Hughes Hesitates on Resignation

WASHINGTON — Rep. James Hughes, D-Va., announced Thursday he will step down when the 88th Congress convenes next month. Hughes, who has served in Congress since 1951, indicated he would resign effective Jan. 1, 1973.

"It's a time of change," Hughes told reporters. "I have decided to resign at the end of the current session of Congress."

Hughes said he had been thinking about resigning for the past few months, but he did not announce his decision until now because he wanted to give his colleagues an opportunity to select his successor. "I am not running for re-election," Hughes said.

The Victory May Move To MacBride Field

The victory may move to MacBride Field, a suburb of Chicago, for the next few years. This move is expected to be finalized by the end of the month.

"This is a great opportunity for us," said Mayor John Belushi. "We have been working on this for a long time, and we think it's the right move for the community."

President Johnson signed a bill authorizing the construction of a new stadium in Chicago, which will be ready for the 1974 season.

"We are excited to have the victory move here," Johnson said. "This is a great addition to our city and will benefit everyone in the area."

The stadium will be built on a 70-acre site just outside the city limits. The facility will have a seating capacity of 30,000 and will feature state-of-the-art amenities.

"This is a milestone for our city," Johnson added. "We are proud to be able to provide this for our residents and visitors."

Government Encourages Summer Labor for Youth

Young workers and their prospective employers are urged to seek wage agreements, bringing a break in the summer labor market. The Department of Labor estimates that young people will be earning about $1.30 per hour in non-farm jobs. This is $0.05 more than last year and is significantly higher than the $1.20 minimum wage set by the Fair Labor Standards Act in 1967.

The act states that the minimum wage applies to young workers employed in non-farm jobs. However, it also states that employers may offer lower wages to young workers in farm jobs. This is because the Department of Labor calculates the minimum wage based on the average earnings of workers in non-farm jobs, which are higher than those in farm jobs.

Employers are encouraged to provide young workers with a fair wage that is consistent with the fair value of their work. This will help ensure that young workers are not exploited and that they are able to earn a living wage.

UI 'Environment Inventory' Taken to Find Expertise

A "sweeping inventory of environmental expertise" is being taken at the University of Iowa to find individuals with the appropriate skills to help solve environmental problems. The university has established an "Environment Inventory" to locate experts in various fields who can help address environmental issues.

The inventory is being conducted by the university's Office of Environmental Affairs, which is working with faculty and staff to identify individuals with expertise in environmental science, policy, and management. The inventory is expected to take several months to complete.

"This is a very important step in our effort to improve the university's environmental performance," said President M. J. Kuster. "We need to bring together the best minds in the country to help us find solutions to the challenges we face."
