Charges Turner

Donald J. Schleisman, a Democratic candidate for the State Senate from Johnson County has accused Iowa Atty. Gen. Richard Turner of wasting time and money arresting priests at charity events.

In a telegram sent to Turner, Schleisman said: "Please consider this telegram as my personal complaint to your office on behalf of many parents in this community concerning the heroin and related hard drug traffic in the Iowa City area. If you require specific leads, I'm sure that the local authorities can furnish you with an ample supply. I sincerely hope that the next time you are in this area to raid a local church bingo game or our county fair that you will find time to help us with our drug problems."

Rivers recede

By The Associated Press

Swollen rivers receded toward their banks in eight eastern states Monday, and the worst floods in the seaboard's history appeared at an end, except for a few pockets of crisis.

The death toll climbed to 119, the greatest by flood in 35 years.

Drinking water was the gravest problem still confronting many of more than 100 flood-stricken communities. Supplies remained cut off or contaminated, and fresh water was being trucked in and doled out.

President Nixon promised new infusions of federal rebuilding aid where needed, after complaints that initial allocations from Washington fell far short in an inflation era of offsetting more than $1 billion in flood damages.

SAIGON (AP)—South Vietnamese forces under a U.S. umbrella of B52 bombers fought off a North Vietnamese attack on the northern front Monday and found piles of enemy bodies killed in saturation air strikes around Hue.

Frontline positions on the My Chanh River 25 miles north of Hue, took more than 1,000 rounds of North Vietnamese shellfire while paratroopers bore the brunt of the fighting in the foothills to the west.

Hijack loot found

PERU, Ind. (AP)—The money given a hijacker who commandeered an American Airlines jetliner Friday night after it left St. Louis was found Monday afternoon by a farmer about three miles west of the Mississinewa Reservoir dam in north-central Indiana, FBI agent George Lake reported.

In another development Monday, American Airlines said the man who hijacked the jet was not among nine passengers pinpointed by security personnel as a potential hijacker before the flight.

Airline officers said that because the personality profile technique of finding hijackers had not worked they have decided to expand the profile to include characteristics exhibited by the man who commandeered their Boeing 727.

Martha beaten

Daily Iowan News Services

Martha Mitchell says she isn't going to have anything to do with husband John until he gets out of politics.

In an interview with The New York Daily News, Mitchell (Mrs.) claimed politics "a cops and robbers game" and called she had been beaten up by a security guard.

She said she left her villa at Newport Beach, Calif. for a Rye, N.Y. country club because a security guard provided by the President Nixon re-election campaign yanked a telephone from her bedroom.

She also contended that several guards threw her on a bed and "stuck a needle in my behind." "I've never been treated like this, ever," she said. "There is no reason for us to be involved in politics. I doubt seriously if I want any of the current candidates in the White House."

The Mitchell marital problem is only one of a series of political separations in the last year. Others include Phyllis and Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kan.), and Mieke and Sen. John Tunney (D-Cal.)

Fair skies

Martha (wife of Nimbus), speaking from an exclusive Solon, Iowa country club says she refuses to return to her husband's home until he quits forecasting the weather. Cumulo Nimbus who is currently heading up the Committee to Resurrect Sunny Skies Over New England, was unavailable for comment.

So, the weather today is provided by The Associated Press (take it for what it's worth.) The forecast today calls for Cloudy skies and possible thundershowers for the Iowa City area. Highs today will be in the 80's and lows tonight in the 60's. Fair skies for Wednesday and slightly cooler temperatures.

Free games all gone in local pinball

Even if you score a million points, you'll win no free games on Iowa City pinball machines today.

Almost every pinball machine here has been apparently changed so that free games or balls will no longer be awarded, and the man who owns many or most of the machines refused to comment on the change.

The Daily Iowan learned Monday that pinball machines of at least four bars were changed so that the customer gets five balls for a quarter, but no chance to win a free game.

The change comes in light of a ruling by Atty. Gen. Richard C. Turner that free games on pinball machines constitutes illegal gambling in Iowa.

The man who apparently owns most of the machines in Iowa City, Clarence Hagen of Hagen Appliance and Hawkeye Amusement Co., refused to comment on whether the change had been made or why.

A DI spot check revealed, however, that in every bar which was contacted except one, the change had been made.

One bartender said he didn't know if the pinball machine had been changed.

Another bartender said that the change was ordered by Johnson County Attorney Carl Goetz, but Goetz said that he did not order any such action.

"I have no plans other than to call to the attention of the owners and operators of pinball machines the law as interpreted by Turner."

Goetz said Monday that he only communicated with the attorneys of local owners but added that he could not reveal any of those communications.

July 3 no holiday

Classes at the University of Iowa will be held as scheduled next Monday, July 3, summer session director, Dean B.L. Barnes, announced Monday, after consultation with other administration and faculty members.

Barnes expressed surprise when The Daily Iowan, acting on several reader queries, requested a ruling on whether an instructor could postpone the scheduled July 3 class to make a four-day weekend possible.

Contracts at 19 but...

No more loopholes

By MARY WALLBAUM
Staff Writer

Persons 19 years of age and older will be able to sign leases and contracts after adult rights legislation goes into effect, according to Iowa City attorney William V. Phelan and representatives of the Hawkeye Legal Aid Service.

At present many rights are granted to persons not on the basis of majority age, but on the basis of specific laws which state that a person is given certain rights at the age of 21, Phelan said.

Phelan added that the Iowa Legislature is presently amending these laws so that all majority rights will be given to 19 year olds. He said the legislature may overlook some of these small laws, which means that all adult rights may not be available to 19 year olds on July 1.

"The legislature is intent on finding all these laws," Phelan said. He added that all major rights will be granted to 19 year olds on July 1.

Persons of majority age will be able to sign leases and contracts, but they will also be held legally responsible for them, according to Phelan and Hawkeye Legal Aid Service. It is not legally possible to cancel a lease or contract unless a person is able to prove fraud or cheating, said Phelan. A representative of Hawkeye Legal Aid Service added that if a person of majority age has signed a contract and has complied with the terms of that contract for a period of time, it will be almost impossible to legally cancel the contract.

He added that a lease can be cancelled if the tenant can prove "unjust enrichment." For example, if the tenant has moved out of his apartment but is continuing to pay rent under the terms of the contract. It is illegal for the landlord to move another tenant into the apartment and take rent from that person in addition to the rent he is receiving from the previous tenant.

Persons of majority age who enter into a contract do have a short period of time (usually 3-7 days) in which they may cancel the contract. This right of rescission is stipulated on contracts, and if the person does not cancel the contract within the specified time period he is held legally responsible for the contract, said Phelan.

