More mug

All you muggy weather fans will be glad to know that there's going to be a lot of mug in the air today. The forecast calls for variable cloudiness and temperatures in the mid-80s. Little chance of showers today or Friday. There's a cool front on the way but it's not expected to get here for a few days — the traffic signals on Riverside Drive are holding it up.

City councilman Robert J. (Doc) Connell, generally considered the most conservative member of the City Council, announced Wednesday that he would seek reelection.

Joining Connell yesterday was Dr. Richard H. Winter who also announced plans to seek election in this fall's council race.

Neither candidate has officially entered the race by filing nomination papers. Winter took out his papers Tuesday but Connell has yet to do so.

Deadline for filing nomination papers is next Tuesday. The general election will be Nov. 2.

Aging

Two University of Iowa professors have been named to the Iowa delegation to the National White House Conference on Aging to be held in Washington Nov. 28 through Dec. 2.

Adeline H. Hoffman, of the UI Home Economics department, and Dr. W. W. Morris, associate dean of the College of Medicine, were among 41 Iowans appointed as delegates Wednesday by Gov. Robert D. Ray.

Former Iowa Gov. Robert Blue, 74, will head the state's delegation.

Sex appeal

Local residents who believe the materials used in junior high school sex education classes are "raw and unfit for innocent minds" have asked the Iowa Supreme Court to bar such classes from the city's schools.

Opponents of the "family life" courses have appealed a District court decision issued earlier this year. In that case Judge William Eads denied a request to issue an injunction to stop the classes.

Attorneys for the Iowa City objectors claim that teachers "get a kick out of teaching the course" and that students are encouraged to "brag" about their sexual exploits.

Help!

Blood donors are needed for Ms. Theresa Camp, 20, Route 4, seriously ill with aplastic anemia at University Hospital.

Ms. Camp, hospitalized since July, currently requires $150 a day for blood transfusions. Her illness, a blood disorder, requires blood platelets instead of whole blood units.

Approximately 20 people have contacted the blood bank at the university for donations to Ms. Camp, according to Linda Ruefer, an employe at the blood bank.

Although blood contributions by the donor might not be given directly to Ms. Camp, $35 will be accredited to her account for each blood unit that is donated, according to Ms. Ruefer, a hospital employe.

Persons interested in donating blood should contact the blood bank at University Hospital.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said today the names of at least a dozen women have been submitted to President Nixon as possible nominees to the Supreme Court.

Scott said he did not know the total number of names of men and women submitted to the White House.

Cold feet

There'll be no foot race for amnesty between one of the Midnight Marauders and a member of the Dubuque Police Department.

Cpt. John Fangman, in charge of the department in the absence of the chief, said Monday he has forbidden any officer to participate in a race proposed by the Marauders.

They said they would donate $250 to the department for charity, no matter who won.

The Marauders said in their note that if a policeman won the race the group would donate $500 to charity.

Vietor rules parking summons 'illegal'

By TOM C. WALSH
 Daily Iowan Editor

District Court Judge Harold D. Vietor ruled Wednesday that the "summons" which appears on parking tickets issued by the Iowa City Police Department is not legally valid.

Ruling on an appeal filed by Sharon Township Constable Richard Bartel, Vietor said, "Exhibit 'A' (a summons) does not constitute a summons within the meaning of that word as defined in either paragraph of Section 6.64.1 of the Municipal Code of the City of Iowa City.

The failure of Exhibit 'A' to constitute a summons as defined in the Municipal Code is apparent on its face. Accordingly, defendant-appellant must be found not guilty."

Hours after Vietor returned his ruling, Police Court Judge Thornton issued a warrant to have Melody J. Bartel, Richard Bartel's wife, arrested. She was apprehended by Iowa City police at 5 p.m. while working as a nurse at the Towncrest Medical Center. She was charged with overtime parking (Section 6.30.7) and her bond was set for $81. Thomas C.

Walsh, Daily Iowan editor, posted the bond.

Richard Bartel had been convicted in Iowa City Police Court on July 16 for "failure to answer summons." Bartel had received several "summons" for parking violations but failed to respond to them in any fashion. He was fined $36, the cost of the tickets, the penalty and court costs, and immediately appealed Police Court Judge Joseph Thornton's ruling.

Earlier Wednesday, Vietor also ruled that Ms. Bartel, also charged in July with parking violations and found guilty by Thornton, was not guilty of those offenses as she "was not operating the motor vehicles in respect to which the various summons were issued."

When asked if she had been arrested for the same charges Vietor had found her innocent of, Capt. John Ruppert, the officer in charge, said "I don't know about that. We were given the warrant today and told to serve it. We had no other choice."

Judge Thornton was not available for comment.

A preliminary hearing on the arrest has been set for 5 p.m. today in police court.

Iowa City Atty. Jay Honohan said Wednesday the ruling was "disappointing" and criticized it for being "very narrow." Honohan said the city's tickets are "still good and legal" but said the failure to appear statute was apparently "not legal." He and other city officials will discuss the ruling, he said.

Section 6.64.1 defines "summons" as "a notice prepared by police officers, parking meter maids, parking lot attendants, other peace officers or other persons authorized by ordinance or statute or other law giving a person, firm or corporation notice that said person, firm or corporation has been charged with a violation of an ordinance of the City of Iowa City, Iowa, and requiring said person, firm or corporation to appear before a court of Iowa City, or the State of Iowa, on or before a specified time or a specified date or both.

"Summons shall also include notice specifically appearance by individuals or the posting of a bond as set in the summons at appropriate places in or appropriate Courts of Iowa City, or the State of Iowa."

School superintendent released from contract

James R. Reusswig is leaving his post as Iowa City school superintendent to go back to California where he came from two years ago.

Reusswig has received school board approval to break his new three-year contract late Tuesday night. He will leave his $32,000-a-year post before the end of the year.

He said the controversy generated last spring by some of the schools' new, progressive programs did not influence him to leave the after he had made his decision to leave.

Reusswig has been hired as superintendent of the Vallego, Calif., school system but refused to tell how much he will be paid for that job.

He offered three reasons for leaving Iowa City.

