Command reported Friday the loss of its seventh and eighth B52 bombers, with 12 more crewmen missing, as hundreds more American air strikes battered North Vietnam's Hanoi-Haiphong area for a fifth successive day.

A total of 39 American airmen are listed as missing by the U.S. Command since the resumption of bombing of North Vietnam above the 20th Parallel last Monday night. All except three were crewmen aboard the eight-engine B52s.

Hanoi's Vietnam News Agency reported that U.S. air strikes on Wednesday and Thursday damaged the main Hanoi prisoner of war camp nicknamed by U.S. fliers the "Hanoi Hilton." The news agency said a number of American prisoners were injured and added that many U.S. airmen captured in the past two days.

While many University of lowa students are out of town for the Christmas holidays, the face of downtown Iowa City will

All utilities, except electrical connections, have been finished at the mall site, but the tenants will not be able to do business from the units until they finish their own remodeling, he explained.

Shoppers at the units will walk on wooden decks set 12 inches above the present street level, Klaus said, and will be able to go through connecting doors into each of the several units that some businesses will

The Christmas grinch?

Usually, people leave Iowa City for the holidays in pretty good spirits.

Oh, there'll be a few hassles with the folks, maybe a little worrying about grades. But pretty much people want to get into "goodwill and peace on earth."

That's traditionally a big, important part of the Christian-American dream. But Richard Nixon, the guy who got re-elected on the work ethic and peace at hand, seems to be playing Scrooge, even with Christian-American ethics. As you head homeward, your government has remained busy: -Winding down its involvement in a war with a campaign of unprecedent blitz bom-

—Imposing a stringent news blackout in Vietnam on war activities, despite the ugly news that has been getting through.

-Issuing an ultimatum to both its 'enemy' and puppet, as if it is qualified to run the entire world by divine majesty. -Escalating war and death, while its citizens are singing of peace and hap-

And the ultimate absurdity...bombing camps where its own prisoners of war are being kept, despite its announced priority for the return of those POWs.

And while Nixon and Kissinger babble of peace, the real prisoners of war-all Vietnamese-must continue to oppose the U.S. aggression, the U.S. bombs.

And this is supposed to be the Christmas Unless the U.S. government heeds the ultimatum of the world and signs a peace treaty now that gives the people of Vietnam their true liberation, Christmas this year cannot help but be bitter. Or maybe there won't be a real holiday season this year. Amidst all the confusion and deceit,

Nixon the Grinch may have stolen it.

Owe penny? no transcript

A University of Iowa student, delinquent in his tuition payments to the university cashier, received a head start on others facing a deluge of January bills when he squared his school accounts last week by paying his owed balance-one cent.

The unidentified student, a graduating senior, paid the penny fearing he would not receive his degree until the account was settled. However, UI Head Cashier Don T. Ross says such concern is unneeded as his office does not withold diplomas for non-payment of university bills.

Ross added that penalties facing university debtors include the witholding of student's transcript, and refusal to allow students to register for additional classes until all bills are paid-and yes, both apply to a penny debt.

Statements sent to UI students note that non-payment of charges will result in cancellation of registration, and that late payment of the monthly bill requires a $5 fine.

Ross said the UI would not suspend a student for owing one cent, but acknowledged an "unofficial" limit to student debt which would result in official

All active students receive a monthly statement of their accounts with the university even if they don't owe money, Ross said, noting there was no extra cost to his office for sending the one cent bill to students as it is included with the other university statements.

Bormann skull found in Berlin?

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) The man charged with investigating the fate of Martin Bormann said Thursday he believed one of two skulls unearthed in Berlin probably was that of Hitler's deputy.

The teeth contained traces of what could be splinters from a glass cyanide capsule, the Frankfurt district attorney, Joachim Richter, said in an inter-

Richter, who has been directly involved with the Bormann hunt since 1965, was careful to point out that the skulls and other bones found with them this month had not yet been positively

But he said the circumstances of the discovery tended to support his belief that the remains of one were those of Bormann and that he committed suicide in May 1945, rather than face capture by the encircling Soviet army.

Typical method

Cyanide poisoning was the mode of suicide used by such Nazi leaders as Joseph Goebbels, Hermann Goering and Heinrich Himmler

The Russians contend that even Hitler and his mistress, Eva Braun, died of cyanide poisoning and not gunshot wounds as widely reported.

