Romantic

Today's weather looks real romantic. In other words, mushy.

Your best bet is to wear those waist-length booties that Uncle Ermer knit for Valentine's Day. It'll be mostly cloudy with a good chance of showers and 40ish temperatures during daylight. When night collapses, your popsicle will likely freeze in the high teens. Friday? Mostly sunny, which must mean that winter is finally running it out, like the flappers used to say.

Resigns

Susan M. Ross, 19, 706 Stanley, resigned as president of Associated Residence Halls (ARH) Wednesday night so that she could run for student body president.

Ms. Ross said that she resigned because she could no longer "concentrate my full efforts" on ARH. With the campaign for student body president underway, any actions that she took would make ARH look highly political, she said.

Mark S. Tark, W202 Hillcrest, vice president of ARH assumed the group's presidency.

Ms. Ross is running for president with a slate of four other students known as the "Cooperative."

Fisby fine

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Three Soviet officers were fined a total of $80,000 Wednesday on charges of conducting illegal fisheries support activities in U.S. waters, and $170,000 more will be paid to satisfy a civil complaint against their two ships. A plea of guilty was directed by a

A plea of guilty was directed by a federal judge in the criminal charges against the three officers after they asked that their pleas be changed from innocent to no contest.

The case began with the seizure by the Coast Guard last month of two ships, the 362-foot processing vessel Lamut and trawler Kolyvan.

Must develop

CAIRO (AP) — President Anwar Sadat told a special meeting of the national congress of Egypt's ruling Arab Socialist Union Wednesday the nation needs to develop sophisticated weapons due to "the dangerous escalation imposed by the United States and Israel on the coming battle" with Israel. Presumably, the sophisticated weapons he spoke of would come from the Soviet Union.

Wally says

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Walter Hickel, who resigned under pressure from the Nixon Administration, charged Wednesday that the President abuses his advisory staff by using it "as a policy-making body."

The former interior secretary told a panel of high school students in this Kansas City suburb that this abuse of power is personified by Dr. Henry Kissinger, Nixon's chief adviser, who Hickel said is "in a class all his own."

"When you make policy without consulting the people, you're circumventing the system," Hickel said. "But Congress is as frustrated as the average citizen because it can't call him (Kissinger) down" for explanations of policies he has prescribed.

"If he were secretary of state it would be different," Hickel said, because then Kissinger would be responsible to Congress.

Med school fights House bill

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Officials of the University of Iowa Medical College Wednesday objected to a proposed $500,000 appropriation to the College of Osteopathic Medicine and Surgery in Des Moines, saying they could use the money themselves.

But Rep. Dale Tieden, R-Elkader, chairman of the House subcommittee on appropriations for medical education, said afterwards his subcommittee would recommend the bill be sent to the House floor.

The bill was originally passed by the Senate last session to give the Des Moines school $500,000 to construct buildings.

But the school has presently leased a 15-acre site complete with buildings from St. Joseph's Academy and has an option to purchase the land and structures.

Dr. J. Leonard Aznee, president of the osteopathic college, told the committee the school no longer wants to build but to use the money toward purchase of the leased site.

R. Wayne Richey, executive secretary for the state Board of Regents, told the subcommittee that the UI College of Medicine will fall $1.7 million short of its needs during the next fiscal year.

"The Board of Regents has not requested supplemental appropriations for these programs because it has taken at face value the statements and admissions of the legislative leadership and the governor that additional funds will not be available," Richey said.

Dr. John W. Eckstein, dean of the university's medical school, told the subcommittee that his school is attempting to set up at least eight "area health education centers" in Iowa to allow graduates of the Iowa medical school to serve their residencies in the state.

Eckstein said the centers are needed to help alleviate the drain of doctors out of state.

"A recent, carefully conducted, nationwide study has shown that physicians tend to practice in the region in which they had their most recent educational experience," he said.

Eckstein said that 70 per cent of the doctors who serve their internship and residency within a state stay in that state.

He said 86 per cent of those born in a state and who receive all their training in that state stay.

"Students from Iowa who graduate from the College of Medicine and go elsewhere for internships and residencies because there are so few post-graduate training opportunities in the state," Eckstein said.

The medical school dean said negotiations with a number of communities have progressed to the point that three to four could be ready for affiliation with the program that would furnish residencies for family doctors.

"It is possible that eight centers could be set up in time with training programs for as many as 80 family practice residents," he said.

Eckstein said it will cost approximately $717,000 to start the first four centers. He said negotiations are being conducted with hospitals in Des Moines, Mason City, Waterloo, Sioux City, Muscatine, and Mercy Hospital in Iowa City.

Dr. Robert Hardin, University of Iowa vice provost for health affairs, told the subcommittee that Iowa is currently losing physicians each year.

He said that without the residency plan hoped to be established next year, only about one-third of University of Iowa medical college graduates return to Iowa.

Rep. Charles Grassley, R-New Hartford, told the medical school officials their idea of family physicians was different from his and that he felt they should not need seven years of medical study.

"Who sets the standards for family physicians?" he asked. "The American Association of Family Practice," Hardin replied.

"Don't legislators count at all?" Grassley asked.

Rep. Elizabeth Shaw, R-Davenport, asked, "Why does a family doctor need seven years of training to practice in small towns of 1,500 or less?"

The medical officials told the legislators that even if less training were required for family doctors, the physicians would still likely congregate together in clinics in larger towns rather than practice in smaller ones.

Rousing send-off planned for Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, after doing 11th-hour homework at his secluded mountaintop retreat, departs Thursday on the first leg of his self-described "Journey for Peace" to China.

As Nixon prepared to fly back by helicopter after an overnight stay at Camp David in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains, an army of aides wrapped 13-day, 20,395-mile trip—including plans for a star-spangled departure ceremony.

Congressional leaders and Cabinet officials are to join a thousand flag-waving school children who will be on the White House South Lawn to bid farewell to the President, Mrs. Nixon and the 13-member official party at 10 a.m. EST Thursday.

Nixon will make brief remarks at the ceremony which follows a White House meeting with bipartisan congressional leaders.

The presidential jet leaves Andrews Air Force Base, Md., at about 9:30 a.m. for a 10-hour nonstop flight to Hawaii, where Nixon will stay two nights readjusting to the time change before flying on to Guam for an overnight stop. He will land at Shanghai—and become the first American president ever to touch Chinese soil—at 9 a.m. China time next Monday (7 p.m. Sunday).

After a Chinese navigator joins the crew of the "Spirit of 76," he will fly on to Peking where he will be officially welcomed by Chinese leaders at 11:30 a.m. China time (9:30 p.m. Sunday).

His week in three Chinese cities—Hangchow is the third—will be devoted to an open-ended series of talks with Communist leaders, a round of four banquets, and side trips to the Great Wall and other historic Chinese sites and shrines.

The President Wednesday sought the solitude of his Camp David retreat to finish reading loose-leaf volumes of classified material on China. Aides said he worked past midnight in Aspen Cottage, then was up and at his desk before 8 a.m.

He returned to Washington Wednesday afternoon.

Responding to newsmen's questions, deputy press secretary Gerald L. Warren said, "As is customary on state visits and official arrivals, we have invited schools in the metropolitan area to send children" to the event.

He described the trips as "an educational assist for teachers" and added, "we have done that for every state and official visit."

White House staffers and federal employees from other nearby government buildings also will crowd onto the White House lawn. Asked whether military honor guards would be present, Warren said, "I wouldn't be surprised."

Allies push air strikes beyond DMZ

SAIGON, (AP) — American fighter-bombers launched scores of strikes Wednesday against powerful Soviet-made 130mm artillery inside North Vietnam and resumed pounding the targets Thursday, the U.S. Command announced.

The command said one Air Force F4 was shot down Wednesday inside North Vietnam just north of the Demilitarized Zone and the two crewmen are listed as missing. Radio Hanoi claimed two planes were shot down and a number of airmen killed or captured.

A U.S. spokesman said it was not immediately known what downed the plane.

"There was a hell of a lot of enemy activity, both surface-to-air missiles and anti-aircraft artillery fire," the spokesman said, "and it's hard to figure out what hit it."

Pilots returned fire at missile sites and anti-aircraft artillery. Initial reports said American planes destroyed at least five of the long-range guns—most powerful in the enemy arsenal with a range of more than 16 miles.

Boo-boo could eliminate surplus

See mistake in school funding

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A mistake in the school foundation plan passed by the Iowa Legislature last year could use up virtually all of the state's surplus funds, legislative leaders were told Wednesday.

