

IN THE NEWS briefly

Drippy

The Daily Iowan, in cooperation with the International League of Weatherpeople and Naval Air Collectors, offers its condolences and "tee-hee-hees" to you poor people who've got to dribble sweat on blue books in those finals today. Just think, it's almost over and you will be home with your Mrs. Robinson (or Mr. Jones) soon.

It will be fair (the weather, not the test) and warmer. Pant! High 99! And the temperatures will take a quick dive for those 7 p.m. jobbers, all the way down to about 82. It's supposed to be a little cooler Tuesday—and Wednesday, it's all over, except for the crying or the drinking or that paper that was due Valentine's Day

'Pieta'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A man claiming he was Jesus Christ swung a 12-pound sledgehammer into Michelangelo's priceless Pieta statue in St. Peter's Basilica Sunday, disfiguring the Madonna's face and breaking off her left arm.

Authorities said the damage might be irreparable. The statue depicts the mother of Christ holding the dead Jesus in her arms. It is considered one of the world's greatest works of art.

Vatican police identified the man as Laszlo Toth, 33, a Hungarian-born geologist now a resident of Sydney, Australia.

The attack came as work was nearing completion on a huge plate of shatterproof glass to protect the Pieta. It was due to go into place in about a month.

After interrogation he was turned over to Italian police who said the vandal had concealed the sledgehammer under a raincoat carried over his arm.

Wallace

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — Physicians at Holy Cross Hospital reported Sunday that the condition of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace remains stable and his temperature ranges near normal.

There was no reported change in the leg paralysis caused by a bullet lodged in his spine. Surgery to remove the slug and determine whether he will walk again is expected to be performed sometime this week.

Wallace is undergoing treatment here for wounds suffered last Monday when he was shot four times at a campaign rally in Laurel, Md.

Campaign '72

Sens. George S. McGovern and Hubert H. Humphrey campaigned Sunday on the West Coast looking ahead to Tuesday's presidential primaries in Oregon and Rhode Island, where a total of 56 convention delegates are at stake.

McGovern and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, who has dropped active primary campaigning, picked up most of the delegates selected by Democrats at weekend conventions and caucuses in five states.

Humphrey concentrated his campaigning in California where 271 delegate votes are at stake in the June 6 primary.

Wages, prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The immediate removal of wage and price controls from all segments of the economy except big business and big labor was recommended Sunday by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

As an alternative, the committee report proposed exempting the working poor, all companies with fewer than 1,000 employees and all state and government workers, and the abolition of rent controls.

It also recommended tighter controls over corporate profits and a freeze on executive salaries above $200,000 a year for the duration of the control program.

Rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — A few hundred rock-throwing young militants marred a generally peaceful antiwar rally attended by some 10,000 to 15,000 persons on Capitol Hill Sunday.

Police made about 200 arrests. Most were charged with parading without a permit, a misdemeanor.

The numbers involved in both the peaceful and violent aspects were small fractions of those in earlier demonstrations when estimates of totals have ranged from 60,000 to 100,000 and up.

Explosion

DORADO, P.R. (AP) — Police looked for clues Sunday to the bombing that severely damaged parts of a luxury seaside hotel here as the Miss USA beauty contest was being telecast.

Security men roped off a large area of the Cerromar Beach Hotel's beachside lawn, directly below the eastern wing's sixth-floor room where a powerful explosive device went off Saturday night.

Earlier, 150 to 200 members of the extreme leftist Puerto Rican Socialist party picketed the hotel, protesting the Miss USA contest.

Recommend suspensions for Piller, SDS

Hearing Officer Theodore J. Garfield has recommended that a student be suspended from the University of Iowa for one year, and that Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) be suspended from campus for three years.

Simon J. Piller, 321 South Johnson Street, said he received a letter Saturday from UI Assistant to the Provost Howard N. Sokol telling him that Garfield had recommended that Piller be suspended from the university for one year, and that he be placed on probation for one additional year.

Garfield also recommended that SDS and the Worker-Student Alliance (WSA) be suspended for three years and then placed on probation for one year, according to Piller.

The recommendations, which go to UI Pres. Willard L. Boyd, who will make the final decision, were based on a hearing before Garfield April 13.

The hearing was based on university charges that Piller and WSA had acted in the name of SDS while the latter group was suspended from the university.

Garfield's recommendations are substantially the same as those that Sokol presented at the hearing.

Piller said that "since the recommendations are the same as the ones the university asked for, I would assume that Boyd will follow through" and accept them.

Boyd said Sunday night that he has not yet seen Garfield's recommendations, but would thoroughly review them.

Piller, who said he was not surprised at Garfield's recommendations, said Sunday "I think the university is running scared; it is afraid of groups like SDS which take action and focus in on everything that goes on here."

Nixon arrives today for Moscow talks

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — As a White House adviser reported possible technical snags on an arms limitation pact, President Nixon prepared Sunday for his Moscow summit meeting and "the most intensive negotiations I have ever participated in."

After an hour-long meeting with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and lunch at a mountainside hotel, Nixon returned to work because, he said, Soviet leaders "will be very well prepared" when he arrives in Moscow on Monday for a week of talks.

"The possibility of some progress" in the talks "is perhaps greater... because both sides will be well prepared," Nixon told newsmen as he strolled the trim, green grounds of the baroque, 18th-century Klessheim Palace where he is staying during his 36 hours in this Alpine city.

Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger said a number of technical issues remain unsettled on the proposed agreement to limit U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons. Nixon has said he hopes to sign the agreement while in Moscow.

Both sides have agreed in principle to limit arms, Kissinger said, but he added there is a question whether the complex technical details can be ironed out during the week Nixon is in the Soviet Union. If not, Kissinger expressed confidence they would be settled soon afterward and the agreement signed.

When Nixon reaches Moscow on Monday—8 a.m. CDT—and becomes the first American president ever to visit the Soviet capital, he will face Communist leaders unhappy about U.S. mining of North Vietnamese harbors.

The mining, which Nixon said was aimed at halting the flow of Soviet supplies fueling the North Vietnamese invasion of South Vietnam, threatened for a while to wreck the Moscow meeting.

But the Kremlin's response has been subdued. On the eve of Nixon's arrival, Pravda coupled an attack on the Communist Chinese with phrases welcoming "normalization" of relations with the world's "biggest capitalist country."

Besides Vietnam, the Middle East, Europe and the arms limitation agreement, the talks in Moscow are expected to cover trade and economic issues—including possible multimilliondollar U.S. grain sales to the Soviets.

Nixon and Soviet leaders also are expected to sign an agreement for cooperation in space, aiming toward a joint orbital venture in 1975.

Just as he did when he made his historic journey to China in February, Nixon said he seeks in Moscow to build "what we all want—generations of peace in the years ahead, peace with progress for all people and peace with independence for all nations."

These words came in a luncheon toast to Chancellor Kreisky, whom Nixon praised "as one of the top statesmen in the world." U.S. officials reported the chancellor expressed embarrassment about the sporadic leftist demonstrations during Nixon's visit, aimed at America's involvement in Vietnam.

Police said 25 persons were injured in clashes before and during Nixon's arrival here Saturday night. On Sunday, steel-helmeted police used rubber clubs to drive away about 50 demonstrators who tried to tear down the U.S. flag in front of the downtown press center.

A nonviolent group among the demonstrators at the press center included Dr. Peter Kreisky, son of the chancellor who criticized "United States aggression" in Vietnam.

Nixon saw several hundred of the demonstrators along his motorcade route Saturday night, but when he motored Sunday from the palace to the mountainside hotel he saw only friendly faces.

