

IN THE NEWS briefly

Popularity stable

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Public approval of President Nixon appears to have sustained the increased popularity that followed his visit to the Soviet Union, the Gallup Poll reported Sunday.

The Gallup organization's latest survey, taken between June 16 and 19, showed 60 per cent of those interviewed responded favorably when asked whether they approved or disapproved of the President's performance.

Another 32 per cent said they disapproved and eight per cent had no opinion. The survey involved 1,500 interviews in 300 communities across the nation.

A similar survey taken in late May at the end of Nixon's talks with Leonid I. Brezhnev, Soviet party leader, showed the President's popularity at 61 per cent, his highest rating in almost two years.

Clean-up begins

NEW YORK (AP)—Flood waters receded more rapidly than expected in the devastated East Sunday and the massive task of cleaning up and rebuilding began.

The death toll stood at 111, tens of thousands remained homeless and property damage soared well past the billion-dollar mark. But with swollen rivers and streams rolling back to their banks, officials saw a break in crisis that began a week ago when Hurricane Agnes slammed into the Florida coast.

At Harrisburg, Pa., in the heart of the ravaged area, governors of five states and a representative from a sixth met to assess the damage and map recovery strategy. With them was George A. Lincoln, director of the federal Office of Emergency Preparedness.

More delegates

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — George McGovern picked up two more national convention delegate votes Sunday when Nebraska Democrats, winding up a two-day state convention, elected a national committeeman and national committeewoman, pledged to support of the South Dakota senator for the presidential nomination.

The development assures McGovern of 20 of the state's 24 first ballot votes at Miami. The remaining four delegate votes are committed to Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

Bomb blamed

SAIGON (AP) — Investigators of the crash of a Cathay Pacific Airways jetliner that killed 81 persons are nearly convinced the plane carried a bomb that destroyed it in the air, informed sources reported Sunday.

The sources, familiar with the inquiry into the June 15 crash, said all other possibilities have been virtually eliminated, with air collision, weather and any type of military activity ruled out completely.

Wallace improves

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is showing some signs of recovery from the effects of bullet damage to his spinal cord and now has some feeling in his thighs, doctors reported Sunday.

In noting this, they said it is cause for "cautious optimism" on the chances for further recovery from the paralysis of his legs.

Truce threatened

BELFAST (AP) — British troops claimed to have hit 10 guerrillas in running gun fights across Belfast on Sunday, only 36 hours before a truce with the Irish Republican Army.

The prolonged gun battles raised fears whether the truce will begin as scheduled to halt, at least temporarily, three years of sectarian conflict that has left 383 dead in Northern Ireland.

Cloudiness

Toulouse the Traveling Tookey-Tookey Bird resting on Cumulo Nimbus' trusty Brooks Brothers tuxedo has been forced into weather-person action following the arrest of gentle ol' Nimbus Saturday. It seems Richard Turner heard that Nimbus was betting the weekend would be nice, and, well, that's against the law. Nimbus spent Saturday night in the caboose with assorted priests, Cub Scouts, ring toss people and other criminals of our time.

Meanwhile, Toulouse spies considerable cloudiness by tonight, with highs between 78 and 85 this afternoon. All this could be leading to scattered showers tomorrow, but you're safe today or Toulouse will be a fried turkey by Tuesday.

Non-resident tuition may face challenge

By MARY JO DEUSCHER and MIRIAM MELVOLD
Staff Writers

Out-of-state tuition rates may come under court attack as a result of the new lower majority rights age in Iowa.

"I feel that with the increase in the number of university students who are granted adult rights and can set their own residence, more people are going to be taking a look at the possibilities of gaining resident tuition status," said Max Hawkins, representative for the State Board of Regents in the Iowa Legislature.

Hawkins said he expects some law suits in Iowa, as have occurred in other parts of the country, in which students challenge the constitutionality of the residence requirements.

The section in the Iowa Board of Regents' Departmental rules affected by the age change states: "a student twenty-one years of age or over and a married student under twenty-one years of age shall be classified as a resident if (1) the student's parents were residents of the state at the time such student reached majority or was married and the student is not domiciled in another state, or (2) who after marriage or reaching majority has established a bona fide residence" (that he is not in the state primarily to attend college) for one year immediately preceding the beginning of the session. The new majority rights law will change the age in the section from 21 to 19.

"For all practical purposes the law doesn't change; a student still cannot establish residence in Iowa for tuition purposes only," Hawkins said.

However, many students classified as nonresidents in states where they now have adult status are filing law suits to obtain in-state tuition rates.

They argue that under the "Equal Protection of Law" clause of the 14th Amendment, which states "all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside," they are entitled to resident tuition. The students argue that they are now adults, can set their own residence, and as residents should be entitled to all rights and privileges as well as responsibilities that come with being a citizen of the state.

By paying out-of-state tuition, they feel they are constitutionally discriminated against, since they are allowed all other citizen rights in the state, including the right to drink, and the right to vote in their college town rather than the hometown of their parents.

Howard N. Sokol, Assistant to the Provost, feels such lawsuits will be discouraged in Iowa because they have been unsuccessful in the neighboring states, of Minnesota, Nebraska and Colorado.

Max Hawkins, on the other hand, expects the United States Supreme Court to eventually make a decision concerning nonresident tuition for all state-supported schools.

The 1972 Iowa Legislature changed the residence requirements for voting to 30 days in state, county, and precinct.

"If the courts were to rule the residency requirements for tuition the same as those for voting the university would lose millions of dollars in revenue," Hawkins said. Nonresident tuition is approximately twice as much as resident tuition at UI.

When the age of majority was 21, most students were either in their last year of college or had already graduated. Now, in addition to the 12,000 UI students 21 years of age, adult right will be granted to 3,000 20 year olds, and close to 3,000 19 year olds.

As of last fall, 17 per cent of university undergraduates were nonresidents. In Law, Medical, and Dental schools, 18 per cent, and in graduate college, 54 per cent were from out of state.

Nationally, some 400 state-supported schools enrolling 500,000 nonresident students would suffer similar financial loss if the out-of-state tuition rates are abolished.

One legally-trained Iowa City observer of the recent court cases sees the answer to the money question in the federal funding of education. "We live in a transient country, where local loyalties to state are not so important anymore," he said. "It's time we realize that education provides assets for national rather than local benefit."

In Sabin dispute Promises site 'no hazard'

Iowa City's Postmaster has indicated that there will not be "that great of hazard to children" resulting from the construction of the new post office across the street from Sabin Elementary School.