He told a news conference Wednesday that he and his family miss their friends in California and don't like the Iowa weather.

More seriously, Reusswig said his main interest has always been in "urban journalism" and the new school, which is in the San Francisco area, will offer him more of a challenge than the Iowa City system.

He said he has "an attraction for poor kids" and believes he can offer the California school system a needed champion for the poor.

Reusswig, 52, said retirement considerations also were involved in his decision to get out of Iowa.

"One could only describe Iowa's public school retirement system as an economic disaster," he explained.

He called the state's retirement program "an atrocious and shameful system for professional employes."

The superintendent will leave between Nov. 15 and Jan. 1, 1972, depending on the speed of finding a predecessor, he said.

Until guilt established—

Richard Turner says Ford won't receive withheld salary

By LARRY HITT
 Daily Iowan Staff Writer

Copyright, 1971,
 Student Publications, Inc.

Iowa Atty. Gen. Richard C. Turner told The Daily Iowan Wednesday the state is justified in withholding salary money from a former University of Iowa professor charged in connection with campus disturbances, even though he has technically not been proven guilty.

Turner said that Stephen D. Ford, former associate professor of business administration, "is guilty of destroying public property," and that Ford "admits it, I think."

The attorney general said Wednesday that although Ford has not technically "been proved guilty of it yet, we (the state) are entitled to withhold the amount of the damages until a decision is reached on his guilt."

Ford was charged in May, 1970, with malicious destruction of property for allegedly damaging a door of the university recreation building in an anti-ROTC protest.

He was subsequently tried and convicted, but the conviction was overturned on a technicality — improper jury selection — and the charges were dropped in December of 1970.

The university, however, has kept $180 out of Ford's salary since the incident last year, and the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) has demanded that the money be immediately returned to Ford.

The attorney general said that he believed Ford was guilty since Ford had admitted being present inside the recreation building when the door was damaged.

Turner added that his office has a photograph of Ford in the building, but that the photograph does not show Ford actually damaging the door.

Turner added that since Ford's conviction was overturned on a technicality that Ford "could be tried again."

John C. Huntley, professor of English and president of the local AAUP chapter, said Tuesday, however, that Ford has never admitted damaging the door.

Huntley met Wednesday with Ray L. Heffner, provost of the university, and David H. Vernon, former dean of the UI College of Law, to discuss what action should be recommended to the president of the university concerning the return of Ford's money.

Huntley said that Vernon proposed that a board of inquiry, composed of law professors, be convened to make a finding of fact on Ford's guilt in the case.

Vernon refused to elaborate on his proposal.

The AAUP position, as expressed by Huntley at the Wednesday meeting, was that "the AAUP cannot see any legal grounds for holding the salary for 15 months, and we cannot see where an ad hoc board of inquiry would have the power to determine guilt."

Heffner is expected to convey Vernon's proposal of a board of inquiry to UI Pres Willard L. Boyd, and Huntley said that he expects a decision from Boyd in two or three days.

Boyd, meanwhile, said Wednesday that the delay in resolving the salary controversy was due to the extreme complexity of the legal issue involved.

The president added that he was "most anxious to develop a forum in which the issue could be adjudicated."

Boyd also said that the money was originally withheld from Ford's salary because "we proceeded on the grounds of the attorney general's recommendation."

Turner said that he had no comment on the proposed board of inquiry, and that "my role is simply to enforce the laws of Iowa."

Asks court to forbid watermelon hearing

Watermelon Dan is fighting city hall through the courts.

Dan Schabillon, 23, Wednesday asked the Johnson County District Court to issue temporary and permanent injunctions prohibiting Iowa City from prosecuting him. He was arrested twice last week for having merchandise on the street while operating "Dan's American" watermelon and sweet corn stand.

Schabillon contends that a peddler's license sold him by the city allows him to sell his wares on the grass between streets and sidewalks. By prosecuting him, Schabillon says, the city has either sold him "a worthless peddler's license or acted maliciously and willfully by arresting (Schabillon) for committing acts which (the City) had licensed to commit."

Schabillon says his arrests are violations of constitutional rights of equal protection and will cause him to "suffer immediate and irreparable injury." He asks that the court define the rights and obligations of peddlers and asks "for such other equitable relief as the court may deem just."

The former UI student's peddler's license, purchased from the city for one dollar, allows peddling "from house to house or upon the public streets" within the city. The ordinance Schabillon is accused of violating says no person shall place "on or over any street, alley, or sidewalk any goods, wares or merchandise."

But Schabillon may not have needed the peddler's license. He used "Dan's American" to sell watermelon, sweet corn and other food items. The city ordinance governing peddling exempts "farmers, gardeners, and other persons who sell or distribute fresh fruits, fish, meats, and vegetables" door to door or on the streets.

Draft quota now lowest since '62

WASHINGTON (AP) — Resuming the draft after a three-month lapse, the Pentagon will announce Thursday a new induction quota that will bring 1971 call-ups to the lowest annual total in nearly a decade.

A Pentagon spokesman, Jerry W. Friedheim, said the new call will cover inductions for October, November and December; and that this year's draft total will end up below 100,000 men.

The last time the draft fell below 100,000 was in 1962 when 76,500 men were drafted into the armed forces.

Friedheim did not give a firm figure for the October-November-December call, but indicated the total for the three months will be below 15,000.

A total of 83,000 men were inducted in the first six months of this year before the draft law died June 30.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird has voiced hope this will be the last extension of the Selective Service Act, except for standby emergency machinery, because the Nixon administration hopes to achieve an all-volunteer force by mid-1973.

Friedheim said it will take about two or three weeks after the new call is issued to gear up for actual inductions.

Selective Service authorities have said they anticipate the first men inducted will come from among a pool of college and junior college graduates whose draft deferments expired in June.

President Nixon signed the draft-extension bill Wednesday. In signing the bill, which reached his desk after a hard congressional fight, Nixon ordered a $2.4-billion-a-year pay raise delayed until after the general wage-price freeze expires Nov. 12.

The pay increase, designed to promote an all-volunteer force, was written into the draft bill and provided for an Oct. 1 effective date.