Several thousand persons lined the route along the autobahn, through residential streets and up a winding mountain road, many of them waving hankchiefs in a sign of friendship. A number of children dressed in their Sunday best were in the crowds.

At his palace talks with Nixon, Kreisky said he got the impression the American President "has the firm intent to bring about a swift end to the war in Vietnam."

He also said their discussions centered on a possible European security conference, and an East-West effort to reduce armaments along the Iron Curtain. Kreisky said he volunteered Vienna as a site for such talks.

Kissinger had earlier briefed newsmen on the Moscow summit, saying preliminary exchanges had indicated a mutual desire to use restraint and cooperation in promoting peace. Kissinger said Vietnam had become a central issue in the Moscow talks, but that the conflict in southeast Asia had not interrupted the general design of U.S.-Soviet relations.

In response to another question, Kissinger said the President is aware of petitions signed by more than a million Jews in the United States asking him to take up with Soviet leaders the plight of Soviet Jews. He said Nixon will look for an opportunity to bring the petitions to the attention of Soviet leaders.

State board to consider Roe's appeal

Fired Iowa City school teacher Michael Roe has appealed his dismissal to the state Board of Public Instruction.

Joint County School Supt. Dwight Bode received notice of the appeal Friday but no date has been set for a state hearing.

Roe was fired by the Iowa City School Board last November for allegedly failing to control his students in a West High School class made up primarily of potential drop-outs.

The teacher appealed the firing to Bode, but on April 19, Bode upheld the school board's decision.

Bode has been requested to forward transcripts and evidence from the county hearing to the state board in Des Moines.

The appeal to the state board ends the educational appeal channel. If the board upholds the firing and Roe decided to continue his fight against it, he would have to take the case to the courts.

To prosecute, or not, at stake Federal decision expected this week in McCarney case

PATRICK MCCARNEY

A U.S. district attorney will decide this week whether or not to prosecute former Iowa City Police Chief Patrick J. McCarney for alleged prisoner abuse.

Allen L. Donielson, attorney for the southern district of Iowa, said after meeting with local officials Friday that he is reviewing a Federal Bureau of Investigation report of its investigation into charges against McCarney made last December.

He said he is reviewing the FBI file "in light of community factors, in light of damage that has already been done, and I'll see what the decision is going to be made."

Donielson noted that it is "important not to make a federal case out of what essentially is a local matter."

The U.S. attorney conferred with local officials in Des Moines on a wide range of law enforcement topics including civil disorders and the local narcotics problems, as well as the McCarney case.

McCarney was the center of three separate investigations into police abuse charges. The FBI probe, and a similar one conducted by the city, were made last December. The city inquiry resulted in a five-day suspension of McCarney from his rank of chief.

Another, much longer investigation of the charges was conducted by County Atty. Carl J. Goetz. He took the evidence he gathered to a county grand jury in February. That jury indicted McCarney for assault with intent to do great bodily injury, but the indictment was thrown out when it was learned that not enough jurors had voted to legally charge the chief.

The McCarney case provided the "impetus" for the Friday meeting, Donielson said. However he said only a "very minor part" of the discussion at the meeting concerned the McCarney case.

He said he gave Iowa City officials "very few facts" about the FBI report on McCarney. He did say that the meeting was to give him "some facets of the case that I consider important in making this decision (of whether or not to prosecute)."

On the topic of drugs, Donielson said the meeting made him realize that the problem still is on the rise and is of growing concern to local law enforcement officers.

"I was under the impression it (drug use) might have leveled off more than it has," he said.

He added that local officials gave "me some figures and some impressions as to hard drug addiction that were really quite astounding to me."

Donielson said he plans to have similar meetings to discuss law enforcement with officials from other southern Iowa communities.

Local officials at the meeting Friday were City Manager Ray S. Wells, City Atty. Jay H. Honohan, acting Police Chief Emmett Evans, County Atty. Goetz and Asst. County Atty. Robert L. Stender.

Demos favor amnesty, legal pot

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa Democrats adjourned their state presidential convention here early Sunday after adopting a platform for immediate unconditional amnesty for draft dodgers and legalizing possession of marijuana.

Fewer than 200 of the more than 3,000 delegates who were around for the opening of the convention remained when it was adjourned at 5:05 a.m. Sunday — more than 20 hours after it started.

Major business of the convention consisted of electing 10 at-large delegates to the national presidential convention at Miami in July and election of national committeeman and committeewoman — who also have votes at the national convention.

Former lieutenant governor Robert Fulton of Waterloo and Ms. Dagmar Vidal of Hampton were re-elected to the national committee with both committed to Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine.

Muskie captured three of the at-large delegates and Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., received five — leaving them tied with 18 each of 46 Iowa delegates to the national convention.

Two uncommitted delegates were chosen Saturday, leaving a total of 10.

Selection of the delegates and their alternates was not completed until after 1 a.m. Sunday, after the delegation had dwindled to a fraction of its original size.

Representatives of the Democratic Women's Caucus and sympathizers then challenged the uncommitted slate — claiming it did not meet state and national requirements of being balanced as to sex age and minority groups.

Ken Haas of Bettendorf, a member of the convention's credentials committee, opposed the ratification of the uncommitted slate, saying the district conventions had elected eight men while the state convention elected "a ninth man and a lone woman."

The uncommitted delegates were certified after opponents said the eight men elected at the district conventions were elected before the equalization rules were adopted.

Afterwards, members of the women's caucus began collecting signatures to challenge Iowa's uncommitted delegation to the national credentials committee.

Jim Oleson of Iowa City said the challenge would immediately be sent to the national committee with a hearing scheduled for Des Moines in mid-June.

The platform was adopted after the youth-oriented group that remained into the early morning rejected a motion to adjourn without passing the platform and all minority reports — leaving them on file, instead, with the state platform committee.

The platform, as adopted, urges "that criminal laws should be abolished which presently make the transfer or sale without profit, the possession of small amounts of marijuana intended for private use, and the private use of marijuana a crime."

That plank, originally a minority report, also urged that "marijuana in lawful possession should not be subject to seizure as contraband."

A nother minority report plank adopted gives the state Democrats' support of "immediate unconditional amnesty for all persons who have evaded or resisted the draft... or non-violently resisted our involvement in Southeast Asia."

The one plank of the original platform which was most hotly contested supported leaving the matter of abortion between a woman and her doctor.

Pentagon is hit; security tightened

WASHINGTON (AP)—While FBI experts continued to search debris from an explosion in a Pentagon restroom, the government stiffened security for all federal buildings because of the bombing.

The General Services Administration announced tighter precautions Friday as experts looked for clues to who and what caused the blast earlier in the day.

GSA said security steps taken include continued restricted entrances to buildings, searching of all packages brought into buildings by persons without employ identification and searching of all suspicious packages.

Field officials were given authority to increase precautions in any way they believed warranted.

The explosion at 12:59 a.m. EDT Friday ruined the women's rest room on the fourth floor of the Defense Department headquarters—the world's largest office building. There were no injuries.

A hole was blown through the floor, the ceiling caved in and huge sections of walls were blown into the corridor.

Anti-war activists identifying themselves with the Weatherman organization said "We attacked the Pentagon, the center of the American military command."

Heavy fighting erupts on three fronts in Viet

SAIGON (AP) — Heavy fighting erupted Sunday and Monday on all three major fronts of South Vietnam. The Saigon command claimed more than 500 North Vietnamese troops killed.

U.S. warplanes and 7th Fleet ships battered North Vietnamese troops from north of Saigon to the northern front above Hue. Most of the North Viets claimed slain died under the fierce bombardment by American air and naval forces.