William J. Coen, who met Friday with representatives of the Sabin School Association, said "there is room for all of us in the street."

He added, "there is only one truck which arrives and departs when children would be leaving the school. Most of our mail is delivered at night."

The site of the new post office, which was announced last week by the General Services Administration (GSA), has been a source of alarm to parents of school-age children.

Marlene Perrin, president of the Sabin School Association, was among those who met with Coen on Friday.

She said the meeting resulted in "an exchange of ideas," but expressed doubt about the safety of the children if the new post office is built on Clinton Street between Harrison and Court.

The scheduling arrangement might seem all right now, but what about later—what if it is changed?" she asked.

Guarantee jobs for all

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic party's platform drafters Sunday called for a guaranteed job for all with federal payments to assure income above the poverty level, plus broad tax reforms and the abolition of the present welfare system.

The first drafts of the platform to be presented for approval to the national convention opening in Miami Beach July 10 were hammered out by a 15-person drafting committee.

The three planks they produced, out of an anticipated eight, pledge sweeping domestic reforms but stop well short of the specific share-the-wealth proposals of Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, the frontrunning Democratic presidential aspirant.

Yet the language was broad enough to seem acceptable to most McGovern backers, and not so drastic as to precipitate a floor fight by delegates backing Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine.

Reform needed

Taxes favor wealthy

The American tax structure has in recent years lightened its burden on the rich but increased it on the poor according to a new Brookings Institution study called "Setting National Priorities: The 1972 Budget."

The study shows, that although there have been three enormous tax cuts in the United States (in 1964, 1969 and 1971), these tax cuts increased regressive taxes and reduced progressive taxes, those taxes that hit the wealthy hardest.

The gap between America's rich and poor is not narrowing, according to the study. The prospect is for higher taxes, despite political rhetoric, the study says. Current revenue sources are being pumped dry, and the demand for new federal social programs increases.

Taxes favor wealthy

The study shows that recent modifications in the tax structure have been heavily weighted in favor of the wealthy.

Progressive federal personal and corporate taxes have been cut to the point that income from these sources next year "will be $35 billion less than it would have been at 1963 tax rates," according to the study.

Regressive payroll taxes, taxes that put a greater burden on wage workers than on the affluent, have been boosted so much that in 1973 they will be $18.5 billion higher than they would have been under 1963 rates.

The only benefit for workers came in a $10 billion cut in generally regressive excise taxes.

The result, according to the study, has been to reduce substantially federal revenues and tilt the burden of taxes away from progressive income taxes to what the study calls "highly regressive" payroll taxes.

Increases in welfare Although the tax structure is not being utilized to diminish the gap between rich and poor, limits in the allowable contrasts between poverty and affluence have probably been accepted, according to the study. The result has been huge increases in social-welfare payments.

For example, major Great Society social programs have jumped from $1.7 billion in 1963 to $35.7 billion scheduled for fiscal year 1973.

The Brookings study shows that the cut in taxes on one side and the rise in social expenditures on the other have met.

Revenues have traditionally outrun federal expenditures in peacetime as growth made the tax take higher. This was called fiscal dividend. Now, according to the Brookings study, the projected fiscal dividend has already been distributed in advance.

Need $17 billion

The Brookings study says that $17 billion in additional funds will be required in the next two years merely to meet built-in increases in the cost of continuing federal programs such as medicare and employment-retirement benefits.

The Brookings economists cite President Nixon's exploration of the value-added tax (sales tax) as an indication that the move toward higher taxes is already under way.

In its own analysis of how to raise federal revenue the Brookings study argues that reliance on payroll taxes is already too great since these are regressive.

A value-added tax will serve only to place additional burdens on consumers as a general consumption tax, according to the study.

Only structural reforms would broaden the greatly eroded base of the tax system by removing subsidies and preferential deductions.

"The major factor reducing the progressivity of the income tax is that rich people benefit from preferential tax treatment far more than do those with low incomes," the study says.

'Nuts, of course'

University of Iowa benefactor Roy J. Carver of Muscatine says he'd "probably want to go out and commit suicide" if Sen. George McGovern is elected President.

"The guy is a phony, as phony as a $3 bill, strictly a Class A phony," said Carver, chairman of Bandag, Inc., a Muscatine tire processing firm, in a Wall Street Journal survey of business reaction to McGovern, published Friday.

Carver told The Daily Iowan Sunday night that he "didn't know I was going to be quoted" in the article.

"I thought it was just a survey so it took me by surprise," said Carver, who earlier this year gave a multi-million dollar gift to UI. "I wouldn't have said that if I knew I was going to be quoted."

Carver added, however, that the article pretty much reflected "my sentiment."

In the survey Friday, Carver termed McGovern's economic philosophy as "nuts, of course, nuts as hell."

'Leader' Dubois subject of institute

The third annual Institute for Afro-American Culture, sponsored by the University of Iowa Committee on Afro-American Studies, began its exploration of black leader W.E.B. DuBois Sunday night with a lecture by Dr. J. Saunders Redding, Professor at Cornell University.

The purpose of the Institute, which will run through July 8, is to study all aspects of DuBois, said Charles T. Davis, chairman of Afro-American Studies. "We expect this to be an interlude to explore, in a way not done before, the influence and contribution of W.E.B. DuBois," he said.

According to Davis, DuBois was extraordinarily diverse and imaginative as well as scientific.

Dr. Redding, in his speech Sunday, said, DuBois saw equality as the objective of the Black and even those who were critical of DuBois dubbed him as "the Negro leader" from 1910 until his death in 1964.

Davis said the purpose of the institute which has 31 participants is to bring in people who have their own special abilities to discuss DuBois.

The Institute will include lectures by two University of Iowa professors, Wilson Moses, and Darwin T. Turner.

Davis said Redding was chosen to give the introductory lecture because he is like DuBois in that he has many talents and is old enough to have felt the direct influence of DuBois.

Inside squabbles threaten SDC

The Student Development Center (SDC) Council will probably fold next year, according to Michael J. Pill, L3, member of the student body executive.

SDC was established in 1971 in an attempt to combine University Counseling Services, Career Counseling and Placement and the Student Activities Association.

"As I see it, there will be no director, and probably no council next year," Pill said.

Pill's comments followed a Thursday meeting of the SDC staff. According to Pill, the council governing body for SDC, had decided to appoint a new director for the Center.

