed for Clark, trying to pull him free yet at the same time identifying himself, in the eyes of the police anyway, with the struggle.

The entire crowd surged quickly around the chaos, many at the front screaming ferociously at the two policemen. This only served to bring more police, plainclothesman and the like, as well as reporters and photographers and anyone else in the civic center out onto the steps.

By this time the larger of the two policemen was straddling Clark while the other wrestled with Fischer. The one atop of Clark made an issue of keeping the rest of the crowd at bay, which he did by pointing his shotgun into their faces. This did little but fill photographers' lenses, however, for most of those in the forefront of the crowd were helplessly smarting from the abundance of MACE which someone had sprayed widely about.

As soon as the incident started, it ended. The police hustled Clark and Fischer up the steps and into the center before most of the crowd could get close enough to see what was happening. In the shouting and threats that followed, no one could summon up enough courage to finish what Clark and Fischer had begun.

Likewise, no one knew what was happening to them inside the building. The crowd only saw the re-emergence of the two gun-toting policemen, their shotguns still pre-eminent. The larger policeman was shaking so much he could hardly hold onto his weapon. He leered at the crowd like a defiant prize fighter, yet his right hand continued to shake so that he went back into the civic center and later emerged without the gun. But that was now beside the point, he had gotten his man.

...we are rough-housed, hurled like baggage up the stairs and through the door. I notice two detectives, plain clothes, who are in on it. One's really crazy-dangerous, a red-faced man, medium height, red hair, maybe 35 or 40, whose mad as hell and screaming at the top of his lungs. He's taking terrific pleasure in yanking at my hair and hitting me on the head with some kind of club when we are past the doorway and such brutality is now possible. There are two on either side of me, pummeling me as I shout, "Okay, all right, damn it, I'm not going to fight you. I'm non-violent, dammit, cut it out, get your hands off me!" And I am answered, "Sure you're non-violent. We'll show you some non-violence, we'll show you..." and I am pummeled and hair-pulled.

When I am thrown in jail Clark is already there. I'd forgotten about him as all this has been totally out of context. I've not been arrested, nothing, there is no reality to all of this. Then I see Clark's bloody face and remember. We ask for bandages and a doctor but we get none. We spend the night in jail and are fed only because Carmen gets us hamburgers...

Because of the relatively quick dispersal of the crowd from the civic center and back to the harmless verbiage of the Pentacrest, most felt the incident to be closed. Everyone, that is, except those who were to have anything to do with Clark and Fischer's release. The prevailing temperament of the Iowa City Police department made it extremely difficult for the procedures of arrest and bail to be carried out in a calm and orderly manner.

After the four blacks had been arrested the previous night, those who went to the police department to post bail for them were immediately arrested. The same thing happened to those who went to post bail the following morning for Clark and Fischer.

The nerve ends within the civic center were frayed so badly after the incident, that almost no one could calmly recognize friend and foe, safety or harm. When Mary Carter, a member of the faculty of the Writers' Workshop, and Alan Lew, a teaching assistant, went to the police department that night to see about gaining the release of Fischer they quickly became a part of the chaos.

Carter was told that Fischer could not be released until he was formally charged and bail was set. She then called Police Judge Marion Neely. Neely listened to her plea and replied that he couldn't set bail until he had more facts about the disruption. Neely also added that he felt it common knowledge that people from the Writers' Workshop were a large cause of all the trouble.

Carter reiterated Fischer's innocence to the judge, vainly trying to get him, if nothing else, out of jail. Upon hearing this Neely asked her, "Well, if he is so innocent, what's he doing in jail?" Judge Neely did promise, however, to call Carter back within an hour.

Carter and Lew waited in the civic center's lobby, watching the armed guard pace in front of the entrance. Finally Lew left to go to the men's room. While he was away, the lobby filled with rushing, shouting policemen. Apparently someone had put a smoke bomb in a bathroom. When Lew unknowingly came back from his journey, he was accosted and ordered to leave the center. He threw up his hands in puzzlement and left.

When Carter complained to an officer, he told her to sit down or she would be put under arrest. Finally someone found the smoke bomb and things returned to a relative calm.

After 45 minutes had elapsed, Carter went to the police counter to inquire about her call. She was then told by the same officer to sit down or be put under arrest. She asked under what charge. She was told that of disobeying an officer.

Carter then said, with all the punch she could muster, "I don't want to sit down."

The officer jerked her over to a rug and said, "Take one foot off that rug and you'll find yourself in a jail cell."

By this time she was sufficiently angry and frustrated to walk to the police desk despite the officer's order. He walked after her, grabbed her, dragged her five-and-a-half foot frame across the lobby, and dumped her out of the building onto the concrete steps outside. Carter landed on her knees, her purse spilling its contents everywhere.

