Airport taxes

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon has ordered military air traffic to avoid airports imposing passenger taxes, a move expected to have its greatest effect on Philadelphia International Airport.

Philadelphia charges $2 per person to all passengers arriving or departing from the airport to finance airport improvements. Departure taxes of $1 per person are charged at Richmond, Va., Huntsville, Ala., Sarasota-Bradenton, Fla., and Saginaw, Mich.

Four states and more than a dozen cities, including Cedar Rapids, are considering similar taxes.

Nixon no shoo-in WASHINGTON (AP) — Clark MacGregor, the new director of President Nixon's campaign, said today his main task at the moment is to dispel a sense of over-confidence among Republicans that Nixon is a shoo-in for re-election.

"If past history is any guide, the election in November will be a lot closer than people think in July," MacGregor said at a news conference.

MacGregor said he has not discussed campaign strategy with Nixon yet but expects the President to stay on the job in Washington and leave the heavy work of the campaign to others.

ROTC girls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army announced today that the junior ROTC programs in high schools will be open to girls beginning with the new school year in September.

More than 600 high schools offer the junior ROTC program throughout the United States, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Canal Zone. Women who take part will incur no obligation to join the Army upon graduation.

Poor bus service

DES MOINES (AP)—A consulting firm Wednesday recommended that the financially troubled bus service in Iowa's capital city be taken over by a public transit authority.

Alan M. Voorhees and Associates of St. Louis made the recommendation after an 18-month study. The firm said cuts in service and high fares would only postpone the collapse of the privately owned Iowa Regional Transit Corp.

Des Moines has no bus service after 6:17 p.m. or on Sundays. The fare of 50 cents is the highest in the nation, the consultant said.

Pot plea

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Edward Richard Allan III, 27, 703 E. Jefferson St., Iowa City, pleaded guilty in federal court Wednesday to one-count of a four-count indictment charging him with aiding in a conspiracy to import and distribute marijuana.

Sentencing for Allan was deferred to a later date. He was arrested with two other Iowa City residents in the seizure of 15 pounds of marijuana at a San Antonio bus station.

The other two defendants awaiting trial are Pedro Rene Portes, 22, 703 E. Jefferson St., and Julie Ann Talerico, 24, 818 E. Market St.

Games rigged

DES MOINES (AP)—Alfred Kunz, president of Century 21 Shows, which will appear at the Iowa State Fair, testified Wednesday that most carnival games are rigged and about 10 per cent are rigged so that no customer can win.

Kunz said that 40 to 75 per cent of all players must lose for the concessions to stay in business. His testimony was supported by former carnival owner Gary Stellman of Adel.

Wednesday's action in Polk County District Court concluded presentations for both sides in a suit seeking to permanently enjoin Atty. Gen. Richard Turner from closing down carnival games under state gambling laws.

Court backs McGovern

U.S. Appeals boosts first-ballot hopes

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sen. George McGovern recaptured in court Wednesday the California delegate sweep he won at the polls, and said he hoped the verdict would point to a victorious Democratic campaign for the White House.

His political strategists said the court ruling would spell first-ballot nomination for the senator from South Dakota when the Democratic National Convention chooses its man next week.

The U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., overruled the action of the Democratic Credentials Committee which had voted to strip McGovern of 151 California nominating votes.

McGovern won the June 6 primary which, by state law, awarded the victor all 271 national convention votes.

But the credentials panel, in a political power play McGovern called a rotten steal, voted last Thursday to apportion the delegates on the basis of the candidates' finish.

The Court of Appeals declared the Credentials Committee action null and void.

"This decision reaffirms the choice of the California voters and the rules of the Democratic party," said McGovern in a statement issued through his Washington headquarters.

"I hope now that the convention can proceed in a lawful, orderly and satisfactory manner to ratify a platform and nominate a candidate who can take that platform to the country in a victorious campaign in the fall."

An appeal to the Supreme Court would require a special session of the court, now in adjournment, something that has happened only three times before.

While it overturned the California ruling, the appeals court upheld a Credentials Committee decision to oust a 59-member block of Illinois delegates led by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley on grounds they were chosen in violation of party reform rules.

That case held potential trouble for the fall campaign when the Democrats are going to need Daley's help if they hope to carry Illinois.

The California case is the big one in terms of the national convention which opens Monday in Miami Beach.

The stakes there were the votes that could propel McGovern past a 1,509-vote majority on the first ballot, and while credentials and reform were the technical terms, political muscle was the real issue.

McGovern had threatened to bolt the party if the Credentials Committee action won by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and his allies stood and cost him the nomination.

HHH plans to fight

WAVERLY, Minn. (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said Wednesday he plans to press his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination even if it means seeing supporters of Sen. George S. McGovern walk out of the party's convention.

He said he tends to discount threats by McGovern that he may bolt the party, and said McGovern's statements are "most unfortunate" and show a lack of political maturity.

Humphrey, who trails far behind McGovern in delegate strength, vowed he wouldn't throw his support behind any other candidate until at least a fourth or fifth ballot, or at least until he became convinced he had lost any chance of winning the nomination himself.

But Humphrey raised the possibility that the convention might attempt to overrule the courts, saying: "It's my judgment that the convention is the judge of its own membership."

He acknowledged there would be "quite a hassle" if the Supreme Court allowed the appeals court ruling to stand and the convention ignored it.

Humphrey was interviewed on the lawn of his lakeside home in this rural community, where he is resting before flying to the Miami convention Friday.

He was asked if he discounts the possibility of McGovern's making good on his threat to run independently if the nomination is denied him through what he considers unfair means.

"Maybe the wish is father of the thought, but I do tend to discount it," Humphrey said.

Hijack foiled; three dead in gun battle

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two armed hijackers were shot and killed by FBI agents Wednesday after one gunman fatally wounded a passenger and directed the action. They stormed the aircraft and in the ensuing melee, the hijackers were shot and the passengers injured.

The hijackers had held 79 passengers and five crew members captive in the 737 jetliner for more than six hours on a runway at San Francisco International Airport, demanding $800,000 cash, two parachutes and passage to Siberia, PSA said.

FBI special agent-in-charge Robert Gebhardt said that after the two hijackers refused to release passengers, FBI agents entered the plane.

One was dressed as a pilot, Gebhardt said, and was carrying the ransom money and parachutes. He said one of the hijackers ordered the agent to strip to his underwear to show he was unarmed.

The first agent entered the plane, Gebhardt said, and was followed by three other agents who had landed from a power boat behind the plane and reached the ramp under the fuselage.

Gebhardt said the first hijacker, who was armed with two handguns, was shot dead by the second agent to enter the plane. He said the second

Gebhardt said the first hijacker, who was armed with two handguns, was shot dead by the second agent to enter the plane. He said the second hijacker opened fire from the rear of the plane, hitting three passengers before he, too, was shot down by an FBI man.

The dead passenger was identified as E. H. Stanley Carter, 66, of Longueuil in Quebec, Canada.

The FBI identified the dead hijackers as Dimitr Alexiev, 28, of Hayward, Calif., and Michael Azmanoff, 28, no address.

The injured passengers were identified as Leo R. Gormley, 46, of Van Nuys, Calif., and Victor Sen Yung, 56, of Universal City, Calif., who plays the cook in the television series "Bonanza". Both were listed in fair condition.

In San Diego, PSA President J. Floyd Andrews said: "The FBI took this out of our hands and directed the action. They stormed the aircraft and in the ensuing melee, the hijackers were shot and the passengers injured."

"Certainly we're not pleased that three passengers were wounded, but somebody had to make a decision. We wanted to stop the hijacking, and stop it we did," Gebhardt said.

The hijackers, armed with three handguns, took over the Boeing 737 Wednesday morning on a flight from Sacramento to San Francisco, PSA spokesmen said.

They demanded the cash along with passage to Siberia via Canada and Alaska and refused to release passengers before their demands were met, said PSA spokesman Gary Kisseel.

Both decisions favor George

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the circuit court ruling stands, the Associated Press delegate count would place McGovern's strength at 1,436.65, less than 100 short of the 1,509 delegate votes needed for nomination. Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota has 392.55 by the count, Alabama Gov. George Wallace has 381 and Maine's Sen. Edmund S. Muskie has 225.55.

Some delegates officially classified as uncommitted, however, have said they are leaning to McGovern.

The Credentials Committee stripped McGovern of the California delegates by deciding to apportion them among all candidates by the amount of votes each received in a presidential primary.

The circuit court held that while the apportionment might be more fair than the winner-take-all manner in which the primary was set up, changing the rules after the game was over "was inconsistent with fundamental principles of due process."