Former director, Walter E. Foley, G, resigned recently.

When the proposal was presented at the meeting, a negative discussion developed.

Pill said the discussion focused on reorganization and authority delegation, but basically "ignored" the proposal.

"The whole thing was very bureaucratic," Pill said. "They (the staff) drowned it in paper. At any rate, the council as it existed this year is probably dead."

Vice-Provost Philip G. Hubbard, dean of academic affairs, says such a conclusion is premature.

"People expressed a preference for changes," he said, "but no decision was made."

According to Hubbard, the discussion centered on whether or not to eliminate the director position, and questioned the authority of the SDC Council to make decisions.

Originally the council was given all power to set center policy, to approve the center's budget and to have ultimate say in the hiring and firing of center personnel.

The Placement Office representatives argued Thursday that "the advisory council had not substantially helped with their services this year" and should not have authority, according to Hubbard.

Hubbard said it was mainly the students of the Activities Programming Team who were in favor of maintaining the status quo and were willing to have the council make decisions.

Hubbard said he believes the argument stems from a "general confusion and misunderstanding" that the SDC council and Counseling Services are two separate entities.

They are both parts of SDC with the activities team and Career Counseling and Placement, according to Hubbard.

"I have not yet decided what my recommendation will be," Hubbard said, "and will not know until I have talked to more people involved. No decision has been made."

'Adult status' eases dorm life

One July 1, 1972 a new set of citizens will legally exist in the state of Iowa.

With the signature of Iowa Governor Robert D. Ray, 19 year olds in the state become full legal citizens.

The 21-page new majority rights law, house file 1011, passed by the last session of the

Desertions in Army begin to drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says its worldwide desertion rate, sent spiralling by the Vietnam war past the peak set in World War II, has begun to drop for the first time in seven years although it remains relatively high.

According to the Army, there were 40,927 cases of desertion during the first three quarters of the 1972 fiscal year which ends June 30. This is nearly 22,000 fewer than the 63,000 cases recorded during the same period of fiscal 1971.

Army officials see this as a trend that will continue as the service withdraws from an unpopular war. They say also that fewer draftees, higher enlistment standards, and measures to speed the processing of discharges are helping.

Iowa general assembly, strikes out all references to 21 as the legal age, or age of majority in the state, and replaces it with the new age, 19.

Some 6,000 University of Iowa students will gain new rights and responsibilities at the end of the week. To set their status in proper perspective The Daily Iowan begins a series of articles dealing with the "Age of Majority"—a study of the problems and privileges of citizenship.

By RON ELLYSON and MIRIAM MELVOLD Staff Writers

Although University of Iowa students will find parietal rules more relaxed after the Majority Rights Bill goes into effect, July 1, 19 and 20 year olds will still be required to live in dormitories.

According to Philip G. Hubbard, UI vice-provost, the new law calling 19 and 20 year olds adults as of July 1, will not legally affect the university's living requirements.

"Parietal rules are common and are not based upon legal adult age," Hubbard said. "Some schools place their cut-off age at 25."

Several Iowa City attorneys disagree with Hubbard. They don't think the university can legally force adults to live in the dorms.

"I doubt seriously that such a regulation can be maintained and it certainly will be challenged," said Joseph Johnston, Iowa City attorney and state representative.

"I do think dorms are educationally beneficial, although there are some problems, such as noise," Hubbard said, "but the financial part of the problem is very important."

"When we take steps to maintain the solvency of the dormitory system, it's to keep rates low for students," Hubbard continued. He explained the university is not permitted to put appropriation or tuition funds into housing for students.

Mandatory residence required

"The dormitories were built with borrowed money, and it was written into the bonding contracts that the university students having liquor," he said. "But next year the picture will be changed because liquor won't be illegal for a larger age group."

One change in residence requirements has to do with the rule on residence with adult relatives.

Exempt if live with adult

According to Hubbard, a person will be exempt from the parietal rule if he resides with an "adult relative," a relative who is at least 19 or a junior in the university.

However, according to Hubbard "we probably won't set aside special age areas" in the residence halls because dorm rooms already have been assigned.

With the proposal to allow liquor in dormitory rooms still tabled at the end of the 1971-72 academic year, Burke said "it left us no opportunity to house students younger than 19 years old in specific areas."

Hubbard said he would prefer setting areas aside eventually, however, for "students who want to get away from" places where drinking will be allowed.

Another question arising out of the majority age bill concerns the role of resident advisors (RAs) on dormitory floors.

Naming noise as the main disadvantage of living in the dormitory, Hubbard said an RA's image as a "policeman to maintain order" will be demphasized after the majority age is lowered.

"Most of the residents in dormitories will be adults, and adults don't have someone coming in telling them to be quiet all the time," he said.

According to Hubbard, some of the responsibility for making the transition is on students' shoulders.

"I don't think we can solve this problem just in the administration," he said.

Precedents favor universities

When asked if he expected a court challenge to the living requirements, Hubbard said, "There have already been landmark decisions on that, made in favor of universities."

Kingsley Clarke of the People's Law Office said, "I don't see how the university can get away with it." (parietal rules.)

He added, however, that if the university admitted that forcing students to live in the dorm was for economic reasons, a court would probably okay it.

Hubbard said the reasons for required dormitory living are both educationally and financially based.

would require students to live in dorms in order to maintain them financially," Hubbard said.

Presently the clause in the University Operations Manual pertaining to dormitory requirements reads as follows:

"All single undergraduate students under age 21 are required to live in quarters approved by the University. Students who have reached the age of 21 prior to or at the time the student registers for the session are not subject to this requirement."

As of July 1, the age reference will simply be dropped from the clause, and the following exceptions will apply to required dormitory living:

Living in a fraternity or

"If the person with whom a student lives is someone who is not subject to the parietal rule, then the student is exempt," Hubbard said.

Even though the Regents made radical changes in University policy by approving liquor consumption in the dorms, and exempting some students from parietal rule, university administrators do not seem fearful of the changes.

Gerald E. Burke, director of the Grand Avenue residence halls, said, "change creates a lot of apprehension. Some of it is justified and some of it isn't."

Waters deluge East; Southwest still dry

WASHINGTON (AP) — While most of the East is soggy with water from torrential rains spawned by Hurricane Agnes, ranchers in the Southwest still face drought conditions that, in some areas, rival the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s.

But across most of the nation water supplies are adequate or abundant, the U.S. Geological Survey reports.