The result could be to eliminate the chances of most appropriation bills this session.

Legislative leaders will meet again Monday afternoon to decide whether to correct the bill which goes into effect July 1 or wait a year to see how the state school aid bill works as it is.

State Comptroller Marvin Selden told Republican legislative leaders, schools committee representatives and representatives of the Department of Public Instruction that one mistake on the measure will cost $3 million more than was planned.

That mistake would allow schools to exclude certain federal funds in their budgets when they apply for state equalization funds next year.

Some members of the Senate Schools Committee say they like the plan better with the "mistake" but are apprehensive the state cannot afford it that way.

The mistake was made when legislators intended schools to count some $16 million they receive in federal funds with "miscellaneous" income in figuring their total budget to be used in applying for state equalization funds.

But they placed those funds under the wrong section of the bill. Selden said this would result in approximately $3 million more to be paid out in equalization funds.

The Conditions of Learning

Persons who assemble to learn and help one another learn more effectively learn under a special set of responsibilities and rights.

First among these is the full freedom to explore the nature and implications of ideas; to generate new ideas; to discuss explorations and discoveries in speech or print without prior restraint or interference. Both institutional censorship and intolerance by individuals or groups are at odds with this basic freedom. Similarly, research or other intellectual effort which must be conducted in secret or kept secret or which may be used only for the benefit of a special interest group also violate the principle of free inquiry.

Serious thought and learning require privacy. Although human accessibility is a basic value, and although meetings of the university may not be conducted in secret except for matters concerning sealed bids and other instances according to law, still all members of learning community are entitled to privacy in university offices, educational facilities, and housing. The same right of privacy extends to personal papers, confidential records, and personal effects whether maintained by the individual or the university.

All members of the university enjoy the right to hold and participate in public meetings, to post notices on campus, and to engage in peaceful demonstrations. In order to protect the rights of those who do not choose to participate and to insure the functioning of the University, reasonable and impartially applied rules following established decisionmaking procedures may be established with respect to the use of university facilities.

Honesty is an essential condition of learning. Honesty includes the presentation of only one's own work as one's own; the full consideration of evidence and logic even when they contradict a cherished personal point of view; and the recognition, to the utmost of one's ability, of biases and prejudices in oneself as one strives to become a more effective learner.

Another essential condition of learning is the full freedom and right on the part of individuals and groups to express minority, unpopular, or controversial points of view. If the university is to be viable for all of its members, this right must be particularly cherished, even in the face of massed public pressure and reaction.

Civility is similarly a vital condition for learning. Only if minority or unpopular views are given respect and an opportunity for full, even tediously excessive, hearing will the university provide bonafide opportunities for significant learning through active choice. The alternative is non-choice imposed by habit.

All members of the community—whether faculty, student, administrative or staff—are obligated to protect the integrity of the university as a community of learners from internal or external attacks which lack substance or which are politically motivated. Members are also obliged to prevent financial, political, or other manipulation and exploitation of the campus by any individual or group.

However, members of the community should realize that, in so far as the university fails to be a community of learners, it opens itself to just criticism from within and without. The obligation of the institution in this case is to make changes without delay. Merely closing ranks in defense of procedures or privileges which are no longer viable simply insures that the university will fail to achieve its pedagogic objectives.

Institutional Rights and Obligations

The university has a right and obligation to provide an open forum for the members of the community, regardless of rank or status, to present and debate public issues; to consider the problems of the University; to serve as a mechanism for wide involvement in the life of the community; and to share information and dreams. The style of secrecy and the hidden agenda, which is the style of academic bureaucracy, has no place in the decision-making of learners in the community. The habit of domination by professional or senior tenured faculty, gerocracy or oligarchy, is similarly dysfunctional in a community which aims at mutual support among members for learning.

The university as a corporate body has the obligation to deny the use of its name, its reputation or its facilities in commercial ventures by groups or individuals who are not members of the community. The university also has the obligation to prohibit the use of its name for religious or political activity. However, the use of the university's name is permissible in connection with activities or programs which operate in or from the university and which are seasonably related to the purpose of the university.

The university is obligated to eschew electoral politics or public issues except as these directly affect the integrity, freedom, financial support, or educational programs of the community. At the same time, the university as a corporate entity is obliged to support the right of its members to engage as citizens in the political affairs of the larger society in any manner consistent with the provisions of general law.

The university is obliged to protect members of the community who are physically on campus and visitors from physical harm, personal threats, and vulgar abuse. It is obligated to protect its facilities from damage and unauthorized misuse. The university is obliged to maintain its operating processes without interruption.

At the same time, it is impossible for the university to insist on the good order of the campus unless the university guarantees the right of members of the community to participate meaningfully on matters of policy of moment to the community. In the absence of decisionmaking procedures acceptable to the governed, disorder becomes the only means for direct participation by those who have been treated as if they did not really exist.

As a learning community, the corporate university, through governance structures, has the right and obligation to establish reasonable standards of conduct for its members with their consent so as to most fully provide for the safety of its members, the protection of its facilities and resources, the improvement of the State of Iowa, the good order of the campus, and the maintenance of diversity for the different tastes and sensibilities of all.

Human liberation

Part IV Men's liberation

By BOB DAY

The whole history of sexual roles is evidence that reason and good intent alone are not often sufficient to make men and women realize their common interests. Before significant numbers of men will respond sympathetically to demands couched in sexist rhetoric, they will have to become aware of how the entire inversion of human values to which Women's Liberation addresses itself has equally worked to destroy their own happiness and potential for self-fulfillment. Distortion of sexual roles is a coin of which discrimination against women is but one side. Flip it over and you have a social-sexual milieu that has bred a population of males more sexually hung-up and maladjusted than any in recent history, as any local shrink will tell you. The perverted value-moulding processes that have contributed to our depressingly jaded view of masculinity can be seen in any typical John Wayne or James Bond movie, for example.

"Aha!" you say to yourself gleefully,

"I've got you there! Who says there's anything wrong with being virile and masculine like them? Didn't Jane Russell love it? Doesn't every Raquel Welch want a Silva Thins man?"

I suppose I could answer first by asking where your Jane Russell or Raquel Welch is, or I could suggest a possible terminal deficiency in your taste. But better yet, why not take a look at the effect of these notions of masculinity on the men around you. Observe those victims of the Don Juan-James Bond-John Wayne-Handsomeness Harley Race-syndrome around you, the man who is the envy of all for his great looks, new Stingray, unflappable nonchalance, and legendary success in seducing by speech or spirits a seemingly untold number of those noble virgins that haunt our every dream, always close, but never quite within reach. So what's wrong with that?

Now look again. Get to know this lucky man, this paragon of modern masculinity. Talk with him, become his friend. Get drunk with him some night and the chances are he'll either admit shamefully that he himself began the stories of his amatory conquests or else he'll pull out a faded snapshot from his wallet and admit his unrequited love, not for one of the Barbie doll beauties he's bedded, but for some homely highschool sweetheart back in Walla Walla. The sad fact is that those pitiful few who reach society's ideal state of male fulfillment find their lives at best a drag and at worst a painful burlesque. How can any man remain untouched by a culture which continually puts before men specious standards of virility based on spurious notions of sexual behavior, which puts the quantity of sexual encounters over their quality, which prizes coolness and non-involvement over emotional fullness of expression?

I can only speak for myself, but to my fellow men I can say this: I've had it with the constant and insulting titillation of movies, books, and television shows which seem to assume that I need artificial stimulation or I'll become a eunuch. Thank you, Dean Martin, The Dating Game, et al., but I have full confidence in my ability as a man to produce sufficient quantities of testosterone to meet any eventuality. Go find your own sperm bank.

Thank You Playboy Magazine, the Miss American contest, and countless others, but I have full confidence in my taste in women and I'm not really sure that silicone treatments are good for my sisters or even that I really like 44-inch udders on a woman. So lay off, okay? Besides, I prefer a good rap to a glass of milk any day.

Dear Groom and Clean TV Commercials: You touch one more hair of my crotch and I'll pull the cord on the tube.

The socialization process which has turned us as humans away from our fellow men and women has its roots farther back in our childhood experiences than most of us would care to recall.

Didn't every boy of ten or eleven have one special pal with whom he played and worked as a brother, with whom he shared

To the editor:

Last October, the United States spelled out to the people of Micronesia exactly what her military plans for Micronesia are. There is no doubt in my mind that the military occupation of our island is now a reality.