The majority opinion in the 21 California decision declared that the "Democratic Party did not merely interpret one of its rules—in essence, it acted in defiance of its own rules as interpreted in the call for the 1972 convention by establishing retroactively an entirely new and unannounced standard of conduct."

The losers in both cases followed usual legal practice and asked the circuit court to stay the effect of its ruling. They are expected also to ask Chief Justice Warren E. Burger to call the Supreme Court, which adjourned last week, into session to hear appeals.

Before the court could hear the cases, Burger would have to summon vacationing justices for a special session of which there have been only three in history.

The circuit court directed the U.S. District Court which originally heard the cases to write an order declaring the Credentials Committee action on California null and void and enjoining any further action against the McGovern delegates based on the winner-take-all issue.

In the Illinois portion of the decision, a unanimous court held that the party does have the right to impose requirements on delegate selection.

The Credentials Committee had ousted the 59 Illinois delegates for violation of those requirements.

Abernathy vows 'storm'

Poor take over Convention Hall

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy warned Wednesday night that if the Democratic party refused to accept 750 poor people as national convention delegates they would crash the gathering and take the seats.

"If they don't give us seats we are going to take them," the leader of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference told 300 persons attending a welfare rights conference.

Earlier Wednesday, about 50 representatives of welfare and poor people's organizations took over Convention Hall for a few minutes to underscore their demand for acceptance as delegates.

"As poor people we are tired of being pushed around," Abernathy said. "We have got a job to do and we will do our thing."

Abernathy warned that if Democratic candidates fail to endorse the issues of poor people "we will see them in the voting booth."

"We want to make it clear to the Democratic party that they can no longer take poor people for granted," he added.

The National Welfare Rights Organization is sponsoring a poor people's convention that opened Wednesday and will end Sunday, the day before the Democratic nominating conclave starts.

They were welcomed by Mayor Chuck Hall who said: "In this great country of ours there shouldn't be any poor people."

Wednesday afternoon the demonstrators startled carpenters and other workmen putting finishing touches on the 14,000-seat hall as they marched up to the podium and issued a call for 750 delegate seats.

Scandals oust French premier

PARIS (AP) — President Georges Pompidou fired Jacques Chaban-Delmas, his premier for three years, after a series of scandals rocked the unity of the Gaullist party.

With legislative elections due before next month, Pompidou then on Wednesday appointed hard-line Gaullist Pierre Messmer, 56, to form a new government likely to include many of the leading figures of the outgoing administration. Its composition is expected to be announced Thursday or Friday.

Messmer, minister for overseas territories under Chaban-Delmas, served for nine years as defense minister for President Charles de Gaulle under Pompidou's premiership.

Like Chaban-Delmas, one of the first to rally to De Gaulle's Free France movement in 1940, Messmer was a founder of a pressure group designed to press its view of Gaullist orthodoxy after the general resigned in 1969.

Chaban-Delmas, whose dynamic war effort made him a brigadier-general at the age of 29, became premier when Pompidou succeeded De Gaulle as president. His more liberal interpretation of Gaullism and calls for a "new society" led to early clashes with the orthodox wing of the party.

But the real pressure on his post came in the last few months. A series of financial scandals exploded involving Gaullist deputies or close associates. Chaban-Delmas, 57, went on television nationwide to explain how perfectly legal tax loopholes enabled him to pay only minimal income tax for several years.

The grumbling at Chaban-Delmas was heightened when investigations by upper and lower house commissions revealed an extensive payola racket in the state-run television network. Chaban-Delmas, who had declared his confidence in its senior officers, quickly named new directors.

Storm ruins famed plane

WASHINGTON (AP) — British aviatrix Sheila Scott disclosed Wednesday that the storm that swept the U.S. East Coast has all but destroyed her famous airplane, the Piper Aztec Mythe, and left her financially strapped.

She hopes somehow to get another aircraft to fly across the South Pole next winter. Miss Scott said the flooding of the West branch of the Susquehanna River at Lock Haven, Pa., so damaged the Mythe that it can never again safely be used to fly long distances.

The plane was on the ground at the Piper Aircraft Co. plant for maintenance when flood warnings were sounded. With other aircraft it was moved to higher ground.

"The damage up there was ghastly," Miss Scott said. "Understandably there wasn't too much excitement about my Mythe, even though it has only 370 hours of flying time and was in nearly new condition."

remained uncertain. The Soviet Chess Federation demanded that the American challenger forfeit the first game of the 24-game match because he didn't show up for its scheduled start Sunday.

Fischer's holdout, however, has brought the winnings—and even the losses—to the highest amount in any world championship chess match. The winner will get $231,250 and the loser $168,750. A few thousand dollars and prestige went to previous world champions.

Insult claimed

Spassky, the defending champion from Russia, had complained that Fischer's conduct had "insulted me personally and the country I represent."

The American, in a statement prepared by his lawyers and read by Max Euwe, the president of the International Chess Federation, said he respected Spassky as a man and admired him as a chess player.

The apology was the latest move in a complicated preliminary between the Americans and the Russians before they even got to the Italian marble chess board on the stage at Reykjavik's 2,500-seat Sports Palace.

Fischer's holdout for money postponed the scheduled start of the match Sunday. Spassky's countermove, a protest and a demand for an apology by Fischer, moved the starting date of the series to Thursday.

Officials said they weren't even certain about that.

Soviet demand

They had to deal with the demand from the Soviet Chess Federation that Fischer be penalized for his arriving Tuesday, two days late. They wanted Euwe to declare Spassky the winner of the first game.

This would give Spassky a 1-0 advantage in the score at the outset of play. Chess experts said that in such a long match it was a disadvantage that Fischer could probably overcome. The match could last as long as two months.

From the frequent trips by Spassky and his second, Yefim Geller, to the gray three-story Soviet Embassy here, it was apparent the Soviet game was being played on directives from Moscow.

Fischer's apology said, "We are sorry the world championship was delayed. The problems causing the delays were not with world champion Spassky whom I respect as a man and admire as a player."

"If Grandmaster Spassky or the Soviet people were inconvenienced or discomfited, I am indeed unhappy, for I had not the slightest intention of this occurring."

S. Viet's fend off attacks

Hold Quang Tri edge

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese forces held the edge of Quang Tri city Wednesday and beat off North Vietnamese attacks on their eastern flank.

In the air war over North Vietnam, the U.S. Command announced the heaviest raids in weeks against three major depots within four miles of the center of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital.

Reliable sources said Lt. Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, commander of the 20,000-man counteroffensive into Quang Tri Province, believes he can recapture South Vietnam's northernmost city without a bloody battle. He is in no hurry to dash into the city and engage in unnecessary street fighting and destruction, the sources reported.

Penetrate city

Government paratroopers penetrated the city limits Tuesday, then took up defensive positions on the southeastern edge, awaiting an order to press on after their week-long, 10-mile drive up Highway 1.

Sources said North Vietnamese strength inside Quang Tri is not known, but the defenders are believed to be chiefly militia.

The North Vietnamese main divisions are believed to be dispersed generally to the west of Quang Tri, which fell on May 1.

The shelling of Hue continued for the fourth day. A military hospital in the Hue Citadel was hit Wednesday morning. Spokesman said 11 patients were wounded.

Blast depot

In the latest raids announced by the U.S. Command, Air Force Phantoms blasted a supply depot and a military repair facility three miles southeast of the center of Hanoi and a military vehicle depot four miles south of the city center Tuesday.

Radio Hanoi claimed the fighter-bombers struck residential sections of the capital and killed or injured many civilians. The U.S. Command said it had no information "indicating other than military targets were hit."

North Vietnam also said it was getting war supplies by sea through 12 coastal points that it said the United States had been unable to mine or blockade.

The Hanoi broadcast admitted, however, that the country's main deepwater port at Haiphong has been closed.

The report followed by a day a U.S. Navy communique claiming to have sunk or damaged a dozen barges that were carrying supplies loaded at sea from an unidentified freighter.

The U.S. Command reported another F4 Phantom shot down over the North with both crewmen listed as missing. During the past two weeks, the United States has reported losing a flier a day in the campaign to destroy the North's ability to carry on the offensive in the south.

54 planes lost

Since the resumption of fullscale bombing April 6, 54 planes have been reported lost in North Vietnam and 61 airmen are listed as missing.

North Vietnam claimed its anti-aircraft gunners shot down four U.S. military aircraft—three F4s and one F8 Wednesday.

Union refurbishing

The Gold Feather Room of the Union will undergo the "long overdue" process of refurbishing this summer according to James M. Burke.

