

Nixon Relates Hopes For China Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon said Wednesday he is ready to discuss with Communist Chinese leaders "any points of difference that could affect the peace of the world."

At the same time, Nixon cautioned the American people not to expect an immediate end to the Vietnam war as a by-product of his trip to Peking, sometime before May.

At a news conference in his office, the President hinted that Washington is giving an extra push to its efforts to end the war by negotiation. "I am predicting that the negotiations will succeed," he said. But, he added, "We have gone and are going the extra mile."

Nixon said the agenda for the Chinese talks, now being worked out, "will deal with the hard problems as well as the easy ones." He said neither the Americans nor the Chinese have set any conditions for the discussions and neither side has any illusions "about the wide differences" between the two countries.

"What is important," Nixon went on, "is that we will have opened communication to see where our differences are irreconcilable, to see that they can be settled peacefully, and to find those areas where the United States, which today is the most powerful nation in the world, can find an agreement with the most populous nation in the world."

The President described Communist China as also potentially the most powerful nation in the world and said there can be no reliable world peace "unless there is communication between and negotiations between these two great superpowers."

And yet, Nixon said, the talks are not the kind that would end fighting in Vietnam. "It is not a discussion that is going to lead to instant detente."

He said the economy vied with the China trip for dominance at the unanticipated news session, which brought about 60 reporters crowding around Nixon's desk in the White House Oval Room.

The President said he stands by his prediction that 1971 will prove to be "a good year for the economy" and that 1972 will be "a very good year."

He said "the economy will continue to move up" and that if he owned stocks he would not sell them "in a panic."

The President said the administration is prepared to consider the establishment of wage and price control boards but he is opposed to any plan that would include criminal sanctions that would "impose a new bureaucracy."

He said he prefers his current approach of using presidential powers of persuasion to try to keep industry and labor negotiators aware of the perils of inflation.

Nixon said that on the trip to Peking, for which he has yet to fix a date, he expects to take only "a small working party" that will include Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Henry A. Kissinger, his close adviser who helped set up the summit session with the Chinese.

"This is a discussion which will take place with both sides knowing in advance that there are problems, but with both sides well prepared," the President said. "This is the secret of any successful summit meeting."

He said he and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko had ruled out a side trip by the President to Moscow while he is China-bound. Nixon said a summit talk with the Russians would be useful only if they would produce a "breakthrough" on Berlin, on strategic arms limitations or on the Mideast.

He said the two countries are making good progress on Berlin and on arms control through lower-level negotiations and that Mideast talks are continuing with a possibility "of some interim settlement."

Peking Blasts Rogers

TOKYO (AP) — Peking has accused Secretary of State William P. Rogers of "bare-faced lying" in advocating what it called "the preposterous proposition of two Chinas" in the United Nations.

The attack Wednesday by the official New China News Agency was the first public reaction from Peking to Rogers' announcement Monday that U.S. policy favors a U.N. seat for Communist China but not the expulsion of the Nationalist Chinese from the world body.

The dispatch said Rogers "vainly tries to continue to obstruct the restoration to the People's Republic of China of all her legitimate rights in the United Nations and insists on being the enemy of the Chinese people."

Noting Rogers said the new policy was in accord with President Nixon's desire to normalize relations with Peking in the interests of world peace, the agency declared: "This fully lays bare the counter-revolutionary double-dealing tricks of U.S. imperialism which says one thing and does another."

The secretary of state also said the United States sought to deal in its policy with "the realities of the world in which we live" while not forgetting "the legacies of the past," to which the agency responded:

"This is bare-faced lying. Everybody knows clearly that 'the legacies of the past' Rogers talked about glibly mean the Chiang Kai-shek clique which has long been spurned by the Chinese people and this was created singlehandedly by U.S. imperialism through occupying China's Taiwan province and the Taiwan Straits by armed forces."

"Rogers' so-called 'realities' of two Chinas are his sheer fancy. There is only one China in the world, that is, the People's Republic of China. U.S. imperialism will never succeed in its plot if it insists on making itself the enemy of the Chinese people, obstinately pushing the 'two Chinas' scheme and euphemistically describing this as 'realities.'"

Out of Lunar Orbit

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 15 astronauts rocketed out of lunar orbit and started homeward Wednesday, bringing ancient rocks and new photos they gathered in man's greatest exploration of the moon.

Astronauts David R. Scott, James B. Irwin and Fred M. Worden fired a powerful burst with their main rocket engine to break out of the moon's gravity and start the 250,000-mile voyage to the splashdown Saturday in the Pacific Ocean.

The first word from the command ship Endeavour after the rocket burst came from Scott.

"Hello, Houston," he said, "Endeavour's on the way home."

Then he added: "It was a smooth burn."

Apollo 15 sped away from the moon at more than 5,100 miles per hour at the start of a 71-hour coast toward earth.

An hour before the rocket firing, the spacemen ejected a small satellite, which looks somewhat like a mail box and which will circle the moon for a year and scrutinize it electronically.

On Thursday, Worden will make a 30-minute spacewalk to bring mapping film into the cabin of the command ship Endeavour. He will make two trips to retrieve two hatbox-shaped film canisters from the 17-million array of cameras and instruments in the service module attached to Endeavour.

The film contains what scientists hope will be the most detailed charting of the lunar surface ever made, including views never before seen of the moon's hidden backside.

The walk will begin when Endeavour is about 196,000 miles from earth. Scott and Irwin will remain in the cabin. All three will wear their spacesuits to protect them from the vacuum of space.