Phelan added that persons coming into majority age will have a short period of time to cancel those contracts they entered into while minors.

Joint contracts, such as dorm contracts at UI, are still legally binding upon persons coming into majority age because the parent or guardian who co-signed the contract is still held to the terms of the contract, Phelan said.

T.M. Rehder, Director of Dorm and Dining Services at UI, said students of majority age will be able to sign dorm contracts without a co-signer after majority legislation goes into effect.

Students may cancel a dorm contract anytime before the University Housing Office sends a contract acceptance letter to the regents will exempt some students from living in the dorms who are not of junior standing, Rehder explained.

The new wording of the contract states: "All unmarried freshman and sophomore students are required as a condition of registration at the University of Iowa for a semester or session to reside in University residence halls except that such residence shall not be required of any student beyond the time the student, following the normal course from secondary school to college, would have completed three years at the college level and accept as herein after provided."

Rehder explained that this wording of the contract would exempt those students who did not go into college directly after graduation from high school if they did not enter college for three years after graduation from high school.

Students would also be exempt from living in dormitories if they come to college after graduation from high school, but left college for any reason, if their total time in college and away from college totaled three years, Rehder explained.

This would include many Vietnam War veterans and students who leave school to work, said Rehder.

Rehder explained this "loophole" in requirements for dorm residency is in the words "three years at the college level" which does not stipulate pursuing a course of studies for three years.

Rule changes urged for leased housing

By MIKE WEGNER
News Editor

The Iowa City Council, meeting with members of the Housing Commission in informal session Monday, wrestled with several tenant problems including landlords' inspection rights and the eligibility of ADC mothers and others for the City's Leased Housing Program.

The discussions arose from the objections of some Housing Commission members to portions of a proposed Leased Housing Program Statement of Policies. The Council will be asked to approve the statement at its July 3 meeting.

Leased Housing is a federally funded program in which the city leases houses from private landlords and then rents the units to carefully screened applicants.

Tenants in the program pay rent according to their ability to pay, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development pays the city the difference.

Currently, Iowa City rents 209 units under its Leased Housing Program.

Three members of the seven-member Housing Commission, Alice A. Litton, Anna Walker and Bonnie Rios, submitted a minority report to the council including several recommendations which differ with the commission's approved Policy Statement.

In emergency

The first recommendation of the minority report calls for landlords in the Leased Housing Program to give tenants prior notice before inspecting dwellings, except in the case of an emergency. In the event of an emergency, the report asks that the tenant be notified within 24 hours after entry and that the landlord give the reason for the emergency entry.

The commission originally approved the prior notice clause but defeated it 4-3 upon final reading.

According to the minority report, "The removal of the notification requirement for special inspections seems to eliminate safeguards to the tenant that he will not be under constant surveillance. This can result in the feeling that he may, at any time of the day, be subject to an inspection for possible violation of his lease."

Lyle Seydel, City Housing Authority Coordinator, who told the council that commercial leases in Iowa City give landlords the right to enter their dwellings under "reasonable" conditions, said the prior notice clause was unnecessary.

Spot inspections

Robert T. Handy, coordinator of Protective Association for Tenants, asked the council to establish a precedent for area landlords by adopting the prior notice clause.

Seydel, while admitting that in most cases prior notification should and would be given, said there are times when spot inspections are needed.

"If 14 people are illegally occupying a building approved for six persons, and I call first you know 14 people aren't going to be there when I come around," Seydel said.

Walker maintained that she only wants to protect people from unnecessary harassment.

The minority report also calls for a higher priority rating in the Leased Housing Program for participants in the federally funded Work Incentive Program (WIN).

WIN is a training program for ADC mothers, high school dropouts and incapacitated fathers. Under the Leased Housing Program, which has only two priority classifications—student and non-student—WIN participants are placed in the student priority class.

Currently no one applying with a student rating is being accepted into the Leased Housing Program.

The minority report recommends that WIN enrollees who apply for leased housing be placed in an intermediate classification between non-student and student, giving them a better chance of obtaining low-rent housing.

Encouragement

Linda Dole, president of the Iowa City League of Women Voters, said, "These people (WIN enrollees) are making an effort to get off welfare and they should be encouraged by making this housing program available to them."

Dole said persons currently in Leased Housing who are accepted for WIN do not lose their housing aid, but that WIN enrollees who apply for Leased Housing receive low priority.

"A woman on ADC with one child now gets $150 a month in grants plus $74 in WIN funds for tuition, transportation, babysitting, etc. The question is 'do you want to help them with rent?'" Dole asked.

Mayor C.L. (Tim) Brandt said there appeared to be reason to make an exception for the WIN program. "We must make sure the program (Leased Housing) is serving the people it was intended to serve."

The council was also asked by City Manager Ray Wells to make a policy decision on the funding of a proposed 60-unit dwelling for the elderly near the downtown area.

The city had originally applied for an annual contribution contract from HUD in which the federal agency would subsidize rents for the elderly.

The plan called for the building to be constructed with private capital and then leased by the city. However, with the current high interest rates and property taxes, local developers would be unable to keep rents at a level which HUD would accept, Seydel said.

Ostomy meeting

The Iowa City Ostomy group will meet Thursday, June 29, at 7:15 p.m.

Formed last month, the group is open to all ostomates and their families.

Ostomates are those persons who have lost the normal function of the bowel or bladder, requiring a type of surgery called an ostomy.

A stoma is a surgical opening on the abdominal wall which allows normal body wastes to be expelled.

The meeting Thursday in the Surgical Conference Room of UI General Hospital, will feature Dr. L. DenBesten, vice-chairman, department of Surgery UI Hospitals and Clinics, speaking on "Why your stoma has its own personality."

Rapid City donations

Donations for the Rapid City Flood Disaster are still being accepted by the Johnson County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Lorna L. Mathes, local Red Cross representative, said that $888 had been received from Johnson County residents.

Mathes said the Red Cross had already spent $12 million to aid flood victims in Rapid City and the East.

Donations should be sent to the local Red Cross office, 530 E. Washington.

UI majors

Even though statistics show a surplus of teachers in the job market, education is still the largest major of University of Iowa students.

Among UI undergraduates who listed a major in September 1971, 906 listed education, compared with 632 in pre-medicine, 598 in English, 596 in business administration and 517 in psychology.

Golf, tennis offered

The University of Iowa Division of Recreational Services is offering a second four-week session in group tennis and golf open to men, women, and children who have completed the third grade.