The armed guard then approached her, pointed his gun in her face and asked the other officer if she was under arrest. The officer said no, that she was just leaving.

After a few curt words with the officer, Carter left. She was not hurt badly by the policeman; though her ribs became black and blue from the tussle, she was only insulted and unnerved.

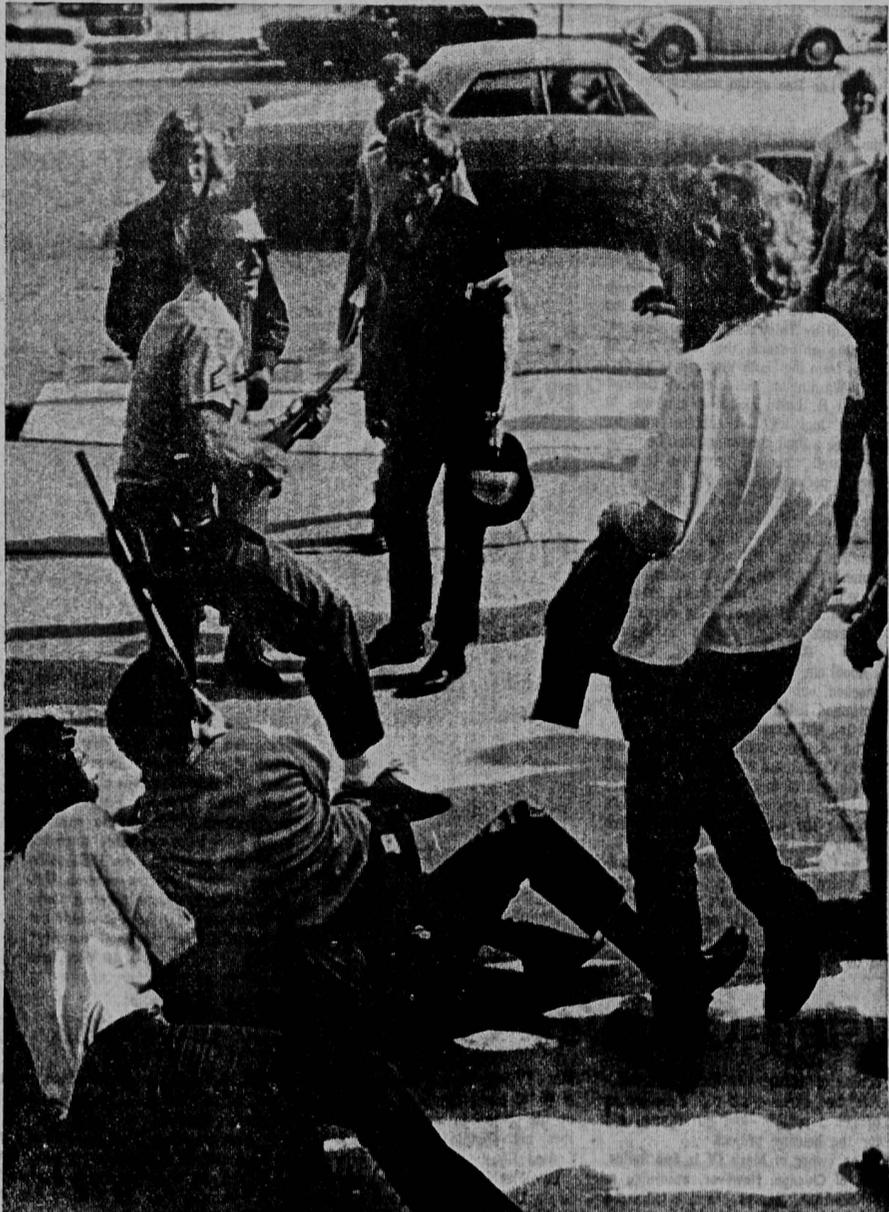

She still becomes unnerved talking about the incident. "If someone had attempted a confrontation at any point during that time, they would have been badly injured or killed," she said.

"If someone like me could get it — and I'm establishment-looking — what would have happened to someone looking like a hippie?"

The same thought flashed through Norman Fischer's mind at the height of his confrontation with the Iowa City Police. He was struck by the overwhelming sensation of being caught in a machine which had no real knowledge or control over itself. All in the flash of a moment, in the lazy sun of a single week in May when no one was really sure of black or white, truth or illusion. He realized it at the point of a gun, just before it was too late.