Burke said the present furniture in the Gold Feather Room has been there since 1955. He added that they would also paint the room and add some panelling. He said they should be able to have it finished by fall.

Burke said the project will be funded "out of existing money," and will not be at the expense of UI students.

Freshman orientation

Two-day orientation session for about 1500 recent high school graduates and their parents will be held on the campus now through July 20.

The prospective UI freshmen will register for fall classes, tour the campus, stay overnight in a dormitory, and listen to administrators discuss academic affairs and student services as part of their introduction to Iowa City and the University.

Calley witness may bring retrial

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A man whose testimony may be used to gain a new trial for Lt. William Calley Jr. said Wednesday that he was available to testify during the My Lai court-martial despite Army claims he could not be located.

In fact, Charles D. "Butch" Gruver told the Daily Oklahoman, the Army was in contact with him during the court-martial, asking him to testify against Calley.

Army prosecutors were ordered by the military judge mid-way through Calley's court-martial to produce Gruver as a defense witness. They told the judge they could not locate him and that the Army lost contact with him in March 1970 — several months before the court-martial.

The Oklahoman said in its story, written by Jack Taylor, "There is an indication, based on interviews with Gruver, his mother and other acquaintances and relatives, that Army prosecutors may have misled him and the court to prevent him from testifying."

Gruver told Taylor, "The Army kept telling me that it (testimony) would just hurt him. They wanted me for the prosecution so I didn't go."

Gruver, a 26-year-old former Tulsa and a grenadier in Calley's company on the day of the My Lai killings in 1968, said he was not aware the Army had been ordered to produce him as a defense witness. "I didn't know that," he said. "I would have went."

Gruver said, "First they said it would be to help Calley and everything. Then I got papers that it would be for the prosecution, so I blew it off and left. I went to the coast." He said he had talked with so many Army officers he could not remember their names.

George Latimer of Salt Lake City, Calley's chief lawyer, had told the Oklahoman earlier this week that Gruver was the first soldier to tell Robert Ridenhour of the killings at the South Vietnamese hamlet. Ridenhour sparked an investigation of the killings that led to filing of charges against Calley and 24 others.

Latimer said that Gruver was prepared to testify that former Capt. Ernest Medina had received orders from headquarters to wipe out the hamlet and its inhabitants and had relayed the orders to Calley. Latimer said such testimony might relieve Calley of the responsibility for the 22 murders of which he was convicted.

Latimer has said he believes finding Gruver would justify a new trial for Calley by proving that the Army made only a token effort to locate him during the court martial.

UI employment

University of Iowa Willard L. Boyd said Wednesday that Jackson L. Thomas, chief of the contract compliance branch for the regional office of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, (HEW), and Milton Bridgewater, will review the UI employment practices and discuss details of complaints which have been filed against the institution.

A detailed report will be made by Thomas and Bridgewater following their visit to the campus. The university will then respond to the HEW report.

The review of the "affirmative action program" on minority employment will include inspection and discussion of tests and criteria used in employee selection, upgrading, and promotion; employment application forms; employee handbooks and other publications; samples of recruiting advertisements; samples of recruiting notices advising that the University is an equal opportunity employer; accounts of any special efforts to recruit minorities and females; and review of a list of employees by department, rank, sex, race and salary, including starting dates and salaries. President Boyd said.

Hijack attempt fails; hostage unharmed

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A knife-wielding father threatened to kill his infant daughter Wednesday as he held her hostage in an abortive airplane hijack that began after he allegedly stabbed his estranged wife and another man at her apartment, police said.

Buffalo police said Smith left what they described as a suicide note at his mother's home.

Richard H. Ash, special agent in charge of the Buffalo FBI office, said Smith, carrying the child, Jetuan, in his arms, boarded the empty jet at dawn at its parking place near the passenger terminal.

As FBI agents and police surrounded the plane, Smith demanded to be flown "out of the country," Ash said.

Ash used a bullhorn in an attempt to coax Smith from the plane. At first he refused to give up.

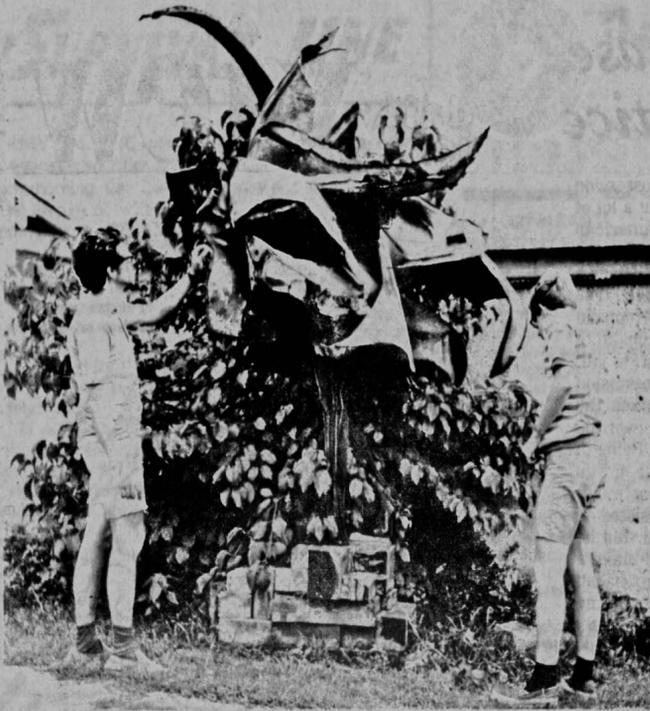

Seated at the door of the aircraft, Smith held his daughter aloft and shouted he would kill her if he did not get a pilot, Ash said. Ash asked Smith if he could board the plane.

"No," Smith replied. "If you do you'll both be dead. I'm not going to wait too much longer," Smith yelled after a half-hour in the plane.

Pleas that he give up the baby and surrender were made by Smith's mother, Lilly, and a clergyman. As they and other relatives talked with Smith, FBI agents sneaked onto the plane. The FBI would not say how.

Minutes later Smith threw out the knife, walked down the stairway ramp and handed his daughter to Ash.

Smith was hustled into an automobile and driven to Buffalo where he was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Edmund F. Maxwell on the attempted air piracy charge. He was held in Erie County Jail, in federal custody, in lieu of $200,000 bail.

'Pollution' within limits River still safe

Today's Periscope focuses on the Iowa River—is it really polluted, what causes it, and what can be done about it.

A Task force article by ALAN GRUNDMEYER and MIKE JOHNSON

The Iowa River looks very dirty to the casual observer, but it is not the running sewer it appears to be.

Although the river is polluted, its waters meet national standards for water quality, according to Dr. R. L. Morris, associate director of the State Hygienic Laboratory and member of the Iowa Pollution Control Commission.

"I am not alarmed at the condition of the Iowa River," Morris said.

The pollution in the river is due primarily to farming, according to Neil B. Fisher, supervisor of the Iowa City water treatment plant.

"It is a result of feedlot and fertilizer run-off," Fisher said. "Manufactured fertilizers are rough on water treatment. Three molecules of chlorine are required to neutralize one molecule of ammonia."

The Iowa River above Iowa City drains approximately 3,000 square miles of land. The present condition of the Iowa River is a result of extensive agricultural activity in this area.

Farm for profit

Farmers, like other businessmen, are out to make a profit. Because fixed costs are high and increasing, high yields are necessary. Land is now farmed more intensively, resulting in increased soil erosion. Insecticides, herbicides and chemical fertilizers are used to increase production. The resulting run-off from chemically treated farm land is a major source of pollution.

Farmers are reluctant to admit that their land is a source of pollution.

"I'm convinced they (the farmers) don't think anything is wrong, says Lyle Fisher, Johnson County Health Department supervisor.

In addition, many farmsteads have inadequate sewage disposal facilities according to Fisher. More than 450 Johnson County farmers have been ordered to correct treatment facilities, Fisher said.

Other segments of the agricultural industry contribute large quantities of pollutants to the environment. Richard R. Dague, assistant professor of civil engineering at the University of Iowa, has studied one of the major contributors, cattle feedlots.

Feedlots unique

The management of wastes from cattle feedlots is a unique problem in environmental quality control which cannot be meaningfully compared with the control of wastes from domestic and industrial sources, Dague said.

Domestic and industrial wastes are delivered to streams or treatment plants on a continuous basis. Wastes from a cattle feedlot reach surface waters intermittently, usually was run-off after a heavy rain. A hazard of runoff is that wastes are washed to the stream in a surge, tending to "shock load" the receiving stream.

If Iowa River water has a severe taste and odor problem, as is often the case, it is primarily because of large amounts of organic matter present in the water as a result of agricultural runoff. This organic matter has a biological oxygen demand (BOD).

