"Living's" triangular affair and Lubitsch the Absurd

Though the Golden Film Society will be presenting Design For Living (inspired by Dashiell Hammett's novel), the film's nature is that of a comedy. The film's make-up is to be played by the German director, Lubitsch. The film concerns a progression of the trysts that can be found in life. The film begins with a young man and a young woman, who are both played by Pauline Lord. They meet and become involved with each other, and the film goes on to show how these relationships can end. The Carnegie reform list

The Carnegie Commission on Higher Education recently recommended the closing of three hallowed institutions wanting to avoid a "deep academic crisis in the future." While commission chairman Clark Kerr contends there's no certain right now, he says there are some "strong specific dangers" among many of the 100,000 college students and 40,000 faculty members interviewed. Kerr says that the largest number of interviewees is in a higher education study, and maybe that's why the reform list sounds like it's straight from University of Iowa students.

To the editor:

In response to Nick Hadley's column in the June 21 issue of The Daily Iowan, I have been a resident of Ft. Dilly since April of last year. I have never been treated in any way decent. If my mail is censored or if I have any inmate get mistreated, then I will not continue to participate with the guards being allowed to play any role in this. I have received letters and opinions. In two other areas, I have been stuck in wait to junk the letter. I have been stalled and ruined, and the confusing UI committee procedure of laying in wait to junk the letter has inched ahead with potential steps on the toes of too many traditionalists.

The Big Ten has made a move which should capture some attention. The conference set up a Black Advisory Committee consisting of five African American leaders who will advise the league on issues at the forefront of the current crisis. This is a significant step towards ensuring that the league is addressing the needs of its black student-athletes.

Tigers, Tribe win; Sox, Mets within two

The Detroit Tigers defeated the Seattle Mariners 4-1 with a dominant pitching performance from就可以了Who (5-2) and a strong hitting performance from Scott Puckett, who had three hits and drove in three runs. The Cleveland Indians also won, 5-4, against the New York Mets with a strong performance by starting pitcher Carlos Carrasco, who allowed only one run on four hits.
