Pugsley: Groups Cost Heavy Bread

The Protection Association of Ten- reprinted in a series of articles and radio programs, began emerging in the late 1960s. The association was founded in 1969 by National Review editor William F. Buckley Jr., and its purpose was to promote a balanced view of the Vietnam War. The association produced a number of publications, including the "Pentagon Papers" series, which was a collection of documents leaked to the association by former Rand Corporation analyst Daniel Ellsberg.

In 1971, the Nixon administration began to investigate the Pentagon Papers leaks, and a federal grand jury was convened to investigate the sources. The grand jury indicted Ellsberg on charges of violations of the Espionage Act and the Defense Production Act. The indictment was later overturned by the Supreme Court, which held that the government had failed to prove that Ellsberg had intended to injure the United States.

The Pentagon Papers controversy had a significant impact on the Vietnam War, as it raised questions about the government's role in the conflict and the accuracy of its reports. The controversy also had a lasting impact on freedom of the press and the government's ability to control the dissemination of information. The Pentagon Papers have become a significant document in the history of American journalism and government.
Penn Central: Losing Less

PHILADELPHIA, June 10 (AP) - The Penn Central railroad, once a giant once capable of hauling 16 million tons daily, $1 billion in freight and $1 million in passengers, has reported a loss for the first half of the year of $10.6 million, or more than $1.6 million a day, $6 million better than the deficit of $4 million reported by the same railroad for the same period last year.

The railroad claims that the report is within its recovery program. [paragraph cut off, unclear...]

New 'Revolution' In China Seen

All AP News Analysis
By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Something like a cultural revolution appears to be taking place in China, according to a recent report issued by the Chinese-language newspaper "Peking Review." The report suggests that the Chinese government may be planning significant changes in its domestic policies and international relations.

"China has been described as a "cultural revolution,"" the report said, "but it is not clear what this means. It appears that China is moving towards a more democratic form of government, although the exact nature of this change is not yet known."
Governors Veto City Grants

SOUTHEAST CITY, May 9 (AP) -- Vetoing a $2.5 million grant to the city of southeast city, the state's governor ordered the city to return the funds.

The governor, who has been a vocal critic of the city's past decisions, said the city's actions were inconsistent with the state's financial policies.

The veto, which was expected, follows a series of disputes between the governor and the city over the city's use of state funds.

The governor's decision has been met with division among city leaders.

The city council, which has a majority controlled by the governor's party, has vowed to appeal the veto.

The city's mayor, who is labeled a critic of the governor, has called the veto "a bad decision.

The veto is likely to be challenged in court, setting the stage for a potentially protracted legal battle.

Leafletting

Each semester the University tries to attract incoming freshmen with its tours, lectures and vast amounts of information—so factual, socioeconomic, curricu- lular and such—that the mind is soon deluged with a flood of information. Some students find the questioning too much and attempt to get space to absorb the flood, factual or otherwise, in a more organized program.

That’s just what happened. With the help of the Union of Talent (TAT) and the New University (New U), two programs operated during Monday’s orientation program and leafleted the new freshmen and their parents, each adumbrating the dispensers of Directive A: Robert Leafley.

Leafley threatened disciplinary action against the six students involved and announced to the parents and their offspring that the material was unquestionably incorrect and definitely was not University-approved.

The students, however, did it anyway; they were covering a non-attained right.

Leafley was on the run in the right to keep the new students and parents informed of the realities of the University and Iowa City. He is the student, taking advantage of an already overloaded and receptive audience, can claim they were right.

Leafley was much more in the right. Without the students had the last word to inform the new freshmen of correct and helpful information about the campus. Leafley’s motives behind his project were to “run a nice, quiet operation with a program as formulated.”

Congressional Record

The STATE OF OUR ECONOMY

Rep. H. McMillan: “Mr. President, on July 16 a majority of the Tr IVersity of Texas, the President’s university, announced an unprecedented, forceful action. It asked quite a number of things, but one more important than any other: I want a full house and I want a full house immediately and I want the American people who are going to require some degree of national effort to take that action.

Newspaper is a great gift, but there comes a time when it is exhausted, and we believe that the facts your people can run out of patience, with this information or any other of this administration. For this past year, the schools have been doing the same thing all over the country, into ensuring inflating and inflationary...”

USA: POLITICAL SCANDAL

Washington (AP) - Former Senate Majority Leader Harry F. Byrd Jr., a former top United States Senate leader who was once a leading opponent of the Ku Klux Klan, was indicted on charges of embezzlement, fraud and perjury.

The Senate voted 91-1 Wednesday to suspend Byrd, 65, pending the trial, which could begin in September. The Senate's action came 10 years after Byrd was censured by the Senate for his role in the Senate's investigation of Sen. Joseph A. Foran, D-Mass., who was accused of accepting a $10,000 bribe.

Byrd, 52, was indicted in June on charges of embezzling $200,000 from the Senate's campaign fund, which he used to pay off loans and cover other expenses.

The jury was instructed to find Byrd guilty on all 11 counts of perjury and fraud.

The trial is expected to last about a month.

Byrd is the second major political figure to be charged with embezzlement in recent months. The other, former New Jersey Gov. Richard J. Codey, was found guilty of embezzlement in a similar case.

The charges stem from allegations that Byrd embezzled $200,000 from the Senate's campaign fund to pay off loans and cover other expenses.

The Senate's action came after Byrd's admission that he had violated Senate rules by accepting a $10,000 bribe from a New York businessman in 1981.

Liquor Dry Up—End To Shortly

DENNIS MUNGER, Iowa — Thirty families who have suffered through a "drought" of their favorite beverages will be the first to report a return to normal as mayor of a large number of towns that formerly kept their stores closed.

A speaker at the ceremony, Mayor Ameri.1, said that the?v stores were opened by the City Council of the Iowa City, home of the University of Iowa, on the advice of the Liquor Control Commission.

The move is the result of a decision by the City Council to allow the sale of liquor in the state, which has been in effect since December.

"We will not keep this liquor," said the mayor, "but we will keep the dry stores open, and we believe the people will like it."
Trevino ‘Primed’ For The $250,000 Tournament—Nicklaus Westchester Favorite

As reported by a phenomenon of the British Open, Lee Trevino, the rising star of Westwood, Cal-Club, arrived yesterday to play his first round in the PGA Championship. Trevino, reddish-brown by birth, and his red-brown hair and eyes, arrived at the Westchester Country Club, Elmsford, N.Y., and looked at Nicklaus with the respect and admiration that most of the U.S. Open players feel for the British Open champion. It was Trevino’s first appearance in the United States and Canadian Open Championships.

The ideal two-month summer break meant a reinvigoration of Nicklaus sports.

Alex Johnson Case May Go To Arbitration

New York—The case of suspended California Open champion Alex Johnson may have to be decided in arbitration, the executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association and Westside Athletic Club after a 3-0 decision by the U.S. District Court.

"We reviewed the case and the agreements of the California Open and decided that it will be necessary to put up a plan of operations for the first team," Johnson said.

Andrew spanish is one of the players who explains his case with a victory over the hidden. But his owner, Bob Johnson, at the California Open, is the leading candidate for the club’s double header.

Trevino, who has just moved into a new house in Elmsford, said, "I went to see the California Open and the owner is really good. But the California Open is the leading candidate for the club’s double header.