"The high concentration of organic matter necessitates the addition of greatly increased quantities of chlorine to the treated water," said Dr. Donald B. McDonald, associate professor of civil engineering. "The combined chlorine compounds and chloro-derivatives thus formed are primarily responsible for the high taste and odor values."

The public health hazards from polluted surface water are less today in Iowa than they were

50 years ago because the Iowa State Department of Health, during the last half century, has diligently required Iowa's cities and towns to construct sewage treatment plants to minimize health hazards. Iowa is currently the number one state in the nation in sewage treatment plants in municipalities, according to Morris.

No health hazard

No disease outbreaks attributable to contaminated public water supplies have occurred recently in Iowa. Iowa municipalities are required to test their water frequently to insure that the delivered water is safe for human consumption.

The strong chlorine taste and odor are not believed to be injurious to health. The health hazard lies in attempts the public may make to alleviate the problem by seeking other sources of drinking water, according to Morris.

Large amounts of organic material enter the Iowa River during the early spring months as a result of surface thawing under an underlying layer of frozen soil, according to McDonald.

"Water from the melting snow with its burden of organic matter can no longer seep into the soil, as it can during the autumn rains, and must run off to the nearest watercourse," he said.

The high concentrations of organic matter introduced into the Coralville Reservoir from agricultural lands were responsible for a recent extensive fish kill. Following the heavy rains and subsequent runoff, there was a high BOD in the river.

Killed by BOD

"The fish were killed by BOD," said Neil Fisher. "The bacteria use up oxygen and the fish suffocate. This year was the worst one we've had."

Before river water becomes tap water it goes through a lengthy purification process.

The river water is first strained through a half-inch mesh screen to remove large debris. Carbon is then added to remove the fish odor and taste.

Alum and aluminum sulfate are added to cause particles floating in the water to form clumps (floc) which settle to the bottom of treatment tanks.

Chlorine gas is added to remove organic impurities.

A final filtering process removes any remaining insoluble chemical or floc.

Finally, the water enters an underground storage well where fluoride ions are added.

200 million gallons

The University Treatment Plant processes 200 million gallons of water a day. The process is constantly monitored and a complete water analysis is performed every four hours.

The Iowa City Sewage Treatment Plant averages five and a half million gallons of water a day according to Harry Boren, plant superintendent. It is a secondary treatment plant with 90 per cent removal of BOD.

The Iowa City sewage treatment plant uses a trickling filter system which involved circular tanks filled with rock. A filter distributes sewage and algae on the rocks. Bacteria live on the rock and convert impurities to solids which can be removed.

"With 90 per cent removal, we have done the best job we could economically," said Boren, "and we can discharge the effluent without worry about pollution and fish kills."

Boren believes that waste stabilization lagoons are needed to catch the runoff from farms. A lagoon is also an effective waste treatment method for a small community, he said.

Better farming needed

The future?

"We need better farming practices, such as terracing and contouring of the land," according to Fisher.

"Soil conservation is going to cost millions of dollars," said Dr. Morris. "This is the most critical problem and the most difficult to control. The problem is the amount of money available."

"The Soil Conservancy Act passed by the last legislature," he added, "was one of the greatest steps taken for water quality control. We have to face the responsibility of funding them. We need the support of local, state and federal agencies."

According to Morris, great strides have been made in curbing pollution, but there will never be a perfect solution to water control.

Court orders surgery despite dad's protest

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa Supreme Court held Wednesday that the medical need of three Davenport children for tonsilectomies overrides their father's religious objections to the operations.

The court said evidence indicates the surgery is urgently needed and should be performed regardless of the wishes of the father, Raymond Karwath.

The unanimous opinion upholds a Davenport Municipal Court order for surgery. It was written by Justice Mark McCormick.

The Karwath children, Bryan, 10, Colleen, 8, and Neil, 6, are in the legal custody of the Scott County Department of Social Services.

The parents asked to be relieved of their care and custody in January of 1970 because the father was unemployed and the mother was emotionally ill.

The children have been living in foster homes.

The county department applied to the Scott County Juvenile Court last year for authorization for tonsilectomies on the children. The operations had been strongly recommended by doctors.

Karwath resisted, saying he had "religious faith" that if the operations were postponed for six months, the children's condition would improve. He said he doesn't oppose medication or surgery if it's absolutely necessary. McCormick said the only issue in the appeal is whether the evidence supports the order for surgery against the father's wishes.

He rejected Karwath's contention that a showing of medical crisis, demonstrating an immediate threat to the life of the children, is essential before the municipal court's order for surgery is justified.

"Where the best interests and the welfare of children in care and custody of the state reasonably require medical treatment opposed by a parent, residual parental rights cannot be invoked to prevent it," the opinion said.

Larger supply lowers dollar price

NEW YORK (AP) — Current low prices for the dollar in Europe are the result of a larger supply not diminished confidence in the American currency, some bankers believe, bankers believe.

The dollar was lower in European markets Wednesday but only because banks are turning out more Eurodollars (dollars owed or owned in Europe), they believe. The fact that interest rates on dollar loans are not going up is proof to some that the dollar will not be devalued again.

"There's no lack of confidence in the dollar," said William Wolman of Argus Research. He has just returned from a lengthy European trip during which he talked to officials of the major central government banks.

"The dollar is still a pretty good currency," he said, "because the European inflation is still going on. That makes the dollar more stable."

"What is happening is that the dollar is a vehicle currency—if anybody wants to speculate against the pound, he borrows dollars to do it. Therefore any weakness in any currency shows up as a dollar weakness."

One reason for this is that the supply of Eurodollars is virtually unlimited. Any bank can lend dollars on demand and these are just as useful as if they had been sent from the United States. Thus in times of crises, as occurred when Britain floated its pound, the supply of dollars tends to rise. And more dollars being sold means their value goes down.

In addition, in terms of the pound, a seesaw effect is produced. For example, when the sterling value of dollars rises, as it did Wednesday, it means it takes fewer pounds to buy $100. This, in other words, means that the dollar is worth fewer pounds. When the value of one currency goes up, the other currency involved in a deal goes down.

What Do These Newspapers Have In Common?

Simply this. All of them will have reporters on hand at the Democratic Convention in Miami to file firsthand reports on all the action taking place.

For a somewhat different view of what goes into a political convention, follow Daily Iowan Editor Steve Baker as he tries to find out what's really happening in Miami.

Behind the normal plastic TV rhetoric and the usual newspaper political tinsle, there will be real human beings in Miami - hippies, yuppies, politicians, pigs, prostitutes, and thousands of others - all involved in a process that may have a profound effect on all of our lives.

Try the Daily Iowan viewpoint of the Democratic Convention. We think you'll find it a worthwhile experience.

Another case of blind justice

A friend of mine was found not guilty on a pot possession charge last week in Montana. His story points out a lot of what's wrong with what passes for justice in American courts.

His possession amounted to walking into a friend's apartment 30 seconds before the police raided it. The police found my friend in the living room and some dope in the bedroom. That was enough evidence to constitute possession for the police. They hauled my friend off to jail.

Unfortunately, this is not enough to constitute possession in a court. Possession in court means pretty much the same as it does in the dictionary. You have to own the thing, or have it on your person, in your car, etc. Being in the same apartment with something doesn't mean you possess it, especially when it is someone else's apartment.

Instead of just dropping the charges, the DA insisted on going ahead with the non-case against my friend. But he was nice enough to let it be known that he would make a deal. The deal was that he would drop the case if my friend waived his right to sue for false arrest. So instead of some arrest-happy cops being punished my friend was "fined" $200 (in lawyer's fees) for not possessing marijuana.

It is a strange justice that allows you to be arrested arbitrarily in the first place. But it is just plain bizarre when you have to give up your right to sue for damages in order to have charges dropped that wouldn't stand up in court.

The typical liberal response is that justice was done because my innocent friend was not sent to jail. The American system of jurisprudence vindicated again.

That's pretty crummy thinking, although it's better than the typical conservative response that he should have been found guilty anyway because he looks like the type that smokes dope and think about all the times he has probably gotten away with it.

Justice was done only after a little bargaining. If my friend hadn't been willing to cop a plea the DA would have been doing his damndest to get him put in jail, raised the cost of an already exorbitant lawyer's fee and taken up a lot of my friends time.

That isn't justice. It's punishment for someone else's mistake. In this case everybody but my innocent friend won.

The police got off the hook. The lawyer made $200. The judge had a case removed from an already heavy docket. And the DA saved himself a lot of time and trouble.

NO THREE HUNDRED POUND WEAKLING IS GOING TO KICK SAND IN MY FACE!