Heavy fighting broke out anew just before dawn Monday along the "Street Without Joy" north of Hue, field reports said. U.S. planes swarmed to the aid of the South Vietnamese marine defenders.

The reports said the new fighting began just before dawn on the My Chanh River front, where a tank-led enemy assault Sunday drove south across the river.

'Serve yourself' for liquor store

Iowa City's state liquor store will become a self-service facility June 1.

However, the store will be closed for four days in a row while it is converted from the present clerk system to one where customers will be able to pick their own booze from the shelves.

The store will cease its present operation Saturday, May 27, and will be closed, as usual, on Sunday. That Monday, May 29, is Memorial Day, so the store will be closed and the doors will stay locked for two more days while shelves are restocked and the facility converted.

Plans now call for no employees at the store to be dismissed and hours are scheduled to remain the same.

The switch to self-service, in hopes of relieving the crunch at the store, makes Iowa City the 20th store in the state to allow customers to get their own bottles.

Rolland Gallagher, director of the state Beer and Liquor Control Department, has said he will try to further reduce the crowding at the store by asking the 1973 Iowa Legislature to allow another liquor store for the Iowa City area.

Rule arson in fire here

The May 4 fire that destroyed Helble and Rocca Electronics, Inc., and drew more than 1,000 spectators to watch the flames, was arson, according to city Fire Chief Dean Bebee.

Bebee said laboratory tests by the Internal Revenue Service of material taken from the fire site showed that a "volatile petroleum" was present.

The chief said he had earlier suspected arson because "we couldn't find any reason for the fire and it went too fast. Something helped it along."

No dollar damage has yet been set on the fire.

With the help of allied bombers and naval gunfire, the Marines pushed the attackers back and re-established their lines before nightfall Sunday. Field reports said eight enemy tanks were knocked out and 165 enemy troops were killed.

Field sources said there was "heavy contact" in resumed fighting Monday. There were no reports of enemy tanks used in Monday's fighting.

Sharp fighting also was reported a few miles north, northwest and southwest of Kontum in the central highlands.

U.S. Air Force B52s hit with 57 more strikes overnight at target areas ranging from Quang Tri Province in the far north to the Mekong Delta south of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese drive to break the 46-day siege of An Loc appeared to have slowed again, although advance elements of the relief force were reported to be within a mile of their goal.

Psychological abuse follows physical for rape victims

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — The victims of rape must endure not only the physical abuse of abduction but the psychological aftermath.

Sociologist Frederic Storaska, who has studied rape and attack cases for five years, says: "It is not the end of the world; there are a lot worse things that happen to girls."

Any rape victim is likely to ask: "Like what?"

It has been nearly a year since Mary experienced what she describes as "a night unlike any other in my life: when the fear for my life was compounded with worry about my child who was alone at home."

Before the rape, she was employed in a supervisory sales capacity. But she hasn't worked one day since "because my nerves are shot."

The reaction of her acquaintances and relatives gives an insight into what rape victims must contend with.

When Mary talked to her boss after the rape, he said: "Did you have a date with this guy and ended up going further than you intended, so you yelled rape?"

Her fiancé, after first inquiring about her physical health, asked her what she did to entice the rapist.

The most difficult reaction came from her mother, who said she didn't want to become involved in such a messy situation.

Now Mary lives with a board covering the glass in her apartment door. "No one can see in; it's harder to break through and more difficult to shoot through. I used to trust everyone, but not anymore."

The effects of the experience also tell on Kay, who says, "The strain of the aftermath of rape and this pregnancy may just break up our marriage."

"My husband has been very understanding," she says, "but he insists we are going to keep this baby, even if the rapist is the father. I feel just the opposite. If tests do prove my husband couldn't be the father, I have no intention of keeping the child."

Yet while she waits, Kay sews clothes for her baby and keeps the door solidly bolted until she knows who is standing on the other side.

Detective Charles Braatz of the Waterloo Police Department and the rape victims themselves offer protection tips to women with the hope they'll never be needed.

Both Mary and Kay stress the importance of locked doors, not only at home but also in a car, especially when a woman is driving alone.

Mary advises: "Don't wait until after dark to take out garbage or walk to the grocery store. A woman walking outside alone after dark is inviting trouble."

If you know karate, judo or any other form of self-defense, Braatz advises using it.

One school of thought cautions a woman to scream, but sociologist Storaska says screams may initiate violence.

A better tactic, he advises, is for the woman to do something weird, to dehumanize herself by acting like a monkey or yelling like a banshee.

The consensus is that as with any crime there's no sure-fire protection. What may discourage one attacker may trigger violence in another.

Perhaps, if the lesser of two evils is to be the choice, it's better to be the victim of a sex crime than a homicide.

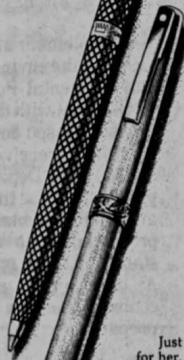

Mary says she never goes anywhere unarmed since she was attacked. She has a permit to carry a revolver.

She also carries a can of mace and a knife.

When she was asked if it isn't illegal to carry a knife, she responded "So is rape, honey... so is rape."

Wants space for students Senate probes use of Triangle Club

By GINNY CROKER Daily Iowan Staff Writer

The lease on the Triangle Club in the Union will be reviewed on June 30, and a special Student Senate committee has been investigating the club to see if the space can be allocated for student use.

In 1926 the Faculty Club, now the Triangle Club, paid the Union management $50,000 for a 50 year lease.

The club, which is located on the second and third floors of the Union, caters to about 500 of the 1,200 faculty members at the University of Iowa and provides dining facilities, a ballroom, billiards, ping pong, several lounges and a bar.

Allen S. Katz is head of the senate committee investigating the Triangle Club.

Club ballroom. ISA currently runs the student bar, The Hulk.

"The space is perfect for a student bar," Katz said. "It is large and out of the way, and has a central location for students. It is big enough so there could be live entertainment, and ISA has the experience and knowledge to make it work."

If the lease cannot be bought, which would take about $6,000, one of the options would be profit sharing with the Triangle Club. The third floor ballroom could be rented and the club would get a percentage of the profits, Katz said.

Although this has not been formally proposed, it has been suggested to the Triangle Club officers.

Club president Brooks W. Booker said, "This would seem to be the most favorable proposal to myself and the members, but it would cause problems. The billiard tables are in the ballroom area and we don't really have anywhere to move them."

"Besides a very slow elevator, there really is no access to the area, except through the second floor of the club," he said.

"We are not getting maximum utilization from the space, but the membership is increasing. This is putting life into a club that serves a real and vital purpose as a unifying factor among dichotomized departments and faculty," Booker said.

Philip G. Hubbard UI vice provost, says he "recognizes the need for student space, but I think the Triangle Club serves a purpose necessary to the faculty. In any case, we do not want to terminate the lease unless we find an alternate location for the club."

The requirements for a new location would be a sufficient central location easily accessible to members of the club.

Dining service and bar facilities would have to be available and the space would have to accommodate large groups of people for dances and other activities, Booker said.

"At present time I don't believe students will get the space," Katz said. "Students and people in the Triangle Club don't see eye to eye on utilization of space."

"The plush surroundings of the club are fine, and it wouldn't matter if students didn't need the space for counseling, organizations and services. The Triangle Club doesn't want to move."

Funds raised

A recent benefit concert for the Free Medical Clinic raised $320 for medical supplies, according to a clinic spokeswoman.