The spacemen spent the day working quietly, to complete their assignment of charting the surface composition and features of almost 20 per cent of the moon.

A television camera left on the moon and controlled remotely by Mission Control was turned on Wednesday, but the signal was lost after 14 minutes. Officials said further use of the camera was in doubt.

During the brief telecast the camera gave a clear picture of the lower state of the lunar module left behind at the Hadley Base landing site. The camera panned around slowly and showed the atomic-powered science station which Scott and Irwin deployed during their 19 hours of surface exploration.

Scott and Irwin completed their surface exploration of the moon on Monday. They gathered 275 to 280 pounds of moon samples, including, they believe, a crystalline chip of the original outer shell which hardened from the molten birth of the moon.

They made three surface treks, using an $8-million moon car which carried them to a deep canyon, to the foothills of a 12,000-foot mountain and through crater fields which scar their Aunnine Valley landing site. Scott and Irwin covered a total of 17 miles.

The lunar explorers left behind a $25-million atomic-powered science station which already is giving new data on the moon.

Officials said all the instruments are operating as planned, beaming data cleanly to earth from the Hadley Base landing site.

Scientists at the University of Texas McDonald Observatory near Fort Davis, Tex., reported they already had bounced a laser light beam off a reflector device left on the moon by Scott and Irwin. Officials said it took only four minutes of effort with the laser to get a reflection.

In addition to revealing information about the moon, the new lunar satellite is designed to help measure the earth's magnetic fields.

About 2 Million To Get Draft Lottery Placements Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nearly two million young men turning age 19 this year will get their draft numbers Thursday and so have some idea of what their chances are of the lottery system. Birthdates in brown capsules will be plucked from a plexiglass drum one by one and matched with numbers in yellow capsules taken simultaneously from another drum.

Each capsule will be opened immediately and its contents read by two Selective Service workers, first the birthdate by James Edmondson Jr., then the matching number by David Mueller.

Each birthdate as it is picked will be hung on a giant board with numbers 1 through 366 and the numbers will be posted on a giant calendar.

There are 366 numbers this year because those turning 19 were born in 1952, a leap year.

Selective Service Director Curtis W. Tarr is not expected to be on hand to watch the lottery because he is ill with the flu. He will be replaced by his deputy, Byron V. Peptone.

Draft officials streamlined the process a bit in hopes of reducing the 3½ hours it took for last year's lottery. They're aiming to do it in 2½ to 3 hours. It started at 10 a.m. EDT in the Commerce Department auditorium.

Instead of having more than 100 advisers parade up to draw the capsules, there will be only six taking turns at drawing 20 capsules. And instead of turning the drums after each draw they'll be turned three times with each change of capsule pluckers.

The six: James L. McCarthy, 21, of Flagstaff, Ariz.; Valerie Van Buren, 20, of Washington, D.C.; Berry S. Fujishin, 21, of Homedale, Idaho; J. Brewster Bede, 22, of Morton, Wash.; James Hume, 22, of Richmond, Va.; and Ronald W. Maestas, 28, of Carlsbad, N.M.

2 Bound Over to District Court

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Two men charged with possession of illegal drugs with intent to sell were bound over to Johnson County District Court by Police Judge Joseph Thornton here Tuesday.

Charges against a third man, John D. Rawlings, 21, of Iowa City, of resorting to a house of ill fame, were dismissed when it was determined that Rawlings was in a different room of the apartment when drug sales were made to a state agent.

Bound over to District Court were Roger A. Spaulding, 22, and Stephen C. Renk, 20, both of Iowa City.

State narcotics agents testified in the preliminary hearing they had purchased 7,500 tablets of methamphetamine (speed) from Spaulding for $695.

Following the purchase, police searched the apartment and confiscated 65,000 tablets of methamphetamine, a quantity of hashish and a small quantity of a form of LSD.

Magistrate Says Ellsberg Should Be Tried in Calif.

BOSTON (AP) — A U.S. magistrate said Wednesday that Daniel Ellsberg should be returned to California to face charges of illegal possession of the Pentagon papers he said he gave to the New York Times.

U.S. Magistrate Peter Princi denied a motion filed by Ellsberg's lawyers asking that the government be ordered to say whether evidence which led to the indictment of Ellsberg was obtained by wiretaps or electronic surveillance.

The lawyer, who filed the motion July 23, contended that if the government admitted to the use of such devices, then a hearing should be held to determine whether charges against the 40-year-old research associated at Massachusetts Institute of Technology should be dropped.

Princi said the "proper forum" for the motion was in the federal court in Los Angeles where he was indicted.

Princi said he would recommend to U.S. Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. that Ellsberg be returned to California to face the charges. Garrity scheduled a hearing for Thursday.

A spokesman for Ellsberg said he had no comment "right now" on Princi's decision.

N. Viet Prep for Attack

SAIGON (AP) — Three North Vietnamese divisions were reported Wednesday trying to build up their forces and supply depots in eastern Cambodia for assaults into the southern half of South Vietnam.

"It's a race against time to see who can build up and be the strongest first," said Maj. Gen. Jack J. Wagstaff, commander of U.S. forces in the 3rd Military Region around Saigon and senior American adviser to South Vietnamese forces in the region.

"We're already ready," Wagstaff declared in an interview. "And now they're trying to get fit up. I don't think you have to be a genius to see their idea is to come down here some time.

"What they've got to do is rebuild all of those depots they lost in the Cambodian invasion and when they've got all those, you'll see some more action."