SDS calls for anti-racism resolution

(Today's Soapbox Soundoff is from Students for a Democratic Society, who intend to take the following anti-racism bill to the Democratic Convention in Miami to demand it be accepted and enacted into law. SDS has busses going to Miami from Chicago. Information is available from Norty Wheeler, 351-0806.)

After the Nuremberg Trials the United Nations had a Convention on Genocide. There, they defined genocide as "any of the following acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group as such:

- a) Killing any members of the group; b) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group; c) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part; d) Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group; e) Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group."

Article III of the Convention provided that "The following acts shall be punishable:

- a) Genocide; b) Conspiracy to commit genocide; c) Direct and public incitement to commit genocide; d) Attempt to commit genocide; e) Complicity in genocide."

We indict the U.S. Government for racist acts and genocide at home. We indict the U.S. government for abominable acts of racism and genocide abroad, in S.E. Asia and Africa in particular....

Whereas racism and genocide in Black, Latin, Asian and native American people in this country is deliberately being committed directly or indirectly by the U.S. government, we demand that the following be acted upon immediately and made into law:

I. A. No federal troops shall be sent to ghettos to suppress demonstrations or rebellions against racist treatment.

B. Any State, local or federal policeman or other state, local, or federal government official who murders a black, latin, asian or native american person shall be deemed to have committed a federal offense punishable by life imprisonment.

C. Any state local or federal policeman or other state, local or federal government official who assaults a minority person, except in provable self-defense, shall be deemed to have committed a federal offense punishable by not less than ten years imprisonment, depending upon the severity of the offense.

D. Anyone on trial for any offense shall have his or her choice of a lawyer. The government shall pay all fees.

II. A. Rescind the Tallmadge Amendment. (forced labor)

B. There shall be a guaranteed annual income of $10,000 for a family of four, available to anyone with no legal acceptations.

C. Children shall not be taken forcibly from mothers and fathers on welfare.

III. A. Repeal the racist immigration codes.

B. People residing in the U.S. and born in other countries shall not be deported or harassed.

IV. No college or university, public or private school, which employs officials who commit acts of racism against students, faculty or other employees, or which uses texts that propagate the view that black or other minority people are culturally or genetically inferior shall receive any federal aid.

V. A. Medical researchers who experiment on black, latin, asian or native american people without their full consent shall be deemed to have committed a federal offense, punishable by not less than ten years imprisonment and with a maximum of life imprisonment.

B. Medical researchers who experiment on minors shall be deemed to have committed a federal offense punishable by not less than ten years imprisonment and with a maximum of life imprisonment.

C. Anyone who practices forced sterilization or lobotomies shall be deemed to have committed a federal offense punishable by life imprisonment.

D. Captive populations such as prisoners shall not ever be experimented on or medically abused. Anyone who commits this crime shall be deemed to have committed a federal offense punishable by not less than ten years imprisonment with a maximum of life imprisonment depending on the severity of the offense.

Collins took kickbacks, government lets him go

WASHINGTON—More than two years ago, we reported that Rep. Jim Collins, the resplendent Dallas Republican, had been squeezing salary kickbacks out of his staff.

To add indignation to illegality, he is a multimillionaire who had stooped to chiseling small sums from his young secretaries.

Our report triggered an on-again, off-again FBI investigation that will climax this week in Washington when criminal charges are tried in federal court.

By

Jack

introduced it for him.

The motion was made without defense counsel even being notified, which raises serious ethical questions. Perhaps even more serious, however, are the questions raised by the fact that Judge Oliver Gash, himself a former U.S. Attorney, promptly granted the motion.

Soft on drugs

The Food and Drug Administration is often accused of being too soft on the pharmaceutical industry it regulates. Yet the National Ethical Pharmaceutical Association, representing 100 small drug firms, would like the FDA to be even softer.

The drug firms are trying to bring pressure through their Congressmen to get the FDA to weaken its regulations.

The drug makers want the FDA to allow them to include some ingredients in drugs even if there's no proof they are effective. The drug companies also would like to shift the burden of proving other drugs are safe from the producers to the FDA.

(Copyright, 1972, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Aide gets rap

The accused, however, is not Congressman Collins. Instead, it is 33-year-old George Haag, his former administrative assistant, whom the government has accused of arranging the elaborate kickback operation in Collins's office.

The congressman, it seems, has been cleared of all blame. His name is mentioned only in passing in the government's eight-page indictment of Haag. The prosecution has no plans even to call Collins as a witness.

This is curious, for he acknowledged to us during our original investigation that he was fully aware of the kickbacks but didn't know they were illegal.

What's more, Haag insists that Collins helped to plan the kickback scheme. Haag has passed a lie detector test which included two questions on this crucial point.

The first kickbacks—which we reported and Collins acknowledged—are not included in the government's charges. Also left out is a $600 cash kickback that Sue McMahon, another former Collins employee, has sworn under oath she was required to pay directly to the Congressman during his 1968 campaign.

Haag, Collins checks

The government's evidence includes five checks made out to Haag by Ray Fortner, a Collins aide who the government now says kicked back part of his salary to Haag.

But the government also has three other checks, dated at precisely the same time, from Fortner to Collins himself. These are drawn for even larger amounts of money. Two of the checks bear the cryptic, typed notation, "as per agreement."

Apparently, the government has concluded that Fortner's payments to Haag constituted an illegal kickback but his larger payments to the congressman were perfectly all right.

There's more. The FBI investigated Collin's kickback operation with all the boldness of a medieval peasant coming before the king.

The G-men even submitted their questions in writing in advance to a Texas law firm hired by the congressman.

Time on their side

This provided time for Collins, his aides and his lawyers to work out an explanation of the kickback scheme and to get their stories straight. Young Haag, believing that Collin's lawyers were looking out for him, went along.

When a federal grand jury began probing the matter last summer, Haag suddenly found himself isolated and identified as the culprit. He then decided he'd better get his own lawyer. The Texas firm, apparently fearful

Talking on fluoridation

To the editor:

I have belatedly seen the story in the June 15th DI about the cancellation of my talk on fluoridation to a class in the dental school.

In a conversation with a reporter for the Des Moines Register and Tribune, I had mentioned that I was scheduled to give a talk to a dental class on reasons for not fluoridating drinking water. The reporter said he might cover that talk, so I asked the instructor if it would be all right.

According to the DI story, she said she panicked when she thought how the "state board" would react to the publicity and what they would do to her for having a speaker in opposition to fluoridation.

I think that a state board that exercises that sort of power over a university instructor deserves very severe criticism. Science is supposed to be free to study all sides, so there is not the scientific approach nor a spirit of free inquiry in the dental school.

The instructor, Sally Buchanan, is quoted as saying there would be no drawbacks to my speaking if I were "educated in the subject." It happens that I have about 15 pounds of printed material about evenly divided between the two sides on fluoridation. It includes a number of original research papers.

From my contacts with the dental school, I think it is quite probable that I know more about the research supposed to show that fluoridation is safe than any member of the dental faculty.

In the mid-fifties, I was an officer in an international society of scientists, the Society for Social Responsibility in Science. Social responsibility is very much involved in the fluoridation issue. I also did some writing for the Society's publication, and the editor asked me to do more.

I was considered competent enough to write on issues, including fluoridation, to be read by scientists all over the world, including some Nobel prize winners, but my competence for speaking to dental student is questioned.

I would have spoken without reporters present, and I am prepared to do it in the future if asked. I am also prepared to debate any member of the dental faculty on the safety of fluoridation.

My mother's been to jail with me twice now. We did civil disobedience together at the Oakland induction center. She told me she didn't know if it would do any good, but that it might give other mothers some courage to do the same, or something just as radical. It did. Our second trip to Santa Rita Prison there were at least three women in with us who said that Mother had given them the strength to act out their convictions. Mother really hated it in jail, because it was so easy for her, and so unfair to the regular inmates. The black dope addicts and prostitutes and boosters and pushers called "Mama." Whenever they swore in front of her they said, "Scuse me, Mama." On Christmas day, one of the three toughest girls in the women's side of the prison came to Mother's bed and said, "Ooo, Mama. Ah'm waydown. I wanna see mah kids. Ann' I don't never cry. But I b'lieve I'm gone to have to today!"

Stevie Wonder tours with Rolling Stones

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
The latest entry in the long career of Stevie Wonder, age 22, is performing on the Rolling Stones tour, June 3-July 26. Along on the tour is his 12-piece band, Wonderlove.