Dinner for a thousand

By JOE CAMPBELL

Second in importance only to the Iowa State Fair, the $25 a plate dinner has evolved over the years into a very special kind of institution on the agro-political scene. On one hand it is a social outing, pure and simple. But let there be no mistake, it is a festival with a purpose and looking past the facade of camaraderie one feels an intensity that is hard to ignore. Consider if you will the dinner held in honor of Sen. Edmund Muskie last Friday night.

The atmosphere was a curious mixture of Farm Bureau social and smoke-filled room; "Hall fellow" and elbows on the table, tempered with just the right touch of cloak room diplomacy to lend an air of urgency to the proceedings and to remind the 1,200 grass roots king-makers that they were in fact in the presence of a man who just might become President of the United States.

Sen. Harold Hughes was there and so was Rep. John Culver and Rep. Neal Smith and Bob Fulton and in short, just about everybody who was anybody in the Iowa Democratic Party. And they'd all come to hear the man who is presently the leading contender for the 1972 Democratic nomination. But something was out of place, what was it?

To be sure the candidate was there, in fact not only the candidate but the ex-candidate as well. And perhaps that was it, for while the senator from Maine labored over the state of the national economy, one had the feeling that he had somehow been pre-empted and that in fact this was not Muskie's show at all.

Iowans have never been quick to forget a native son who makes it to the big time and Hughes is no exception. For sure, the Iowa senator is out of the running for the 1972 nomination, but his withdrawal from the race is not so much a sign of caution as an indication of his political savvy, and Iowa Democrats know it. Outside the mid-west Hughes is a virtual unknown. "Harold Hughes? Isn't he the guy who owns Las Vegas?" He lacks both experience and exposure, and to ply the waters of a national convention with insufficient ballet is a one-way trip to the rocks. So Harold Hughes will wait, and only the politically naive would count him out of the race permanently.

Between now and next summer, Hughes will play second fiddle at perhaps a score of such dinners, but candidate or not, the senator is a very hard man to upstage. Edmund Muskie will testify to that.

To describe Hughes as charismatic is perhaps stretching the point, but call it what you like, the man has a command of oratory that is second to none. His introduction of Muskie last Friday night was political rhetoric in art form. Rising to the podium amid the clatter of folding chairs and empty beer bottles, Hughes had come on like a Mack truck in a Volkswagen stamper. Beginning with a few light remarks about his new beard and the freedom of expression, he abruptly shifted gears, quickened the tempo, assumed a new tack on the same subject and by the time he had finished, the crowd was in such a receptive mood that had the next speaker been Abbie Hoffman he would have received a standing ovation. For the next 10 minutes, Hughes worked the audience, setting the mood, setting the pace for Muskie's speech. During that time he touched on or alluded to nearly every major election issue since Tea Pot Dome, and as he returned to his seat, one speculated what more could Muskie say.

In spite of a style that is often referred to as Lincolnian, Edmund Sixtus Muskie does not come off as a man who is likely to become Chief Executive. "I don't know Harry, he just doesn't look like a President." On the plus side, his ruminative style is both firm and controlled. Although he is given to sudden fits of temper he is for the most part a cool head. However, such qualities, especially in a man of his size, do not spell dynamic.

One gets the feeling that Muskie spends a great deal of time thinking about the decisions he must make. His manner is cautious and deliberate, but deliberate almost to the point of being wishy-washy.

With a political record that is well described as sterling, Muskie takes a back seat to no one in his dedication to public service. He is hard working and he is sincere, but more often than not his efforts have been channeled into what are generally considered safe areas. His trump card is ecology, the safest of them all, and although he is now strongly anti-war it wasn't always that way. His switch from hawk to dove was a long drawn-out affair and many feel that his hesitancy in taking a firm stand on the war will hurt him next summer.

Clearly, Muskie is a candidate looking for an issue. Ecology has become everybody's bandwagon, and opposition to the war is an equally popular plank these days. That leaves the national economy and judging from his speech the other night, it would appear that Muskie wants to make this the major issue in next year's election. Concerning that speech there is little to be said that can't be summed up in a few words. Touching briefly on the Vietnam War, Muskie skipped over hog prices, side stepped the draft, mispronounced Des Moines and plunged head long into the labyrinth Social Security, revenue sharing and a host of equally exciting topics.

And through it all one speculated whether the main attraction was in fact the senator from Maine or Harold's new chin whiskers.

The rise and fall of the Third Riot

By TOM C. WALSH

My invitation arrived in a plain, brown envelope. Eight cents due. "To The People at The Daily Iowan." The message was written on an ungunmed Zig-Zag paper in purple ink.

"The first meeting of the Third Annual Trashing of Iowa City Planning Committee will be held tonight at 11 p.m. You are invited. Bring your own papers. Drive three miles south on Highway 218 until you hit a four-way stop. Turn right, flash your headlights twice and you will receive further instructions."

Having survived Sheriff Maynard E. Schneider's first community-cop dialogue intact, I figured I could weather anything.

I sharpened my pencils, grabbed a stack of papers and headed towards Hills. I drove three miles, found the intersection, took the turn and flashed my lights.

A freak wearing a Lone-Ranger mask jumped out of the ditch.

"You, Walsh?"

I was. He climbed into the front seat and pointed east.

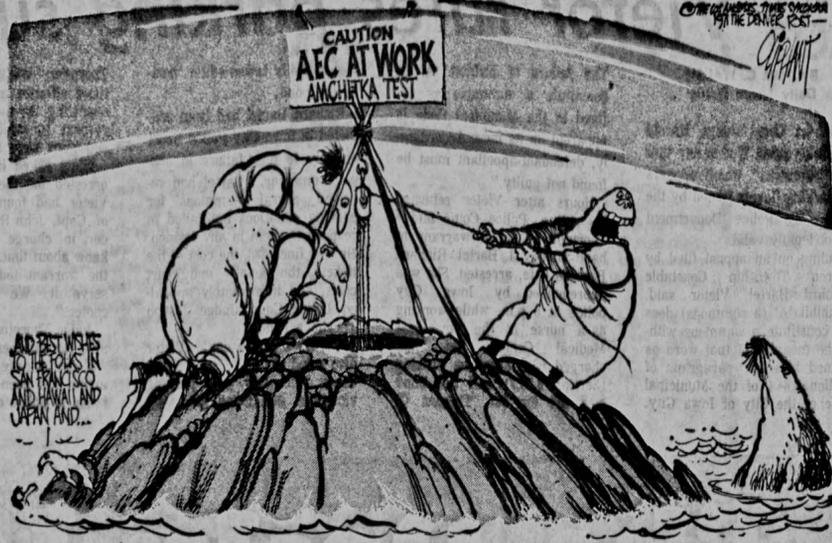

"Drive."