Eight music groups contributed to the benefit effort: Sundance, Chris Hurst, Doug Freeman and Don Lang, Alan Murphy, Art Rosenbaum and Keith Dempster, Glitches Gold, White Cross, Sweet Nothin, and Bodiene.

The benefit was held at the Ace Entertainment Center, which donated the facilities.

UIEA member drive continues

The new University of Iowa Employee's Association (UIEA) is now in its second week of a membership and organizing drive.

The organizers of the UIEA—Al Logan, a senior lab technician in Radiation Protection and Jean Kendall, who works in Events Services at the Union,—said UIEA was formed to set up a collective bargaining unit to deal with the administration.

Ms. Kendall said the group also hopes to formulate procedures for settling UI staff grievances and improve opportunities for job upgrading.

"People here get locked into positions," she explained.

Membership in the UIEA is open to any full or part-time non-academic employe of the university.

"The membership drive is going very well," she said. "We've been picking up around 75 people a week so far, and we've got a core of 100 or so enthusiastic members who are all working on committees already."

The administration has been giving the UIEA "quiet support," Ms. Kendall said. "They're not opposing us at all."

"What we want to do now is to get the administration to recognize us."

Although there is presently no law in Iowa enabling collective bargaining by state employes, Ms. Kendall said the last legislature came very close to passing a bill allowing such bargaining.

The UIEA has an office in the Dey Building. An open house will be held May 31.

A rumble seat made a good car a little better. So does a rear door.

1931 Model A Roadster.

1972 Pinto Runabout shown with optional white sidewall tires, rocker panel molding and accent group.

When you make a solid, sensible, economical little car you don't change it. Except to make it better.

Now that we're making that kind of car again, that's the only kind of change we're going to make.

For example, we've made a Runabout model of the Ford Pinto. It has a rear door the basic Pinto doesn't have. And rear seats that fold down for extra cargo space that's five feet long. Everything else is the same.

A gutsy little engine that gets the same economical kind of gas mileage as the little imports.

A solid-as-a-rock four speed transmission. Sports car steering. A welded steel body with six coats of paint.

Pinto is wide and stable, but not big. It's got plenty of leg and shoulder room, but it's barely 1 1/2 inches longer than the leading import.

There you have it. The basic Pinto: a good little car. Our Pinto Runabout: a little better good little car.

See them at your Ford dealer's.

When you get back to basics, you get back to Ford.

Demand federal review

Mr. Guy J. Birch, Area Director
Department of Housing and Urban Development
7100 West Center Road
Omaha, Nebraska 68106

Dear Mr Birch:

On September 21, 1971 we sent a letter to your office requesting a copy of the environmental impact statement (as required by the Environmental Policy Act of 1969) prepared by your office in conjunction with the city of Iowa City assessing the impact of the city's proposed downtown automobile parking ramp. On October 21, 1971 we received your reply to our letter. In your reply you stated, "The Department of Housing and Urban Development's procedure at the time the project was under review was to require an environmental evaluation as part of normal project processing, but only to require an environmental impact statement if the project was precedent-making or controversial. As the project was not considered to be precedent-making or controversial, an environmental impact statement was not prepared."

The parking ramp as planned will be wholly within the Iowa R-14 area and if built will be used for urban renewal credits. We feel the "controversial nature" of this structure which the city claims is an "integral part" of its urban renewal plan has now been established. We cite the recent overwhelming rejection on April 11 (69 percent voted against the bond issue) of a 2 million dollar general obligation bond issue to finance the ramp as widespread public disapproval of the ramp. This rejection is especially significant in view of the fact that two of the five city council members have state publicly that the vote was "probably against the ramp itself." Furthermore, we feel that the percentage of voters rejecting the G.O. bond issue would have been even greater if a three member majority of the council had not indicated well in advance of the referendum that they would vote to issue revenue bonds to finance the ramp no matter what the outcome of the G.O. bond referendum would be. They claimed revenue bonds would cost the city one million dollars more in interest than G.O. bonds. The local Chamber of Commerce widely advertised this claim in the local newspaper. We feel this was a deliberate attempt to coerce the voters into voting yes on the referendum to save one million dollars in "added interest" on an "inevitable" parking ramp. In spite of this political power play and the holding of an economic club over the voters' heads, a massive rejection of the referendum was recorded.

As further evidence of the "controversial nature" of the ramp, we point to a special public meeting held May 3, 1972 at which four of the five city councilmen met with local citizens to discuss possible alternatives to the parking ramp.

Iowa City voters have opposed the ramp on both financial and environmental grounds. They have indicated on numerous occasions, including the April 11 referendum, that they do not wish the urban renewal credits to come from a structure that would represent additional subsidization of the automobile. It has been suggested that the ramp, by possibly providing more convenient parking, will encourage additional use of the automobile in the downtown area. The environmental detriments, both from aesthetic and health standpoints caused by the automobile, are both well known and too numerous to list at this time. We feel, therefore, a complete federal review and formulation of an environmental impact statement are now mandatory regarding this controversial project. In view of the amount of time that has elapsed, we request your prompt attention to this matter.

Sincerely yours,
John A. Laitner, Co-chairperson

Thursday, May the fourth, the Library Committee met. My colleagues and I presented to them information concerning vending machines in the main library. We are asking that a place be allocated within the main library where vending machines could be installed. This would be a restricted area with monitors in it at all times.

By a vote of six to one the Library Committee voted in favor of hearing more discussion concerning funding for the paying of the monitor. They stated that the library budget has no funds to pay for the monitors. It would be the duty of the monitor to see that no beverages are taken from this restricted area.

My colleagues and I will be working on ways to fund the pay of the monitors. After funds have been found we will again speak to the Library Committee.

Any person having suggestions as to how to raise this money please contact me.

I would just like to say one thing to Mr. Tim Yeager in response to his May 19 statement directed toward certain members of the University administration: don't be too anxious to accuse anyone of being "hollow" in his anti-war sentiments when members of the anti-war, anti-establishment movement which you and your articles seem to defend decide to demonstrate their sentiments only during the spring, when the weather is nice, when it isn't raining, and in the absence of finals.

The Daily Iowan certainly had a thoughtful, perceptive editorial on J. Edgar Hoover the day after his death. I was surprised to see it was written by someone named Dave Helland, however. I expected the author to be James Earl Ray, Jerry Rubin or the ghost of Lee Harvey Oswald.

To the editor:

I am sure I speak for a large number of the University Community in expressing disappointment and disgust with the two editorials which appeared in the left hand column of page 4 of The Daily Iowan on Tuesday, May 16, 1972. Instead of criticizing President Boyd for banning further gatherings on the Pentacrest, his action should be roundly applauded. Indeed, this action should have been taken over four years ago by his predecessor. The University administration is not opposed to peaceful demonstrations. But over and over again we have seen these "peaceful" gatherings develop into disruptive and destructive mob action which eventually called for the intervention of the Highway Patrol. Can anyone honestly believe that this kind of thing is to the credit of the University student body or that it accomplishes anything constructive?

Writing in the April, 1972, issue of Change, Andrew M. Greeley asks what "The Movement" has accomplished. He answers it by saying that "It has accomplished massive budget cuts for American higher education. It has made "student" a term of opprobrium in many parts of society. It has messed up some lives with narcotics and embittered, if not a whole generation, at least part of a generation by raising the hope that complex questions could be answered by quick and simple solutions."

As I see it the destructive demonstrations which have occurred on this campus have accomplished nothing constructive but on the contrary have done tremendous damage to this University. All those who have had a part in organizing, fostering and acquiescing in these destructive activities should ask themselves some searching questions about the effects of their ill considered actions. Oh yes, we are sometimes told that these actions spring from high idealism. But if one is opposed to the use of force by others, how does he justify using it himself? As I see it, this is nothing more than the age old phenomenon of individuals wanting their own way, regardless of the cost.