Wonder went to Motown Records in Detroit at age 10, signed at age 11 and made a smash debut at 12 with a single, "I Call It Pretty Music," and an LP, "12-Year-Old Genius." He's been performing and recording ever since, dropping as he outgrew it, the first word of his original billing, Little Stevie Wonder.

"You know, if you want respect from me you must give me respect, like understanding how I feel. This is really what brings out soul. Being able to express what is within sincerely, from an experience you had or an indirect experience of others you see around you and you're able to interpret into the form of singing music.

"It doesn't matter what color you are or whatever. People say, if he is black, he is a soul artist. A lot of singers are categorized.

"They say I'm like Ray Charles because I wear glasses and play the piano and move my head around. That is a blindness. When you are still and there is still energy within you, you can look at whatever and that takes energy—whereby with me there is no form of looking at something. Moving my head is releasing energy. It becomes a habit, which is something you can break.

"I guess categorizing comes from radio stations categorizing so many things. When I wrote 'My Cherie Amour' in 1969, people asked why I was doing that kind of song. I just dig all kinds of music. I don't feel I should be bound to any one particular thing.

"I usually come up with the basic idea of the words, a lick which is not intelligible to anybody else. I said, 'my cherie amour da da dada,' which didn't mean anything. The words are by Sylvia Moy. I wrote 'Tears of a Clown' the music of that, around the same time.

"I've got a song, 'I Want To Talk To You,' on my last LP, 'Where I'm Coming From,' that has a black man on a plantation saying, 'I want to talk to you.' Each line progresses into a more current time until the last line, 'I don't want to talk to you. I've been listening to you like 200 years and it's time to form my own ideas and have my own feelings and have my own identity.' It's not really anything to make anyone uptight. It's just saying everyone wants to feel as if he is something and wants to build.

"We're prejudiced, black and white, against each other, which is stupid. I just want to do what I want to do, make music, as many kinds as possible; I don't care about any of that garbage.

Wonder, who was 22 on May 13, doesn't regret having spent his childhood as a performer. "My brother is 12 and very good on drums. He'll probably get something done pretty soon. I think it'll just happen. He'll get so good, someone will hear him soon. Some people say he should be out playing ball. What I really loved was writing and playing music. If there's something he loves, I say let him do it, as long as it won't hurt his life or personality or whatever. If a kid is able to find what he enjoys at that age, I think it is beautiful."

Wonder's biggest hit has been "Signed, Sealed, Delivered." Also very big were "My Cherie Amour" and "We Can Work It Out." He gets a lot of requests for "Harmonica Man," but says, "I hate that song."

The musician plays piano, drums, harmonica, clarinet and organ and enjoys piano the most. He also enjoys his current band, finding their energy level high, matching his own.

SURVIVAL LINE

SURVIVAL LINE cuts red tape, answers your questions, investigates your tips and all sorts of good things like that each morning. Call 353-6220 Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7-8 p.m. or write SURVIVAL LINE, The Daily Iowan, Communications Center, Iowa City.

I understand that there's some kind of Scandinavian dance festival somewhere in Iowa this summer. Where, when, and anything else we should know, please?—F.N.

Ah yes, SURVIVAL LINE and the Iowa Arts Council think you're talking about Decorah's "Nordic Fest," to be held July 28-29-30.

In addition to traditional Norwegian dance and musical performances, there will be demonstrations of the arts and crafts of Norway and of the descendants of the Norwegian-American immigrants who settled in Decorah.

By the way, according to their Chamber of Commerce, the Nordic Fest is a "cultural, non-commercial event sponsored by the Decorah community and its Norwegian-American Museum."

I'm determined to still see the Stones during their present tour if at all possible. Could SURVIVAL LINE find out the dates, places etc. of the remaining gigs? L.M.

You may be in time for the Rolling Stones' concert in St. Louis, which will be this Sunday at Kiel Auditorium.

It's sold out, however. And at least some of those "available" tickets around are in the hands of scalpers, apparently. Rumor has it that a scalper was in River City this weekend and turned down $40 for a pair of the St. Louis tickets, demanding more.

Caution: SURVIVAL LINE warns that in all too many instances the tickets offered by scalpers are counterfeits. So even if you're into paying ripoff prices for concert tickets, you should do so with the realization that you might be buying utterly worthless counterfeits if you buy concert tickets at other than authorized locations.

The balance of the Midwest part of the Stones' tour finds them in Akron's "Rubber Bowl" on July 11, Indianapolis Convention Center on July 12 and Cobo Hall in Detroit on July 13-14.

From there it's on to conquer Toronto, Montreal, Boston, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, and culminates in a 3-day stint (July 24-25-26) at Madison Square Garden in NY.

SURVIVAL GOURMET

Chicken's sale-priced this week at some Iowa City stores, so let's start SURVIVAL GOURMET with chicken prepared in the styles of six countries. Thanks, by the way, to C.L. for these.

Basic preparation: Brown a cut-up fryer chicken in butter or oil, using a heavy skillet. Choose your national style from the list below, mix the seasonings shown with 1-2 cups of water, and simmer 45 minutes to 1 hour until done.

Hungarian: paprika, onion, garlic. Thicken sauce with sour cream and serve with noodles.

Italian: basil, oregano, rosemary, garlic, onion, tomato paste

French: tarragon, green onions or chives, parsley (rosemary may be substituted for the tarragon)

Mexican: 1 can Old El Paso Sauce for Tacos, or Green Chilis and Tomatoes.

Greek: onion, basil, oregano, garlic, tomato paste, cinnamon

Ethiopian: paprika, cayenne pepper, black pepper, ginger, onion, lemon juice. Garnish with hard-boiled eggs.

Bon appetit!

Issue oriented learning at Eco U.

GREEN BAY, WISC.—The cab made its way through the dirty dankly polluted college town. Tall chimneys emitted a bad black smog in a city where that kind of black isn't beautiful.

And then the vehicle pulled in front of a puddle of dirty water near a slightly larger puddle of dirty water called Lake Michigan near a construction site near an environmental science building.

"I don't know," said the Green Bay cab driver. "It's just like any other university, I suppose."

At first glance it looks just-like-any-other-university-I-suppose—with 3,500 students shoving their way to class, books under arms, girls under arms, long hair, short hair, linoleum floors, white cement walls, bulletin boards announcing the usual bull.

At second glance it looks just like any other university.

And at third and fourth and fifth...

In fact, it's only until you find out what's going on there (and, more important, what isn't) that you discover it's not just like any other university.

It's the University of Wisconsin at Green Bay, its acronym being UWGB, the sound one emits upon getting a mouthful of smog, which is exactly one of the things this college is dedicated to remedy.

Dubbed "Survival U," "Ecology U" and the "University of Involvement," UWGB is all of the above. The entire school has been organized around the theme of environmental crises. A lot of theme. A lot of crisis.

It's the first of its kind. Structured with a unique semi-structure, it's the free school a-courant, complete with bio degradable students who study the solution to pollution, the psychology of ecology as they bicycle and recycle their ways through four years of issue-oriented education.

UWGB is a breath of fresh air in an otherwise polluted academic environment. It opened its doors to students in 1969. And word has spread. Now, more than two years later, ecologically minded students from all over the country flock to this environmental mecca.

But the college itself is polluted with many undistinguished problems—an 80 percent commuter campus, a minor housing crisis, student apathy (and apathy about the apathy). But certainly never a complaint about Irrelevant Education. UWGB is anything but irrelevant—the answer to any activist's academic reform visions. If anything, it just might be too relevant.

A student selects an environmental problem that "forms the center of his intellectual interests," according to the school catalog. The structure is based on environmental themes rather than standard disciplines. There are four colleges within the University: Environmental Sciences, Community Sciences, Human Biology and Creative Communication.

Curriculum includes such subjective subjects as "Visions of Man," "Ecosystems Analysis," "The Philosophy of Leisure," independent study programs that include community communication and involvement—as well as the old standby standards like accounting and phys. ed. But this university ties them all together.

"Frankly," says chancellor Frank Weidner, "we've tried to build an institution that says the cop-out from society isn't welcome here. There must be a feeling of social responsibility—relevance—in every area. Let's not pollute this university with things that lack meaning."

It is this man who sets the pace. Complete with a simple, folksy charm, Weidner wows students into involvement like cows into an educationally verdant pasture. But sometimes, as they say, the pasture is greener on the other side. For most people UWGB is that greener side. But for many UWGB student, their pastures are more gangrene.

"Do I sound bitter?" asked one bitter coed after she had listed several reasons why she hated the school—from big classes to big masses to her disdain for student apartments. "If there weren't any classes, I'd like it better." But there are classes. And there are students who like it better.