It was dark, but I could make out an old farmhouse, surrounded by decaying Volkswagens, miscellaneous pick-up trucks and a bright gold Cadillac Eldorado. I parked the car, and the Lone Ranger led me through the back door.

The living room was filled with masked revolutionaries, some wearing bandanas a-la Billy The Kid, others with nylon stockings pulled over their faces and one with a Richard Nixon plastic Halloween mask. He, as it turned out, was the chairman. He as it turned out owned the Cadillac.

"O.K. let's get started," he said. He pulled out a handful of marijuana cigarettes (I had never seen marijuana, of course, but my friend Bruce did once and he told me later that that is what it probably was). "O.K., we've got a lot to get done. Stoke up and listen."

Tacked on the wall was a detailed map of the Iowa City central business district. Some blocks were outlined in

To the Editor:

I'm for the Iowa Student Public Interest Research Group, though I have doubts. My first doubt is ISPIRG's ability to surface with the cash. I know it happened in Oregon and Minnesota. But these are states with liberal regents, comparatively speaking. Our regents are renoun for conservatism. It would take a miracle for them to collect funds for a student organization over which they would have no control. Since their vote is necessary, nothing less than a miracle will do. I have my doubts about miracles.

I believed in them once. Three years ago, the student body voted to tax itself $3 for student economic development. The referendum was the largest in campus history, and remains so to this day. The administration never implemented that mandate. It declined to "increase tuition" by raising the student fee. The administration remains adamant about "increasing the cost of a student's education" except for capital expenditures and faculty salaries. In other words, the administration is still wary about complicating its public relations and fiduciary responsibilities by turning over "state funds" — i.e. a self-imposed student tax — to independent organizations controlled by students.

If ISPIRG expects the Regents to collect 50 per cent of ISPIRG's revenue or our administration to collect 25 per cent, ISPIRG will be waiting a long time. Students interested in alternate economic enterprises waited and waited. Then, they discovered they could take action without the financial or moral approval of regents, administrators, parents. ISPIRG will need to go it alone too. After all, that's what Nader has been doing for years.

I also have doubts about ISPIRG's commitment to the class interest of students, which is to get the best possible education at the lowest possible cost. Ecology, pure food at fair prices, product safety and corporate responsibility are the main meat of Nader-style organizations. Movement and political actions have lower priority. Nader, for example, is not known for opposition to the war, but for his war against General Motors.

Defending the class interest of students doesn't have as broad an appeal to the self-interest and moral indignation of middle-class America as taking on bad air, bad food, bad cars or bad corporations. Despite ISPIRG's claim that it can defend the special problems of student consumers, I doubt such problems will have high priority. It simply isn't in the nature of the beast. Since ISPIRG expects Iowa students to raise $240,000 in its behalf, I doubt it's unreasonable for students to insist that 25 per cent of this money be guaranteed for actions in behalf of students. If it's only the price of a pizza apiece, students ought to be offered a piece of the pie.

In the absence of such a guarantee, I must continue to have doubts about the ability of Nader-style organizations to litigate vigorously in behalf of students. For one thing, hard-nosed work in the student interest erodes middle-class support which is the prerequisite of successful consumerism. That is why Nader-style organizations, when they defend students at all, tie their defense to issues like ecology and wage discrimination. When the defendant is the university, students are the technical beneficiaries of such actions, but such actions are not directly in behalf of the student class interest.

Nader-style organizations need to conduct an aggressive, direct defense of the student interest. Such actions might include:

- Suing the Big 10 deans for fixing teaching assistant and faculty salaries among themselves.
- Uprooting those illegal parking meters.
- Suing administrators for diverting undergraduate instructional fees to graduate education and faculty research. There's a big difference between changing exploitive universities and adjusting them for more efficient management of the tensions of the exploited. ISPIRG will have to learn the difference.

Without the guarantee of an aggressive defense of the student interest, ISPIRG remains a co-optive rip-off of student idealism for me. There is, of course, no doubt in my mind about the potential value of its work in non-student areas of consumerism.

Jim Sutton
P.O. Box 1069

To the editor:

I do not mind sharing my parking meter with a student who needs some place to secure his bicycle. I am not even upset when a bike rider runs me off the sidewalk. (He most likely would be killed on the street.) However, there are two things that disturb me.

First is the Iowa City Dog Path. Do you know where it is? That's right, every downtown sidewalk! No longer can you walk half asleep to class, unless, of course, you don't mind stepping in the evidence that the dogs leave behind. Secondly, the Pentacrest picnicers would almost intact jump to join an ecology or beautify America demonstration; leaving behind their Burger Chef cup and Henry's hamburger wrapper. At the present rate, within a month the Old Capitol may be the Office for Iowa City Garbage and Trash collection. (O I C Garbage and Trash).

These two problems can easily be corrected. As far as the trash problem, the university could buy six $10,000.00 super deluxe self-propelled riding lawn vacuum cleaners. (The university always buys expensive items in large quantities). Then they could hire heavy equipment operators to run them at ten dollars per hour. The city could hire men to go around every hour to clean the sidewalks. To give the job extra appeal, after one semester on the job employees would be awarded the Super Duper Pooper Scooper Golden Shovel Award.

Maybe the best solution to the problems, would be thirty seconds of the guilty person's time to clean up after himself or his dog.