I am submitting a copy of the letter I wrote to my people concerning the U.S. military plan for Micronesia. I hope it will give you and your readers a clearer idea of how we in Micronesia feel about having our country turned into a military camp.

If the United States would like some open lands to station her troops and store her war machines, I suggest the open flat farm lands along the Interstate 80 or along Highway 6 in Iowa. I am sure the farmers would appreciate the thoughtfulness of the government. Wouldn't you agree?

Dear Friends and People of Micronesia:

It troubles me to hear that the United States plans to build more military bases in Micronesia. This plan was revealed during the negotiations on the Future Political Status of Micronesia between the United States Representatives and the Representatives of the Congress of Micronesia which was held in Hawaii in October 1971. According to reports the United States wants the following: (A) She wants the Marianas, particularly Tinian for a multi-runway air base; (B) She wants to retain her present missile test range facilities and other classified sites on Kwajalein and Eniwetok; (C) She wants to build a naval base in Palau. She also wants a 40 acre storage facility for nuclear warheads and possibly gas on Babelthup along with a marine guerrilla training center; (D) Furthermore, she wants to retain a special right over Micronesia called "emergency rights." What can be more shocking than to learn that our Micronesia is going to be occupied once again by foreign troops? In order to soften our hearts, the United States offered to drop her insistence on maintaining the right of eminent domain over all Micronesia land. But this concession was predicated on our acceptance of the United States plans for military bases and emergency rights.

My friends, we are about to be caught in one of the Pentagon's well constructed, imperialistic, booby traps. Military bases in Micronesia are certainly not in the best interest of the people of Micronesia. The main function of the military is to fight. Military bases, therefore, invite war and destruction. We must not forget what happened to Micronesia during World War II. War came to Micronesia during the second world war because the Japanese had their military bases in Micronesia. Our mistake, then, was that we sat quietly and let the Japanese build their bases on our islands. As a result, our people were killed and our properties were destroyed by a war that we did not have any part of. Shall we repeat the same mistake again? Search your minds and hearts, my fellow Micronesians. No, my friends, we must not again be victims of our own silence.

Conditions for discussion

To me, if the United States wants to talk about the need for military bases in Micronesia, she must agree first to the following points before any negotiation concerning military bases can be considered:

- (1) That the United States officially declares and recognize that the three million square miles of ocean which constitute the present area called Micronesia is Territorial water of Micronesia; and that Micronesia alone has the sovereign right over these three million square miles of ocean and the sea bottom. The ocean floor that stretches 1,300 miles from North to South and 2,500 miles from East to West is the legal prolongation of the mountain tips that form 2,203 islands of Micronesia. Economic necessity, national security, health and general welfare of our people and islands demand the recognition of our sovereignty over the ocean area of Micronesia.
- (2) That there must be no dumping of chemical or biological warfare materials or other harmful agent in the ocean of Micronesia.
- (3) That there must be no experiment and development of military weapons in Micronesia.
- (4) That there must be no nuclear, biological or chemical weapon brought into Micronesia for storage or for transit to other areas of the world. If any such weapons are presently stored in Micronesia, they must be removed.

The military in Micronesia

By what right does the United States Government propose to return to the people of Micronesia the land of Micronesia and to relinquish the right of eminent domain in exchange for military bases and "emergency rights?" The United States owns no land in Micronesia. The right of eminent domain lies in the people of Micronesia. The United States cannot and must not be allowed to use these rights to bargain for her military bases in Micronesia because she has no right to do so. The United States holds only as a Trustee the right of ownership of land and the right of eminent domain. By virtue of the Trusteeship Agreement with the United Nations, which gave the United States the possession of Micronesia, the United States was made the guardian of the land of Micronesia to prevent it from being either unlawfully or forcefully appropriated by outside powers. It is clear from the language of Article 7b sec. 2 of the Trusteeship Agreement that the United States owns no land in Micronesia nor does she have a general power of eminent domain except in her capacity as administrator of the Government of the Trust Territory for the welfare of the people of Micronesia. The right to own lands and the right to condemn private land for public use lie in the people of Micronesia as a sovereign body. As a trustee of these rights United States is violating her trust by appropriating unto herself the very rights which she is supposed to protect. This is a crime.

My friends and people, the right to own our lands, the right of eminent domain, the right to determine our social, economic, and political future, the right to draft our own constitution and the right to pursue happiness are fundamental rights inherent in us as people of Micronesia. They can not be given to us. Throughout the history of the foreign occupation of Micronesia to the present time, our exercise of these rights have always been suppressed. Nevertheless, we have these rights. Today if the United States stops her present colonialistic policy we can, and we will, exercise these rights. However, if these rights were to be given to us by United States Government, our rights will not be rights but mere privileges, and are revokable at the will of the granting country, the United States. Let us not, therefore compromise our fundamental rights.

(5) That bombs and other weapons which are not classified under point 4 must not be stored in Micronesia on permanent basis.

(6) That members of the Congress of Micronesia or their duly appointed representatives should have annual on-site inspection on all the military installations including ships, submarines, and airplanes to determine whether the military complies with all the above conditions.

(7) That failure to comply will result in the removal of military bases from Micronesia.

When the United States agrees to the above conditions, then and only then we can begin to think of the possibility of negotiation for military bases in Micronesia. Otherwise, the military should not come at all. The social and cultural cost of having military bases in Micronesia outweigh the economic benefits, let alone the other risks involved. God gave us and our children and, hopefully, their children peaceful and beautiful islands to live in, to till their lands and harvest their seas for food. Why make it a military dump?

"Who gives a damn?"

I oppose the United States plan to set up bases in Micronesia because I believe it is not in our best interest. I cannot overlook the fact that the United States does not really care what we do and what happens to us as long as she has what she wants. How much the United States Government cares about us as people is best measured by a quote made by Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's National Security Advisor. He was quoted in the book by former Secretary of Interior Hickel, as saying, "There are only 90,000 people out there. Who gives a damn?" My friends, you and I give a damn because this is our Micronesia, our home, and our fatherland. We give a damn because we have seen what military bases did to Micronesia in World War II. We give a damn because we have experienced Bikini atoll where American security and United States "military necessity" caused the removal of the inhabitants of that atoll to an uninhabited rat-infested island because Bikini was to be the first casualty of United States' H-bomb. We give a damn because we heard people like Congresswoman Patsy Mink who advocates the break of Saipan from the rest of Micronesia. But most of all, we care for the simple reason that we are Micronesians. It will be a shame if we let the United States Government talk us into digging our own graves.

In conclusion, let me say once again that it is my belief that the presence of such military bases in Micronesia as proposed by the United States will, in a long run, cause more problems than good for our people. The friendship that exists between our people and the American people will continue to flourish if the military does not come to Micronesia. It is my belief that we can build our society and foster our economic growth without the help of military dollars.

To the young people in Micronesia, it is time that you speak your minds. This generation of Micronesians faces the most trying years of its history. What we do or don't today will effect our lives far into the future.

To you my friends, people and leaders of Micronesia, I wish you success in your struggle to preserve the principles in which we believe. For myself I cannot compromise with my own principles and be true to myself. For this reason I am obliged to say that history has taught us that the pursuit of happiness and self-determination, the establishment of justice, the promotion of general welfare, and establishment of freedom for ourselves and our children and their children cannot and must not be founded on military money.

Says settlement of coal strike is forthcoming Apartment hunting? Check this list

By NANCY STEVENS
Daily Iowan Staff Writer
(First in Series of Two)

LONDON (AP) — The toll of jobless approached three million Wednesday because of the power crisis and Britons were told to expect even more hours without lights and heat.

But a bright spot appeared. An independent inquiry into the coal miners' strike that has forced electricity cuts came to an end and its members promised to recommend a pay settlement by Friday. If accepted by the government's Coal Board and the union, an end could come by the weekend to Britain's worst blackout since the blitz in World War II.

All hope of averting a total shutdown of Britain's coalfield electric power plants within the next two weeks rested on the success of the three-man inquiry headed by Lord Wilberforce, a former High Court judge.

His panel originally had been expected to take 15 days before suggesting a way out of the power crisis that threatens to close British industry and throw 20 million men out of work, by the end of the month.

But it finished its hearings after only two days, split evenly between the striking miners and the state-run Coal Board.

The government-named panel can recommend but not impose a settlement. The Coal Board, however, has promised to accept whatever recommendations the inquiry makes for settling the strike, now in its sixth week. The miners have made no such pledge.

Nevertheless with the bite from nationwide electric power cuts getting worse each day, pressure was building up on both sides to reach an early settlement.