Registration will be June 26-30 in the Recreational Services Office, room 111 Fieldhouse. Registration is limited to members of the university community the first day, but the public may register June 27 as openings permit.

The registration fee for golf is $8 for eight one hour lessons. Group tennis will cost $5 for the lessons. Classes will meet twice a week for four weeks starting July 3.

Private college beer

With the Regents' recent ruling, Iowa's three state universities will allow their students to possess alcohol beverages on campus in the fall. However, a copyrighted story in Monday's Des Moines Tribune, reveals the decision is behind the times as several of Iowa's private colleges have already attained that privilege.

Four private colleges surveyed by The Tribune already allow students to drink on campus and one more will soon relax its prohibition. Administrators from two others said the possibility of allowing students to have beer and liquor on campus is scheduled to be discussed soon by governing bodies of the schools.

Three private colleges now allow students of legal age to have beer and liquor in their dormitory rooms: Grinnell College, Grinnell; Simpson College, Indianola; and St. Ambrose College, Davenport.

Drake University in Des Moines will soon permit students of legal age to keep alcoholic beverages in their rooms.

At the same time, no private Iowa college or university has immediate plans to change rules to allow the sale of beer in student unions or other campus buildings, according to the paper—in contrast to the Regent's decision to allow beer sales in the unions of the three state universities.

Parson's college in Fairfield has a student-run bar, but does not allow alcoholic beverages in student rooms.

Holiday hours

The main library of the University of Iowa will be open on Tuesday July 4, during its regular summer hours, 7:30 am to midnight.

Other university department libraries will post individually their hours for the holiday.

Highlander tour

The University of Iowa's Scottish Highlanders are performing in Europe this summer.

According to Nadine Thornton, secretary for the trip, the group performed on the steps of the Capitol and at the Washington Monument on May 29 before flying to Scotland.

The Highlanders later flew to Scotland and performed at Dunoon on June 1 and 2, and in Aberdeen on June 6. The Highlander's tour included Dundee and Edinburgh, and the city of Perth, Scotland's capital until the 15th century.

On June 11, the group performed at Battersea Park in London. The Highlanders toured the Tower of London and St. Paul's Cathedral.

Surrender seniority

More than four centuries of congressional seniority will be surrendered voluntarily at the end of this year.

Twenty two incumbents have decided to call it quits.

Not included in the list of 18 representatives and four senators who have announced retirement plans after 437 years of cumulative service are seven House members who are seeking Senate seats. Several other representatives with long service records are considering a return to private life.

Child drinks transmission fluid Accidental child poisoning fought

Daily Iowan news services

When a vacationing family stopped near Iowa City at a service station for gasoline, one young son climbed out of the car, grabbed a brightly-colored can from a display rack, opened the pop-top lid and took a swallow, expecting orange soda pop.

Instead, the child drank transmission fluid. Rushed to The University of Iowa Hospitals, the child was treated, kept overnight for observation and released the next day.

Dr. Robert J. Roberts, co-director with Robert W. Dick of the UI Hospitals Poison Control Center, explained that the container the youngster drank from was almost identical to those containing orange soda pop.

"The beverage-like appearance of the container and its accessibility actually invited the child to drink it," he said. "Many people do not realize the large number of deaths and injury to children caused by accidental poisoning."

Packaging is invitation

"Many dangerous household products have attractive, colorful packages that are easily opened. Certain dishwasher detergents, for example, are as caustic as drain cleaners and are often kept beneath the kitchen sink. Just a small amount placed in the mouth of a child can be very dangerous."

New laws requiring safety containers for common substances which can be fatal to children under five years old go into effect later this year. The American Academy of Pediatrics is urging voluntary compliance by manufacturers before the deadline, to save more children.

The benefit of such legislation, proponents say, is indicated by the 30 per cent reduction in poisonings by children's aspirin after the limiting of the number of tablets per bottle to 36 and the addition of safety caps.

Manufacturer's warnings help

Another way manufacturers can help the physician is by clear warnings and a list of ingredients on the container, Dr. Roberts said.

The most common substances in accidental child poisoning are aspirin, vitamins, prescription medicines, soaps, detergents and cleaners.

Several iron pills from mother's purse were enough to cause severe iron poisoning for one Iowa toddler, who has undergone a series of hospitalizations because of damage that continues to affect his health.

"We don't have specific antidotes for many of the things children swallow. Many times all we can do is assist the child in his recovery. Once the child has swallowed the substance, the cards are stacked against him."

Taking care of the child after the accident is the "wrong end of the process to begin with. We can do a lot to decrease the number of accidental poisonings with preventive effort such as safety containers," Dr. Roberts said.

Although 19 year-olds will legally be adults on July 1, they still may not be able to file bankruptcy proceedings.

L. Vern Robinson of Hawkeye Area Legal Services Society said "Credit agencies will still demand co-signers, in my opinion. If the credit risk is too great, 19 year-olds will still be required to have someone co-sign a legal contract. The agencies will want someone with financial reassurance to back them up."

Another Iowa City attorney feels that "Bankruptcy statutes will apply to 19 year-olds when they achieve adult status. However, few 19 year-olds will have accumulated enough debts to make it necessary to file bankruptcy proceedings, as they are not liable for legal contracts signed prior to the lowering of the legal age." It's not usual for a person of that age to find the necessity for this," he said.

"There are two types of bankruptcy proceedings. One enables the person to wipe out all indebtedness. The second type involves a system of payments, and no judgments are made. If a person files bankruptcy at the age of 19, he would not be able to file again for a number of years."

The attorney added that "Filing for bankruptcy is not a criminal proceeding, and the party still maintains his rights. However, bankruptcy proceedings are very expensive. I would only recommend this as a final measure."

"Bankruptcy procedures are intended for people who have an outstanding amount of debts and want a new lease on life," he said.

Supreme Court bars trial of Army surveillance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, a narrowly divided Supreme Court Monday barred a trial of the Army's surveillance of civilians.

Burger said in the 5-4 decision that courts cannot serve "as virtually continuing monitors of the wisdom and soundness of executive action." That, he said, is a job for Congress.

The surveillance, conducted by some 1,000 agents beginning in 1965, was challenged in a suit brought by four individuals and nine groups, some of them war protesters.

Burger said they evidently wanted to use the courts to probe the Army's intelligence-gathering activities, with which they disagreed.

Instead of showing their freedom of speech had been injured or even threatened, Burger said, they presented allegations of a subjective nature. Therefore, Burger said, the suit cannot be considered.

The ruling, reversing a federal appeals court here which had ordered a full inquiry, was produced by the four Nixon administration appointees plus Justice Byron R. White.

Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr., Potter Stewart and Thurgood Marshall voted to uphold the lower court, whose ruling was written by another administration-named judge, Malcolm R. Willkey.

Douglas said no law authorizes surveillance over civilians and that "one can search the Constitution in vain for any such authority."

In a second major, 5-4 ruling, the Court granted grand jury witnesses the right to challenge the legality of government wiretapping before testifying.

Set aside, as a result, were the contempt convictions of Sister Joques Egan and a former nun, Anne Walsh, who balked at helping a grand jury investigate an alleged kidnap plot against presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger.

Brennan, delivering the decision, said the 1968 Safe Streets Act was designed to protect privacy and strictly limit wiretapping. At the same time, he said, the law serves to bar contempt judgments until the wire-tapper shows he acted legally.

This time the four Nixon administration nominees, Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr., and William H. Rehnquist were isolated in dissent. Speaking for them, Rehnquist accused the majority of utter disregard for Congress' intent and of bringing about a critical change in the operations of grand juries.

The decisions came on the next-to-last session before summer recess. The high court said it would wind up its term on Thursday.

City parking ramp bids to be opened today

Construction bids for the proposed downtown parking ramp will be opened at the Civic Center this afternoon.

The City Council is scheduled to award the contract next Monday afternoon at a special meeting.

The estimated building cost of $1.7 million is to be funded through a $2 million revenue bond scheduled for issue later this summer.

The bidder, awarded the contract, must begin work 10 days after the contract is signed and complete the project by November 1973.

The proposed four-level, 570 space concrete structure is to be built along Linn Street between Burlington and College Streets.

"Living's" triangular affair and Lubitsch the Absurd

Tonight the Comedy Film Society will be presenting Design For Living (replacing Ninotchka, which was cancelled by the distribution company). The film was made in 1933 by the German-American director, Ernst Lubitsch. It is a charming, witty, and sophisticated picture which should hold much appeal for a modern audience.

The film concerns the progression of a romantic triangle to "a menage a trois." A commercial artist (Miriam Hopkins) meets two friends, a painter (Gary Cooper) and a playwright (Fredric March), both unsuccessful. She falls in love with both men, and they both fall in love with her. They all start living together on a platonic basis, and she pushes each man to success in his field.

The platonic relationships soon crumble, and the girl has an affair with each man. When quarrels flare up, she runs away and marries a

This refusal to take anything too seriously, combined with the director's completely unconventional moral outlook, keep this film from seeming at all dated. Lubitsch treats the situations and people in Design For Living casually, as if they were only slightly eccentric. Yet if one considers the accepted norms of social behavior in 1933, the trio in the film come off as downright anti-social and amoral. The final solution of setting up "a menage a trois" is not only condoned but highly approved of by the film-makers.

Lubitsch was one of the few American directors whose films did not become overly talky when sound was introduced. Design For Living begins with a dialogueless sequence in which the three people are characterized quickly and cleverly. There are other witty visual touches throughout.

At times there are slow moments or a joke that doesn't quite come off. But there are also some hilarious sequences, as when March and Cooper invade Edward Everett Horton's home and destroy a hideous dinner party.

The script of Design For Living is said to have been tailored to its stars, and they are responsible for a large part of its success.

Miriam Hopkins is perhaps the ideal Lubitsch actress: she plays the unconventional Gilda with relish. Perhaps the subsequent decline in Hopkins' career is partly due to not being able to find another director so suited to her talents. At any rate, she is perfectly convincing as a girl who dominates the lives of all around her. Gilda refuses to accept the traditional virtuous role assigned to women and decides instead to live promiscuously, as men are allowed to do. And she finally does so with success.

Gary Cooper's skill at acting a sophisticated role may surprise many who have never seen any of his early films. As Pauline Kael pointed out recently, "Frank Capra destroyed Gary Cooper's early sex appeal when he made him childish as Mr. Deeds." Ever since that (1936), Cooper has been playing the hick and-or the strong, silent type. It's cheering to see him doing the opposite for a change.

Fredric March, as the third side of the triangle, is also excellent. Edward Everett Horton likewise, as the guardian of fuddy-duddy morality.

This combination of an excellent cast and script under a fine director make for a comedy that is well worth seeing.

Kristin Thompson

dull businessman (Edward Everett Horton). Finally she leaves her husband and returns to her two lovers to live in "a menage a trois."

Design For Living was adapted from the play by Noel Coward. Indeed, Ben Hecht, the author of the screenplay, adapted it so thoroughly that only one line from the original play survived. The resulting script may not be Coward, but it is ideally suited to Lubitsch and to his three principle players.

Lubitsch's special approach to comedy is generally known as "the Lubitsch Touch." This basically means that he looked beyond romantic surface appearances to find the absurd. A classic example of this technique occurs in an earlier film of his, Trouble In Paradise. The setting is Venice and we see a gondolier poling down a canal singing "O Sole Mio"—only to discover he is the local garbage collector and his gondola is heaped with garbage.

training wheels

Some general notes on the lubrication of your machine, and some specifics on greasing your wheel or hub bearings.

There are a few places on a bike that use oil, and I'll deal with them first to get them out of the way. Usually lubricating means greasing.

If you have a three speed bike, put a little oil in the rear hub, where the gears are, once a month. Use SAE 20 oil. If you have any other spots on your bike with a little spring loaded oil fitting, do the same for them. A drop of oil on moving parts of the derailleurs and brakes is okay too, but be careful not to get any oil on the rims, or your brakes will not grab.

Grease is generally better than oil in that it stays where it belongs, and doesn't break down so easily when it gets dirty. A tube of grease that is just right for bikes can be had locally, and while it is expensive in terms of pennies per ounce, it is easier to use than bulk grease. Besides, a tube will last you about a year.

The steering, or head bearings, the crank, hub, and some pedal bearings are all quite similar. They are what's called ball bearings, which simply means that they depend on little steel balls to reduce friction, and make things turn more easily.

The bearing parts are the race, the ball bearings, and the cone. The parts fit together in that order, with the cone being on the inside diameter of the ring formed by the balls, and the race on the outside. The wheel bearings are the easiest to service, and by working with them, you'll understand how the other bearings work.

You'll need a couple of hub wrenches, which are thin wrenches made to fit the cones and locknut, an adjustable wrench, and a freewheel remover. While the latter is not absolutely necessary, it makes the job easier to do right. There are several other jobs which require removing the freewheel, such as replacing spokes, so it's a valuable tool to own. Otherwise, you can have a shop take off the freewheel, but that's sort of self-defeating.

