The last rock concert of the season at the University of Massachusetts is scheduled for Saturday, April 25, according to Tom Reed, director of student activities. The concert, which will be at 8 p.m. in the University's Field House, will feature the bands Poley, the New York Dolls, and the Rolling Stones.

President Robert L. Noyes said the university will have a full-time police force to provide security for the concert. He also announced that the university will have a new athletic director, Dr. Ralph H. Conant, who will be named in early May.

In other news, the university's Board of Trustees has approved a $5 million bond issue to finance construction of a new student center.

1,000 ISU students protest Viet bombing

The Daily Iowan

AMES, Iowa (AP) - About 1,000 peace-loving young people, including several members of the Ames, Iowa State University Board of Regents, gathered in front of the Chemistry Professor's building Monday night to protest the American public's support of the war in Indochina.

The building was the site of a heated rally Monday night, with several speakers and a large group of students voicing their opposition to the war. The rally was organized by the ISU Inter-Fraternity Council, and was attended by a large crowd of students and members of the Ames community.

The event was scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday night, and a crowd of several hundred people gathered outside the building to show their support for the cause.

The protesters were led by a group of students who addressed the crowd, explaining their reasons for being there and outlining the goals of their demonstration. They called for an end to the war in Indochina and for a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

The rally included speeches from several speakers, including a representative from the ISU Inter-Fraternity Council, who outlined the reasons for the protest and called for action.

The protesters also displayed signs and posters, and sang songs to show their support for peace.

The rally was well-attended, with a large crowd of people gathered outside the building to show their support for the cause. The event ended peacefully, with no incidents reported.

Daily Iowan, Iowa City—The proportion of female students at the University of Iowa is reported to be on the rise, according to a recent study.

The study, conducted by the university health service, indicated that the number of female students has increased by 25 per cent over last year's figures. The increase is believed to be due to a number of factors, including an increase in the number of women students entering the university.

The study also showed that the use of contraceptives has increased among female students. This is attributed to a number of factors, including increased awareness of the importance of birth control and the availability of a wider range of contraceptive options.

In addition, the study indicated that the use of screening tests for sexually transmitted diseases has increased. This is believed to be due to increased awareness of the importance of early detection and treatment of sexually transmitted diseases.

The study also showed that the use of condoms has increased among female students. This is attributed to increased awareness of the importance of using condoms for protection against sexually transmitted diseases.

The study also showed that the use of other preventive measures, such as abstinence and reducing the number of sexual partners, has increased among female students. This is believed to be due to increased awareness of the importance of these measures for protection against sexually transmitted diseases.

Purdue professor James Stegenga has a solution to President Boyd's financial problem. Boyd was quoted Friday as saying he would "look at every possible source of revenue" in order to "balance the books." However, his statement is being met with criticism from some faculty members.

Boyd's financial problem is not unique to Purdue. Many universities across the country are facing similar issues due to rising costs and decreased state funding. The Purdue administration has been working to find ways to offset these costs, but some faculty members feel that the solutions being proposed are not adequate.

"The administration is trying to cut corners at the expense of our students," said one faculty member. "We are being asked to do more with less, and it's not fair to the students who are already paying high tuition rates.

"We need a solution that addresses the root cause of our financial problem," said another faculty member. "We can't continue to make cuts and hope that everything will be okay. We need a long-term solution that will ensure the sustainability of our university for years to come.

"Until we get to the bottom of this issue, we will continue to face financial challenges," said a third faculty member. "I'm not sure what the answer is, but I do know that we need to have an open and honest conversation with our administration about how we can improve our financial situation.

"The Purdue community is hurting, and we need leadership that is committed to finding a solution," said a fourth faculty member. "We can't wait any longer. We need action now.

"If the administration doesn't come up with a solution, I'm afraid we may have no choice but to take matters into our own hands," said a fifth faculty member. "We need to assess the situation and decide what steps we need to take to ensure the future of our university.

"We can't let this continue," said a sixth faculty member. "We need to take action now, and we need to do it together.

"The Purdue family is strong, and I believe we can overcome this challenge," said a seventh faculty member. "We just need to work together to find a solution.

"The Purdue community is counting on us," said an eighth faculty member. "We need to act now, and we need to act together."

Richard Carter is currently a representative of the D.R.A. for his first term. He has a solution to the problem of excessive personnel that he feels is an answer to the current dilemma. His plan involves the establishment of a new department within the university that would focus on reducing the number of personnel. He argues that this would not only save money, but it would also improve the overall efficiency of the university.

