Ribicoff urges new welfare reform plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., called on President John F. Kennedy Thursday to back a simulated welfare reform plan and this evening submitted its passage this year.

Ribicoff introduced a eastern version of the original substitute for the Fiscal Assistance Administration which he had offered last Wednesday as the only way to avoid a showdown in Congress if the President would not agree to a compromise.

Ribicoff said the administration had consentingly supported the House-passed version of R. I. (Rep. Samuel H. Bellard) and wholly, he said.

Hanoch Auditorium officially opens this weekend, thus symbolizing a new era of capabilities in the arts at the University of Iowa.

For students, it also symbolizes a new era of sorts. In places for the student-funded, multi-million dollar facility, they have been given increased consideration in many ticket priorities to Hanoch events, a huge step that was much neglected in the original planning and policy at the UI since building several years ago.

One can only hope that such consideration remains maintained and expanded. There have been rumblings that musicians of popular culture won’t be allowed to perform despite the popularity and skills they might have.

While a full-scale rock bank may find a Hanoch performance a bit too constraining, rock and folk music can become a regular music series this year. People like Laura Nyro, Harry, and Young Michael and Lawrence Cohen have contributed expected lyricism and activism to the American consciousness.

It would seem an act of cultural consciousness by university officials if Student Senate approved Joan Baez was denied use of the Hanoch facilities—an ideal acoustic setup for a folk artist and 3,000 people—on the grounds she “had audience wouldn’t fit into the facility’s purpose.

Such a folk-rock series would well complement other Hanoch scheduled activities and add performers for, acoustic or space purposes, are rare in Iowa City. And would likely please University officials who are committed to turning around priorities at student-funded buildings to the people who have paid for them.

Actually, there can be no large misgiving about the Hanoch opening as long as the obvious Van Clef concert ticket hassle. And that was that. It took a gigantic effort to get the required 101 individuals of the tremendous accomplishments of the working people constructing the facility and the group of the fewest constipated people working there.

Jack Ham, Oscar Tappan Jr. and Glen A. Heenan fell to their deaths from a scaffold during the building’s construction. The Clinic's Director, Jack Miller, was severely injured in the fall but survived.

Herewith, we are going to pay a tribute and supply tickets to the families involved meaningfully, if late, more. It takes more than architects and engineers to create.

Hanoch Auditorium—a promise for the future, a memory for the past.

Hancher: the people

Virgil Hancher

Hancher's dedication was to a "humbled" graduate of the University of Iowa. Hancher, friends and associates there are Virgil Hancher, former UI president, Philip Snively Clapp, former secretary of the board of regents and Earl Harper, who has headed the new School of Music.

Behind the dedication of anyone is a philosophy, a vision of greatness. And that of Virgil Hancher was anticipating. There was a happy flutter of the audience.

Virgil Hancher was an active composer. In his 1964 commencement address, he envisioned the university as one of the greatest in the world. "...and many chamber music societies and piano recitals in some of the more important places in the world."

The audience arrived in varied attire. Some were in suits, some in long trousers, some in a high University of Iowa T-shirt. People were eager, the audience was anticipating. There was a happy flutter of the audience. Some of the performers tested their mikes and did "hello" by the piano. The drums looked out of his back pocket. He watched them their Distinguished Service Medallion.

Earl Harper had been president of the college; later, he was director of music at the University of Iowa, where he was director of music. He was named director of the newly organized School of Music last May and was named permanent director in the fall. He was an active composer, including an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Iowa State University in 1960 and his appointment to the UI School of Music Faculty in 1960. Under his leadership, expansion of the music program and diversification of student activity were emphasized. He established the University of Iowa Fine Arts Festival, which brings together university administrators and student activity.

In the UI School of Music, there were more than 15 students in residence. All practiced and played. The music program has been a part of the University of Iowa since the time of Virgil Hancher.

Fence-straddling politics?

In politics, fence-straddling is the art of standing at the fence and not deciding in an attempt to keep everybody happy.

FOR INSTANCE:

Fred Schwengel says he's against the bomb.

But: He supports Richard Nixon and denies he voted for it.

He voted to stop Congress from getting detailed information about the bombing of North Vietnam. He voted to spend $251 million in military and economic aid to Cambodia in 1970.

He voted against having roll call votes on amendments opposed to the Cambodian invasion.

Fred Schwengel says he's an environmentalist.

But: He voted in favor of the atomic blast on Amchitka.

Fred Schwengel says he's for better schools.

But: He voted to uphold the President's veto of HEW funds in 1970.

Fred Schwengel says he's a civil libertarian.

But: He voted to deny the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission "cause and desist power" and to place new restrictions on anti-discrimination enforcement. He voted to allow sex discrimination in undergraduate college admissions.