British industry, already down to a three-day work week because of the shortage of power supplies, laid off hundreds of thousands of additional workers.

Power cuts turning off heat and light in homes across the country sharply increased. In the morning between 5 and 10 per cent of the nation's power supply was withheld to conserve dwindling fuel stocks. By the afternoon the figure had risen to 15 per cent and authorities warned it could hit 20 per cent.

For individual homes this means power cuts of up to nine hours a day, with three-hour blackouts following three hours of power supplies.

Food supplies were threatened as processing plants reported that further power cuts would cripple production.

Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative government, severely criticized by the opposition all week on charges of intervening too little and too late in the power crisis, faced a crucial test in Parliament.

Debate opened on the enabling legislation needed to bring Britain into the European Common Market. Rejection in the vote Thursday would force Heath's government to resign.

Students who are now beginning to hunt for apartments for next semester should be careful in choosing landlords, says John C. Cain, 22, 21 1/2 East College Street, former coordinator of the University of Iowa Protective Association for Tenants (PAT).

Cain said that he has compiled over the last year a list of landlords about whom PAT has received numerous complaints. Named on the list are: Max D. Yocum, 808 South Dubuque Street; Stella S. Scott, 705 South Dubuque Street; Ron R. Cochran, 23 Durham Court; Harvey Wyjack, 625 Emerald Street; Nancy McCleery, 930 West Park Road; Westhampton Village, Coralville; Carol Ann Apartments, Coralville; Iowa Development Corp.; and the Scotsdale Apartments.

"These are landlords to stay away from, if possible," Cain said. One landlord named on the list, Max D. Yocum, was charged with attempted illegal evictions, Cain said. In addition, "Yocum raised the rent on one apartment without notice," Cain said, "and then tried to collect the increase for three months previous to the raise."

"We received one complaint on him involving a tenant who was without electricity and heat for two months because Yocum didn't get around to having some things fixed," he explained.

Stella S. Scott, a realtor, is on the list for failure to bring her property up to standards of the Iowa City housing code, according to Cain. Cain said that raising rent "astronomically" is the reason for Ron R. Cochran, being placed on the list. "Cochran also misuses his right to enter the apartment," said Cain.

More complaints have been registered against Harvey Wyjack, than any other landlord in the city, Cain said.

The complaints usually stem from Wyjack's failure to return damage deposits, explained Cain. "He's been taken to court more than any landlord we deal with."

Wyjack said he had no knowledge of Cain or his list.

"As far as the damage deposits are concerned, out of $9,000 in damage deposits, I've given $7,000 back. When the students leave the apartment in a condition that repairs are necessary, we have to keep the deposit," Wyjack said.

Cain said that Nancy McCleery had been charged with renting substandard housing, but when contacted by The Daily Iowan, she said, "The property they're referring to was found not to violate the codes last week in court."

Extremely large increases in rent have also placed Westhampton Village on the list of apartments to be wary of, Cain said.

Carol Ann Apartments was listed for having the harshest lease in the city and allegedly discriminating in the amount of damage deposits required by tenants.

Cain said that the Iowa Development Corp. had been charged with failure to make repairs at one of the dwellings that it had rented, and that Scotsdale Apartments, managed by Dale Deever, Route 6, had allegedly evicted a tenant without proper notice.

The Daily Iowan was unable to contact all of the landlords named by Cain.

Cain said that he compiled the list when he was in charge of PAT, and that "there should probably be more names on it by now."

Robert T. Handy, 24, 926C Westhampton Village, who became the PAT co-ordinator four weeks ago, said that he was at work compiling his own list of landlords that complaints have been received about.

In the meantime, he is referring people to Cain's list, he said.

Handy said that PAT has published other guidelines to help tenants in dealing with landlords, and prospective tenants when searching for an apartment.

Verbal agreements between landlord and tenant are worth nothing according to Handy who advises tenants to "get it down in writing or forget it."

Handy said that another problem in leasing an apartment stems from the clause which gives the landlord the prerogative of subletting.

"The landlord can hold the tenant to completing the terms of the lease, including making the tenant pay rent during the summer months unless the sub-let clause is changed before signing," Handy said. "It must be changed to allow the tenant to sublet the apartment if he has to move," he added.

"The standard lease used by most landlords in Iowa City affords no protection to the tenants whatsoever," and it's slanted in favor of the landlord, Handy said.

"Tenants in Iowa City do not know what help is available to them," he said.

"Many times when they see an apartment they like, the landlord sticks a piece of paper in front of them and they sign, later finding out they were screwed," he explained.

"Before signing a lease, if there is any question about it, we encourage prospective tenants to bring the lease to our office in the Union and we'll go over it with him until he understands it," said Handy.

In treatment

A newborn baby suffering from hyaline membrane disease, in which a glassy membrane covers the air sacs of the lungs, undergoes "continuous positive airway pressure" in the Washington Hospital Center. Find new treatment for fatal infant disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Employing a new method to aid breathing, researchers report dramatically promising results in treating hyaline membrane disease, a leading killer of newborn infants.

Often called glassy-lung disease, it caused the death of the infant son of President John F. Kennedy.

Early reports show survival rates of from 70 to 90 per cent for the disease that three years ago killed half its victims and a decade ago killed up to 7 out of 10.

Today the disease causes the death of between 20,000 and 25,000 infants, virtually all of them premature.

Usually striking within 72 hours after birth, the disease is characterized by formation of thin, glassy-appearing membrane over the millions of microscopic air sacs in the lungs.

This hyaline membrane, deriving its name for the Greek word for glass, inhibits or blocks the ability of the tiny air sacs to pass on life-sustaining oxygen to an infant's blood.

The new treatment, called "continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP)," was developed in 1969 by Dr. George A. Gregory, 37, of San Francisco's Moffitt Hospital. Reports of work with the treatment are coming to light only now.

Dr. Gregory said in an interview that 9 out of 10 of the glassy-lung cases he's treated since 1969 have survived.

He stressed that the new treatment is applicable only to babies who have some ability to breathe, however slight. But he added that such infants constitute 90 per cent of all victims.

The treatment forces moistened, oxygen-rich air under continuous pressure into the lungs of stricken infants whose disease is characterized also by a tendency for the lungs to collapse and become stiffened.

The treatment's purpose is to keep the lungs partially expanded like inflated balloons, thus increasing the surface area available for still unclogged air sacs to feed oxygen into the

Goetz calls in 3 more cops

The Johnson County Grand Jury again heard testimony Wednesday on allegations of brutality by the Iowa City police force.

County Atty. Carl J. Goetz called three witnesses, all city police officers, before the jury Wednesday.

Goetz convened the jury Tuesday to hear the results of his six-week long investigation into charges that link Police Chief Patrick J. McCarney to abuse of prisoners here. Eight witnesses, including six local policemen, testified Tuesday.

Goetz said Wednesday that he will make a statement today on his decision to take the matter before the grand jury. He had announced he would make the statement Wednesday, but did not.

The county attorney said that additional witnesses may be called to testify in the investigation if the grand jury wants more evidence.

Director says ISA $13,000 in debt

A spokesman for Iowa Student Agencies (ISA) told the Student Senate Wednesday night that ISA was $13,000 in debt.

James C. Smittkamp, member of the ISA Board of Directors, reported that although the recent book exchange had been very successful, ISA remained $13,000 in debt. He added, however, that he was expecting a $2,000 reimbursement from fire insurance on The Hulk, the agency-owned bar, which burned in November.

Smittkamp said the recent ISA book exchange sold more than $26,000 worth of books with an expected profit "of a couple thousand dollars." However, when asked about the birthday cake sales, Smittkamp said that "birthday cakes just might be a loser."

He did not explain the reason for the ISA debt, although Robert P. Sommers, chairman of the board told The Daily Iowan Tuesday that ISA did not have any money problems.

Senator James E. Liebermann then submitted a bill which was approved by senate for the establishment of a joint ad-hoc committee to study and define the relationship between the senate and ISA. The committee will consist of three representatives from both groups and a seventh impartial member.

In other action, the senate approved a bill proposal by Gregory E. Herrick which called for funding radio station KSUI's nightly rock music show.

Upset with the lack of quorums in past weeks, Herrick said, "I know that if we (senate) said 'no' tonight, it would go off the air immediately."

The bill passed 12 to 10 and funds amounting to $564.50 will be allocated. However, the funding is contingent "upon the availability of funds after all previous senate commitments are met."

The senate also appointed Mark S. Harding, a second year law student, to the board of the Student Development Center.