And the disastrous floods at least seem to have removed for some years to come the threat of municipal water shortages that have plagued the Eastern Seaboard intermittently for many years.

"On a national basis, I'd say we're not short of water," said George Whetstone, assistant chief hydrologist for the Survey. Even in the Southwest, Arkansas and Northeast Texas where drought conditions exist, underground and reservoir supplies of water are adequate, Whetstone said.

The drought conditions affect mostly grazing lands that have not received any rainfall, he said.

The current spate of storms and flash floods, which started with the Rapid City, S.D. disaster, is bringing some relief to drought-stricken areas.

Phoenix received its first rainfall in over five months last week, and flash flooding caused extensive damage to parts of the city, Whetstone noted.

But even in drought-stricken areas, substantial runoff water last fall has insured adequate supplies in underground and man-made reservoirs, he added.

Water won't be a problem for some time in the East, where heavy rains have caused extensive flooding, Whetstone noted. "The underground reservoirs are certainly going to be full for a long time."

I. Some Disgruntled Thoughts on the Double Feature as Exploitive Shuck

Little Big Man and A Man Called Horse were originally released two or three years ago. In the intervening time Indians as a Timely-Subject-of-Fashionably-Guilt-Ridden-Liberal-Interest have skyrocketed in market value. Which is the primary reason, I suppose, for contriving a double feature of such overweight proportions. There is a part wherein the double feature program was a legitimate, viable working notion. Films were conceived and tailored to be part of a package.

generally ran ninety minutes or so; the lower billed B feature ran seventy or eighty minutes. Much of this B movie stuff is bad, but often looks pretty good when viewed today, especially when compared to such incredible crap as Skyjacked or Billy Jack.

Today the concept of the double feature has been kept wheezing along like some vegetable-minded body that continues to ingest, digest, and excrete. It is simply unable to support the four or five hour weight of such an absurd match as Patton and MASH.

II. More to the Point
Anyway, Little Big Man and A Man Called Horse are here, and if you insist on sitting through them both consecutively they can provide a contrast in the ways and means of historical depiction.

Both films attempt something in the way of an authentic recreation of an American past. The value of A Man Called Horse comes from a graphic depiction of life in an early American Indian camp. Unfortunately, in order that a drama of some sort might be narrated, this anthropological detail is rendered through the adventures of Richard Harris as the first white man captured by this tribe.

It isn't very believable, which tends to devalue the attention to detail. But it's hardy, robust, and very, very macho. Harris being strung up by hawk talons hooked through his chest muscles is an incredible scene, and since he is rewarded with warrior status and a copiously endowed Indian maiden, we see reaffirmed what pain's virtue is.

Little Big Man attempts to

Trivia

On what national television show did Elvis Presley make his first major appearance? And here's a hint—his dialogue went "Well, since mah beh-bee left me, ah've found a new place to dwell, it's down at the end of Lo-own-lee Street, it's Heart-break Hotel."

Rock to the personals, and sway to the answer.

There's a certain admirable audacity in creating sequences out of radically different styles and linking them together with the most absurd coincidences imaginable, and then asking your audience to buy the whole package.

Finally this constant shifting of gears seriously flaws the film. The sense of loss and feeling of honesty which is felt in the Indian episodes demands something more than the farcical sequences that counterpoint those Indian episodes. Little Big Man is nonetheless an important film. Chief Dan George as Old Lodge Skins is truly magnificent.

Empty heads & violence, Cruella & good animation

Fantasy-time at Cinema I... Walt Disney Productions has re-released two children's movies, Swiss Family Robinson and One Hundred and One Dalmations. As a double bill, they're pretty good, although not perfect, for the kiddies, and 101 Dalmations alone is fun for anyone.

Swiss Family Robinson was one of the favorite books of my childhood. The movie is mostly faithful to it, although the religiosity is toned down and the characters made somewhat more human than the originals.

Father Robinson (John Mills the Excellent) is impatient with his sons. Mother Robinson is played as a neurotic American housewife (big cheer from the kids when she falls in the water... a lot of mother-hostility shown there), and the older boys fight with each other.

The youngest son runs around making friends with all the animals and yelling great lines like, "Leave him alone. He's my elephant." I think if I were ten years old, it would seem like absolute heaven to be able to say things like that.

The movie is compressed from the book, but the tree-house is still there, and so are all the animals (tigers and elephants and flamingoes and zebras and boa constrictors and on and on). Unfortunately, the Disney people also introduced a band of evil pirates, and the movie climaxes with the entire family getting together to wipe them out, using all sorts of ingenious devices like coconut-shell hand-grenades.

The kids in the theatre cheer madly for this, but parents might want to think about it before they send their kids to the movies. Is unrealistic, bloodless, Disney-type violence really better than realistic, icky, John Wayne-type violence? Do you really want your kids watching a freckle-faced ten-year-old helping to wipe out a band of pirates?

Think about it. It's a pity the pirates are there, because the rest of the movie is a lot of fun, even if empty-headed.

This was the second time I'd seen 101 Dalmations. I remember thinking, when I was eleven, that Cruella DeVille must be the most wicked villainess ever conceived of (imagine! making coats out of dog-skins!). I still do, and I loved the movie as much this time as I ever did.

I got just as involved in the plot (will the puppies be rescued before she skins them?) as before, and this time I also noticed the beauty and delicacy of the background drawings of London streets. The animation's pretty good, too.

The Twilight Bark, a warning chain of barking dogs spread across England, sent chills down my back. Swiss Family Robinson is pretty much a little kids movie, but this one is for us big kids, too.

Sometimes all you have to do is ask the right people. SURVIVAL LINE contacted Winston Reese, Language Lab Director, and found that you have definite reason for optimism.

Reese is quite willing to rearrange their hours to suit the preference of the majority of Lab users. So if Language Lab denizens will make their hour preferences known to Reese, he'll try to accommodate. Ask and ye shall receive.

Stamp collectors of the world...

Cuba recently issued three new commemorative stamps, and you're safe if you're betting they won't replace George Washington and the astronauts at the Iowa City Post Office, at least until after the revolution.

The stamps, according to Gramma—Cuba's official Communist Party publication, were issued in conjunction with the Third Symposium Against Yankee Genocide in Vietnam held in May.

One depicts Ho Chi Minh and Cuban apostle Jose Marti "as symbols of international solidarity." Another—and more expensive model—is a painting showing a view of United States bombings in Indochina.