Wagstaff said he suspected there is some infiltration into South Vietnam's 3rd Military Region that includes Saigon and 11 surrounding provinces and shares 231 miles of border with Cambodia.

Prisoner Release Soon, Paper Says

STOCKHOLM (AP) — North Vietnam is to release 183 American prisoners of war Aug. 12, the Swedish daily newspaper Dagens Nyheter said Thursday.

"If the plans for this utmost secret release operation are not changed or overturned, an SAS airliner will lift off from Vientiane, Laos," with the prisoners bound for New York, said Dagens Nyheter, Sweden's biggest circulation paper.

The report said the first contacts in the secret operation were made at the end of July, when the U.S. Command in South Vietnam cabled SAS, the Scandinavian airline, asking for a charter plane.

"The transport was originally planned to take place Aug. 6, but the departure was delayed till Aug. 12," the paper said.

A list of American prisoners of war released by the Hanoi government last December included 339 names.

The fate of American prisoners long has been a pivotal point in the Paris peace talks on Vietnam, with the United States maintaining that they must be released before a final settlement could be reached.

The latest Communist peace proposal, made July 1, offered to release the prisoners simultaneously with a U.S. pullout from Vietnam if the United States would set a definite date for withdrawal of its forces.

The secrecy surrounding the operation was broken only by negotiations for the plane, the paper said.

The aircraft is scheduled to fly to New York from Vientiane via Bangkok and Rome, the report stated.

Nixon Softens View on Wage, Price Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon softened his opposition to a proposed wage-price review board Wednesday, saying full-scale hearings before Congress could change his mind.

While saying he is still against the idea, Nixon told newsmen he is open-minded and would consider a wage-price board only if hearings convinced him it could be done without stifling the economy.

But he said he would use the power of his office more vigorously to insure that future wage-price settlements are responsible.

Shortly before Nixon met with newsmen, 13 Republican senators proposed legislation to establish a wage-price board to combat inflation.

Nixon's chief economic spokesman, Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally, responded by saying the administration welcomes a "full-fledged debate" in Congress over the issue.

A wage-price board could be structured in many ways. It could, as Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns has proposed, have only power to monitor inflationary wage and price movements in the economy, using the power of persuasion and exposure to hold them down. Or it could, as some Democratic economists have proposed, be armed with enforcement powers.

The version introduced by the 13 GOP senators would set up wage and price guidelines that could be enforced through wage-price freezes or through government procurement policies.

While saying he has an open mind toward the wage-price board idea, he added, "I am still not convinced we can move in that direction and be effective."

Viet Pull Out Urged in Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-year draft bill urging President Nixon to negotiate a "final date" for total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina was passed by the House Wednesday and went to the Senate.

But antiwar senators said they will not even have to conduct a fullblown filibuster to block final enactment before September.

It was the House's first vote ever for imposing a congressional stand on ending the war, although previous proposals had lost by even narrower margins.

The version introduced by the 13 GOP senators would set up wage and price guidelines that could be enforced through wage-price freezes or through government procurement policies.

While saying he has an open mind toward the wage-price board idea, he added, "I am still not convinced we can move in that direction and be effective."

Stolen Sound, Fury

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon softened his opposition to a proposed wage-price review board Wednesday, saying full-scale hearings before Congress could change his mind.

While saying he is still against the idea, Nixon told newsmen he is open-minded and would consider a wage-price board only if hearings convinced him it could be done without stifling the economy.

2 Etchings Stolen From Art Building

Two etchings, valued at more than $100 each, have apparently been stolen from the art building, according to Campus Security Officer Lt. Kenneth Saylor.

The etchings, last seen last Wednesday, were first noticed missing on Monday, but the apparent theft was not reported until yesterday. Norval Tucker, Director of the School of Art, explained that he delayed reporting to the police until he could be sure the etchings had not been misplaced.

The etchings, which depict passages from William Faulkner's The Sound and the Fury and As I Lay Dying, are part of a collection of nine prints made by A.G. Smith for his master of fine arts thesis.

The missing are entitled "The Sound and the Fury III" and "The Sound and the Fury III." The etching numbers three is a color of a woman while number one is a black and white etching.

Tucker said that the actual size of both is 14 by 10 inches but both were in simple white frames which measured 25 by 33 inches and weigh 10 to 12 pounds.

The etchings had been hanging in a hallway that connects the new and the old art buildings.

Campus Security officials said they are continuing their investigation but have no leads.

OKs Rights Ordinance

The proposed Human Relations ordinance was scheduled for its third and final reading in the Iowa City Council's meeting Tuesday night, but Councilman C. L. Brandt changed that by proposing changes to the controversial ordinance.

Brandt's amendment inserted exception clauses in the ordinance, which make a landlord exempt from the ordinance if he lives in the rented property or if there are six or less renters, and employers exempt if there are four or less employees.

Brandt also moved to strike the word "sex" from the housing section of the ordinance.

Brandt said that the changes put the ordinance in "complete agreement with the state code" as it relates to housing and public accommodations.

Under the original ordinance landlords who refuse to rent to a person because of his sex, e.g., who rent to men or women exclusively, is subject to prosecution.

The council adopted by amendment by a four to one vote, with Councilman J. Patrick White voting against it. The amended ordinance was then given its first and second readings.

The council will give the amended ordinance its third reading at its August 17 meeting, when it may also adopt it.

White said he voted against the proposed amendment because he was not in favor of the Mrs. Murphy clauses which Brandt had added to the housing and employment sections. He said he was in favor of striking "sex" from the housing section, however.