I think you should begin with the front wheel, as it is the simpler of the two. Take the wheel off of the bike, and look at the nuts on the axle. The outside nut is usually a hex nut, and it is the locknut. The nut next to that, on the inside, has two flat sides, on which the hub wrench goes.

Loosen the flat sides, and as you remove it you notice that the end is tapered. This is the cone, and the balls fit into the taper. Do not loosen the cone on the other end of the axle, because you may have a hard time getting the wheel back into the right position.

Just pull the entire axle out of the hub from the end with the cone still on. The balls will probably fall out at this point, but look to make sure you get them all out. Check the balls to see that they are without cracks or pits. Do the same for the cones. The races are an integral part of the hub and may be examined by removing the dust cap on the very outside of the hub around the axle.

Clean all the parts with kerosene. (The only place I know to buy kerosene is the Highland Avenue DX.) Squirt a ring of grease in the race on one side of the hub, and stick half of the balls in the grease. Put the dust cap back on. Insert the axle through the hub, and turn the entire WHEEL OVER. Put grease on this side's race, stick the balls back in, replace the dust cap, and screw on the cone you removed earlier. Screw it on all the way and then back it off a quarter turn.

Check to insure that there is no play in the axle. That is, that the axle does not slide back and forth sideways in the hub, and that the wheel turns freely on the axle. By adjusting the cone carefully, you should be able to eliminate the former while retaining the latter. If it comes down to making a choice between axle play and free rotation, take the free rotation. If you've got a fairly expensive bike though, you should be able to get both. Once you've got the adjustment right, screw the locknut back on. Turn it down tight against the cone, so the cone won't slip. Check the wheel again before you put it back on the bike, to make sure that the cone didn't slip when you locked it in place.

The rear wheel is done in the same manner, though you've got the freewheel to contend with. It's much easier to take it off. All the other bearings are basically the same, and if you're ambitious enough to tackle the disassembly of the crank and head bearings, go ahead. I do hope to cover their maintenance in the near future though.

Repairs of this sort bring up the question of whether it is worth it for the average bike owner to invest in tools such as hub wrenches. I personally think that it is, in that the money you don't spend at bike shops will buy your tools eventually, and there is a measure of convenience in getting your bike fixed when you want it fixed. Bikes are relatively simple things, and there's no reason why the average cyclist can't learn to care for his machine.

Networks probe censorship

What is "violence"?

NEW YORK (AP)—When does television action become violence? What is the line between "violence" and "excessive violence?" Is a bigger fight, a larger explosion less violent because the hero is a James Bond type—all tongue-in-cheek fantasy?

These are some of the questions currently furrowing the brows of network executives and the men in charge of network self-censorship.

Network spokesmen always maintain they hold a tight rein on violence and sex and point to the code of the National Association of Broadcasters as their guide. Now, however, there is a very evident downhold in these areas. There also is considerable confusion, due to a lack of a concrete definition of the words "excessive violence."

The new strict attitudes are the result of the release of the Surgeon General's report which concluded that some children were likely to be affected by watching televised violence. There were also lengthy widely publicized hearings by a Senate subcommittee in late winter at which television's action series in particular took a drubbing.

Strife of some sort is basic to all drama, and the traditional way it is often resolved by the big shoot-out or the fist fight when the bad guys are either killed or captured and and—in compliance with the TV Code—it is clear that crimes does not pay.

It would be a disappointing night when Marshal Dillon had a long talk with a villain and persuaded him to change his ways or Mannix lectured the kidnapper about his unfortunate choice of a career.

But currently it is evident that the safe course is to do something about bullets, fists and gore, on a quantitative level if nothing else: one shot instead of a fusillade; one right to the jaw instead of a beating.

The self-censoring departments of each network have laid down the laws to their staffs of SURVIVAL LINE cuts red tape, answers your questions, investigates your tips and all sorts of good things like that each morning. Call 353-6210 Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7-8 p.m. or write SURVIVAL LINE, The Daily Iowan, Communications Center, Iowa City. Feel free, too, to write or call in your own hints on where to find it, how to solve it or who to call.

Way back in April, I ordered a pantsuit from Penney's catalog, enclosing a check for $14.04. They cashed my check but I haven't received my pantsuit or even an answer to my inquiry letter. Now I don't even want the pantsuit but want SURVIVAL LINE to get my refund.

We spoke with Penney Customer Service person Claire Marini at the catalog headquarters in Milwaukee, who was quite puzzled but promised us a report. She was embarrassed to find "due to a goof within the company" your refund check and several other people's got caught in some correspondence to their Atlanta catalog house. When you wrote in late April, they had checked and found a refund check had been issued the same day you wrote your letter—hence they didn't reply, assuming that you had received the refund in the interim.

Another refund check for $14.04 is on its way to you airmail, with their sincere apologies (which SURVIVAL LINE thinks they really mean). Ordinarily they'd have their computer issue a refund check, a procedure that takes a week. But Marini agreed you had waited long enough and had a check hand-written and sent to you immediately.

Bike class again Sat.

Bicycle Fixing, a course sponsored by the Action Studies Program and the Public Library, did meet in City Park Saturday contrary to popular belief.

The course was held behind a tree about 75 yards from the lower level entrance to the park. The 25 participants repaired flats, replaced spokes, straightened rims and cleaned wheel bearings, according to course coordinator Pat Carney, G, S318 Hillcrest.

In spite of signs pointing to the meeting place it appeared a lot of people missed the course. Carney was told that people had been riding through the park until noon looking for the meeting place and others were seen wandering from shelter house to shelter house with broken bicycles in their hands.

"We're going to hold it again next Saturday in a shelter on the lower level and put up even bigger signs," said Carney. The session will begin at 10 a.m. and participants are asked to bring their own tools.

The Carnegie reform list

The Carnegie Commission on Higher Education recently recommended a series of reforms for universities if those hallowed institutions want to avoid a "deep academic crisis" in the future.

While commission chairman Clark Kerr contends there's no crisis right now, he says there are some "strong specific dissatisfactions" among many of the 100,000 college students and 60,000 faculty members interviewed.

Kerr says that's the largest number of interviewees in a higher education study, and maybe that's why the reform list sounds like it's straight from University of Iowa students.

- More emphasis on teaching.
- More experiments with three-year degrees.
- More attention to students' emotional growth.
- Reduced emphasis on required courses and grades.
- Reducing the number of students attending school reluctantly.

—Development of a statement of purposes for colleges and universities.

Much of that seems like a rehash of student dissatisfaction here the past few years. You know, undergraduates who have bitter distastes for the semester hours they spend with underpaid and overworked teaching assistants, while the $20,000-plus professors are busy publishing in a distinguished journal and ignoring "immature" undergraduate classes.