Provost as judge, jury and executioner

By MICHAEL PILL
member, National Lawyers Guild

In January, 1970, the UI Student Senate withdrew all student members from university committees as a protest against the lack of meaningful student participation in decision making. It was hoped that the protest would ultimately lead to greater student representation on the various committees, but instead many of them simply continued to function without any student representation.

One committee, however, was suspended by President Boyd. This was the Committee on Student Conduct, which was responsible for conducting hearings in student disciplinary cases. Boyd replaced the committee with a "temporary" hearing officer and appointed the Honorable Theodore G. Garfield, former Chief Justice of the Iowa Supreme Court, to fill the position.

There have never been any established rules or procedures governing the "Garfield Court." In a resolution passed by the Student Senate on September 28, 1971, condemning the "Garfield Court" and setting forth a proposal for a new University judicial system, it was asserted that, "the lack of procedures has resulted in arbitrary actions by the university, including the suspension of students without hearing, intimidation of students to prevent them from obtaining a hearing, and repeated, unannounced changes by the Provost's office in the manner of handling student conduct cases."

This statement is substantially correct. A woman who was suspended last summer informed me that she received a letter from the Provost's office (which acts as the prosecutor in these cases) telling her she was "undesirable" and was being suspended for a minimum of one year. She says she has never been informed of any specific charges against her and has not been given a hearing.

Several students who have demanded hearings during the past year have reported that the representatives of the Provost's office did their best to talk them out of it. They told them that there was no reason for a hearing because they would be convicted anyway or because the arguments they wanted to present were without foundation or that they just might end up with a more severe punishment if they insisted on a hearing.

I can attest to the "unannounced changes" in the manner of handling cases. I have helped several people prepare their defense and present their cases at hearings, and have talked with many more who have had charges against them. If the Provost's office is following any consistent pattern, I have yet to figure out what it might be. Almost every case appears to have been handled at least a little differently. In some cases students have been allowed hearings before sanctions are imposed, while in others they have been placed on probation first and the hearing treated as an "appeal." In cases where students failed to demand a hearing, some have been given hearings anyway, while others have simply had sanctions imposed by the Provost's office.

I want to emphasize that nothing contained in this column implies any personal attack on Judge Garfield.

The law students in the local chapter of the National Lawyers Guild would like to help curb some of the abuses mentioned above by assisting students who have had charges brought against them.

Anyone desiring assistance should leave his or her name, address, and phone number at the Student Activities Center in the Union (phone 353-5745). A Guild member will return the call within 72 hours and set up a meeting. We can help in negotiating with the Provost's office, preparing a defense and appearing at a hearing, or finding a lawyer to act as defense counsel.

Crafts center providing varied creative outlets

By SHELLEY SHAKAS

Behind a Peter "Maxesque" rainbowed door in the IMU, the hassled student can find a creative refuge from the academic scene.

The Craft Center as an idea began three and one-half years ago on a part-time basis with two rooms and two pottery wheels. Now the facilities have been enlarged to include five rooms and 10 pottery wheels, with a full-time schedule 1 p.m. until 10 p.m. The amazing aspect of this program is that in a period of economic transition, it is financially self-sufficient, with the exception of the cost of the large kiln funded by the Union.

Classes include jewelry and metalsmithing, several classes of ceramics, life drawing, painting, Batik and tie-dye, Macrome, photography, and silk-screening, wood-carving, weaving without a loom, and basketry are new offerings this year. The director, Wanda Mathes, points out that the Center is spatially cramped and is consequently unable to accommodate the student interest. Some classes are presently being held in other rooms in the Union. Otherwise, class selection and schedules are flexible as the need arises and as space can permit. Instructors are mostly graduate students, but anyone who is enthused about a particular area can teach. The users card costs $6 for student and spouse, and $10 for the public over high school age. The charge per class is $6.

The philosophy of the Craft Center is to provide an outlet for relaxation with materials; an escape from hectic schedules. Classes begin this week and next. The Center has added another introductory ceramics course in response to the demand, which will be held on Tuesday afternoon from 2 until

Interest clan plans actions

Tentative plans for committees and topics to be covered by the Iowa Student Public Interest Group (ISP-IRG) were discussed Tuesday night in an organizational meeting.

Alan M. Stowell of 26 Forest View Terrace Court explained that the basic committees to be formed are administrative, student education, methods and corporate.

Topics suggested by students attending the meeting included environmental issues, sexual and racial discrimination on the campus level and housing problems. Special projects to be carried out on the state level will be announced when ISP-IRG becomes a state-wide organization.

This announcement is neither an offer to sell, nor a solicitation of an offer to buy these securities. The offer is made only by the Prospectus.

Traffic official asks students to register cars, take busses

John D. Dooley, University of Iowa Director of Traffic and Parking, Wednesday urged students to register their cars with the university, obey traffic regulations — and take the bus when possible.

Dooley, in an interview with The Daily Iowan, said "students should understand that if they drive a car on campus day or night, they must register the car with the university. It costs nothing to register the car, and the fine for not registering is 10 bucks." Students have traditionally been involved in running battles with the university parking system over parking tickets and parking spaces. Dooley felt many of these hassles could be avoided if students would simply read the rules so they would not inadvertently break them.

Dooley also said the Iowa City bus system is a tremendous bargain. "Compared to what it costs to park on campus, the difficulty in finding a parking space, and the danger in getting a ticket — the bus is a tremendous bargain."

According to Dooley, there are some 10,000 student cars and about 4,000 faculty and staff cars registered. With only 5,700 parking spaces this presents a problem, but Dooley feels the situation is not as bad as the statistics would at first appear. "Many students register their cars but never use a parking place," he said. "I feel that we need more parking space but that there has to be a happy medium between building more spaces and preserving our environment. Everyone can't ride buses or bicycles anymore than everyone can drive a car. We have a long way to go before we can strike a balance."

How come this kid has more money saved than you do?