In another amendment White wanted to propose a Mrs. Murphy clause in housing only, he said. He would have also introduced an exception clause for charitable institutions such as the Mary Children Home for aged women.

White said he would introduce the amendment at the next council meeting and ask the council to consider it. He is not optimistic that it will be accepted, however. "The three who voted for Brandt's amendment seemed to be really much in favor of it and would very likely not accept mine," he said.

Stock Prices Hit Six-Month Low

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices fell to their lowest level in more than six months Wednesday for the second consecutive session.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 5.11 to 844.93. This was its lowest point since Jan. 14 when it hit 843.31.

After an early slide a brief rally developed in mid-session. But the gains were wiped out as stock prices tumbled to their lows for the session at the close.

Analysts attributed the brief rally to bargain hunting resulting from an oversold condition in selective stocks. They said investors had overreacted to fears about another prime-rate hike producing Tuesday's sharp decline which continued into Wednesday's early trading.

Organic Gardening

by Paul Heuer

This is the last column of this series. And there are a few loose ends I want to tie down.

The renewed interest in the organic method of gardening and farming is not an isolated incident. It is only an outward sign of a much greater event in our society. That event may be described as an awakening from a bad dream. The dream began some years ago and was the result of two prime factors. The first is man's unquenchable greed, and second is his resounding naivete. With the increasing advance of technology man began to take upon himself the job of "the grand reformer of the landscape". If he didn't like that hill, he leveled it. If he didn't want a marsh he drained it. He built his house on established flood plains and then cried in astonishment when he was flooded out. But he corrected that, he built flood control reservoirs. And he's filling these with silt by his continued erosion of the land into the rivers.

A grand example of this is the Coralville Reservoir. Soon to be a huge, flat mud plain. And then watch the floods tear through Iowa City. Man also began to manipulate his food and food producing techniques. Pesticides in agriculture and additives in food products are the glaring examples here.

But the bubble has burst. An increasing number of people are becoming concerned about this thing we call our environment. Food production is an area of special interest. Few of us can stop the damn dam builders but we can control what we eat. And some of these concerned people are joining together so that they can be more effective in their efforts. I talked to the organizers of one such group last week. The group is here in Iowa City and is called "The New Pioneer's Cooperative Society". It is a true cooperative, being so recognized by the State of Iowa. In the Articles of Incorporation I found the following six purposes listed. (1) To provide a viable and low-cost mechanism for the consumption of food and related products; (2) to stimulate the local agricultural production of organic foods and provide a market for such foods; (3) to stimulate the consumption and production of organically produced food products; (4) to specifically reject products which injure the natural environment, diminish the nutritional value of food and fail to utilize high organic standards for food production; (5) to provide educational and ancillary services to the members of the Cooperative and the community; (6) to encourage all people to return to the earth, recognize its crucial importance to man and animals and respect the fact that we are but mere guests of this planet, privileged to enjoy its use and responsible for its survival. In my opinion that last point should be the prime consideration in everything man does. However, it seldom seems to be. Anyway, if you want more information about the Cooperative, call 351-3287 or 353-5001.

The University of Iowa is buying and using some recycled paper. That's great. However, I have been told by a reliable source that if the recycled paper had cost even a fraction of a cent more per ream than new paper they wouldn't have bought it. Another fact to remember: This university produces tons of waste paper per day and doesn't recycle even one scrap of it, and there are apparently no plans to start recycling it either.

How about those keep-off-the-grass signs outside of the administration building. Only these signs don't say "Keep Off". They have nice little "in" phrases and attempt to capitalize on the growing public concern about the environment. All this just to keep some grass growing. I have news for you people who thought them up: the environmental crisis we now face has nothing, I repeat, nothing to do with keeping the lawn green. Is there that much lack of understanding in this university's administration?

The elected officials of Iowa City have their own "understanding" problems. For example, several individuals and organizations asked that the leaves collected by the city each fall be composted in one section of the sanitary land-fill. The city's action was to windrow the leaves and label them as "compost". That's nonsense gentlemen, if you don't know what compost is ask any good gardener. Why didn't you take some of that sewage sludge you're always using as land-fill material and do a proper job of it. The resulting compost would have been of great value to such groups as Project Green, and to individual tax paying gardeners who would have gladly hauled it away for you.

$ Signs of Aged Care

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a second story of a three part series on care for the sick and aged of the Iowa City area. Today, administrators give their views on the problems involved in nursing home administration.

By ELIZABETH FOXLEY
Daily Iowan Reporter

According to a survey made in 1970 by the University's Gerontology Institute, Johnson County offered 361 licensed nursing home beds in private facilities and 114 in the county home. Spokesmen at four of these facilities said that a 100 per cent capacity is a rarity.

One private home, the Clausen Nursing Home at 611 S. Clinton, has since closed, making 32 fewer beds available. With the new state licensing regulations under consideration, some nursing homes predict that even more facilities will be forced to close.

For an understanding of the problems presented by and for the nursing home or extended care facility, we spoke with a private nursing home administrator, an associate dean of the medical college (also serving on a U.S. Senate Committee investigating the aged) and the Johnson County Director of Public Health.

Three local administrators' views on the efficiency and economy of local nursing homes follow.

Mrs. Jane Wright, R.N., Director, Beverly Manor Convalescent Center, President Southeast Iowa Nursing Home Association:

"Our facility has 52 beds, with about 75 per cent private and 25 per cent welfare residents. Both convalescents and retired persons are admitted; not all are over sixty-five. The average stay is two years. Many recuperating from illnesses have shorter stays, some are permanent residents.

