Bonds for parking ramp

City appeals court ruling

The Iowa City Council voted 3-2 Tuesday night to overturn the Iowa Supreme Court’s decision which invalidated a city parking ramp revenue bond ordinance.

City Attorney Jay H. Hembree was instructed to seek an early hearing on the appeal. He said it might possibly be possible for the council to hear the case in June or July.

Attorneys for the city and the county will deal with bond plans for the existence of the parking ramp. Council members indicated they want to see the higher court opinion before making a decision.

The Pentagon in massive tax hijacks

Pentagon officials have been shifting hundreds of millions of dollars in federal funds to pay for a parking ramp, which was supposed to be financed with local funds. The ramp was never built, but the Pentagon’s report cites two officials involved in altering official records to cover up the hijacking.

The Associated Press has learned that the Navy had spent $10 million on a ramp project that was never completed. The Navy’s report says that it was necessary to keep the money from being seized by Congress.

The Navy has now sent Congress a report detailing its strategy for recovering the funds it has misplaced. The report says that the Navy has already recovered $2 million of the $10 million.

General Resolution

The General Resolution states that Congress in danger of losing control of the Pentagon in massive tax hijacks. The resolution states that the Navy has been spending money on a parking ramp that was never built, and that the money has been misused.

The resolution also says that the Pentagon is using the funds to pay for the construction of a parking ramp in Iowa City, which was supposed to be financed with local funds. Africa struggle intensifies

Rhodesia, in the process of fighting a guerrilla war against a combined movement of guerrillas from Mozambique and Zimbabwe, is planning a major offensive against the guerrillas in the Mozambique border region.

The Rhodesian government has announced that it will send more than 5,000 men to the border region to deal with the guerrillas. The government is also considering the possibility of launching a major air attack against the guerrilla bases in Mozambique.

The move comes as a result of increasing pressure from the guerrillas, who have been launching increasingly frequent attacks on Rhodesian targets.

The government has also announced that it will increase its military spending by 20% in order to fund the new offensive.

Hancher: student phone orders

Why can real people reserve Hancher Auditorium tickets by telephone but not student phone people? J.A.

"I'm learning something new myself," replied James Weckman, Hancher director, when SURVIVAL LINE asked her question after calling the box office to verify, and then calling again.

"There's no change that students shouldn't have the same privileges as they are just as much Hancher customers as North-Iowans. For more information on how to meet at 7 p.m. for more discussion as to whether or not the box office deserves priority for sure over those who just pick up their telephone to order.

Field House: no Iowa flag

In Iowa, why is there no Iowa flag flying in the Field House? H.A.

"We've been asked to change your phone number to the Iowa flag at basketball games (and rock concerts, too, we suppose)," said Paul C. Gilmore, administrative assistant, business manager.

"Grants don't know why there isn't an Iowa flag there.

Now it might take a while to get the Iowa flag up, however, because of a legal problem.\n
Hancher is the only Iowa State University building to have a flag flying over it.

Minnesota music warms audience

Sunday night January 25

Harrison Auditorium was sparsely inhabited probably due to the inclement weather.

However this is of no reflection on the performance of the Minnesota Orchestra. Fortunately the rain did not keep off the audience.

Nady enough there was plenty of audience who managed to brave the snow to be present.

By the orchestra was conducting very much as usual. The performance was very much a traditional one with the orchestra playing the works of several composers which were mostly from the 18th and early 19th centuries.

The performance was very much traditional in nature and it was very much a classical music performance. The audience was very much captured by the beauty of the music and the performance was very much enjoyed by the audience.

The orchestra managed to capture the essence of the music very well and the audience was very much immersed in the music. The performance was very much a classic one and the audience was very much captivated by the beauty of the music.