Because over the years his parents have invested in U.S. Savings Bonds—in his name, for his future—by participating in the Payroll Savings Plan at work. He probably doesn't even know. And right now, he couldn't care less. But when he's older, that money can be used for a lot of things—a car, a college education, or even a new home. The Payroll Savings Plan is an easy way to save money for you and every member of your family. When you join, an amount you designate will be automatically laid aside from your paycheck and invested in U.S. Savings Bonds. It's a painless way to save. And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5 1/2% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra 1/2%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds. Join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work and make your son the richest kid on the block.

Capitalists bleed P.O.W. sentiment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The young woman seemed to be fighting back tears as she talked on the telephone about the prisoners of war in Vietnam.

"Well, the publishing charge runs a total of $5, and God knows we need the help if we're ever going to get our men out of there," she said.

That appeal brought in thousands of dollars from residents of Orange County, Calif., who thought they might help the POWs by placing their names, for $5 each, in an obscure tabloid called Veterans News.

The Orange County district attorney's office closed the operation by court injunction this summer, charging it with "false, fraudulent, deceptive, or misleading" representations, and found a convicted armed robber in charge.

The incident is just one of an increasing number where self-promoters have capitalized on public sympathy for the plight of the POWs or on the tendency for families of prisoners or men missing in action to grasp at any hope.

In recent months:

- A California promoter now in jail on a bad-check conviction gained the cooperation of POW-MIA family groups in California and Arizona for fundraising activities which left one organization holding the financial bag.
- A Texas promoter lured an Atlanta POW group into grandiose plans for a benefit show, then abruptly departed town, leaving a string of unpaid bills behind him.

—A man who claims he's a lawyer and lists addresses in Idaho and Amsterdam has approached POW family groups in Miami, Norfolk, Va., and Phoenix, asking $25,000 to finance negotiations with Buddhist monks to care for prisoners in North Vietnamese camps. So far as is known, he hasn't collected a dime on his pitch.

—Four men and a woman hired teen-agers to solicit on street corners in Jackson, Miss., for the POW cause, and got out of town a stop ahead of the police after three days of collections.

—As the petition-sighting and letter-writing for the POWs and MIAs has mounted nationwide this year, so has the fund raising.

The State Department privately takes a dim view of most of the fund raising activities. Officials question what could be done with the money that would benefit imprisoned or missing men. The exception is the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing, to which the government lends its "act support as representing POW and MIA relatives.

Another group which has had some success is the Committee of Liaison, headed by Cora Weiss, in New York. Mrs. Weiss says the committee has spent $10,000 in the last 18 months. Most of the money, she said, has come from small, unsolicited donations.

Veterans News opened its Orange County operation in May. Its leader, Jack K. Armstrong, served time in jail during 1965 after pleading guilty to armed robbery. His record also lists a bad-conduct discharge from the Marines and court-martial convictions for unauthorized absence and theft of a .45 caliber pistol.

A pool of 70 telephone girls solicited funds for Veterans News and a team of runners picked up donations, said James J. Shaw, investigator for the district attorney.

The girls, each of whom used the name Kathy Johnson, told people: "What we're doing is printing a special edition of the Veterans News for the POWs. We're sending copies to every congressman, senator, as well as to President Nixon, the Pope and world leaders everywhere. "The reason I called was to find out if we could print your name in a special edition for the POWs and also if we might be able to ask you to help us out on the printing costs."

After the district attorney's office filed its complaint in Superior Court, Veterans News agreed July 21 to quit the solicitation and to pay $1,500 to two recognized POW-MIA organizations.

The activities of promoter Al Edwards also centered partly in Orange County. Mrs. Stephen Hanson, wife of a missing Marine pilot and board member of POW-MIA International Inc., of Tustin, Calif., said Edwards came into touch with her group last February through aiding a restaurateur who sponsored a fund-raising dinner for the organization.

"Then he came in and said he wanted to help us," said Mrs. Hanson. "After the successful dinner, we have no reason to doubt him. He was going to initiate some fund-raising projects."

"He was going to revamp the organization and go national. We were going to raise millions, and he would receive 10 per cent of the proceeds from the projects he started."

"But he began to claim 10 per cent of other projects we had already started," she continued. "The volunteers and families were upset."

About this time, the neighbor of the POW wife saw Edwards by coincidence and recognized him — under a different name.

A police check showed Edwards was wanted on charges of passing bad checks. With the collaboration of POW-MIA International, Edwards was arrested in mid-April. "Except for the time, worry and trouble, we didn't lose vast sums of money," said Mrs. Hanson.

Freed pending a court appearance, Edwards later showed up at the Phoenix Area Families of POWs, and persuaded that organization to sign a contract for a benefit performance. The POW organization lost $750 for renting a coliseum and also used it $1,382 share of the $6,168 gross to pay other bills.

Looking at the DI staff

The smug-looking character in the red moustache and equally red hair is known affectionately around The Daily Iowan newsroom as Michael P. "Mike" McCrevey, sometime DI features editor.

McCrevey, whose widely-touted "obscure Hopi Indian rain dance" has paid off in local showers more than once, has recently been in competition with other ambitious DI staffers to maintain his title as undisputed writer of cryptic weathercasts.

The 21-year-old political science major claims his major "helps him write the weather better."

McCrevey, who says he worked as ace reporter on the New Sharon (Iowa) Star at age 12, has also acted as news editor of the Oskaloosa Daily Herald.

He most recently worked on the universal copydesk at The Kansas City Star and as assoc-

Often seen around The DI newsroom shaking a fickle pica stick at DI arts critics Shelley Shakas and Mike Kane, McCrevey warns he harbors secret hopes of becoming President of the United States or mayor of Tiffin, Iowa, whichever comes first.

SURVIVAL LINE

SURVIVAL LINE answers your questions, protects your rights, cuts red tape, investigates your tips, and all sorts of good things like that each Monday and Thursday in The Daily Iowan. Call 353-6210 between 7 and 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday or write SURVIVAL LINE, The Daily Iowan, Communications Center, Iowa City.

Every teacher seems to be assigning more reserved readings every year I'm here, and the reserved reading room hours seem awfully inconvenient to me. Why can't they stay open, say, an additional couple of hours each night when a lot of us like to study? I bet a lot of people would like that. —M. M.