Or the grade reform and requirement reform plans that would let students learn as human beings, not as the computerized A-B-C-D-F-I form of classism that Liberal Arts Dean Dewey B. Stuit contends they must.

Any reform ideas gather dust or are flatly rejected by liberal arts college, although the Educational Policies Committee isn't through with the core-skill course line-up yet.

And what is this place supposed to be doing and why? Some people thought a detailed report describing the procedure of UI governance might provide a clue to the university's purpose, but the committee's been around for over two years and nothing has been changed.

Instead, opportunities for potential student input have been stalled and ruined, and the confusing UI committee structure theoretically remains.

In two other areas, UI has inched ahead with potential three year degrees and attention to emotional growth via things like ongoing orientation and the Student Development Center, two things the conservatives here seem laying in wait to junk.

While the Carnegie Commission does fall into the liberal stumbling block of maintaining no academic revolution is necessary, it's presented problems that will take more than hopscotch reform.

For instance, it says to truly humanize higher education, universities must eliminate the rigid programs of the past.

That steps on the toes of too many traditionalists—both here and across the nation—who don't want to put their superpower and authority in potential jeopardy. Yet the Carnegie study group is correct in saying it must be done. But will universities—like UI—have the guts enough to try innovation?

Says Congress member

Universities need no more funds; instead, raise the tuitions!

(Editor's note: Most politicians say they're opposed to higher tuitions at universities, but not Rep. George A. Goodling (R-Pa.). Goodling explains his reasoning in this article, reprinted from Human Events.)

The inspiration for the first part of this report comes from a recent editorial in one of our local papers. The caption was, "Money Problems Plague Higher Education." I might add that many taxpayers are afflicted with the same plague.

What will follow is an unknown quantity at this time, but I'm certain it will be refuted rather vigorously by some. That is one of the rare privileges we enjoy as Americans. We can criticize practically anything a public official says or does and our head and body will remain intact.

Is tuition hike bad?

Back to the editorial. It is current because as this is being written a conference committee on the Higher Education Bill is sweating blood in an attempt to resolve the difference between the House and Senate versions. The opening sentence of the editorial states colleges are in trouble and they have reacted in the one way they know how—raised tuition. Let me ask, is that bad?

Several years ago an editorial in the same paper described one of my colleagues and me as "Moss Backs." Since I have the title, let me present a few moss-back ideas. The stones that roll my way will not have sufficient time to gather moss...

When I attended college, we helped subsidize the shoemaker rather than the tire manufacturer. Students simply did not have cars in those days. It is always dangerous to advocate the return to the "old days," but I'm attempting to make this point.

If parents can afford to let their child have a car in college, there isn't one argument that comes to mind that would prevent them from paying higher tuition fees. There was a time when colleges received very little if any federal subsidies.

Now you who have children in college are asking your neighbors who do not to help subsidize your child's education. Hardly appears to be fair, does it?

Liquor was taboo

Let me give you another "in the old days" example that will not bring stones but rocks. There was a time when liquor was completely taboo in college fraternities. I have visited some fraternities and have been told all now have their

'Go fly yourself'

from the Guardian

Several women's groups have denounced the National Airlines "Fly me" advertising campaign as an attempt to better business by presenting its stewardesses as prostitutes.

The airline has refused to drop the slogan.

In protest, some National stewardesses have begun wearing buttons which say "Go fly yourself, National."

this at the expense of the non-graduate? Look at the scholarship recipients and you will probably learn many are receiving scholarships whose parents could pay.

To this writer a revolving loan fund program would be far superior, far less costly and should give the student a keener sense of accomplishment. It has been said that America is great not because of what government does for you but rather because of what you do for yourself.

It would appear that an appropriate ending of this tirade would be this jingle: "Those Good Old Golden Rule Days."

"When I was a student, I was quiet; I didn't protest, I didn't riot. I wasn't unwashed, I wasn't obscene. I made no demands on prexy or dean. I sat in no sit-in, I heckled no speaker. I broke not a window; few students were meeker."

I'm forced to admit with some hesitation, all I got out of school was an education.

IN WOMAN'S SOUL

A weekly selection of statements and artwork by women on peace and social justice, from the War Resisters League.

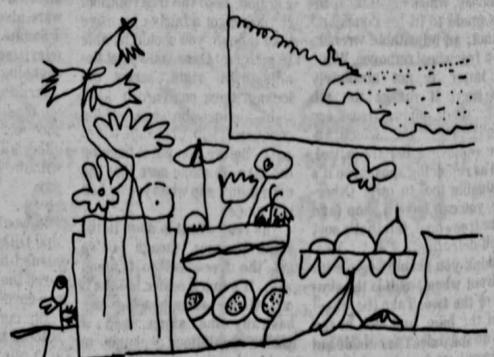

Virginia Woolf:

British essayist and novelist

Women have served all these centuries as looking-glasses possessing the magic and delicious power of reflecting the figure of man at twice its natural size. Without that power probably the earth would still be swamp and jungle. The glories of all our wars would be unknown. We should still be scratching the outlines of deer on the remains of mutton bones and bartering flints for sheepskins or whatever simple ornament took our unspohisticated taste...

That serves to explain in part the necessity that women so often are to men. And it serves to explain how restless they are under her criticism; how impossible it is for her to say to them this book is bad, this picture is feeble, or whatever it may be, without giving far more pain and rousing far more anger than a man would do who gave the same criticism. For if she begins to tell the truth, the figure in the looking-glass shrinks; his fitness for life is diminished. How is he to go on giving judgement, civilising natives, making laws, writing books, dressing up and speechifying at banquets, unless he can see himself at breakfast and at dinner at least twice the size he really is.

No real mistreatment

To the editor:

Just finished reading Michael T. Rinehart's letter in the June 20 edition of The Daily Iowan.

Mr. Rinehart blames the system for the problems at the Ft. Madison penal facility. A number of years ago, I, too, was an inmate of the Anamosa Reformatory. I was there for quite a while and this is my experience.

I did my work and obeyed the rules. No guard ever gave me any trouble. The only problems I had were with some of the inmates. The article mentions verbal disturbances which the guards were trying to quell.

If you've ever tried to sleep after a hard day's work when some "dummy" is yelling his head off you know it's not very pleasant.

There are a few bad guards, but there are a hell of a lot more bad inmates. I've never seen any inmate get mistreated unless he instigated trouble.

Name Withheld

The river monster II

To the editor:

In response to Nick Carraway's letter in which he claims to have spotted a reptilian monster in the Iowa River, I feel prompted to relate a similar experience.