And the third shows the Symposium's emblem...a "pineapple" bomb, the type used by the U.S. crowned by a bunch of flowers. According to Gramma, it was chosen "because it implies the inevitable triumph of life over the terrible weapons of the imperialist arsenal."

Now that all may sound horribly propagandistic to you, but once you wade through the rhetoric the U.S. government issues with each new stamp—Kennedy (Democratic administration), Eisenhower (Republican administration) the Boy Scouts (any administration), drug abuse, the flag or what have you...Well, you find the same thing here.

Only maybe it's worse in America...the Cuban stamps do, rightfully, criticize an insane U.S. war policy, whatever their rhetoric.

In America, you get glorification of war from stamps to the National Anthem...enough emphasis to make citizens think war is the most efficient form of diplomacy the U.S. fight for "democracy and against tyranny" can take.

Now that's the real blitz.

To paraphrase a bad joke, stick that stamp on your envelope and see who salutes.

Wants stiffer penalties for users

White House not soft on pot

WASHINGTON—The White House has quietly started twisting arms on Capitol Hill to authorize tougher measures against marijuana violators.

For months, a fierce debate has raged inside the Nixon Administration between those who want to legalize marijuana and those who favor a marijuana crackdown. The crackdown crowd has now won.

The word has gone out from the White House to put the heat on Congress to pass two measures that would assure continued prosecution of marijuana users.

The instructions were delivered by White House aide Walt Minnick to Donald Miller, chief counsel for the Justice Department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. Miller immediately called representatives from several federal departments behind closed doors on June 13 to plan the lobbying campaign.

The principal measure is an international drug control treaty which would obligate the U.S. to make possession of certain drugs, including marijuana, "punishable offenses."

The other measure is an enabling law, which would be needed to clear the way for Congress to approve the treaty.

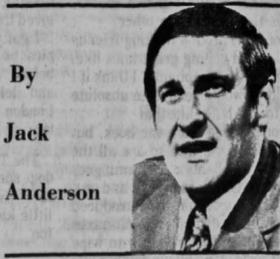

The treaty, known as "The Convention on Psychotropic Substances," would empower the Justice Department to control drugs regardless of the medical recommendations from the Health, Education, and Welfare Department.

This would directly contravene a drug abuse law, enacted by Congress two years ago, giving HEW the power to decide which drugs are dangerous.

A number of HEW officials are dismayed over the White House action. They believe HEW, as the scientific and medical arm of the government, should rule on dangerous drugs.

The President's own National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse has recommended that penalties for personal possession of marijuana be abolished.

BNDD officials, however, are sternly opposed to relaxing any of the laws against marijuana use. Their views were underscored in a recent speech by John Ingersoll, the hard-line BNDD director. He told a group of California policemen that the legalization of marijuana and other drugs might mean the fight against

By Jack

drug abuse was "lost altogether." He added: "It is our duty not only to protect the public in the streets from vicious criminals but to protect the public from harmful ideas."

Footnote: HEW officials believe the White House deliberately began lobbying for the drug control treaty on the eve of the election campaign, figuring it might be difficult for Members of Congress to oppose it in an election year.

But Minnick explained to us that the timing had been determined by the Senate Judiciary Committee's schedule. The committee must process the enabling legislation.

Indians 'took' again

It has been many moons since the bluecoats won their last skirmish with the redskins in the struggle for the West. But the federal government is still crowding the Indians.

Back in 1865, the government signed a treaty with the Winnebago tribe granting them land "for use and occupancy forever." As late as 1944, the Army

Engineers—descendants of the bluecoats—pledged that they would never appropriate Indian lands without prior tribal consent.

But now the federal authorities want to build a recreation project on Winnebago land in Iowa and Nebraska. Without regard for past treaties and pledges, the government took the land away from the Indians for the Oxbow Lake project.

Not that the friendly Winnebago mind opening their homeland to their white brothers for fishing and picnicking. But the tribe would like to retain the title and collect the income from park concessions.

Footnote: Congressional sources tell us that a House Appropriations Subcommittee may settle the issue, strictly for budgetary reasons, by turning down the $750,000 appropriation for the Oxbow project.

Standard Oil of California has now admitted what conservationists have suspected all along: that the company supports its political friends with hard cash. The admission came in a proxy statement.

"Political contributions," conceded the corporate statement, are made to "political causes...in the best interests of the Company and its stockholders." In national elections, corporate contributions are banned by the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

When we called Standard's Vice President George T. Ballou, however, he contended Standard kicked in money only to state and local candidates.

Patrolman blasts 'lies'

To the editor:

I recently was given a copy of the May 15, 1972 issue of the Daily Iowan in which there is a portion of the paper called "Left to Write with eddie haskell" apparently written by a Steve Baker.

In this portion of your paper the first paragraph describes certain happenings and conversations concerning the Highway Patrol. The part concerning conversation in direct quotes by myself are what I'm concerned about. Your student reporter has charged me with remarks that can only be, at best, termed ridiculous lies. To the contrary of what was promiscuously printed in that article, I hope you will do me the honor of printing the following.

You described my making conversation with protestors that I too was dissatisfied with President Nixon, and so much so that I wrote to my Congressmen and thereby, had become an apparent convert to their way of thinking.

First of all, I support President Nixon and all his policies concerning Southeast Asia. As far as contacting my Congressmen, which I have never done, I would only encourage them to support President Nixon and his policies if I were to do so.

I feel your reporter and your newspaper have performed a great disservice to myself and the Force of the Iowa Highway Patrol by this type of irresponsible reporting.

I feel you defamed my character in general and my position as a professional peace officer who purportedly entered into appeasement type conversation with people who were violating a breach of the peace; also by putting words into the alleged conversation that I don't use in conversing with the general public.

I consider these words to be offensive to the average person and for you to use them in print to help emphasize these erroneous statements, would again, seem to be irresponsible.

I highly respect the news media that I have been associated with in the State of Iowa. I have never had an experience of this type before in my career and must admit frustration as to how people combat this type of journalism. This letter, to set the record straight, seems to be one of the first approaches.

If your reporter now wishes to make comment on my statements concerning our President and my conduct concerning communication with Congressmen about him, he may do so. At least he will be describing the true character of myself and my philosophy of proper conduct.