It sounded like a great idea to us, too, and SURVIVAL LINE figured out the cost of an additional work-study person for two hours, six days a week to be under $200 for the entire academic year.

We figured no matter what the situation at the library, that wouldn't be much of a burden. And it'd keep the room open till midnight instead of 10 p.m.

While work-study coordinator John Kundel tells us his office has all possible jobs just about closed, "I could probably fill a request from the library, but two weeks from now I'm not sure if funds would be available for any additional year-long jobs."

But, alas, the library turned thumbs down on the idea. "We've had a budget cut, and that's forced us to cutback some departmental library hours," Leslie W. Dunlap, dean of library administration, tells SURVIVAL LINE. "We certainly couldn't consider it right now." He says he wishes the hours could be extended, though.

Another factor preventing our proposal, according to administrative assistant Lowell Duhrsen, is the doubling of floor space with no additional staff when the new library additions are completed. "We can't really extend existing services because we've just got to hold back and see what the new additions might have to cost us."

Duhrsen also says that past studies have shown no real need for extended reserve room hours. "We're not prepared to do it right now, work-study or not," he added. But he tells us if there seems to be a general consensus among students that the extension would be a good idea, library officials will review the situation after the addition's done.

Where in town can I get my bicycle tires pumped up?
—K. P.

Whew! This one's a lot easier than the preceding problem to say the least. Just about every gasoline station in the downtown area, at least, has air pumps and even a measure that tells you how many pounds of pressure you've got in your tires. It's free, as far as we know, but don't park on the sidewalk while you're feeding the wheels.

Where in town can you recycle cans? The garbage men told me they didn't know anything about it.
—N. I.

No wonder. There isn't any place, at least right now, all SURVIVAL LINE's environmental friends tell us. Citizens for Recycling did a paper drive last year, and you can still recycle papers through Capitol Oil, 729 South Capitol Street.

There's some plans to get a recycling center for tin cans (most beer and soda cans fit into that category) going in Iowa City, but they're still incomplete. And we're told the closest place to actually recycle such cans is in Chicago. So until then, the advertising claims that cans "may be recycled" are false here. Because the ones in River City just don't do nothin' but cause pollution, at least now.

Where can I get a copy of the People's Peace Treaty?
—R. M. N.

We gave you the names of some local people who've worked in peace efforts in town. Others might want to check with the PPT organization or maybe the American Friends Service Committee, 311 North Linn Street.

Maybe I'm too logical, but aren't damage deposits a violation of that scared American right of due process?

A lot of people would like to agree, but it's not true say the people at the Protective Association for Tenants (PAT). They do recommend the following procedure for paying the deposit to avoid possible rip-off of some funds you deserve:

- Get a receipt or pay by check. And save the cancelled check, by all means.
  - Make a list of the conditions of each wall, ceiling, piece of furniture, floor in the place and have the landlord sign it. If he doesn't dig that, sign it yourself but give him or her a copy.
  - If you do damage something, remember you can't be charged more than the fair market value for its repair.
- Help! I've got a friend from Milwaukee coming for Homecoming, and I need another ticket for the game. I've got one ticket on the student side, and I'll trade it some way for two on the visitors side. Or I'll trade or buy two other tickets on our side.
—C. C.

Sorry, we're no magicians but we'll print your name and phone. Maybe somebody out there has given up on the Rose Bowl (again) and will take you up. Call Chris Collins at 354-1284.

Automation hits anatomy

Automation has moved into yet another field, that of medical education. A new text written by University of Iowa faculty member Dr. David J. Moffatt, associate professor of anatomy, introduces a system of programmed learning into the study of human anatomy.

Entitled "A Programmed Text of Human Anatomical Terminology," the new book is designed to provide a step-by-step approach to the learning of complex subject matter, allowing the student to become his own teacher. According to a recent news release from the UI College of Medicine, use of the text is expected to result in a more permanent retention of relevant facts.

With the text, the student progresses through a series of small, sequential steps which can be studied and answered one by one. As each question is answered and the essential information acquired, the student moves on to the next higher level of achievement.

Asked whether his new text is designed to replace "Gray's Anatomy," a standard text, Moffatt said, "Absolutely not. In fact this is designed as a pre-able to Gray's."

Eye-popping performance

It was either a sour note or a football caught in his tuba that caused Mike Gilleen of Roseville, Mich., a little consternation during a recent high school football game. Both the football team and Mike turned in an eye-popping performance.

UI Art Museum schedules showing of student work

A University of Iowa graduate student already has more than a running start toward building a distinctive private art collection. He is Bruce Pitt, who earned a B.A. degree in English from UI last January and began work immediately for a Ph.D. degree in 18th-century English literature.

Some 40 works from Pitt's collection of more than 90 prints and drawings will go on exhibition Monday at UI Museum of Art and be shown there through Oct. 31. This will be the first time that a student collection has been featured at the museum.

Three-fourths of the exhibition will consist of prints and drawings by 10 members of the Iowa Print Group, artists who have studied printmaking with Prof. Mauricio Lasansky of UI. Pitt purchased some of these works from the artists when they were studying here, and exchanged some of his photographs for others. Several were gifts from the artists.

Other works from Pitt's collection to be shown include one print by Jan Both, 17-century Dutch painter and etcher known for his landscapes, and 10 prints by William Hogarth, 18th-century English painter and engraver remembered for his satirical pictures of life in the England of his day.

Pitt purchased these prints from traveling exhibitions which came to the Union. He became interested in the works of Hogarth because the subjects of many of Hogarth's prints might have stepped out of the pages of 18th-century novels which he is studying.

Pitt is a half-time assistant at the UI Museum of Art, where he photographs all of the museum's acquisitions and exhibitions and helps hang shows.

Although he doesn't collect art with an eye on profit, there is little doubt that many works in Pitt's collection are already worth considerably more than he paid for them. Many prints made by students in the UI School of Art are among the finest in the United States, Pitt believes.

To anyone interested in print collecting, Pitt suggests viewing thesis prints made by UI graduates and then dealing directly with the printmaker. Thesis prints are displayed in the east foyer of the UI Art Building.