I could go on but I suggest that those who are responsible for what has happened on the campus this past week read the whole article by Mr. Greeley. It is, indeed, a sobering analysis of the kind of movement which has been sponsored by a small but willful minority on this campus. Again, I say, President Boyd should be applauded for his courageous stand.

To the editor:

A sad precedent has been set in student government at the University of Iowa. Two student organizations were allocated money, not because senate thought their needs were justified, but because of physical intimidation. Those who wonder at the ability of the Women's Center and the GLF to physically intimidate a group of student senators could have seen how, had they attended the senate meeting Monday night. There was some speculation that three or four of the individuals representing the Gay Women were really truck drivers in drag.

What should be kept in mind while reading the rest of this letter is that both groups who were protesting are actually receiving at least 30 per cent more money than they received last year. What they were protesting was the fact that the Senate had refused to allocate as much money as the budget committee had recommended.

The Women's Center chose not to discuss the viability of the programs that were being cut. Any suggestion that other university organizations were equally deserving of student support met with the reply of "A group of male senators cannot determine the needs of Gay Women." That is true. Men cannot determine the needs of Gay Women. But what they can do, indeed what it is their responsibility to do, is to decide how much of the student activity fee should go to those programs. They must make that decision on the basis of what is best for the student population as a whole, not on the basis of what is best for a handful of frustrated Gay Women. Any individual who favored such cuts was labelled a "sexist pig" by the women in attendance. At no time did the Gay Women try to justify their programs, at no time were they willing to answer questions about their funding, and when a compromise was offered about one portion of their proposal, they flatly refused to consider it. They only thing they did during the entire meeting was shout down speakers in opposition to them and fall back on their worn out charge of sexism. These women feel that because they are queer and because their plumbing is different from the male of the species, they have some "a priori" right to student funds.

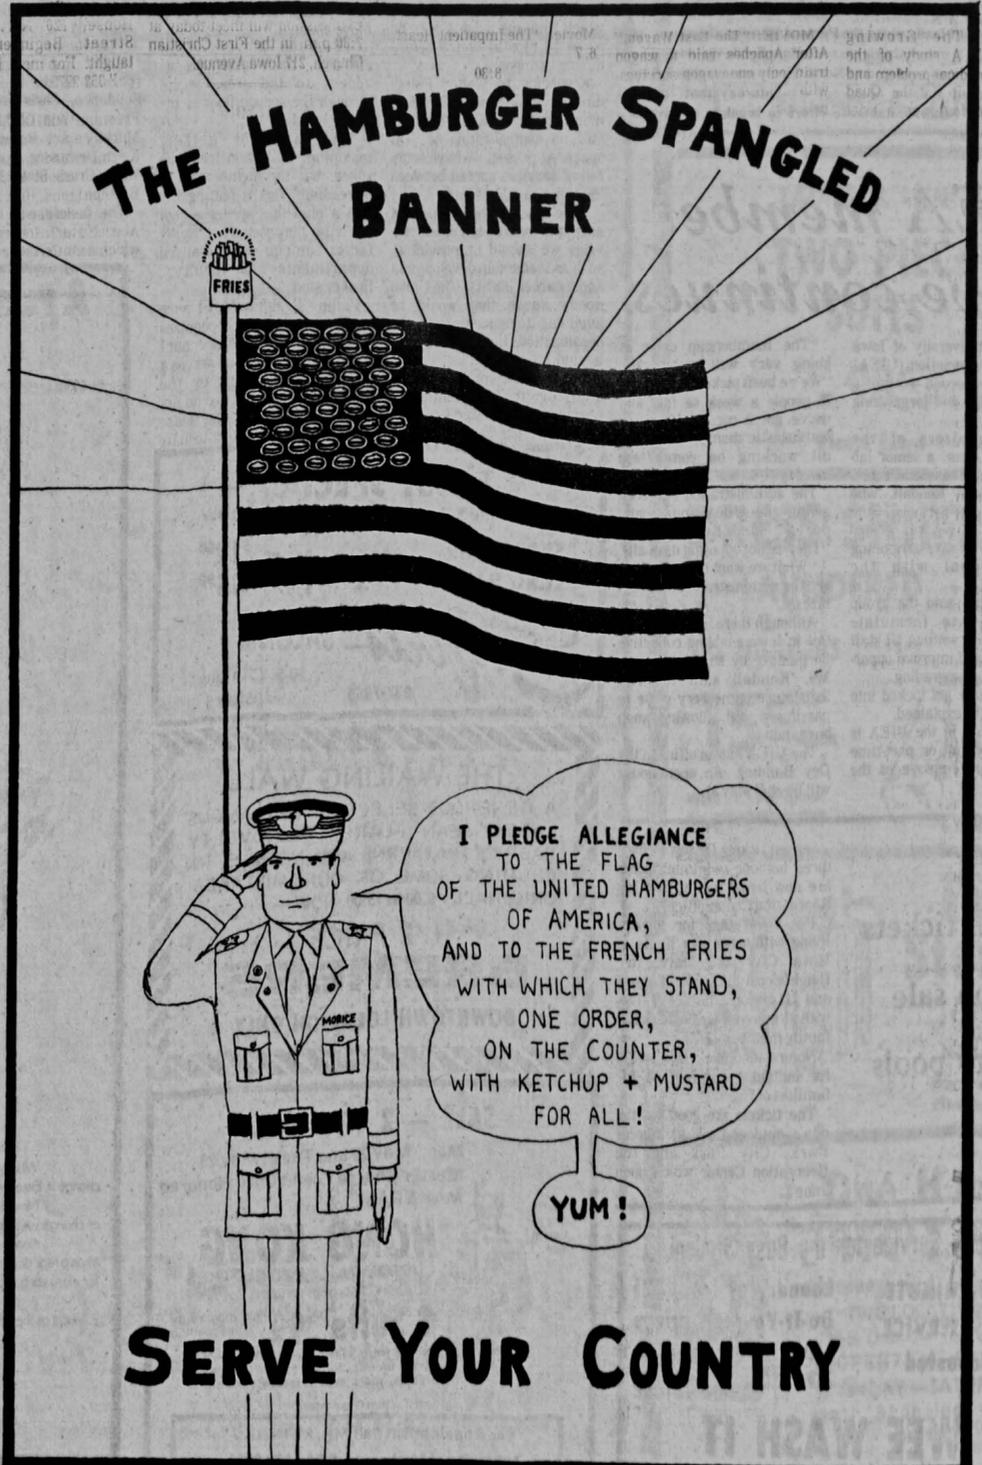

At one point, it was suggested that the issue be left up to the students by means of a referendum. The women rejected that method because they felt they would not get any funding that way. Thus it was obvious what their plan was. They expected Senate to not act as representatives of the student body and to allocate funds as the students would. Rather they expected that the senators would foresake their responsibility to the student body and give them money anyway. Unfortunately that is exactly what happened. The Senate voted Monday night not to reconsider an earlier decision to cut funds to the Women's Center. It is significant that after these two negative votes, Senate changed their opinion only after physical coercion. Ms. Ross' statement that the only way to get Senate to listen was through coercion was bullshit. Senate had listened to debate on the issue for two hours and had rejected the request quite overwhelmingly.

