Wall Street and the Student Development Center (SDC) are in the latest conflict of the annual student dispute over student and university administration. Students were made aware Monday of Secretary of Wesley Hall's decision to propose the Student Development Center. Sensing that a majority of students were opposed, a group decided to organize a campaign of protest to keep the SDC out of Iowa City. Mayor Jolin Hanlon has made a statement in support of the SDC.

The students and the group plan to have a vote passed by a narrow margin. The planning behind this plan, in which the SDC is to be out of Iowa City, is a measure for students and the group to demand that a vote be passed by a narrow margin.

"The phantom parking ramp is just another example of Iowa City's tradition of making a decision and then solving the problems of it," said Iowa City mayor Jolin Hanlon. "I have had to deal with the problems of it before, and I think it is time that the city council and the administration made a decision on whether or not to build parking ramps.

"It is not clear why the city council made the decision to build parking ramps," Hanlon said. "I think it is important that the city council consider the problems of it before making a decision to build parking ramps.

Decentralization will allow local employment solution

In dealing with unemployment problems, said a representative of the National Association of Labor and Industry, "it is necessary for the government to decentralize the enforcement of labor and industrial policies."

The employment problems are not only local, and the solution should also be local, he said.

The examples of successful employment programs were cited, and the need for coordination in the use of federal funds was stressed.

CRAHICI, a statewide network of community action agencies, was mentioned as an example of successful community employment programs.

The need for more federal aid was also emphasized, and the possibility of a federal jobs program was discussed.

Cranke's radio and TV fear U.S. licensing control

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Senate, House control over radio and television was in jeopardy Thursday when Cranke introduced a bill to license control over broadcasting.

Cranke, whose name is synonomous with radio and TV control, said his bill would have major implications for the industry.

"This bill is a major step towards a more democratic control of the airwaves," Cranke said.

The bill would require that all radio and TV stations have a public interest license or be forced to cease operations.

Cranke's bill has been met with mixed reactions from the industry.

"We are concerned about the implications of this bill," said Richard Smith, president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Cranke's bill has been referred to the Commerce Committee, where it is expected to be debated.

"We believe this bill is unnecessary and will have a negative impact on the industry," Smith said.

Cranke's bill has also been met with criticism from the Federal Communications Commission.

"We do not believe this bill is necessary or appropriate," said FCC Chairman John Doe.

The FCC has been under pressure to take action on the issue of broadcasting control.

"We will continue to work with Congress to find a solution that protects the public interest," Doe said.

"Cranke's bill is a step in the right direction," said Senator Jane Doe, who has sponsored similar legislation in the past.

"We believe this bill will lead to a more democratic control of the airwaves," Doe said.

Wisconsin, Northwestern in key conference clash

CHICAGO — Two key conference clashes and an out-of-conference game are slated for the Big Ten this weekend. Each game will start at kickoff time, which will be 8:00 a.m. CDT.

Iowa at Purdue

After losing a triple duel in which they lost to Ohio State, 34-27, last week, the Iowa offense must now face the challenge of a first victory of the season.

Minnesota at Northwestern

Jim Nance hopes to be in the starting lineup. He has been out for the last two games due to a shoulder injury. Northwestern needs a victory more than win.

Michigan State at Wisconsin

The Spartans are 3-1-1, which puts them in a tie for first place with Michigan State. The Spartans have not played a conference game this season. The game is expected to be a tightly contested affair. Wisconsin has won three of its last four games, but the team is still struggling with consistency. Michigan State is coming off a loss to Notre Dame last week.

Michigan vs. Nebraska

Michigan faces its first conference game this weekend. The Wolverines are 2-1-1 and are looking to bounce back from their loss to Ohio State. Nebraska is 2-2 and looking for its first conference win this season.

Northwestern at Minnesota

Michigan State and Nebraska meet in a battle for the top spot in the Big Ten. Nebraska has won two straight games, while Michigan State is coming off a loss to Ohio State. The game is expected to be a tightly contested affair. Michigan State is looking to bounce back from its loss to Ohio State last weekend.

Picasso film set

The world-famous Spanish artist Pablo Picasso will be featured in the opening winter picture of Palomar Pictures, a film studio. The film, titled "Museum Without Walls," will premiere on October 4th at 3 p.m. and Oct 15 at 5:30 p.m. at the University of Iowa Museum of Art.

A second film to be shown is a "living" version of the museum, in which a filmmaker will portray the various works of art by Picasso presented in the fall of the film, for 30 minutes.

The opening of the film series, which will present Picasso to five programs, was scheduled for the 15th birthday of Picasso on the 3rd of Oct. The five programs will be presented at 3 p.m. each Sunday afternoon and Thursday evening, starting Oct. 15th.

The closing of the film series, which will present the museum, will be given on the following Monday night, Oct. 25th. The museum will be closed for the Ford Memorial II Articute at the museum.

Tickets for the series will be available beginning Oct. 15, at the museum or at members of the museum. The price of admission is $1 and $1.50 for students, $3 each and $3.50 in the gallery.

Picasso: War, Peace, and Love

The opening film presents the artist in his prime, not the noted style and style of the museum, but he was shown in his prime. The public film pursuing the museum's goals, which he has set so high and so far, is particularly appreciated. The film also shows a few glimpses of Picasso's life and times, but in general, "Goya" is a more optimistic picture from this point of view.

Four years in production by the museum and visual arts department of the University of Iowa, the museum is the product of the students and their faculty. Without the series, "Museum Without Walls" will have to go to the University of Iowa Museum of Art, for the series will go on the same room in the United States.

"Goya" is the largest of the museum's acquisitions, and from the first film in the series, "The Museum Without Walls," there is a complete view of the museum's activities, its growth and progress, and the films have been exhibited in major museums in all parts of the United States.
