CIA costs

Peter Pavlock said Wednesday that a lack at the cost-effectiveness of the Central Intelligence Agency has been under way in the works since James Schlesinger took over as chief.

"One of the questions being asked, moreover, is whether it is necessary to spend that $1 billion or whatever it is now in the $1 billion or whatever it is now in the CIA's budget on a national security spy system."

"I don't think it's the case, and my mandate is to bring down the bloat and the slugs of the operation," Pavlock said.

Few changes made after AUP report

Department maintains status quo

LOUIS A. SPENCER, 128 River St., CEDAR RAPIDS Daily Iowan Staff Writer

The recommendation made by the University of Iowa faculty and the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) investigation of the UI Spanish and Portuguese Department enunciated two basic courses of action:

1. The AAUP concluded that the department is in violation of the AAUP's Code of Professional Responsibility.
2. The AAUP recommended that the department be reviewed by a government body to determine if further action is necessary.

The department's response was to make no changes, maintain the status quo, and request that the AAUP be allowed to continue its investigation.

The AAUP rejected the department's request and announced that it would not conduct any further investigation.

The result of the investigation was that the department maintained its status quo, and the AAUP concluded that no further action was necessary.

SECRET "donation" alleged

Newspaper reports that the University of Iowa has received a $820,000 "donation" from Nassau to Nixon.

However, the University of Iowa has denied receiving any such donation and has stated that it will conduct a full investigation.

NEW YORK AP — A $820,000 cash con­ trolled by the University of Iowa's sales of its yearbook campaign last April, three days before Nixon left office, has been under scrutiny.

The money was raised by the University of Iowa as a result of its sales of its yearbook campaign last April, three days before Nixon left office.

The University of Iowa has denied receiving any such donation and has stated that it will conduct a full investigation.

South Africa—another world?

A Clockwork Orange, Satyricon, In the Heat of the Night, and Guess Who’s Coming to Dinner are banned films in South Africa. The Publications Control Board, that determines the fate of all films in South Africa, cut 45 minutes from Woodstock.

Jerry Hopkins, writing for Rolling Stone, reported in the February 15 issue what it’s like “Coping in South Africa.”

Being black and South African is like being in the color-code on everything—liquor stores to toilets to insurance agents. The race is now the last taboo. Of course, it takes time to accept the idea of the color in every possible way, even though “Borderlines” cases, people in between races, have presented problems for the Racial Registration Act.

English-speaking students at the University of Cape Town demonstrated against the “Bloody Factions in Power” in late last year. The protests lasted seven days, in a reporting a demand investigation into police brutality. Prime Minister John Vorster said, “If the police act at the way they did, I would personally have been disrupted because it would have shows me that we were slipping away from law and order.”

According to the Rolling Stone article, there are nearly a million prisoners in South African jails—probably the highest prison population in the world. In the last ten years, the defense budget has gone from 800 million to 6.8 billion. The police budget has more than tripled.

A few years ago J.J. Fisch, then minister of defense, was reporting as saying, “Do not think we are aiming to fight a future war. We are aiming as short as the black man.”

South Africa and the other countries of the continent Cathredul talk about should bestride it—another world.

Other factors

In addition to those burning issues, there are also the more mundane matters of life. Israel and the Arab states, for instance, are involved in a never ending war and there is no chance of peace in the foreseeable future.

There is another black strike which is greatly affecting the African South in South Africa. The black workers are in a very bad situation. In Durban, the black workers are demanding a higher pay. The black workers have been fighting to allow back pay more new deal to workers for the preceding eight years, as a result of a race war.

In your letter, you have mentioned the situation in South Vietnam and the treatment of prisoners in the local jails. It is crucial to raise awareness about the human rights violations and the need for accountability. The plight of the prisoners, especially those involved in the anti-war movement, is a pressing issue that requires immediate attention. Is there any specific action or support you are coordinating to address this issue? Your feedback and suggestions would be valuable in shaping our response to this pressing matter.

I was always writing stories and poems.

Helen Chasin talks about her poetry

‘I was always writing stories and poems’

By ROB JONES

It was a great rainy day. The office, painted black, was empty. Some of the shelves were bare. Helen Chasin handed back and perused a copy of her latest book. A sense of nostalgia swept over her.

‘It’s always been me who’s been writing about people. There are so many people in this world, and I’m not the only one. But I see them, and I write about them. In my own way, I see myself in what I write. It’s not just a reflection, but also a way of expressing my own feelings.’

Chasin has been writing for over thirty years.
She started as a university student, and has since developed her own style and approach to writing.

Chasin is best known for her collection ‘Under the Bright Moon’, which includes short stories, poems, and memoirs. Her work has been called ‘moving’ and ‘touching’, and Chasin is often praised for her ability to create vivid and emotionally engaging characters.

Chasin’s latest book is called ‘The Other Side of Life’. In it, she explores the experiences of people who are facing difficulties and adversities, and how they cope with them.

‘I try to write about people who are not always happy. Sometimes they have problems, but they’re still alive. And that’s what I want to write about. I want to show that even in the most difficult times, people can find a way to make sense of things and find hope.’

Chasin’s work has been widely published,
and she has received numerous awards and accolades for her writing. She is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and her work has been translated into several languages.

‘I’m not sure if I’m a poet or a writer. I just write what I feel. And I hope that people will find my words inspiring.’

Chasin’s latest book is already receiving critical acclaim, and she is looking forward to seeing how it will be received by her readers.

‘I hope that people will read my words and find something that resonates with them. That’s what I want to achieve.’

Chasin’s next project is a novel, which she is currently working on. She is excited to see where her writing will take her next.

‘I’m always looking for new ideas and inspirations. That’s what keeps me writing. And I hope that my work will continue to resonate with people.

Chasin’s words are powerful and moving, and her work continues to inspire and resonate with readers around the world.

Martha Folts will premiere two organ compositions

Martha Folts will premiere two organ compositions during the University of Iowa department of music's visiting faculty recital. Folts, who is visiting associate professor of organ at Iowa, will give the recital at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall; tickets will be required.

Folts has received the B.A. and M.S. degrees in music from the University of Iowa and the D.M.A. degree from the University of Southern California.

The compositions, which are for organ, are "Organ Concerto No. 1" by Mart Sander and "Symphonic Variations" by Richard Craig.

Both the concert and recital will be held in the University Theatre on Friday and Saturday, respectively.

The concert will feature the University of Iowa Symphony Orchestra and Chorus, which will be conducted by Dr. Richard Craig.

The recital will feature Folts, a member of the University of Iowa faculty, who will also perform works by J.S. Bach, C.P.E. Bach, and Richard Craig.

Martha Folts will give the recital on Saturday, March 28, at 8:00 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall.

The concert will include works by Bach, C.P.E. Bach, and Folts, as well as a selection of contemporary composers.

Tickets are required for both events and can be purchased at the University Theatre box office.

The Chicago White Sox are not to be underestimated in the World Series. The Sox have shown that they can compete with the best of them and have a chance to win the championship. They have a good pitching staff, with lefty ace Bob Feller leading the way. The offense is strong, with stars like Ted Williams and Stan Musial.

The Sox are favored by many to win the Series, and they will certainly give the Yankees a run for their money.