The funding of the Gay Lib is equally repugnant to most students. When GLF funds were not reinstated, again the second Senate vote on that issue, an emotional plea was made by one member of the GLF. He read two letters from gay men in Iowa City requesting help with their problem. One letter was nauseating. Some faggot was willing to pay for a hotel room and give a large sum of money, if the GLF could find another faggot for him to expend his sexual frustrations on. By approving funds for such a cause, the Senate, with Cooperative contingency funds, has underwritten a homosexual prostitution ring. The GLF can now act as pimp for all the faggots in Iowa City, and will do it with student activity fees.

These two instances give ample justification for the students to demand that Senate no longer allocate funds in their name. U of I students must demand that money be allocated at a referendum, where the students can directly indicate where they want their student activity funds to go. It is not unreasonable for students to expect the Senate will underwrite every organization that appeals to them to the full extent of their appeal. It is unreasonable to expect Senate to correct all the evils of the society with $50,000. It should be expected that student activity fees will be used to underwrite legitimate student organizations and activities which will benefit the greatest number of students for the amount of money that is available. By not allocating funds in this manner, the Senate has abdicated their responsibility, and therefore the students should demand the right to vote on funds themselves in a referendum to be held in the fall. Such a plan has already been suggested by ISPIRG, and I hope that the student body will object to their funds being used to underwrite a homosexual prostitution ring and will approve of the ISPIRG proposal.

A pre-summit close-up

Suspicious smiles face talks

Editor's note—The meeting will be at the Kremlin, but the sound effects for this week's summit sessions will come from far-off Vietnam and from such tinderbox areas as the Middle East. Here is a look at some of the things the summiters have been saying lately, and an appraisal of what their meeting may accomplish. This is the last of a series tracing the road to the summit.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Act II of a Nixonian drama of superpower politics is about to begin.

The drama started with the February presidential visit to Communist China. Now center stage will be occupied by the leaders of the two mightiest powers in history, each with the potential to blast the other into radioactive rubble.

Watching the polite smiles and correct protocol, the world will be acutely aware of the towering wall of mistrust built between the American and Soviet systems through 55 years.

Each side, approaching the talks, professes to espouse realism.

President Nixon said Feb. 9 in his State of the World message: "We do not, of course, expect the Soviet Union to give up its own interests. We do not expect to give up pursuing our own... What we do expect is recognition of the fact that the general improvement in our relationship transcends in importance the kind of narrow advantages which can be sought only by imperiling the cooperation between our two countries."

A month later Leonid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist party, said in a major policy speech: "We approach the forthcoming Soviet-American talks from businesslike and realistic positions. We are fully aware of the importance of the state of Soviet-American relations for the life of the peoples of both countries as well as for the entire international situation."

But—Nixon: "We are confronted by ambiguous and contradictory trends; the continuing buildup of

The President has three central objectives in Moscow. He wants to complete work on issues where preliminary spadework has made final agreement possible. He wants to establish a political framework for dealing with dangerous disputes. He wants to explore prospects for future relations with Moscow.

Soviet military power is one obvious source of concern. Soviet attitudes during the crisis in South Asia have dangerous implications...

Brezhnev: "In our foreign and defense policies we cannot ignore the fact that a buildup of arms is being continued in a number of the imperialist states. The new budget... in Washington provides for a considerable growth in military spending, especially on long-term programs of strategic armaments... Retaining restraint and high vigilance, the Soviet Union pursues a resolute anti-imperialist course."

These statements predated a new situation in Vietnam and a crisis atmosphere produced by a North Vietnamese offensive. That sense of crisis was intensified less than two weeks in advance of Nixon's scheduled departure for Moscow when he announced drastic military measures to interdict the flow of Soviet military supplies to the Hanoi regime. American planes began sowing mines in the waters off North Vietnam, a direct challenge to Soviet shipping. The United States sharply escalated the bombing of the North and announced an intention to cut rail lines and highways leading from the China border.

The Russians could hardly have been surprised. The President's special envoy, Henry Kissinger, had given them an advance hint of what was to come, and so had Nixon's words themselves. He had displayed anger at the massive Soviet support to North Vietnam and at Brezhnev's vows to continue it.

The U.S. actions put it squarely up to the Russians whether, in such perilous circumstances, they wanted the summit to go forward as planned. There would be inherent in such a meeting now a political risk to the Russians in accusations from Communists elsewhere that Moscow was abandoning a brother Communist regime. The final decision seems to have been up to Brezhnev.

He has done the talking in the pre-summit exchange and that is significant. And he has full command of foreign policy. It was he who talked with Kissinger in mid-April.

As a lifelong Leninist, Brezhnev and his colleagues in the ruling Politburo are conditioned regarding the United States as the bastion of imperialism, and imperialism as the most dangerous foe of a Soviet system they insist upon calling socialism.

This suggests a Brezhnev realism of power, the sort of realism that, in Soviet eyes, required extermination by military force of liberalization movements in Hungary and Czechoslovakia. It is the realism behind the Moscow notion of limited sovereignty, called "Brezhnev Doctrine" in the West. As Pravda put it, "No one will ever be allowed to wrest a single link from the community of Socialist states."

Hanging on to what it holds, Moscow warns Washington not to approach the summit "from a position of strength." Brezhnev has good reason for wanting less tense relations with Washington, but not at the cost of backing away in any significant measure from policies which in the Moscow view have been paying off.

Pre-empting such terms as peace and justice, Soviet propaganda claims that Moscow pursues a "Leninist, peace-loving internationalist policy" aimed at creating favorable conditions in the world for building socialism and communism and insuring solidarity of "all fighters against imperialism."

While this attests to the persistence of suspicion, there is much Brezhnev wants to talk to Nixon about. He has said he wants to discuss strategic nuclear weapons, space research, pollution, trade, and cultural and scientific-technical exchanges. Nixon wants to talk about such things, too. The President also wants to discuss the weighty and dangerous issues involved in the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

The question is: Can they get anywhere?

On Vietnam, the Russians insist they will continue sending aid to the Communist side in the war. That is a matter of practical power politics. To withdraw aid or to pressure North Vietnam would alienate Communists around the world. Unless the Russians are willing to use their influence in Hanoi, nothing much in the way of progress can be expected on this issue.

In the Middle East, Moscow has been deeply involved for more than 15 years. While the Russians tend to move warily to prevent a perilous showdown with the United States, they have in fact stepped up their involvement greatly in recent years. They show no inclination to pull back from what they probably consider important gains. No meaningful progress can be expected.

There is some expectation of limited progress on strategic arms limitation, possibly by way of limiting defensive and perhaps even offensive missiles.

President Nixon's statements have suggested a policy based on U.S. retention of an adequate nuclear deterrent, help to the defense capability of friendly nations, standing by treaty commitments and defense of U.S. interests, though short of using U.S. troops for direct military intervention. This leaves room for maneuver, because "interests" can be difficult to define.

The President has three central objective in Moscow. He wants to complete work on issues where preliminary spadework has made final agreement possible. He wants to establish a political framework for dealing with dangerous disputes. He wants to explore prospects for future relations with Moscow. If he achieves these and reaches some limited agreements in the nonexplosive areas, the President probably will consider that he has made an important start on his road to "the era of negotiation."

Trivia

This University of Iowa event was marred by a tear gas bomb in 1969. What was it and who were the most "controversial" people involved?

Smell the personals for the answer.

It matures sooner than you think.

Take stock in America. Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

WE'VE GOT MORE!

