Lawyers as advocates?

By Byran Souders, Michael J. Mill, and Jack Muehler

The Daily Iowan

In the fight against legal corruption, lawyers serve as advocates. As we face the pressures of money, greed, and politics, the lawyer's role is to be the voice of justice. A lawyer must maintain a balance between law and morality, between the law and the public interest. In this way, lawyers can be advocates for justice and prevent the corruption of the legal system.

The Power of Students

By Jon Batson

Although students may have less legal authority in the government of the United States, they still hold valuable power. Students have the ability to influence the political process through their votes, their membership in political organizations, and their activism. In addition, students have the ability to change the way that the government operates. Through their collective power, students can also help to ensure that the government remains accountable to the people.

The sorry state of today's Action Army

By Walter Colson

The Action Army is the driving force behind the anti-war movement. It is different from other organizations in that it is not a political party, but rather an activist group that seeks to create change through direct action. The Action Army is made up of individuals who are committed to the cause of peace and justice. They use their collective strength to challenge the policies of the government and to create a more just society.

The political power of students

By Susan Xander, Michael J. Mill, and Jack Muehler

The power of students is immense, and it is essential that we recognize and support their efforts to make a positive change in society. Students have the ability to shape the future of our country, and it is up to us to ensure that they have the resources and support they need to succeed.

Swedish fights pollution, from L'Express

By Jeffrey Walter

In Sweden, the citizens are demanding action on pollution issues. The Swedish government has responded by implementing strict regulations and penalties for those who violate environmental laws. As a result, Sweden has become a leader in environmental protection, with many other countries looking to Sweden as a model for effective pollution control.

Czarnecki tells of council needs

Editor's note: This is the second installment in the six-part series on Tom Czarnecki, the Democratic candidate for the 47th Ward.

'Remember, I'm no President,'

By KEVIN McCORMICK

"The candidate thinks that the split between the American, African American, and Hispanic communities is very important.

"He wants to work on issues that are the least important to the community, but that help make the city better.

"If you don't associate with students, you'll never be able to represent them," Czarnecki said.

"He is not sure if "apology" is something he would use to describe the recent events in our city.

"He says that his main goal is to work on issues that affect the entire community, but not necessarily on a personal level.

"He believes that the first step is to empower the people, and the second step is to empower the people who empower the people.

Recruiting efforts double Chicanos, Indian enrollment

By ANN SCHAEFER
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

The enrollment of Chicanos and American Indians at the University of Iowa has almost doubled since last year due to the recruiting efforts of UI Chancellor Nicholas_PARAM_1101.1x1712.2

The push to recruit minorities has been under way for several years, but the increase in numbers this year has been dramatic. The number of Chicanos and American Indians enrolled at the University this year is more than twice as many as last year.

The increase in enrollment has been particularly noticeable among Chicanos. The number of Chicanos enrolled at the University this year is more than twice as many as last year. This is due in part to the efforts of the UI Office of Minority Affairs, which has been working to recruit Chicanos and other minority students for several years.

Several Chicanos have been recruited to the University this year, including some who have been accepted into the College of Education and the College of Fine Arts. These students are expected to contribute to the diversity of the University and to help improve the educational opportunities for all students.

The recruitment efforts of the UI Office of Minority Affairs have been successful in increasing the number of minority students enrolled at the University. This has been especially true for Chicanos, who now make up a significant percentage of the University's minority enrollment.

Despite employment slump—
Ph.D. job-finding fortunes run high

The job-finding fortunes of a cosmopolitan, more grateful
University of Iowa Ph.D. graduates continue to run high, despite a relatively small number of Ph.D. graduates, according to a survey of University of Iowa Ph.D. graduates.

A total of 501 University of Iowa Ph.D. graduates were surveyed, and 214 of them indicated that they are currently employed. This represents a 43% employment rate, which is higher than the national average.

The survey also found that 98% of the Ph.D. graduates are employed in academic positions, with the majority of them employed in universities and colleges.

Many of the Ph.D. graduates are working in their field of study, with 88% indicating that they are currently engaged in research or teaching. However, some are working in less typical jobs, such as government officials, consultants, and business executives.

The survey found that the majority of Ph.D. graduates are employed in the United States, with only 12% working outside the country. This is significantly lower than the national average of 22%.