...they are pointing trampling shotguns at the people who stand not a foot from them. This is when I calm down. Because I know that one false move and somebody is dead, blown apart, a hole the size of all the Bronx. The big muscles still push against the softest parts of my back, they still hurt. The policemen's faces are still no mere human than total fear and total force...

The next day Clark and Fischer were set free after posting the $100 bail. The blacks had been freed in similar fashion, all for the required $100. They still have not yet been tried for their crimes, and of course, they have not recovered their bail money. But they are all alive, alive enough to try to make sense of it all.

This photograph, compliments of the Des Moines Register, was taken in front of the Civic Center last May when Bruce Clark (under policeman and Norman Fischer (on the ground behind policeman) and other students attempted to protest the arrest of several black men.

Iowa Bill Requests Appointive Offices

DES MOINES (AP) — A move to change in a constitutional amendment bill now before the Senate.

The original constitutional amendment proposition would extend from two to four years the terms of the top state elected officials. Included would be governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, auditor, attorney general and treasurer.

Dayan Says Guerrilla Kin Being Exiled

JERUSALEM, Israel (LNS) — Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan admitted recently that 29 families of suspected Arab guerrillas living in the occupied Gaza Strip are being held in exile in the Sinai Desert.

Dayan denied accusations that the detainees were being held in concentration camp conditions but acknowledged that 160 men, women and children had been held for over nine weeks in Abu Zneima, an abandoned manganese Port on the Gulf of Suez.

Dayan said the exiles are part of a policy designed to deny guerrilla fugitives "aid, shelter and comfort" afforded by their families. And he promised that the families would be released — as soon as the fugitive suspect is either killed or captured by the Israelis.

The first exiles were sent to Abu Zneima in mid-January, soon after the Israelis began a major crackdown on the growing resistance to their occupation of the Gaza Strip. At its height, the crackdown included a 24-hour curfew on the Shati refugee camp.

So far the new policy has not been a roaring success. Israeli official statistics recorded 73 guerrilla actions during the nine weeks before the crackdown began Jan. 3 and 72 in the nine weeks following.

The other odor

Even bathing every day can't stop it. Feminine odor starts internally, and no amount of bathing can remove it. Soap and water simply can't reach the area where the odor starts.

That's the reason you need Norforms... the second deodorant! These tiny internal suppositories kill germs—stop odor effectively yet safely. In fact, gentle, doctor-tested Norforms are so safe and easy to use, you can use them as often as necessary.

No bath or shower can give you Norforms' protection. Get Norforms, and you'll feel secure and odorfree for hours.

"Iowa's problem is not so much tax reform as it is spending reform," he claimed. "If we don't change our priorities and cut costs, we'll have to raise taxes, because the Iowa constitution does not allow the state to go into debt."

"We've got to put brakes on," he warned. "But the federal government keeps the records of social services expenses as sacred as the cows of India."

Angela Davis Gets New Judge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Superior Court Judge Alan A. Lindsay of Oakland was named Tuesday to hear the Angela Davis case, replacing a judge who disqualified himself on a motion of prejudice by the black woman's co-defendant.

Lindsay, 54, will preside at San Rafael, where Davis and Ruchell Magee are charged with murder, kidnap and conspiracy in a shootout last Aug. 7 that killed four persons at the Marin County Civic Center. California Supreme Court Chief Justice Donald Wright appointed Lindsay to the case for 90 days, a routine initial term that can be extended.

Retired Superior Court Judge John H. McMurray of Inyo County disqualified himself.

Survey Shows Economy 'Recovering'

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The worst of the current economic slump probably has passed, but recovery will be slow and sluggish, a University of Michigan researcher on consumer behavior said.

The Michigan Survey Research Center's Quarterly Survey of Consumer Attitudes and Inclination to Buy shows the Index of Consumer Sentiment up from last fall but at almost exactly the level of a year ago.

Dr. George Katona, who heads the survey with Dr. Jay Schmiedeskamp, said that before the latest data was collected, he had hoped that there would be a faster rebound in consumer optimism. But, he said, "It appears that the loss of confidence was so sharp that one cannot expect a rapid and there will be substantial improvement within the next 12 months has increased to 31 per cent, from 22 per cent three months ago."

Inflation and high unemployment continue to contribute to consumer gloominess, the report said, with no decline over the past three months in the proportion of consumers expecting those factors to cause a poor year ahead.

"Some people have become accustomed to higher prices, but there has been no decline in the extent of inflation which consumers expect during the next year," the economists wrote.

"With growing incomes and rising ability to buy further gains are expected, but the continued low level of consumer sentiment suggests that they will be moderate and that the saving rate will remain fairly high during the next six months."