"An extended care facility, Beverly Manor has around-the-clock medical attention by a registered nurse. We could qualify as a medicare extended care facility but we don't handle medicare patients. We can't afford the possibility of finding out that a patient's not eligible for medicare two months after we've admitted him. A medicare utilization committee in Kansas City decides the patient's status, and if the answer is no, we're stuck with a two month's loss.

"Right now we have 17 patients on welfare. Our working quota is 10. What welfare pays us per day per patient does not necessarily cover the cost of caring for that patient. We try to clear five to ten dollars a day for each patient. The cost of caring for him, on the average is $10.60. When we're over our welfare quota, we have to raise the cost per day for each private patient to make up the difference. No two months show the same amount on the private patient's bill.

"With all this time devoted to just keeping out of the red, we have no time or money to devote to improvements of the facility. For, instance, we need more therapeutic equipment such as a whirlpool bath.

"Some nursing homes in the southern counties of Iowa have 100 per cent welfare people. I don't know how they survive.

"It would be better if the nursing homes that do provide excellent care for welfare patients were paid more so they could improve more.

"Another problem comes with the two sets of regulations, one pertaining to homes built before 1957, the other for those built after that time. A fairly new facility, Beverly Manor is allowed only two patients to a room, whereas an older facility for the same size room is allowed four. The result has been more income for the older facility."

(NOTE: This and other state regulations written by the State Department of Health are being considered by the Iowa Senate and House interim social services committees.)

"The state regulations are fine and do make for better facilities. We like to be idealistic and provide the best, but who pays?"

"Profit is coming to be less and less a motive for starting a nursing home.

"Of course, if a private patient suddenly runs out of money, we don't ask him to leave. If we have to start cutting costs, we have to cut services."

Dr. W. W. Morris, Associate

Dean of the College of Medicine, prospective member of a White House Conference on the aging:

"The trouble with nursing homes is their concept of treatment. The simplest thing in the world, getting a convalescent out of bed, to sit up or to walk, seems to be the most difficult for the nursing home personnel. It takes time; there isn't the staff. Cutting costs only makes the services rendered to the elderly people inferior.

"President Nixon is very upset about this problem of nursing homes. The White House conference in November will deal with all areas, but heavy emphasis will be placed on the quality of care in nursing homes.

"One of the major problems is all the red tape a person has to go through before he can get a place to stay. Somebody way on the other side of the country decides whether or not a person is eligible for extended care under medicare. The only person who really knows is the patient's personal physician. As a member of a 1970 task force studying the problems in Iowa, I recommended that the patient's personal physician alone be responsible for medicare certification.

"I spoke with one woman who finally paid her nursing home bill, with what funds she could, after several months of futile correspondence with offices in Missouri and Maryland.

"As far as conditions in Iowa go, in the southern counties where our over-sixty-five population is highest, there is the lowest percentage of medical personnel. Some counties do not even have nursing homes, let alone enough doctors and nurses."

Mr. Lyle Fisher, Director of Johnson County Public Health:

"No, nursing homes are not well controlled and inspected in Iowa.

"It's really not the fault of the State Health Department that Iowa's homes are bad in spots. There just isn't enough money given the department to hire the staff necessary for inspections, teaching inservice, environmental control (sanitation) procedures, etc.

"Mainly, the problem is that one nurse, assigned from Des Moines and the State Department of Health, is given a large area to cover. She's lucky to make it to each facility in her area once a year. There are six nurses to cover God knows how many nursing homes, custodial care centers, etc., across the whole state.

"Also, these inspectors are only nurses by experience and training. They don't have the background and training needed to inspect nursing homes, especially in the areas of fire care, sanitation, etc.

"Physical therapy and socialization are areas that all nursing homes have to work on. Again, cost is the problem. If a facility has the equipment for therapy, it doesn't have the staff to run it. Also, a pleasant atmosphere as well as a healthy environment should be provided.

"One idea slowly developing across the state is that of local administration of inspection. Cooperation with a team approach is the idea. We have applied for this local authority, but there is always a reluctance on the part of the state to delegate authority to local levels."

One final source, this time on the federal level, Ralph Nader's report on the workings of nursing homes recommends that the federal government take over full responsibility for establishing and enforcing nursing home regulations and administration.

Before the question of local or federal control is settled, the older person who needs some kind of care can't get it from family or friends, must have faith that he will be informed about the services and facilities that his community offers.

If the local facilities are too crowded, too expensive or just not his idea of what home is, he might hear about and contact the Visiting Nurses Association or Johnson County Social Services. They might arrange for him to receive one hot meal, one friendly telephone call a day, and visits from nurses.

At least through these services, complete alienation from society will not be the older convalescent's only remaining choice.

ISRAEL'S DEFENDER

WASHINGTON — In connection with American Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco's trip to the Middle East, American propaganda is advertising "a new peace initiative", which they say is aimed at liquidating the Middle East crisis. As the essence of U.S. politics is distorted, so is the situation in the Middle East. Meanwhile this part of the world remains explosive. The reason for this is because Tel Aviv is making arrangements to annex a large part of Arab territory. This is seen in a recent decision of the Israeli ruling party to maintain the Israeli-Arab borders, which have existed since 1967. Only the position of the U.S.A., their protector, allows the Tel Aviv aggressor to defy the call of the world community, to shatter the resolution of the Security Council and the General Assembly, and to wreck any possible settlement in the Middle East. Israel needs weapons and Washington, striving to preserve all means of trade to Israel, takes upon itself the role of defender, thereby covering up its own aggression.