Despite the employment slump, Ph.D. graduates are finding jobs at a relatively high rate, which is good news for those currently pursuing a Ph.D. degree at the University of Iowa.
Students, residents rate city officials and their jobs

Iowa City Mayor Lore L. Montemezzi said "This is one of the best city councils I've ever seen," while City Manager Loren L. Hickersson described the council as "the best council I've ever worked with." Montemezzi praised the council's "very transparent and open" approach to city business, while Hickersson said the council's work has been a "great pleasure." The two officials were among several city residents and officials who praised the council's work on this year's residents survey.

The survey, which was conducted by the University of Iowa's Survey Research Center, asked residents to rate their satisfaction with various city services and officials. The survey results were released last week.

The survey found that the council received the highest satisfaction rating, with 83% of respondents rating it "very satisfied" or "somewhat satisfied." The city manager received a similar rating, with 82% of respondents rating him "very satisfied" or "somewhat satisfied."

The survey also found that the city's public works department received the lowest satisfaction rating, with only 48% of respondents rating it "very satisfied" or "somewhat satisfied."

The survey was conducted online and included 1,000 randomly selected Iowa City residents. The results have a margin of error of +/- 3.1% at the 95% confidence level.
Go out and see Asian press, propaganda

The Philippines, estranged from its Asian scene since World War II, is now writing into a Pacific-oriented theme in its newspapers.

See link in Asian press, propaganda

Government control over the Asian press today stands in stark contrast to press freedom guaranteed by the constitution. In the United States, the federal government is required to follow Federal Communications Commission regulations that prohibit discrimination in the sale, purchase, or lease of newspapers and foreign publications.

The Philippines, estranged from a free press, has been at the forefront of the struggle for press freedom in the Pacific. In the Philippines, newspapers are run by the military with little regard for the principles of democracy. They are controlled by the government and reflect the official line of the government.

The economic boycott of the Philippines by the United States is a factor in the estrangement from the Asian press. The United States has refused to purchase Philippine newspapers, and the Philippines has retaliated by boycotting American goods.

In the Philippines, the press is censored and its content is controlled by the government. The government controls the appointment of editors and reporters, and the press is required to submit articles to the government for approval.

The Philippines, estranged from the Asian press, is struggling to maintain its independence and ensure press freedom.

Badger errors hurt: Jardine

By BRIAN SCHMIDT
Daily Iowan Sports Editor

Although the Iowa Hawkeyes couldn’t defeat the Purdue Boilermakers, 38-13, to remain the “Bourbonaires” on a wintry Saturday afternoon at Kinnick Stadium, senior quarterback John Jardine and his fellow running backs did have a day’s work.

Three of the Hawkeyes five scoring plays were the result of Jardine errors.

"It was like a lucky breaks that could have hurt us more than helped us," said Jardine, a senior.

The first error was the result of a pass intended for John Jardine, but intercepted by Purdue’s Tom Brown in the third quarter. The interception led to Purdue’s first touchdown.

The second was the result of Jardine’s fumble in the fourth quarter, which was recovered by Purdue’s Gary Green and led to Purdue’s second touchdown of the game.

The third was the result of Jardine’s fumble in the second quarter, which was recovered by Purdue’s Tom Brown and led to Purdue’s third touchdown of the game.

Although the Hawkeyes led the Boilermakers 7-6 at halftime, they ended up losing the game 38-13.

"We knew it was going to be a tough game," said Jardine. "But we didn’t know it was going to be as tough as it was."

The Hawkeyes had a tough time containing Purdue’s running game, which led to 14 of their 26 points. Jardine, who rushing for 79 yards and scoring three touchdowns, said he was surprised by the Boilermakers’ running game.

"I thought our defense was going to stop their running game," said Jardine. "But they ran the ball well and we didn’t stop them."
Two-minute drill pays off

First place in Iowa City was in the balance as the ball was cleared from the five-yard line. The game was tied at 5-5, and Iowa's last chance came to them on their last possession. The Buckeyes had possession of the ball at the two-yard line with a chance to win the game. The Iowa offense turned to their two-minute drill to try to score.

"I thought we'd be looking for a short pass," said Iowa's quarterback Mike Wells. "But that didn't work, so we had to come back to our running game." The Buckeyes had the ball at the one-yard line with ten seconds left on the clock. Iowa's offensive line held their ground, and the Buckeyes couldn't get the needed yardage.

"We were just not able to gain the necessary yardage," said Iowa's head coach, John Avarello. "We had to settle for a field goal to win the game." The field goal was kicked by Iowa's placekicker, and the game was over. Iowa had won the game, 24-21.
