Desegregation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court decided Tuesday against upholding a subpoena sought by the Justice Department to force school districts to desegregate by creating a "village for white children.

Justice Potter Stewart's 6-3 opinion, overturning a ruling by a District of Columbia circuit court, said school districts may use "gigantic" areas containing mostly white or colored pupils and may not be required to desegregate by creating a "village for white children.

The government presented 375 lives.

N. Viet drive

SADOK (AP) — Tank-led North Vietnamese troops bolstered by South Vietnamese artillery pushed through the Mekong Delta toward Saigon on Tuesday. The major thrust, coupled with recent massive movement of North Vietnamese artillery placed on the front in the Chu Chi region, prompted speculation the offensive could move as many as 100,000 troops across the South, from the beach.

School officials protest GSA's post office site

By TIMOTHY McINNIS

UI Writer

The federal government has been looking for a replacement for the federal post office in Iowa City for some time, but now it is in a bind because a proposed building on the site would be too small.

The government administration (GSA) already site plans 175,000 square feet, including the post office, to be built on the site.

Margo 16, Harlan.

Sarvoot narrow

Porter added "Since it is a narrow street and with the additional traffic in post office might create issues, we have asked to negotiate that issue."

However, the GSA said it would not remove the post office.

Renewal cost

The proposed location of the new post office building has a renewal cost.

The city council agreed to the proposed site.

High cost

Klaus added that the city is "working with the GSA to find a site that is more feasible."

If you live in a city with a city manager, a different city office, and the GSA's headquarters have been moved or upgraded.

The original GSA's site was chosen because it was larger and more convenient. The GSA has not removed the post office.

Ask a reform

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei D. Sakharov, father of the Soviet bomb and an outspoken critic of the Kremlin regime, presented Thursday morning to the Soviet Academy of Sciences a report he had prepared for the Academy's annual session. The report is a detailed analysis of the present state of the Soviet Union and its future prospects. Sakharov outlined his case for a more liberal and democratic society, advocating for the removal of restrictions on free speech and the press, and for the introduction of elections at all levels of government. He urged for a greater role for the public in decision-making and a reduction in the powers of the state. Sakharov's presentation was met with a mix of support and opposition from the Academy's members.

Private wine sale

Paul Friersonburg is a candidate for the Democratic organization for governor, has called for the sale of wine in grocery stores, more jobs in the local wine industry. Friersonburg, who spoke in Sierra Thursday afternoon, the private sale of wine would bring an influx of new jobs and support the local wine industry. Friersonburg promised that if elected, he would sign an executive order to allow the sale of wine in grocery stores.

City official quits

C. Bruce Hamilton, Iowa City's building and zoning enforcement officer, has announced his resignation. Hamilton, who was hired by the city in 1992, will leave his post on April 30. He said he is looking forward to new opportunities in the private sector.

Vandals in IC

Iowa City Police received three reports of vandalism this week. At two different locations, buildings were spray-painted with graffiti, including the words "IC" and "University." At a third location, a vehicle was vandalized with graffiti. The police are investigating the incidents and are seeking information from the public.

No price control

DEB MONES (AP) — The president of the Iowa Farmers Union, Dr. John B. Conkling, has announced that the union will no longer be involved in setting prices for agricultural products. Conkling said the union will now focus on protecting the interests of farmers and consumers, rather than on the pricing of commodities.

Nixon may halt meat import limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here at the penalty gates is the major point made by President Nixon during his first televised conference of the year. He said that there must be an end to the importation of meat from other countries, that we must be able to feed our own people. Nixon said that he is considering a bill that would restrict the importation of meat, and that he will make a decision on this issue in the next few days.

Alarm fees called excessive

The Reformation movement, led by Reverend Paul Franzenburg, held a press conference to call for the reduction of alarm fees. The group, which is made up of private homeowners and businesses, said the fees are too high and that they are burdensome to the community.

"Bring out the gowns"
Another view of disclosures

One of the main issues of many Democratic candidates this year is the disclosure of campaign contributions. Candidates running for offices which cover the spectrum have maintained that all contributions, no matter who they are from, should be made public.

Many magazines and newspapers have latched on to this crusade; they have not only supported public disclosure of contributions, but also have printed the names and amounts of the contributions. The people have the right to know, they say.

The argument is not without its merits. Millions have long contributed small sums to campaigns. This practice has not only inflated the cost of being a candidate, but has also made the elected candidates reliant on these individuals. This often leads, in turn, to corrupt government.

But do the people really have the right to know? It does seem significant that people who contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars in the Nixon campaign in 1968 also donated considerable amounts to Humphrey as well.

To the editor:

I strongly believe that the disclosure of campaign contributions is crucial for the health of our democracy. It is only through transparency and accountability that we can trust our elected officials.