In an address on July 19, A. Eban, Israeli Foreign Minister, stated directly that Israel's armed forces and its economy depend on "foreign support". Without this, he said, "we would become like a heart without a pulse". He, of course, was referring to the U.S. and, for once, did not lie. The U.S., at the present time, is the only power supplying them with arms. American capital investment, various loans, and "philanthropic" Zionist donations permit this small government to prepare for war. If one speaks of the "new initiative" in connection with Sisco's trip, then in practice is displayed the old policy directed toward the procurement of capitalism in the Arab lands, to place them on the wheel of aggression, to force them to accept all conditions of the invader, and to have stood before them international monopolies.

Sisco's main problem, wrote "The New York Times" (July 28), "is to meet with the Israeli leaders, and to work out a new compromise to the Israeli-Egyptian balance of power". The propagandizing of the U.S. and Israel on this thesis of the so-called "balance of power" in the Middle East remains the main point of American policy. They do not show the other view of the balance of Israeli occupation of Arab territory, the balance of population, military blackmail, and the extension of Israeli aggression against the Arabs. From the point of view of Washington, this "balance" must always be in favor of the aggressor. Under this cover Tel Aviv receives new weapons of destruction — "Phantom" and "Skyhawk" jets and other military apparatus. The Associated Press stated that Israel is waiting for Sisco's answer concerning the delivery of new arms. Golda Meir insists that this is necessary to "the preservation of the balance of power."

Sisco's other problem concerns an agreement on the reopening of the Suez Canal. Washington propaganda makes noise about the reopening of the canal as an "interim arrangement", which hardly solves the main problems of the Middle East. As many observers in Washington say, they are trying to freeze the key problem in the Middle East settlement — the withdrawal of all forces from occupied territory as a main condition for the restoration of peace. Sisco has one way to attain this "interim agreement". The New York Post has affirmed that "Sisco will agree to new shipments of arms only if Israel agrees to reopen the Suez Canal".

Interview with Ex-Athlete

Editor's Note: Last in a series by Jim Hemesath.

HEMESATH: What do you think of Jim Bouton?

DITTMER: I've read his first book, don't intend to read the second one. I think baseball's been pretty good to him and it would seem he could make money some other way than knocking other ball players. I'm really not too crazy about Mr. Bouton. I guess you could put it that way.

HEMESATH: What about Curt Flood?

DITTMER: There again baseball's been awfully good to him and I don't know quite what he's trying to prove. Flood was playing, maybe he was just going up when I was coming down, but I remember him.

HEMESATH: Did you play any ball after you retired from the pros?

DITTMER: One year of semi-pro with Dversville.

HEMESATH: How about speaking engagements?

DITTMER: Not anymore. I did when I first got back, it's been some time since I've been asked. I sort of got out of it and it's okay with me.

HEMESATH: Autographs?

DITTMER: Oh, now and then I get a request through the mail. Some collector will send me a bubble gum card or a glossie and ask me to sign it. The other month at the high school reunion, a girl I went to school with asked me for my autograph.

HEMESATH: Do the kids in Elkader know you were a big leaguer?

DITTMER: Kids come into the garage every now and then. They've seen my baseball pictures on the wall or their parents told them I used to be in the major leagues so they come in and want to talk a little bit.

HEMESATH: Do you do any coaching, little league?

DITTMER: No, I just run the garage. Oh, yes, I'm president of the country club, but my term is up in two months.

HEMESATH: What do you think of the Pentagon Papers?

DITTMER: I don't know, that's a little over my head. Mixed feelings on it both ways. Maybe the guy was right, but then again maybe he's another Ralph Nader.

HEMESATH: (Laughs.) Oh, yeah, you're a car dealer.

DITTMER: (Laughs.) Nader's done real well for himself with just rattling off at the mouth. I think he's going to cost John Q. Public an awful lot of money on some of this car safety stuff, the pollution stuff. I don't see where this stuff's gonna do any good. Maybe it'll help in some respects, but you'll have to prove it to me.

HEMESATH: What were "Dittmer Days"?

DITTMER: Oh, (laughs) the town chartered this train and came to Milwaukee to see me play. Christ, the first time they went the game was rained out. Needless to say a few of them never got off the train, didn't even know they were in Milwaukee.

HEMESATH: What do you think of Joe Pepitone and his long hair?

DITTMER: I get sick every time I see him.

HEMESATH: What do you call your haircut?

DITTMER: Crewcut (laughs). I've had a crewcut since I played ball for Elkader High School. (Laughs.) But everybody has got the right to wear his hair the way he wants it.

HEMESATH: Were you ever in the service?

DITTMER: No, I was 4-F. Hay Fever and asthma.

HEMESATH: What do you think of Iowa football?

DITTMER: Definitely on the upswing with Lauterbur.

HEMESATH: How about the Nagel-Evashkevski fight?

DITTMER: I don't have too much of an opinion on it except to say that it was very poorly handled.

HEMESATH: What's your opinion of Evashkevski?

DITTMER: Terrific football coach!

HEMESATH: What about as athletic director?

DITTMER: Well, I don't think he handled things too well as athletic director. (Laughs.) Of course, that's my personal opinion, he might feel the same way about how I run the garage here in Elkader.

HEMESATH: The day I first called to set up an interview your wife said you were in Iowa City for the VIP Tournament. Did you play?