The senate also accepted the judicial committee's report concerning efforts to re-establish student representation on a proposed judicial board.

One senator, Archie L. Schrottenboar said that it would be ridiculous to eventually go ahead with the board because, "we don't have any power over the tenure of our judicial representatives anyway."

Senate tables bill to create ecology dept.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Senate Wednesday voted 38-9 to refuse to go along with House amendments to the bill that would create a Department of Environmental Quality and decided, instead, to route the bill to a conference committee.

A prime point of contention was a House amendment that would have left the Chemical Technology Review Committee under the Department of Agriculture instead of placing it in the new department.

But there were other reasons for sending the measure to a joint committee to iron out differences. Sen. Charles O. Lavery, R-Indianola, said "I would hope that it could come out of the conference committee a better bill."

He said the bill needed some provisions about who should be among the 28 persons appointed to the various boards by the governor.

Lavery proposed that the entire current chemical unit be placed under the new department and farmers be given a role in the other agencies that would be included in the new department.

Lavery, a farmer, said that farmers should be represented on the air pollution, water pollution and waste control committees as well as the chemical board.

Sen. Richard Stephens, R-Crawfordsville, argued in favor of concurring with the amendment.

Prison inmate fatally stabbed, no suspects yet

FORT MADISON, Iowa (AP) — Investigators said Wednesday they had no suspects in custody in connection with the fatal stabbing Tuesday night of an inmate at the state penitentiary here.

Frederick T. Meyer, 27, Des Moines, who was serving a 10-year sentence for breaking and entering, was dead on arrival at a hospital.

The stabbing reportedly occurred while Meyer and other inmates viewed a movie at the prison.

Paul Hedgepeth, assistant to Warden Lou Brewer, said there was no scuffle in the viewing area.

According to Dale Buhl of the State Department of Social Services, Meyer "walked up the aisle to the back of the theater holding his neck, then collapsed in the lobby."

State Director of Adult Corrections Nolan Ellandson, said attempts by prison officials to halt the manufacture of illegal knives "seems futile sometimes." Eliminating the use of knives in the prison kitchen has been considered, he noted.

Nixon's campaign office target of bomb threat

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — The bombing of police and fire headquarters here Wednesday has been linked by the state attorney general to plans to blow up the New Hampshire primary headquarters of President Nixon.

A man and a woman were arrested and charged in the bombings shortly after the three blasts occurred. Atty. Gen. Warren Rudman said that when the two were taken into custody a news release concerning the bombings also was obtained.

The release said that besides the police station, the Nixon headquarters also had been a target. No bomb was found at the headquarters, where 12 anti-war demonstrators were arrested Saturday during a talk by George Romney, secretary of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Rudman said the news release linked the bombings to a group called "The People's Liberation Army." Referring to the anti-Nixon demonstration, the typewritten statement said "the pigs viciously attacked them" and that "while demonstrations like this are necessary, we are not going to get far, always fighting on the pigs' terms."

Arrested were Jaan Karl Laaman, 23, Buffalo, N.Y., also listed as Karl A. Laaman, and Kathryn A. Holt, 21, with addresses in Boston, Buffalo, N.Y., and Portsmouth and Dover, N.H.

Research chief says he'll quit; cites fund woes

By STEVE MAXWELL
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

The director of the Iowa Opinion Research Bureau (IORB) has announced that he will resign because of little hope for financial compensation for key personnel and a lack of student and faculty enthusiasm for the bureau.

Stephen R. Miller, 21, 707 North Dubuque Street, who created IORB last summer on a non-profit basis, said Wednesday he will resign as director of the bureau after completion of an upcoming national college poll.

He said that his organization has grown so fast that he has had to put in almost 40 hours a week to keep it going.

Miller added that although academic credit is available for his position as director, it alone doesn't justify that large a commitment of time: "a commitment which should be shared by many."

"I'm tired of getting complimentary notes and pats on the back from administrators and faculty and nothing else," Miller said. "It's not that I don't appreciate their encouragement, but no one at any level is willing to take responsibility and I'm left to do all the running, spend all the time, and even provide occasional financial support when we slip into the red for a while."

To remedy this situation Miller submitted a proposal to the Student Publications Inc. and then to the University of Iowa Foundation which called for a $3,000 salary a year for the IORB Director.

Miller pointed out that this salary is "quite low" when one considers the hours behind it.

He also said that this much money will be necessary to get a director to take over the burden of the program for next year.

If the Iowa Foundation rejects the proposal and no compensation can be arranged from other sources, IORB will be dissolved May 1, he said.

The only alternative to dissolving the bureau would be to reorganize it on a non-profit basis only after enough money has been earned to pay the necessary salaries.

"This would take a great deal of work in the form of planning and negotiation with the university and current customers," Miller said.

"There is also a question as to whether this would be legal since it would mean that a body authorized by the regents and SPI Board would be competing with local and national commercial interests while under the protection of the university."

Since the bureau's future is in doubt, and the legal question is open, Miller said that he has turned down some commercial offers.

If the IORB does dissolve in May, Miller said that many individuals and groups would be affected. Among them are: students who work for IORB for course credit, 25 newspapers which have contracted for poll results, more than 20 schools which have organizations and courses based on IORB, and SPI Board, which would lose a potential source of profits.

All research and survey work, except for the national college poll, has been suspended pending the outcome of Miller's proposal to the Iowa Foundation, he said.

Buy an automotive lemon? Demand a replacement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any irate housewife knows what to do with a new toaster that doesn't work: Demand a refund or a replacement.

The thought of returning a new $3,000 automotive lemon, however, never occurs to most car buyers. But the principle, spelled out in the laws of every state except Louisiana, applies to cars as well as toasters.

The principle is called "revocation of acceptance." While it's relatively new, a growing number of successful actions for refunds on cars shows that it can work.

With a lawyer's help, a suburban Detroit woman who complained her compact car had transmission trouble convinced the dealer to return her money. A Springfield, Mass., couple had to fight through the courts for three years, but the courts finally agreed the couple had been within their rights by stopping payment on their $2,550 check for a new car.

Revocation of acceptance means a car buyer can return a seriously defective car within a reasonable time if he has given the dealer a chance to repair the vehicle.

The principle was written into the Uniform Commercial Code drafted in 1951 by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and subsequently adopted by 49 states. The code does not fit in with the laws of Louisiana, which are based on the French Napoleonic Code rather than English Common Law.

Major American automakers say they have no records of their experience with revocation of acceptance and described its incidence as rare. But Lowell Dodge, director of the Center for Auto Safety and co-author with Ralph Nader of "What To Do With Your Bad Car," says mention of revocation in the book drew responses from six persons who used the tactic successfully in less than a year.

An illustration of how revocation of acceptance can work was provided by James O. Druker, a Justice Department lawyer who was working in the Massachusetts attorney general's office when he bought a new Buick convertible three years ago.

His troubles with the car included various rattles and creaking noises, a clunk in the rear, a harsh ride, a rear radio speaker which didn't work and a top which leaked.

The dealer was able to repair some of the faults, but not all of them so when Druker discovered that the clunk in the rear was a shock absorber that hadn't been connected, he parked the car in the dealer's lot, left on the windshield a letter explaining he was revoking acceptance, and sent a copy of the letter by registered mail to the dealer.

The dealer responded with a plea for one more chance. Druker agreed.

A month later, after several more futile trips to the dealer's shop, Druker repeated his revocation procedure and filed in Massachusetts Superior Court for a refund. The dealer settled out of court for a refund of the purchase price less depreciation.

Based on his experience, Druker offers a series of suggestions:

—Demand a test drive of a model similar to the one you want.

—Get assurances that the dealer will remedy any manufacturing defects.

—Keep a written record of all defects, provide a written trouble list to the service manager every time you take the car in and keep a record of service and repairs.

—In a letter of revocation, list all the defects you have encountered.

—Check the mileage on the car when you revoke acceptance. Increased mileage at a later date can be evidence the seller has taken possession.

Druker warns also that improper revocation can lead to the dealer reselling the car and suing for damages. Providing the dealer with a chance to fix the car is usually an adequate defense.

Nader and Dodge have simple advice for anyone contemplating revocation: Get a lawyer.

Night blast off planned Set last Apollo mission

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 17, the last planned manned mission to the moon, will be launched Dec. 6 and it's scheduled to land in a moon mountain valley thought to be filled with volcanic ash, the space agency announced Wednesday.

The landing point will be in the center of the upper right quarter of the moon, as viewed from the earth, several hundred miles north of the Apollo 11 landing site.