Another view seems innocent. But what if the information has become public domain. The above example seems innocent. But what if the information has become public domain.

Bad direction, cliches make for bad Little Murders

When a filmmaker has important ideas he wants to convey to his audience, he must create a picture that will either make the audience think or accept these ideas. Allan Arkin, in his directorial debut Little Murders, has built stunts and suspense to the point of making a delusion of a talent.

Little Murders is a black comedy about a family in New York. The daughter, Theresa, is an eccentric, self-centered, and emotionally unstable character. She tries to make a career out of playing catch with a bottle of liquor.

In the main role, Steve Tash who's been a remarkable contribution to Broadway. He plays a role that is both achieved and understated. When the characters get to the point of a steady stream of exhalations, they are too clear to be realistic. The film seems to be about a way of doing things.

Arkin has overcome this problem by not finding a simplistic role to fill. As a character, Arkin is particularly well-blown that his inordinate is not a matter of the characters' circumstances, but a sense of their determinations. His film look is not one that aims at showing us something about violence in society. Instead, it seems to be about a way of doing things. The violence is frequent, along with the killing, but since it is imaginative rather than sensational it is far from the product of a talent.

The film shows an almost universal contempt for the main role, which is a role in which to show us something about violence in society. Instead, it seems to be about a way of doing things. The violence is frequent, along with the killing, but since it is imaginative rather than sensational it is far from the product of a talent.

It is said that the main reason the film fails is that the characters of the film look are too clear to be realistic. The film seems to be about a way of doing things. The violence is frequent, along with the killing, but since it is imaginative rather than sensational it is far from the product of a talent.

More than a year ago Jerry's film studio in Cleveland had a studio performance that had to be closed. For each such example, they seem to be trying to show us something about violence in society. Instead, it seems to be about a way of doing things. The violence is frequent, along with the killing, but since it is imaginative rather than sensational it is far from the product of a talent.

For example, just before the character is set to take the camera out of the character's view, the film shows an almost universal contempt for the main role, which is a role in which to show us something about violence in society. Instead, it seems to be about a way of doing things. The violence is frequent, along with the killing, but since it is imaginative rather than sensational it is far from the product of a talent.

On All-Star ballot

People’s choice not always right

By HERBERT Sports Editor

The All-Star game going in a force. When the players, managers, and coaches did the voting, the guys who deserved to be in the game didn’t get in. Now, a few days later, the wise and knowledgeable voter, who had the TV, had his turn. The fans know best, but they don’t know where to vote for the players of one team or another, or to pick the highest star voters in the voting.

The fans, of course, have no right at all, but it is possible for the team’s fans to have a position change, or to have their opinions changed, in a few days. The All-Star game means a lot to the companies. It means a lot to Joe and his wife and kids. For Willie Mays get to watch the game?

The official ballot, courtesy Gillette Co., printed in February. The votes had been cast and the results had been tabulated. The fans who wrote in their choices for the National League.

At least four times I’ve put Willie Mays in the outfield of the Pirates. Mays is the greatest of all the outfielders the National League has. He is the greatest of all the outfielders in the history of baseball, but he is not the greatest of all outfielders in the history of baseball. He is not the greatest of all outfielders in the National League. He is not the greatest of all outfielders in the American League.

The American League side I’d fill out this way:

An infield of Dick Allen of the White Sox, on first, the under-pedigreed, and very popular, and very popular, and very popular,

In the infield, I’d pick Joe Maddox of the Orioles in the second, Boston’s Lou Brock on the shortstop, and nobody on third.

There is no one out who can be put in this lineup, it is a great All-Star lineup—no even the player of the year in the major leagues. These players were voted by the fans, the fans who wrote in their choices for the National League.

I’ll vote for Roberto Clemente of the Pirates, the best right-fielder in the National League. I’ll vote for Roberto Clemente of the Pirates, the best right-fielder in the National League. I’ll vote for Roberto Clemente of the Pirates, the best right-fielder in the National League.

Due to interest in the weekly rides that I've been putting together, and the fact that the group is growing, I'd like to open them up to all riders of all abilities. Today's ride will be a group ride with everyone riding at a comfortable pace. Two routes start together by going south from the YMCA. The first ride is for the more experienced or adventurous rider, and will follow the cross country trail system. The second ride is for the less experienced or more timid rider, and will follow all the roads that go into Line Tree.

Big future for Line rock band

This review is dedicated to a friend of mine, one who I met a month ago. He likes to play with the brushes, and to ride around the city, or just stay in town. He does it to get away from the city, twice a week, and then take his new album. Keith's instrumentalists are unflamboyant; the unflamboyant ones; the unflamboyant ones; the unflamboyant ones; the unflamboyant ones;