If the one skull is that of Bormann, Richter believes, the other must be that of Dr. Ludwig Stumpfegger, the last physician in Hitler's bunker and the man reputed to have assisted Magda Goebbels, wife of the propaganda minister, in the poisoning of her six

The two skulls and other bones were unearthed on Dec. 8 by workmen digging trenches for power cables on land that had been part of the Lehrter freight yards in Berlin.

It was there that Hitler's youth leader, Arthur Axmann, claimed he saw the bodies of Bormann and Stumpfegger on May 2, 1945.

Press reports

The discovery of the remains came in the wake of press reports that Bormann recently had been seen and photographed in South America. Bormann, who would be 72, was reported to be living there as a prosperous businessman. But a 54-year-old Argentine schoolteacher since has said that he was the man purported to be Bormann in the photo-

Richter said he had been skeptical about the report of a living Bormann that had been written by author Ladislas Farago in collaboration with Stewart Steven of the London Daily

Those people who claim to have seen Bormann about May 1945, had never seen him before then," Richter said in explaining his skepticism toward the periodic reports.

Two Germanys now officially exist

BERLIN (AP) - West Germany, and Communist East Germany, carved from the remains of Hitler's Third Reich 23 years ago, signed a treaty Thursday in which each nation officially recognized that the other exists.

The law under which Walters made the challenge was attacked Thursday by Bartel, who asked that it and the laws outlining the procedure for handling the challenge be declared unconstitutional.

Bartel also asked that an injunction be issued, ordering a halt to the challgne proceedings.

A hearing on a similar request made by Robert J. Burns, chairman of the board of supervisors, will be held at 9:30 a.m. today.

Burns asked for the injunction Monday, also requesting that he be relieved of serving as chairman of a three-man election contest court which by law is to rule on Walters' challenge.

The 15-page petition asking the constitutionality ruling was filed by Bartel's two Cedar Rapids lawyers Thursday and includes more than a dozen attacks on the constitutionality of the election contest laws.

"This statute just reeks with unconstitutionality," Jon M. Kinnamon, one of the attorneys, said Thursday afternoon.

One of the lawyers suggested that keeping Bartel out of office because of his Canadian felony an analogy: should U.S. nam and citizens who traveled in Rusia and were convicted in those lands be denied the right to hold office here?

The constitutional issues raised by Bartel's attorneys hit at vague wording in the laws, whether a conviction in a foreign jurisdiction which does not have the same legal procedures is valid, the potential of disenfranchising local voters, establishing extra punishment now for the earlier conviction, setting the challenge time after the election, denial of trial by jury, and different standards for contest courts for state offices.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Los Angeles Times, after being released from an agreement to keep its information secret, Thursday turned over to U.S. District Court a package of tape recordings which the newspaper had refused to surrender under subpoena.

The bureau chief, John F. Lawrence, said he was pleased that the case had been resolved honorably and hoped his having been jailed briefly Tuesday had dramatized the cause of newsmen who refuse to give up information they accept in confidence from news sources.

Report on Freeman death expected soon

Officers investigating the death of a University of Iowa medical student will soon have a report from the State Criminalistic

UI Security Director William Binney said Thursday the laboratory has informed him it will send its report in the next few days. More tests will be conducted, but the investigation will not be delayed for the later results, he added.

Binney said most of the leads in the Dec. 8 death of Barry W. Freeman, 22, have not developed.

"There have been no new developments, really, despite the continued publicity," Binney said. He added that when all information has been collected, it will be presented to the county medical examiner and county attorney.

Freeman was found fatally injured lying along Newton Road near University Hospitals at midmorning Dec. 8, and died about an hour later. No eyewitnesses have been located.

Staff Writer "I like being in on the beginning of things." said Richard MacCann, professor of film at the University of Iowa.

His life is a testimony to that. MacCann recently completed his fourth book. The People's Films, which will be released by Hastings House this spring. The book concerns government produced films. television, and documentaries and their role in the future.

"There's a big gap between Analyzing people and the government today," MacCann said. "No one seems to have a vested interest in explaining government and democracy. TV wants only the sensational aspects."

"I see film as a way to explain government and make it more interesting and human."