Lt. Edward Dickinson
Commander Post No. 6

Approved June 16, 1972
Col. Howard S. Miller, Chief

(Editor's note: We certainly thank Dickinson and respect the clarification of his views in the preceding letter. However, editor Steve Baker—then a reporter and columnist—stands by the published report, which quoted a graduate student as saying, "We're pissed off at Nixon" and Dickenson replying, "So am I" during a "rap" session the night of the Interstate 80 anti-war action.

Slater Hall hypocritical

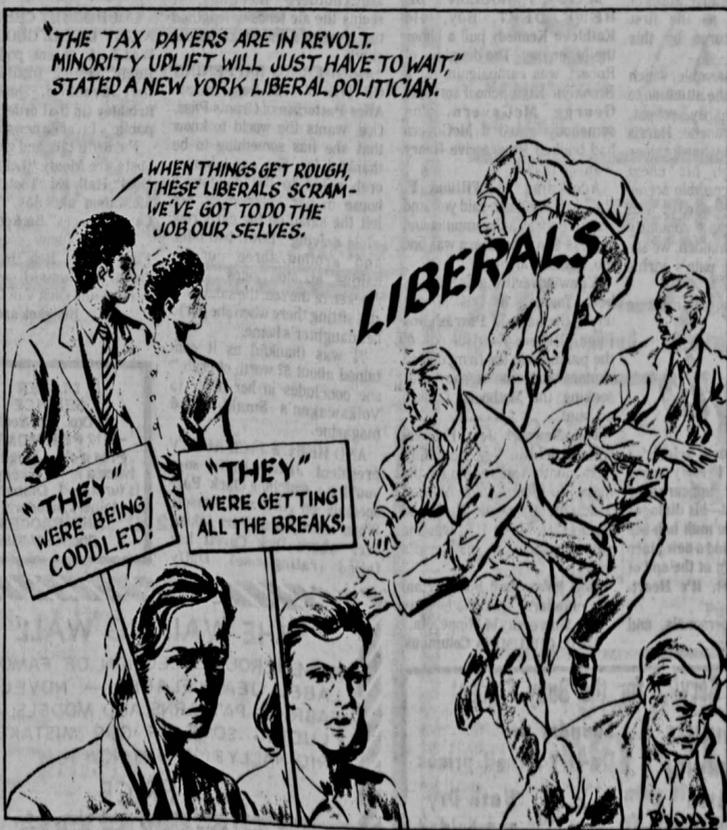

To the editor:

If such things happen, I am sure the late Fred Slater rolled over in his grave upon hearing Rienow II dormitory had been "renamed" in his honor.

Honor hell! Having something renamed in your honor in itself is very condescending, but to have a structure that, because of your color, you were never allowed to live in renamed in your honor is blatant hypocrisy.

I am not necessarily arguing that the stadium should be named Slater rather than Kinnick, for certainly naming it Kinnick can be highly justified. I do think that President Boyd's decision to name the stadium Kinnick and the dorm Slater relegates Slater to a second class position—something he fought against all his life. Now that he is dead, the University has successfully smeared everything this alumnus stood for.

PET SOUNDS-CARL AND THE PASSIONS-SO TOUGH

The Beach Boys
Brother Records

Well, here is an attempt to please everybody. Warner Brothers, which has been helping rebuild the band like they did the Kinks, has brought out Pet Sounds—a 1966 LP offing—to please the oldie-but-goodie gang and Carl and The Passions-SO Tough to extend the Beach Boys beyond Surf's Up, their last (and successful) album.

Pet Sounds is perhaps Brian Wilson at his best before the times they got changed. "Sloop John B," "God Only Knows," and "Wouldn't It Be Nice" are ahead of their time, ahead of the surfboard image but behind other Beach Boys classics in sales back in '66. Now they still sound both tainted with age and in time...maybe as if they were on Surf's Up. Unfortunately, the rest of this part of the package (except "Caroline No") sounds like the album fillers the Boys got too well noted for back then.

As a follow-up to Surf's Up in new material, SO TOUGH can rank as little more than that. Although The Beach Boys are switching from country to piano to symphony, the lyrics and arrangements aren't up to the Surf's Up standards.

The only exception is the ballad "Cuddle Up," which is such vintage Beach Boy material (updated) that it makes you wanna dance—ah—real close again. If you like the old, slow material, you'll find yourself sniffing with nostalgia...it's that convincing.

Some people are saying the SO Tough material lacks the Brian Wilson touch...hence the name Carl (Wilson) and the Passions. Maybe so...and maybe Brian better start carrying a higher profile.

Sometimes pleasant surprises don't come in these special packages. The concept of old and new is, perhaps, unique, but the content is, "Cuddle Up" aside, disappointing.

Stones: View II

CHICAGO—Chicago is a trip in itself. The Rolling Stones in Chicago in concert is almost too much. In contrast to what a majority of the fans seemed to think, I recommend a clear head.

It was uncovered that six people had been killed by policemen in gang land type slayings in Chicago. Evidently some one had not been kicking back as much drug traffic money as some law officer thought necessary. Drugs were thick at the Amphitheater concert, so were policemen.

The weather can be as hot and humid as Iowa City's. On the lake it is a few degrees cooler. It was so humid in the Amphitheater that joints were hard to keep lit. Who put the Stones in the old livestock show barn seating 12,000 and called the Amphitheater, I don't know.

I do know the concert was fantastic. Hopefully the Stones didn't choose the Amphitheater to make an extra buck.

Mick Jagger performs all out. He's a singer, gymnast, dancer, stripper, politician, and laborer on the stage. Some of the other musicians are blasé. The burly body guards wait in ambivalence for someone to work their way to the front, get pushed up on stage, so they can throw them out the back door.

Jagger must lose five pounds during an hour and a half performance—considerable weight for a thin muscular man to lose. He does his best to get into it and to take everyone else along. Some fans were so ripped they weren't going anywhere.

The big thing at Chicago rock concerts this summer is the no-bra look for women and the Jagger look for men. The no-bra look is easier to come off with successfully. Jagger wore a white jump suit at many performances, but had on white shoes, chartreuse lime green bells, patterned sleeveless slip over shirt, and a silver, reflects-all-lights jacket. At the end of the concert Mick dons a silver bowl on his head from which he has thrown and eaten red rose petals. He goes all out.

While McGovern was winning big at the primary polls in New York, the Stones were winning big at the stockyard Amphitheater in Chicago. The crowd was polite to Stevie Wonder with a lead off group, as they were generally polite all afternoon. When the Stones come on stage it is frenzy however. Everyone that was able stood on their chairs.