One student who does like the school diagnosed students' problems as such: "They come here expecting utopia. You know, this school is supposed to be a big, innovative thing—new, different, all that. They come here and they're disappointed that it's not Walden III. But they forget that they have as much a role in making it innovative as the staff does."

Or, as Karen Weidner—yes, the chancellor's student daughter—says, "People think it's all going to be there when they come. But it's not just going to come up to your doorstep and buzz."

UWGB is growing and changing. But it isn't a perfect human institution. It's got its problems. But it also has potential, which few other institutions have. It's got potential for change but, more important, its students have the potential for changing the world.

At the end of the day, I hopped into a yellowed Yellow Cab and was on my way home. I thought I'd try again.

"I don't know much about it," this driver said. "But a college is a college. Isn't it?"

I turned around to notice a dark trail of combustion coming from the rear of his cab.

AMAZING GRACE
Aretha Franklin
Atlantic SD 2-906

Everyone plays "Amazing Grace." The Groundhogs, Rod Stewart and some bag pipe players all have recorded it. Finally we have someone who can DO "Amazing Grace." This double album of gospel is a solid knockout from beginning to end.

This set was recorded last January in a Baptist Church in Los Angeles. It combines traditional gospel with secular songs arranged gospel style and contemporary gospel like Clara Ward's "How I Got Over." Back up is provided by Rev. James Cleveland on piano and the Southern California Community Choir.

The album shows the same variety that Aretha gave to soul music. She goes slow and heavy on "Mary, Don't You Weep;" cooks on "Old Landmark" and shouts on "You'll Never Walk Alone."

The arrangements are excellent. The choir provides a good backdrop; nice, simple structures that don't get in the way of Aretha's singing. Aretha is overpowering and the backup voices and band are just along to help.

The only really weak spot in 90 minutes of music is her recital of the 23rd Psalm. The rest shows great feeling and a real command over both the audience and the material.

Lot's of soul singers started out in the church and then left for the more lucrative pop market. That's Aretha's story exactly. As a rule, the rest of the story goes something like: soul singer tries to return and the church won't take him/her back into the musical fold.

Will the church take Aretha back? This album should answer that and whether there is room on the pop market for black gospel. I think so. This album shows that what Aretha's father, Rev. Franklin, said on side 3 is true. "Aretha's just a stone singer." And it doesn't matter what she sings.

There aren't any new shows to talk about this week, except for the Jerry Reed—When You're Hot, You're Hot Hour, which is temporarily replacing Glenn Campbell. Unfortunately, I'm busy on Tuesday nights and haven't seen it. If somebody has strong feelings about it, good or bad, write something down and send it in. Maybe we'll print it. (I bet you didn't think becoming a TV critic was that easy, did you? Now you know how much expertise I brought to this job.) Until some loyal fan helps out, I'm going to fill in with some interesting bits of information that have come my way.

July 28 is Dick Cavett's contract option date. If ABC decides to drop him, PBS might approach him to do a show for them. The possibilities of this seem so good that it's almost worth hoping ABC will let him go.

If you want to get TV coverage of the Democratic convention without sitting through all the hours of floor debate, try watching PBS (Channel 12, locally). Sander Vanocur and Robert MacNeil, whose first show on the Democratic race was about the Iowa precinct caucuses, will be summing it up at 6:30 p.m. each night. Otherwise, you can watch any of the major networks.

If the convention coverage is anything like the primary coverage, only the faces of the newsmen will be different from channel to channel; content will remain the same. The Today Show is planning on teaming up with William F. Buckley, Jr., and John Kenneth Galbraith for morning-after comments. This will give all sorts of people the chance to make a lot of "odd couple" cracks about them. I can promise you that this column won't.

The Screen Actors Guild, a professional performer's union, has formed an Ethnic Minorities Committee to help change the image of minority people that's presented on television. The Committee, which includes many performers from minority groups, wants to see more blacks, Chicanos, Indians, and Asians acting in leading roles, as well as to see an end to stereotyping in all roles that minority people play.

They point out that in many ways "positive" stereotypes, such as the calm, philosophical Oriental woman that Myoshi Umeki plays on The Courtship of Eddie's Father, is as bad as a more traditional negative stereotype, such as the Fu Manchu image. The Committee intends to operate partly by acting as a liaison between minority communities and the television industry, and partly by influencing other people in the industry (writers, directors, producers, casting directors) to employ more minority people in a wider range of roles.

In New York, the National Organization of Women is challenging the FCC's renewal of WABC-TV's broadcasting license charging the station with "blatant sexism." After an in-depth study lasting 18 months, NOW concluded that the station's programming portrayed women as "unintelligent, irresponsible, dominated by men, defined by their anatomy and incapable of independent thought or action." They also state that only 3.6 per cent of the airtime is devoted to discussion of important women's issues, such as child care and women in politics. If you're interested in reading more about this pioneering effort, the Sunday New York Times Magazine of May 28 carried an article called "NOW Says: TV Commercials Insult Women," by Judith Adler Hennessee and Joan Nicholson, both of whom helped run the study.

The most frightening statistic that I've run into lately was in the New Yorker. Their TV critic says that 98 per cent of all American households have TV. Think about that when you start wondering how far away 1984 actually is.

Gra-and Central: clockwork torrent

By BARB YOST

New York City Correspondent

NEW YORK—If you've been to Grand Central Station, you know exactly what it's like—people, people, and more people. Never the same one twice. If you've never been there, don't worry. It's not one of those "have to see to believe it" places. Not at all. Just imagine a leading toyman, A.O. Schwartz, for instance, setting in motion three hundred wind-up machine men on top of a card table. The amazing part is that they all somehow manage to bypass one another as they move without colliding, and very few fall off the table. The overall picture of this table is a great expressway of people, circulating throughout a network of restaurants, shops, stock exchange cubicles, and—almost as an afterthought—train tracks.

In the center of the station is a huge clock which would have you believe tells the exact time. All the other clocks in this vast system make the same assertion. None of them agree.

A little way from the clock is another common landmark in any building of great magnitude: a fountain. This fountain seems to somehow be rising from out of the bowels of a lush tropical jungle, miraculously appearing out of a cement balcony, behind 23 potted chrysanthemums. The jungle also gives the time and temperature, and a cigarette ad.

Above the clock and the jungle is a scene well-worth a stiff neck. Stretching across the ceiling is a panorama of stars, constellations, and signs of the Zodiac. Orion watches over the Off-track Betting organization windows, while the Gemini twins share a secret over the Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner, and Smith office. The stars are set in the golden sky like giant diamonds from Tiffany's. The elegance of the scene above seems somehow incongruous with the fat man below walking a dog in a green striped sweater. It's the dog who's wearing the sweater.

At certain times of the day, the machine men go into a frenzy, when the subways and trains pull in. At these times, their little legs carry them as fast as they can, down the stairs and out to the tracks. With no regard for life or limb except their own, they zip here and there, trampling one another if necessary, shoving ahead of the crowd if possible, all with only one end in mind—to get on that car. It's as if they were being offered a trip to the moon on a rocket, instead of ten minutes of mobile suffocation pressed up against a hundred other mobilized after-five suffocaters.

The clientel of Grand Central Station, like all of New York City, ranges from the ultra-sophisticated to the pre-empted derelicks who rout through garbage cans looking for uneaten hamburger buns, a discarded umbrella, or yesterday's Daily News. When these particular machine men become wound down, they can most often be found asleep in doorways, dreaming possibly of their last cup of coffee, or else collapsed between the cracks of the sidewalks. Passers-by politely step over them. They pass their waking hours watching the world of Park Avenue passing them by, occasionally stretching out an underfed hand to collect a few extra coins, crying, "I've got both hands out to you!" Usually both hands remain empty.

Grand Central itself, in fact, could be a scene out of the thirties, or the forties, or whenever it was that people depended on newspapers for news, and trains for transportation. Certainly there used to be a time when the Penn Central ticket windows were not taken over by the Off-track Betting organization, or when the pictures on the walls were done by a real starving artist from Greenwich Village, instead of by a Kodak Instamatic. But it must have been a long time ago. All that's left of that age now is an occasional shoe-shine boy polishing up a Madison Avenue oxford, or an old wrinkled man holding up a screaming headline, crying, "Paper here. Get the news!" The machine men have taken over now.

Michael S. Harper, author of "Dear John, Dear Coltrane" and associate professor at Brown University, reads from his poetry to a Tuesday night audience at EPB. Harper writes in an oral tradition which is strongly influenced by jazz. He was in Iowa City in conjunction with the Institute for Afro-American Culture and its two-week-long study of black leader W.E.B. Dubois. Tonight the Institute will present a lecture by John Hope Franklin of the University of Chicago on "Dubois as Historian of Reconstruction." (Photo by Craig Engleman.)