Fittingly MacCann teaches documentary film here at the university. His course consists of the showing of several films throughout the semester and discussion of these films.

Dorm coercion

To the Editor:

The editorial, reprinted from the Daily Illini entitled "Make Dorms Attractive," makes a very valid point which applies equally well here at the University of Iowa. The university is a landlord and it is its responsibility in a competitive market to create a saleable product. Instead, the university has taken unfair advantage of its dual position of being both the university and a landlord by threatening students with cancellation of their registration if they refuse to comply with their requirement that freshmen and sophomores live in the dorms.

These rules are particularly aggravating because they do not purport to exist because of the academic advantage for underclassmen to live in dorms. The university will admit this line of reasoning holds little validity. What they will not admit is that these rules exist primarily to guarantee the financial stability of their bond obligations. Since when should it be the responsibility of students to pay for poor business decisions made by administrators years ago?

I have expressed these views a number of times to both the housing department and the top brass in Jessup (who, by the way, are paid by us to solve these types of problems), and have received very unsatisfactory responses.

All I can recommend is that serious consideration be given to the Illini's editorial. Recognize the university as a landlord, that these rules do not work by "moral suasion."

Until these rules are abolished, the bad vibes experienced in the dorms will continue. These rules must end, but it will never happen unless students do it. It's time to challenge the "enforceability" of parietal rules.

imprimatur

To the Editor: The extensive coverage recently given Ralph Nader's poorly conceived reasons for discouraging the use of DES as a post-coital contraceptive has prompted this letter. I hope that the FDA will not take their objections to heart. It has been shown that treatment of an individual for five days within six-nine days of having had unprotected intercourse will prevent the fertilized egg, if it exists, from implanting on the womb and growing. The individual so treated may experience a nausea syndrome resembling morning sickness. Shortly thereafter a menstrual period will occur and she will be perfectly well.

Although this treatment is not 100 percent effective, it offers tremendous advantages over alternate methods of guarding against pregnancy in people who do not have regular intercourse and do not wish to take contraceptive pills prior to any thought of having sexual relations. The indictment of DES as a cause of vaginal cancer is quite proper and was based on the treatment of women in established pregnancy with substantial doses of the hormone.

The circumstances are quite different in the post-coital case. Furthermore, there is no significant evidence that any cancer, with the exception of that mentioned above, has been caused by administration of an estrogen in humans. While it is true that some physicians do not recommend the use of oral contraceptives in women with a history of breast cancer in their family, in my judgment that is totally unwarranted and furthermore, use of oral contraceptives may have a protective affect. It is possible that the simplistic approach of the Nader group, which has been used increasingly by the FDA itself in evaluating drugs, is badly founded, contrary to the best interests of the people, and detrimental to the solution of important medical and public health problems through the use of effective therapeutic agents.

Unfortunately this scare cam-paign, which bears the Nader imprimatur will deter physicians from carrying out an effective program of post-coital

peace

To the Editor: Peace on earth for all but the Vietnamese

The American Christmas gift to South East Asia in this year of Our Lord, 1972, is death.

While we sing carols with our children and rededicate ourselves to our families, while we roast our turkeys and bake our figgy pudding, while we enjoy holiday festivities and make New Year's resolutions, the saturation bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong violates every semblance of the love and brotherhood we profess to be the spirit if not the reality of this season.

Nixon says the treaty is not honorable. What about this war has been? He has run out of excuses and is not justifying his treachery with appeals to some mythical ethical system which only he and Kissinger can interpret. And we have run out of excuses for our own lack of conscience and humanity. So we sing "Silent Night" while the roaring B-52s light up the evening sky 10,000 miles away.

To the Editor: An Open Letter to University

The end of first semester is upon us and with it, and proverbial problem of what to do with used books. For those who keep them, the answer is easy. But for the rest of us comes the hassle of turning them in at the Bookstore. If your book's still in good condition and it's over $2.00 in value, you may get 50 per cent of its original cost. For some, this suffices.

However, two years ago, a group of students decided that the 50 per cent wouldn't suffice Under the direction of Ted Politis, they got together and organized the first Student Book Exchange. Last year, under the direction of Rex Nichols, the Exchange was repeated. In both cases, the objective was the same-to provide the students of this University with a chance to get a good return (65 per cent) on their used boods and, in turn, give them a chance to buy their second semester texts at a fair price.