Leisurely Sailing On Lake MacBride

Sailing Club Gives Iowans New Opportunity— Sailing Lure: An Extension of Man

By JAY EWOLDT
Sports Editor

There is no sea within 2,000 miles of Iowa, but sailing is rapidly becoming one of the more popular summer activities in the Iowa City vicinity.

The growth of the University of Iowa Sailing Club is without a doubt the best testimony to the popularity of a sport not usually associated with the farmland of Iowa.

The Sailing Club, founded in 1945 on a $1,500 grant by the university athletic department, has grown to a membership of approximately 150 as more skippers and crews become aware of the opportunities for sailing in an area where boat travel was long thought to be restricted to steamboats along the Mississippi River.

Iowa City's counterpart in the Caribbean is Lake McBride, located on the McBride Field Campus 15 miles north of Iowa City.

You'll find a dozen or more "Flying Juniors" and "Flying Dutchmen" as soon as the ice breaks. No less unusual than finding enthusiastic sailors in Iowa are the sailing club members reasons for taking an interest in sailing.

"When I joined the club, I had never been on a sailboat," said Ann Turner, secretary of the club. "But I was sports-minded and I thought it would be fun."

Ann, who said she gets her biggest kicks out of fighting the winds and waves, said the "thrill of being thrust along on the water is not like skiing where it's one steady motion," but it's the gusts that make sailing different and exciting.

"Once you get sailing in your blood, it's hard to get it out, and most of the club members plan on owning their own boats," she added.

The Sailing Club recently placed fourth in the regatta at New Orleans during Mardi Gras, which Tulane won with 31 points.

The skipper of the Iowa crew, Doug Hosford said he enjoys racing the most, "although I also enjoy lying in the boat listening to the water."

Another Iowa sailor, Fred Borchering, likes sailing mainly due to its outdoor attractions.

"It's a great challenge and a way to get away from it all," said Borchering. "It's great competition and you can test your own skills. You don't feel like a sailboat is a machine — it's more of an art and an extension of yourself — you're closer to nature," he added.

Sailing is one of the few intercollegiate sports open to both men and women, and as Borchering brought out, a woman was a member of the Iowa crew that won the Big 10 championship a year ago.

The Iowa Sailing Club has one of the largest budgets of any university sailing club in the nation, although secretary Turner says the club is now virtually broke after buying another boat to fill its fleet of 12 sailboats.

The cost of sailboats is high — the club spends an average of $12,000 for each one it purchases — but the club exists almost entirely from membership dues. The dues are $12.50 for single persons, $17.50 for couples, and $22.50 for families.

The dues go not only for the purchase of sailboats, but also to pay the cost of hosting regattas which runs as high as $350 when the band, food and refreshments are paid for.

This year the Sailing Club will host the Area C Eliminations of the Midwestern Collegiate Sailing Association May 1-2 at Lake McBride.

Other activities coming up in the near future in which the Sailing Club will participate are The Freshman Regatta March 27-28 at Notre Dame, a regatta at Henry Ford Apr. 3-4, a regatta at Purdue Apr. 17-18 and one at Ohio State Apr. 24-25.

A boost to interest in sailing in the Iowa City area has been the start of free sailing lessons in conjunction with the university recreation department. Lessons are held in the Field House Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. and Wednesdays and Thursdays at 4:30 p.m. The lessons are given on the 12-foot "Flying Junior," which is the official sailboat of the Midwestern Collegiate Sailing Association.

The Sailing Club meets every Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Activity Center of the Iowa Memorial Union. All students, faculty staff members and their families are invited to attend.

St. Bonaventure Clips Hawaii To Reach NIT Semi-finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Rangy Rich Yunkus burned Michigan with a 27-point, 15-rebound performance to lead Georgia Tech to a 78-70 basketball victory to gain the semifinals Wednesday night, in the 34th National Invitational Tournament.

The Yellow Jackets, 22-8, will play a semifinal match against St. Bonaventure which stopped Hawaii 73-64 behind Carl Jackson's 13-second half points in the first game of the double-header at Madison Square Garden.

Duke and North Carolina, two Atlantic Coast Conference teams who won their quarterfinals matches earlier this week, play the other semifinal game Thursday night.

Georgia Tech and Michigan, 19-7, were not able to get going in the sloppy first half. The Yellow Jackets led at intermission 33-31.

Yunkus scored 16 of his points in the second half and pumped life into the Georgia Tech attack with his sharp shooting from the outside. Georgia Tech never lost the lead in the second half and stopped the Wolverine shooting with a strong defense.

Ken Brady scored 20 points and Henry Wilmore got 18 for Michigan.