'Butterfly' tickets available by mail

A dual return engagement is planned when the UI Opera Theatre presents "Madame Butterfly." The Puccini opera scheduled for July 18, 21 and 22 was presented here 15 years ago, with Rosemary Raridon singing the title role.

She will appear in the same part in the second and final performances this summer, with Lynn Nelson singing the role the other two nights. All performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. at Macbride Auditorium.

The role shared by the vocalists is that of the Japanese girl who renounces the faith of her ancestors to show her trust in her husband. The husband for whom she exiles herself from her family is Pinkerton, a United States naval officer stationed in Japan. Thomas MacBane, Oslo, Norway, graduate student, will appear as Pinkerton.

Two ticket prices are being offered this year—$2.50 and $3—depending upon the location of the seat. Mail orders for tickets are now being accepted at the University Box Office of the Iowa Memorial Union. Mail orders received before tickets become available at the box office July 10 will be filled prior to the over-the-counter sales.

U of I students will receive a $1 discount on either ticket price with the presentation of identification cards and a certificate of registration for summer school.

Mail orders for tickets should include payment, information on the number and type of seat being ordered and a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The three-act tragic opera was first performed in Milan in 1904. The tragedy arises from the fact that by the time a son is born to the marriage, the young lieutenant has already returned to the United States. He later returns with his American wife, who wishes to adopt the child, producing the final tragedy in Madame Butterfly's life.

Trivia

Believe it or not, there's a tradition in the twentieth century that says the tallest candidate of the two major parties usually wins the U.S. presidency. When was the last election in which the smallest man won? Get out your ruler, then check today's personals for the answer.

It's eerie deary 'Dracula': terror, laughs

"Count Dracula is a very suave, continental gentleman who has only one small problem—he's a vampire. But he woos right up to the moment he makes his attack," Martha Letterman says of the "hero" of the production she directs in The Summer Repertory Theatre.

The play will be performed tonight and also on July 17, 19, 21, and 23, all at University Theatre at 8:30 p.m.

Letterman, an MFA student, was asked to direct the production after she suggested presenting an adaptation of the Bram Stoker novel at University Theatre.

The Summer Rep production will not be a spoof, she says, but the show has funny lines accompanying the eerie mood and serious action of the play. The U of I production was written by Hamilton Deane and John Balderston and follows closely the Bela Lugosi film version.

Letterman chose the 1940s as the time setting for the U of I production.

Special effects are also essential to the mood of suspense, she says. These include special lighting (including total darkness), bats flying about, secret panels, trap doors and the old "breeze-in-the-curtains" mystery routine.

The show should appeal to all ages, Letterman says, "because it's scary, but not too scary," and she would like to have families come to the production.

Evonne rallies to oust Chris

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert, cool to the last, ended her first Wimbledon tennis bid Wednesday by bowing to the brilliance of Evonne Goolagong.

The curly-headed Australian, 20, came from behind to beat 17-year-old Chris, from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in a tense and dramatic semifinal match.

An enthralled crowd of 15,000 at the center court watched the duel. Hundreds of fans had waited all night outside the All-England Club to see the first clash ever between the two girls.

King a winner

Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., as expected, downed Rosemary Casals of San Francisco 6-2, 6-4 in the other semifinal.

Miss Goolagong will defend her crown against Mrs. King in Friday's final for the $6,240 top prize.

Miss Evert, who has become the darling of the Wimbledon crowds, appeared calm throughout the thrills of her 1 hour, 35 minutes match.

"The pressure was on me this time," she said philosophically as she came off court.

"But I will be playing Evonne many times again, and next time the pressure will be on her. There are plenty more Wimbledon ahead."

The contrasting personalities of the two girls made the match the most intriguing of the whole tournament.

Cool Chris

Evonne, bubbling with vitality, pressed forward aggressively. Chris, cool as an iceberg, fired from her baseline.

Evonne was the more creative player and showed more imagination in varying the pace of the game. She also was the more erratic.

Chris was steady from first to last and made extraordinarily few unforced errors.

Momentum shattered

At one stage it looked as if the even poise of the American girl would take her through to the final. After winning the first set she led 3-0 in the second and was then 30-love up against service.

At that point Evonne, whose concentration had been lapsing, pulled her game together. She made more mistakes later, but her greater experience and shrewdness gave her the edge.

Shorty on the sidelines, aiding and inspiring four decades. Iowa athletes, as was his custom for more than

Drug pioneer gave long-lasting relief to Hawkeye athletes

By HENRY MURRAY
of the High School Journalism Workshop
"Set your goals high, shoot for these goals, and if you don't make them, keep working until you do," says Dr. William D. (Shorty) Paul, Professor Emeritus of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation at the University of Iowa College of Medicine.

"Shorty," as he is better known by thousands of Iowans because of his work as trainer with the University's athletic teams, retired last year after 30 years of service.

Bouncing around on his 5 foot, rotund frame, Shorty keeps himself busy at the University's Children's Hospital these days by continuing his research in the field of Drugs which made him world famous.

As a researcher, Dr. Paul was instrumental in the development of "Bufferin," and also helped in making "Rolaids."

Born in Brooklyn, New York in 1900, Shorty set his goals high early in life, and learned the hard way that these goals can be reached.

"Like everyone else where I lived, I had very little money; my father died when I was very young, and the toughest thing I had to encounter as a youngster was staying in school," remembers Dr. Paul.

After finishing high school, Shorty worked a couple of years before going to college. After obtaining enough money to go, he enrolled in Brooklyn Polytechnical College, which at that time was one of the best engineering schools in the United States.

"Yes, I had to take all my classes at night because I worked during the day," relates Shorty, "and it took me many years to graduate."

Following his undergraduate work at Polytech, Dr. Paul went to the University of Cincinnati to do graduate work and received his M.D. from Cincinnati in 1929.

"I came to Iowa City in 1930," says Dr. Paul, "planning to stay one year as a resident at University Hospital, and instead I stayed 42."

When Dr. Eddie Anderson became head football coach in 1939, he didn't want a surgeon to be the trainer for the team, as had been the custom at Iowa. He wanted someone involved in Physical Therapy. At that time, Shorty was just beginning his 17 year stint as Director of Physical Therapy for University Hospital.

"President Hancher called me into his office one day," recalls Shorty, "and said 'Shorty, Anderson wants a physical therapist to be trainer, and I want you to go over there and work with him.'"

And so started Shorty's 30 year career as trainer for Iowa's football team.

In those years Shorty took care of Dr. Anderson's "Iron Men," Forrest Evashenski's Rose-Bowl teams, and Jerry Burns' "flops."

"The thing I liked best about being trainer was that you got to meet so many young people, and get a chance to watch them grow up."

Shorty also believes football is a good foundation for life.

"I've found that if you take the roster of the football players that played in the Homecoming game 10 years ago, and go down that list, you find out that 90 per cent of them are doing very well."

Dr. Paul says he doesn't regret "for one minute" being Iowa's team physician.

"When I look back and see all the good things that have happened to me in my years with the football team, it makes me feel good, and I can justify the many long, hard, hours I put in taking care of these so-called "Knuckle-heads" and "dummies" and they all turned out real well."

Dr. Paul

McNally hems Sox, chops Wood; Big Buc uprising fizzles Astros

Brooks Robinson's home run backed the five-hit pitching of Dave McNally and led the Orioles to a 1-0 squeaker over the White Sox.

Lucky McNally, 9-7, posted his fifth shutout of the season in outdueling Wilbur Wood, 12-9.

McNally got out of a first-inning jam when Dick Allen doubled with two out and Rick Reichardt walked, but on the fourth ball Allen was picked off second by catcher Andy Etchebarren.

Home runs by Bob Robertson and Roberto Clemente and tight relief pitching by Bob Johnson carried the Pirates to a 6-4 come-from-behind win over the Houston Astros.

Dock Ellis was shelled from the mound in the second, behind 4-1. Johnson came on to hold the Astros to two singles the rest of the game.

The Cubs, used to giving 'em away on boners and gophers, were the recipients of charity, as Atlanta third baseman

Darrell Evans threw the ball into the stands on Ron Santo's bases-loaded grounder. Two runs scored and the Cubs grabbed two more in the eighth to beat the Braves 4-1, in the first game of a two-niter.

Marty Pattin hurled a five-hitter to carry the Red Sox to their sixth straight win, a 2-0 whitewash of the Minnesota Twins.

Pattin, 5-8, extended the Twins' loss skin to four. It was the fifth straight complete game by a Bosox pitcher.