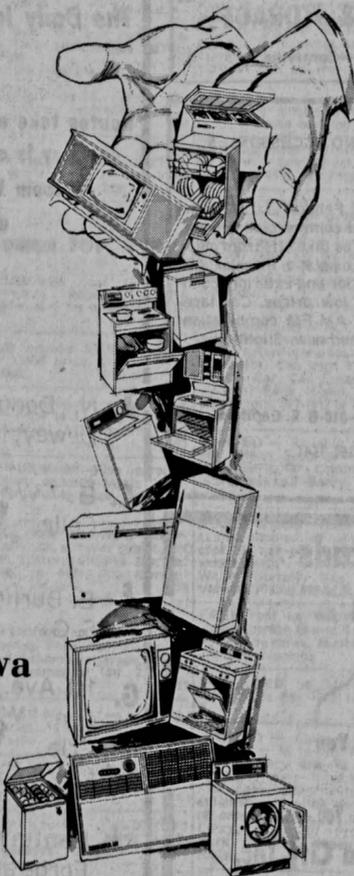

Yes, we've got more than just auto loans. We've got loans for ALL your appliance needs! Small or major. Need a stereo for your leisure hours? How 'bout a new refrigerator to keep those summer beverages cool?! See the U. of I. Credit Union first. We've got more.

Survival Line

Due to oncoming finals and a backlog of questions, SURVIVAL LINE will terminate its telephone service, but continue to receive written inquiries. The address is SURVIVAL LINE, 201 Communication's Center, University of Iowa.

Well, SURVIVAL LINE is nearing completion of its first academic year of operation, and we can only judge it a success.

Over 700 people have contacted us during the year, and we've solved many of their questions, problems and gripes.

Next year we expect to even expand the service even greater, beginning with the column's reappearance this summer.

So thanks to everybody who's pitched in and helped us out, and thanks to our readers, for being so faithful.

Have a good summer, and keep your eyes open for us.

I called in when Dr. Wilcox answered SURVIVAL LINE questions and asked the procedures needed to have my wisdom teeth removed. He told me to get a Student Health referral and the cost would be proportional to my ability to pay, or need. I received the Student Health referral and made the appointment for examination and surgery. Surgery will be May 25. However, now I am told (by the hospital) that Student Health does not pay any of the costs. Why is this so? I think I have been lured into something that will be beyond my budget. Why is there this discrepancy between what Dr. Wilcox stated and the apparent situation as it now stands? Please help.—M.B.

According to Mrs. Grimm of Student Health there are three different classifications potential patients fall under. These are private, clinical, indigent. Students fall under the clinical class which would include you.

Clinical eliminates both the registration fee and the cost of the surgeon's work. This leaves the cost of the procedure itself for the student to take care of. Sounds like it will take a bit out of your pocket book, but not as big as it could.

CLOSIN' IT DOWN. University of Minnesota students got the option this year. Because of the intense anti-war fever on campus, they were given the opportunity of withdrawing from Minnesota last week "to work for peace" without the usual academic penalties of dropping a course too late, according to the Minnesota Daily. And this week Gopher Pres. Malcolm Moos will go to Washington to discuss the war and campus discontent with Congress. He ought to know—it cost 49 grand a day for law enforcement and the National Guard during the two weeks of protest there. HUMPHREY MEN. William Bremer, father of the 21-year-old charged with the shooting of Gov. George Wallace, is a Milwaukee truck driver and, he says, a loyal Democrat. Bremer told the Milwaukee Sentinel that both he and son Arthur have "always" been loyal Hubert Humphrey fans. GOOD JOB DESCRIPTION. Harvard Pres. Derek Bok and Dean John Dunlop got their reputations in labor-management relations, but they aren't doing so well now. Eighty per cent of the liberal arts classes at the Ivy school were shut down via a boycott of 500 TAs there recently. The grads were mad about plans for a 25 per cent pay cut and have formed a union to gain collective bargaining. IMPLICATIONS OF A SHOT. Abbie Hoffman says his life has been threatened since last week's attempt on Wallace's life. So the Yippie leader has cancelled all speaking engagements for two weeks. According to sources, Hoffman said he seemed to be getting the blame for the shooting... SMELL-A-SONG. Sometimes PR people go overboard. There's a new group called Raspberries, and their album jacket is strongly spiced with...well, it wasn't apple juice... John Baldry, who had no boogie wogie laid on him in his first big American album, has released Everything Stops for Tea, co-produced again by Elton John and Rod Stewart. Klaus Voorman does some of the bass work for the Baldry product, which has more blues—Willie Dixon style—than the previous effort. By the way, Elton John's last name comes directly from Baldry's first name as kind of a tribute to his former boss. UNDER INVESTIGATION. The Village Voice says a Southern conservative rally gave J. Edgar Hoover a strange eulogy recently through a whisper in Congress. The Southerner leaned over to a Northern colleague and said, "Ah just know he's in heaven because he's got sumpin' on God." ... Which brings us to the Chicago alderman-of-the-week club. Winner is Vito Marzullo, a Mayor Daley hack, who explained how he came by what Chicago Daily News Columnist Mike Royko termed a "spiffy striped jacket" for a council meeting. "I got it for nuttin'. I'm an alderman. I don't pay for my clothes." Ah, civics. A PLACE TO GROW. All was not well at the Miss U.S.A. beauty contest in Puerto Rico, says Miss Iowa. "Some of the girls are spreading rumors and trying to cut the others down," reports contestant Jennifer Jo Owen. When she's not in beauty contests, press sources say she sometimes helps show her dad's livestock at fairs... so the air of competition is old hat for her, so to speak. We don't know where she's from, but The Des Moines Register will give you a nice map, we'll bet. That's all folks. Now the big time. —STEVE BAKER

You and your landlord

By ROBERT T. HANDY
 For The Daily Iowan
 Well, Rome wasn't built in a day. And it looks like tenants who attempt to get a square deal from local courts in contests with their landlords over antiquated leases will have about as long to wait as did the Romans for the Coliseum!
 The Westhampton Village tenants, as a recent Daily Iowan headline pointed out, won some and lost some in their suit against the Westhampton owners and managers. They learned that they may be not required to be of good moral character to live in Westhampton and that they may remove their personal belongings for short periods of time contrary to the wording of the lease. But the laundry facilities, in spite of the fact that the lease says they are free, are not, according to the judge. The word "free" does not apparently mean free, they learned.

 On the other hand, the Westhampton Village tenants won a great deal, not only for themselves, but for every tenant in the area. They succeeded in getting a case into court and did get a court to rule on a local lease—something which has not been accomplished in this area for a good many years if ever.
 Furthermore these tenants demonstrated that through a united effort action may be taken against a landlord who refuses to deal with his tenants as legitimate consumers with legitimate demands for a fair return on their money.
 No one expected a miracle from this law suit. The Westhampton tenants were fully aware that the chances for more than what they received were slim indeed. But they made the effort and they made their point well. Local landlords are not immune from court action.
 Had the Westhampton landlord continued last fall to negotiate in good faith the law suit probably would not have been filed. These tenants had little choice but to file when it became obvious that the manager was stalling. After at least five meetings with the property manager there, the tenants had succeeded only in having an area designated for dog-walking and in getting the management to agree to assigned parking (but only if the tenants came up with decals and painted the curbs themselves). Although they realized the chances for more by way of court action were slim, the Westhampton tenants felt that anything a court might award them would be more than they were getting from the management.

 They did get more, and they, as well as other area tenants, shall continue to get more. The action has not ceased. It has barely begun. A viable tenants movement still exists and pressure will continue to be exerted upon landlords for improved conditions.
 Yes, there are people who are willing to put it on the line for what they believe in—in this case it is better, more reasonably priced housing for the people of the Iowa City-Coralville area.

