State declares due policy illegal

By LARRY HITT

Daily Iowan Staff Writer

The State Legislative Council, by a vote of 61-3, has declared that the new Law Enforcement Department, approved by the university, as being illegal. The Council's decision comes just the day before the Iowa Highway Patrol was scheduled to begin work.

The controversial new Law Enforcement Department was approved by the University of Iowa's Board of Regents on March 31, 1969. However, the State Legislative Council has declared that the new Department is illegal and has ordered the university to cease operations by July 1.

The State Legislative Council's decision was based on the fact that the new Law Enforcement Department is not authorized by any state law. The Council stated that the new Department would be a violation of the state's police powers and would be unconstitutional.

The university has 30 days to appeal the decision to the Iowa Supreme Court. If the court upholds the decision, the university will be forced to pay penalties for violating the law.

In the meantime, the university is preparing to appeal the decision to the state Supreme Court. The university's lawyers have already filed a motion to request a stay of execution of the decision.

The university's lawyers have argued that the decision is premature because the university has not yet had a chance to fully consider the issues involved. They have also argued that the decision is based on an interpretation of the law that is contrary to other cases that have been decided.

The university has also indicated that it will consider legal options to appeal the decision to the United States Supreme Court. The university's lawyers have stated that the university's case is strong enough to win at the Supreme Court level.

The university's lawyers have also indicated that they will consider other legal options, such as filing a lawsuit to challenge the constitutionality of the state's laws. The university's lawyers have stated that they believe that the state's laws are unconstitutional and that the university should not be forced to pay penalties for violating them.

The university's lawyers have also indicated that they will consider filing a lawsuit to challenge the constitutionality of the state's police powers. The university's lawyers have stated that the state's police powers are too broad and that the university is forced to violate them in order to operate the new Department.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from enforcing the laws that it has declared illegal. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to enforce the laws because the university has not been given a chance to consider the issues involved.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's operations. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's operations because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's students and employees. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's students and employees because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's finances. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's finances because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's research. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's research because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's teaching. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's teaching because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's governance. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's governance because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's land use. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's land use because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's tax status. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's tax status because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's internal policies. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's internal policies because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's student organizations. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's student organizations because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

The university has also indicated that it will consider seeking an injunction to prevent the state from interfering with the university's faculty organizations. The university's lawyers have stated that the state has no authority to interfere with the university's faculty organizations because the university is a private institution and is not subject to the state's laws.

Opinions

Fr d m f th Pr s

Dear Sir:

I recently read the latest issue of the monthly newsletter of the Student Publications Committee. As a member of this committee, I was pleased to see the diversity of opinions expressed in the latest issue. However, I was a bit disturbed by one particular letter that seemed to suggest that the college community was divided on the issue of college dress codes.

I believe that college dress codes are necessary in order to maintain a certain level of respect and professionalism in the academic environment. As a reader of the newsletter, I encourage you to consider this viewpoint when deciding whether to support or oppose the establishment of a dress code.

Sincerely,

A letter to my President

By Richard Barnett

I really like my President. I don't think he's perfect, but he tries. I have some questions, though, that I would like to bring to his attention.

First, I think it's important that we have a clear policy on when students should leave their dorm rooms. It seems like there are a lot of late-night activities going on in my dorm, and I'm concerned that this might be a distraction for other students.

Second, I think it would be helpful if we had a more structured system for reporting maintenance issues. Sometimes it seems like the maintenance staff is overwhelmed, and it takes a long time to get things fixed.

I believe that these issues are important and that they need to be addressed. I hope that you will consider these suggestions and work towards creating a more positive and respectful living environment for all students.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

Something for all film lovers is aim of Union movie board

By BRIAN O'BRIEN

Placing all types of movie lovers in a frame of film that suits their tastes... — is the new Union Movie Board's goal.

Noting that the films shown are not always representative of the types of films that are screened at the Student Union, the board has decided to take on the task of providing a schedule that will meet the taste of many students.

In response to the film preference of Loyola alumni and students, the board is hoping to introduce a few films in the near future that are not currently being shown at the Student Union. The schedule is planned to include a variety of films, including foreign, classic, and independent selections.

The continuing saga of UI's gift to Godless anarchy—Boogieman hustles incredibly ugly person

By THOM JONES
THE STORY IS THIS. After a tense reunion with my wife, Elizabeth, and her parents, I returned to my hotel room. I was exhausted, but I still had some work to do. I had been working on a new manuscript for my next book, and I needed to make some progress. As I sat down at my desk, I realized that I had been working on it for too long. I was tired, but I knew that I had to stay focused if I was going to finish the book on time.

The war was raging on my desk, but I couldn't shake the feeling that something was missing. I had been working on this book for months, and I was beginning to think that I might be overlooking something important. I decided to take a break and go for a walk to clear my head.

I wandered through the streets of the city, trying to find some peace and quiet. I passed by a few of the popular cafes, but I couldn't find what I was looking for. Finally, I came across a small park that looked peaceful and inviting. I sat down on a bench and closed my eyes, hoping that the fresh air would help me relax.

As I sat there, I noticed a group of people gathered around a tree. I walked over to see what was going on. They were discussing a book that they were reading. I couldn't make out the title, but I could see that it was引起了 their interest.

I asked one of the people what they were reading, and they handed me their copy. The title was "Boogieman hustles incredibly ugly person." I read through a few pages and found myself hooked. The book was full of action and adventure, and I couldn't put it down.

I decided to spend the rest of the day reading the book. I found myself becoming more and more involved in the story, and I couldn't help but wonder if the author had based the book on real events. I was determined to find out the truth.

As the sun began to set, I realized that I had spent the entire day reading the book. I was exhausted, but I couldn't bring myself to stop. I read until I fell asleep, still deeply engaged in the story.

In the end, I decided to write my own book based on the events described in "Boogieman hustles incredibly ugly person." I spent the next few months working on the manuscript, and I was proud of the final result.

I hope that others will enjoy reading my book as much as I enjoyed reading "Boogieman hustles incredibly ugly person." I believe that it is a powerful story that reminds us of the importance of standing up for what we believe in, even in the face of adversity.

The National Drug Abuse Prevention Week is October 3-9.

And it's no cure for celebration. Not hardly. But the alternative ain't another stern lecture on drug abuse. Everyone is well aware of the problem and its ill effects. So, what's there to do? We have a suggestion.

Begin. The President of the United States already has.

The new White House Special Action Office is at work, right now developing and coordinating programs of research, rehabilitation and treatment, and prevention education.

We must pry open the usual channels of communication and, ultimately, understand the causes that motivate a human being toward drugs for a monetary escape from his existence.

But the effort will demand involvement. It needs the interaction of people working together, And in the same old ways.

But if enough of us get together and start to work on the beginning, we will find an answer to the engines of drug abuse.

And if we don't, then there's the insurance.

Notes from diary of Alex Karros

NEW YORK — Former Lion's defensive tackle Alex Karros is primed for a big season as he becomes the face of the Lions defense. Karros, who has been out with an injury for most of the season, is expected to make his return in the next few games. His presence will be crucial in bolstering the Lions' defense, which has struggled to keep up with the rest of the league.

Despite the absence of preseason games, Karros is determined to be ready for the season opener. "I'm going to make sure I'm as prepared as possible," he said. "I know what I'm up against and I'm ready to face it head-on."