A few people in paddy wagons out front were not so static. "Hey you in the hat," or "Someone's sick in here," were the only comments heard from the jail bound crowd. Trying to get in for free was what most people got arrested for, but Chicago police make it clear that you do anything they don't like you go. Crowd control is becoming a science as the braless look is an art.

Most people are familiar with the Stones' songs. If not then you should buy some of their albums. Don't tell me you "Can't Always Get What You Want." Some critics have described the Stones' music as "blues-rock with a shaker of country." It's powerful but beyond that I'd need to put an album on to describe it.

The Amphitheater smelled like cow manure for the first concert. By the afternoon concert, it smelled like cannabis. The lighting was well done. Roasting the performers in red was perhaps the most gut level, but all lighting was good with the help of a giant reflector attached to the ceiling.

Sangy slam sweeps Cubs; bean brawl in Montreal

Effervescent Manny Sanguillen hit the first grand-slam of his baseball career, triggering the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 9-2 victory over the Cubs and a Sweep of their three-game series in Chicago.

With the Cubbies leading 2-1 and two down in the eighth, Roberto Clemente and Willie Stargell singled to KO Burt Hooton, 6-5. Al Oliver worked reliever Dan McGinn for a walk to load the bases and bring on Tom Phoebus.

The madcap Sanguillen, whose bases-loaded single gave the Bucs a 3-1 victory Saturday, lined a shot into a strong wind. It carried into the left-center field bleachers and Sanguillen and Clemente ran merrily arm-in-arm into the happy Pirate dugout.

The Pirates added four wrapup runs in the ninth. The Cubs got a break in the sixth when Clemente singled with one out and Stargell followed with a ground rule double that bounced into the open door of the Cub clubhouse in foul territory.

Terrible Ted Simmons raced home from third base on pinch hitter Donn Clendenon's infield hit with two out in the ninth, giving the Cardinals and Rick Wise a 2-1 victory over the Mets and a sweep of their twinbill.

The Cards took the opener 7-1 behind flashy Scipio Spinks, who scattered six hits and fanned 13 for his first win in more than a month.

The double disaster dropped the second-place New Yorkers three games behind Pittsburgh in the N.L. East. The Pirates came into Shea Stadium tonight for a nationally televised confrontation.

Denis Menke's 10th-inning double scored Tony Perez with the winning run as the Reds topped the Astros 5-4 and regained first place in the N.L. West.

Houston's Ken Forsch was coasting with a 4-2 lead and had held the Reds to only two hits when Pete Rose led off the seventh with a single.

Astro ace fireman Jim "Sting" Ray relieved and Joe Morgan took the Stinger over the right field wall tying the game.

Starter Tommy John and reliever Pete Mikkelsen combined for a seven hitter as the Dodgers blanked the Braves 5-0.

Valuable spare Manny Nola homered as John won his fourth straight, improving his slate to 7-3.

Recently-returned Vietnam vet Garry Maddox ripped a 14th-inning double and then bowled over catcher Pat Corrales to score the winning run on an infield out, lifting the Giants to a 6-5 win over the Padres.

Southpaw Steve Carlton scattered four hits and was the center of a brawl as the Phillies edged Montreal 1-0 on former Expo John Bateman's home run.

The fracas erupted when Carlton hit hypertense Montreal shortstop Tim "Crazyhorse" Foli on the helmet with the first pitch of the inning.

The beaming occurred after Expo pitcher Ernie McAnally hit Joe Lis on the back with a fastball.

Foli started toward the mound and Carlton met him as the benches emptied.

Expos' Manager Gene Mauch, according to umpires, was the first man to throw a punch when he swung at Carlton.

Mauch wound up being tossed out of the game and limped to the dugout. He suffered a charley horse and had several scrapes and cuts on his face.

proved negative. Jim Palmer notched his eighth straight victory as the Orioles nipped the Tigers 2-1 and tied Detroit for the A.L. East lead.

Brooks Robinson's single scored Terry Crowley with the winning run in the sixth off loser Tom Timmerman, 6-6. Palmer is now 10-3.

The Cleveland Indians, behind strong pitching by Gaylord Perry and Mike Kilkenny, swept a doubleheader from the Yankees, 4-3 and 5-1.

Perry, 12-6, became the first 12-game winner in the majors with ninth inning help from Ed Farmer.

Kilkenny, winning his first start for Cleveland, scattered five hits.

Earl Stephenson, making his first major league start, hurled seven scoreless innings and Ken Sanders completed the seven-hit shutout as the Brewers beat the Red Sox 2-0 and salvaged a split of their doubleheader.

The Red Sox won the opener 8-1 on Marty Pattin's six-hit pitching with Reggie Smith's three-run homer capping a five-run seventh inning.

Two hot batsmen, Lou Piniella and John Mayberry, drove in three runs apiece during a seven-run fifth-inning outburst, giving Kansas City an 8-3 win and a split of their doubleheader with Minnesota.

Mr. Harmon Killebrew's three-run homer, his ninth of the season and 524th of his career, produced a 5-3 triumph for the Twins in the opener.

In the heat of the night East breezes, 42-20

By TOWNSEND HOOPES, III
Sports Editor

June 21 officially marked the beginning of summer — (almost) everyone's favorite climatic season. Aside from the sun and fun to be had at various resorts and posh country clubs throughout these United States, the summer sportsman turns his attention to baseball, golf, tennis, automobile and horse racing and, in 1972, to track and the Summer Olympic Games in Munich.

But three short evenings after the formal recognition of summer, avid gridiron fans across the nation realized their "midsummer night's dream" in the form of Saturday night's 12th Annual Coaches All-America Football Game.

Although football will not begin to dominate the national scene until the College All-Stars meet World Champion Dallas in Chicago's Soldier Field July 28, many pigskin widows are undoubtedly rummaging through mothball-preserved clothing in search of last season's tattered black veil, appropriately stamped Bears, Chiefs, Lions, etc.

Saturday night's clash was brought to you "live and in color" (if you were tubin' it) from sweltering Jones Stadium on the campus of Texas Tech University in Lubbock. ABC had the cast and featured play-by-play announcer Chris Schenkel ("hardly seems the time of year for it..."); analyst and former Oklahoma head coach Bud Wilkinson; and on-the-sod spot interviewer Orange Juice Simpson who now runs for hapless Buffalo, and his life, during the pro campaign.