It was the day after final exams were over (and, I might add, just a scant few months since the Amchitka blast) and the river bank outside the Union was filled with relieved students. A jug of Kool-Aid was being passed around and, being extremely thirsty, I downed quite a bit of the cherry-flavored liquid.

A few minutes later I noticed a slimy movement in the river somewhat north of the Union. I looked up and saw what could only be described as a giant salamander some sixty-feet long gliding through the water. The immense creature surfaced and, surprising a co-ed daydreaming on shore, quickly gobbled her up.

As this monstrous being swam away he revealed a rainbow of colors on his backside. A harpoon was firmly rooted in the base of his spine. As it thrashed around, the colors seemed to spread into the water making a dazzling effect. The clouds directly above the creature turned a pale red in color and the distant sirensque moan could be heard.

The ground was hot and the sky was not. There were plants and herbs and trees and things, there were rocks and hills and rings. In the desert you can't remember your name cause there ain't no one for to give you pain.

McGovern to the left

To the editor:

Carl Davidson's (of the Guardian) article evaluating the McGovern campaign strikes me as unfortunate and unhelpful.

There is a strong superiority in labeling anything that can come out of the U.S. electoral process as bourgeois; designed explicitly for materialism and capitalism.

Indeed the generalization is not without a definite appeal because history is tragically consistent in showing its inductive validity. But the record of the particular, Senator George McGovern, is also consistent in non-imperialistic, non-rip off voting.

Only he has not afforded himself the luxury of not dirtying his hands in a strong, realistic struggle to undo the general imperialistic policies of the U.S.

No matter how much change anyone would desire, it must be clear that McGovern's position is consistently further to the left than any of his opponents (with the possible exception of Chisholm).

To disdainfully write against him on the basis of generalizations or ideological purity can be expected from leisurely pseudo-revolutionaries but it has only negative value in moving this country to the left.

“...last of great white hopes” Ali, Foster battle rugged Quarry duo

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Punctuated by a shouting match between Muhammad Ali and Jerry Quarry, the two heavyweights—along with light heavyweight champion Bob Foster and his undefeated challenger Mike Quarry—easily passed physical examinations Monday for their Tuesday night fights.

Ali took the stage at the Blue Room of the Tropicana Hotel and declared: “This is the Soul Brothers against the Quarry Brothers, the last of the great white hopes. I don’t know what Foster will do to his hope, but I’m going to whip my hope.”

Foster, 33, a sheriff’s deputy from Albuquerque, N.M., declared much more quietly: “I’m going to whip my man quicker than you’ll whip yours.”

Foster was quoted as 6-1 favorite to retain his title and Ali was listed at 4-1 to beat Jerry Quarry.

Quarry, 27, stopped by Ali on an eye cut in the third round at Atlanta in 1970, said, “You keep shooting your mouth off. You won’t win fights that way.”

Mike Quarry, 21, was the quietest of the four but he continued to express unhappiness over the brand choice of the eight-ounce gloves to be worn by the boxers. Over objections from the Quarry camp, the state commission made the choice last week.

Although there was a scale on stage, only Jerry stepped on it. Wearing trousers and street shoes, he weighed 208 pounds. Ali expects to weigh 215.

“I’m not only going to destroy Jerry Quarry. I’m going to destroy Joe Frazier,” said Ali, who hopes for a return bout against the heavyweight champion. “I’m still the king of the world.”

A crowd of 7,500 is expected at the Convention Center and there will be international closed circuit television. The Foster-Mike Quarry bout is slated to start at 9:30 p.m. EDT. It will be followed by brother Jerry against Ali.

The 175-pound title fight is slated for 15 rounds, the heavyweight bout for 12.

The card appeared certain to better the Nevada gate record of $292,000 drawn by Sugar

Muhammed Ali

Ray Robinson and Gene Fullmer in their 1961 middleweight championship bout.

Ali has been guaranteed $500,000, Jerry Quarry $200,000, Foster $80,000 and Mike Quarry $45,000. The pay for the Quarries was boosted from the original $175,000 and $35,000 when they agreed to take their cut solely from the television money.

Ali’s record is 36-1, with 27 knockouts. Jerry is 39-5-4 with 24 knockouts, Foster 47-5 with 40 kayos and Mike 36-0 with 12 knockouts.

The official weigh-in will be held Tuesday.

Connors nets first upset; Smith, Gonzales advance

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jim Connors of Belleville, Ill., calmed by volatile Pancho Gonzales, scored the first major upset of the Wimbledon tennis championships Monday, beating seventh-seeded Bob Hewitt in a mistake-filled match on center court.

“Pancho just talked to me about the center court and its problems,” Connors said after beating the South African 6-3, 9-7, 7-5. “By the time I went out there, my nerves had all vanished.”

Gonzales also was calm on the court. The 44-year-old veteran from Las Vegas, Nev., disqualified from the London Grass Courts Championships last week for arguing about line calls, beat Antonio Munoz of Spain 6-2, 7-5, 6-1.

Advancing with Connors and Gonzales were Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif., the men’s No. 1 seed; Clark Graebner of New York, who had been critical of officials for not seeding him, and Mike Estep of Dallas, making his Wimbledon debut.

Smith, the reigning U.S. Open champion and beaten Wimbledon finalist last year, eliminated Hans Joachim Ploetz of West Germany 6-1, 6-1, 6-3. Graebner struggled past Jaidip Mukerjee of India 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, while Estep overcame nerves and beat Jean Claude Barclay of France 6-3, 7-5, 6-8, 6-4.

Connors, a 19-year-old left-hander who won the tournament in which Gonzales had been disqualified in the semifinals, made several mistakes, but hit enough good shots to beat the jittery Hewitt, who double-faulted 15 times and lost many vital points on volleying errors.

Crowds jammed the center courts as in past years to see the opening of the tournament despite the fact that 32 World Championship Tennis players were missing. One of the stars who is not here is John Newcombe of Australia, last year’s winner.

Swingin’ southpaw

Lefthander Jim Connors of Belleville, Ill., makes a two-handed backhand return in his first round match against Bob Hewitt of South Africa in the Wimbledon tennis championships yesterday. Connors scored first major upset of the tourney by defeating the seventh-seeded Hewitt, 6-3, 9-7, 7-5.

Help Wanted

In accordance with the provisions of Chapter 1 of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission’s ruling on sex discrimination in advertising, the advertising department of the Daily Iowan will require advertisers in the Help Wanted section to file an affidavit to the Commission, if, in our opinion, such advertising could possibly violate the Commission’s ruling. All advertising that directly or indirectly excludes persons from applying for a position on the basis of sex will fall into this category.