Business-wise, the first year's Book Exchange refunded $11,479.25 to students. Last year, it refunded $24,615.09. This year we hop e to refund even more money and benefit even more students.

The Third Annual Student BOOK EXCHANGE opened on December 16 for the collection of books that will be used Second Semester. We will also collect books December 18-22 and January 11 and 12, during Registration. On all days, our hours will be 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. During collection, we will accept any book that's still in one piece and that will be used second semester. This includes all paperbacks. Collection will be in the Hawkeye Room of the

On January 11, we also begin our Book Sale. This well be in the Lucas-Dodge Room of the Union on January 11, 12, and 13, and in the Union's New Ballroom from January 15 to 20. Money will be returned in the Hawkeye Room from January

Dear Merry gentlepersons, About two weeks ago I was preparing to load several toys and goodies on my un-motorized vehicle. As I attempted to pull it into position, I felt a strong resistance toward the back of the sleigh, and, upon closer inspection found the police had placed a Denver Boot on the runner. As my busy season is quickly approaching, I am becoming very concerned for my sled and wondered if you would be able to help in any way. When I queried the chief of police, and the traffic department, their only comment was, "Bah Humbug!" My coursers are becoming restless. Please help me. S.C.

Your problem has been solved, thanks to someone named Virginia and the editor of the New York Sun.

I keep hearing rumors about a second performance of the 'Godspell" show, but I cannot get any information from the Hancher Auditorium box office. I want to get tickets for it and am worried that they will be put on sale while we are home on break. Has SURVIVAL LINE any information? K.P

Things are sort of going "Day by Day" for that second performance of "Godspell", according to Hancher officials. The contracts have been signed at this end for a matinee performance in addition to the evening performance already scheduled. An announcement of the performance is expected to be made in January, so you should be okay.

The Getawaybit of adrenalin

The Getaway has the visceral immediacy of being run over by a truck. Lacking the thematic and emotional depth of The Wild Bunch or Junior Bonner, it is nonetheless Sam Peckinpah's most visually dynamic film.

Peckinpah sees situations in terms of how people and things interact in the context of their environments. Intellectuallizing in Peckinpah films is contained by physical actions. The Getaway, more than any other Peckinpah film, is a study of how people and things bend, break, or survive,

SEVENTH SOJOURN The Moody Blues Threshold THS-7

I was curious after seeing The Moody Blues had finally released another album to find out just what had taken them over a year and a half to produce. It wasn't that I really expected something new or different, or for that matter that I really wanted anything different. I dig the Moodies; have ever since I saw them in concert, and I think their music is just alright as is. Others don't. But then, that's what it's all about. Anyhow, I got what I expected from Seventh Sojourn; another stroke of luminous texture from the brush of an artist I like.

The album is strong, in places very solid, but perhaps not up to that of a On the Threshold of a Dream, or To Our Childrens Childrens' Children. The most solid cuts are "New Horizons", "You and Me", "The Land of Make Believe", all tunes lead guitarist Justin Hayward had a hand in on pening, and the single, "Isn't Life Strange", and John Lodge number Hayward seems to be the most prolific composer, while his lead has always been a question. On the other hand while Mike Pinder rarely comes up with blockbuster of a creation, his keyboards are the heart of the group. Ray Thomas acts as the leader and unifying force along with some good lead singing. Graeme Edge and John Lodge seem to dip successfully into both the composing and musicianship hues to paint a brilliant background complimenting the groups image.

The music ranges from a mellow mellotron to a rocksy guitar on "I'm Just a Singer In a Rock and Roll Band". The lyrics don't pattern each other as they have on previous albums. The stream of consciousness flows from pessimistic, "Lost in a Lost World", to "I'm gonna find my own peace of mind..." from 'New Horizons'

Seventh Sojourn is indeed new, but solid Moody Blues doing what they do best; making their music as only they can make it.

When Peckinpah blows up a truck or rams a shotgun blast through someone's body. I don't think he's as concerned about what that means as he is with how those things happen and what their physical results are.

This film, besides visually describing exactly what the title states, a getaway, is very definitely concerned with possession, possession of things and flesh, and the constant betrayals, deciets, and informings that compromise and threaten those possessions. The movement of the getaway itself is directed by these terms.