Billy Taylor

Prior to the opening kickoff, Western squads held a slim 6-5 margin in victories over the past 11 years, but the East wasted no time in making up the deficit as they turned Western miscues into Eastern touchdowns and coasted to an impressive 42-20 win.

Favored West had horsepower

West coach Chuck Fairbanks of Oklahoma had a loaded stable of talent with quarterbacks Jerry Tagge (bound for Green Bay) and his own Jack Mildren (Colts) sharing directional duties. But when the final quarter began with the East ahead by 14, Mildren was switched to flanker and wide receiver.

Tagge, for some reason, had gained 15 pounds since leading the NCAA champion Cornhuskers to victory in the Orange Bowl New Year's Day, and reported for the scuffle at a paunchy 230. Although he completed 11 passes, Tagge missed on an identical number, threw one interception, and was sacked once, prompting one sportswriter to quip, "The Pack May Crack When Jerry Drops Back."

The East tallied first in the opening period following a blocked punt by Michigan State defensive tackle Ron Carl (Steelers). Michigan's Billy Taylor bulled over from a half yard out and Tennessee's George Hunt (Browns) converted to put the underdog blue-clads ahead, 7-0.

The next time the West had the ball, Houston's Tom Mozisek (Giants) fumbled on his own 33 and alert defensive back Bo Davies (Saints) pounced on the elusive pigskin. Four plays later North Carolina teammates Steve Miller (not drafted) and Louis Jolley (Oilers) combined on a 15-yard pass play for six more. Hunt again mastered the uprights to push the advantage to 14-0.

The West finally scarred the scoreboard in the second quarter as Mildren directed a 49-yard drive to paydirt, culminating with a 6-yard rollout strike to Washington State flanker Bernie Jackson (Bengals). Marv Bateman (Cowboys) converted to close the gap to 14-7.

On the ensuing series, Western defenders contained Billy Taylor's fourth-and-one attempt on their own 41, but Tagge promptly countered with his interception, a perfect strike to Ron Easterling (Falcons).

Miller at the tiller

Tar Heel signal-caller Miller utilized running backs Johnny ("The Italian Stallion") Musso (B.C. Lions), Curt Watson (Saints) and Jolley in grinding out an 80-yard march to the promised land. Musso capped the 8-play execution with a 1-yard plunge and the East held on for a 21-7 margin at intermission.

The second half opened with a seemingly rejuvenated Western club marching 83 yards in 14 plays to again narrow the gap to a touchdown. Mildren directed the attack with a fine display of aerial artistry and the running of Kansas State's Billy Butler (Saints), Nebraska's Jeff Kinney (Chiefs) and Mozisek. The score came on a 21-yard toss to USC's Skip Thomas (Raiders), who was so elated that his post-paydirt antics cost the West 15 yards on the ensuing kickoff.

Billy Taylor accounted for 62 yards on the East's next drive and Curt Watson exploded for a 26-yard payoff gallop up the middle to end third quarter scoring and again boost the difference to 14 points.

Tennessee State's Joe Gilliam (Steelers) connected on three passes for 48 yards and Taylor capped the 79-yard drive with a 2-yard plunge for his second touchdown as the East opened final frame scoring to pad their lead at 35-14.

Tagge tosses too late

The West retaliated, though a bit too late, with passing combinations of Tagge-Kinney, Tagge-Mildren and Tagge-Hoss (Patriots) accounting for 64 yards. Tom Mozisek rumbled into the end zone from the five to cap the 80-yard march, but Bateman's conversion attempt was blocked by Michigan's Mike Taylor (Jets).

The East finally slammed the door on Western opportunities as they tallied for six more with 00:28 remaining. The big play was a nifty pass from Miller-to-Musso-back-to-Miller, which covered 28 yards. Miller then found Ted McMakin (Steelers) alone in the end zone to complete a 15-yard scoring play.

Wolverine Taylor MVP

At halftime, Johnny Musso and Jack Mildren were named recipients of the coveted Ernie Davis Memorial Award for sportsmanship and competitive attitude on the playing field. East head coach Paul "Bear" Bryant of Alabama made the presentations.

Davis, an All-American at Syracuse and draftee of the NFL Cleveland Browns, played his final game in the 1962 Coaches All-America classic. He was fatally stricken with leukemia.

Michigan's Billy Taylor was unanimously voted the game's Outstanding Player Award. Taylor amassed 100 yards in 18 carries, scored two touchdowns and returned two kickoffs for 58 yards.

Jim Jamieson, of Moline, Ill., tips his hat to the gallery following a seventh hole birdie putt enroute to victory in the Western Open Golf Championship in Northbrook, Ill., Sunday. Jamieson finished with a 13-under par 271, six strokes ahead of Labron Harris.

Jamieson's 271 cops Western

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (AP) — Jim Jamieson got off to a shaky start but recovered to fashion a 69 Sunday and score his first professional victory by a whopping six strokes in the 69th annual Western Open Golf Championship.

Jamieson, a four-year tour regular who came to national attention with a surprise challenge in the Masters earlier this season, had staked himself to an eight-stroke lead after 54 holes then cruised home with the biggest victory margin of the season.

The 29-year-old Jamieson, cheered on by a mob of hometown fans from Moline, Ill., had a 72-hole total of 271, 13 under par on the 6,716-yard Sunset Ridge Country Club course.

He never was in real trouble, but had to overcome a bad start. He bogeyed two of the first three holes he played in the warm, sunny weather, but only Labron Harris could keep him in sight.

Harris had to match the course record with a six-under par 65 to do it and was second at 277. But he never got closer than four strokes.

The group at 281 included Tom Weiskopf, J.C. Snead and Australian David Graham. Graham had a 67, Weiskopf 68 and Snead 70.

The 1971 champion, Australian Bruce Crampton, finished far back in the pack.

Jack Nicklaus, winner of the U.S. Open a week ago, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and South African Gary Player did not compete.

Lady ump walks (out)

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP)—Bernice Gera dropped out of public view Sunday after what might have been professional baseball's shortest umpiring career—one dispute-filled game.

The New York housewife, who went through six years of effort and legal wrangling to break baseball officiating's sex barrier, resigned tearfully Saturday night after serving as a base umpire in a New York-Pennsylvania League game between the Auburn Phillies and Geneva Rangers.

Gera made three contested calls during Saturday night's seven-inning game. One, in the fourth inning, was protested loudly by Auburn Manager Nolan Campbell. He was thrown out of the game by the umpire.