Tigers, Tribe win; Woes, O's to O's

Daily Iowan Wire Services Righthander Bill Slayback, making his major league debut, fired seven hitless innings before needing late relief help as Detroit downed the upstart New York Yankees, 4-3.

Slayback did not allow a hit until Johnny Callison led off the eighth with a line single to right.

Slayback struck out five while trying to become the only American Leaguer ever to pitch a no-hitter in his debut.

The Cleveland Indians, on the road to recovery following a slump which erased their season-opening surge, exploded for six runs in the sixth frame to rout Boston, 7-3.

Red Sox hurler Ray Culp (4-7) held the Tribe hitless through the first five innings and the Sox gained a 1-0 advantage in the sixth when Carl Yastrzemski singled, stole second and scored on Rico Petrocelli's single.

But the Indians bounced right back against Culp, who walked Tribe pitcher Ray Lamb to start the uprising. Lamb (2-1) got the victory as Phil Hennigan relieved in the seventh.

In Baltimore, Skip Lockwood and Ken Sanders combined for a one-hitter and Joe Lahoud smacked a homer off loser Pat Dobson (8-7) as cellar-dwelling Milwaukee blanked the Orioles, 3-0.

Lockwood (4-8) retired the first 10 Baltimore batters before Bobby Grich singled with one away in the fourth. Seven more O's then went down before Don Buford walked in the sixth.

Cookie Rojas singled in two runs and scored another as he led the Kansas City Royals to a 4-1 victory over Wilbur Wood (11-7) and the Chicago White Sox.

Eric Soderholm unleashed his first major league grand slam and the Minnesota Twins survived a four-run California rally in the eighth frame to down the Angels, 7-4.

Women's Liberation must really be getting its kicks this week (not that we're knockin' your belief, ladies...). After Bernice Gera had her one-night-stand as an umpire in Geneva, N.Y. last Saturday night in what one reporter described as "baseball's shortest umpiring career—one dispute-filled game," the New York housewife tearfully resigned and dropped out of sight Sunday. But her housewife Marcia Malkus of San Diego may have made up for the baseball fiasco when she substituted for San Diego Padre Manager Don Zimmer in the opening frame of a Sunday doubleheader against San Francisco. Said Zimmer, "she'll run the whole show. Women usually do, don't they?" Twenty minutes later, Malkus turned over a 2-0 lead to Zimmer, but the Padres ultimately lost the decision, 6-5, in 14 innings. Feel better?

After compiling an impressive 9-4-1 record last season, Head Coach George Allen of the Washington Redskins leads all NFC coaches in win-lost percentage with a .734 figure, combining six years and an overall tally of 58-21-5. Bud Grant of Minnesota is a close second with .687 and former UCLA, now Los Angeles Ram-skipper Tommy Prothro is third at .615. World Champion Dallas Cowboys' head man, Tom Landry, rates sixth on the 13-team scale at .550.

Here's a bit of trivia for you avid sports freaks who keep one eye on the record book while scanning the a.m. daily: What NFL team won its divisional title five times in a six-year span, yet failed to ever win a World Championship during that period? What years...Lace up your spikes early and catch the answer in next week's column.

No doubt about it...but Hamming it up on camera, Chicago Blackhawk's Golden Jet Bobby Hull contained his feelings on the reported $1-million contract he's expected to sign with the Winnipeg Jets of the new World Hockey Association.

During an interview in Edmonton, Hull announced he was flying to Toronto today to do a commercial, but "if I'm stopped in Winnipeg, they won't have to twist my arm."

Golden Jet to jump (?)

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—The World Hockey Association is expected to deal out $2.5 million Tuesday to sign National Hockey League superstar Bobby Hull as it gears for its first session of open warfare with the older league.

Hull is scheduled to arrive in St. Paul for a 10:30 a.m. EDT news conference and accept a $1 million check from WHA President Gary L. Davidson.

Then, he will fly to Winnipeg, where he will get a second check—this one for $1.5 million—from the Winnipeg Jets to serve as player-coach.

The Chicago Black Hawks apparently think the WHA offer is for real.

Mets within two as Harrelson raps key hit

Daily Iowan Wire Services Lefthander Jerry Koosman (5-3), with last-out relief help from bullpen ace Tug McGraw, hurled New York to a 4-2 victory over Pittsburgh, moving the New York Mets within two games of the first place Pirates in the National League's East Division.

Koosman, bidding for his first complete game since last August 30th, fell one out short as McGraw came on in the ninth to retire Dave Cash and preserve the win.

The Mets snapped a 2-2 tie in the seventh as Bud Harrelson delivered a single to center and Tommie Agee's double to right brought in the second run. The Bucs' Bob Moose (5-4) suffered the loss.

Joe Torre slammed a three-run homer and Lou Brock cracked a run-scoring double, leading the St. Louis Cards to a 4-3 victory over Montreal for their sixth consecutive National League triumph.

The Red Birds, who won their 14th game in the last 18, spoiled a return to the majors for 21-year-old Expo southpaw Balor Moore.

Southpaw Ron Bryant fired a three-hitter and Ed Goodson's hot lumber highlighted two San Francisco rallies as the Giants pounded flailing Atlanta, 3-0 yesterday. It was the fifth loss in the last seven games for the Braves, while the Giants extended their current win streak to three.

In Chicago, Cub hurler Rick Reuschel pitched a six-hitter in his major league starting debut and Chicago snapped a four-game losing streak as they compiled 15 hits to trounce Philadelphia, 11-1.

Reuschel (2-0), a 23-year-old right-hander who gained his first victory with a five-hit relief performance against San Francisco a week ago, settled down after giving up three hits in the opening frame, including Willie Montanez' run-scoring single.

Reviewing the troops

Marcia Malkus, wife of a San Diego-area physician, glances over Padre mates during opening-inning stint as manager of the National League baseball club. As the second frame opened, she turned over a 2-0 advantage to manager Don Zimmer after job that she won in a charity benefit auction last fall. San Diego ultimately dropped a 6-5 decision to the San Francisco Giants in 14 innings.

Owner swaps Colts for Rams

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore Sun reported in its Tuesday edition that owner Carroll Rosenbloom of the Baltimore Colts says he is committed to the sale of his National Football League team and the purchase of the Los Angeles Rams.

Rosenbloom, in New York, could not be contacted for comment.

The Sun quoted Rosenbloom as saying: "I have made a commitment. We will just have to wait and see if it can be worked out."