That confusing time of year

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Two skin divers who say they were attacked by giant loggerhead turtles on offshore coral reefs may just have been mistaken for female turtles by lovestruck, nearsighted males, a turtle expert says.
 "I have never heard of an unprovoked attack on a human in 30 years of studying turtles," said Dr. Archie Carr of the University of Florida, a man whose work on turtles has made him internationally famous.
 Loggerhead turtles are an ocean-going species which can weigh as much as 500 pounds.
 Marjorie Manser suffered severe lacerations on her thigh when she was bitten by a loggerhead while diving for a lost anchor at Black Rocks April 25.
 "At first, I thought it was a shark pulling me under water and I was scared to death," Ms. Manser said. She said she managed to fight off the turtle and get back to her boat.

Jim King overpowered a 250-pound loggerhead that he said attacked him as he was diving on Conch Reef last Wednesday. King managed to turn the turtle over on its back and drag it back to his boat. He was not injured.
 "It would appear to me that the turtles were not trying to bite those divers—they were trying to mate with them," Carr said Saturday.
 Carr said loggerheads are nearsighted enough that they could mistake humans and even floating debris for a female turtle during the breeding season.
 "A girl who dives on the Great Barrier Reef off Australia has written me several times about incidents in which male loggerheads who apparently mistook her for a female turtle swam up behind her and clasped her in a mating embrace," Carr said.
 "This is the breeding season and the males get confused," Carr added.

Home coming

Chicago White Sox Carlos May, center, slaps hands with Tom Egan (8) and is slapped on the back by Mike Andrews (2) after hitting the game-winning home run in the bottom of the ninth inning of the game in Chicago, Sunday. May's home run drove in three runs and gave the White Sox a 9-6 victory over the California Angels. The victory boosted Chicago into first place in the West Division of the American League. —AP Photo

Big 8 cuts scholarships, should be even match now

By KEITH GILLETT
Daily Iowan Sports Editor

The news that the Big Eight Conference has cut the number of football scholarships a school can grant must come as good news to members of the Big Ten.

The Big Eight is now limited to the same 120 total limit that the Big Ten authorized last year.

The conference voted to retain the yearly scholarship limit of 45 but the current banking and borrowing allowance under which a school could have added as many as 55 players a calendar year was eliminated.

To allow for schools that have already "borrowed" on next year's scholarship allowance, the league agreed to an interim ceiling of 90 scholarships for the 1972-73 and 1973-74 school years.

With the Big Eight finally deciding to limit the number of players that it feels necessary to put together a good football game, within a few years we'll have both leagues on a fairly even footing.

The only advantage that the Big Eight will have is red-shirting and Iowa Coach Frank Lauterbur has said he'd rather have a total of 120 scholarships.

So if the caliber of Big Ten football does not improve in the next few years, Big Ten apologists will have to look elsewhere to explain why the Big Eight is better than the Big Ten.

Another probe

Minnesota is now the most recent school to come under investigation by the Big Ten office. Officials at the school have been quoted as saying they are not too surprised at the news since Coach Bill Musselman built a winner almost overnight.

The investigations being conducted at Illinois and at Minnesota center on alleged recruiting violations. The Illinois allegations center around what appear to be manipulations with test scores while the extent of the Minnesota charges remain a mystery.

The situation at Illinois is not surprising since it was rumored that Coach Harv Schmidt was having problems with some of his players, Jim Krelle in particular.

The outcome of the two investigations is questionable but the publicity will result in further loss of face for the league's prestige, badly bruised by the basketball incident earlier this year.

Demand fight blackout for Sioux City tv

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The Cornhusker Boxing Club Sunday demanded that the TVS television network include Sioux City, Iowa, in the 150-mile blackout radius of the Ron Stander-Joe Frazier heavyweight championship bout Thursday night in Omaha.

Don Moran, president of the club, said that television station KTIV of Sioux City is within 150 miles of Omaha and violates a contract between the boxing club and TVS.

The demand was made in an official request to TVS president Eddie Einhorn.

Unser has his share of trouble

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Bob Unser, who will start No. 1 in the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's 56th 500-mile race Saturday, provided most of the drama in the final qualifying session Sunday.

The 1968 Indy winner blew an engine as he came down the main straightaway in practice with his already qualified Eagle.

With the split second reaction of a pro driver, he made a hard left turn into the infield at the end of the pits. He sprayed oil on only about 100 feet of track, rather than making it slippery for the full 2½ miles.

Unser, who set a 10-mile qualifying record of 195.940 m.p.h. May 14, had passed the up-track entrance to the pits when a cylinder cracked. His All-American Eagle crew will have plenty of time to install another Offenhauser engine before the race.

Business was slow in the final session which filled the 33-car field. The only high speed run was one at 188.511 by Gordon Johncock of Mt. Pleasant, Mich., in one of the McLaren factory team cars.

Johncock, teammate of No. 2 starter Peter Revson, lost his ignition Saturday after three laps at a little over 187.

Revson, like Unser, also had mechanical trouble in practice Sunday. His car died for an unexplained reason and had to be towed in.

The tentative qualifiers Sunday by mid afternoon included rookies Lee Kunzman, Guttenberg, Iowa.; Jimmy Caruthers, Anaheim, Calif., and John Mahler, Bettendorf, Iowa.

Denny Zimmerman, Glastonbury, Conn., 1971 rookie of the year, also was a tentative qualifier.

Trevino repeats victory in Memphis Open

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Lee Trevino, whose victory here a year ago spurred him to Athlete of the Year honors, Sunday stormed to his second consecutive Danny Thomas Memphis Open Golf Classic championship.

Trevino, churning over the sunsplashed fairways with his characteristic quick-striding swagger, sliced five strokes off par with a final-round 67 as he surged past faltering Bert Weaver and a number of other would-be challengers.

Trevino, warming up for defense of his U.S. Open title, had a 72-hole total of 281, seven under par on the tough 7,195-yard Colonial Country Club course—a layout that produced almost two dozen scores of 300 and higher.

It was the first victory this year for Trevino and the 12th of his meteoric career, which was capped by his 1971 blitz of the American, Canadian and British Open championships.

Trevino's victory here was worth $35,000 from a total purse of $175,000. It pushed Trevino's take for the season to $97,979, fourth on the 1972 money list.

More importantly, it stamped him as one to be reckoned with in the important, big-money tournaments ahead this summer.

John Mahaffey, with a closing 69, finished at 285, four strokes back. Weaver soared to a 74 and was tied at 286 with George Hixon, who shot a 70.

Doug Sanders was next with a 73-287, followed by Gibby Gilbert, Bob Dickson and J.C. Snead, tied at 288.

It was another disappointment for Arnold Palmer. For the fourth time this year the 42-year-old Palmer closed to within striking distance—only to fall back.

He moved within two strokes of the top spot when he birdied the 10th hole, but bogeyed four of the next six. He finished with a 73-289, eight strokes back of Trevino.

Trevino, who said he used a new putter just brought to him by a friend from Little Rock, Ark., took the lead to stay when he made a birdie four on the seventh hole.

That broke a logjam that saw 10 players locked within two strokes of each other at one time. He opened it up with another birdie on the 10th and then won it going away with birdies on the 15th and 16th.

List site, opponents for Hawks

The site and participants of the District Four playoff for berths in the NCAA College Baseball World Series were announced today.

The Iowa Hawkeyes will represent the Big Ten in the district tournament along with Bowling Green of Ohio, Central Michigan, and Northern Illinois.

Bowling Green will host the tournament, which will be double elimination.

By late Sunday it had not yet been determined which school would be Iowa's first opponent.

The tourney is scheduled to begin Thursday and run through Sunday.

The Hawkeyes finished the regular season 21-14, including 11 straight wins in Big Ten competition which enabled them to win their first outright Big Ten title since 1939.