Steve McQueen plays Doc McCoy, Ali MacGraw his wife Carol. The film opens with a beautifully fragmented sequence suggesting the schitzophrenic pressures of McQueen's prison life. Ben Johnson, a super rich Texan, maneuvers McQueen out of prison in exchange for pulling a bank job. The entirety of the film deals with McQueen and Peckinpah's characters are always somehow placed in situations and environments that cannot contain them. McQueen is constantly blasting his way out of enclosures. Neither he nor MacGraw are presented as being any better than anyone else, but they are much better at what they do, and that is their survival.

The ending of the film is dishonest and flatly, plainly bad, almost as though Peckinpah had perversely decided to make fun of himself and his notions of myth in and out of life and American films. But the ending can be discarded. While The Getaway is limited by the lack of depth given to its ideas, it is definitely worth seeing for the adrenelin rushes you will

The publication was produced by the student chapter of Women in Communication (formerly Theta Sigma Phi) at The University of Iowa.

A writing contest was sponsored in all of the city grade schools to encourage creative writing as a part of a student's educational experience. Students were asked to voluntarily submit poems, fiction and nonfiction pieces on the themes of winter, Christmas and the holiday season, according to Paula Johnson, A4, 804 N. Dubuque, coordinator of the project.

Over 160 entries were received from students in grades second through sixth. These were judged by a panel of four chapter members on the basis of originality, expression, creativity and neatness. The 52 winning entries were combined with illustrations by Maureen Olsen, A4, E234 Currier.

The booklet takes its name from the story featured in the centerfold, written by Kathy Sutherland, 725 W. Benton St., a fourth grader at Roosevelt School. "The Long Trip and the Snowflake" tells of a lonely snowflake, who, with the help of a mouse, a horse and a toad, finds his way to the North Pole where he makes friends with all the other snowflakes.

A first and second place winner will be selected from each of the five grades represented. The additional 42 students whose works were published will be presented with cer-

Hawkeye coach Dick Kuchen reports. If true, Iowa's first game following semester exams (a 10 day break) could turn into a long night. The UCLA team Kuchen compared Marquette to beat Iowa 106-72.

The Warriors are ranked second in the nation by one wire service and third by the other. Basketball Weekly rates Marquette third and the Hawks sophomore Maurice Lucas, a 6-8 eighth, but that was before Iowa's 68-62 loss to Kansas State. Iowa won its first three

Harbaugh to aide Wolves

Iowa's defensive backfield coach, Jack Harbaugh, will take a similar job at Michigan, although an official announcement has not yet been made.

It appears the offer from Bo Schembechler has been made and accepted by Harbaugh, who has become known for his "cheerleading" on the Iowa sideline. Harbaugh, however, was on his way home to Ohio for Christmas and neither school has made an announcement.

Schembechler recently lost two of his assistants. Jim Young, a defensive coordinator, became the head coach at Arizona while defensive line coach Larry Smith is joining Young's staff.

TRIVIA—It was Bing Crosby's recording of "White Christmas."

HO, Ho Buddy to all heading for vacation. See you next year ready to push through another heavy semester with the red corpuscle blues. Merry X-mas! —Alice in Wonderland.

HOOPSIE HONEY: It's really been fun, you of Neanderthal. I loved every minute of it, especial-ly running my fingers through your Adonis hair. Guess what? My buxom breast ain't sore no more. SWIVEL HIPS.

FLAT BOTTOM ZINGER -Sorry I spilled my rum cake batter on you. I should learn how to cook it first. If I recover I'll learn how to bake cookies.

JEAN—Last time I looked the at-las was gone, but then, I don't need a map to find your baby blues. Will take you up on filets and fun early next year. Mean-while, happy happy, hunka hunka. Yankee Doodle.

AT THE STAMP WIN-DOW—John Peters (left) and Cleo Stribley are kept constan-tly busy as they battle lines of stamp-buyers preparing for Christmas.

From those wonderful people who bring you your Christmas mail!

Harold Johnson sorts mail and goes over address changes before putting mail into the box section.

Pat Devereux, the only student employed at the post office, relaxes in the "swing room" where carriers go for lunch breaks or maybe a quick game of pool. Pat has worked at the p.o. for three years now, puts in a 40 hour week and is a junior at the University.