St. Bonaventure threatened to run away at the start with a fast break and a board-crashing offense that built up a 25-11 lead. But the Rainbows who also wiped out a 14-point lead against Oklahoma Monday night, charged back behind Bob Nash's 13 points and 14 rebounds.

The Rainbows barged into a 37-35 lead before the Bonnies'

Dale Tepas tied the score at 37-37 with a last second jump shot before the halftime buzzer.

Hawaii's underdogs matched the five-point favorites basket-for-basket and pulled ahead 62-57 before Jackson took over. He scored six points during a 10-0 Bonnie surge as Hawaii was unable to score for five minutes.

St. Bonaventure held the lead at 69-62 with two minutes left and were never headed.

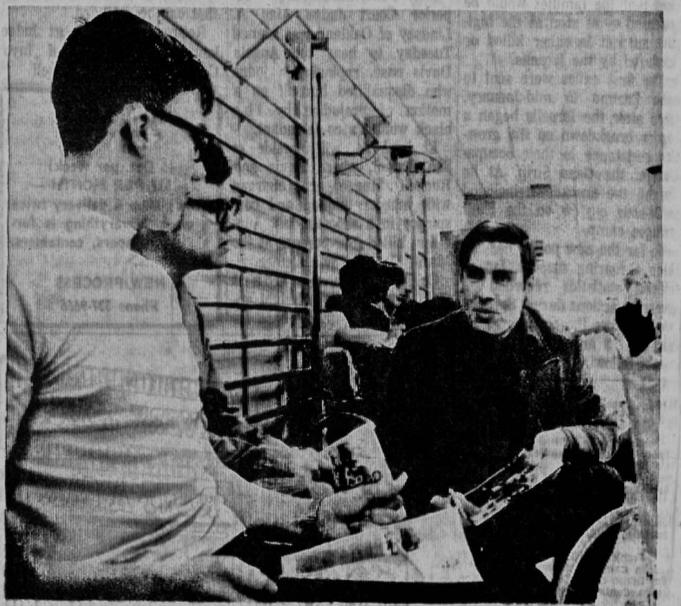

Jackson finished with 15 points while Greg Gary scored 20 for St. Bonaventure, now 20-5. John Penebacker had 18 for Hawaii, 23-5. Nash closed with 15 points and 19 rebounds.

New Jersey Bids to Lure N.Y. Giants

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Gov. William T. Cahill said Wednesday that the New York Giants football team has agreed to move to New Jersey if the state builds an attractive stadium, parking facilities and access roads.

Cahill told a news conference that he had received a verbal commitment directly from Wellington Mara, president of the Giants, to sign a long-term lease if the state develops a sports complex.

Construction of the stadium would be financed by a new race track by the state, the governor said. The facilities, along with a proposed hotel and ample parking space, would be located in the Hackensack Meadowslands less than a half hour's drive from downtown Manhattan.

Change in Conversion Rule Rejected by NFL Owners

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A proposal to change the National Football League conversion rule was defeated by the club owners Wednesday, but enough sentiment for the two-point option surfaced to lead Lamar Hunt of the Kansas City Chiefs to predict its eventual adoption.

"I'm hopeful we'll get it eventually," said Hunt, who led the bid to substitute the two-point conversion rule used in the old American Football League for the conventional extra point rule in use throughout the NFL.

"There's a tendency to go with what you've been doing," Hunt continued. "But I think there's more recognition now that the existing play is meaningless since 99 per cent of the conversion kicks are made. You have no real significance — what we have virtually is a seven-point touchdown.

"I'm not for gimmicks, but there's no suspense when you're going to make 99 per cent of plays. I have several other rule changes in mind and they all deal with adding suspense. Suspense or the unexpected is the real aspect that has merit."

Hunt said he found the voting on the two-point option, which allows the team either to kick for point or pass or run for two points after a touchdown, breaking down very much along old league lines with former AFL teams voting for the change and NFL teams against.

"The difficult thing in trying to get a change is that this thing was almost strictly done along league lines," Hunt emphasized. "But Baltimore voted for it, and Detroit, Atlanta and Philadelphia all showed interest. And whenever I say that when I'm watching a game on TV I go to the ice box or the bathroom when the conversion is attempted, everybody nods his head."

The vote, Hunt revealed, was 17-9 against the change.

Hoosier Favored

AMES, Iowa (AP) — The record book and the opposition will probably take major beating today when Indiana's swimming juggernaut begins defense of its National Collegiate Athletic Association title here at Beyer Hall pool.

"This will be the fastest NC 'A' meet ever," said Indiana coach James Doc Counsilman in sizing up the field for the 32nd annual finals.