Scientists and engineers made the site selection from high resolution photographs taken during Apollo 15.

Officials said the site offers a combination of terrain—with rugged mountains and cliffs, a spectacular rock slide, the flat dark valley thought to be volcanic material, and nearby peaks thought to be volcanic cinder cones.

Launch of Apollo 17 should be spectacular. It is scheduled for 9:38 p.m. and will be the first Apollo blastoff at night.

Apollo 17's crew will include the first academically trained geologist, scientist-astronaut Harrison Schmitt. Commander of the mission will be veteran spaceman Eugene Cernan, and the third crewman is space rookie Ronald E. Evans. Cernan and Schmitt will land on the moon while Evans remains in orbit.

Cernan and Schmitt will use a lunar rover car to visit a number of geology investigation sites on the moon. Presence of possible volcanoes near the site makes it particularly attractive to scientists.

Would alter redistricting rules

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The House has received a proposed constitutional amendment that attempts to get around some of the restrictive ground rules laid down by the Iowa Supreme Court when it ruled both the 1969 and 1971 legislature's reapportionment plans unconstitutional.

The chief sponsor of the proposed amendment, Rep. Elizabeth Shaw, R-Davenport, said Wednesday the measure would allow the legislature "to reapportion itself in 1980 and thereafter."

She pointed out that a three-judge federal panel has drafted a reapportionment plan for the Minnesota Legislature using some criteria which have been denied to the Iowa Legislature.

The requirement that both the Senate and the House must be apportioned on a population basis would be retained, she noted, but the measure would require that Iowa reapportionment standards must not exceed those required by the U.S. Constitution.

The Iowa Supreme Court in declaring the 1971 legislature's reapportionment plan unconstitutional said the lawmakers adopted a "de minimis standard" of population equality among districts, allowing deviations from the largest to the smallest population districts of up to 5 per cent.

"De minimis" means that the legislature considered the population deviations so small as to make no difference.

It also held the legislature allowed "impermissible considerations" to dilute the goal of making all districts as equal in population as possible.

These included "protecting incumbents in office, preserving present districts, avoiding joining part of a rural county with an urban county, and insuring the passage of a reapportionment bill..."

Ms. Shaw's amendment would contain the safeguard that "no apportionment adopted for either the House of Representatives or the Senate shall encompass districts wherein a constitutional majority of members of either house shall represent less than 50 per cent of the population of the state" as shown by the last federal decennial census.

Ms. Shaw is chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments and Reapportionment Committee, which did most of the work on the 1971 legislature's reapportionment plan.

The Minnesota Legislature in 1971 went through a regular and a special session without adopting a reapportionment plan.

In the lawsuit which followed, a three-judge federal court panel declared the Minnesota reapportionment statutes unconstitutional and said it would put into effect a reapportionment plan of its own. The Minnesota

Senate now has appealed the plan to the U.S. Supreme Court.

But the court also decided that "minor deviations not to exceed 2 per cent" would be allowed, if they facilitated another federal court criterion—to avoid fracturing political subdivision boundaries.

Ms. Shaw said the Iowa Supreme Court ruling was more restrictive on both these points.

She said it had ruled that a "bona fide" effort must be made to achieve mathematical-ly precise population equality in legislative districts.

The 2 per cent deviation from the "ideal" population district allowed by the federal court, she said, was in reality a "de minimis standard" which the Iowa Supreme Court said can't be used in Iowa.

Ceremony set for nursing sophomores

Sophomore nursing students in the University of Iowa will be honored Sunday in a traditional ceremony.

Women in the 121 member class will receive their nursing caps, while two men will receive embroidered uniform emblems.

The event—formerly known as the capping ceremony—begins at 1:30 p.m. in the Main Lounge of the Union.

Mackey Torbett, a graduate assistant in anatomy, will address the students, while Etta Rasmussen, acting dean of the UI College of Nursing, will welcome the class. Asst. Prof. Margaret Moore, sophomore adviser, will present the students for recognition.

Frederick Binder of Marcus, and Philip Maynard of Elwood are among the students who will be honored.

Dinner, dance to raise funds for candidate

Davenport's Chicano community has scheduled a taco dinner and dance for Saturday to raise funds for the congressional campaign of John Schmidhauser.

Schmidhauser, now on a leave of absence from the University of Iowa, is seeking the Democratic nomination for the First District seat in the House.

The dinner will be from 4 to 7:30 p.m., while the dance runs from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Tickets, at $1.75 each, may be purchased at the Chicano-Indian American Student Union in Iowa City. Both the dinner and the dance will be held at the LuLac Club in Davenport.

Senate ejects DI reporter

Joel Dryer, a reporter for The Daily Iowan, was asked to leave the floor of the Iowa Senate Wednesday by the sergeant-at-arms because Dryer was not wearing a tie.

Dryer, a legislative correspondent for The DI, said he was not aware of the rule requiring a shirt, tie and coat. He was wearing a turtle-neck sweater and sport coat when ejected.

"I wasn't very upset," Dryer said. "I just went over to the House side where the rules don't require a tie."

I wonder about Donnelly's business practices. I bought a pitcher of beer there for $1.05, but it contained enough beer for only four $.20 glasses. Is this their regular practice or was I slighted?—N.H.

After skimming through the foam, SURVIVAL LINE wonders how you brewed up such a whopper. You're right about the price of a pitcher. A big ol' 39 ounce jug will cost you $1.05.

Manager Harold Donnelly tells SURVIVAL LINE, glasses are seven ounces for $.25. According to precise mathematical calculations that means you can fill more than five glasses (only 35 ounces) that would individually cost you $1.25.

So chug it down friend, the world isn't really against you.

I am planning to operate a small record and novelty shop during the summer months in my home town and would like to know how to contact record distributors from whom I could buy wholesale records.—J.P.

Talk about the music dying; it's not even going to begin unless you have $5000 according to Jack Neidt, salesman for J.L. Marsh, Inc. of Des Moines.

Mr. Neidt told SURVIVAL LINE that the record business is not one you can go in and out of with no sweat. If you plan to make some money you must make an investment for a considerable time period and be prepared to do business.

If you still wish to enter the business, Neidt gave SURVIVAL LINE two steps you can pick from to start. You can either contact every major manufacturer such as Columbia, Capital, etc. for information or get hold of a "rack-jobber" such as ABC, Acme, J.L. A "rack-jobber" (wholesaler) would supply you with everything available including the records, tapes, and accessories.

I've got a friend who dropped out of the University here just before Thanksgiving. He's been charged by the University, though for second semester parking storage, $12.50. Is there any way to clear this up? It doesn't seem that he should have to pay for something he's not using.—J.M.

Directions in rock music---

Rock that won't unplug

By TED PATROU
For The Daily Iowan

Out there in radioland, the great American public retains its hope that loud, electric rock music will go away, that its audience will grow tired of it, and that somehow, various governmental restrictions can be placed on it in the attempt to bring on its death.

Anti-noise laws, anti-festival laws, radio permits with restrictions and uproar concerning music lyrics all lead in the same direction.

Newspapers are no exception, running various articles of rock corruption that are a blend of error, fantasy, misunderstanding and distortion.

A good example is promoter Bill Graham's difficulties with rock groups who were raising their performance fees. The media responded in hopeful prediction that the groups would price themselves out of work. When Graham closed his Fillmore locations, headlines called it the "death of rock", even though today he is promoting possibly more shows than ever.

The media would like to believe that the music is no good any more. The truth of the matter is, that it is not. Pop music will never return to the pasteurized reality substitute of Patti Page, Pat Boone and the rest of the pap which for so long a time dominated popular music.

At the outset of rock's battle, the established economic interest of old line publishers and their representative agency, ASCAP fought the new music under the claim that something they gave definition to as the great American music was being subverted. Psychiatrists predicted malicious developments.

Now, doctors predict harmful effects from the volume of sounds. But what has actually happened in the last ten years is that the despised music of young people (despised by their elders, that is, and by those whose economic interests were hurt by it) has come to be the music of the world. Not only has that music firmly established itself across boundaries and Berlin walls, it has set styles and values in the lives of the people it represents.

It is true, as Abbie Hoffman and John Lennon say, that long hair no longer is a badge of rebellion or even of difference. Chicago businessmen, New York designers and others have adopted the outer manifestations of the new culture. Underneath that, the change is not so definite yet. Many long hairs are discovering that the greedy, exploitative tendencies they attribute to blue-suited, cigar-smoking businessmen can be just as ugly and explosive if the individual is wearing long, hair, modified Gunsmoke costume and carrying a sack of Rolling Stones LPs.