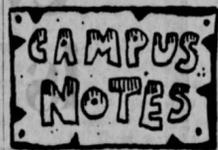

DITTMER: (Laughs.) No, no, no, I was just a spectator.

HEMESATH: Did you see Stan Musial?

DITTMER: I talked to Stan Musial, although I don't believe he knew who I was. I talked with him a little while. But he's about the only one I really did follow down there, it was pretty warm and there was a bunch of us fellows and the heat was getting to some of them so we went and found a shade tree.

HEMESATH: I think we'll end it right here, okay?

DITTMER: Fine.

Windauer, Nelson Out for '71

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Two veteran defensive linemen will be lost to the University of Iowa football team for the 1971 season, head coach Frank Lauterbur said Wednesday.

He said tackle Bill Windauer and middle guard Jerry Nelson haven't recovered sufficiently from corrective surgery to play this fall.

Both underwent surgery last spring, Windauer for an ankle injury and Nelson for knee troubles.

Windauer, from Chicago, and Nelson, of Bessemer, Ala., have started for the Hawkeyes the last two years. Their loss leaves Iowa with 31 lettermen returning.

Lauterbur said that "we'll ask the Big Ten for a hardship ruling so that both will get an additional year of eligibility. In these types of cases the requests are pretty routine."

Lauterbur also announced the signing of Mark Essy of Des Moines Dowling. Essy is a 5-11, 213-pound middle guard and also is a weightlifting champion.

Ironmen Era Sets Hopeful Precedent for Future

Special Feature
By JERRY KOLDA

This year a new coaching staff has come to the University of Iowa. Once before, after several losing seasons, a new coaching staff came and a phenomenal football season followed. Iowa football fans are hoping that lightning will strike twice. Let us return to a late fall day in Iowa City and take a look at the season that produced football's fabulous Iron Men.

November 18, 1939 was a beautiful day in Iowa City, ideal football weather which provided a fast field. A capacity crowd of 50,000 fans sat dejectedly as the sun began sinking behind the west stands, forcing a shadow across the turf.

The bitter taste of eight straight defeats by Minnesota lingered in the mouths of Iowans. The fans' hopes for revenge appeared to be fading with the shadows that afternoon 35 years ago, as the fourth quarter of the game began.

The score read Minnesota 9, Iowa 0, and Eric Wilson, former sports publicity director at Iowa, recalls, "...It looked as if we weren't completely out of the game."

In August the experts had considered Iowa not only out of this game, but out of the whole season. Ten desolate years of football lay behind Iowa. With the tough schedule they faced, prospects for an improved season were very slim; the team was made up of basically the same players who, in 1938, had won only one game.

But a new coaching staff had come to Iowa City, headed by Dr. Eddie Anderson, a former Notre Dame All-American who had left Holy Cross to teach pigskin tactics to the boys in the tall corn state. Along with him was frey line coach Jim Harris, and up from Mississippi State came backfield coach Frank Carideo.

Now a member of football's Hall of Fame, Carideo had been the quarterback of Knute Rockne's last two undefeated squads in 1929 and 30.

Iowa found Bernie Bierman's powerful Minnesota Golden Gophers as good as their press notes. Despite the fact that Iowa had won five out of six games, Minnesota had come to Iowa City sure of victory. But their confidence was matched by the Hawkeyes.

Coach Anderson had built his team around halfback Nile Kinnick, and recognizing the fact that he had only a small number of top calibre players, he instilled a rugged spirit into his squad that enabled from 14 to 17 players to beat teams that were two and three deep at positions. These courageous collegians who would go the 60 minute route were labeled the "Iron Men."

When Dr. Anderson's team won its first two games of the season, beating South Dakota 41 to 0 and Indiana 32 to 29, crowds of 16,000 and 20,000 respectively, sparsely covered the stadium, which seated nearly three times that number. One fan remarked, "In the Indiana game, there were so few people that I moved from seat to seat up and down the field following the ball."

After these first two games, the splendid performances of the Iron Men marked the coming of the big crowds to Iowa stadium.

The opening contests brought to light the skills of personable Nile Kinnick, who went on to win All-Conference, All-American and the coveted Heisman award. Kinnick had buried South Dakota with his precision-like passing and the three-point victory over Indiana had come on a fourth quarter touchdown loss from Kinnick to end Erwin Prasse.

After defeating Wisconsin 19-13, the Iron Men had a rough game, losing 27 to 7 to a big and fast Michigan team.

The Hawkeyes took an early 7 to 0 lead on a pass play from Kinnick to Buzz Dean. But a 97 yard pass interception by fabulous Tom Harmon and a costly fumble turned the tables on the Iowans.

Another fine Michigan performer that day was quarterback Forest Evashevski.

Backfield coach Frank Carideo philosophized on the Michigan loss this way: "We may have taken a beating, but we learned something from it, and when you learn from your defeats, you really don't lose."

Michigan — Minnesota scores were usually close, and the fact that the Michigan-Iowa score was not, had made the Minnesota players even more confident the day they played Iowa.

When the third quarter of the Minnesota game got under way, it looked like the Iowans were in for a long afternoon. Nile Kinnick was forced to punt from the Iowa end zone and the Gophers returned the ball to the Hawkeye 27.

The crushing Minnesota attack moved the ball goalward and four plays found them 4th down with 5 yards to go on the Hawk's 7. Minnesota's Franck skirted left end and went in for a touchdown.