MIAMI (AP) — Arnold Palmer, busier than he has been in years, and victory-hungry Lee Trevino ranked as the men to beat Wednesday on the eve of the first round of the rich National Airlines Open Golf Tournament.

'Hungry' UCLA Is Heavy Favorite

HOUSTON (AP) — A "hungry" UCLA, which has captured four consecutive NCAA basketball championships and 26 straight playoff games, is a heavy favorite in tonight's semifinals at the Astrodome, the graveyard of an incredible victory string in 1968.

Coach John Wooden's top-ranked Bruins put their unprecedented NCAA playoff success on the line against the muscular Kansas Jayhawks at 8:40 p.m. Iowa time.

The Jim McDaniels-led Western Kentucky Hilltoppers are a slight choice over scrappy Villanova for the 6:40 p.m. (Iowa time) opener.

Wooden saw a 47-game victory skein go down the drain in a 71-69 loss to the University of Houston in the spacious dome on Jan. 20, 1968.

Wooden, although his team is not shooting particularly well, is pleased with the late season charge by the Bruins.

"We're now playing with more enthusiasm and appear to be hungrier," he said. "We played negative basketball early in the season but we are now playing positively."

UCLA and fourth-ranked Kansas, each hold 27-1 records.

The Jayhawks, behind 6-foot-10 Dave Robisch, 6-5 Bud Stallworth, and 6-10 Roger Brown, out-rebounded all but three of the teams they have played.

While Kansas is big, it usually handles the press — a defensive specialty of UCLA. The Bruins are led by 6-8 All-American forward Sidney Wicks.

Wooden said "not enough is said about Wicks as a competitor. He is really something in a clutch situation."

The Hilltoppers, No. 7, coached by John Oldham, have a height and depth edge over quick, run-and-shoot 18th rated Villanova. The 7-foot McDaniels have averaged 29 points and 15 rebounds per game and heads the offense.

Coach Jack Kraft of Villanova, 22-6, is a defensive stickler, calling his system "a combination man-to-man zone."

Asked if he will use the zone against Western Kentucky, Kraft said, "It just depends on how well I think we can match up against them. And I'm not saying right now."

The finals will be played Saturday afternoon with both games on national television NBC-TV.

Montreal's Morton Pitches 1st Full Exhibition Contest

By The Associated Press

Montreal's Carl Morton, the National League's rookie of the year last season, pitched a full nine innings Wednesday, scattering four hits and beating Atlanta 6-2.

Mack Jones and Ron Fairly cracked home runs for the Expos and Morton drove in a run with a base hit.

Dave Cash ripped four hits and Bob Robertson hammered a three-run homer as Pittsburgh dumped Philadelphia 9-2. The Pirates tagged Barry Lersch for seven runs and 10 hits in six innings.

Rich Allen walloped four hits including a double and triple and drove in two runs as Los Angeles topped Washington 10-9. Bill Buckner's two-run triple in the seventh inning drove in the deciding run for the Dodgers.

Bobby Murcer and Thurman Munson drilled home runs and the New York Yankees rapped Boston 9-5. Murcer also had a single and drove in four runs as the Yankees thumped Jim Lonborg and two relievers for nine hits.

Cincinnati's Milt Wilcox, Dick Drago of Kansas City and Bob Gibson of St. Louis all pitched seven innings and looked strong.

Wilcox shut out Houston for seven innings, scattering seven hits as the Reds whipped the Astros 8-4. Hal McRae had three hits and three RBI for Cincinnati.

Drago allowed Minnesota just four hits over seven innings and Kansas City beat the Twins 6-3. Four Royals, Fred Patek, Amos Otis, Gail Hopkins and Cookie Rojas, had two hits each.

Gibson permitted just four hits including Jay Johnstone's homer in the seven innings he worked against the Chicago White Sox as St. Louis won 3-2. Jose Cardenal and Joe Hague had three hits each for the Cards with Cardenal extending his hit streak to seven straight before being walked intentionally.

Al Kaline hammered a three-run homer against Baltimore's Dave McNally and Detroit defeated Baltimore 7-2. Boog Powell had a two-run homer for the Orioles.

In other games, Cleveland defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-2, San Francisco downed Oakland 10-7, and California blanked Salt Lake City 2-0.

All-Star Game

William Penn's Eric Otto heads the list of the College Stars roster for the 5th annual Iowa Senior All-Star basketball game.

The contest will be March 31 at Kennedy High school in Cedar Rapids at 7:30 p.m. The game pits the University Stars from the University of Iowa, Iowa State University and Drake University against the College Stars, who include the state's outstanding small college players.

Otto, a six-foot, four-inch forward who averaged 22 points for the season will be joined by teammate Al Goodman, also a forward.