"The current system is outdated and inefficient," he said. "By establishing a new department, we can eliminate redundant positions and streamline the processes that are currently taking place.

"We have a lot of excess personnel that are not contributing to the overall mission of the university," he continued. "By eliminating these positions, we can reallocate the resources to areas that are more critical to the success of the university.

"We need to focus on the priorities of the university," he concluded. "We need to make sure that our personnel are working towards the same goals, and that we are not wasting resources on positions that are not necessary.

The faculty and administration are likely to have different opinions on this matter, and it will be interesting to see how this plays out.
National environment campaign begins today

Push seeks legislative opposition

NEW YORK — A coalition of environmen- tal groups will kick off a nationwide cam- paign to lobby Congress next week. The proposed legislation it claims would undermine the substance of NEPA, the National Environmental Policy Act.

Some 1,500 information packets are to be mailed to city and state environmental groups, labor, church, voter and other organizations calling for "enforcement and empow- erment of NEPA requirements." A report to Congress set for March is to be released to 250 members of Congress, an aide to a spokes- man for the group said. The more than 700 EPA field offices across the nation would be asked to prepare their own reports on what they could do better.

Urban Renewal project brings mixed blessings

A new law school building sits in the modern kitchen of the house where he has lived for the past 25 years. The building is well lit and so are the walls, which are papered; floors sturdy; clothes fresh, clean. The house is certainly not the attractive place to live with no advantage of any kind. Baseball awards the ‘Bowie’—
And now, the envelope please

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball’s first weekly award in history that’s all the time it took to award the first annual “Bowie” to Chicago’s Ron Santo, who wins the coveted first-modulator. He didn’t know where to stand on the backfaced-lens? He didn’t give a bald response.

The “Marvin” IV “Bowie” for remaining an option after the set- planning goes to the Chicago White Sox who lost all those games they played. That’s enough management to let them work out while everybody else is playing.

The Hank Aguirre-Sandy Koufax of last year’s “Bowie”-testing continues as a pitcher goes to Rick Wood of the St. Louis Cardinals, who has a single and double hit in his first start but has no home team.

The Butterfly Fingers “Bowie” for having three games goes to one player—Joe DiMaggio of the Cardinals and Joe Cardinal of the Cubs both made long swings to help out their poor batting average.

The “Bowie” for hitting a winning home run also goes to two players—Mike Pinto of Milwaukee and Bob Oliver of Kansas City. Both logged second ninth inning homer to tie up ball games.

The Dick Adams “Bowie” for player of the week is given to Joe Dola, who drove in his home in Virginia after the player’s strike ended and arrived in Kansas City in time for the first inning of another game.

The Golden Bat “Bowie” for new ships goes to Texas’s Ed Riekman, whose home run hit the Tiger opener. It matched the total number of home runs for each of the last two seasons and gave him six in the last six days.

The Randal “Bowie” for weather goes to the Baltimore Orioles, who were involved in a heat storm on last season opening day.

The Johnny “Bowie” for players that would add a realistic air to the carnival is for the other teams who played a pro-like game with prospects. The New York Mets, who had two more overcustomers over the weekend and the car game they did manage to play wasn’t at any fun and isn’t something that was dropped because of rain.

The Bobbe “Bowie” for pitchers which rather than pitch to fans during 10-strike season are better. This is the case for the last two games as an outfielder.

The Dally “Bowie” for running on officially opening the season goes to Smithsonian Base Kah, who threw the first ball in New York after spotting something softening through the line vote.

If you count on your car for lots of fun time, not every year is the best you can do. One way is using Standard gasoline.

Standard’s Lead-Free Amoco, the new car gasoline, has the same properties as regular gasoline, but tests prove it can double the life of your motor and help guarantee its performance for years to come.

It’s a fact—more drivers in the Midwest made changes for their car with Standard gasoline than any other brand. And they were coming back long after the trust test of quality?

You’ve got a lot of money in your car. And you count on it for lots of great times. So take good care of it with Standard.

You expect more from Standard and you get it.

Baseball fans have heard it before. But the Phillies, "...that's what we're here for," Philadelphia's Del Ennis said after the Phillies beat the New York Mets, 8-2, in the second game of the doubleheader Saturday.

"But we have been booed worse than this," Ennis added. "...We're here for more than baseball games. We're here for the fans.""