It is also true that the people who opposed rock music and who called it revolutionary were correct in their conclusions even if their reasons were shaky. Every note of Janis Joplin and Joan Baez or the many others that is disseminated over the radio or the jukebox is a small time bomb of change, infinite in its potential, even if slight in its immediate impact. We are seeing the beginning of a new society.

Networks cut 'theater' movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Four years ago, CBS and ABC launched ambitious programs to produce feature movies for theaters. Today both networks have drastically curtailed their film subsidiaries and are re-evaluating future activities.

Recently Leonard H. Golden-son, president of American Broadcasting Co., admitted the curtailment of ABC Pictures and said future filming proposals "are being carefully reviewed." Martin Baum, who headed the feature operation, left the company Feb. 1 to produce independently.

CBS has announced that it is taking "a hard look at our Cinema Center Films operation, particularly with reference to economics and future projects." Several executives have left Cinema Center, but operations continue at the network's venture into theater movies.

"CBS couldn't have picked a worse time to enter the field," declared Gordon L. Stulberg, who headed Cinema Center and now is president of 20th Century-Fox.

"The operation started just at the time that top stars started getting a million dollars a picture and when some directors were going wild and doubling their pictures' budgets. We have to pay huge prices to get stars like Jack Lemmon, John Wayne, Lee Marvin and Steve McQueen. We needed names like those to enter the film market in an important way.

"I think we succeeded." Stulberg pointed to the costs vs. grosses of some of Cinema Center's big winners: "Little Big Man," $9 million-$23 million; "Big Jake," $4.4 million-$12 million; "A Man Called Horse," $4.4 million-$12 million; "The Reivers," $5.5 million-$12 million.

Of course, there were losers, too, and Wall Street sources have estimated a more than $10 million loss for Cinema Center in 1971. But Stulberg observed that CBS now has an inventory of 30 prestigious films which have not yet been tapped for reissue or sale to television.

In the same vein, Martin Baum admitted that the "timing was bad" for the ABC movie operation, "but I felt that our mistakes were behind us."

Uncertain future for Olympic winter games

SAPPORO, Japan (AP)—The Winter Olympic Games, which grew from a modest start in 1924 to Sapporo's stupendous production in 1972, face threats to their existence in the future.

If they meet that challenge, the Winter Games probably never again will have a host nation willing to spend the $70 million needed in Japan.

Denver, Colo., has won the games for 1976 and planners from there talk of an "Economical Olympics" with competition sites at three widely separated locations—Denver, Steamboat Springs, and Vail.

They envision an airlift to make travel between those sites possible. And they don't want to build a four-man bobsled run.

Avery Brundage, the 84-year-old president of the International Olympic Committee, who retires this year, urges that the Winter Olympics be dropped.

His argument is that they have become too costly and only relatively few nations compete in the skiing, skating and sled competitions. There were 35 countries represented at Sapporo.

When Austria's Karl Schranz was banned from the 1972 Games on charges of professionalism, the action pointed up another major problem facing the Olympics.

International federations in the various sports feel they should have jurisdiction over eligibility in their specialties. While Brundage argues that professionalism is rampant in Alpine and Nordic skiing, the federations claim they police amateurism according to their rules.

Schranz was certified by the International Ski Federation FIS but disqualified after he had arrived at Sapporo. The Austrian ski officials declared "there was absolutely no solid evidence" against him. Austria had threatened to withdraw its entire team but when Schranz asked the others to compete, the threat died. However, had the Austrians not already made the expensive trip to Japan before the IOC action, the reaction might have been different.

Most believe a Winter Olympics would fail without Alpine skiing as one of the big attractions.

When Brundage retires, it seems likely that either the Count de Beaumont of France or Lord Killanin of Ireland will succeed him.

Beaumont has a winter sports background. Killanin has not. Whether they share the views of Brundage will be known following the election.

Brundage claims few cities, or nations, would be willing to spend the huge sums that were needed at Squaw Valley, Calif., in 1960, Innsbruck, Austria, in 1964 and Grenoble, France in 1968.

Sion in Switzerland was among those bidding against Denver for 1976 and some other cities have shown interest in staging a Winter Olympics.

How the rising cost factor would influence them remains to be seen.

Japan had a special reason for developing the Makomanai area near Sapporo, a city of 1,040,000. The island of Honshu, where Tokyo is located, has a tremendous population in limited areas. The island of Hokkaido to the north has area with Sapporo as its major city.

Construction of the Olympic Village and living facilities for the press have developed a new area for the populace.

After the games, the apartments will be used for housing Japanese and the publicity of the Olympics should make Hokkaido and Sapporo better known throughout the world.

Denver Olympic planners say they can stage the games for $30 million and will get part back from television and ticket sales.

However, Steamboat Springs is 150 miles from Denver and Vail is 93, meaning long transportation hauls. Few people will be able to see both skiing and other sports on the same day.

Using Vail and Steamboat Springs, though, should reduce the complaints of residents at Evergreen, near Denver, who didn't want Olympic facilities built in their area. They claimed there would be permanent damage to the environment.

In the case of Vail, particularly, the costs will be reduced since it is an already developed Alpine skiing area.

Between now and 1976, the Denver planners know they face problems with their new concepts.

Some international athletes don't rank the Olympics as the No. 1 event for their sport. Many Alpine skiers, for instance, say their World Cup competition is more important because it continues throughout the season every year while the Olympics are only once in four years.

There have been suggestions that professionals be permitted to compete in the Olympics, and arguments that some nations subsidize their winter athletes fully.

Brundage declares no pros. Others argue that subsidization amounts to professionalism.

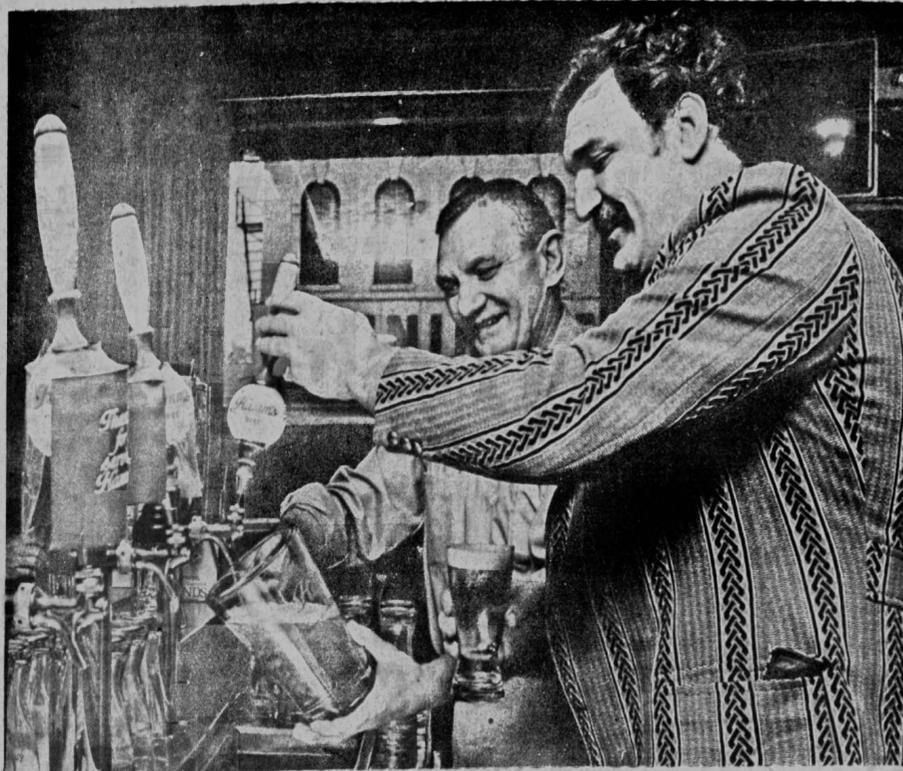

Financial books won't be closed on the Sapporo Olympics for months or years, but there is no doubt they have been costly with thorough and complete preparations and facilities.

Viking's Warwick: 'Team lost closeness this year'

By KEITH GILLETT
Daily Iowan Sports Editor

Losing a shot at the Super Bowl was a disappointment this past year for the Minnesota Vikings. Viking middle linebacker Lonnie Warwick says it might have happened because the team was not very cohesive.

"We didn't play like we have in the past," Warwick said. "It seems like we are losing some of the closeness we've had. This year we were not 40 men for 60 minutes."