Wrestling Has Netted Iowa $10,516 In Eight Months

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa Athletic Commissioner Melvin Synhorst said Wednesday that wrestling has put $10,516 in state coffers since that sport and boxing were put under state sanctioning nearly eight months ago.

Synhorst, whose elective office is that of Secretary of State, said "The job of commissioner was originally intended to be a paid job, but no money was allocated when the legislature passed the act."

The commission set up the Iowa Athletic Commission in the last General Assembly and the body came into being July 1, 1970. The commission has the power to regulate professional boxing and wrestling in Iowa.

Synhorst took the job on ap-some postage and a few phone calls."

Synhorst said there have only been minor infractions of the wrestling rules to date and nothing that would result in the revoking of licenses or punitive action.

"Most of the problems with wrestling have resulted from the crowds and not the wrestlers themselves," he said.

Although there has not been an application to stage a professional boxing bout yet, Synhorst said that one may be held in the near future.

"Just today I had a call from a Des Moines promoter who said he was interested in staging a pro bout and he said he would pick up the commissioner's rules later today," added Synhorst.

The commissioner said his job has been made much easier by the seven-man Athletic Commissioner's Advisory Committee appointed by Gov. Ray last September.

"The people on the committee — who all serve without pay — have been a great help," Synhorst offered. "They have volunteered to go to matches in their areas to see if the rules are being observed."

Lobby Control Bill Rejected by Senate

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Senate beat back a move Wednesday afternoon to force legislative lobbyists to report their expenses and fees.

The Senate refused to debate the idea and killed it 34-13.

The move was sponsored by Sen. Gene Glenn (D-Ottumwa) as an amendment to a section of temporary Senate rules of procedure.

Glenn spoke for about five minutes, urging his colleagues to "loosen if not completely break the shackles of the special interest system that ensnare us."

Decrying the paid lobbyists who he said "wine and dine" legislators constantly and persistently, Glenn charged that they have acquired a "vicious hold" over the General Assembly.

The result, he said, is that lawmaking is influenced by "the organized, the wealthy, the vocal, the assertive."

"The long-awaited moment when the Senate faces its conscience has occurred," Glenn said.

When he finished his opening remarks, nobody rose to speak on the matter.

Glenn then looked around at his fellow senators and charged there was "a conspiracy of silence" among Republicans, who he said "would not dare to challenge the powerful interests" represented by lobbyists.

He accused some of them of treating the matter as a joke.

In the roll call vote on the move, 13 senators supported the Glenn amendment.

Johnson County Sen. Minnette Doderer was absent and did not vote on the amendment.

DeWitt Films Use 'Videotronic' Art

Speaking on a d screening some of his films in the Union Ballroom at 3:30 today is Tom DeWitt, San Francisco experimental filmmaker. His first film, "Atmosfear" (1966), is a six-minute city-poem emphasizing the harsh forms of metropolitan architecture through high-contrast, super-imposed, and optically-printed images set in motion by a "musique concrete" soundtrack. His entry into video work came with a cooperative effort with Scott Bartlett and Michael McNamee on "Offon" (1967), produced through a complex process of electronically modulating optically-printed film loops with video equipment.

In his next individual production, "The Leap" (1968), DeWitt creates the emotional atmosphere for images showing a man running through the jungle of the city in search of an obscure freedom by approximately the same methods as Bartlett did with his abstracted images in "Offon," and again with an electronic sound track by Manny Meyer. The technical difference between the two is that Bartlett shot his final footage directly off the picture tube, whereas DeWitt put his primary footage through a greater number of generations of electronic manipulation and kinescoped the final version; both, of course, employed available video functions such as keying, de-beaming, and mixing.

DeWitt says of the six-minute "The Leap" that "I wasn't satisfied with the film until I felt that without any verbal references it would take you on an emotional trip, reacting purely to the essence of cinema and television. . . I was very happy because I was penetrating an area that was completely new to me; but if I were doing it over again, I'd want more control."

As the videotronics were done in fifteen hours with DeWitt at the master control panel of a television studio synchronizing the modulation and mixing of monitor images in a rather improvisatory manner, the film does look somewhat uncontrolled, but nonetheless retains a strong sense of tension and movement.

DeWitt's most recent film, "The Fall" (1970), again uses videotronics to modulate images, and deals with more abstract subject matter than either "Atmosfear" or "The Leap." DeWitt says, "One of the main things I like about video. . . is the immediacy of seeing what you're doing. . . much more spontaneous than working in film, where you're never really sure what the results will be when you get the film back. . . I wanted to express an emotion. Certainly you're triggering something in the unconscious when you start playing with time / space alterations."