Pitt started his collection just three years ago with the purchase of a print by Maceo Mitchell, a student in printmaking who finished work for his M.A. degree in June, 1969. A self-portrait in profile, the work is titled "Hoshi," which is the Japanese word for priest. Pitt saw the print in a friend's home and contacted the artist to purchase another.

A trip to a laundromat shortly after he registered at the UI in September, 1968, led to Pitt's acquaintance with a number of printmakers. There he met a student majoring in art history who later introduced him to the UI of I artists.

DI record review—Gypsy: happy ears

Last night I made my ears happy.

Tired of funkish, I'd almost forgotten what good music was all about. If you're looking for an album with a different sound, pick up Gypsy's double album (no name but it's the same color as the Iowa City phone book).

The Minneapolis-based band has the fullest sound I've heard in a long time. They combine excellent progressive guitar and bass with also excellent keyboard (both organ and piano) with as many as three harmonizing voices.

Several numbers are backed by full orchestration. After getting over the music, I was smote with lyrics that convey advice, comfort, and emotion. Apart from being solid, foot stomping rock, it's beautiful.

The first cut "Gypsy Queen," sets the pace for the whole album. Hard guitar and base lead with rhythm coming from the organ. The vocals are belted out with harmony that is tinglingly superb.

My favorite cut, "The Vision," starts out with soft violin harmonizing with piano. Four measures later, the guitar flows in. Enter lead vocal with vocal harmony which culminates in a beautiful duet. Exit vocals with guitar, piano and violin now alternating the lead. Re-enter lead vocal which gives way to the instrumental talent of the group backed by orchestration in the spirit of "The Dawn" from The Moody Blues' album "Days of Future Past."

Some of the better cuts are "Man of Reason," "Late December," "Tomorrow is the Last to be Heard" (guitar and electric drums really cut loose) and "Decisions." You will like it.

Mike Seeger concert set

A singer who has been called a major force in the revitalization of old-time folk music will present a concert at The University of Iowa on Saturday. Mike Seeger will appear at 8 p.m. at Macbride Auditorium with Alice Seeger in a concert of traditional and contemporary Southern mountain music, sponsored by the Friends of Old Time Music.

Tickets, which are priced at $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children, will be available at the door on the night of the performance.

Seeger's early musical education consisted of informal family sings and listening to recordings of traditional folk musicians. This early interest led to a deep involvement with the mountain culture. He learned to play fiddle, banjo, autoharp, dulcimer and mouth harp. He plays and records both solo and with the New Lost City Ramblers.

The bottom 10

By STEVE HARVEY

THE PROS

When a Philadelphia quarterback prepares to pass, mothers in the stands shield their children. Often, there is a rush for the exits.

Eagle throwers are well-known for their wildness. Sunday against Dallas, for example, Philadelphia threw seven interceptions to help Dallas to a 42-7 victory. The shabby performance merited the Eagles a jump to number one in the Bottom Ten.

Philadelphia quarterback Pete Liske was responsible for six of the errant passes. He is a new addition to the club this year. It is hoped that he will soon be able to distinguish between friend and foe.

There was also an air disaster in Green Bay, where number three ranked Denver fell to Green Bay, 34-13. Bronco quarterback Don Horn also had six passes intercepted. He might have had more, but time ran out in the game. Horn was traded to Denver by the Packers before this season began. They apparently knew something.

Players order Astro-Turf study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association called on club owners Wednesday to halt further installation of artificial turf until a study is made to determine if it is causing an "alarming number of football injuries."

Ed Garvey, executive director of the association, said the club owners have prevented trainers from cooperating with such a study undertaken for the players' union by Dr. James Garrick of Seattle. He added that the entire $3,000 cost would be paid by the association.

stantial increase in injuries over the past two years," Garvey told a news conference.

He said he had written all general managers and trainers in the National Football League on Sept. 15 asking them to cooperate in the study. "The only request was that the trainer take approximately two minutes to fill out a form prepared by Dr. Garrick's staff after each football injury and to return the result to Dr. Garrick," Garvey said.

He added that the entire $3,000 cost would be paid by the association.

Board rules full pay for Johnson

NEW YORK (AP) — An emotional disturbance should be treated no differently than a physical ailment in baseball, an impartial arbitration board ruled Tuesday in ordering the California Angels to restore full pay to their recalcitrant outfielder, Alex Johnson.

The verdict, which is binding, was termed a "landmark decision." Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said he had no immediate comment.

"The commissioner wants to read the report before expressing any reaction," said Monte Irvin of the commissioner's staff.

Dick Walsh, general manager of the Angels, called it "totally inconsistent with the facts and completely without justification."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, said the finding was an historic one.

"It means that a man who is emotionally disturbed is just as ill as one who has sustained an injury or has an ailment," Miller said. "He should not be suspended or disciplined. He should be placed on the disabled list."

A player on the disabled list receives full pay.

Johnson, 28, the American League batting champion in 1970, was suspended by the Angels on June 26 for what they described as "not hustling and not showing the proper mental attitudes."

A player who has been with four teams — Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cincinnati and California — in his seven years in the majors, Johnson was benched several times during the current season by manager Lefty Phillips for failure to hustle.

The Hawkeyes, their running game stymied by the opposition during the first three games, have traveled mainly by air as a result.

Quarterback Frank Sunderman, sixth in passing among major universities, has completed 47 of 93 passes, good for 801 yards and four touchdowns.

If Sunderman continues at his current completion rate he will become Iowa's top single season passer, topping Gary Snook's mark of 154 completions in 1964.

Iowa's air game is considerably better than last year's when Iowa quarterbacks were able to complete only 67 passes for 860 yards.

Sunderman's 25 completions against Ohio State is the highest single-game mark of the season among major colleges.

Freshman tackle Jim Witzleb joined teammate Dan McCarny on the sidelines Wednesday as Witzleb suffered the same identical freak injury in scrimmage that struck McCarny last week.

McCarny tore ligaments when he got his ring finger on his left hand caught in a webbed jersey while making a tackle. Witzleb suffered the same injury to his right hand. Both players will hopefully return in time for the frosh's opening game against Minnesota Oct. 22.