The Gophers extra point attempt by Mernik was blocked and the third quarter closed with Minnesota leading 9 to 0, and also dominating the statistics, having 13 first downs to Iowa's 3.

Could the Hawkeyes possibly win this one? It appeared the last two victories had taken too much out of the players. They had defeated a powerful Purdue squad in a baseball-like score of 4 to 0.

A man to gain All-American honors in 1940, Mike Enich, had broken through the Purdue line to block two punts, which resulted in game winning safeties.

On the train home, line coach Jim Harris, beaming with pride over the fine performance of his linemen, was asked, "Why TWO safeties?" He replied, "We just wanted to make it convincing." Iowa had played only fourteen men in the Purdue win.

The following week, Elmer Leyden's mighty Notre Dame, undefeated, united, and seeking a National championship, visited the Iowa stadium.

The fantastic kicking of Phi Beta Kappa Kinnick time and again put the Irish in the hole. The Hawks got a break and recovered an Irish fumble on the Notre Dame 4 yard line. The Iron Men capitalized when Kinnick crashed his way into the end zone. Kinnick stepped back and drop kicked the extra point, which sailed under the arm of an onrushing Irish lineman for a 7 to 6 Iowa triumph.

The conquest of Notre Dame fanned the flames of hope for a victory over arch-rival Minnesota. Although the Notre Dame win could not be downgraded, the upcoming Minnesota game, besides being a fierce rivalry, had crucial conference importance for the now famous 1939 Cinderella Iron man team.

What was to happen in the fourth period could only be called a David and Goliath struggle. On one side there were the powerful Gophers with their 9 to 0 lead, and on the other side the tired Iowans with Nile Kinnick and his slingshot passes.

In the fourth quarter, the Iron Men seemed to get a second wind and Iowa finesse moved the ball 80 yards in four plays. Kinnick passed twice to Dean, one for 18 yards, and again for 15. Kinnick was held to just two yards on a plunge moving to the Gopher's 45. Then he dropped back and fired a pass that Captain Erwin Prasse caught on the Minnesota 8 and carried in for the score. Kinnick drop kicked the extra point, slicing the score 9-7 Minnesota.

With five and a half minutes remaining, Kinnick returned a punt from the 10 to his own 21. Once more the square jawed, irrepressible Nile Kinnick swung into action. Kinnick threw a 17 yard strike to Buzz Dean. On an attempted pass to Prasse, interference was called against Minnesota, giving Iowa the ball on the enemy's 45-yard stripe.

Fullback Bill Green raced around his own right end to the Minnesota 38. On the next play, Kinnick circled right end for ten yards — 28 from paydirt. Now with 3 minutes to play, Iowa had a chance to win the game. A hush fell over the crowd, and even the pennants atop the stadium hung motionless.

Tait Cummins, former sports director at WMT in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, recounted that moment this way: "The particular phase of the Minnesota game that made it so great was that the play which won the game, while it may have been new to Minnesota, unfolded before the capacity stadium crowd in such a way that everybody knew what was supposed to happen, and then sat there and watched it happen."

As the ball was snapped by Center Bruno Andruska to Kinnick, Fullback Bill Green, acting as an apparent decoy, streaked down field wide to the left. Right halfback Dean came around on a fake handoff. Kinnick faded back to the Minnesota 40, and as charging linemen closed in on him, lofted a pass to the left. Green had slipped behind the two Minnesota defenders.

Broadcaster Tait Cummins continued, "The pass catch was made by Bill Green in the end zone, and that was the thing that plunged the dagger into the Golden Gophers' from the North, and everybody just fell out of their seats. They just cried! Sports writers Burt McGrane of the Des Moines Register — I saw him standing there, tears were just coursing down his cheeks, and Eddie Moore from Waterloo, Leo Couets, Johnny O'Donnell from Davenport — it was a real maudlin group because of the tremendous emotional upsurge. 'I cried,' Tait Cummins said, 'I cried along with the rest of them.'"

That was the winning touchdown, Kinnick's drop kick attempt for the extra point was blocked, making the score 13 to 9 Iowa! The Hawks had covered 79 yards in six plays.

When Iowa kicked off to Minnesota, the Gophers desperately tried to pass their way out of defeat, but Nile Kinnick assured Iowa of victory by intercepting a pass at midfield just before the gun. The score stayed Iowa 13, Minnesota 9.

Seven Iowans were full time performers that day, — Nile Kinnick, his sixth straight game without relief, ends Erwin Prasse and Dick Evans; tackles Mike Enich and Wally Bergstrom; guard Ken Pettit, and center Bruno Andruska.

Iowa had spent its resources; the season and the Minnesota game had taken its toll of players. With Nile Kinnick leaving early in the Northwestern game because of an injury, the courageous, outmanned but never outfought Iowans, had to settle for a disappointing 7-7 tie.

Although they finished second in the Big Ten with four wins, one loss and one tie, they had the best season record of any conference school, having won both of their non-Conference games, giving them a 6-1-1 record.

For the first time in history, the Coach of the Year award and the Heisman Trophy, indicative of college football's most outstanding player, went to a coach and player from the same institution, Coach Anderson and halfback Kinnick, respectively.

The Hawkeyes ranked among the nation's top ten football teams and to this day the "Iron Man team" of 1939 is remembered with respect by former opponents and in the hearts of Iowa football fans.

Dr. Eddie Anderson best summarized this team in a remark he made at the close of the 1939 season. "I am mighty proud of these fellows. I have never coached, nor do I ever expect to coach, a gamer group of boys."

Go get 'em, '71 Hawks!