-Racial Turmoil a Major Factor- High School Unrest Rising

Associated Press Writer
The pupil turmoil in many of the nation's public high schools — brawling, stabbings, assaults and arson — in most cases is laced with racial overtones.

Many school administrators, teachers and parents also indicate there are numerous issues which, along with racism, contribute to the unrest, a survey by The Associated Press has determined.

Among factors they cited:
• Deteriorating pupil discipline.
• Poor communication among pupils, parents, teachers and administrators.
• School curricula which neglect the pupil.

away with it."

On April 5, 1969 the first anniversary of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination, 150 black pupils staged a silent march through Washington's halls. This was followed by a period of almost daily fires in lockers and wastepaper baskets and frequent fighting between blacks and whites. The big blowoff came in November 1969 and was marked by three days of fist fighting and a black pupil raid on the cafeteria.

There were three more days of trouble in February of this year. It was triggered when a scuffle broke out between a black girl pupil and a white teacher in a hall.

From this emerged the Parent-Teacher-Student Organization headed by the Rev. Paul W. Larson, a Congregational minister who advocates "parent power."

Larson said the administration needs to deal directly with the cause of all unrest at the school. "I mean the youngsters who have socially obvious emotional conflicts manifest in aggressive or explosive behavior," he explained.

The school has made curriculum changes in hopes that more remedial and vocational courses will help solve the problem.

schools to advise black students what courses to take to get into college. They say you are going to take home economics or woodwork."

The school has 1,750 pupils and 31 per cent are black.

Dr. William Howard, associate superintendent of schools in Topeka, Kan., said a study recently released showed discipline was deteriorating in the system because of a more lenient suspension and expulsion law adopted by the 1970 Kansas Legislature.

"Other students and staff members tend to ignore disruptive incidents because they do not wish to become involved," Howard added.

Topeka high schools have had three outbreaks since early 1970. Damage from fire, broken glass, break-ins and vandalism has been estimated at $52,000 by school officials.

They said the trouble was linked to racial incidents, but believe a major drive toward better communications and more ethnic courses is helping.

The hardest hit school in New York City has been George Washington High. Since last spring it has been periodically closed. Pupils have taken over the cafeteria and held noisy demonstrations in the halls. Police once found fire bombs and there was an incident when pupils set fires in lockers and ran through the halls beating other pupils.

School Chancellor Harvey B. Scribner ordered Tuesday that additional security measures be taken in New York City schools. He noted there were 287 reported attacks on school employees last year. Scribner said his action was hastened by two rape attacks on teachers in their classroom last Friday.

Scribner added that a "more healthy and honest involvement of students in the total operation of the school" might help ease the situation and help build better relations between pupils and staff.

Student Editor Rehired After Censorship Tiff

The managing editor of the Southern Colorado State College (SCSC) "Arrow" has been reinstated after being fired for attempting to publish "controversial" material.

Judge Alfred A. Arraj, chief judge of the U.S. District Court in Colorado, has ruled that Dorothy Trujillo's position be restored to her with back pay, noting that "the state is not necessarily the unfettered master of all it creates."

SCSC's administration and the newspaper's faculty adviser had contended that the state-supported newspaper was an "instructional tool" over which they should exercise ultimate control.

But the officials' authority to control student conduct "must be exercised so as not to intrude on fundamental constitutional rights" of freedom of expression, the judge decided.

Trujillo had been required since September to have all potentially "controversial" material cleared by the paper's faculty adviser. Censored materials were published in a special four-page publication funded by the Student Government of SCSC — which showed, Arraj said, "that when one forum for free expression has been shut off, students will find another."

"What the testimony emphatically revealed is that the SCSC administration and faculty on one side, and the students on the other, have been living in different worlds. Because they control "Arrow" financing, the instructors have assumed that they are free to change the function of the newspaper. The restraints placed on the paper's writing did abridge her rights and her suspension was impermissible punishment for the exercise of those rights."

UI Worker Wills Estate to School

An Iowa City woman who served the University of Iowa for 27 years has provided funds to help others attend the university.

Anna Scharf, who died last June 13, has bequeathed her entire estate of more than $130,000 to the University of Iowa Foundation to be used for student loans.

Scharf received B.A. and M.S. degrees in mathematics from the University in 1937 and 1941, respectively.

She joined the University in 1943 as a tabulator operator in the Statistical Service, now the University's Data Processing Service. At the time of her death she was a systems analyst connected with the department's computer operations.

The Iowa Scharf Student Loan Fund will be administered through the Student Financial Aids office.

the other, have been living in different worlds. Because they control "Arrow" financing, the instructors have assumed that they are free to change the function of the newspaper.