Warwick is in Iowa City as guest speaker for tonight's 21st annual sports dinner at the Knights of Columbus.

The 6-3, 235-pound Warwick is in his ninth year as pro having been signed as a free agent. In 1965 he was named the Vikings' rookie of the year.

In addition to his speaking engagement tonight, Warwick spent some time early Wednesday evening signing autographs at the Annex, 26 E. College, while plugging the Hamm's Beer Co., his employer during football's off-season.

As for enthusiasm for the game, Warwick is afraid some of his teammates think it "college stuff" to get up too much before a game.

"I think all this college stuff is what we need and I think Bud Grant realizes this since he is trying to bring the championship to Minnesota."

Quarterbacking, Warwick admits, is one problem that the Vikings have.

"You can't win the championship without a number one quarterback. If we get one, we can go all the way to the Super Bowl. This club needs to get one quarterback and stick with him all the way."

"We lost a good player in our trade with New York, but we got Fran (Tarkenton) who played with us before. We'll just have to wait and see."

One change in pro football that Warwick has noted since he began his career is the increased stressing of defense.

"When I first came to Minnesota, defense wasn't stressed as much. Now you don't find many teams without a strong defense."

"Our offense really moved the ball, but with a team like Dallas, you've got to move the ball and score points."

"If our offense can give us 21 points, I don't think we'd lose a game next year."

Warwick said he was going to be interested in Craig Clemons' pro career, the Iowa defense back drafted recently by the Chicago Bears.

"I think he's going with a good team. You know, they've had some trouble with discipline on that team. I think if the Bears had more discipline, they'd have a chance at the title."

"I know he'll be happy to play with some of those players, especially guys like (Dick) Butkus."

Warwick said it was his first trip to Iowa City, and was looking forward to his talk this evening.

"I'll probably give them a rundown on my background and I can guarantee a good joke about Wally Hilgenberg. His parents live over in Wilton Junction and have invited me to come down several times before, I guess I'll have to start coming down here more often."

A career of a pro football player does not last forever, as Warwick is aware.

"I probably will spend about four or five more years in the pros, then I'll probably go to work for Hamm's."

Fegebank gains confidence from playing

By BERNIE OWENS
Assistant Sports Editor

Got Neil Fegebank out of the rack yesterday afternoon. Nah, it wasn't the first time Neil had been up since he helped Iowa whip Illinois 87-84 in overtime Tuesday night. Neil isn't like Drake's Bob Whitley. Fegens made it to his Wednesday morning classes.

We did wake him up for a couple of reasons though. First, the boss has been wanting a column started and secondly we were interested in why Fegebank has emerged as one of the Hawkeye's most consistent and outstanding forwards.

Ever since regaining a starting position from his roommate, Jim Collins, in the Ohio State game at Columbus two weeks ago, Fegebank has specialized in shutting off the Buckeye's top forward, Minnesota's top scorer, Michigan State's top scorer, and most recently Illinois' Nick Weatherspoon.

Besides his defense, Neil has been crashing the back boards, he had 16 rebounds against Michigan State, and scoring between 10 and 15 points a game.

"Confidence is 80 per cent of playing," Fegebank said. "Over the year it's been a gradual thing. You have to find out you can play against Big Ten and nationally ranked competition."

Dick Schultz says Fegebank has had to learn some things but that Neil is now at the point where he doesn't care which forward he guards. But hopefully it's the opponents best.

"I like it when Coach Schultz gives me the best forward to guard," Neil said. "It's really a challenge when you've got that assignment."

Fegebank really did a job on Weatherspoon Tuesday night. The Illini star used to average 19.6 points a game. That is until he ran into Fegebank.

"Weatherspoon is good," said Neil, "and I think he just had an off night Tuesday, but I also would like to think I had something to do with it."

"Spoon," as the 6-6 Illini is called, did have a bad night. He traveled or double dribbled six times and relentlessly missed jump shots he took over Fegebank.

NEIL FEGBANK

Still "Spoon" was 2 for 15, scoring when Iowa went to a zone and Fegebank was no longer around, and had an intense Fegens "all over him like a wet blanket" when he tried as much as a cough.

Back in high school Fegebank played the post position and led Paullina, as a first team all-stater, to three straight Class A state championships. "There is no way anybody can explain the transition Neil had to go through when he came to Iowa," said Schultz.

Neil agreed. "I played the post in high school and didn't really have the direct responsibility of guarding a particular man. We generally played a zone and my job was to guard the middle, sort of like Kevin Kunnert does for us now."

"Here I have to take a guy head on. It's a job figuring out what a guy might do."

Schultz said Fegebank came out of high school with a good basic knowledge of the game.

"Neil is one of the most mature sophomores I've had. It's partially due to the fact that he had a good prep coach and the advantage of playing on a team that performed before 15-16,000 people on several occasions. Being used to playing before big crowds is a big adjustment that has to be made."

"One thing about Neil, he understands real fast when you tell him something. And then he goes right out and works on it. For instance a month ago Neil wasn't going to the basket when he had the ball and he wasn't crashing the boards like he should have been."

"But in the last 2-3 weeks he's learned to have more patience with his shooting and he's been shooting at his own rhythm," said Schultz.

"His rebounding has also improved although he does need to learn to hit the offensive board better."

One of these nights Neil is going to keep people from referring to him as a defensive specialist. "Neil has a good natural shot," said Schultz.

He's going to prove it before long. Fegebank isn't all basketball. He's a liberal arts major but spends a lot of his time in Phillips Hall.

Neil is also our kind of guy, when it comes to wasting time. He took time at registration to plan ahead for this spring. "Monday, Wednesday and Friday I left time in my schedule for golf," Neil said. "I didn't play much last summer but usually I can shoot about 80 at South Finkbine. Lynn Rowat, who's pretty good, and I play and Kevin Kunnert isn't bad either. Kevin has shot around even par."

Schultz usually doesn't like singling out players for praise. His philosophy is the whole team has a hand in winning or losing. He made an exception in Fegebank's case. Why? "Neil is a sign of this team's future," said Schultz. "This has been a maturing year for them and the way Neil has come around is the way this whole team will."

"You might compare this year's squad with the 1969 team (the year before Iowa went 14-0 in the Big Ten)," Schultz said. "They had a bad year in '69 and developed into the Big Ten champions. We're on sort of the same road, except we've defeated two nationally ranked teams and played some real fine games. That's something the '69 team didn't accomplish."

Fegebank looks at it this way: "We should win the Ten (Big) next year. We've got the players and we'll have the maturity."

UI steals limelight; wins festival awards

Those Iowans stole everything that wasn't nailed down," a man from Kansas said ruefully. He was referring to the awards, or perhaps to the attention received, by University of Iowa play productions at the Region VI American College Theatre Festival held last week at the Loretto-Hilton Performing Arts Center in Webster Groves, Missouri.

"The Marat-Sade" by Peter Weiss, the University of Iowa's official entry in the festival, was chosen for recommendation to the national festival committee in Washington to represent the region.

The production was directed by Evzen Drmola and designed by Hermann Sichter, both of the Department of Speech and Dramatic Arts. Sue Somerville of Cedar Rapids, who played the role of Charlotte Corday in the production, won second place in the separate acting competition for the Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship; she is the first alternate to represent the region in the national competition for a $2,500 scholarship.

Other awards for this production went to Elbin Cleveland, for his contribution to the Regional Festival, and to Susan Heenan, Michael Hammond and Polly Isham for Excellence in Acting. Only this production received three acting awards.

Unofficially representing the University at the Festival was "Story Theatre," which was invited as a showcase production; "Story Theatre" was the creation of Neal Chancellor Bell, first year student of the Playwrights Workshop, and John Heckel, second year MFA director.

As a wholly student conceived and executed production, this show was perhaps the most popular in the Festival. After the initial performance it was shown again by popular demand; because most of the cast were members of the "Marat-Sade" company further performances at the Festival and invitations to St. Louis area colleges had to be refused.

"Story Theatre" will be performed in Iowa City April 21, 23-9 at the Studio Theatre and will be a University Theatre touring show available to interested groups throughout the state.

Officials of the Regional Festival asserted that had "Story Theatre" been a regular entry it would certainly have been recommended to the Washington Festival along with "The Marat-Sade."

All men contend with the questions posed by the contrasts of sickness and health, poverty and plenty. And ask the question "why". Why loneliness in a world that would join hands? Why war when the impulse of the heart is to love? The aching chasm between the real and the ideal everywhere provokes the question...

WHY?

In a world looking for answers maybe God is the place to start. God is hope. God is now.
